i.) The lot for dividing is not wrong if not used, 1) "1 without any necessity; for this would be to tempt God:" 2) "if¹ in case of necessity, not without reverence of God, as if Holy Scripture were used for an earthly end," as in determining any secular matter by opening the Bible²; 3) for objects which ought to be decided otherwise, (as, an office ought to be given to the fittest:); 4) in dependence upon any other than God. ³ The lot is cast into the lap, but the whole disposing of it is the Lord's. So then they are lawful "4 in secular things which cannot otherwise be conveniently distributed," or "6 when there is no apparent reason why, in any advantage or disadvantage, one should be preferred to another." S. Augustine even allows⁶ that, in a time of plague or persecution, the lot might be cast to decide who should remain to administer the Sacraments to the people, lest, on the one side, all should be taken away, or, on the other, the Church be deserted. ii. The lot for consulting, i. e. to decide what one should do, is wrong, unless in a matter of mere indifference, or under inspiration of God, or in some extreme necessity where all human means fail. iii. The lot for divining, i. e. to learn truth, whether of things present or future, of which we can have no human knowledge, is wrong, except by direct inspiration of God. For it is either to tempt God Who has not promised so to reveal things, or, against God, to seek superhuman knowledge by ways unsanctioned by Him. Satan may readily mix himself unknown in such enquiries, as in mesmerism. Forbidden ground is his own province.

God overruled the lot in the case of Jonah, as He did the sign which the Philistines sought. "7 He made the heifers take the way to Bethshemesh, that the Philistines might know that the plague came to them, not by chance, but from Himself." "8 The fugitive (Jonah) was taken by lot, not by any virtue of the lots, especially the lots of heathen, but by the Will of Him Who guided the uncertain lots." "9 The lot betrayed the culprit. Yet not even thus did they cast him over; but, even while such a tumult and storm lay on them, they held, as it were, a court in the vessel, as though in entire peace, and allowed him a hearing and defence, and sifted every thing accurately, as men who were to give account of their judgment. Hear them sifting all as in a court.—The roaring sea accused him; the lot convicted and witnessed against him, yet not even thus did they pronounce against him—until the accused should be the accuser of his own sin. The sailors, uneducated, untaught, imitated the good order of courts. When the sea scarce allowed them to breathe, whence such forethought about the Prophet? By the disposal of God. For God by all this instructed the Prophet to be humane and mild, all but saying aloud to him; "4 Imitate these uninstructed sailors. They think not lightly of one soul, nor are unsparing as to one body, thine own. But thou, for thy part, gavest up a whole city with so many myriads. They, discovering thee to be the cause of the evils which befel them, did not even thus hurry to condemn thee. Thou,

¹ Aquin. l. c. ² From S. Aug. Ep. 55. ad inquis. Januar. ³ Prov. xvi. 33. ⁴ Less. de justit. &c. ii. 43. Dub. 9. L. ⁵ Id. quoting S. Aug. de doctr. Xt. i. 28. "If any have a superfluity which ought to be given to such as have not, and cannot be given to two, and two come to you, of whom neither is to be preferred to the other from want or any urgent necessity, you cannot do any thing more

9 And he said unto them, I am an Hebrew; and I fear || the LORD, the God of heaven, ° which hath made the sea and the dry land.

10 Then were the men † exceedingly

Before CHRIST
cir. 780.

|| Or, JEHOVAH.
° Ps. 146. 6.
Acts 17. 24.
† Heb. with great fear.

having nothing whereof to accuse the Ninevites, didst sink and destroy them. Thou, when I bade thee go and by thy preaching call them to repentance, obeyedst not; these, untaught, do all, compass all, in order to recover thee, already condemned, from punishment."

8. Tell us, for whose cause [lit. for what to whom.] It may be that they thought that Jonah had been guilty toward some other. The lot had pointed him out. The mariners, still fearing to do wrong, ask him thronged questions, to know why the anger of God followed him; what hast thou done to whom? what thine occupation? i. e. either his ordinary occupation, whether it was displeasing to God? or this particular business in which he was engaged, and for which he was come on board. Questions so thronged have been admired in human poetry, S. Jerome says. For it is true to nature. They think that some one of them will draw forth the answer which they wish. It may be that they thought that his country, or people, or parents, were under the displeasure of God. But perhaps, more naturally, they wished to "know all about him," as men say. These questions must have gone home to Jonah's conscience. What is thy business? The office of Prophet which he had left. Whence comest thou? From standing before God, as His minister. What thy country? of what people art thou? The people of God, whom he had quitted for heathen; not to win them to God, as He commanded; but, not knowing what they did, to abet him in his flight.

What is thine occupation? They should ask themselves, who have Jonah's office to speak in the name of God, and preach repentance. "10 What should be thy business, who hast consecrated thyself wholly to God, whom God has loaded with daily benefits? who approachest to Him as to a Friend? What is thy business? To live for God, to despise the things of earth, to behold the things of Heaven," to lead others heavenward.

Jonah answers simply the central point to which all these questions tended;

9. I am an Hebrew. This was the name by which Israel was known to foreigners. It is used in the Old Testament, only when they are spoken of by foreigners, or speak of themselves to foreigners, or when the sacred writers mention them in contrast with foreigners¹¹. So Joseph spoke of his land¹², and the Hebrew midwives¹³, and Moses' sister¹⁴, and God in His commission to Moses¹⁵ as to Pharaoh, and Moses in fulfilling it¹⁶. They had the name, as having passed the river Euphrates, "emigrants." The title might serve to remind themselves, that they were *strangers and pilgrims*¹⁷, whose fathers had left their home at God's command and for God, "7 passers by, through this world to death, and through death to immortality."

And I fear the Lord, i. e. I am a worshipper of Him, most commonly, one who habitually stands in awe of Him, and so one who stands in awe of sin too. For none really fear God, none fear Him as sons, who do not fear Him in act. To be just than choose by lot, to which that should be given which cannot be given to both." also in Aquin. l. c. ⁶ Ep. 228. ad Honorat. n. 12. ⁷ Lap. ⁸ S. Jer. ⁹ S. Chrys. lb. p. 313. ¹⁰ Sanch. ¹¹ In all 32 times in the O. T. ¹² Gen. xl. 15. ¹³ Ex. i. 19. ¹⁴ Ib. ii. 7. ¹⁵ Ib. iii. 18, vii. 16, ix. 1. ¹⁶ Ib. v. 3. ¹⁷ Heb. xi. 13.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

afraid, and said unto him, Why hast thou done this? For the men knew that he fled from the presence of the LORD, because he had told them.

11 ¶ Then said they unto him, What afraid of God is not to fear Him. To be afraid of God keeps men away from God; to fear God draws them to Him. Here, however, Jonah probably meant to tell them, that the Object of his fear and worship was the One Self-existing God, He Who alone IS, Who made all things, in Whose hands are all things. He had told them before, that he had fled from being before the Lord. They had not thought anything of this, for they thought of the LORD, only as the God of the Jews. Now he adds, that He, Whose service he had thus forsaken, was the God of heaven; Who made the sea and dry land, that sea, whose raging terrified them and threatened their lives. The title, the God of heaven, asserts the doctrine of the creation of the heavens by God, and His supremacy. Hence Abraham uses it to his servant¹, and Jonah to the heathen mariners, and Daniel to Nebuchadnezzar²; and Cyrus in acknowledging God in his proclamation³. After his example, it is used in the decrees of Darius⁴ and Artaxerxes⁵, and the returned exiles use it in giving account of their building the temple to the Governor⁶. Perhaps, from the habit of intercourse with the heathen, it is used once by Daniel⁷ and by Nehemiah⁸. Melchisedek, not perhaps being acquainted with the special name, the LORD, blessed Abraham in the Name of *God, the Possessor or Creator of heaven and earth*⁹, i. e. of all that is. Jonah, by using it, at once taught the sailors that there is One Lord of all, and why this evil had fallen on them, because they had with them himself, the renegade servant of God. “¹⁰ When Jonah said this, he indeed feared God and repented of his sin. If he lost filial fear by fleeing and disobeying, he recovered it by repentance.”

10. Then were the men exceedingly afraid. Before, they had feared the tempest and the loss of their lives. Now they feared God. They feared, not the creature but the Creator. They knew that what they had feared was the doing of His Almighty. They felt how awful a thing it was to be in His Hands. Such fear is the beginning of conversion, when men turn from dwelling on the distresses which surround them, to God Who sent them.

Why hast thou done this? They are words of amazement and wonder. Why hast thou not obeyed so great a God, and how thoughtest thou to escape the hand of the Creator? “¹⁰ What is the mystery of thy flight? Why did one, who feared God and had revelations from God, flee, sooner than go to fulfil them? Why did the worshipper of the One true God depart from his God?” “¹¹ A servant flee from his Lord, a son from his father, man from his God!” The inconsistency of believers is the marvel of the young Christian, the repulsion of those without, the hardening of the unbeliever. If men really believed in eternity, how could they be thus immersed in things of time? If they believed in hell, how could they so hurry thither? If they believed that God died for them, how could they so requite Him? Faith without love, knowledge without obedience, conscious dependence and rebellion, to be favoured by God yet to despise His favour, are the strangest shall we do unto thee that the sea † may be calm unto us? for the sea || † wrought, and was tempestuous.

12 And he said unto them, ^p Take me up, and cast me forth into the sea; so shall the † Heb. went.

^p John 11. 50.

Before CHRIST
cir. 780.

† Heb. may be silent from us. Or, grew more and more tempestuous.

marvels of this mysterious world. All nature seems to cry out to and against the unfaithful Christian, why hast thou done this? And what a why it is! A scoffer has lately said truly, “¹² Avowed scepticism cannot do a tenth part of the injury to practical faith, that the constant spectacle of the huge mass of worldly unreal belief does.” It is nothing strange, that the world or unsanctified intellect should reject the Gospel. It is a thing of course, unless it be converted. But, to know, to believe, and to disobey! To disobey God, in the name of God! To propose to halve the living Gospel, as the woman who had killed her child¹³, and to think that the poor quivering remnants would be the living Gospel any more! As though the Will of God might, like those lower forms of His animal creation, be divided endlessly, and keep what fragments we will, it would still be a living whole, a vessel of His Spirit! Such unrealities and inconsistencies would be a sore trial of faith, had not Jesus, Who ¹⁴ knew what is in man, forewarned us that it should be so. The scandals against the Gospel, so contrary to all human opinion, are but a testimony the more to the Divine knowledge of the Redeemer.

11. What shall we do unto thee? They knew him to be a prophet; they ask him the mind of his God. The lots had marked out Jonah as the cause of the storm; Jonah had himself admitted it; and that the storm was for his cause, and came from his God. “¹¹ Great was he who fled, greater He Who required him. They dare not give him up; they cannot conceal him. They blame the fault; they confess their fear; they ask him the remedy, who was the author of the sin. If it was faulty to receive thee, what can we do, that God should not be angered? It is thine to direct; ours, to obey.”

The sea wrought and was tempestuous, lit. was going and whirling. It was not only increasingly tempestuous, but, like a thing alive and obeying its Master's Will, it was holding on its course, its wild waves tossing themselves, and marching on like battalions, marshalled, arrayed for the end for which they were sent, pursuing and demanding the runaway slave of God. “¹¹ It was going, as it was bidden; it was going to avenge its Lord; it was going, pursuing the fugitive Prophet. It was swelling every moment, and, as though the sailors were too tardy, was rising in yet greater surges, shewing that the vengeance of the Creator admitted not of delay.”

12. Take me up, and cast me into the sea. Neither might Jonah have said this, nor might the sailors have obeyed it, without the command of God. Jonah might will alone to perish, who had alone offended; but, without the command of God, the Giver of life, neither Jonah nor the sailors might dispose of the life of Jonah. But God willed that Jonah should be cast into the sea, whither he had gone for refuge, that ¹⁵ wherewithal he had sinned, by the same also he might be punished as a man; and, as a Prophet, that he might, in his three days burial, prefigure Him Who, after His Resurrection, should convert, not Nineveh, but the world, the cry of whose wickedness went up to God.

¹ Gen. xxiv. 7.
⁴ Ezr. vi. 9. 10.

² Dan. ii. 37, 44.
⁵ Ib. vii. 12, 21, 23.

³ 2 Chr. xxxvi. 23, Ezr. i. 2.
⁶ Ib. v. 11, 12. ⁷ ii. 18.

⁸ i. 4, 5, ii. 4, 20.
¹² In the Times.

⁹ Gen. xiv. 19.
¹³ 1 Kings iii. 26.

¹⁰ Dion.
¹⁴ S. John ii. 25.

¹¹ S. Jer.
¹⁵ Wisd. xi. 16.

Before CHRIST
cir. 780.

sea be calm unto you: for I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you.

† Heb. digged.

13 Nevertheless the men † rowed hard to bring it to the land; † but they could not: for the sea wrought, and was tempestuous against them.

¶ Prov. 21. 30.

14 Wherefore they cried unto the Lord,

For I know that for my sake. “¹ In that he says, I know, he marks that he had a revelation; in that he says, this great storm, he marks the need which lay on those who cast him into the sea.”

13. The men rowed hard, lit. dug. The word, like our “ploughed the main,” describes the great efforts which they made. Amid the violence of the storm, they had furled their sails. These were worse than useless. The wind was off shore, since by rowing alone they hoped to get back to it. They put their oars well and firmly in the sea, and turned up the water, as men turn up earth by digging. But in vain! God willed it not. The sea went on its way, as before. In the description of the deluge, it is repeated, the waters increased and bare up the ark, and it was lifted up above the earth; the waters increased greatly upon the earth; and the ark went upon the face of the waters. The waters raged and swelled, drowned the whole world, yet only bore up the ark, as a steed bears its rider: man was still, the waters obeyed. In this tempest, on the contrary, man strove, but, instead of the peace of the ark, the burden is, the violence of the tempest; the sea wrought and was tempestuous against them. “³ The Prophet had pronounced sentence against himself, but they would not lay hands upon him, striving hard to get back to land, and escape the risk of bloodshed, willing to lose life rather than cause its loss. O what a change was there. The people who had served God, said, Crucify Him, Crucify Him! These are bidden to put to death; the sea rageth; the tempest commandeth; and they are careless as to their own safety, while anxious about another’s.”

14. Wherefore [And] they cried unto the Lord. They cried no more each man to his god, but to the one God, Whom Jonah had made known to them; and to Him they cried with an earnest, submissive cry, repeating the words of beseeching, as men do in great earnestness; we beseech Thee, O Lord, let us not, we beseech Thee, perish for the life of this man (i. e. as a penalty for taking it, as it is said, we will slay him for the life of his brother, and, life for life.) They seem to have known what is said, your blood of your lives will I require; at the hand of every beast will I require it and at the hand of man; at the hand of every man’s brother will I require the life of man. Whoso sheddeth man’s blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made He man. “³ Do not these words of the sailors seem to us to be the confession of Pilate, who washed his hands, and said, I am clean from the blood of this Man? The Gentiles would not that Christ should perish; they protest that His Blood is innocent.”

And lay not upon us innocent blood; innocent as to them, although, as to this thing, guilty before God, and yet, as to God also, more innocent, they would think, than they. For, strange as was this one disobedience, their whole life, they now knew, was disobedience to God; his, but one act in a life of and said, We beseech thee, O LORD, we beseech thee, let us not perish for this man’s life, and † lay not upon us innocent blood: for thou, O LORD, † hast done as it pleased thee.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

Deut. 21. 8.

Ps. 115. 3.

15 So they took up Jonah, and cast him forth into the sea: † and the sea † ceased from her raging.

Ps. 89. 9.

Luke 8. 24.

† Heb. stood.

obedience. If God so punishes one sin of the holy, where shall the ungodly and sinner appear? Terrible to the awakened conscience are God’s chastenings on some (as it seems) single offence of those whom He loves.

For Thou, Lord, [Who knowest the hearts of all men,] hast done, as it pleased Thee. Wonderful, concise, confession of faith in these new converts! Psalmists said it⁸, Whatsoever God willet, that doeth He in heaven and in earth, in the sea and in all deep places. But these had but just known God, and they resolve the whole mystery of man’s agency and God’s Providence into the three simple words⁹, as [Thou] willedst [Thou] didst. “³ That we took him aboard, that the storm ariseth, that the winds rage, that the billows lift themselves, that the fugitive is betrayed by the lot, that he points out what is to be done, it is of Thy Will, O Lord.” “³ The tempest itself speaketh, that Thou, Lord, hast done as Thou willedst. Thy Will is fulfilled by our hands.” “¹ Observe the counsel of God, that, of his own will, not by violence or by necessity, should he be cast into the sea. For the casting of Jonah into the sea signified the entrance of Christ into the bitterness of the Passion, which He took upon Himself of His own Will, not of necessity. ¹⁰ He was offered up, and He willingly submitted Himself. And as those who sailed with Jonah were delivered, so the faithful in the Passion of Christ. ¹¹ If ye seek Me, let these go their way, that the saying might be fulfilled which Jesus spake, Of them which Thou gavest Me, I have lost none.”

15. They took up Jonah. “³ He does not say, ‘laid hold on him’, nor ‘came upon him’ but lifted him; as it were, bearing him with respect and honour, they cast him into the sea, not resisting, but yielding himself to their will.”

The sea ceased [lit. stood] from his raging. Ordinarily, the waves still swell, when the wind has ceased. The sea, when it had received Jonah, was hushed at once, to shew that God alone raised and quelled it. It stood still, like a servant, when it had accomplished its mission. God, Who at all times saith to it, ¹² Hitherto shalt thou come and no further, and here shall thy proud waves be stayed, now unseen, as afterwards in the Flesh, ¹³ rebuked the winds and the sea, and there was a great calm. “³ If we consider the errors of the world before the Passion of Christ, and the conflicting blasts of divers doctrines, and the vessel; and the whole race of man, i. e. the creature of the Lord, emperilled, and, after His Passion, the tranquillity of faith and the peace of the world and the security of all things and the conversion to God, we shall see how, after Jonah was cast in, the sea stood from its raging.” “³ Jonah, in the sea, a fugitive, shipwrecked, dead, saveth the tempest-tost vessel; he saveth the heathen, aforetime tossed to and fro by the error of the world into divers opinions. And Hosea, Amos, Isaiah, Joel, who prophesied at the same time, could not amend the people in Judæa; whence it appeared that the breakers

¹ Alb. M.

² Gen. vii. 17, 18.

³ S. Jer.

⁴ 2 Sam. xiv. 7.

⁵ Deut. xix. 21.

⁶ Gen. ix. 5, 6.

⁷ 1 S. Pet. iv. 18.

⁸ Ps. cxxxv. 6, cxv. 3.

⁹ S. John xviii. 8, 9.

¹⁰ כִּי־אִשְׁרָאֵל תִּפְּצֶנּוּ עִשָּׂת

¹¹ Job cxxviii. 11.

¹² Is. liii. 7.

¹³ S. Matt. viii. 26.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

16 Then the men "feared the LORD exceedingly, and † offered a sacrifice unto the LORD, and made VOWS.
† Heb. sacrificed a sacrifice unto the LORD, and vowed vows.

could not be calmed, save by the death of [Him typified by] the fugitive."

16. And the men feared the Lord with a great fear; because, from the tranquillity of the sea and the ceasing of the tempest, they saw that the Prophet's words were true. This great miracle completed the conversion of the mariners. God had removed all human cause of fear; and yet, in the same words as before, he says, they feared a great fear; but he adds, the Lord. It was the great fear, with which even the disciples of Jesus feared, when they saw the miracles which He did, which made even Peter say, Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord. Events full of wonder had thronged upon them; things beyond nature, and contrary to nature; things which betokened His Presence, Who had all things in His hands. They had seen *wind and storm fulfilling His word*², and, forerunners of the fishermen of Galilee, knowing full well from their own experience that this was above nature, they felt a great awe of God. So He commanded His people, *Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God*³, *for thy good always*⁴.

And offered a sacrifice. Doubtless, as it was a large decked vessel and bound on a long voyage, they had live creatures on board, which they could offer in sacrifice. But this was not enough for their thankfulness; they vowed vows. They promised that they would do thereafter what they could not do then; "that they would never depart from Him Whom they had begun to worship." This was true love, not to be content with aught which they could do, but to stretch forward in thought to an abiding and enlarged obedience, as God should enable them. And so they were doubtless enrolled among the people of God, first-fruits from among the heathen, won to God Who overrules all things, through the disobedience and repentance of His Prophet. Perhaps, they were the first preachers among the heathen, and their account of their own wonderful deliverance prepared the way for Jonah's mission to Nineveh.

17. Now the Lord had [lit. And the Lord] prepared. Jonah (as appears from his thanksgiving) was not swallowed at once, but sank to the bottom of the sea, God preserving him in life there by miracle, as He did in the fish's belly. Then, when the sea-weed was twined around his head, and he seemed to be already buried till the sea should give up her dead, God prepared the fish to swallow Jonah. "God could as easily have kept Jonah alive in the sea as in the fish's belly, but, in order to prefigure the burial of the Lord, He willed him to be within the fish whose belly was as a grave." Jonah, does not say what fish it was; and our Lord too used a name, signifying only one of the very largest fish⁷. Yet it were no greater miracle to create a fish which should swallow Jonah, than to preserve him alive when swallowed. "The infant is buried, as it were, in the womb of its mother; it cannot breathe, and yet, thus too, it liveth and is preserved, wonderfully nurtured by the will of God." He Who preserves the embryo in its living grave can maintain the life of man as easily without the outward air as with it. The same Divine Will preserves in being the whole creation, or creates it. The same Will

¹ S. Luke v. 8.

² Ps. cxlviii. 8. ³ Deut. vi. 13. ⁴ 1b. 24. ⁵ S. Jer. ⁶ Dion. ⁷ See ab. Introd. p. 257.

17 ¶ Now the LORD had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah. And † Jonah was in the † belly of the fish three days and three nights.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

* Matt. 12. 40.
& 16. 4.
Luke 11. 30.
† Heb. bowels.

of God keeps us in life by breathing this outward air, Which preserved Jonah without it. How long will men think of God, as if He were man, of the Creator as if He were a creature, as though creation were but one intricate piece of machinery, which is to go on, ringing its regular changes until it shall be worn out, and God were shut up, as a sort of mainspring within it, Who might be allowed to be a primal Force, to set it in motion, but must not be allowed to vary what He has once made? "We must admit of the agency of God," say these men⁹ when they would not in name be Atheists, "once in the beginning of things, but must allow of His interference as sparingly as may be." Most wise arrangement of the creature, if it were indeed the god of its God! Most considerate provision for the non-interference of its Maker, if it could but secure that He would not interfere with it for ever! Acute physical philosophy, which, by its omnipotent word, would undo the Acts of God! Heartless, senseless, sightless, world, which exists in God, is upheld by God, whose every breath is an effluence of God's love, and which yet sees Him not, thanks Him not, thinks it a greater thing to hold its own frail existence from some imagined law, than to be the object of the tender personal care of the Infinite God, Who is Love! Poor hoodwinked souls, which would extinguish for themselves the Light of the world, in order that it may not eclipse the rushlight of their own theory!

And Jonah was in the belly of the fish. The time that Jonah was in the fish's belly was a hidden prophecy. Jonah does not explain nor point it. He tells the fact, as Scripture is wont. Then he singles out one, the turning point in it. Doubtless in those three days and nights of darkness, Jonah, (like him who after his conversion became S. Paul,) meditated much, repented much, sorrowed much, for the love of God, that he had ever offended God, purposed future obedience, adored God with wondering awe for His judgment and mercy. It was a narrow home, in which Jonah, by miracle, was not consumed; by miracle, breathed; by miracle, retained his senses in that fetid place. Jonah doubtless, repented, marvelled, adored, loved God. But, of all, God has singled out this one point, how, out of such a place, Jonah thanked God. As He delivered Paul and Silas from the prison, when they prayed with a loud voice to Him, so when Jonah, by inspiration of His Spirit, thanked Him, He delivered him. To thank God, only in order to obtain fresh gifts from Him, would be but a refined, hypocritical form of selfishness. Such a formal act would not be thanks at all. We thank God, because we love Him, because He is so infinitely Good, and so good to us, unworthy. Thanklessness shuts the door to His personal mercies to us, because it makes them the occasion of fresh sins of our's. Thankfulness sets God's essential Goodness free (so to speak) to be good to us. He can do what He delights in doing, be good to us, without our making His Goodness a source of harm to us. Thanking Him through His grace, we become fit vessels for larger graces. "Blessed he who, at every gift of grace, returns to Him in Whom is all fulness of graces; to Whom when we shew ourselves not ungrateful for gifts receiv-

⁹ S. Cyr.

⁹ Westminster Review.

¹⁰ S. Bern. Sermon 27. c. pessim. vit. ingratitude. i. 1142.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

CHAPTER II.

1 The prayer of Jonah. 10 He is delivered from the fish.

^a Ps. 120. 1.
& 130. 1.
& 142. 1.
Lam. 3. 55,
56.

^b Or, out of mine
affliction.
^c Ps. 65. 2.

THEN Jonah prayed unto the LORD his God out of the fish's belly,

2 And said, I ^acried || by reason of mine affliction unto the LORD, ^band he heard me ;

ed, we make room in ourselves for grace, and become meet for receiving yet more." But Jonah's was that special character of thankfulness, which thanks God in the midst of calamities from which there was no human exit ; and God set His seal on this sort of thankfulness, by annexing this deliverance, which has consecrated Jonah as an image of our Lord, to his wonderful act of thanksgiving.

II. 1. Then [And] Jonah prayed, i. e. when the three days and nights were passed, he uttered this devotion. The word prayed includes thanksgiving, not petition only. It is said of Hannah that she *prayed*¹ ; but her canticle is all one thanksgiving without a single petition. In this thanksgiving Jonah says how his prayers had been heard, but prays no more. God had delivered him from the sea, and he thanks God, in the fish's belly, as undisturbed as in a Church or an oratory, secure that God, Who had done so much, would fulfil the rest. He called God, his God, Who had in so many ways shewn Himself his, by His revelations, by His inspirations, by His chastisements, and now by His mercy. "² From these words, Jonah prayed unto the Lord his God out of the fish's belly, we perceive that, after he felt himself safe in the fish's belly, he despaired not of God's mercy."

2. I cried by reason of mine affliction, or, out of affliction which came to me. So the Psalmist thanked God in the same words, though in a different order³ ; To the Lord in trouble to me I called, and He heard me. He called, and God heard and answered. "⁴ He does not say, I call, but I called ; he does not pray for the future, but gives thanks for the past." Strange cause of thankfulness this would seem to most faith, to be alive in such a grave ; to abide there hour after hour, and day after day, in one unchanging darkness, carried to and fro helplessly, with no known escape from his fetid prison, except to death ! Yet spiritual light shone on that depth of darkness. The voracious creature, which never opened his mouth save to destroy life, had swallowed him, to save it. "⁵ What looked like death, became safe-keeping," and so the Prophet who had fled to avoid doing the Will of God and to do his own, now willed to be borne about, he knew not whither, at the will, as it seemed, of the huge animal in which he lay, but in truth, whither God directed it, and he gave thanks. God had heard him. The first token of God's mercy was the earnest of the whole. God was dealing with him, was looking on him. It was enough.

Out of the belly of hell cried I. The deep waters were as a grave, and he was counted *among the dead*⁴. Death seemed so certain that it was all one as if he were in the womb of hell, not to be re-born to life until the last Day. So David said⁵, The bands of death compassed me round about ; and, ⁶ Thou hast drawn my life out of hell. The waters choked his speech ; but he cried with a loud cry to God Who knew the heart. I cried ; Thou heardest. The words vary only by a kindred letter⁷, Shivva'ti, Shama'ta. The real heart's-cry to God ac-out of the belly of || hell cried I, and thou ^{Before} ^{CHRIST} ^{cir. 780.} heardest my voice.

3 ^c For thou hadst cast me into the deep, || Or, ^d in the † midst of the seas ; and the floods ^e compassed me about : ^f all thy billows and ^g thy waves passed over me. ^h Is. 14. 9. ⁱ Ps. 88. 6. ^j Heb. heart. ^k Ps. 42. 7.

4 ^e Then I said, I am cast out of thy ^{Ps. 31. 22.}

cording to the mind of God and His hearing are one, whether, for man's good, He seem at the time to hear or no.

"⁸ Not of the voice but of the heart is God the Hearer, as He is the Seer.—Do the ears of God wait for sound ? How then could the prayer of Jonah from the inmost belly of the whale, through the bowels of so great a creature, out of the very bottomless depths, through so great a mass of waters, make its way to Heaven ?" "⁹ Loud crying to God is not with the voice but with the heart. Many, silent with their lips, have cried aloud with their heart ; many, noisy with their lips, could, with heart turned away, obtain nothing. If thou thou criest, cry within, where God heareth." "¹⁰ Jonah cried aloud to God out of the fish's belly, out of the deep of the sea, out of the depths of disobedience ; and his prayer reached to God, Who rescued him from the waves, brought him forth out of the vast creature, absolved him from the guilt. Let the sinner too cry aloud, whom, departing from God, the storm of desires overwhelmed, the malignant Enemy devoured, the waves of this present world sucked under ! Let him own that he is in the depth, that so his prayer may reach to God."

3. For Thou hadst [didst] cast me into the deep. Jonah continues to describe the extremity of peril, from which God had already delivered him. Sweet is the memory of perils past. For they speak of God's Fatherly care. Sweet is it to the Prophet to tell God of His mercies ; but this is sweet only to the holy ; for God's mercy convicts the careless of ingratitude. Jonah then tells God, how He had cast him vehemently forth into the eddying¹¹ depth, where, when Pharaoh's army *sank like a stone*¹², they never rose, and that, in the heart or centre of the seas, whence no strong swimmer could escape to shore. The floods or flood, [lit. river,] the sea with its currents, surrounded him, encompassing him on all sides ; and, above, tossed its multitudinous waves, passing over him, like an army trampling one prostrate under foot. Jonah remembered well the temple-psalms, and, using their words, united himself with those other worshippers who sang them, and taught us how to speak them to God. The sons of Korah¹³ had poured out to God in these self-same words the sorrows which oppressed them. The rolling billows¹⁴ and the breakers¹⁵, which, as they burst upon the rocks, shiver the vessel and crush man, arc, he says to God, Thine, fulfilling Thy Will on me.

4. I am cast out of Thy sight, lit. from before Thine eyes. Jonah had wilfully withdrawn from standing in God's presence. Now God had taken him at his word, and, as it seemed, cast him out of it. David had said in his haste, I am cut off. Jonah substitutes the stronger word, *I am cast forth*¹⁶, driven forth, expelled, like the *mire and dirt*¹⁷ which the waves drive along, or like the waves themselves in their restless motion¹⁸, or the heathen (the word is the same) whom God had driven out before Israel¹⁹, or as Adam from Paradise²⁰.

on Tert. l. c. p. 310. n. v. ¹⁰ S. Greg. in Ps. 6. Pœnit. L. ¹¹ כְּסֵלֶה
¹² Ex. xv. 5, add 10. ¹³ Ps. xlii. 7. ¹⁴ גִּלְגִּלִּי ¹⁵ שִׁבְרֵי ¹⁶ See Introd. p. 252.
¹⁷ Is. lvii. 20. ¹⁸ Ib. ¹⁹ Ex. xxxiv. 11, and Piel often. ²⁰ Gen. iii. 24.

¹ 1 Sam. ii. 1. ² S. Jer. ³ See Introd. p. 252.
⁴ Ps. lxxxviii. 4. ⁵ Ib. xviii. 5. ⁶ Ib. xxx. 3. ⁷ שִׁוְוָתִי שָׁמָעָה ⁸ Tert.
de Orat. § 17. p. 311. Oxf. Tr. ⁹ S. Aug. in Ps. 30. Enarr. 4. § 10 : see others referred

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

¹ 1 Kings 8. 38.
² Ps. 69. 1.
³ Lam. 3. 54.

sight, yet I will look again [†]toward thy holy temple.

5 The ²waters compassed me about, even to the soul: the depth closed me round about, the weeds were wrapped about my head.

[†] Heb. cuttings off.

6 I went down to the [†]bottoms of the mountains; the earth with her bars was about me for ever: yet hast thou brought up my life ^bfrom || corruption, O LORD my God.

7 When my soul fainted within me I remembered the LORD: [†]and my prayer came in unto thee, into thine holy temple.

8 They that observe ^klying vanities forsake their own mercy.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780:

^b Ps. 16. 10.
|| Or, the pit.

[†] Ps. 18. 6.

^k 2 Kings 17.
15.
Ps. 31. 6.
Jer. 10. 5.
& 16. 19.

Yet [Only] I will look again. He was, as it were, a cast-away, cast out of God's sight, unheeded by Him, his prayers unheard; the storm unabated, until he was cast forth. He could no longer look with the bodily eye even towards the land where God shewed the marvels of His mercy, and the Temple where God was worshipped continually. Yet what he could not do in the body, he would do in his soul. This was his only resource. "If I be cast away, this one thing will I do, I will still look to God." Magnificent faith! Humanly speaking, all hope was gone, for, when that huge vessel could scarcely live in the sea, how should a man? when God had given it no rest, while it contained Jonah, how should He will that Jonah should escape? Nay, God had hidden His Face from him; yet he did this one, this only thing; only this, "once more, still I will add to look to God." Thitherward would he look, so long as his mind yet remained in him. If his soul parted from him, it should go forth from him in that gaze. God gave him no hope, save that He preserved him alive. For he seemed to himself forsaken of God. Wonderful pattern of faith which gains strength even from God's seeming desertion! "I am cast vehemently forth from before Thine eyes; yet this one thing will I do; mine eyes shall be unto Thee, O Lord." The Israelites, as we see from Solomon's dedication-prayer, *prayed toward the temple*¹, where God had set His Name and shewn His glory, where were the sacrifices which foreshadowed the Great Atonement. Thitherward they looked in prayer, as Christians, of old, prayed towards the East, the seat of our ancient Paradise, where our Lord *shall appear unto them that look for Him, a second time unto salvation*². Toward that Temple then he would yet look with fixed eye³ for help, where God, Who fills heaven and earth, shewed Himself to sinners reconciled.

5. The waters compassed me about even to the soul. Words which to others were figures of distress, the waters have come even to the soul, were to Jonah realities. Sunk in the deep seas, the water strove to penetrate at every opening. To draw breath, which sustains life, to him would have been death. There was but a breath between him and death. The deep encompassed me, encircling, meeting him whithersoever he turned, holding him imprisoned on every side, so that there was no escape, and, if there otherwise had been, he was bound motionless, the weed was wrapped around my head, like a grave-band. The weed was the well-known sea-weed, which, even near the surface of the sea where man can struggle, twines round him, a peril even to the strong swimmer, entangling him often the more, the more he struggles to extricate himself from it. But to one below, powerless to struggle, it was as his winding-sheet.

6. I went down to the bottoms, [lit. the cuttings off] of the mountains, the "roots" as the Chaldee⁵ and we call them, the hidden rocks, which the mountains push out, as it were, into the sea, and in which they end. Such hidden rocks extend along the whole length of that coast⁶. These were his dungeon-walls; the earth, her bars, those long submarine reefs of rock, his prison-bars, were around him for ever: the sea-weeds were his chains: and, even thus, when things were at their uttermost, Thou hast brought up my life from corruption, to which his body would have fallen a prey, had not God sent the fish to deliver him. The deliverance for which he thanks God is altogether past: Thou broughtest me up. He calls the LORD, my God, because, being the God of all, He was especially his God, for whom He had done things of such marvellous love. God loves each soul which He has made with the same infinite love with which He loves all. Whence S. Paul says of Jesus⁷, Who loved me and gave Himself for me. He loves each, with the same undivided love, as if He had created none besides; and He allows each to say, My God, as if the Infinite God belonged wholly to each. So would He teach us the oneness of union between the soul which God loves and which admits His love, and Himself.

7. When my soul fainted, lit. was covered, within me, was dizzied, overwhelmed. The word is used of actual faintness from heat⁸, thirst⁹, exhaustion¹⁰, when a film comes over the eyes, and the brain is, as it were, mantled over. The soul of the pious never is so full of God, as when all things else fade from him. Jonah could not but have remembered God in the tempest; when the lots were cast; when he adjudged himself to be cast forth. But when it came to the utmost, then he says, I remembered the LORD, as though, in the intense thought of God then, all his former thought of God had been forgetfulness. So it is in every strong act of faith, of love, of prayer; its former state seems unworthy of the name of faith, love, prayer. It believes, loves, prays, as though all before had been forgetfulness.

And my prayer came in unto Thee. No sooner had he so prayed, than God heard. Jonah had thought himself cast out of His sight; but his prayer entered in thither. His holy temple is doubtless His actual Temple, whitherward he prayed. God, Who is wholly everywhere but the whole of Him nowhere, was as much in the Temple as in heaven; and had manifested Himself to Israel in their degree in the Temple, as to the blessed saints and angels in heaven.

8. They that observe lying vanities, i. e. (by the force of the Hebrew form¹¹) that diligently watch, pay deference to, court, sue, vanities of vanities, vain things, which prove themselves vain at last, failing the hopes which trust in them. Such were actual idols, in which men openly professed that they trusted. Such are all things in which men trust, out of God. One is not more vain than another. All have this common principle of vanity, that men look, out of God, to

² Heb. ix. 28.

³ ¹ 1 Kings viii. 29, 30, 35, &c.

⁴ Ps. lxi. 2. See ab. Introd. p. 252.

⁵ Jon. here.

⁶ "The road is very dangerous; for the bottom is a mere bank of rocks, which extend the whole length of the coast. It is thought that the sharp rocks which pierce to the surface of the sea are the remains of the Isle Paria, mentioned by Pliny v. 31." Mislin, Les Saints Lieux, ii. 137.

⁷ Gal. ii. 20.

⁸ Is. li. 20.

⁹ Jon. iv. 8.

¹⁰ Am. viii. 13.

¹¹ ¹¹ ¹¹

Before CHRIST
cir. 780.

9 But I will ¹ sacrifice unto thee with the voice of thanksgiving; I will pay that that that which has its only existence or permanence from God. It is then one general maxim, including all men's idols, idols of the flesh, idols of intellect, idols of ambition, idols of pride, idols of self and self-will. Men observe them, as gods, watch them, hang upon them, never lose sight of them, guard them as though they could keep them. But what are they? lying vanities, breath and wind, which none can grasp or detain, vanishing like air into air. And what do they who so observe them? All alike forsake their own mercy; i. e. God, "Whose property is, always to have mercy," and Who would be Mercy to them, if they would. So David calls God, *my Mercy*¹. Abraham's servant and Naomi praise God, that He *hath not forsaken His mercy*². Jonah does not, in this, exclude himself. His own idol had been his false love for his country, that he would not have his people go into captivity, when God would; would not have Nineveh preserved, the enemy of his country; and by leaving his office, he left his God, forsook his own Mercy. See how God speaks of Himself, as wholly belonging to them, who are His. He calls Himself their own Mercy. "He saith not, they who do vanities, (for vanity of vanities, and all things are vanity) lest he should seem to condemn all, and to deny mercy to the whole human race; but they who observe, guard vanities, or lies; they, into the affections of whose hearts those vanities have entered; who not only do vanities, but who guard them, as loving them, deeming that they have found a treasure—These forsake their own Mercy. Although mercy be offended, (and under Mercy we may understand God Himself, for God is gracious and full of compassion; slow to anger and of great mercy,) yet He doth not forsake, doth not abhor, those who guard vanities, but awaiteth that they should return: these contrariwise, of their own will, forsake Mercy standing and offering Itself."

¹ Ps. 50. 14, 23. & 116. 17, 18. Hos. 14. 2. Heb. 13. 15.

9. But [And] with the voice of thanksgiving will I [would I fain] sacrifice unto Thee; what I have vowed, I would pay. He does not say, I will; for it did not depend upon him. Without a further miracle of God, he could do nothing. But he says, that he would never more forsake God. The law appointed sacrifices of thanksgiving³; these he would offer, not in act only, but with words of praise. He would pay what he had vowed, and chiefly himself, his life which God had given back to him, the obedience of his remaining life, in all things. For he that keepeth the law bringeth offerings enough; he that taketh heed to the commandments offereth a peace-offering. Jonah neglects neither the outward nor the inward part, neither the body nor the soul of the commandment.

Salvation is of [lit. to] the Lord. It is wholly His; all belongs to Him, so that none can share in bestowing it; none can have any hope, save from Him. He uses an intensive form, as though he would say, strong *mighty salvation*⁴. God seems often to wait for the full resignation of the soul, all its powers and will to Him. Then He can shew mercy healthfully, when the soul is wholly surrendered to Him. So, on this full confession, Jonah is restored. The Prophet's prayer ends almost in promising the same as the mariners. They made vows; Jonah says, I will pay that I have vowed. Devoted service in the creature is one and the same, although diverse in degree; and so, that Israel might not despise the heathen, he tacitly likens the act of the new heathen converts and that of the Prophet.

¹ Ps. cxliv. 2.

² Gen. xxiv. 27, Ruth ii. 20.

⁴ Eccl. i. 2.

⁵ Ps. cxlv. 8.

⁶ Lev. vii. 12-15.

³ S. Jer.

I have vowed. ^m Salvation is of the Lord.

10 ¶ And the Lord spake unto the

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

^m Ps. 3. 8.

11. And the Lord spake unto the fish. ⁹ Wind and storm fulfil His word. The irrational creatures have wills. God had commanded the Prophet, and he disobeyed. God, in some way, commanded the fish. He laid His will upon it, and the fish forthwith obeyed; a pattern to the Prophet when He released him. "God's Will, that any thing should be completed, is law and fulfilment and hath the power of law. Not that Almighty God commanded the fish, as He doth us or the Holy Angels, uttering in its mind what is to be done, or inserting into the heart the knowledge of what He chooseth. But if He be said to command irrational animals or elements or any part of the creation, this signifieth the law and command of His Will. For all things yield to His Will, and the mode of their obedience is to us altogether ineffable, but known to Him." "Jonah," says S. Chrysostome, "fled the land, and fled not the displeasure of God. He fled the land, and brought a tempest on the sea: and not only himself gained no good from flight, but brought into extreme peril those also who took him on board. When he sailed, seated in the vessel, with sailors and pilot and all the tackling, he was in the extremest peril: when, sunk in the sea, the sin punished and laid aside, he entered that vast vessel, the fish's belly, he enjoyed great fearlessness; that thou mayest learn that, as no ship availeth to one living in sin, so when freed from sin, neither sea destroyeth, nor beasts consume. The waves received him, and choked him not; the vast fish received him and destroyed him not; but both the huge animal and the element gave back their deposit safe to God, and by all things the Prophet learnt to be mild and tender, not to be more cruel than the untaught mariners or wild waves or animals. For the sailors did not give him up at first, but after manifold constraint; and the sea and the wild animal guarded him with much benevolence, God disposing all these things. He returned then, preached, threatened, persuaded, saved, awed, amended, stablished, through that one first preaching. For he needed not many days, nor continuous exhortation; but, speaking those words, he brought all to repentance. Wherefore God did not lead him straight from the vessel to the city; but the sailors gave him over to the sea, the sea to the vast fish, the fish to God, God to the Ninevites, and through this long circuit brought back the fugitive; that He might instruct all, that it is impossible to escape the Hands of God. For come where a man may, dragging sin after him, he will undergo countless troubles. Though man be not there, nature itself on all sides will oppose him with great vehemence."

"Since the elect too at times strive to be sharp-witted, it is well to bring forward another wise man, and shew how the craft of mortal man is comprehended in the Inward Counsels. For Jonah wished to exercise a prudent sharpness of wit, when, being sent to preach repentance to the Ninevites, in that he feared that, if the Gentiles were chosen, Judæa would be forsaken, he refused to discharge the office of preaching. He sought a ship, chose to flee to Tarshish; but forthwith a tempest arises, the lot is cast, to know for whose fault the sea was troubled. Jonah is taken in his fault, plunged in the deep, swallowed by the fish, and carried by the vast beast thither whither he set at naught the command to go. See how the tempest found God's runaway, the lot binds him, the sea receives him, the beast encloses him, and, because he sets himself

⁷ Ecclus. xxxv. 1.

⁸ שְׂמִיעָה

⁹ Ps. cxlviii. 8.

¹⁰ S. Cyr. on Jon. ii. init. ¹¹ Hom. on the Statues, v. 6. ¹² S. Greg. Mor. vi. 31.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

fish, and it vomited out Jonah upon the dry land.

CHAPTER III.

1 Jonah, sent again, preacheth to the Ninevites.

5 Upon their repentance, 10 God repenteth.

against obeying his Maker, he is carried a culprit by his prison-house to the place whither he had been sent. When God commanded, man would not minister the prophecy; when God enjoined, the beast cast forth the Prophet. The Lord then taketh the wise in their own craftiness, when He bringeth back to the service of His own Will, that whereby man's will contradicts Him." "1 Jonah, fleeing from the perils of preaching and salvation of souls, fell into peril of his own life. When, in the ship, he took on himself the peril of all, he saved both himself and the ship. He fled as a man; he exposed himself to peril, as a prophet." "2 Let them think so, who are sent by God or by a superior to preach to heretics or to heathen. When God calleth to an office or condition whose object it is to live for the salvation of others, He gives grace and means necessary or expedient to this end. For so the sweet and careful ordering of His Providence requireth.—Greater peril awaiteth us from God our Judge, if we flee His calling as did Jonah, if we use not the talents entrusted to us to do His Will and to His glory. We know the parable of the servant who buried the talent, and was condemned by the Lord."

And it vomited out Jonah. Unwilling, but constrained, it cast him forth, as a burden to it. "3 From the lowest depths of death, Life came forth victorious." "4 He is swallowed by the fish, but is not consumed; and then calls upon God, and (marvel!) on the third day is given back with Christ." "5 What it prefigured, that that vast animal on the third day gave back alive the Prophet which it had swallowed, no need to ask of us, since Christ explained it. As then Jonah passed from the ship into the fish's belly, so Christ from the wood into the tomb or the depth of death. And as he for those emperilled in the tempest, so Christ for those tempest-tost in this world. And as Jonah was first enjoined to preach to the Ninevites, but the preaching of Jonah did not reach them before the fish cast him forth, so prophecy was sent beforehand to the Gentiles, but did not reach them until after the resurrection of Christ." "6 Jonah prophesied of Christ, not so much in words as by a suffering of his own; yet more openly than if he had proclaimed by speech His Death and Resurrection. For why was he received into the fish's belly, and given back the third day, except to signify that Christ would on the third day return from the deep of hell?"

S. Irenæus looks on the history of Jonah as the imaging of man's own history. "7 As He allowed Jonah to be swallowed by the whale, not that he should perish altogether, but that, being vomited forth, he might the more be subdued to God, and the more glorify God Who had given him such unlooked-for deliverance, and bring those Ninevites to solid repentance, converting them to the Lord Who would free them from death, terrified by that sign which befel Jonah (as Scripture says of them, They turned every man from his evil way, &c.) so from the beginning, God allowed man to be swallowed up by that vast Cetos who was the author of the transgression, not that he should altogether perish, but preparing a way of salvation, which, as foresignified by the word in Jonah, was

AND the word of the Lord came unto Jonah the second time, saying,
2 Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

formed for those who had the like faith as to the Lord as Jonah, and with him confessed, I fear the Lord, &c. that so man, receiving from God unlooked-for salvation, might rise from the dead and glorify God, &c. This was the longsuffering of God, that man might pass through all, and acknowledge his ways; then, coming to the resurrection and knowing by trial from what he had been delivered, might be for ever thankful to God, and, having received from Him the gift of incorruption, might love Him more (for he to whom much is forgiven, loveth much) and know himself, that he is mortal and weak, and understand the Lord, that He is in such wise Mighty and Immortal, that to the mortal He can give immortality and to the things of time eternity."

III. 1. And the word of the Lord came a second time to Jonah. "8 Jonah, delivered from the whale, doubtless went up to Jerusalem to pay his vows and thank God there. Perhaps he hoped that God would be content with this his punishment and repentance, and that He would not again send him to Nineveh." Any how he was in some settled home, perhaps again at Gathhepher. For God bids him, Arise, go. "9 But one who is on his way, is not bidden to arise and go." God may have allowed an interval to elapse, in order that the tidings of so great a miracle might spread far and wide. But Jonah does not supply any of these incidents¹⁰. He does not speak of himself¹¹, but of his mission only, as God taught him.

2. Arise, go to Nineveh that great city, and preach [or cry] unto it. God says to Jonah the self-same words which He had said before; only perhaps He gives him an intimation of His purpose of mercy, in that He says no more, cry against her, but cry unto her. He might cry against one doomed to destruction; to cry unto her, seems to imply that she had some interest in, and so some hope from, this cry. The preaching that I bid thee. This is the only notice which Jonah relates that God took of his disobedience, in that He charged him to obey exactly what He commanded. "11 He does not say to him, why didst thou not what I commanded?" He had rebuked him in deed; He amended him and upbraided him not. "11 The rebuke of that shipwreck and the swallowing by the fish sufficed, so that he who had not felt the Lord commanding, might understand Him, delivering." Jonah might have seemed unworthy to be again inspired by God. But whom the Lord loveth, He chasteneth; whom He chasteneth, He loveth. "12 The hard discipline, the severity and length of the scourge, were the earnest of a great trust and a high destination." He knew him to be changed into another man, and, by one of His most special favours, gives him that same trust which he had before deserted. "9 As Christ, when risen, commended His sheep to Peter, wiser now and more fervent, so to Jonah risen He commends the conversion of Nineveh. For so did Christ risen bring about the conversion of the heathen, by sending His Apostles, each into large provinces, as Jonah was sent alone to a large city." "13 He bids him declare not only the sentence of God, but in the self-same words;

¹ Lap. from S. Chrys.

² from Lap.

³ S. Jer.

⁴ S. Greg. Naz. l. c. ⁵ S. Aug. Ep. 102. q. 6. n. 34. ⁶ de Civ. Dei, xviii. 30. 2.

⁷ iii. 20. p. 213. ed. Mass. L.

⁸ Lap.

⁹ Castr. ¹⁰ See Introd. p. 253. ¹¹ S. Jer. ¹² from Sanch. ¹³ Mont.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

3 So Jonah arose, and went unto Nineveh, according to the word of the LORD. Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city of three days' journey.

† Heb. of God:
So Gen. 30. 8.
Ps. 36. 6. &
80. 10.

not to consider his own estimation or the ears of his hearers, nor to mingle soothing with severe words, and convey the message ingeniously, but with all freedom and severity to declare openly what was commanded him. This plainness, though, may be, less acceptable to people or princes, is oftentimes more useful, always more approved by God. Nothing should be more sacred to the preacher of God's word, than truth and simplicity and inviolable sanctity in delivering it. Now alas, all this is changed into vain show at the will of the multitude and the breath of popular favour."

3. And Jonah arose and went unto Nineveh, as ready to obey, as before to disobey. Before, when God said those same words, he arose and fled; now, he arose and went. True conversion shews the same energy in serving God, as the unconverted had before shewn in serving self or error. Saul's spirit of fire, which persecuted Christ, gleamed in S. Paul like lightning through the world, to win souls to Him.

Nineveh was an exceeding great city; lit. great to God, i.e. what would not only appear great to man who admires things of no account, but what, being really great, is so in the judgment of God Who cannot be deceived. God did account it great, Who says to Jonah, Should not I spare Nineveh that great city, which hath more than six score thousand that cannot discern between their right hand and their left? It is a different idiom from that, when Scripture speaks of the mountains of God, the cedars of God. For of these it speaks, as having their firmness or their beauty from God as their Author.

Of three days' journey, i. e. sixty miles in circumference. It was a great city. Jonah speaks of its greatness, under a name which he would only have used of real greatness. Varied accounts agree in ascribing this size to Nineveh¹. An Eastern city enclosing often, as did Babylon, ground under tillage, the only marvel is, that such a space was enclosed by walls. Yet this too is no marvel, when we know from inscriptions, what masses of human strength the great empires of old had at their command, or of the more than threescore pyramids of Egypt². In population it was far inferior to our metropolis, of which, as of the suburbs of Rome of old, "one would hesitate to say, where the city ended, where it began. The suburban parts are so joined on to the city itself, and give the spectator the idea of boundless length." An Eastern would the more naturally think of the circumference of a city, because of the broad places, similar to the boulevards of Paris, which encircled it, so that men could walk around it, within it. "The buildings," it is related of Babylon, "are not brought close to the walls, but are at about the distance of an acre from them. And not even the whole city did they occupy with houses; 80 furlongs are inhabited, and not even all these continuously, I suppose because it seemed safer to live scattered in several places. The rest they sow and till, that, if any foreign force threaten them, the besieged may be supplied with food from the soil of the city itself." Not Babylon alone was spoken of, of old, as "having the circumference of a nation rather than of a city."

4. And Jonah began to enter the city a day's journey. Per-

¹ See ab. Introd. pp. 253, 4.

² 67. Lepsius.

³ Dionys. Hal. T. i. p. 219. L. ⁴ Q. Curt. v. 4. ⁵ Aristot. Polit. iii. 2. "You cannot judge whether a city is one or no by there being walls. For it would be possible to carry one wall round Peloponnesus; and perhaps Babylon is some-

4 And Jonah began to enter into the city a day's journey, and he cried, and said, Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

See Deut.
18. 22.

haps the day's journey enabled him to traverse the city from end to end, with his one brief, deep cry of woe; *Yet forty days and Nineveh overthrown*⁶. He prophesied an utter overthrow, a turning it upside down⁷. He does not speak of it as to happen at a time beyond those days. The close of the forty days and the destruction were to be one. He does not say strictly, Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown, but, Yet forty days and Nineveh overthrown. The last of those forty days was, ere its sun was set, to see Nineveh as a thing overthrown. Jonah knew from the first God's purpose of mercy to Nineveh; he had a further hint of it in the altered commission which he had received. It is perhaps hinted in the word Yet. "If God had meant unconditionally to overthrow them, He would have overthrown them without notice. Yet, always denotes some long-suffering of God." But, taught by that severe discipline, he discharges his office strictly. He cries, what God had bidden him to cry, without reserve or exception. The sentence, as are all God's threatenings until the last, was conditional. But God does not say this. That sentence was now within forty days of its completion; yet even thus it was remitted. Wonderful encouragement, when one Lent sufficed to save some six hundred thousand souls from perishing! Yet the first visitation of the Cholera was checked in its progress in England, upon one day's national fast and humiliation; and we have seen how general prayer has oftentimes at once opened or closed the heavens as we needed. "A few years ago," relates S. Augustine⁹, "when Arcadius was Emperor at Constantinople (what I say, some have heard, some of our people were present there,) did not God, willing to terrify the city, and, by terrifying, to amend, convert, cleanse, change it, reveal to a faithful servant of His (a soldier, it is said), that the city should perish by fire from heaven, and warned him to tell the Bishop! It was told. The Bishop despised it not, but addressed the people. The city turned to the mourning of penitence, as that Nineveh of old. Yet lest men should think that he who said this, deceived or was deceived, the day which God had threatened, came. When all were intently expecting the issue with great fears, at the beginning of night as the world was being darkened, a fiery cloud was seen from the East, small at first, then, as it approached the city, gradually enlarging, until it hung terribly over the whole city. All fled to the Church; the place did not hold the people.—But after that great tribulation, when God had accredited His word, the cloud began to diminish and at last disappeared. The people, freed from fear for a while, again heard that they must migrate, because the whole city should be destroyed on the next sabbath. The whole people left the city with the Emperor; no one remained in his house.—That multitude, having gone some miles, when gathered in one spot to pour forth prayer to God, suddenly saw a great smoke, and sent forth a loud cry to God." The city was saved. "What shall we say?" adds S. Augustine. "Was this the anger of God, or rather His mercy? Who doubts that the most merciful Father will be terrified by terrifying to convert, not to punish by destroying? As the hand is lifted up to strike, and is recalled in pity, when he thing of this sort, and every city which had the circumference of a nation rather than of a city, at the taking of which they say that some parts of the city did not hear of it for three days." ⁶ Introd. p. 253. ⁷ Ib. p. 255. ⁸ Cast.

⁹ de excid. urb. c. C. (L.) add Paul. Diac. L. 13.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

5 ¶ So the people of Nineveh^b believed God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them.

^b Matt. 12. 41.
Luke 11. 32.

who was to be struck is terrified, so was it done to that city." Will any of God's warnings now move our great Babylon to repentance, that it be not ruined?

5. And the people of Nineveh believed God; strictly, believed in God. 'To believe in God' expresses more heart-belief, than to believe God in itself need convey. To believe God is to believe what God says, to be true; to believe in or on God expresses not belief only, but that belief resting in God, trusting itself and all its concerns with Him. It combines hope and trust with faith, and love too, since, without love, there cannot be trust. They believed then the preaching of Jonah, and that He, in Whose Name Jonah spake, had all power in heaven and earth. But they believed further in His unknown mercies; they cast themselves upon the goodness of the hitherto unknown God. Yet they believed in Him, as the Supreme God, the object of awe, the God (Elohim¹, Haelohim²), although they knew Him not, as He is³, the Self-Existent. Jonah does not say how they were thus persuaded. God the Holy Ghost relates the wonders of God's Omnipotence as common every-day things. They are no marvels to Him Who wrought them. He commanded and they were done. He spake with power to the hearts which He had made, and they were turned to Him. Any human means are secondary, utterly powerless, except in His hands Who Alone doth all things through whomsoever He doth them. Our Lord tells us that *Jonah himself was a sign unto the Ninevites*⁴. Whether then the mariners spread the history⁵, or howsoever the Ninevites knew the personal history of Jonah, he, in his own person and in what befell him, was a sign to them. They believed that God, Who avenged his disobedience, would avenge their's. They believed perhaps, that God must have some great mercy in store for them, Who not only sent His Prophet so far from his own land to them who had never owned, never worshipped Him, but had done such mighty wonders to subdue His Prophet's resistance and to make him go to them.

And proclaimed a fast and put on sackcloth. It was not then a repentance in word only, but in deed. A fast was at that time entire abstinence from all food till evening; the hair-cloth was a harsh garment, irritating and afflictive to the body. They who did so, were (as we may still see from the Assyrian sculptures) men of pampered and luxurious habits, uniting sensuality and fierceness. Yet this they did at once, and as it seems, for the 40 days. They proclaimed a fast. They did not wait for the supreme authority. Time was urgent, and they would lose none of it. In this imminent peril of God's displeasure, they acted as men would in a conflagration. Men do not wait for orders to put out a fire, if they can, or to prevent it from spreading. Whoever they were who proclaimed it, whether those in inferior authority, each in his neighbourhood, or whether it spread from man to man, as the tidings spread, it was done at once. It seems to have been done by acclamation, as it were, one common cry out of the one common terror. For it is said of them, as one succession of acts, the men of

¹ iii. 5, 8.

² Ib. 9.

³ ייח occurs once only in this chapter, of God speaking to Jonah, iii. 1. ⁴ See ab. pp. 256, 7. ⁵ Dion. suggests this as a conjecture. Aben Ezra quotes the same from R. Jesua. Kimchi says the same. ⁶ Mont. ⁷ It is, the word, דבר. ⁸ See Lex. of the Old or New Testament v. דבר, ἔπος, ῥῆμα. So in Arab. Aram. Æthiop.

6 For word came unto the king of Nineveh, and he arose from his throne, and he laid his robe from him, and covered him with sackcloth,^c and sat in ashes.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

^c Job 2. 8.

Nineveh believed in God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth from their great to their little, every age, sex, condition. "Worthy of admiration is that exceeding celerity and diligence in taking counsel, which, although in the same city with the king, perceived that they must provide for the common and imminent calamity, not waiting to ascertain laboriously the king's pleasure." In a city, 60 miles in circumference, some time must needs be lost, before the king could be approached; and we know, in some measure, the forms required in approaching Eastern monarchs of old.

6. *For word came, rather, And the matter*⁷ came, i. e. the "whole account," as we say. The word, word, throughout Holy Scripture, as in so many languages, stands for that which is reported of⁸. The whole account, viz. how this stranger, in strange austere attire, had come, what had happened to him before he came, how he preached, how the people had believed him, what they had done, as had just been related, came to the king. The form of words implies that what Jonah relates in this verse took place after what had been mentioned before. People are slow to carry to sovereigns matters of distress, in which they cannot help. This was no matter of peril from man, in which the counsel or energy of the king could be of use. Any how it came to him last. But when it came to him, he disdained not to follow the example of those below him. He was not jealous of his prerogative, or that his advice had not been had; but, in the common peril, acted as his subjects had, and humbled himself as they did. Yet this king was the king of Nineveh, the king, whose name was dreaded far and wide, whose will none who disputed, prospered. "He who was accounted and was the greatest of the kings of the earth, was not held back by any thought of his own splendour, greatness or dignity, from fleeing as a suppliant to the mercy of God, and inciting others by his example to the same earnestness." The kings of Assyria were religious, according to their light. They ascribed all their victories to their god, Asshur⁹. When the king came to hear of One Who had a might, such as he had not seen, he believed in Him.

And he arose from his throne. He lost no time; he heard, and he arose. "It denotes great earnestness, haste, diligence." And he laid his robe from him. This was the large costly upper garment, so called from its amplitude¹⁰. It is the name of the goodly Babylonian garment¹¹ which Achan coveted. As worn by kings, it was the most magnificent part of their dress, and a special part of their state. Kings were buried as they lived, in splendid apparel¹²; and rich adornments were buried with them¹³. The king of Nineveh dreads no charge of precipitancy nor man's judgement. "He exchanges purple, gold, gems for the simple rough and sordid sackcloth, and his throne for the most abject ashes, the humblest thing he could do, fulfilling a deeper degree of humility than is related of the people." Strange credulity, had Jonah's message not been true; strange madness of unbelief which does not repent when a Greater than Jonah cries¹⁴, Repent ye, for the kingdom of hea-

Ges. adds Pers. and Germ. "Sache from 'sagen,' 'Ding.'" ⁹ Cuneiform Inscriptions. See ab. p. 255. n. h. ¹⁰ אורח. It expresses size, not magnificence, since a wide garment of hair, such as the prophets afterwards wore, (Zech. xiii. 4, 2 Kings ii. 13, 14) was so called, Gen. xxv. 25. ¹¹ Josh. vii. 21. ¹² Jos. Ant. xvii. 8. 3. ¹³ Id. xv. 3. 4. xvi. 7. 1. ¹⁴ S. Matt. iv. 17.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

² 2 Chr. 20. 3.
Joel 2. 15.
[†] Heb. said.
[†] Heb. great men.

7 [†] And he caused it to be proclaimed and [†] published through Nineveh by the decree of the king and his [†] nobles, saying, Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, ven is at hand. Strange garb for the king, in the eyes of a luxurious age; acceptable in His Who said ¹, if the mighty works which have been done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes. “² Many wish to repent, yet so as not to part with their luxuries or the vanity of their dress, like the Greek who said he would ‘like to be a philosopher, yet in a few things, not altogether.’ To whom we may answer, ‘delicate food and costly dress agree not with penitence; and that is no great grief which never comes to light.’” “³ It was a marvellous thing, that purple was outvied by sackcloth. Sackcloth availed, what the purple robe availed not. What the diadem accomplished not, the ashes accomplished. Seest thou, I said not groundlessly that we should fear, not fasting but drunkenness and satiety? For drunkenness and satiety shook the city through and through, and were about to overthrow it; when it was reeling and about to fall, fasting stablished it.” “⁴ The king had conquered enemies by valour; he conquered God by humility. Wise king, who, for the saving of his people, owns himself a sinner rather than a king. He forgets that he is a king, fearing God, the King of all; he remembereth not his own power, coming to own the power of the Godhead. Marvellous! While he remembereth not that he is a king of men, he beginneth to be a king of righteousness. The prince, becoming religious, lost not his empire but changed it. Before, he held the principedom of military discipline; now, he obtained the principedom in heavenly disciplines.”

7. And he caused it to be proclaimed and published through Nineveh; lit. And he cried and said, &c. The cry or proclamation of the king corresponded with the cry of Jonah. Where the Prophet’s cry, calling to repentance, had reached, the proclamation of the king followed, obeying. By the decree of the king and his nobles. This is a hint of the political state of Nineveh, beyond what we have elsewhere. It was not then an absolute monarchy. At least, the king strengthened his command by that of his nobles, as Darius the Mede sealed the den of lions, into which Daniel was cast, with the signet of his lords as well as his own ⁵, that the purpose might not be changed concerning him.

Let neither man nor beast, &c. “⁶ Are brutes too then to fast, horses and mules to be clothed with sackcloth? Yes, he says. For as, when a rich man dies, his relatives clothe not only the men and maidservants, but the horses too with sackcloth, and, giving them to the grooms, bid that they should follow to the tomb, in token of the greatness of the calamity and inviting all to sympathy, so also when that city was about to perish, they clad the brute natures in sackcloth, and put them under the yoke of fasting. The irrational animals cannot, through words, learn the anger of God; let them learn through hunger, that the infliction is from God: for if, he says, the city should be overthrown, it would be one grave of us the inhabitants and of them also.” It was no arbitrary nor wanton nor careless act of the king of Nineveh to make the dumb animals share in the common fast. It proceeded probably from an indistinct consciousness that God cared for them also, and, that taste any thing: let them not feed, nor drink water:

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

8 But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and cry mightily unto they were not guilty. So the Psalmist looked on God’s care of His creatures as a fresh ground for man’s trust in Him⁷, O Lord, Thou preservest man and beast: How excellent is Thy loving-kindness, O Lord, therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of Thy wings. As our Lord teaches that God’s care of the sparrows is a pledge to man of God’s minute unceasing care for him, so the Ninevites felt truly that the cry of the poor brutes would be heard by God. And God confirmed that judgment, when He told Jonah of the *much cattle*⁸, as a ground for having pity on Nineveh. The moanings and lowings of the animals, their voices of distress, pierce man’s heart too, and must have added to his sense of the common misery. Ignorance or pride of human nature alone could think that man’s sorrow is not aided by these objects of sense. Nature was truer in the king of Nineveh.

8. Let man and beast be covered with sackcloth. The gorgeous caparisons of horses mules and camels was part of Eastern magnificence. Who knows not how man’s pride is fed by the sleekness of his stud, their “well-appointed” trappings? Man, in his luxury and pride, would have everything reflect his glory, and minister to pomp. Self-humiliation would have everything reflect its lowliness. Sorrow would have everything answer to its sorrow. Men think it strange that the horses at Nineveh were covered with sackcloth, and forget how, at the funerals of the rich, black horses are chosen and are clothed with black velvet.

And cry unto God mightily, “with might which conquereth judgement.” A faint prayer does not express a strong desire, nor obtain what it does not strongly ask for, as having only half a heart.

And let them turn, every man from his evil way. “⁶ See what removed that inevitable wrath. Did fasting and sackcloth alone? No, but the change of the whole life. How does this appear? From the Prophet’s word itself. For he who spake of the wrath of God and of their fast, himself mentions the reconciliation and its cause. And God saw their works. What works? that they fasted? that they put on sackcloth? He passes by these, and says, that every one turned from his evil ways, and God repented of the evil which He had said that He would do unto them. Seest thou, that not the fast plucked them from the peril, but the change of life made God propitious to these heathen. I say this, not that we should dishonour, but that we may honour fasting. For the honour of a fast is not in abstinence from food, but in avoidance of sin. So that he who limiteth fasting to the abstinence from food only, he it is, who above all dishonoureth it. Fastest thou? Shew it me by its works. ‘What works?’ askest thou? If you see a poor man, have mercy; if an enemy, be reconciled; if a friend doing well, envy him not; if a beautiful woman, pass on. Let not the mouth alone fast; let eyes too, and hearing and feet, and hands, and all the members of our bodies. Let the hands fast, clean from rapine and avarice! let the feet fast, holding back from going to unlawful sights! let the eyes fast, learning never to thrust themselves on beautiful objects, nor to look curiously on others’ beauty; for the food of the eye is

¹ S. Matt. xi. 21.

² Rib. ³ S. Chrys. Hom. v. de Penit. n. 4. ii. 314. ⁴ S. Maximus in Jon. Bibl.

Patr. T. vi. f. 28.

⁶ Dan. vi. 17.

⁷ Ps. xxxvi. 6, 7.

⁸ S. Chrys. on the Statues, Hom. iii. 4. iv. ult.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

God : yea, ^e let them turn every one from his evil way, and from ^f the violence that is in their hands.

^e Is. 58. 6.
^f Is. 59. 6.
^g 2 Sam. 12. 22.
Joel 2. 14.

9 ^g Who can tell if God will turn and re-gazing.—Let the ear too fast; for the fast of the ears is not to hear detractions and calumnies. Let the mouth too fast from foul words and reproaches. For what boots it, to abstain from birds and fish, while we bite and devour our brethren? The detractor preys on his brother's flesh."

He says, each from his evil way, because, in the general mass of corruption, each man has his own special heart's-sin. All were to return, but by forsaking, each, one by one, his own habitual favourite sin.

And from the violence. Violence is singled out as the special sin of Nineveh, out of all their evil way; as the Angel saith¹, tell His disciples and Peter. This was the giant, Goliath-sin. When this should be effaced, the rest would give way, as the Philistines fled, when their champion was fallen to the earth dead. That is in their hands, lit. *in their palms*², the hollow of their hand. The hands being the instruments alike of using violence and of grasping its fruits, the violence cleaves to them in both ways, in its guilt and in its gains. So Job and David say³, while there was no violence in my hands; and Isaiah⁴, the work of wickedness is in their hands. Repentance and restitution clear the hands from the guilt of the violence: restitution, which gives back what was wronged; repentance, which, for love of God, hates and quits the sins, of which it repents. "Keep the winning, keep the sinning." The fruits of sin are temporal gain, eternal loss. We cannot keep the gain and escape the loss. Whoso keeps the gain of sin, loves it in its fruits, and will have them, all of them. The Hebrews had a saying, "Whoso hath stolen a beam, and used it in building a great tower, must pull down the whole tower and restore the beam to its owner," i. e. restitution must be made at any cost. "He," they say⁵, "who confesses a sin and does not restore the thing stolen, is like one who holds a reptile in his hands, who, if he were washed with all the water in the world, would never be purified, till he cast it out of his hands; when he has done this, the first sprinkling cleanses him."

2. Who can tell if God will turn and repent? The Ninevites use the same form of words, which God suggested by Joel to Judah. Perhaps He would thereby indicate that He had Himself put it into their mouths. "In uncertainty they repented, and obtained certain mercy." "It is therefore left uncertain, that men, being doubtful of their salvation, may repent the more vehemently and the more draw down on themselves the mercy of God." "Most certain are the promises of God, whereby He has promised pardon to the penitent. And yet the sinner may well be uncertain whether he have obtained that penitence which makes him the object of those promises, not a servile repentance for fear of punishment, but true contrition out of the love of God." And so by this uncertainty, while, with the fear of hell, there is mingled the fear of the loss of God, the fear of that loss, which in itself involves some love, is, by His grace, turned into a contrite love, as the terrified soul thinks Who He is, Whom it had all but lost, Whom, it knows not whether it may not lose. In the case of the Ninevites, the remission of the temporal and eternal punishment was bound up in one, since the only punishment which pent, and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not?

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

10 ¶ ^h And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God

^h Jer. 18. 8.
Amos 7. 3, 6.

God had threatened was temporal, and if this was forgiven, that forgiveness was a token that His displeasure had ceased.

"¹⁰ They know not the issue, yet they neglect not repentance. They are unacquainted with the method of the loving-kindness of God, and they are changed amid uncertainty. They had no other Ninevites to look to, who had repented and been saved. They had not read the Prophets nor heard the Patriarchs, nor benefited by counsel, nor partaken of instruction, nor had they persuaded themselves that they should altogether propitiate God by repentance. For the threat did not contain this. But they doubted and hesitated about this, and yet repented with all carefulness. What account then shall we give, when these, who had no good hopes held out to them as to the issue, gave evidence of such a change, and thou, who mayest be of good cheer as to God's love for men, and hast many times received many pledges of His care, and hast heard the Prophets and Apostles, and hast been instructed by the events themselves, strivest not to attain the same measure of virtue as they? Great then was the virtue too of these men, but much greater the loving-kindness of God; and this you may see from the very greatness of the threat. For on this ground did He not add to the sentence, 'but if ye repent, I will spare,' that, casting among them the sentence unconditioned, He might increase the fear, and, increasing the fear, might impel them the more speedily to repentance." "¹¹ That fear was the parent of salvation; the threat removed the peril; the sentence of overthrow stayed the overthrow. New and marvellous issue! The sentence threatening death was the parent of life. Contrary to secular judgment, the sentence lost its force, when passed. In secular courts, the passing of the sentence gives it validity. Contrariwise with God, the pronouncing of the sentence made it invalid. For had it not been pronounced, the sinners had not heard it; had they not heard it, they would not have repented, would not have averted the chastisement, would not have enjoyed that marvellous deliverance. They fled not the city, as we do now [from the earthquake], but, remaining, established it. It was a snare, and they made it a wall; a quicksand and precipice, and they made it a tower of safety."

"¹¹ Was Nineveh destroyed? Quite the contrary. It arose and became more glorious, and all this intervening time has not effaced its glory, and we all yet celebrate it and marvel at it, that thenceforth it has become a most safe harbour to all who sin, not allowing them to sink into despair, but calling all to repentance, both by what it did and by what it gained from the Providence of God, persuading us never to despair of our salvation, but living the best we can, and setting before us a good hope, to be of good cheer that the end will any how be good." "¹² What was Nineveh? They ate, they drank; they bought, they sold; they planted, they builded; they gave themselves up to perjuries, lies, drunkenness, enormities, corruptions. This was Nineveh. Look at Nineveh now. They mourn, they grieve, are saddened, in sackcloth and ashes, in fastings and prayers. Where is that Nineveh? It is overthrown."

10. And God saw their works. "¹³ He did not then first see

¹ S. Mark xvi. 7.

⁴ Is. lix. 6.

² בנפיהם
⁶ in Kimchi.

³ Job xvi. 17, 1 Chr. xii. 17.
⁶ in Merc.

⁷ S. Aug. in Ps. 50. L. ⁸ S. Jer. ⁹ in Lap. ¹⁰ S. Chrys. on Statues, Hom. v. n. 6.
¹¹ Ib. n. 5. ¹² S. Aug. Serma. 361. de res. n. 20. ¹³ Rup.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

repented of the evil, that he had said that he would do unto them ; and he did it not.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

them ; He did not then first see their sackcloth when they covered themselves with it. He had seen them long before He sent the Prophet thither, while Israel was slaying the prophets who announced to them the captivity which hung over them. He knew certainly, that if He were to send the prophets far off to the Gentiles with such an announcement, they would hear and repent." God saw them, looked upon them, approved them, accepted the Ninevites not for time only, but, as many as persevered, for eternity. It was no common repentance. It was the penitence, which our Lord sets forth as the pattern of true repentance before His Coming. ¹ The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgement with this generation and shall condemn it, because they repented at the preaching of Jonah, and behold a greater than Jonah is here. They believed in the One God, before unknown to them ; they humbled themselves ; they were not ashamed to repent publicly ; they used great strictness with themselves ; but, what Scripture chiefly dwells upon, their repentance was not only in profession, in belief, in outward act, but in the fruit of genuine works of repentance, a changed life out of a changed heart. God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way. Their whole way and course of life was evil ; they broke off, not the one or other sin only, but all their whole evil way. ² "The Ninevites, when about to perish, appoint them a fast ; in their bodies they chasten their souls with the scourge of humility ; they put on haircloth for raiment ; for ointment they sprinkle themselves with ashes ; and, prostrate on the ground, they lick the dust.—They publish their guilt with groans and lay open their secret misdeeds. Every age and sex alike applies itself to offices of mourning ; all ornament was laid aside ; food was refused to the suckling, and the age, as yet unstained by sins of its own, bare the weight of those of others ; the dumb animals lacked their own food. One cry of unlike natures was heard along the city-walls ; along all the houses echoed the piteous lament of the mourners ; the earth bore the groans of the penitents ; heaven itself echoed with their voice. That was fulfilled ; ³ The prayer of the humble pierceth the clouds." ⁴ "The Ninevites were converted to the fear of God, and laying aside the evil of their former life, betook themselves through repentance to virtue and righteousness, with a course of penitence so faithful, that they changed the sentence already pronounced on them by God." ⁵ "As soon as prayer took possession of them, it both made them righteous, and forthwith corrected the city which had been habituated to live with profligacy and wickedness and lawlessness. More powerful was prayer than the long usage of sin. It filled that city with heavenly laws, and brought along with it temperance, lovingkindness, gentleness and care of the poor. For without these it cannot abide to dwell in the soul. Had any then entered Nineveh, who knew it well before, he would not have known the city ; so suddenly had it sprung back from life most foul to godliness."

And God repented of the evil. This was no real change in God ; rather, the object of His threatening was, that He might not do what He threatened. God's threatenings are conditional, "unless they repent," as are His promises, "if they endure to the end⁶." God said afterwards by Jeremiah⁷, At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up and to pull down and to destroy it, if that nation, against whom I had pronounced, turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them.

⁸ "As God is unchangeable in nature, so is He unchangeable in Will. For no one can turn back His thoughts. For though some seem to have turned back His thoughts by their deprecations, yet this was His inward thought, that they should be able by their deprecations to turn back His sentence, and that they should receive from Him whereby to avail with Him.—When then outwardly His sentence seemeth to be changed, inwardly His counsel is unchanged, because He inwardly ordereth each thing unchangeably, whatsoever is done outwardly with change." ⁹ "It is said that He repented, because He changed that which He seemed about to do, to destroy them. In God all things are disposed and fixed, nor doth He anything out of any sudden counsel, which He knew not in all eternity that He should do ; but, amid the movements of His creature in time, which He governeth marvellously, He, not moved in time, as by a sudden will, is said to do what He disposed by well-ordered causes in the immutability of His most secret counsel whereby things which come to knowledge, each in its time, He both doth when they are present, and already did when they were future." ¹⁰ "God is subject to no dolour of repentance, nor is He deceived in anything, so as to wish to correct wherein He erred. But as man, when he repenteth willeth to change what he has done, so when thou hearest that God repenteth, look for the change. God, although He calleth it 'repenting,' doth it otherwise than thou. Thou doest it, because thou hast erred ; He, because He avengeth or freeth. He changed the kingdom of Saul when He repented. And in the very place, where Scripture saith, He repenteth, it is said a little after, He is not a man that He should repent. When then He changes His works through His unchangeable counsels, He is said to repent, on account of the change, not of the counsel, but of the act." S. Augustine thinks that God, by using this language of Himself, which all would feel to be inadequate to His Majesty, meant to teach us that all language is inadequate to His Excellences. ¹¹ "We say these things of God, because we do not find anything better to say. I say, 'God is just,' because in man's words I find nothing better ; for He is beyond justice. It is said in Scripture, God is just and loveth justice. But in Scripture it is said, that God repenteth ; 'God is ignorant.' Who would not start back at this ? Yet to that end Scripture condescendeth healthfully to those words from which thou shrinkest, that thou shouldst not think that what thou deemest great is said worthily of Him. If thou ask, 'what then is said worthily of God ?' one may perhaps answer, that 'He is just.' Another more gifted would say, that this word too is surpassed by His Excellence, and that this too is said, not worthily of Him, although suitably according to man's capacity : so that, when he would prove out of Scripture that it is written, God is just, he may be answered rightly, that the same Scriptures say that God repenteth ; so, that, as he does not take that in its ordinary meaning, as men are wont to repent, so also when He is said to be just, this does not correspond to His supereminence, although Scripture said this also well, that, through these words such as they are, we may be brought to that which is unutterable." "Why predictest Thou," asks S. Chrysostome¹², "the terrible

¹ S. Matt. xii. 41.

² S. Amb. de Pœnit. c. 6. L. Hom. quod nemo læditur nisi a seipso.

³ Eclus. xxxv. 17.

⁴ S. Chrys. de precat. i. inter dub. S. Chrys. T. ii. 781.

⁶ S. Matt. x. 22.

⁷ xviii. 7, 8.

⁸ S. Greg. Mor. xvi. n. 46. cxxxi. n. 18.

⁹ S. Aug. in Ps. cv. n. 35.

¹⁰ Id. in Ps. De pœnit. Hom. v. n. 2. T. ii. p. 311 L.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Jonah, repining at God's mercy, 4 is reproved by the type of a gourd.

things which Thou art about to do? That I may not do what I predict. Wherefore also He threatened hell, that He may not bring to hell. Let words terrify you that ye may be freed from the anguish of deeds." "Men threaten punishment and inflict it. Not so God; but contrariwise, He both predicts and delays, and terrifies with words, and leaves nothing undone, that He may not bring what He threatens. So He did with the Ninevites. He bends His bow, and brandishes His sword, and prepares His spear, and inflicts not the blow. Were not the Prophet's words bow and spear and sharp sword, when he said, yet forty days and Nineveh shall be destroyed? But He discharged not the shaft; for it was prepared, not to be shot, but to be laid up."

"When we read in the Scriptures or hear in Churches the word of God, what do we hear but Christ? And behold a greater than Jonas is here. If they repented at the cry of one unknown servant, of what punishment shall not we be worthy, if, when the Lord preacheth, Whom we have known through so many benefits heaped upon us, we repent not? To them one day sufficed; to us shall so many months and years not suffice? To them the overthrow of the city was preached, and 40 days were granted for repentance: to us eternal torments are threatened, and we have not half an hour's life certain."

And He did it not. God willed rather that His prophecy should seem to fail, than that repentance should fail of its fruit. But it did not indeed fail, for the condition lay expressed in the threat. "Prophecy," says Aquinas³ in reference to these cases, "cannot contain anything untrue." For "prophecy is a certain knowledge impressed on the understanding of the Prophets by revelation of God, by means of certain teaching. But truth of knowledge is the same in the Teacher and the taught, because the knowledge of the learner is a likeness of the knowledge of the Teacher. And in this way, Jerome saith that 'prophecy is a sort of sign of Divine foreknowledge.' The truth then of the prophetic knowledge and utterance must be the same as that of the Divine knowledge, in which there can be no error.—But although in the Divine Intellect, the two-fold knowledge [of things as they are in themselves, and as they are in their causes,] is always united, it is not always united in the prophetic revelation, because the impression made by the Agent is not always adequate to His power. Whence, sometimes, the prophetic revelation is a sort of impressed likeness of the Divine Foreknowledge, as it beholds the future contingent things in themselves, and these always take place as they are prophesied: as, Behold, a virgin shall conceive. But sometimes the prophetic revelation is an impressed likeness of Divine foreknowledge, as it knows the order of causes to effects; and then at times the event is other than is foretold, and yet there is nothing untrue in the prophecy. For the meaning of the prophecy is, that the disposition of the inferior causes, whether in nature or in human acts, is such, that such an effect would follow" (as in regard to Hezekiah and Nineveh), "which order of the cause to the effect is sometimes hindered by other things supervening." "The Will of God," he says again⁵, "being the first, universal Cause, does not exclude intermediate causes, by virtue of which certain effects are produced. And

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

BUT it displeased Jonah exceedingly, and he was very angry.

since all intermediate causes are not adequate to the power of the First Cause, there are many things in the Power, Knowledge, and Will of God, which are not contained in the order of the inferior causes, as the resurrection of Lazarus. Whence one, looking to the inferior causes, might say, 'Lazarus will not rise again:' whereas, looking to the First Divine Cause, he could say, 'Lazarus will rise again.' And each of these God willeth, viz. that a thing should take place according to the inferior cause: which shall not take place, according to the superior cause, and conversely. So that God sometimes pronounces that a thing shall be, as far as it is contained in the order of inferior causes (as according to the disposition of nature or deserts), which yet doth not take place, because it is otherwise in the superior Divine cause. As when He foretold Hezekiah, Set thy house in order, for thou shalt die and not live; which yet did not take place, because from eternity it was otherwise in the Knowledge and Will of God which is unchangeable. Whence Gregory saith⁷, 'though God changeth the thing, His counsel He doth not change.' When then He saith, *I will repent*⁸, it is understood as said metaphorically; for men, when they fulfil not what they threatened, seem to repent."

IV. 1. And Jonah was displeased exceedingly. It was an untempered zeal. The Prophet himself records it as such, and how he was reproved for it. He would, like many of us, govern God's world better than God Himself. Short-sighted and presumptuous! Yet not more short-sighted than those who, in fact, quarrel with God's Providence, the existence of evil, the baffling of good, "the prison-walls of obstacles and trials," in what we would do for God's glory. What is all discontent, but anger with God? The marvel is that the rebel was a prophet! "What he desired was not unjust in itself, that the Ninevites should be punished for their past sins, and that the sentence of God pronounced against them should not be recalled, although they repented. For so the judge hangs the robber for theft, however he repent." He sinned, in that he disputed with God. Let him cast the first stone, who never rejoiced at any overthrow of the enemies of his country, nor was glad, in a common warfare, that they lost as many soldiers as we. As if God had not instruments enough at His Will! Or as if He needed the Assyrians to punish Israel, or the one nation, whose armies are the terror of Europe, to punish us, so that if they should perish, Israel should therefore have escaped, though it persevered in sin, or we!

And he was very angry, or, it may be, very grieved. The word expresses also the emotion of burning grief, as when Samuel was grieved at the rejection of Saul, or David at the breach upon Uzzah¹⁰. Either way, he was displeased with what God did. Yet so Samuel and David took God's doings to heart; but Samuel and David were grieved at God's judgments; Jonah, at what to the Ninevites was mercy, only in regard to his own people it seemed to involve judgment. Scripture says that he was displeased, because the Ninevites were spared; but not, why this displeased him. It has been thought, that it was jealousy for God's glory among the heathen, as though the Ninevites would think that God in Whose Name he spake had no certain knowledge of things to come; and so that

¹ Id. in Ps. vii.

² Rib.

³ 2. 2. q. 171. art. 6.

⁴ Ib. q. 174. art. 1.

⁵ P. q. 19. art. 7. concl.

⁶ Is. xxxviii. 1.

⁷ Mor. xx. 32. n. 63.

⁸ Jer. xviii. 8.

⁹ Lap.

¹⁰ 2 Sam. vi. 8, 1 Chr. xiii. 11.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

2 And he prayed unto the Lord, and said, I pray thee, O Lord, was not this my saying, when I was yet in my country? Therefore I ^a fled before unto Tarshish: for I knew that thou art a ^b gracious God, and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repentest thee of the evil.

^a ch. 1. 3.

^b Ex. 34. 6.
Ps. 86. 5.
Joel 2. 13.

his fault was mistrust in God's Wisdom or Power to vindicate His own honour. But it seems more likely, that it was a mistaken patriotism, which idolized the well-being of his own and God's people, and desired that its enemy, the appointed instrument of its chastisement, should be itself destroyed. Scripture being silent about it, we cannot know certainly. Jonah, under God's inspiration, relates that God pronounced him wrong. Having incurred God's reproof, he was careless about men's judgement, and left his own character open to the harsh judgements of men; teaching us a holy indifference to man's opinion, and, in our ignorance, carefulness not to judge unkindly.

2. And he prayed unto the Lord. Jonah, at least, did not murmur or complain of God. He complained to God of Himself. He expostulates with Him. Shortsighted indeed and too wedded to his own will! Yet his will was the well-being of the people whose Prophet God had made him. He tells God, that this it was, which he had all along dreaded. He softens it, as well as he can, by his word, I pray Thee, which expresses deprecation and submissiveness. Still he does not hesitate to tell God that this was the cause of his first rebellion. Perilous to the soul, to speak without penitence of former sin; yet it is to God that he speaks, and so God, in His wonderful condescension, makes him teach himself.

I knew that Thou art a gracious God. He repeats to God to the letter His own words by Joel.¹ God had so revealed Himself anew to Judah. He had, doubtless, on some repentance which Judah had shewn, turned away the evil from them. And now by sending him as a preacher of repentance, He implied that He would do the same to the enemies of his country. God confirms this by the whole sequel. Thenceforth then Israel knew, that to the heathen also God was intensely, infinitely full of gracious and yearning love², nay (as the form rather implies³) mastered (so to speak) by the might and intensity of His gracious love, slow to anger and delaying it, great in loving-tenderness, and abounding in it; and that towards them also, when the evil is about to be inflicted, or has been partially or wholly inflicted, He will repent of it and replace it with good, on the first turning of the soul or the nation to God.

3. Therefore now, O Lord, take I beseech Thee my life from me. He had rather die, than see the evil which was to come upon his country. Impatient though he was, he still cast himself upon God. By asking of God to end his life, he, at least, committed himself to the sovereign disposal of God. ⁴ "Seeing that the Gentiles are, in a manner, entering in, and that those words are being fulfilled, ⁵ They have moved Me to jealousy with that which is not God, and I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people, I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation, he despairs of the salvation of Israel, and is convulsed with great sorrow, which bursts out into

¹ ii. 13. ² רחם רחם, both intensives. See on Joel ii. 13. ³ In that both words, רחם, רחם, although adjectives, partake of the passive form. ⁴ S. Jer. ⁵ Deut. xxxii. 21. ⁶ Rom. ix. 3-5. ⁷ Posid. vit. S. Aug. ⁸ רחם רחם, do well, is used almost adverbially of "doing a thing very perfectly," and by a deep irony in one place of doing evil very per-

3 ^c Therefore now, O Lord, take, I beseech thee, my life from me; for ^d it is better for me to die than to live.

4 ¶ Then said the Lord, || Doest thou || well to be angry?

5 So Jonah went out of the city, and sat on the east side of the city, and there made

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

^e 1 Kings 19. 4.
^d ver. 5.

Or,
Art thou greatly angry?

words and sets forth the causes of grief, saying in a manner, 'Am I alone chosen out of so many prophets, to announce destruction to my people through the salvation of others?' He grieved not, as some think, that the multitude of nations is saved, but that Israel perishes. Whence our Lord also wept over Jerusalem. The Apostles first preached to Israel. Paul wishes to become an anathema for his ⁶ brethren who are Israelites, whose is the adoption and the glory and the covenant, and the giving of the law and the service of God, and the promises, whose are the fathers, and of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came." Jonah had discharged his office faithfully now. He had done what God commanded; God had done by him what He willed. Now, then, he prayed to be discharged. So S. Augustine in his last illness prayed that he might die, before the Vandals brought suffering and devastation on his country⁷.

4. And the Lord said, Doest thou well⁸ to be angry? God, being appealed to, answers the appeal. So does He often in prayer, by some secret voice, answer the enquirer. There is right anger against the sin. Moses' anger was right, when he broke the tables⁹. God secretly suggests to Jonah that his anger was not right, as our Lord instructed¹⁰ S. James and S. John that theirs was not. The question relates to the quality, not to the greatness of his anger. It was not the vehemence of his passionate desire for Israel, which God reproves, but that it was turned against the Ninevites. ¹¹ "What the Lord says to Jonah, he says to all, who in their office of the cure of souls are angry. They must, as to this same anger, be recalled in to themselves, to regard the cause or object of their anger, and weigh warily and attentively whether they do well to be angry. For if they are angry, not with men but with the sins of men, if they hate and persecute, not men, but the vices of men, they are rightly angry, their zeal is good. But if they are angry, not with sins but with men, if they hate, not vices but men, they are angered amiss, their zeal is bad. This then which was said to one, is to be watchfully looked to and decided by all, Doest thou well to be angry?"

5. *So Jonah went out of the city*¹². The form of the words implies (as in the Eng. V.), that this took place after Jonah was convinced that God would spare Nineveh; and since there is no intimation that he knew it by revelation, then it was probably after the 40 days. ¹³ "The days being now past, after which it was time that the things foretold should be accomplished, and His anger as yet taking no effect, Jonah understood that God had pity on Nineveh. Still he does not give up all hope, and thinks that a respite of the evil has been granted them on their willingness to repent, but that some effect of His displeasure would come, since the pains of their repentance had not equalled their offences. So thinking in himself apparently, he departs from the city, and waits to see what will become fectly (see bel. Mic. vii. 3), but it is nowhere used, of a passion or quality existing (passively) in a strong degree. The E. V. then is right. The E. M. art thou greatly angry? (the rendering of the LXX) is against the language. ⁹ Ex. xxxii. 19. ¹⁰ S. Luke ix. 55. ¹¹ Rup. ¹² Some render, contrary to grammar, "And Jonah had gone, &c," ¹³ S. Cyr.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

him a booth, and sat under it in the shadow, till he might see what would become of the city.

6 And the Lord God prepared a || † gourd, and made it to come up over Jonah, that it might be a shadow over his head, to deliver him palmchrist.

|| Or,
† Heb.
Kikajon.

of them.” “He expected” apparently “that it would either fall by an earthquake, or be burned with fire, like Sodom.” “Jonah, in that he built him a tabernacle and sat over against Nineveh, awaiting what should happen to it, wore a different, foreshadowing character. For he prefigured the carnal people of Israel. For these too were sad at the salvation of the Ninevites, i. e. the redemption and deliverance of the Gentiles. Whence Christ came to call, not the righteous but sinners to repentance. But the overshadowing gourd over his head was the promises of the Old Testament or those offices in which, as the Apostle says, there was a shadow of good things to come, protecting them in the land of promise from temporal evils;—all which are now emptied and faded. And now that people, having lost the temple at Jerusalem and the priesthood and sacrifice (all which was a shadow of that which was to come) in its captive dispersion, is scorched by a vehement heat of tribulation, as Jonah by the heat of the sun, and grieves greatly; and yet the salvation of the heathen and the penitent is accounted of more moment than its grief, and the shadow which it loved.”

6. And the Lord God prepared a gourd, [a palmchrist, E. M. rightly.] “God again commanded the gourd, as he did the whale, willing only that this should be. Forthwith it springs up beautiful and full of flower, and straightway was a roof to the whole booth, and anoints him so to speak with joy, with its deep shade. The Prophet rejoices at it exceedingly, as being a great and thankworthy thing. See now herein too the simplicity of his mind. For he was grieved exceedingly, because what he had prophesied came not to pass; he rejoiced exceedingly for a plant. A blameless mind is lightly moved to gladness or sorrow. You will see this in children.—For as people who are not strong, easily fall, if some one gives them no very strong push, but touches them as it were with a lighter hand, so too the guileless mind is easily carried away by anything which delights or grieves it.” Little as the shelter of the palm-christ was in itself, Jonah must have looked upon its sudden growth, as a fruit of God’s goodness towards him, (as it was) and then perhaps went on to think (as people do) that this favor of God shewed that He meant, in the end, to grant him what his heart was set upon. Those of impulsive temperaments are ever interpreting the acts of God’s Providence, as bearing on what they strongly desire. Or again,

¹ S. Aug. Ep. 102. q. 6. n. 35. ² S. Cyr. ³ The root קט signifying to cut, then to cut into, “plough,” then, passive, to be cut off from hearing or intercourse, “deaf,” “dumb,” (as in the Arab. and κωφός from κόπτω) and thence “silent,” (as we speak of one voluntarily “dumb,” i. e. silent), the meaning silent has been derived from this last sense; that of vehement comes either directly from the root, (as we speak of a “cutting” wind, although our cutting winds are cold), or from “deafening” (Kim.), as we speak of “a deafening noise,” and as strong winds do hinder hearing; or, as matter of fact, from the strong dry winds in Autumn, in which way נחש is derived directly from נחש earring (i. e. ploughing) time, Ex. xxxiv. 21. The English Version “vehement,” lies more in the direct meaning of the root, than “silent,” and agrees with the description, although not what one, unacquainted with Eastern nature, would expect. Next to this, the harvest or autumn wind seems perhaps the most probable. ⁴ Layard, Nineveh, (1846) c. 5. i. 123.

⁵ Nim. and Bab. [1850] pp. 364, 5. ⁶ Rich’s Koordistan, i. 125, add 133. “Just as the moon rose about 10, an intolerable puff of wind came from the N.E. All were immediately silent as if they had felt an earthquake, and then exclaimed in a dismal tone, ‘the Sherki is come.’ This was indeed the so much dreaded Sherki, and it has conti-

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

from his grief. So Jonah † was exceeding glad of the gourd.

7 But God prepared a worm when † the morning rose the next day, and it smote the gourd that it withered.

Heb. rejoiced with great joy.

8 And it came to pass, when the sun did arise, that God prepared a || vche- ||

Or, silent.

they argue, ‘God throws this or that in our way; therefore He means us not to relinquish it for His sake, but to have it.’ By this sudden miraculous shelter against the burning Assyrian sun, which God provided for Jonah, He favoured his waiting on there. So Jonah may have thought, interpreting rightly that God willed him to stay; wrongly, why He so willed. Jonah was to wait, not to see what he desired, but to receive, and be the channel of the instruction which God meant to convey to him and through him.

7. When the morning rose, i. e. in the earliest dawn, before the actual sunrise. For one day Jonah enjoyed the refreshment of the palm-christ. In early dawn, it still promised the shadow; just ere it was most needed, at God’s command, it withered.

8. God prepared a vehement ³ [E. M. following the Chaldee, silent, i. e. sultry] East wind. The winds in the East, blowing over the sand-deserts, intensely increase the distress of the heat. A sojourner describes on two occasions an Assyrian summer. “The change to summer had been as rapid as that which ushered in the spring. The verdure of the plain had perished almost in a day. Hot winds, coming from the desert, had burnt up and carried away the shrubs.—The heat was now almost intolerable. Violent whirlwinds occasionally swept over the face of the country.” “The spring was now fast passing away; the heat became daily greater; the corn was cut; and the plains and hills put on their summer-clothing of dull parched yellow. The pasture is withered, the herbage faileth; the green grass is not. It was the season too of the Sherghis, or burning winds from the South, which occasionally swept over the face of the country, driving in their short-lived fury everything before them.—We all went below [ground] soon after the sun had risen, and remained there [in the tunnels] without again seeking the open air until it was far down in the Western horizon.” The “Sherghi” must be rather the East-wind, Sherki, whence Sirocco. At Sulimania in Koordistan (about 2½ degrees E. of Nineveh, and ¾ of a degree South) “the so much dreaded Sherki seems to blow from any quarter, from E. to N.E.—It is greatly feared for its violence and relaxing qualities,” “hot, stormy and singularly relaxing and dispiriting.” Suffocating heat is a characteristic of these vehement winds. Morier relates at Bushire; “A gale of wind blew from the Southward and Eastward with such violence, and continued blowing ever since with great violence from the E. and N. E. the wind being heated like our Bagdad Saum, but I think softer and more relaxing. This wind is the terror of these parts.” Ib. 165. “The extraordinary prevalence of the Sherki or Easterly wind this year, renders this season intolerably hot and relaxing. They had not had 3 days together free from this wind since the beginning of the summer.” Ib. 271. “In the summer the climate is pleasant, except when the Easterly wind blows, which it does with prodigious violence sometimes for 8 or 10 days successively. The wind is hot and relaxing in summer, and what is very curious, it is not felt at the distance of 2 or 3 hours.” Ib. 113. “This is asserted by every one in the country.” Ib. 125.

³ 2nd journey, p. 43. He continues, “Again from the 23rd to the 25th, the wind blew violently from the S. E. accompanied by a most suffocating heat, and continued to blow with the same strength until the next day at noon, when it suddenly veered round to the N. W. with a violence equal to what it had blown from the opposite point.” And again (p. 97) “When there was a perfect calm, partial and strong currents of air would arise and form whirlwinds, which produced high columns of sand all over the plain. They are looked upon as the sign of great heat. Their strength was very various. Frequently

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

ver. 3.

ment east wind; and the sun beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and wished in himself to die, and said, It is better for me to die than to live.

that three of our largest tents were leveled with the ground. The wind brought with it such hot currents of air, that we thought it might be the precursor of the Samoun described by Chardin, but upon enquiry, we found that the autumn was generally the season for that wind. The Sam wind commits great ravages in this district. It blows at night from about midnight to sunrise, comes in a hot blast, and is afterwards succeeded by a cold one. About 6 years ago, there was a sam during the summer months which so totally burnt up all the corn, then near its maturity, that no animal would eat a blade of it, nor touch any of its grain."

The sun beat upon the head of Jonah. "Few European travellers can brave the perpendicular rays of an Assyrian sun. Even the well-seasoned Arab seeks the shade during the day, and journeys by night, unless driven forth at noon-tide by necessity, or the love of war."

He wished in himself to die. [lit. he asked as to his soul, to die]. He prayed for death. It was still the same dependance upon God, even in his self-will. He did not murmur, but prayed God to end his life here. When men are already vexed in soul by deep inward griefs, a little thing often oversets patience. Jonah's hopes had been revived by the mercy of the palmchrist; they perished with it. Perhaps he had before him the thought of his great predecessor, Elijah, how he too wished to die, when it seemed that his mission was fruitless. They differed in love. Elijah's preaching, miracles, toil, sufferings, seemed to him, not only to be in vain, but (as they must, if in vain), to add to the guilt of his people. God corrected him too, by showing him his own short-sightedness, that he knew not of the seven thousand who had not bowed their knees unto Baal, who were, in part, doubtless, the travail of his soul. Jonah's mission to his people seemed also to be fruitless; his hopes for their well-being were at an end; the temporal mercies of which he had been the Prophet, were exhausted; Nineveh was spared; his last hope was gone; the future scourge of his people was maintained in might. The soul shrinks into itself at the sight of the impending visitation of its country. But Elijah's zeal was for his people only and the glory of God in it, and so it was pure love. Jonah's was directed against the Ninevites; and so had to be purified.

9. Doest thou well to be angry? "See again how Almighty God, out of His boundless loving-kindness, with the yearning tenderness of a father, almost disporteth with the guileless souls of the saints! The palmchrist shades him: the Prophet rejoices in it exceedingly. Then, in God's Providence, the caterpillar attacks it, the burning East-wind smites it, shewing at the same time how very necessary the relief of its shade, that the Prophet might be the more grieved, when deprived of such a good.—He asketh him skilfully, was he very grieved? and that for a shrub? He confesseth, and this becometh the defence for God, the Lover of mankind."

I do well to be angry, unto death. "Vehement anger they threw down our tents." Burckhardt, when professedly lessening the general impression as to these winds, says, "The worst effect [of the Semoun "a violent S.E. wind"] is that it dries up the water in the skins, and so far endangers the traveller's safety.—In one morning $\frac{1}{4}$ of the contents of a full water-skin was evaporated. I always observed the whole atmosphere appear as if in a state of combustion; the dust and sand are carried high into the air, which assumes a reddish or blueish or yellowish tint, according to the nature and colour of the ground, from which the dust arises. The Semoun is not always 9 And God said to Jonah, || Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd? And he said, || I do well to be angry, even unto death.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

Or, Art thou greatly angry?
Or, I am greatly angry.

leadeth men to long and love to die, especially if thwarted and unable to remove the hindrance whichangers them. For then vehement anger begetteth vehement sorrow, grief, despondency." We have each his own palmchrist; and our palmchrist has its own worm. "In Jonah, who mourned when he had discharged his office, we see those who, in what they seem to do for God, either do not seek the glory of God, but some end of their own, or at least, think that glory to lie where it does not. For he who seeketh the glory of God, and not his own things, but those of Jesus Christ, ought to will what God hath willed and done. If he wills aught else, he declares plainly that he sought himself, not God, or himself more than God.—Jonah sought the glory of God wherein it was not, in the fulfilment of a prophecy of woe. And choosing to be led by his own judgment, not by God's, whereas he ought to have joyed exceedingly, that so many thousands, being dead, were alive again, being lost, were found, he, when there was joy in heaven among the angels of God over so many repenting sinners, was afflicted with a great affliction and was angry. This ever befalls those who wish that to take place, not what is best and most pleasing to God, but what they think most useful to themselves. Whence we see our very great and common error, who think our peace and tranquillity to lie in the fulfilment of our own will, whereas this will and judgment of our own is the cause of all our trouble. So then Jonah prays and tacitly blames God, and would not so much excuse as approve that, his former flight, to Him Whose eyes are too pure to behold iniquity.—And since all inordinate affection is a punishment to itself, and he who departeth from the order of God hath no stability, he is in such anguish, because what he wills, will not be, that he longs to die. For it cannot but be that his life, who measures every thing by his own will and mind, and who followeth not God as his Guide but rather willet to be the guide of the Divine Will, should be from time to time troubled with great sorrow. But since the merciful and gracious Lord hath pity on our infirmity and gently admonisheth us within, when He sees us at variance with Him, He forsakes not Jonah in that hot grief, but lovingly blames him.—How restless such men are, we see from Jonah. The palmchrist grows over his head, and he was exceeding glad of the palmchrist. Any labour or discomfort they bear very ill, and being accustomed to endure nothing and follow their own will, they are tormented and cannot bear it, as Jonah did not the sun. If any thing, however slight, happen to lighten their grief, they are immoderately glad. Soon gladdened, soon grieved, like children. They have not learned to bear any thing moderately. What marvel then that their joy is soon turned into sorrow? They are joyed over a palmchrist, which soon greeneth, soon drieth, quickly falls to the ground and is trampled upon.—Such are the things of this world, which, while possessed, seem great and lasting; when suddenly lost, men see how vain and passing they are, and that hope is to be placed, accompanied by whirlwinds: in its less violent degree it will blow for hours with little force, although with oppressive heat; when the whirlwind raises the dust, it then increases several degrees in heat. In the Semoun at Esne, the thermometer mounted to 121° in the shade, but the air seldom remains longer than a quarter of an hour in that state, or longer than the whirlwind lasts. The most disagreeable effect of the Semoun on man is, that it stops perspiration, dries up the palate, and produces great restlessness." Travels in Nubia, pp. 204, 5. ¹ Layard, Nin. and Bah. 366. ² S. Cyr. ³ Lap. ⁴ Rib. ⁵ Phil. ii. 21.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

Or, spared.

† Heb. was the son of the night.

10 Then said the LORD, Thou hast || had pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not laboured, neither madest it grow ; which † came up in a night, and perished in a night :

not in them but in their Creator, Who is Unchangeable. It is then a great dispensation of God towards us, when those things in which we took especial pleasure are taken away. Nothing can man have so pleasing, green, and, in appearance, so lasting, which has not its own worm prepared by God, whereby, in the dawn, it may be smitten and die. The change of human will or envy disturbs court-favour ; manifold accidents, wealth ; the varying opinion of the people or of the great, honours ; disease, danger, poverty, infamy, pleasure. Jonah's palmchrist had one worm ; our's, many ; if other were wanting, there is the restlessness of man's own thoughts, whose food is restlessness."

10. Thou hadst pity on the palmchrist. In the feeling of our common mortality, the soul cannot but yearn over decay. Even a drooping flower is sad to look on, so beautiful, so frail. It belongs to this passing world, where nothing lovely abides, all things beautiful hasten to cease to be. The natural God-implanted feeling is the germ of the spiritual.

11. Should I not spare ? lit. have pity and so spare. God waives for the time the fact of the repentance of Nineveh, and speaks of those on whom man must have pity, those who never had any share in its guilt, the 120,000 children of Nineveh, "1 who, in the weakness of infancy, knew not which hand, the right or the left, is the stronger and fitter for every use." He Who would have spared Sodom for ten's sake, might well be thought to spare Nineveh for the 120,000's sake, in whom the inborn corruption had not developed into the malice of wilful sin. If these 120,000 were the children under three years old, they were ¼ (as is calculated) of the whole population of Nineveh. If of the 600,000 of Nineveh all were guilty, who by reason of age could be, above ¼ were innocent of actual sin.

To Jonah, whose eye was evil to Nineveh for his people's sake, God says, as it were, "1 Let the spirit which is willing say to the flesh which is weak, 'Thou grieveest for the palmchrist, that is, thine own kindred, the Jewish people ; and shall not I spare Nineveh that great city, shall not I provide for the salvation of the Gentiles in the whole world, who are in ignorance and error ? For there are many thousands among the Gentiles, who go after 2 dumb idols even as they are led, not out of malice but out of ignorance, who would without doubt correct their ways, if they had the knowledge of the truth, if they were shewn the difference between their right hand and their left, i. e. between the truth of God and the lie of men.' " But, beyond the immediate teaching to Jonah, God lays down a principle of His dealings at all times, that, in His visitations of nations, He, 3 the Father of the fatherless and judge of the widows, takes especial account of those who are of no account

1 Rup.

2 1 Cor. xii. 2.

3 Ps. lxxviii. 5.

4 Gal. iii. 27.

5 Lap.

11 And should not I spare Nineveh, 'that great city, wherein are more than sixscore thousand persons 8 that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand ; and also much h cattle ?

Before
CHRIST
cir. 780.

ch. 1. 2.
& 3. 2, 3.
8 Deut. 1. 39.

h Ps. 36. 6.
& 145. 9.

in man's sight, and defers the impending judgment, not for the sake of the wisdom of the wise or the courage of the brave, but for the helpless, weak, and, as yet, innocent as to actual sin. How much more may we think that He regards those with pity who have on them not only the recent uneffaced traces of their Maker's Hands, but have been reborn in the Image of Christ His Only-Begotten Son ! The infants clothed with Christ 4 must be a special treasure of the Church in the Eyes of God.

"6 How much greater the mercy of God than that even of a holy man ; how far better to flee to the judgment-seat of God than to the tribunal of man. Had Jonah been judge in the cause of the Ninevites, he would have passed on them all, although penitent, the sentence of death for their past guilt, because God had passed it before their repentance. So David said to God ; 6 Let us fall now into the hand of the Lord ; for His mercies are great ; and let me not fall into the hand of man. Whence the Church professes to God, that mercy is the characteristic of His power ; 7 O God, who shewest Thy Almighty power most chiefly in shewing mercy and pity, mercifully grant unto us such a measure of Thy grace, that we, running the way of Thy commandments, may obtain Thy gracious promises, and be made partakers of Thy heavenly treasure."

"Again, God here teaches Jonah and us all to conform ourselves in all things to the Divine Will, that, when He commandeth any work, we should forthwith begin and continue it with alacrity and courage ; when He bids us cease from it, or deprives it of its fruit and effect, we should forthwith tranquilly cease, and patiently allow our work and toil to lack its end and fruit. For what is our aim, save to do the Will of God, and in all things to confirm ourselves to it ? But now the Will of God is, that thou shouldst resign, yea destroy, the work thou hast begun. Acquiesce then in it. Else thou servest not the Will of God, but thine own fancy and cupidity. And herein consists the perfection of the holy soul, that, in all acts and events, adverse or prosperous, it should with full resignation resign itself most humbly and entirely to God, and acquiesce, happen what will, yea, and rejoice that the Will of God is fulfilled in this thing, and say with holy Job, The Lord gave, The Lord hath taken away ; blessed be the Name of the Lord—S. Ignatius had so transferred his own will into the Will of God, that he said, 'If perchance the society, which I have begun and furthered with such toil, should be dissolved or perish, after passing half an hour in prayer, I should, by God's help, have no trouble from this thing, than which none sadder could befall me.' The saints let themselves be turned this way and that, round and round, by the Will of God, as a horse by its rider."

6 2 Sam. xxiv. 14.

7 Collect for the eleventh Sunday after Trinity.

INTRODUCTION

TO

THE PROPHET

MICAH.

Micah, or Micaiah, the Morasthite, was so called, probably, in order to distinguish him from his great predecessor, Micaiah, son of Imlah, in the reign of Ahab. His name was spoken in its fuller form, by the elders of the land whose words Jeremiah has preserved. And in that fuller form his name is known, where the Greek and Latin translations of the Scriptures are used^a. By the Syrians, and by the Jews^b he is still called, as by us, Micah. The fullest and original form is Micaiahu, "who is like the Lord?" In this fullest form, it is the name of one of the Levites sent by Jehoshaphat to teach the people^c, as also of the mother of king Asa^d, (the same name serving sometimes both for men and women). Then according to the habit of abridging names, in all countries, and especially those of which the proper name of the Lord is a part, it is diversely abridged into Micaihu, Micahu^e, whence Micah is readily formed, on the same rule as Micaiah itself from Micaiahu. The forms are all found indifferently. The idolatrous Levite in the time of the Judges^f, and the son of Imlah^g, are both called in the same chapter Micaihu and Micah; the father of one of Josiah's officers is called Micaiah in the book of Kings^h, Micah in the Chroniclesⁱ.

The Prophet's name, like those of Joshua, Elijah, Elisha, Hosea, Joel, Obadiah, was significant. Joshua's, we know, was changed of set purpose^k. The rest seem to have been given in God's Providence, or taken by the Prophets, in order to enunciate truths concerning God, opposed to the idolatries or self-dependance of the people. But the name of Micah or Micaiah, (as the elders of the land^l called him on a solemn occasion, some 120 years afterwards) contained more than teaching. It was cast into the form of a challenge. Who is like the Lord? The form of words had been impressed on Israel by the song of Moses after the deliverance at the Red sea^m. In the days of Elijah and that first Micaiah, the strife between God and man, the true Prophet and the false, had been ended at the battle of Ramoth-Gilead; it ceased for a time, in the reigns of Jehu and his successors, because in consequence of his partial obedience, God, by Elisha and Jonah, promised them good: it was again resumed, as the promise to Jehu was expiring, and God's prophets had anew to proclaim a message of woe. *Hast thou found me, O mine enemy*ⁿ? and, I hate him, for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil, Ahab's words as to Elijah and Micaiah, were the types of the subsequent contradiction of the false prophets to Hosea and Amos, which closed only with the destruction of Samaria. Now, in the time of the later Micaiah, were the first dawns of the same strife in Judah, which hastened and brought about the destruction of Jerusalem under Zedekiah, which re-appeared after the Captivity^p, and was the immediate cause of the second destruction under the Romans^q. Micah, as he dwells on the meaning of names generally, so, doubtless, it is in allusion to his own, that, at the close of his prophecy, he ushers in his announcement of God's incomparable mercy with the words^r, Who is a God like unto Thee? Before him, whatever disobedience there was to God's law in Judah, there was no systematic, organised, opposition to His prophets. There is no token of it in Joel. From the times of Micah it is never missing. We find it in each prophet (however brief the remains of some are), who prophesied directly to Judah, not in Isaiah only, but in Habakkuk^s and Zephaniah^t. It deepened, as it hastened towards its decision. The nearer God's judgments were at hand, the more obstinately the false prophets denied that they would come. The system of false prophecy, which rose to its height in the time of Jeremiah, which met and thwarted him at every step^u, and deceived those who wished to be deceived, was dawning in the time of Micah. False prophecy arose in Judah from the self-same cause whence it had arisen in Israel, because Judah's deepening corruption drew down the prophecies of God's displeasure, which it was popular to disbelieve. False prophecy was a gainful occupation. The false prophets had men's wishes on their side. They had the people with them. My people love to have it so^v, said God. They forbade Micah to prophesy^w; prophesied peace^x, when God foretold evil; prophesied for gain^y, and proclaimed war in the Name of God^z against those who fed them not.

At such a time was Micah called. His name which he himself explains, was no chance name. To the Hebrews, to whom names were so much more significant, parts of the living language, it recalled the name of his great predecessor, his standing alone against all the prophets of Ahab, his prophecy, his suffering, his evidenced truth. The truth of prophecy was set upon the issue of the battle before Ramoth-Gilead. In the presence of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, as well as of Ahab, the 400 prophets of Ashtaroth had promised to Ahab the prize he longed for. One solitary, discriminating voice was heard amid that clamorous multitude, forewarning Ahab that he would perish, his people would be scattered. On the one side, was that loud triumphant chorus of all the prophets, Go up to Ramoth-Gilead, and prosper; for the Lord shall deliver it into the king's hand. On the other, one solemn voice, exhibiting before them that sad spectacle which the morrow's sun should witness^d, I saw all Israel scattered upon the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd, and the Lord said, these have no master, let them return every man to his house in peace. Micah was smitten, imprisoned, and, apparently, ended his ministry, appealing from that small audience of the armies of Israel and Judah to the whole world, which has ever since looked back on that strife with interest and awe; Hear ye peoples, each one of them. God, who guided the archer shooting at a venture^f, fulfilled the words which He had put into the Prophet's mouth. God's word had found Ahab, although disguised; Jehoshaphat, the emperilled^g, returned home, to relate the issue. The conflict between God's truth and idol falsehood was doubtless long remembered in Judah. And now when the strife had penetrated into Judah, to be ended some 170^h years afterwards in the destruction of Jerusalem, another Micah arose, his name the old watchword, Who is like the Lord? He prefixed to his prophecy that same summonsⁱ to the whole world to behold the issue of the conflict, which God had once accredited and, in that issue, had given an earnest of the victory of His truth, there thenceforth and for ever.

^a Micah is used by the LXX in Jer. xxvi. 18 and Micah i. 1, as also in the other places where the name occurs, except Neh. xi. 17, 22, where for מִיכָה they have מִיכָא. Josephus calls both prophets Micah, Micah son of Imlah, Ant. 8. 14. 5. and our prophet, Ant. 10. 6. 2. The Vulgate uses for both, Michæas. ^b They substituted מִיכָה in the Kri in Jeremiah. ^c 2 Chr. xvii. 7. ^d Ib. xiii. 2. ^e Ib. xviii. 8. Keth. ^f קִינְיָהוּ Jud. xvii. 1, 4; קִינְיָה 5, 8, 9, 10.

^g קִינְיָהוּ 1 Kings xxii. 9, 2 Chr. xviii. 7; קִינְיָה 2 Chr. xviii. 14. ^h 2 Kings xxii. 12. ⁱ 2 Chr. xxxiv. 20. ^j Num. xiii. 16. ^k Jer. xxvi. 17, 18. ^l Ex. xv. 11. ^m 1 Kings xxi. 20. ⁿ Ib. xxii. 8, 18. ^o Neh. vi. 14. ^p See ab. pp. 222, 3. ^q vii. 18. ^r i. 5, ii. 1. ^s i. 12. ^t See Jer. v. 13, 31, vi. 13-17, viii. 10-12, xiv. 13-16, xx. 1-6, xxiii. 9-end, xxvi. 7, 8, 11, xxvii. 14-18, xxviii, xxix. 8, 9, 21-32. ^u Jer. v. 31. ^v ii. 6. ^w iii. 5. ^x iii. 11. ^y iii. 5. see note.

The prophet was born a villager, in Moresheth Gath, "a village"^j, S. Jerome says; ("a little village"^k, in S. Jerome's own days), "East of Eleutheropolis," where what was "formerly his grave," was "now a church." Since it was his birth-place and his burial-place, it was probably his home also. In the beginning of the reign of Jehoia-kim, the elders of the land^m speak of him with this same title, the Morasthite. He lingers; in his prophecy, among the towns of the maritime plain (the Shephelah) where his birthplace lay. Among the ten places in that neighbourhoodⁿ, which he selects for warning and for example of the universal captivity, is his native village, "the home he loved." But the chief scene of his ministry was Jerusalem. He names it in the beginning of his prophecy, as the place where the idolatries, and, with the idolatries, all the other sins of Judah were concentrated. The two capitals, Samaria and Jerusalem, were the chief objects of the word of God to him, because the corruption of each kingdom streamed forth from them. The sins which he rebukes are chiefly those of the capital. Extreme oppression^o, violence among the rich^p, bribing among judges, priests, prophets^q; building up the capital even by cost of life, or actual bloodshed^r; spoliation^s; expulsion of the powerless, women and children from their homes^t; covetousness^u; cheating in dealings^v; pride^w. These, of course, may be manifoldly repeated in lesser places of resort and of judgment. But it is Zion and Jerusalem which are so built up with blood^x; Zion and Jerusalem, which are, on that ground, to be plowed as a field^y; it is the city, to which the Lord's voice crieth^z; whose rich men are full of violence^{aa}; it is the daughter of Zion^b, which is to go forth out of the city and go to Babylon. Especially, they are the heads and princes of the people^c, whom he upbraids for perversion of justice and for oppression. Even the good kings of Judah seem to have been powerless to restrain the general corruption.

Micah, according to the title which he prefixed to his prophecy, was called to the prophetic office somewhat later than Isaiah. His ministry began later, and ended earlier. For Uzziah, in whose reign Isaiah began to prophesy, was dead before Micah was called to his office; and Micah probably was called away early in the reign of Hezekiah, whereas some of the chief public acts of Isaiah's ministry fell in the 17th and 18th years of the reign of Hezekiah. Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, had doubtless been withdrawn to their rest. Hosea alone, in "grey-haired might," was still protesting in vain against the deepening corruptions of Israel.

The contents of Micah's prophecy and his relation to Isaiah agree with the inscription. His prophecy has indications of the times of Jotham, perhaps also of those of Ahaz; one signal prophecy, we know historically, was uttered in the reign of Hezekiah.

It is now owned, well nigh on all hands, that the great prophecy, three verses of which Isaiah prefixed to his 2nd chapter, was originally delivered by Micah. But it appears from the context in Isaiah, that he delivered the prophecy in that 2nd chapter, in the reign of Jotham. Other language of Micah also belongs to that same reign. No one now thinks that Micah adopted that great prophecy from Isaiah. The prophecy, as it stands in Micah, is in close connection with what precedes it. He had said^d, the mountain of the house shall be as the high places of the forest; he subjoins instantly God's reversal of that sentence, in the latter days. And in the last days it shall be that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established on the top of the mountains, and peoples shall flow unto it. He had said, Zion shall be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps; he adds forthwith, in reversal of this^e, the law shall go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. The two sentences are joined as closely as they can be; Zion shall be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house shall become high places of a forest; and it shall be, in the last days, the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be (abidingly^g) established on the top of the mountains. Every reader would understand, that the elevation intended, was spiritual, not physical. They could not fail to understand the metaphor; or imagine that the Mount Zion, on part of which, (Mount Moriah,) the house of the Lord stood, should be physically placed on other hills. But the contrast is marked. The promise is the sequel of the woe; the abiding condition is the reversal of the sentence of its desolation. Even the words allude, the one to the other^h.

In Isaiah, there is no such connection. After the first chapter and its summary of rebuke, warning, threatening, and final weal or woe resting on each class, Isaiah, in his second chapter, begins his prophecy anew with a fresh titleⁱ; The word that Isaiah the son of Amos saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem; and to this he prefixes three verses from Micah's prophecy. He separates it in a marked way from the preceding summary, and yet connects it with some other prophecy by the word, And^j. He himself marks that it is not in its original place here. So then, in the prophet Micah, the close connection with the foregoing marks that it is in its original place; Isaiah marked purposely that in his prophecy it is not.

^c 1 Kings xxii. 12. ^d Ib. 17. ^e Ib. 28. ^f 34. ^g 30-3. ^h from the beginning of Jotham's reign. ⁱ Hengst. Christ. i. 476. ^j Onom. ^k Pref. to Mic. ^l Ep. 86, ad Eustoch. Epitaph. Paulæ § 14. i. 698. ^m Jer. xxvi. 17, 18. ⁿ i. 11-15. ^o iii. 2, 3, ii. 2. ^p vi. 12. ^q iii. 11; judges and priests, vii. 3.

^r iii. 10; bloodshed also, vii. 2. ^s ii. 8. ^t ii. 9. ^u ii. 2. ^v vi. 10, 11. ^w ii. 3. ^x iii. 12. ^y vi. 9. ^z iv. 10. ^{aa} iii. 1, 9, 11, vi. 12, vii. 3. ^b iii. 12. ^c iv. 1. ^d iv. 2. ^e It is not יבין; but יבין-נכון. ^f The לר בית יהוה iv. 1. to the בית יהוה iii. 12; the יהוה to the חיה. Hengst. ^g ii. 1. ^h ii. 2.

But Isaiah's prophecy belongs to a time of prosperity; such as Judah had not, after the reign of Jotham. It was a time of great warlike strength, diffused through the whole land. The land was full^k, without end, of gold, silver, chariots, horses, of lofty looks and haughtiness. The images which follow^l are shadows of the Day of Judgment, and extend beyond Judah; but the sins rebuked are the sins of strength and might, self-confidence, oppression, manifold female luxury and bravery^m. Isaiah prophesies that God would take away their strengthⁿ. Then they still had it. Judah trusted not at that time in God nor in foreign alliances, but in self. Yet, from the time of Ahaz, trust in foreign help infected them to the end. Even Hezekiah, when he received the messengers of Merodach-baladan^o, fell into the snare; and Josiah probably lost his life, as a vassal of Assyria^p. This union of inherent strength and unconcernedness about foreign aid is an adequate test of days anterior to Ahaz.

But since Isaiah prefixed to a prophecy in the days of Jotham this great prophecy of Micah, then Micah's prophecy must have been already current. To those same days of strength it belongs, that Micah could prophesy as a gift, the cutting off^q of horses and chariots, the destruction of cities and strong towers, all, in which Judah trusted instead of God. The prophecy is a counterpart of Isaiah's. Isaiah prophesied a day of Judgment, in which all these things should be removed; Micah foretold that their removal should be a mercy to those who trust in Christ.

On the other hand, the utter dislocation of society, the bursting of all the most sacred bands which bind man to man together, described in his last chapter^r, perhaps belong most to the miserable decay in the reign of Ahaz. The idolatry spoken of also belongs probably to the time of Ahaz. In Jotham's time^s, the people sacrificed and burned incense still in the high places; yet, under a king so highly praised^t, these are not likely to have been in Jerusalem. But Micah, in the very head of his prophecy, speaks of Jerusalem^u as the centre of the idolatries of Judah. The allusion also to child-sacrifices belongs to the time of Ahaz, who sacrificed sons of his own^v, and whose sacrifice others probably imitated. The mention of the special idolatry of the time, the statutes of Omri are kept, and all the works of the house of Ahab, belong to the same reign, it being recorded of Ahaz especially^w, he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel and made also molten images for Baalim; the special sin of the house of Ahab. That character too which he describes, that, amid all that idolatry, practical irreligion, and wickedness, they leaned upon the Lord, and said, Is not the Lord among us? none evil can come upon us^x; was just the character of Ahaz. Not until the end of his reign was he so embittered by God's chastisements, that he closed His temple^y. Up to that time, even after he had copied the brazen altar at Damascus, he still kept up a divided allegiance to God. Urijah, the high Priest, at the king's command, offered the sacrifices for the king and the people, while Ahaz used the brazen altar, to enquire by^z. This was just the half-service which God by Micah rejects. It is the old history of man's half-service, faith without love, which provides, that what it believes but loves not, should be done for it, and itself enacts what it prefers. Urijah was to offer the lawful sacrifices for the king and the people; Ahaz was to obtain knowledge of the future, such as he wished in his own way, a lying future, by lying acts.

Micah renewed under Hezekiah the prophecy of the utter destruction of Jerusalem, which he had pronounced under Jotham. The prophets did not heed repeating themselves. Elquent as they were, they are the more eloquent because eloquence was not their object. Even our Lord, with Divine wisdom, and the more, probably, because He had Divine wisdom, repeated in His teaching the same words. Those words sank the deeper, because often repeated. So Micah repeated doubtless oftentimes those words, which he first uttered in the days of Jotham; Zion shall be plowed like a field and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest. Often, during those perhaps thirty years, he repeated them in vain. At the last, they wrought a great repentance, and delayed, it may be for 136 years, the destruction which he was constrained to foretell. Early in the days of Jehoiakin, about 120 years afterwards, in the public assembly when Jeremiah was on trial for his life, the elders of the land said explicitly, that the great conversion at the beginning of the reign of Hezekiah, nay, of that king himself, was wrought by the teaching of Micah. ^a Then rose up, says Jeremiah, certain of the elders of the land, and spake to all the assembly of the people, saying, Micah the Morasthite prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Zion shall be ploughed like a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house, as the high places of the forest. Did Hezekiah king of Judah, and all Judah, put him at all to death? Did he not fear the Lord, and besought the Lord, and the Lord repented Him of the evil which He had pronounced against them?

It may have been that single prophecy which Micah so delivered; some have thought that it was his whole book. Jeremiah, at God's command, at one time uttered single prophecies; at another, the summary of all his prophecies. This only is certain, that the prophecy, whether these words alone or the book containing them, was delivered to all Judah, and that God moved the people through them to repentance.

The words, as they occur in Jeremiah, are the same, and in the same order, as they stand in Micah. Only in Jeremiah the common plural termination is substituted for the rarer and poetic form used by Micah^c. The elders, then, who quoted them, probably knew them, not from tradition, but from the written book of the Prophet. But those elders speak of Micah, as exercising his prophetic office in the days of Hezekiah. They do not say, he prophesied, which might have been a single act; but he was prophesying, hayah nibbah, a form of speaking which is only used of an abiding, habitual, action. They say also, "he was habitually prophesying, and he said," i. e. as we should say, "in the course of his prophesying in the days of Hezekiah, he said." Still it was to all the people of Judah that he said it. The elders say so, and lay stress upon it by repeating it. Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah put him at all to death? It must have been then on some of the great festivals, when all Judah was gathered together, that Micah so spake to them.

Probably, shortly afterwards, in those first years of Hezekiah, Micah's office on earth closed. For, at the outset and in the summary of his prophecy, not incidentally, he speaks of the destruction of Samaria, which took place in the 4th year of Hezekiah, as still to come; and however practical or par^k Is. ii. 7, 11. ^l 12-21. ^m iii. 16, 23. ⁿ iii. 1-3.

^o Is. xxxix. ^p 2 Kings xxiii. 29, 2 Chr. xxxv. 20-22. ^q Mic. v. 10, 11, 14.
^r vii. 5 6. ^s 2 Kings xv. 35. ^t 2 Kings xv. 34, 2 Chr. xxvii. 2, 6.

^u i. 5. ^v 2 Kings xvi. 3, 2 Chr. xxviii. 3.
^w vi. 16. ^x 2 Chr. xxviii. 2. ^y iii. 11, vi. 6. ^z 2 Chr. xxviii. 22-24.
^a Jer. xxvi. 17-19. ^b Jer. xxvi. 17-19. ^c עָמַד לְפָנָיו

tial idolatry continued, such idolatry as he throughout describes, did not exist after the reformation by Hezekiah. This conversion, then, of the king and of some considerable part of Judah was probably the closing harvest of his life, after a long seed-time of tears. So God allowed His servant to depart in peace. The reformation itself, at least in its fulness, took place after the kingdom of Samaria had come to an end, since Hezekiah's messengers could, unhindered, invite all Israel to join in his great Passover. Probably, then, Micah lived to see the first dawns only of the first reformation which God wrought by his words.

At the commencement, then, of Hezekiah's reign he collected the substance of what God had taught by him, re-casting it, so to speak, and retaining of his spoken prophecy so much as God willed to remain for us. As it stands, it belongs to that early time of Hezekiah's reign, in which the sins of Ahaz still lived on. Corruption of manners had been hereditary. In Jotham's reign too, it is said expressly, in contrast with himself, the people were still doing corruptly. Idolatry had, under Ahaz, received a fanatic impulse from the king, who, at last, set himself to close the worship of God¹. The strength of Jotham's reign was gone; the longing for its restoration led to the wrong and destructive policy, against which Isaiah had to contend. Of this Micah says, such should not be the strength of the future kingdom of God. Idolatry and oppression lived on; against these, the inheritance of those former reigns, the sole residuum of Jotham's might or Ahaz' policy, the breach of the law of love of God and man, Micah concentrated his written prophecy.

This book also has remarkable symmetry. Each of its three divisions is a whole, beginning with upbraiding for sin, threatening God's judgments, and ending with promises of future mercy in Christ. The two later divisions begin again with that same characteristic, Hear ye^h, with which Micah had opened the whole. The three divisions are also connected, as well by lesser references of the later to the former, as also by the advance of the prophecy. Judah could not be trusted now with any simple declaration of God's future mercy. They supposed themselves, impenitent as they were and with no purpose of repentance, to be the objects of God's care, and secure from evil. Unmixed promise of good would but foment this irreligious apathy. Hence on the promises at the end of the first portionⁱ, and their king shall pass before them and the Lord at the head of them, he turns abruptly^k, And I said, Hear, I pray you, Is it not for you to know judgment? The promise had been to *Jacob and the remnant of Israel*ⁱ. He renews his summons to the^k heads of Jacob and the princes of the house of Israel. In like way, the last section, opening with that wonderful pleading of God with His people, follows upon that unbroken declaration of God's mercies, which itself issues out of the promised Birth at Bethlehem.

There is also a sort of progress in the promises of the three parts^l. In the first, it is of deliverance generally, in language taken from that first deliverance from Egypt. The 2nd is objective, the Birth of the Redeemer, the conversion of the Gentiles, the restoration of the Jews, the establishment and nature of His kingdom. The third is mainly subjective, man's repentance, waiting upon God, and God's forgiveness of his sins.

Throughout, the metropolis is chiefly addressed, as the main seat of present evil^m and as the centre of the future blessings; where the reign of the long-promised Ruler should beⁿ; whence the revelation of God should go forth to the heathen^o; whither the scattered and dispersed people should be gathered^p.

Throughout the prophecy also, Micah upbraids the same class of sins, wrong dealing of man to man, oppression of the poor by the rich^q. Throughout, their future captivity and dispersion are either predicted^r, or assumed as the basis of the prediction of good^s. Throughout, we see the contemporary of the prophet Isaiah. Besides that great prediction, which Isaiah inserted verbally from Micah, we see them, as it were, side by side, in that city of God's visitation and of His mercy, prophesying the same respite, the same place of captivity and deliverance from it, the same ulterior mercies in Christ. "The more to establish the faith, God willed that Isaiah and Micah should speak together, as with one mouth, and use such agreement as might the more convict all rebels." Assyria was then the monarchy of the world; yet both prophets promise deliverance from it^t; both foretell the captivity in the then subordinate Babylon^u; both, the deliverance from it^x. Both speak in the like way of the gathering together of God's people from lands^y, to some of which they were not yet dispersed. Isaiah prophesied the Virgin-Birth of Immanuel^z; Micah, the Birth at Bethlehem of Him Whose goings forth have been of old, from everlasting^a. Both speak in the like way of the reverence for the Gentiles thereafter for her^b, by reason of the presence of her God. Even, in outward manner, Micah, representing himself, as one who went mourning and wailing, stripped and naked^c, is a sort of forerunner of the symbolic acts of Isaiah^d. Micah had this also common with Isaiah, that he has a predominance of comfort. He is brief in upbraiding^e, indignant in casting back the pleas of the false prophets^f, concise in his threatenings of woe^g, save where he lingers mournfully over the desolation^h, large and flowing in his descriptions of mercy to comeⁱ. He sees and pronounces the coming punishment, as absolutely certain; he does not call to repentance to avert it; he knows that ultimately it will not be averted; he sees it irrespectively of time, and says that it will be. Time is an accident to the link of cause and effect. Sin consummated would be the cause; punishment, the effect. He spoke to those who knew that God pardoned on repentance, who had lately had before them that marvellous instance in Nineveh. He dashes to the ground their false security, by reason of their descent from Jacob^k, of God's Presence among them in the Temple^l; the multitude of their offerings amid the multitude of their sins^m. He rejects in God's name, their false, outward, impenitent, penitence; and thereby the more implies that He would accept a true repentance. They knew this, and were, for a time, scared into penitence. But in his book, as God willed it to remain, he is rather the prophet of God's dealings, than the direct preacher of repentance to individuals. Yet he is the more an evangelic preacher, in that he speaks of repentance, only as the gift of God. He does not ignore that man must accept the grace of God; but, as Isaiah foretells of the days of the Gospel, *the idols He shall utterly abolish*ⁿ, so Micah first foretells that God would abolish all wherein man relied out of God, all wherein he prided himself^o, every form of idolatry^p, and subsequently describes the future evangelic repentance, submission to, and waiting upon God and His righteousness^q; and God's free plenary forgiveness^r. Micah's rapid unprepared transitions from each of his main themes to another, from upbraiding to threatening, from threatening to mercy and then back again to upbraiding, is probably a part of that same vivid perception of the connection of sin, chastisement, forgiveness, in the will and mind of God. He sees them and speaks of them in the natural sequence in which they were exhibited to him. He connects most commonly the sin with the punishment by the one word, therefore^a, because it was an object with him to shew the connection. The mercies to come he subjoins either suddenly without any conjunction^b, or with the simple and. An English reader loses some of the force of this simplicity by the paraphrase, which, for the simple copula, substitutes the inference or contrast, therefore, then, but, notwithstanding^c, which lie in the subjects themselves. An English reader might have been puzzled, at first sight, by the monotonous simplicity of the, and, and, joining together the mention of events, which stand, either as the contrast or the consequence of those which precede them. The English version accordingly has consulted for the reader or hearer, by drawing out for him the contrast or consequence which lay beneath the surface. But this gain of clearness involved giving up so far the majestic simplicity of the Prophet, who at times speaks of things as they lay in the Divine Mind, and as, one by one, they would be unfolded to man, without explaining the relation in which they stood to one another. Micah knew that sufferings were, in God's purpose, travail-pains. And so, immediately after the denunciation of punishment, he adds so calmly, "And in the last days it shall be;" "And thou, Bethlehem Ephratah." Or in the midst of his descriptions of mercies, he speaks of the intervening troubles, as the way to them. Now why dost thou cry aloud?—pangs have taken thee, as a woman in travail—he in pain—thou shalt go even unto Babylon; there shalt thou be delivered: or, Therefore will He give thee up until the time, &c. i. e. because He has these good things in store for thee, He will give thee up, until the time comes.

¹ 2 Chr. xxvii. 2. ² Ib. xxviii. 22-25, xxix. 7. ³ ch. iii-v. and vi. vii. ⁴ ii. 12. ⁵ iii. 1. ⁶ Hengst. Christ. i. 477, 8. ⁷ See ab. p. 289. ⁸ iv. 2, 7, 8. ⁹ iv. 1, 2. ¹⁰ iv. 6, 7, vii. 11, 12. ¹¹ i. 11, 14-16, ii. 4, 5, 10, (utter abiding destruction of Jerusalem) iii. 12, iv. 10, v. 3. ¹² ii. 12, 13, iv. 6, 7, 11, vii. 11, 12, 15. ¹³ Carpz. Introd. p. 365. in Häv. ii. 364. ¹⁴ 24-34, xiv. 25, xxx. 31, xxxi. 8, 9, xxxvii. 6, 7, 21-35, Mic. v. 5, 6.

¹⁵ Is. xxxix. 6, Mic. iv. 10. ¹⁶ Is. xlviii. 20, Mic. ib. ¹⁷ Is. xi. 11 sqq. ¹⁸ Mic. vii. 12. ¹⁹ vii. 14. ²⁰ v. 2 Eng. (1 Heb.) ²¹ Is. xlix. 23, Mic. vii. 17. ²² Häv. ib. ²³ i. 8. see note. ²⁴ Is. xx. 2, 3. ²⁵ i. 5, ii. 1, 2, 9-11. ²⁶ ii. 7, 11, iii. 5-7. ²⁷ ii. 3, 10, iii. 4, 12, vi. 13-16, vii. 4, 13. ²⁸ i. 10-16, ii. 4, 5. ²⁹ i. v, vii. 7-20. ³⁰ ii. 7. ³¹ iii. 11. ³² vi. 6, 7. ³³ Is. ii. 18. ³⁴ v. 9, 10. ³⁵ v. 11-13. ³⁶ vii. 8, 9. ³⁷ Ib. 18, 19.

With this great simplicity Micah unites great vividness and energy. Thus in predicting punishment, he uses the form of command, bidding them, as it were, execute it on themselves^d; Arise, depart: as, in the Great Day, our Lord shall say, Depart, ye cursed. And since God does in us or by us what He commands to be done, he uses the imperative to Zion, alike as to her victories over God's enemies^e, or her state of anxious fear^f.

To that same vividness belong his rapid changes of person or gender; his sudden questions^g; his unmarked dialogues. The changes of person and gender occur in all Hebrew poetry;

all have their emphasis. He addresses the people or place as a whole (fem.), then all the individuals in her^h; or turns away and speaks of itⁱ; or, contrariwise, having spoken of the whole in the third person, he turns round and drives the warning home to individuals^j. The variations in the last verse of ch. vi. are unexampled for rapidity even in Hebrew.

And yet the flow of his words is smooth and measured. Without departing from the conciseness of Hebrew poetry, his cadence, for the most part, is of the more prolonged sort, as far as any can be called prolonged, when all is so concise. In some 8 verses, out of 104, he is markedly brief, where conciseness corresponds with his subject, as in an abrupt appeal as to their sins^k, or an energetic announcement of judgment^l or of mercy^m, or in that remarkable prophecy of bothⁿ, how God would, in mercy, cut off all grounds of human trust. Else, whereas in Nahum and Habakkuk, not quite $\frac{1}{3}$, and in the eleven last Chapters of Hosea much less than $\frac{1}{3}$, of the verses contain more than 13 words^o, in Micah above $\frac{1}{2}$ (as, in Joel, nearly $\frac{2}{3}$) exceed that number^p. The verses are also distributed in that ever-varying cadence, whereby, in Hebrew poetry, portions of their short sentences being grouped together, the harmony of the whole is produced by the varied dispositions of these lesser groups of 2, 3, 4, and but rarely 5 words; scarcely any two verses exactly corresponding, but all being united by the blending of similar cadences. In Micah, as in all Hebrew poetry, the combination of 3 words is the most frequent, and this, sometimes by itself, sometimes in union with the number 4, making the sacred number 7; or, with 2, making a number which we find in the tabernacle, but which dwells more in the hearts of the disciples of the Crucified. The same exact rhythm seldom recurs, and that, naturally, chiefly in the shorter verses, the longer admitting or requiring more combinations. Wherever also there is more than one pause in the verse, a further and very considerable variety of rhythm may be produced, even when the several clauses of two verses contain the same number of words in the same order. The difference of cadence is far more influenced by the place, where the verse is divided, than by the exact number of words contained in it. The rhetorical force of the distribution of the words into the several clauses, depends mainly upon the place of the Athnach or semicolon^q. The same exact rhythm, (in which both the same number of words occur in the verse, and the verse is divided in the same place) recurs only seven times in Micah, in verses capable of a variation. The other four cases of repetition occur in short verses which have one division only^r according to the place where the main division of the verse falls.

indicate the lesser divisions into which each verse may be distributed. The comma in each set of numbers marks the place of the Athnach or semicolon. The Roman numerals indicate how often any cadence is repeated.

Words	Number of words in each lesser division.
24	333,422,43 432,326,4
22	46,534 14333,44
21	221,423,232 4433,34.
20	23333,33 333,3134 3333,44 4333,322
19	344,44 34,2253 32,4424
18	43,3233 342,423 3232,44
17	444,32 3433,22 3,4343 2223,332
16	222,433 3433,3 33,4222 44,44
15	32,325 3333,3 432,33 43,233 43,323(ii) 134,133 43,332 3223,32
14	33,53(ii) 34,34 23122,22 43,43 432,32 333,23 33,323 43,52 332,33 13,334
	43,34 22,3313 2222,33 2222,51
13	43,33 3,442 332,32 132,5 222,322 432,4 43,33 322,42
12	32,322 422,22 143,22 224,4 23,34 53,22 24,24 43,23
11	32,33 42,32(ii) 33,32 23,33(ii) 24,32 33,23(ii) 4322 22,43 32,42
10	5,5 33,4 32,32(ii) 323,2 32,23(ii) 22,33 2222,2 43,3
9	43,2 4,32 3,33 42,3 22,32 33,3
8	132,2 33,2
7	4,3(ii) 3,4(ii) 3,22
6	3,3(ii) 22,2.
5	3,2(ii)

^a Not i. 6, vi. 13. but i. 14, ii. 3, 5, iii. 6, 12. ^b ii. 12, iv. 13. ^c Therefore, i. 6, vi. 13, vii. 7; then, iii. 7, vii. 10; but, iii. 8, iv. 1, 4, 12, v. 2, vi. 16; for, iv. 5; notwithstanding, vii. 13. ^d iv. 1, v. 2 (1 Heb.), add vii. 7. ^e iv. 9. ^f v. 3. [2 Heb.]

^g ii. 10, add i. 11, 13, iv. 10. ^h iv. 13. ⁱ v. 1. (iv. 14 Heb.) ^j i. 5, ii. 7, iii. 1, iv. 9, vi. 3, 6, 10, 11, vii. 18. ^k i. 11. twice. ^l i. 2. twice. ^m in i. 13. he returns to the 2nd. pers. ⁿ ii. 3. ^o iii. 10 (5 words), vi. 11 (6 words). ^p v. 8, and vii. 13, (7 words). ^q vii. 11 (7 words), vii. 15 (5 words). ^r v. 13 Heb. (5 words), v. 10 (6 words), v. 11 (7 words). ^s Out of the 157 verses in Hosea's 11 last chapters, 111 contain fewer than 14 words each, 46 only 14 words or upwards; out of 46, of which the book of Nahum consists (excluding the title) 14 only have more than 13 words; out of 55 of Habakkuk, 17 only have more than 13.

^t In Micah, 48 out of 104; in Joel, 30 out of 72; in Obadiah, 10 out of 21. ^u There is less difference between a verse of 14 words, distributed 43, 43 and one of 11, distributed 32, 42, than in a verse whose 10 words were distributed 32, 32 or 323, 2.

^v The following summary of these lesser divisions, which are mostly marked by the Hebrew accents, may perhaps give some little idea of the rhythm. Only the degree of subdivision must often be a matter of opinion or taste or ear. Thus, of 5 words which grammatically belong together, one might think that the cadence separated them into 3 and 2; another might take them all together. But this is a matter of detail only; the principle is unmistakable. Again, words which have been artificially joined together in Hebrew by the Makkeph, I have considered as 2 words, if each had a distinct idea. Thus nn, when the mere sign of the object, I have not counted; when it is the preposition, "with," I have counted it. In the following list, the verses are ranged according to the number of the words contained in each verse, beginning with the highest. The numbers on the right hand in-

His description of the destruction of the cities or villages of Judah corresponds in vividness to Isaiah's ideal march of Sennacherib^a. The flame of war spreads from place to place; but Micah relieves the sameness of the description of misery by every variety which language allows. He speaks of them in his own person^r, or to them; he describes the calamity in past^s or in future^t, or by use of the imperative^u. The verbal allusions are crowded together in a way unexampled elsewhere. Moderns have spoken of them, as not after their taste, or have apologised for them. The mighty Prophet, who wrought a repentance greater than his great contemporary Isaiah, knew well what would impress the people to whom he spoke. The Hebrew names had definite meanings. We can well imagine how, as name after name passed from the Prophet's mouth, connected with some note of woe, all around awaited anxiously, to know upon what place the fire of the Prophet's word would next fall; and as at last it had fallen upon little and mighty round about Jerusalem, the names of the places would ring in their ears as heralds of the coming woe; they would be like so many monuments, inscribed beforehand with the titles of departed greatness, reminding Jerusalem itself of its portion of the prophecy, that evil should come from the Lord unto the gate of Jerusalem.

Wonderful must have been his lightning-flash of indignation, as, when the false prophet or the people had forbidden God's word to be spoken, he burst upon them, *Thou, called house of Jacob, shortened is God's Spirit? Or these His doings? And then follow the plaintive descriptions of the wrongs done to the poor, the peaceful^z, the mothers of his people and their little ones. And then again the instantaneous dismissal,^a Arise and depart. But, therewith, wonderful also is his tenderness.*

To facilitate comparison, I subjoin a like analysis of the other prophets mentioned. Hosea, eleven last chapters.

22	422253,4 3244,54
21	4433,34 5,242224
20	32,33324 3333,44
19	4343,32 3423,34
18	4,4334 332,2332 2232,423 44,3223
17	43,3322 3332,33 23,4323 3223,223 333,323 3223,43 3442,4
16	2323,24 32,3422 233,323 21214,24 3223,33 3232,33, 33,253 42,433
15	344,4 2323,23 3332,4 (ii) 223,242 333,33
14	43,43 44,33 5,432 44,42 43,232 324,32 422,42 33,2222 33,44 3224,3 33,53
	4,442 32,333 14,333
13	33,43 (iii) 34,42 43,33 (ii) 4,333 4,54 34,33 323,32 223,33 22,234 33,34
12	4,44 432,21 33,33 (ii) 222,222 32,34 42,42 222,33 223,32 43,122 43,23 43,32
	32,43
11	24,32 323,3 32,33 233,12 33,23 42,23 132,14 32,42 32,33 33,32 4,43 23,222
10	43,3 (ii) 33,4 (ii) 3,34 32,32 (ii) 44,2 24,4 222,22 4,33 33,22 322,3
9	5,13 25,2 3,33 (ii) 33,3 (iii) 232,2 2,322 32,22 (ii) 32,4 22,23 22,32 (ii) 4,32 13,32
	2,34 5,4 24,3
8	32,3 (ii) 23,3 (iv) 2222 224 (ii)
7	13,3 (iii) 4,3 (iii) 3,4 (ii) 2,23 22,3 2,32 23,2 31,3 33,1 14,2
6	4,2 (ii) 3,3 (iii) 13,2 (ii)
5	3,2 (vii) 2111 113

Joel.

25	334,3534
24	322,144332
23	3544,223
22	423,4123
21	5422,422 3335,43
20	16,42313 34,3433
19	224,443
18	22,4433 33,435
17	3332,42 245,33 353,33 1422,35
16	334,42 2242,6 44,44
15	22233,3 3432,22 22222,32 344,4 23,2323 333,33 34,35
14	53,33 334,4 36,23 1432,4 3332,3
13	34,33 3,55 33,34
12	44,4 34,23 2222,4 5,34 24,33 43,32, 32,223.
11	22,322 (ii) 223,22 2222,3 (ii) 32,33 3,224 32,42 222,5 4,331 44,3 223,22 2222,3
10	32,32 222,22 22,42 231,4
9	32,22 (iii) 2,43 5,22
8	3,23 22,22 4,22
7	133 3,4 (ii) 3,22 22,3
6	3,3 (iv)

Obadiah.

21	4333,323
19	4323,43
18	3332,133 34,341 4252,32

Burning as are his denunciations against the oppressions of the rich^b, (words less vehement will not pierce hearts of stone) there is an under-current of tenderness. His rebukes evince not indignation only against sin, but a tender sympathy with the sufferers. ^c He is afflicted in the afflictions which he has to denounce. He yearns for his people^d; nay, until our Lord's Coming, there is scarcely an expression of such yearning longing: he hungers and thirsts for their good^e.

God's individual care of His people, and of each soul in it, had, since David's time^f and even since Jacob^g, been likened to the care of the shepherd for each single sheep. The Psalms of Asaph^h must have familiarised the people to the image, as relating to themselves as a whole, and David's deep Psalm had united it with God's tender care of His own in, and over, death. Yet the predominance of this image in Micah is a part of the tenderness of the Prophet. He adopts it, as expressing, more than any other natural image, the helplessness of the creature, the tender individual care of the Creator. He forestalls our Lord's words, I am the good shepherd, in his description of the Messiah, gathering the remnant of Israel together, as the sheep of Bozrahⁱ; His people are as a flock, lame and despised^k, whom God would assemble; His royal seat, the tower of the flock^l; the Ruler of Israel should stand unresting, and feed them^m; those whom He should employ against the enemies of His people, are shepherdsⁿ, under Him, the true shepherd. He sums up his prayer for his people to God as their Shepherd^o; Feed Thy people with Thy rod, the flock of Thine heritage.

Directly, he was a Prophet for Judah only. At the beginning of his book, he condemns the idolatries of both capitals, as the central sin of the two kingdoms. The destruction of Samaria he pronounces at once, as future, absolutely certain,

17	4242,32
16	5434 32422,3
15	334,23
14	43,43
13	332,23 42,34 4232,2
12	35,22
11	32,33 42,32
10	43,3
9	3,33
7	4,3 32,2
5	32

Nahum.

21	32232,72
19	2333,35 3233,44
18	32,337
16	34,2322 23,42131
15	323,43 33,522 22222,32 14123,4
14	44,33 (ii) 32221,13 3,2234 234,32
13	42,223 3332,2 323,32
12	33,33 32,34 322,32 (ii) 414,3 42,222 222,222
11	43,4 32,222 22,313 42,32 23,24 322,23
10	42,13 12,223 3,223 32,32
9	32,22 (ii) 23,22
8	23,3 (ii) 24,2 22,22
7	22,21
6	13,2 31,2
5	3,2

Habakkuk.

24	44,4444
20	4334,33
19	333,1423
18	43,254 3332,43
17	45,35 422,2232 54,44 333,53
15	34,44 332,322 33,234 34,233 43,44 13143,3 3333,3 333,43
14	43,322 332,33 33,44
13	32,422 33,48- 23,44
12	323,22 (ii) 33,33 (ii)
11	222,32 32,42 32,33 322,4 42,14
10	322,3 3,34 4,33
9	33,3 (ii) 4,5 24,3 42,3 23,4
8	311,3 22,4 3,32
7	3,4 (ii) 4,3 (ii)
6	3,3 (iv)

^a Is. x. 28-32. ^r i. 8, 10. see note. ^s 9, 10, 11, 12. ^t 8. ^u 11, 13, 16.
^x i. 12. ^v ii. 7. ^w 8, 9. ^y 10. ^z ii. 1, 2, iii. 1-3, 9-11, vi. 10-12, vii. 2, 3.
^a i. 8, 9, ii. 1, 2, vii. 5, 6. ^d i. 8-10, 16, iv. 9, 10. ^e vii. 1. ^f Ps. xxiii.
^g Gen. xlix. 24. ^h Ps. lxxiv. 1, lxxviii. 52, lxxix. 13, lxxx. 1. ⁱ ii. 12.
^k iv. 6. ^l Ib. 8. ^m v. 4. [Eng. 3 Heb.] ⁿ Ib. 5. [4 Heb.] ^o vii. 14.

abiding^p. There he leaves her, declares her wound incurable, and passes forthwith to Judah, to whom, he says, that wound should pass, whom that same enemy should reach^q. Thereafter, he mentions incidentally the infection of Israel's sin spreading to Judah^r. Else, after that first sentence on Samaria, the names of Jacob (which he had given to the ten tribes^s) and Israel are appropriated to the kingdom of Judah^t: Judah is mentioned no more, only her capital^u; even her kings are called the kings of Israel^x. The ten tribes are only included in the general restoration of the whole^y. The future remnant of the two tribes, to be restored after the captivity of Babylon, are called by themselves the remnant of Jacob^z: the Messiah to be born at Bethlehem is foretold as the ruler in Israel^{aa}: the ten tribes are called the remnant of His brethren, who were to return to the children of Israel^{ab}, i. e. Judah.

This the more illustrates the genuineness of the inscription. A later hand would have been unlikely to have mentioned either Samaria or those earlier kings of Judah. Each part of the title corresponds to something in the prophecy; the name Micah is alluded to at its close; his birthplace, the Morasthite, at its beginning; the indications of those earlier reigns lie there, although not on its surface^c. The mention of the two capitals, followed by the immediate sentence on Samaria, and then by the fuller expansion of the sins and punishment of Jerusalem, culminating in its sentence^d, in Micah, corresponds to the brief mention of the punishment of Judah in Amos the Prophet of Israel, and then the fuller expansion of the sins and punishments of Israel. Further, the capitals, as the fountains of idolatry, are the primary object of God's displeasure. They are both specially denounced in the course of the prophecy; their special overthrow is foretold^e. The title corresponds with the contents of the prophecy, yet the objections of modern critics shew that the correspondence does not lie on the surface.

The taunt of the false priest Amaziah^f to Amos may in itself suggest that prophets at Jerusalem did prophesy against Samaria. Amaziah, any how, thought it natural that they should. Both Isaiah and Micah, while exercising their office at Jerusalem, had regard also to Samaria. Divided as Israel and Judah were, Israel was not yet cut off. Israel and Judah were still, together, the one people of God. The prophets in each had a care for the other.

Micah joins himself on to the men of God before him, as Isaiah at the time, and Jeremiah, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Ezekiel, subsequently, employed words or thoughts of Micah^g. Micah alludes to the history, the laws, the promises, the threatenings of the Pentateuch; and that in such wise, that it is plain that he had, not traditional laws or traditional history, but the Pentateuch itself before him^h. Nor were those books before himself only. His book implies not an acquaintance only, but a familiar acquaintance with it on the part of the people. The title, *the land of Nimrod*ⁱ, the house of bondage^k, for Egypt, the allusions to the miraculous deliverance from Egypt^l, the history of Balaam; the whole summary of the mercies of God from the Exodus to Gilgal^m, the faithfulness pledged to Abraham and Jacobⁿ, would be unintelligible without the knowledge of the Pentateuch. Even single expressions are taken from the Pentateuch^o. Especially, the whole sixth chapter is grounded upon it. Thence is the appeal to inanimate nature to hear the controversy; thence the mercies alleged on God's part; the offerings on man's part to atone to God (except the one dreadful superstition of Ahaz) are from the law; the answer on God's part is almost verbally from the law; the sins upbraided are sins forbidden in the law; the penalties pronounced are also those of the law. There are two allusions also to the history of Joshua^p, to David's elegy over Saul and Jonathan^q, and, as before said, to the history of Micahiah son of Imlah in the book of Kings. Single expressions are also taken from the Psalms^r and the Proverbs^s. In the descriptions of the peace of the kingdom of Christ^t, he appears purposely to have reversed God's description of the animosity of the nations against God's people^u. He has also two characteristic expressions of Amos. Perhaps, in the image of the darkness which should come on the false prophets^v, he applied anew the image of Amos, adding the ideas of spiritual darkness and perplexity to that of calamity.

The light and shadows of the prophetic life fell deeply on the soul of Micah. The captivity of Judah too had been foretold before him. Moses had foretold the end from the beginning, had set before them the captivity and the dispersion, as a punishment which the sins of the people would certainly bring upon them. Hosea presupposed it^w; Amos foretold that Jerusalem, like the cities of its heathen enemies, should be burned with fire^x. Micah had to declare its lasting desolation^y. Even when God wrought repentance through him, he knew that it was but for a time; for he foresaw and foretold that the deliverance would be, not in Jerusalem, but at Babylon^z, in captivity. His prophecy sank so deep, that, above a century afterwards, just when it was about to have its fulfilment, it was the prophecy which was remembered. But the sufferings of time disappeared in the light of eternal truth. Above seven centuries rolled by, and Micah re-appears as the herald, not now of sorrow but of salvation. Wise men from afar, in the nobility of their simple belief, asked, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? A king, jealous for his temporal empire, gathered all those learned in Holy Scripture, and echoed the question. The answer was given, unhesitatingly, as a well-known truth of God, in the words of Micah. For thus it is written in the Prophet. Glorious peerage of the two contemporary prophets of Judah. Ere Jesus was born, the Angel announced the birth of the Virgin's Son, God with us, in the words of Isaiah. When He was born, He was pointed out as the Object of worship to the first converts from the heathen, on the authority of God, through Micah.

^p i. 6, 7. ^q i. 9. ^r i. 13. ^s i. 5. ^t Jacob, ii. 7, iii. 1, 8, 9; Israel, i. 14, 15, iii. 1, 8, 9, v. 1, 3, vi. 2. ^u See ab. p. 289. ^v i. 14. ^w Jacob, all of these, ii. 12; the remnant of Israel, ib. ^x v. 7, 8, [8, 9 Heb.] ^y v. 2. (1 Heb.) ^z i. 3. (2 Heb.) ^{aa} See ab. p. 290. ^{ab} i. 12. ^{ac} i. 6, 9, 12, iii. 10-12, iv. 10. ^{ad} See ab. p. 213. ^{ae} See Caspari Micha, 449-455. ^{af} See at length, in Caspari, pp. 420-7, and below on the places. ^{ag} v. 6, (5 Heb.) from Gen. x. 8-12. ^{ah} vi. 4, comp. Deut. vii. 8, xiii. 5, Ex. xiii. 3, 14, xx. 2. Else only in Josh. xxiv. 17, and Judg. vi. 8, also from the Pent. Casp. ^{ai} See on ii. 13, vi. 4, vii. 15. ^{aj} See on vi. 4, 5. ^{ak} See on vii. 20. ^{al} As עלה ii. 13, ועלה vi. 4, שנה לפני 1b. ^{am} See on ii. 4, vi. 5. ^{an} i. 10. ^{ao} Casp. 428-30; see on ii. 1, iii. 2, 3, vii. 2, 7, 8, 10. ^{ap} Casp. 430-2; see on vi. 9, 11. ^{aq} i. 3, Joel iii. 10. ^{ar} ii. 3, Am. v. 13, and נשחט ii. 6, 11, Am. vii. 16, Casp. 443. ^{as} Mic. iii. 6, Am. viii. 9. ^{at} See ab. on Hos. vi. 11, pp. 42, 3. ^{au} ii. 6. ^{av} ii. 12. ^{aw} iv. 10.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 758-726.

CHAPTER I.

1 Micah sheweth the wrath of God against Jacob for idolatry. 10 He exhorteth to mourning.

* Jer. 26. 18.

THE word of the LORD that came to * Micah the Morasthite in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Ju-

CHAP. I. VER. 1. The word of the Lord that came to Micah— which he saw. No two of the prophets authenticate their prophecy in exactly the same way. They, one and all, have the same simple statement to make, that this which they say is from God, and through them. A later hand, had it added the titles, would have formed all upon one model. The title was an essential part of the prophetic book, as indicating to the people afterwards, that it was not written after the event. It was a witness, not to the prophet whose name it bears, but to God. The prophet bare witness to God, that what he delivered came from Him. The event bare witness to the prophet, that he said this truly, in that he knew what God alone could know,—futurity. Micah blends in one the facts, that he related in words given him by God, what he had seen spread before him in prophetic vision. His prophecy was, in one, the word of the Lord which came to him, and a sight which he saw.

Micah omits all mention of his father. His great predecessor was known as Micaiah son of Imlah. Micah, a villager, would be known only by the name of his native village. So Nahum names himself the Elkoshite; Jonah is related to be a native of Gath-hepher; Elijah, the Tishbite, a sojourner in the despised Gilcad¹; Elisha, of Abelmeholah; Jeremiah, of Anathoth; forerunners of Him, and taught by His Spirit Who willed to be born at Bethlehem, and, since this, although too little to be counted among the thousands of Judah, was yet a royal city and was to be the birth-place of the Christ, was known only as Jesus of Nazareth, the Nazarene. No prophet speaks of himself, or is spoken of, as born at Jerusalem, the holy city. They speak of themselves with titles of lowliness, not of greatness.

Micah dates his prophetic office from kings of Judah only, as the only kings of the line appointed by God. Kings of Israel are mentioned in addition, only by prophets of Israel. He names Samaria first, because, its iniquity being most nearly full, its punishment was the nearest.

2. Hear, all ye people, lit. hear, ye peoples, all of them. Some 140, or 150 years had flowed by, since Micaiah, son of Imlah, had closed his prophecy in these words. And now they burst out anew. From age to age the word of God holds its course, ever receiving new fulfilments, never dying out, until the end shall come. The signal fulfilment of the prophecy, to which the former Micaiah had called attention in these words, was an earnest of the fulfilment of this present message of God.

Hearken, O earth, and all that therein is. The peoples or nations are never Judah and Israel only: the earth and the fulness thereof is the well-known title of the whole earth² and all its inhabitants. Moses³, Asaph⁴, Isaiah⁵, call heaven and earth as witnesses against God's people. Jeremiah⁶, as Micah here, summons the nations and the earth. The contest between good and evil, sin and holiness, the kingdom of God

¹ 1 Kgs. xvii. 1. ² In the two passages quoted for the contrary, Jer. viii. 16, Ezek. xii. 19, the context shews that land is and can only be, land, not, earth, Jer. The snorting of his horses is heard from Dan, and they came and devoured the land and the fulness thereof; where the land to which they came could plainly be Judea only. In Ezekiel it is not even the land, but her land. Say unto the people of the land; Thus saith the Lord God of dah, ^b which he saw concerning Samaria and Jerusalem.

2 † Hear, all ye people; ^c hearken, O earth, and † all that therein is; and let the Lord God ^d be witness against you, the Lord from ^e his holy temple.

^d Ps. 50. 7. Mal. 3. 5.

^e Ps. 11. 4. Jonab 2. 7. Hab. 2. 20.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 758-726.

^b Amos 1. 1.
† Heb. Hear, ye people, all of them.
^c Deut. 32. 1.
Is. 1. 2.
† Heb. the fulness thereof.

and the kingdom of Satan, everywhere, but most chiefly where God's Presence is nearest, is *a spectacle to the world, to angels and to men*⁷. The nations are witnesses of God against His own people, so that these should not say, that it was for want of faithfulness or justice or power⁸, but in His righteous judgment, that He cast off whom He had chosen. So shall the Day of Judgment *reveal His righteousness*⁹. Hearken, O earth. The lifeless earth¹⁰ trembles at the Presence of God, and so reproaches the dulness of man. By it he summons man to listen with great reverence to the Voice of God.

And let the Lord God be witness against you. Not in words, but in deeds ye shall know, that I speak not of myself but God in me, when, what I declare, He shall by His Presence fulfil. But the nations are appealed to, not merely because the judgments of God on Israel should be made known to them by the Prophets. He had not yet spoken of Israel or Judah, whereas he had spoken to the nations; hear, ye peoples. It seems then most likely that here too he is speaking to them. Every judgment is an earnest, a forerunner; a part, of the final judgment and an ensample of its principles. It is but "the last great link in the chain," which unites God's dealings in time with eternity. God's judgments on one imply a judgment on all. His judgments in time imply a Judgment beyond time. Each sinner feels in his own heart a response to God's visible judgments on another. Each sinful nation may read its own doom in the sentence on each other nation. God judges each according to his own measure of light and grace, accepted or refused. The Heathen shall be judged by *the law written in their heart*¹¹; the Jew, by the law of Moses and the light of the prophets; Christians, by the law of Christ. *The word, Christ saith*¹², that I have spoken, the same shall judge him at the last Day. God Himself foretold, that the heathen should know the ground of His judgments against His people¹³. All nations shall say, wherefore hath the Lord done thus unto this land? What meaneth the heat of this great anger? Then men shall say, Because they have forsaken the covenant of the Lord God of their fathers which He made with them, when He brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, &c. But in that the heathen knew why God so punished His people, they came so far to know the mind of God; and God, Who at no time¹⁴ left Himself without witness, bore fresh witness to them, and, so far as they neglected it, against them. A Jew, wherever he is seen throughout the world, is a witness to the world of God's judgments against sin.

"¹⁵ Christ, the faithful Witness, shall witness against those who do ill, for those who do well."

The Lord from His holy temple. Either that at Jerusalem, where God shewed and revealed Himself, or Heaven of which it was the image. As David says¹⁶, The Lord is in His holy temple; the Lord's throne is in heaven; and contrasts His dwell-the land of Israel,—that her land may be desolate from all the fulness thereof. ³ Deut. xxxii. 1. ⁴ Ps. l. 7. ⁵ i. 2. ⁶ vi. 19. ⁷ 1 Cor. iv. 9. ⁸ Ex. xxxii. 12, Num. xiv. 16, Josh. vii. 8, 9. ⁹ Rom. ii. 5. ¹⁰ Ps. cxiv. 7. ¹¹ Rom. ii. 12-15. ¹² S. John xii. 48. ¹³ Deut. xxix. 24, 5. ¹⁴ Acts xiv. 17. ¹⁵ Dion. ¹⁶ Ps. xi. 4.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 758-726.

3 For, behold, 'the LORD cometh forth out of his ^s place, and will come down, and tread upon the ^a high places of the earth.

¹ Is. 26. 21.
² Ps. 115. 3.
³ Deut. 32. 13.
⁴ & 33. 29.
Amos 4. 13.

ing in heaven and His coming down upon earth. ¹ He bowed the heavens also and came down; and Isaiah, in like words ², Behold, the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity.

3. For, behold, the Lord cometh forth, i. e. (as we now say,) is coming forth. Each day of judgment, and the last also, are ever drawing nigh, noiselessly as the nightfall, but unceasingly. Out of His Place. ³ "God is hidden from us, except when He sheweth Himself by His Wisdom or Power or Justice or Grace, as Isaiah saith ⁴, Verily, Thou art a God Who hidest Thyself." He seemeth to be absent, when He doth not visibly work either in the heart within, or in judgments without; to the ungodly and unbelieving He is absent, ⁵ far above out of their sight, when He does not avenge their scoffs, their sins, their irreverence. Again He seemeth to go forth, when His Power is felt. ⁶ "Whence it is said ⁶, Bow Thy heavens, O Lord, and come down; and the Lord saith of Sodom ⁷, I will go down now and see, whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it, which is come unto Me. Or, the Place of the Infinite God is God Himself. For the Infinite sustaineth Itself, nor doth anything out of Itself contain It. God dwelleth also in light unapproachable ⁸. When then Almighty God doth not manifest Himself, He abideth, as it were, in His own Place. When He manifests His Power or Wisdom or Justice by their effects, He is said to go forth out of His Place, i. e. out of His hiddenness. Again, since the Nature of God is Goodness, it is proper and co-natural to Him, to be propitious, have mercy and spare. In this way, the Place of God is His mercy. When then He passeth from the sweetness of pity to the rigour of equity, and, on account of our sins, sheweth Himself severe (which is, as it were, alien from Him) He goeth forth out of His Place." ⁹ "For He Who is gentle and gracious, and Whose Nature it is to have mercy, is constrained, on your account, to take the seeming of hardness, which is not His."

He comes invisibly now, in that it is He Who punisheth, through whatever power or will of man He useth; He shews forth His Holiness through the punishment of unholiness. But the words, which are image-language now, shall be most exactly fulfilled in the end, when, in the Person of our Lord, He shall come visibly to judge the world. ¹⁰ "In the Day of Judgment, Christ shall come down, according to that Nature which He took, from His Place, the highest heavens, and shall cast down the proud things of this world."

And will come down; not by change of place, or in Himself, but as felt in the punishment of sin; and tread upon the high places of the earth; to bring down the pride of those ¹¹ who ¹² "being lifted up in their own conceit and lofty, sinning through pride and proud through sin, were yet created out of earth. For ¹³ why is earth and ashes proud?" What seems

¹ Ps. xviii. 9. ² xxvi. 21. ³ Dion. ⁴ xlv. 15. ⁵ Ps. x. 5. ⁶ Ps. cxliv. 5, Is. lxiv. 1. ⁷ Gen. xviii. 21. ⁸ 1 Tim. vi. 16. ⁹ S. Jer. ¹⁰ S. Jer. Theoph. ¹¹ See Am. iv. 13, Job ix. 8. ¹² Rup. ¹³ Eccles. x. 9. ¹⁴ 2 Cor. vi. 16, Rev. iii. 20. ¹⁵ Henderson here. ¹⁶ See ab. p. 189. ¹⁷ Deut. iv. 24. ¹⁸ lxvi. 15. ¹⁹ Hence some MSS. mentioned in De Rossi's cod. 319, have (as a conjecture) מְנוּחָה "the hills." ²⁰ Sanch. ²¹ See Ps. xcvii. 5. ²² See S. Hil. in Ps. lvii. § 4. ²³ ²⁴ ²⁵ ²⁶ ²⁷ ²⁸ ²⁹ ³⁰ ³¹ ³² ³³ ³⁴ ³⁵ ³⁶ ³⁷ ³⁸ ³⁹ ⁴⁰ ⁴¹ ⁴² ⁴³ ⁴⁴ ⁴⁵ ⁴⁶ ⁴⁷ ⁴⁸ ⁴⁹ ⁵⁰ ⁵¹ ⁵² ⁵³ ⁵⁴ ⁵⁵ ⁵⁶ ⁵⁷ ⁵⁸ ⁵⁹ ⁶⁰ ⁶¹ ⁶² ⁶³ ⁶⁴ ⁶⁵ ⁶⁶ ⁶⁷ ⁶⁸ ⁶⁹ ⁷⁰ ⁷¹ ⁷² ⁷³ ⁷⁴ ⁷⁵ ⁷⁶ ⁷⁷ ⁷⁸ ⁷⁹ ⁸⁰ ⁸¹ ⁸² ⁸³ ⁸⁴ ⁸⁵ ⁸⁶ ⁸⁷ ⁸⁸ ⁸⁹ ⁹⁰ ⁹¹ ⁹² ⁹³ ⁹⁴ ⁹⁵ ⁹⁶ ⁹⁷ ⁹⁸ ⁹⁹ ¹⁰⁰ ¹⁰¹ ¹⁰² ¹⁰³ ¹⁰⁴ ¹⁰⁵ ¹⁰⁶ ¹⁰⁷ ¹⁰⁸ ¹⁰⁹ ¹¹⁰ ¹¹¹ ¹¹² ¹¹³ ¹¹⁴ ¹¹⁵ ¹¹⁶ ¹¹⁷ ¹¹⁸ ¹¹⁹ ¹²⁰ ¹²¹ ¹²² ¹²³ ¹²⁴ ¹²⁵ ¹²⁶ ¹²⁷ ¹²⁸ ¹²⁹ ¹³⁰ ¹³¹ ¹³² ¹³³ ¹³⁴ ¹³⁵ ¹³⁶ ¹³⁷ ¹³⁸ ¹³⁹ ¹⁴⁰ ¹⁴¹ ¹⁴² ¹⁴³ ¹⁴⁴ ¹⁴⁵ ¹⁴⁶ ¹⁴⁷ ¹⁴⁸ ¹⁴⁹ ¹⁵⁰ ¹⁵¹ ¹⁵² ¹⁵³ ¹⁵⁴ ¹⁵⁵ ¹⁵⁶ ¹⁵⁷ ¹⁵⁸ ¹⁵⁹ ¹⁶⁰ ¹⁶¹ ¹⁶² ¹⁶³ ¹⁶⁴ ¹⁶⁵ ¹⁶⁶ ¹⁶⁷ ¹⁶⁸ ¹⁶⁹ ¹⁷⁰ ¹⁷¹ ¹⁷² ¹⁷³ ¹⁷⁴ ¹⁷⁵ ¹⁷⁶ ¹⁷⁷ ¹⁷⁸ ¹⁷⁹ ¹⁸⁰ ¹⁸¹ ¹⁸² ¹⁸³ ¹⁸⁴ ¹⁸⁵ ¹⁸⁶ ¹⁸⁷ ¹⁸⁸ ¹⁸⁹ ¹⁹⁰ ¹⁹¹ ¹⁹² ¹⁹³ ¹⁹⁴ ¹⁹⁵ ¹⁹⁶ ¹⁹⁷ ¹⁹⁸ ¹⁹⁹ ²⁰⁰ ²⁰¹ ²⁰² ²⁰³ ²⁰⁴ ²⁰⁵ ²⁰⁶ ²⁰⁷ ²⁰⁸ ²⁰⁹ ²¹⁰ ²¹¹ ²¹² ²¹³ ²¹⁴ ²¹⁵ ²¹⁶ ²¹⁷ ²¹⁸ ²¹⁹ ²²⁰ ²²¹ ²²² ²²³ ²²⁴ ²²⁵ ²²⁶ ²²⁷ ²²⁸ ²²⁹ ²³⁰ ²³¹ ²³² ²³³ ²³⁴ ²³⁵ ²³⁶ ²³⁷ ²³⁸ ²³⁹ ²⁴⁰ ²⁴¹ ²⁴² ²⁴³ ²⁴⁴ ²⁴⁵ ²⁴⁶ ²⁴⁷ ²⁴⁸ ²⁴⁹ ²⁵⁰ ²⁵¹ ²⁵² ²⁵³ ²⁵⁴ ²⁵⁵ ²⁵⁶ ²⁵⁷ ²⁵⁸ ²⁵⁹ ²⁶⁰ ²⁶¹ ²⁶² ²⁶³ ²⁶⁴ ²⁶⁵ ²⁶⁶ ²⁶⁷ ²⁶⁸ ²⁶⁹ ²⁷⁰ ²⁷¹ ²⁷² ²⁷³ ²⁷⁴ ²⁷⁵ ²⁷⁶ ²⁷⁷ ²⁷⁸ ²⁷⁹ ²⁸⁰ ²⁸¹ ²⁸² ²⁸³ ²⁸⁴ ²⁸⁵ ²⁸⁶ ²⁸⁷ ²⁸⁸ ²⁸⁹ ²⁹⁰ ²⁹¹ ²⁹² ²⁹³ ²⁹⁴ ²⁹⁵ ²⁹⁶ ²⁹⁷ ²⁹⁸ ²⁹⁹ ³⁰⁰ ³⁰¹ ³⁰² ³⁰³ ³⁰⁴ ³⁰⁵ ³⁰⁶ ³⁰⁷ ³⁰⁸ ³⁰⁹ ³¹⁰ ³¹¹ ³¹² ³¹³ ³¹⁴ ³¹⁵ ³¹⁶ ³¹⁷ ³¹⁸ ³¹⁹ ³²⁰ ³²¹ ³²² ³²³ ³²⁴ ³²⁵ ³²⁶ ³²⁷ ³²⁸ ³²⁹ ³³⁰ ³³¹ ³³² ³³³ ³³⁴ ³³⁵ ³³⁶ ³³⁷ ³³⁸ ³³⁹ ³⁴⁰ ³⁴¹ ³⁴² ³⁴³ ³⁴⁴ ³⁴⁵ ³⁴⁶ ³⁴⁷ ³⁴⁸ ³⁴⁹ ³⁵⁰ ³⁵¹ ³⁵² ³⁵³ ³⁵⁴ ³⁵⁵ ³⁵⁶ ³⁵⁷ ³⁵⁸ ³⁵⁹ ³⁶⁰ ³⁶¹ ³⁶² ³⁶³ ³⁶⁴ ³⁶⁵ ³⁶⁶ ³⁶⁷ ³⁶⁸ ³⁶⁹ ³⁷⁰ ³⁷¹ ³⁷² ³⁷³ ³⁷⁴ ³⁷⁵ ³⁷⁶ ³⁷⁷ ³⁷⁸ ³⁷⁹ ³⁸⁰ ³⁸¹ ³⁸² ³⁸³ ³⁸⁴ ³⁸⁵ ³⁸⁶ ³⁸⁷ ³⁸⁸ ³⁸⁹ ³⁹⁰ ³⁹¹ ³⁹² ³⁹³ ³⁹⁴ ³⁹⁵ ³⁹⁶ ³⁹⁷ ³⁹⁸ ³⁹⁹ ⁴⁰⁰ ⁴⁰¹ ⁴⁰² ⁴⁰³ ⁴⁰⁴ ⁴⁰⁵ ⁴⁰⁶ ⁴⁰⁷ ⁴⁰⁸ ⁴⁰⁹ ⁴¹⁰ ⁴¹¹ ⁴¹² ⁴¹³ ⁴¹⁴ ⁴¹⁵ ⁴¹⁶ ⁴¹⁷ ⁴¹⁸ ⁴¹⁹ ⁴²⁰ ⁴²¹ ⁴²² ⁴²³ ⁴²⁴ ⁴²⁵ ⁴²⁶ ⁴²⁷ ⁴²⁸ ⁴²⁹ ⁴³⁰ ⁴³¹ ⁴³² ⁴³³ ⁴³⁴ ⁴³⁵ ⁴³⁶ ⁴³⁷ ⁴³⁸ ⁴³⁹ ⁴⁴⁰ ⁴⁴¹ ⁴⁴² ⁴⁴³ ⁴⁴⁴ ⁴⁴⁵ ⁴⁴⁶ ⁴⁴⁷ ⁴⁴⁸ ⁴⁴⁹ ⁴⁵⁰ ⁴⁵¹ ⁴⁵² ⁴⁵³ ⁴⁵⁴ ⁴⁵⁵ ⁴⁵⁶ ⁴⁵⁷ ⁴⁵⁸ ⁴⁵⁹ ⁴⁶⁰ ⁴⁶¹ ⁴⁶² ⁴⁶³ ⁴⁶⁴ ⁴⁶⁵ ⁴⁶⁶ ⁴⁶⁷ ⁴⁶⁸ ⁴⁶⁹ ⁴⁷⁰ ⁴⁷¹ ⁴⁷² ⁴⁷³ ⁴⁷⁴ ⁴⁷⁵ ⁴⁷⁶ ⁴⁷⁷ ⁴⁷⁸ ⁴⁷⁹ ⁴⁸⁰ ⁴⁸¹ ⁴⁸² ⁴⁸³ ⁴⁸⁴ ⁴⁸⁵ ⁴⁸⁶ ⁴⁸⁷ ⁴⁸⁸ ⁴⁸⁹ ⁴⁹⁰ ⁴⁹¹ ⁴⁹² ⁴⁹³ ⁴⁹⁴ ⁴⁹⁵ ⁴⁹⁶ ⁴⁹⁷ ⁴⁹⁸ ⁴⁹⁹ ⁵⁰⁰ ⁵⁰¹ ⁵⁰² ⁵⁰³ ⁵⁰⁴ ⁵⁰⁵ ⁵⁰⁶ ⁵⁰⁷ ⁵⁰⁸ ⁵⁰⁹ ⁵¹⁰ ⁵¹¹ ⁵¹² ⁵¹³ ⁵¹⁴ ⁵¹⁵ ⁵¹⁶ ⁵¹⁷ ⁵¹⁸ ⁵¹⁹ ⁵²⁰ ⁵²¹ ⁵²² ⁵²³ ⁵²⁴ ⁵²⁵ ⁵²⁶ ⁵²⁷ ⁵²⁸ ⁵²⁹ ⁵³⁰ ⁵³¹ ⁵³² ⁵³³ ⁵³⁴ ⁵³⁵ ⁵³⁶ ⁵³⁷ ⁵³⁸ ⁵³⁹ ⁵⁴⁰ ⁵⁴¹ ⁵⁴² ⁵⁴³ ⁵⁴⁴ ⁵⁴⁵ ⁵⁴⁶ ⁵⁴⁷ ⁵⁴⁸ ⁵⁴⁹ ⁵⁵⁰ ⁵⁵¹ ⁵⁵² ⁵⁵³ ⁵⁵⁴ ⁵⁵⁵ ⁵⁵⁶ ⁵⁵⁷ ⁵⁵⁸ ⁵⁵⁹ ⁵⁶⁰ ⁵⁶¹ ⁵⁶² ⁵⁶³ ⁵⁶⁴ ⁵⁶⁵ ⁵⁶⁶ ⁵⁶⁷ ⁵⁶⁸ ⁵⁶⁹ ⁵⁷⁰ ⁵⁷¹ ⁵⁷² ⁵⁷³ ⁵⁷⁴ ⁵⁷⁵ ⁵⁷⁶ ⁵⁷⁷ ⁵⁷⁸ ⁵⁷⁹ ⁵⁸⁰ ⁵⁸¹ ⁵⁸² ⁵⁸³ ⁵⁸⁴ ⁵⁸⁵ ⁵⁸⁶ ⁵⁸⁷ ⁵⁸⁸ ⁵⁸⁹ ⁵⁹⁰ ⁵⁹¹ ⁵⁹² ⁵⁹³ ⁵⁹⁴ ⁵⁹⁵ ⁵⁹⁶ ⁵⁹⁷ ⁵⁹⁸ ⁵⁹⁹ ⁶⁰⁰ ⁶⁰¹ ⁶⁰² ⁶⁰³ ⁶⁰⁴ ⁶⁰⁵ ⁶⁰⁶ ⁶⁰⁷ ⁶⁰⁸ ⁶⁰⁹ ⁶¹⁰ ⁶¹¹ ⁶¹² ⁶¹³ ⁶¹⁴ ⁶¹⁵ ⁶¹⁶ ⁶¹⁷ ⁶¹⁸ ⁶¹⁹ ⁶²⁰ ⁶²¹ ⁶²² ⁶²³ ⁶²⁴ ⁶²⁵ ⁶²⁶ ⁶²⁷ ⁶²⁸ ⁶²⁹ ⁶³⁰ ⁶³¹ ⁶³² ⁶³³ ⁶³⁴ ⁶³⁵ ⁶³⁶ ⁶³⁷ ⁶³⁸ ⁶³⁹ ⁶⁴⁰ ⁶⁴¹ ⁶⁴² ⁶⁴³ ⁶⁴⁴ ⁶⁴⁵ ⁶⁴⁶ ⁶⁴⁷ ⁶⁴⁸ ⁶⁴⁹ ⁶⁵⁰ ⁶⁵¹ ⁶⁵² ⁶⁵³ ⁶⁵⁴ ⁶⁵⁵ ⁶⁵⁶ ⁶⁵⁷ ⁶⁵⁸ ⁶⁵⁹ ⁶⁶⁰ ⁶⁶¹ ⁶⁶² ⁶⁶³ ⁶⁶⁴ ⁶⁶⁵ ⁶⁶⁶ ⁶⁶⁷ ⁶⁶⁸ ⁶⁶⁹ ⁶⁷⁰ ⁶⁷¹ ⁶⁷² ⁶⁷³ ⁶⁷⁴ ⁶⁷⁵ ⁶⁷⁶ ⁶⁷⁷ ⁶⁷⁸ ⁶⁷⁹ ⁶⁸⁰ ⁶⁸¹ ⁶⁸² ⁶⁸³ ⁶⁸⁴ ⁶⁸⁵ ⁶⁸⁶ ⁶⁸⁷ ⁶⁸⁸ ⁶⁸⁹ ⁶⁹⁰ ⁶⁹¹ ⁶⁹² ⁶⁹³ ⁶⁹⁴ ⁶⁹⁵ ⁶⁹⁶ ⁶⁹⁷ ⁶⁹⁸ ⁶⁹⁹ ⁷⁰⁰ ⁷⁰¹ ⁷⁰² ⁷⁰³ ⁷⁰⁴ ⁷⁰⁵ ⁷⁰⁶ ⁷⁰⁷ ⁷⁰⁸ ⁷⁰⁹ ⁷¹⁰ ⁷¹¹ ⁷¹² ⁷¹³ ⁷¹⁴ ⁷¹⁵ ⁷¹⁶ ⁷¹⁷ ⁷¹⁸ ⁷¹⁹ ⁷²⁰ ⁷²¹ ⁷²² ⁷²³ ⁷²⁴ ⁷²⁵ ⁷²⁶ ⁷²⁷ ⁷²⁸ ⁷²⁹ ⁷³⁰ ⁷³¹ ⁷³² ⁷³³ ⁷³⁴ ⁷³⁵ ⁷³⁶ ⁷³⁷ ⁷³⁸ ⁷³⁹ ⁷⁴⁰ ⁷⁴¹ ⁷⁴² ⁷⁴³ ⁷⁴⁴ ⁷⁴⁵ ⁷⁴⁶ ⁷⁴⁷ ⁷⁴⁸ ⁷⁴⁹ ⁷⁵⁰ ⁷⁵¹ ⁷⁵² ⁷⁵³ ⁷⁵⁴ ⁷⁵⁵ ⁷⁵⁶ ⁷⁵⁷ ⁷⁵⁸ ⁷⁵⁹ ⁷⁶⁰ ⁷⁶¹ ⁷⁶² ⁷⁶³ ⁷⁶⁴ ⁷⁶⁵ ⁷⁶⁶ ⁷⁶⁷ ⁷⁶⁸ ⁷⁶⁹ ⁷⁷⁰ ⁷⁷¹ ⁷⁷² ⁷⁷³ ⁷⁷⁴ ⁷⁷⁵ ⁷⁷⁶ ⁷⁷⁷ ⁷⁷⁸ ⁷⁷⁹ ⁷⁸⁰ ⁷⁸¹ ⁷⁸² ⁷⁸³ ⁷⁸⁴ ⁷⁸⁵ ⁷⁸⁶ ⁷⁸⁷ ⁷⁸⁸ ⁷⁸⁹ ⁷⁹⁰ ⁷⁹¹ ⁷⁹² ⁷⁹³ ⁷⁹⁴ ⁷⁹⁵ ⁷⁹⁶ ⁷⁹⁷ ⁷⁹⁸ ⁷⁹⁹ ⁸⁰⁰ ⁸⁰¹ ⁸⁰² ⁸⁰³ ⁸⁰⁴ ⁸⁰⁵ ⁸⁰⁶ ⁸⁰⁷ ⁸⁰⁸ ⁸⁰⁹ ⁸¹⁰ ⁸¹¹ ⁸¹² ⁸¹³ ⁸¹⁴ ⁸¹⁵ ⁸¹⁶ ⁸¹⁷ ⁸¹⁸ ⁸¹⁹ ⁸²⁰ ⁸²¹ ⁸²² ⁸²³ ⁸²⁴ ⁸²⁵ ⁸²⁶ ⁸²⁷ ⁸²⁸ ⁸²⁹ ⁸³⁰ ⁸³¹ ⁸³² ⁸³³ ⁸³⁴ ⁸³⁵ ⁸³⁶ ⁸³⁷ ⁸³⁸ ⁸³⁹ ⁸⁴⁰ ⁸⁴¹ ⁸⁴² ⁸⁴³ ⁸⁴⁴ ⁸⁴⁵ ⁸⁴⁶ ⁸⁴⁷ ⁸⁴⁸ ⁸⁴⁹ ⁸⁵⁰ ⁸⁵¹ ⁸⁵² ⁸⁵³ ⁸⁵⁴ ⁸⁵⁵ ⁸⁵⁶ ⁸⁵⁷ ⁸⁵⁸ ⁸⁵⁹ ⁸⁶⁰ ⁸⁶¹ ⁸⁶² ⁸⁶³ ⁸⁶⁴ ⁸⁶⁵ ⁸⁶⁶ ⁸⁶⁷ ⁸⁶⁸ ⁸⁶⁹ ⁸⁷⁰ ⁸⁷¹ ⁸⁷² ⁸⁷³ ⁸⁷⁴ ⁸⁷⁵ ⁸⁷⁶ ⁸⁷⁷ ⁸⁷⁸ ⁸⁷⁹ ⁸⁸⁰ ⁸⁸¹ ⁸⁸² ⁸⁸³ ⁸⁸⁴ ⁸⁸⁵ ⁸⁸⁶ ⁸⁸⁷ ⁸⁸⁸ ⁸⁸⁹ ⁸⁹⁰ ⁸⁹¹ ⁸⁹² ⁸⁹³ ⁸⁹⁴ ⁸⁹⁵ ⁸⁹⁶ ⁸⁹⁷ ⁸⁹⁸ ⁸⁹⁹ ⁹⁰⁰ ⁹⁰¹ ⁹⁰² ⁹⁰³ ⁹⁰⁴ ⁹⁰⁵ ⁹⁰⁶ ⁹⁰⁷ ⁹⁰⁸ ⁹⁰⁹ ⁹¹⁰ ⁹¹¹ ⁹¹² ⁹¹³ ⁹¹⁴ ⁹¹⁵ ⁹¹⁶ ⁹¹⁷ ⁹¹⁸ ⁹¹⁹ ⁹²⁰ ⁹²¹ ⁹²² ⁹²³ ⁹²⁴ ⁹²⁵ ⁹²⁶ ⁹²⁷ ⁹²⁸ ⁹²⁹ ⁹³⁰ ⁹³¹ ⁹³² ⁹³³ ⁹³⁴ ⁹³⁵ ⁹³⁶ ⁹³⁷ ⁹³⁸ ⁹³⁹ ⁹⁴⁰ ⁹⁴¹ ⁹⁴² ⁹⁴³ ⁹⁴⁴ ⁹⁴⁵ ⁹⁴⁶ ⁹⁴⁷ ⁹⁴⁸ ⁹⁴⁹ ⁹⁵⁰ ⁹⁵¹ ⁹⁵² ⁹⁵³ ⁹⁵⁴ ⁹⁵⁵ ⁹⁵⁶ ⁹⁵⁷ ⁹⁵⁸ ⁹⁵⁹ ⁹⁶⁰ ⁹⁶¹ ⁹⁶² ⁹⁶³ ⁹⁶⁴ ⁹⁶⁵ ⁹⁶⁶ ⁹⁶⁷ ⁹⁶⁸ ⁹⁶⁹ ⁹⁷⁰ ⁹⁷¹ ⁹⁷² ⁹⁷³ ⁹⁷⁴ ⁹⁷⁵ ⁹⁷⁶ ⁹⁷⁷ ⁹⁷⁸ ⁹⁷⁹ ⁹⁸⁰ ⁹⁸¹ ⁹⁸² ⁹⁸³ ⁹⁸⁴ ⁹⁸⁵ ⁹⁸⁶ ⁹⁸⁷ ⁹⁸⁸ ⁹⁸⁹ ⁹⁹⁰ ⁹⁹¹ ⁹⁹² ⁹⁹³ ⁹⁹⁴ ⁹⁹⁵ ⁹⁹⁶ ⁹⁹⁷ ⁹⁹⁸ ⁹⁹⁹ ¹⁰⁰⁰

4 And ⁱ the mountains shall be molten under him, and the valleys shall be cleft, as wax before the fire, and as the waters that are poured down [†] a steep place.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 758-726.

¹ Judg. 5. 5.
² Ps. 97. 5.
³ Is. 64. 1, 2, 3.
⁴ Amos 9. 5.
⁵ Hab. 3. 6, 10.

† Heb. a descent.

mightiest and most firm, is unto God less than is to man the dust under his feet. The high places were also the special scenes of an unceasing idolatry. "God treadeth in the good and humble, in that He dwelleth, walketh, feasteth in their hearts ¹⁴. But He treadeth upon the proud and the evil, in that He casteth them down, despiseth, condemneth them."

4. And the mountains shall be molten under Him. It has been thought that this is imagery, taken from volcanic eruptions ¹⁵; but, although there is a very remarkable volcanic district just outside of Gilead ¹⁶, it is not thought to have been active at times so late as these; nor were the people to whom the words were said, familiar with it. Fire, the real agent at the end of the world, is, meanwhile, the symbol of God's anger, as being the most terrible of His instruments of destruction: whence God revealed Himself as a consuming fire ¹⁷, and, at this same time said by Isaiah ¹⁸; For behold, the Lord will come with fire—to render His anger with fury, and His rebuke with flames of fire.

And the valleys shall be cleft as wax before the fire. It seems natural that the mountains should be cleft; but the valleys ¹⁹, so low already! This speaks of a yet deeper dissolution; of lower depths beyond our sight or knowledge, into the very heart of the earth. ²⁰ "This should they fear, who will to be so low; who, so far from lifting themselves to heavenly things, pour out their affections on things of earth, meditate on and love earthly things, and forgetful of the heavenly, choose to fix their eyes on earth. These the wide gaping of the earth which they loved, shall swallow: to them the cleft vallies shall open an everlasting sepulchre, and, having received them, shall never part with them."

Highest and lowest, first and last, shall perish before Him. The pride of the highest, kings and princes, priests and judges, shall sink and melt away beneath the weight and Majesty of His glory; the hardness of the lowest, which would not open itself to Him, shall be cleft in twain before Him.

As wax before the fire ²¹, melting away before Him by Whom they were not softened, vanishing into nothingness. Metals melt, changing their form only; wax, so as to cease to be ²².

As the waters poured down (as a stream or cataract, so the word means ²³) a steep place. Down to the very edge, it is borne along, one strong, smooth, unbroken current; then, at once, it seems to gather its strength, for one great effort. But to what end? To fall, with the greater force, headlong, scattered in spray, foam and froth; dissipated, at times, into vapour, or reeling in giddy eddies, never to return. In Judæa, where the autumn rains set in with great vehemence ²⁴, the waters must have been often seen pouring in their little tumultuous brooklets down the mountain side ²⁵, hastening to disappear, and disappearing the faster, the more vehemently they rolled along ²⁶.

Mount Hermon is extremely rapid and has a very steep fall to the Hasbeia which it joins in Merj-el-Huleh. The Jordan is a continual cataract between el-Huleh and the Lake of Gennesareth;" (Rev. G. Williams, MS. letter) "a fall of 600 feet in about 10 miles. On the Western bank, high above the rocky bed of the torrent, the water was running rapidly down the steep incline towards the river, which could hardly be less than 150 feet below us" (Id. Col. Church Chron. 1860. Jan. p. 30.). Porter describes the fall of the river Adonis (Five years, ii. 295.) From the height at which the streams rise in the Lebanon chain, there must be many greater or lesser falls. ²⁴ Hence the Hebrew name עָרָב, "heavy rain," for which we have no one word, is used of the autumn and winter rain, Cant. ii. 11. ²⁵ I have seen this effect for above half an hour (15 miles) on the mountain country near the lakes in a thunderstorm. ²⁶ "The decrease of the waters (swollen by the rains in the mountains) is usually as rapid as their rise." Burckhardt, Syria, p. 161.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 758-726.

5 For the transgression of Jacob is all this, and for the sins of the house of Israel.

What is the transgression of Jacob? is it not Samaria? and what are the high

Both images exhibit the inward emptiness of sinners, man's utter helplessness before God. They need no outward impulse to their destruction. "Wax endureth not the nearness of the fire, and the waters are carried headlong. So all of the ungodly, when the Lord cometh, shall be dissolved and disappear." At the end of the world, they shall be gathered into bundles, and cast away.

5. For the transgression of Jacob is all this. Not for any change of purpose in God; nor, again, as the effect of man's lust of conquest. None could have any power against God's people, unless it had been given him by God. Those mighty Monarchies of old existed but as God's instruments, especially towards His own people. God said at this time of Assyria, ³ Asshur, rod of Mine anger, and the staff in his hand is Mine indignation; and ³ Now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldest be to lay waste defended cities into ruinous heaps. Each scourge of God chastised just those nations, which God willed him to chasten; but the especial object for which each was raised up was his mission against that people, in whom God most shewed His mereies and His judgments. ⁴ I will send him against an ungodly nation and against the people of My wrath will I give him a charge. Jacob and Israel, in this place, comprise alike the ten tribes and the two. They still bare the name of their father, who, wrestling with the Angel, became a prince with God, Whom they forgot. The name of Jacob then, as of Christian now, stamped as deserters, those who did not the deeds of their father. What, [rather Who⁵] is the transgression of Jacob? Who is its cause? In whom does it lie? Is it not Samaria? The metropolis must, in its own nature, be the source of good or evil to the land. It is the heart whose pulses beat throughout the whole system. As the seat of power, the residence of justice or injustice, the place of counsel, the concentration of wealth, which all the most influential of the land visit for their several occasions, its manners penetrate in a degree the utmost corners of the land. Corrupted, it becomes a focus of corruption. The blood passes through it, not to be purified, but to be diseased. Samaria, being founded on apostacy, owing its being to rebellion against God, the home of that policy which set up a rival system of worship to His, forbidden by Him, became a fountain of evil, whence the stream of ungodliness overflowed the land. It became the impersonation of the people's sin, "the heart and the head of the body of sin."

And what [lit. Who⁵] are the high places of Judah? are they not Jerusalem? Jerusalem God had formed to be a centre of unity in holiness; thither the tribes of the Lord were to go up to the testimony of Israel; there was the unceasing worship of God, the morning and evening sacrifice; the Feasts, the memorials of past miraculous mercies, the foreshadowings of redemption. But there too Satan placed his throne. Ahaz brought thither that most hateful idolatry, the burning children to Moloch in the valley of the son of Hinnom⁶. There, he made him altars in every corner of Jerusalem. Thence, he extended the idolatry to all Judah. ⁸ And in every several city of Judah he made high places to burn incense unto other places of Judah? are they not Jerusalem?

6 Therefore I will make Samaria ^k as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard: and I will pour down the stones

Before
CHRIST
cir. 758-726.
^k 2 Kings 19.
25. ch. 3. 12.

gods, and provoked to anger the Lord God of his fathers. Hezekiah, in his reformation, with all Israel, ⁹ went out to the cities of Judah, and brake the images in pieces and hewed down the statues of Asherah, and threw down the high places and the altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, as much as out of Ephraim and Manasseh. Nay, by a perverse interchange, Ahaz took the brazen altar, consecrated to God, for his own divinations, and assigned to the worship of God the altar copied from the idol-altar at Damascus, whose fashion pleased his taste¹⁰. Since God and mammon cannot be served together, Jerusalem was become one great idol-temple, in which Judah brought its sin into the very face of God and of His worship. The Holy City had itself become sin, and the fountain of unholiness. The one temple of God was the single protest against the idolatries which encompassed and besieged it; the incense went up to God, morning and evening, from it; from every head of every street of the city¹¹, and (since Ahaz had brought in the worship of Baalim¹², and the rites of idolatry continued the same,) from the roofs of all their houses¹³, went up the incense to Baal; a worship which, denying the Unity, denied the Being of God.

6. Therefore [lit. And] I will make Samaria as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard. "The order of the sin was the order of the punishment." Samaria's sins were the earliest, the most obstinate, the most unbroken, bound up with its being as a state. On it then God's judgments should first fall. It was a crown of pride¹⁴, resting on the head of the rich valleys, out of which it rose. Its soil is still rich¹⁵. "The whole is now cultivated in terraces¹⁶," "to the summits¹⁷." Probably, since the sides of hills, open to the sun, were chosen for vineyards, it had been a vineyard, before Shemer sold it to Omri¹⁸. What it had been, that it was again to be. Its inhabitants cast forth, its houses and gorgeous palaces were to become heaps of stones, gathered out¹⁹ to make way for cultivation, or to become the fences of the vegetation, which should succeed to man. There is scarce a sadder natural sight, than the fragments of human habitation, tokens of man's labour or his luxury, amid the rich beauty of nature when man himself is gone. For they are tracks of sin and punishment, man's rebellion and God's judgment, man's unworthiness of the good natural gifts of God. A century or two ago, travellers ²⁰ speak of the ground [the site of Samaria] as strewn with masses of ruins. Now these too are gone. ¹⁵ The stones of the temples and palaces of Samaria have been carefully removed from the rich soil, thrown together in heaps, built up in the rude walls of terraces, and rolled down into the valley below. ²¹ About midway of the ascent, the hill is surrounded by a narrow terrace of woodland like a belt. Higher up too are the marks of slighter terraces, once occupied perhaps by the streets of the ancient city. Terrace-cultivation has succeeded to the terraced streets once thronged by the busy, luxurious, sinful, population.

And I will pour down the stones thereof into the valley, of which it was the crest, and which it now proudly surveyed. God Himself would cause it to be poured down (he uses the word which he had just used of the vehemence of the ca-

⁴ Ib. x. 6. ⁵ always relates to a personal object, and apparent exceptions may be reduced to this. So A.E. Kim. Tanch. P'oc. ⁶ 2 Chr. xxviii. 3. ⁷ Ib. 24. ⁸ Ib. 25. ⁹ Ib. xxxi. 1. ¹⁰ Kings xvi. 10-16.

¹¹ Ezek. xvi. 31, 2 Chr. xxviii. 24. ¹² Ib. 2. ¹³ Jer. xxxii. 29. ¹⁴ Is. xxviii. 1. ¹⁵ Porter, Hdbk, p. 345. ¹⁶ Ib. 344. ¹⁷ Rob. ii. 304, 307. ¹⁸ 1 Kings xvi. 24. ¹⁹ Is. v. 2. ²⁰ "Cotovicus in the 16th, and Von Troilo in the 17th century." Rob. ii. 307, note 1. ²¹ Rob. ii. 304.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 753-726.

¹ Ezek. 13. 14.

^m Hos. 2. 5, 12.

thereof into the valley, and I will ¹discover the foundations thereof.

7 And all the graven images thereof shall be beaten to pieces, and all the ^mhires thereof shall be burned with the fire, and all the idols thereof will I lay desolate: for she gathered it of the hire of an harlot and they shall return to the hire of an harlot.

8 Therefore ^aI will wail and howl, ^oI will go stripped and naked: ^pI will make

Before
CHRIST
cir. 753-726.

ⁿ Is. 21. 3.

& 22. 4.

Jer. 4. 19

Is. 20. 2,

3, 4.

Job 30. 29.

Ps. 102. 6.

taract ¹). "The whole face of this part of the hill suggests the idea that the buildings of the ancient city had been thrown down from the brow of the hill. Ascending to the top, we went round the whole summit, and found marks of the same process everywhere."

And I will discover the foundations thereof. The desolation is entire; not one stone left upon another. Yet the very words of threatening contain hope. It was to be not a heap only, but the plantings of a vineyard. The heaps betoken ruin; the vineyard, fruitfulness cared for by God. Destroyed, as what it was, and turned upside down, as a vineyard by the share, it should become again what God made it and willed it to be. It should again become a rich valley, but in outward desolation. Its splendid palaces, its idol temples, its houses of joy, should be but heaps and ruins, which are cleared away out of a vineyard, as only choking it. It was built in rebellion and schism, loose and not held together, like a heap of stones, having no cement of love, rent and torn in itself, having been torn both from God and His worship. It could be remade only by being wholly unmade. Then should they who believed be branches grafted in Him Who said, ³*I am the Vine, ye are the branches.*

7. And all the graven images thereof shall be beaten to pieces. Its idols in whom she trusts, so far from protecting her, shall themselves go into captivity, broken up for the gold and silver whereof they were made. The wars of the Assyrians being religious wars ⁴, the idolatry of Assyria destroyed the idolatry and idols of Israel.

And all the hires thereof shall be burned with fire. All forsaking of God being spiritual fornication from Him Who made His creatures for Himself, the hires are all which man would gain by that desertion of his God, all employed in man's intercourse with his idols, whether as bribing his idols to give him what are the gifts of God, or as himself bribed by them. For there is no pure service, save that of the love of God. God alone can be loved purely, for Himself; offerings to Him Alone are the creature's pure homage to the Creator, going out of itself, not looking back to itself, not seeking itself, but stretching forth to Him and seeking Him for Himself. Whatever man gives to or hopes from his idols, man himself is alike his object in both. The hire then is, alike what he gives to his idols, the gold whereof he makes his Baal ⁵, the offerings which the heathen used to lay up in their temples, and what, as he thought, he himself received back. For he gave only earthly things, in order to receive back things of earth. He hired their service to him, and his earthly gains were his hire. It is a strong mockery in the mouth of God, that they had these things from their idols. He speaks to them after their thoughts. Yet it is true that, although God overrules all, man does receive from Satan ⁶, the god of this world ⁷, all which he gains amiss. It is the price for which he sells his soul and profanes himself. Yet herein were the heathen more religious than the Christian worldling. The heathen did offer an ignorant service to they knew not what. Our idolatry of mammon, as being less abstract, is more evident self-worship, a more visible ignoring and so a more open dethroning of God, a worship of a material prosperity, of which we seem ourselves to be the authors, and to which we habitually immolate the souls of men, so habitually that we have ceased to be conscious of it.

And all the idols thereof will I lay desolate, lit. make a desolation. They, now thronged by their worshippers, should be deserted; their place and temple, a waste. He thrice repeats all; all her graven images, all her hires, all her idols; all should be destroyed. He subjoins a threefold destruction which should overtake them; so that, while the Assyrian broke and carried off the more precious, or burned what could be burned, and, what could not be burned, nor was worth transporting, should be left desolate, all should come to an end. He sets the whole the more vividly before the mind, exhibiting to us so many separate pictures of the mode of destruction.

For from the hire of a harlot she gathered them, and to the hire of a harlot they shall return. "The wealth and manifold provision which (as she thought) were gained by fornication with her idols, shall go to another harlot, Nineveh; so that, as they went a whoring in their own land, they should go to another land of idols and fornication, the Assyrians." They ⁸*turned their glory into shame, changing the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like unto corruptible man*; and so it should turn to them into shame. It sprung out of their shame, and should turn to it again. "Ill got, ill spent." Evil gain, cursed in its origin, has the curse of God upon it, and makes its gainer a curse, and ends accursedly. "Make not ill gains," says even a Heathen ⁹, "ill gains are equal to losses;" and another ¹¹, "Unlawful sweetness a most bitter end awaiteth."

Probably, the most literal sense is not to be excluded. The degrading idolatrous custom, related of Babylon and Cyprus ¹², still continued among the Babylonians at the date of the book of Baruch ¹³, and to the Christian era ¹⁴. S. Augustine speaks of it as having existed ¹⁵ among the Phœnicians, and Theodoret ¹⁶ says that it was still practised by some in Syria. The existence of the idolatrous custom is presupposed by the prohibition by Moses ¹⁷; and, in the time of Hosca self-dedecration was an idolatrous rite in Israel ¹⁸. In the day of Judgment, when the foundation of those who build their house upon the sand, shall be laid bare, the riches which they gained unlawfully shall be burned up; all the idols, which they set up instead of God, ¹⁹the vain thoughts, and useless fancies, and hurtful forms and images which they picture in their mind, defiling it, and hindering it from the steadfast contemplation of divine things, will be punished. They were the hire of the soul which went astray from God, and they who conceived them will, with them, become the prey again of that infernal host which is unceasingly turned from God."

8. Therefore I will [would ²⁰] wail [properly beat ²¹, i. e. on the Isthm. vii. 67, 8. L. ¹² Herod. i. 199. ¹³ vi. 43. ¹⁴ Strabo. xvi. 1. 20. ¹⁵ dabant. de Civ. Dei iii. 10. ¹⁶ on this place. ¹⁷ Deut. xxiii. 18. ¹⁸ See on Hos. iv. 14. p. 31. ¹⁹ Dion. ²⁰ He thrice repeats the optative אֵלֶּיָּהּ אֵלֶּיָּהּ אֵלֶּיָּהּ ²¹ מָכַר.

¹ ver. 4. ² Narrative of Scottish Mission, pp. 293, 4, in Henderson. ³ S. John xv. 5. ⁴ See below Introd. to Nahum. ⁵ See Hos. ii. 8. ab. p. 16. ⁶ S. Matt. iv. 9. ⁷ 2 Cor iv. 4. ⁸ S. Jer. ⁹ Rom. i. 28. ¹⁰ Hesiod. "E. κ. H. 354. L. ¹¹ Pindar

Before
CHRIST
cir. 758-726.
a wailing like the dragons, and mourning
as the owls.

† Heb. daughters of the owl. 9 For || her wound is incurable; for^a it
|| Or, she is grievously sick of her wounds. ^a 2 Kings 18. 13. Is. 1. 6, 7, 8.

breast], and howl. 'Let me alone,' he would say, 'that I may vent my sorrow in all ways of expressing sorrow, beating on the breast and wailing, using all acts and sounds of grief.' It is as we would say, 'Let me mourn on,' a mourning inexhaustible, because the woe too and the cause of grief was unceasing. The Prophet becomes in words, probably in acts too, an image of his people, doing as they should do hereafter. He mourns, because and as they would have to mourn, bearing chastisement, bereft of all outward comeliness, an example also of repentance, since what he did were the chief outward tokens of mourning.

I will [would] go stripped [despoiled¹] and naked. He explains the acts, that they represented no mere voluntary mourning. Not only would he, representing them, go bared of all garments of beauty, as we say "half-naked²" but despoiled also, the proper term of those plundered and stripped by an enemy. He speaks of his doing, what we know that Isaiah did, by God's command, representing in act what his people should thereafter do. "Wouldest thou that I should weep, thou must thyself grieve the first." Micah doubtless went about, not speaking only of grief, but grieving, in the habit of one mourning and bereft of all. He prolongs in these words the voice of wailing, choosing unwonted forms of words, to carry on the sound of grief⁴.

I will make a wailing like the dragons [jackals⁵] and mourning as the owls [ostriches⁶]. The cry of both, as heard at night, is very piteous. Both are doleful creatures, dwelling in desert and lonely places. "The⁷ jackals make a lamentable howling noise, so that travellers unacquainted with them would think that a company of people, women or children, were howling, one to another." "Its howl," says an Arabic natural historian⁸, "is like the crying of an infant." "We heard them", says another⁹, "through the night, wandering around the villages, with a continual, prolonged, mournful cry." The ostrich, forsaking its young¹⁰, is an image of bereavement. "As the ostrich forgets her eggs and leaves them as though they were not her's, to be trampled by the feet of wild beasts, so too shall I go childless, spoiled and naked." Its skreech is spoken of by travellers as "fearful, affrighting." "During the lonesome part of the night they often make a doleful and piteous noise. I have often heard them groan, as if they were in the greatest agonies."

I will grieve from the heart over those who perish, mourning for the hardness of the ungodly, as the Apostle had¹⁵ great heaviness and continual sorrow in his heart for his brethren, the impenitent and unbelieving Jews. Again he saith¹⁶, who is weak and I am not weak? Who is offended, and I burn not?

¹ Barefoot is expressed in Hebrew by חף. Since then Micah does not use the received term for barefoot, and does use the word expressing "stripped," "despoiled," the E. V. is doubtless right, agreeing with the Latin against the LXX. and Syr. ² See on Amos ii. 16. p. 178. n. 6. Seneca says: "Some things, though not [exactly] true, are comprised under the same word, for their likeness. So we call illiterate, one not altogether uninstructed, but who has not been advanced to higher knowledge. So he who has seen one ill habited and in rags, says that he had seen one 'naked.'" de benef. v. 13. Sanch. ³ Hor. A. P. 102. 3.

⁴ שלל and אלנה carry on the sound of אללה. שלל, the textual reading, is doubtless right, although without example; אלנה has analogy with other words, but, common as the word is, stands alone in the word itself. Each bears out the other. ⁵ The תן, which occurs only in the plural תנים, is distinct from the תין, plur. תנים, although they touch on each other, in that תין sing. is written תנים, Ezek. xxix. 3, and the poetic plur. of תן, תין occurs in the text, Lam. iv. 3. The Syr. (and Chaldee, properly) and Tanchum oftentimes render it "jackal." Pococke first, of moderns, brought out this meaning. See his note here.

⁶ The ענה ב"ה "female ostrich" (the תנים probably being the male ostrich) may be so called from ען, (Syr. glutton, like its Arabic name, na'am) or from its shrill cry, ענה. ⁷ Pococke, who had heard them in Syria, &c. ⁸ Demiri, in Bochart, iii. 12. T. iii. p. 181. ed. Leipz. "It howls by night only." Id. ⁹ Olearius, Itin. Mosc. et Pers. iv. 17. Bochart, ib. p. 183. ¹⁰ Job xxxix. 16. ¹¹ S. Jer. ¹² Sandys' Travels, L. ii. fin. ¹³ Shaw, Travels, T. ii. p. 349. ¹⁴ Dion. ¹⁵ Rom. ix. 1. ¹⁶ 2 Cor. xi. 29. ¹⁷ The construction of the E. V. is beyond question preferable to that of the E. M. It is the common emphatic idiom, in which the plural subject and singular predicate are joined to express, that the thing asserted is true not only of all generally but of each individually. ¹⁸ Lev. xxvi. 21, Nu. xi. 33, Deut. xxviii. 59, 61, &c. ¹⁹ Nah. ²⁰ ult. Jer. xxx. 12, 15. ²¹ Jer. x. 19, xv. 18. ²² נלה in Nahum and Jer. xxx. 15. is exactly equivalent to the אנה in Micah. In Jer. xxx. 12, אנה לנבך stands parallel with it. Isaiah (xvii. 11) has אנה נבך. ²³ נבך ע"י in each of the three places. ²⁴ ע"י includes the whole country, quite up to. It does not necessarily include the place, quite up to which it reaches. It does not, probably, 2 Kings xviii. 8. See above p. 162 col. 1. ²⁵ 2 Kings xviii. 13. ²⁶ See ab. on Am. vi. 2. p. 203. ²⁷ Parallel with Ashkelon.

is come unto Judah; he is come unto the gate of my people, even to Jerusalem.

10 ¶ Declare ye it not at Gath, weep ² Sam. 1. 20.

For by how much the soul is nobler than the body, and by how much eternal damnation is heavier than any temporal punishment, so much more vehemently should we grieve and weep for the peril and perpetual damnation of souls, than for bodily sickness or any temporal evil."

9. For her [Samaria's] wound¹⁷, [lit. her wounds, or strokes, (the word is used especially of those inflicted by God¹⁸,) each, one by one,] is incurable. The idiom is used of inflictions on the body politic¹⁹ or the mind²⁰, for which there is no remedy. The wounds were very sick, or incurable, not in themselves or on God's part, but on Israel's. The day of grace passes away at last, when man has so steeled himself against grace, as to be morally dead, having deadened himself to all capacity of repentance.

For it is come unto [quite up to²¹ Judah; he, [the enemy,] is come [lit. hath reached, touched,] to [quite up to²¹] the gate of my people, even to [quite up to²¹] Jerusalem. "The same sin, yea, the same punishment for sin, which overthrew Samaria, shall even come unto, quite up to Judah. Then the Prophet suddenly changes the gender, and, as Scripture so often does, speaks of the one agent, the centre and impersonation of the coming evil, as sweeping on over Judah, quite up to the gate of his people, quite up to Jerusalem. He does not say here, whether Jerusalem would be taken²²; and so, it seems likely that he speaks of a calamity short of excision. Of Israel's wounds only he here says, that they are incurable; he describes the wasting of even lesser places near or beyond Jerusalem, the flight of their inhabitants. Of the capital itself he is silent, except that the enemy reached, touched, struck against it, quite up to it. Probably, then, he is here describing the first visitation of God, when²³ Sennacherib came up against all the fenced cities of Judah and took them, but Jerusalem was spared. God's judgments come step by step, leaving time for repentance. The same enemy, although not the same king, came against Jerusalem who had wasted Samaria. Samaria was probably as strong as Jerusalem. Hezekiah prayed; God heard, the Assyrian army perished by miracle; Jerusalem was respited for 124 years.

10. Tell it not in Gath. Gath had probably now ceased to be; at least, to be of any account²⁴. It shows how David's elegy lived in the hearts of Judah, that his words are used as a proverb, (just as we do now, in whose ears it is yearly read), when, as with us, its original application was probably lost. True, Gath, reduced itself, might rejoice the more maliciously over the sufferings of Judah. But David mentions it as a chief seat of Philistine strength²⁵; now its strength was gone. The blaspheming of the enemies of God is the sorest part being the male ostrich) may be so called from ען, (Syr. glutton, like its Arabic name, na'am) or from its shrill cry, ענה.

⁷ Pococke, who had heard them in Syria, &c. ⁸ Demiri, in Bochart, iii. 12. T. iii. p. 181. ed. Leipz. "It howls by night only." Id. ⁹ Olearius, Itin. Mosc. et Pers. iv. 17. Bochart, ib. p. 183. ¹⁰ Job xxxix. 16. ¹¹ S. Jer. ¹² Sandys' Travels, L. ii. fin. ¹³ Shaw, Travels, T. ii. p. 349. ¹⁴ Dion. ¹⁵ Rom. ix. 1. ¹⁶ 2 Cor. xi. 29. ¹⁷ The construction of the E. V. is beyond question preferable to that of the E. M. It is the common emphatic idiom, in which the plural subject and singular predicate are joined to express, that the thing asserted is true not only of all generally but of each individually. ¹⁸ Lev. xxvi. 21, Nu. xi. 33, Deut. xxviii. 59, 61, &c. ¹⁹ Nah. ²⁰ ult. Jer. xxx. 12, 15. ²¹ Jer. x. 19, xv. 18. ²² נלה in Nahum and Jer. xxx. 15. is exactly equivalent to the אנה in Micah. In Jer. xxx. 12, אנה לנבך stands parallel with it. Isaiah (xvii. 11) has אנה נבך. ²³ נבך ע"י in each of the three places. ²⁴ ע"י includes the whole country, quite up to. It does not necessarily include the place, quite up to which it reaches. It does not, probably, 2 Kings xviii. 8. See above p. 162 col. 1. ²⁵ 2 Kings xviii. 13. ²⁶ See ab. on Am. vi. 2. p. 203. ²⁷ Parallel with Ashkelon.

Before CHRIST
cir. 758-726. ye not at all: in the house of || Aphrah roll thyself in the dust.

11 Pass ye away, || thou † inhabitant of Saphir, having thy^t shame naked: the inhabitant of || Zaanan came not forth in the tress. † Is. 20. 4. & 47. 2, 3. Jer. 18. 22. Nah. 3. 5. || Or, the country of flocks.

of His chastisements. Whence David prays¹, let not mine enemies exult over me; and the sons of Korah,² With a sword in my bones, mine enemies reproach me, while they say daily unto me, where is thy God? and Ethan³; Thou hast made all his enemies to rejoice. Remember, Lord, the reproach of Thy servant—wherewith Thine enemies have reproached, O Lord, wherewith they have reproached the footsteps of Thine anointed. It is hard to part with home, with country, to see all desolate, which one ever loved. But far, far above all, is it, if, in the disgrace and desolation, God's honour seems to be injured. The Jewish people was then God's only home on earth. If it could be extinguished, who remained to honour Him? Victories over them seemed to their heathen neighbours to be victories over Him. He seemed to be dishonoured without, because they had first dishonoured Him within. Sore is it to the Christian, to see God's cause hindered, His kingdom narrowed, the Empire of Infidelity advanced. Sorer in one way, because he knows the price of souls, for whom Jesus died. But the world is now the Church's home. "The holy Church throughout all the world doth acknowledge Thee!" Then, it was girt in within a few miles of territory, and sad indeed it must have been to the Prophet, to see this too hemmed in. Tell it not in Gath, to the sons of those who, of old, defied God.

Weep not at all [lit. *weeping*⁴, weep not]. Weeping is the stillest expression of grief. We speak of "weeping in silence." Yet this also was too visible a token of grief. Their weeping would be the joy and laughter of God's enemies.

In the house of Aphrah, [probably, In Bethleaphrah] roll thyself in the dust [better, as the text, *I roll myself in dust*⁵]. The Prophet chose unusual names, such as would associate themselves with the meanings which he wished to convey, so that thenceforth the name itself might recall the prophecy. As if we were to say, "In Ashe I roll myself in ashes." There was an Aphrah near Jerusalem⁶. It is more likely that Micah should refer to this, than to the Ophrah in Benjamin⁷. He shewed them, in his own person, how they should mourn, retired out of sight and hidden, as it were, in the dust. "Whatever grief your heart may have, let your face have no tears; go not forth, but, in the house of dust, sprinkle thyself with the ashes of its ruins."

All the places thenceforth spoken of were in Judah, whose mourning of || Beth-ezel; he shall receive of you his standing.

12 For the inhabitant of Maroth || waited carefully for good: but^a evil came down from the LORD unto the gate of Jerusalem.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 758-726.

Or, a place near.
Or, was grieved.
Amos 3. 6.

sorrow and desolation are repeated in all. It is one varied history of sorrow. The names of her cities, whether in themselves called from some gifts of God, as Shaphir, (beautiful; we have Fairford, Fairfield, Fairburn, Fairlight,) or contrariwise from some defect, Maroth, Bitterness (probably from brackish water) Achzib, lying, (doubtless from a winter-torrent which in summer failed) suggest, either in contrast or by themselves, some note of evil and woe. It is Judah's history in all, given in different traits; her "beauty" turned into shame; herself free neither to go forth nor to "abide;" looking for good and finding evil; the strong (Lachish) strong only to flee; like a brook that fails and deceives; her inheritance (Mareshah) inherited; herself, taking refuge in dens and caves of the earth, yet even there found, and bereft of her glory. Whence, in the end, without naming Judah, the Prophet sums up her sorrows with one call to mourning.

11. Pass ye away [lit. Pass thou (fem.) *away to or for yourselves*⁸, disregarded by God and despised by man] pass the bounds of your land into captivity, thou inhabitant of Shaphir, having thy shame naked, [better, in nakedness, and *shame*⁹]. Shaphir [fair] was a village in Judah, between Eleutheropolis and Ashkelon¹¹. There are still, in the Shephelah, two villages called Sawafir¹². It, once fair, should now go forth in the disgrace and dishonour with which captives were led away.

The inhabitants of Zaanan came not forth. Zaanan (abounding in flocks) was probably the same as Zenan of Judah, which lay in the Shephelah¹³. It, which formerly *went forth*¹⁴ in pastoral gladness with the multitude of its flocks, shall now shrink into itself for fear.

The mourning of Beth-Ezel [lit. house of root, firmly rooted] *shall take from you its standing*¹⁵. It too cannot help itself, much less be a stay to others. They who have been wont to go forth in fulness, shall not go forth then, and they who abide, strong though they be, shall not furnish an abiding place. Neither in going out nor in remaining, shall any thing be secure then.

12. For the inhabitant of Maroth [bitterness] waited carefully for good. She waited carefully¹⁶ for the good which God gives, not for the Good which God is. She looked, longed for, good, as men do; but therewith her longing ended. She longed for it, amid her own evil, which brought God's in which, in the transfer into another though cognate language, u has been dropped at the end, and one at the beginning of a word, none in the middle. In fact also Acco (Acre) was probably never in the possession of Israel. It is only mentioned in the Old Testament, to say that Asher did not drive out its inhabitants (Judg. i. 31). This interpretation which has become popular, 1) violates the Hebrew idiom; 2) implies a very improbable omission of a "tenacious letter;" 3) is historically unnatural, in that the Prophet would thus forbid Judah to weep in a city where there were none even of Israel. Yet of late, it has been followed by Hitz, Maur, Umbreit, Ewald, thought probably by Gesenius and Winer, and adopted even by Dr. Henderson. ⁵ The Kethib התקשר is, as usual, to be preferred to the correction, the Kri, תקשר. ⁶ R. Tanchum of Jerusalem, here. ⁷ Josh. xviii. 23, 1 Sam. xiii. 17. ⁸ S. Jer. Rup. ⁹ עבר לבם.

¹⁰ The construction, עיר בשם עיר is like עיר בשם עיר meekness righteousness Ps. xlv. 5. is the quality, shame. ¹¹ Onom. ¹² Scholz, Reisen, p. 255. Robinson, ii. 34, says, "There are three villages of this name near each other." "There is yet a village Suaphir, two hours S. E. of Ashdod," Schwartz (of Jerusalem) Das Heil. Land, p. 87. "a Sapheria one hour N. W. of Lod." [Lydda] (ib. p. 105.) ¹³ Josh. xv. 37, coll. 33. "There is a village Zanabra, 1. hour S. E. of Moresha." Schwartz, 74. ¹⁴ זנן, whence זנן, is itself probably connected with זנן. ¹⁵ I have preferred the division of the Syr. and Vulg. because, if joined as in the E. V. the last clause has no definite subject, and there is no allusion to the meaning of Beth haezel. ¹⁶ עזל is used in the sense of עזל, Gen. viii. 10, and in Hif. Jud. iii. 25, in Pil. Job xxvi. 15, and in Hithpal. Ps. xxxvii. 7. Here too it has the construction of עזל with עזל, as it has in Job xxvi, and

¹ Ps. xxv. 2. ² Ps. xlii. 10. ³ Ps. lxxxix. 42, 50.
4 The conjecture of Reland (Pal. p. 534) "in Acco weep not," as בנצור were for בנצור, is against the Hebrew idiom, and one of the many abuses of Hebrew parallelism, as if Hebrew writers were tied down to exactness of parallelism, and because the Prophet mentions the name of a city in two clauses, he must in the third. The Prophet never would have used one of the commonest idioms in Hebrew, the emphatic use of the Inf. Abs. with the finite verb, unless he had meant it to be understood, as any one must understand the three Hebrew words, בנצור אל תבנו. The sacred writers wrote to be understood. It is contrary to all principles of language, not to take a plain idiom in its plain sense. The Vers. Vulg. Aq. Symm. so render it. The LXX. (from a reading in which, οὐ ἔνακεῖν or οὐ ἔνακεῖν, Reland made his οὐ ἔνακεῖν) is full of blunders. They render also בנצור as if it were בנצור, ἀνοικουμένη; בנין, ἐξ οἴκου; πενή κατὰ γέλωτα. The u is but seldom omitted in Hebrew. (Of the instances given by Gesenius, p. 976, בנצור for בנצור is the Chaldec name of the idol; בנצור, uncertain, at most; בנצור for בנצור (Ps. xxvii. 8) wrong. There remains then in Hebrew, only the single pronunciation of Amos בנצור for בנצור viii. 8. See ab. p. 216. Robinson observes, "The Semitic letter y in particular, so unpronounceable by other nations, has a remarkable tenacity. Of the very many Hebrew names, containing this letter, which still survive in Arabic, our lists exhibit only two or three in which it has been dropped; and perhaps none in which it has been exchanged for another letter" (i. 255. n. 2.) His only instances are Jib for Gibeon (where the whole syllable has been dropped) i. 456; Jelbon for Gilboa (ii. 316); Yafa for Yaphia Josh. xix. 12, 'doubtful' ii. 342; and Endor (which I doubt) ii. 360. Any how they are but three names,

Before
CHRIST
cir. 750. || to Moresheth-gath: the houses of || Achzib shall be a lie to the kings of Israel.

15 Yet will I bring an heir unto thee, O inhabitant of Mareshah: || he Or, for. That is, a lie. Josh. 15. 41. Josh. 15. 41. Or, the glory of Israel shall come, &c.

with which the father sent away¹ his daughter, to belong to another, her lord² or husband, never more to return. Moresheth, [lit. inheritance,] the inheritance which God gave her, was to be parted with; she was to be laden³ with gifts to the enemy. Judah should part with her, and her own treasure also.

The houses of Achzib shall be a lie. Achzib, so called probably from a winter brook (achzab) was to become what its name imported, a resource which should fail just in the time of need, as the winter brooks in the drought of summer. Wilt Thou be unto me as a failing brook, waters which are not sure? This Achzib, which is recounted between Keilah and Mareshah⁴, was probably one of the oldest towns of Palestine, being mentioned in the history of the Patriarch Judah⁵. After having survived above 1000 years, it should, in time of need, fail. The kings of Israel are here the kings of Judah. When this prophecy was to be accomplished, the ten tribes would have ceased to have any political existence, the remnant in their own land would have no head to look to, except the line of David, whose good kings had a care for them. Micah then, having prophesied the utter destruction of Samaria, speaks in accordance with the state of things which he foresaw and foretold⁷.

15. Yet will I bring an heir [the heir⁸, him whom God had appointed to be the heir, Sennacherib] unto thee, O inhabitant of Mareshah. Mareshah, (as the original form of its name denotes⁹), lay on the summit of a hill. "Its ruins only were still seen," in the time of Eusebius and S. Jerome, "in the second mile from Eleutheropolis"¹⁰, "Foundations still remain on the south eastern part of the remarkable Tell, south of Beth-Jibrin." Rehoboam fortified it also¹². Zerah the Æthiopian had come to¹³ it, probably to besiege it, when Asa met him, and God smote the Æthiopians before him, in the valley of Zephathah thereat. In the wars of the Maccabees, it was in the hands of the Edomites¹⁴. Its capture and that of Adora are mentioned¹⁵ as the last act of the war, before the Edomites submitted to John Hyrcanus, and were incorporated in Israel. It was a powerful city¹⁶, when the Parthians took it. As Micah writes the name, it looked nearer to the word "inheritance"¹⁷. Mareshah (inheritance) shall yet have the heir of God's appointment, the enemy. It shall not inherit the land, as promised to the faithful; but shall itself be inherited, its people dispossessed. While it, (and so also the soul now) held fast to God, they were the heritage of the Lord, by His gifts and grace; when, of their own free-will, those, once God's heritage, become slaves of sin, they passed and still pass, against their will, into the possession of another master, the Assyrian or Satan.

He [i. e. the heir, the enemy] shall come unto Adullam, shall come unto Adullam the glory of Israel.

16 Make thee bald, and poll thee for thy delicate children; enlarge thy bald-

Lam. 4. 5.

Jer. 7. 29. & 16. 6. & 47. 5. & 49. 37.

*the glory of Israel*¹⁸; i. e. he who shall dispossess Mareshah, shall come quite unto Adullam, where, as in a place of safety, the glory of Israel, all in which she gloried, should be laid up. Adullam was a very ancient city, being mentioned in the history of the patriarch Judah¹⁹, a royal city²⁰. It too lay in the Shephelah²¹; it was said to be 10²² or 12²³ miles East of Eleutheropolis; but for this, there seems to be scarcely place in the Shephelah. It was one of the 15 cities fortified by Rehoboam²⁴; one of the 16 towns, in which (with their dependant villages) Judah settled after the captivity²⁵. It contained the whole army of Judas Maccabæus²⁶. Like Lachish, it had probably the double advantages of the neighbourhood of the hills and of the plain, seated perhaps at the roots of the hills, since near it doubtless was the large cave of Adullam named from it. The line of caves, fit for human habitation, which extended from Eleutheropolis to Petra²⁷, began Westward of it. "The valley which runs up from Eleutheropolis Eastward, is full of large caves; some would hold thousands of men. They are very extensive, and some of them had evidently been inhabited." "The outer chamber of one cavern was 270 feet long by 126 wide; and behind this were recesses and galleries, probably leading to other chambers which we could not explore. The massive roof was supported by misshaped pieces of the native limestone left for that purpose, and at some places was domed quite through to the surface, admitting both light and air by the roof." The name of Adullam suggested the memory of that cave, the refuge of the Patriarch David, the first of their line of kings, in extreme isolation and peril of his life. Thither, the refuge now of the remaining glory of Israel, its wealth, its trust, its boast,—the foe should come. And so there only remained one common dirge for all.

16. Make thee bald, poll [lit. shear²⁹] thee for thy delicate children. Some special ways of cutting the hair were forbidden to the Israelites, as being idolatrous customs, such as the rounding the hair in front, cutting it away from the temples³⁰, or between the eyes³¹. All shearing of the hair was not forbidden³²; indeed to the Nazarite it was commanded, at the close of his vow. The removal of that chief ornament of the countenance was a natural expression of grief, which revolts at all personal appearance. It belonged, not to idolatry, but to nature³³. Thy delicate children. The change was the more bitter for those tended and brought up delicately. Moses from the first spake of special miseries which should fall on the tender and very delicate. Enlarge thy baldness; outdo in grief what others do; for the cause of thy grief is more than that of others. The point of comparison in the Eagle might either be the actual baldness of the head, or its moulting. If it were the baldness of the head, the word translated eagle³⁴,

¹ Jud. xii. 9. ² בעל ³ כדור על מורשתה lit. "bridal presents on Moresheth Gath." Hitzig thinks that in מורשת there is an allusion to כדור, "espoused;" but this would be a contradictory image, since the bridal presents were given in espousing, not to one already espoused, and they were to be given not to Gath but to the invader.

⁴ Jer. xv. 13. ⁵ Josh. xv. 41. ⁶ in the unlengthened form כוזב Gen. xxxviii. 5. ⁷ See ab. Intro. p. 293, 4. ⁸ דורש ⁹ מורשת (from מורש) Jos. xv. 44. ¹⁰ Onom.

¹¹ Rob. ii. 67, 8. ¹² 2 Chr. xi. 8. ¹³ Ib. xiv. 9 sqq. ¹⁴ Jos. Ant. xii. 8. 6. ¹⁵ Ib. xiii. 9. 1. ¹⁶ Ib. xiv. 13. 9. ¹⁷ מורשת like מורשת. In the Chron. it is spelled as in Micah.

¹⁸ The Eng. Marg. has, in the same general sense, unto Adullam shall come the glory of Israel: ¹⁹ Gen. xxxviii. 1. 12. 20. ²⁰ Jos. xii. 15. ²¹ Ib. xv. 35. ²² Eus. ²³ S. Jer. ²⁴ 2 Chr. xi. 7. ²⁵ Neh. xi. 30. ²⁶ 2 Macc. xii. 35.

²⁷ see S. Jer. ab. p. 235.

²⁸ Rev. G. Williams, MS. letter.

²⁹ see ab. on Am. viii. 10. p. 217. col. 2. ³⁰ Lev. xix. 27. against Arab idolatry. See Herod. iii. 8. ³¹ Deut. xiv. 1. ³² as Hitzig says. ³³ See Job i. 20, early Greece, (Il. 23, 46, 135 sqq. Alceus 429.) non-Egyptian nations, (Herod. ii. 36.) Persians, (Ib. ix. 24.) Scythians, (Ib. iv. 71.) Thessalians, Macedonians (Plut. Pelop. 34.)

³⁴ The etymology, (Arab. nasara "tore with the beak,") belongs rather to the eagle with its sharp, than to the vulture with its long, piercing beak. (The Kamoo, Freytag's authority for rendering nasr vulture, only says "a bird," adding that it is the name of "the constellation," i. e. Aquila. In Ulug Begh Tab. Stell. 49, 50. the okab and the nasr both occur as names of the constellation. Kazwini in Ideler [Sternkunde p. 335] says that the okab is three stars of the form of the flying nasr.) Leo Afr. [Descr. Afr. ix. 56.] says that "the largest species of eagle is called Nesir." Unless nasher be the golden Eagle, there is no Hebrew name for it, whereas it is still a bird of Palestine, and smaller eagles are mentioned.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 750. ness as the eagle; for they are gone into captivity from thee.

CHAPTER II.

1 Against oppression. 4. A lamentation. 7 A re-although mostly used of the Eagle itself, might here comprehend the Vulture¹. For entire baldness is so marked a feature in the vulture, whereas the "bald-headed Eagle" was probably not a bird of Palestine². On the other hand, David, who lived so long among the rocks of Palestine, and Isaiah seem to have known of effects of moulting upon the Eagle in producing, (although in a less degree than in other birds,) a temporary diminution of strength, which have not in modern times been commonly observed. For David says³, Thou shalt renew, like the eagle, thy youth, which speaks of fresh strength after temporary weakness; and Isaiah⁴, They that trust in the Lord shall put forth⁵ fresh strength; they shall put forth pinion-feathers⁶ like eagles, comparing the fresh strength which should succeed to that which was gone, to the eagle's recovering its strong pinion-feathers. Bochart however says unhesitatingly, "⁷ At the beginning of spring, the rapacious birds are subject to shedding of their feathers which we call moulting." If this be so, the comparison is yet more vivid. For the baldness of the vulture belongs to its matured strength, and could only be an external likeness. The moulting of the eagle involves some degree of weakness, with which he compares Judah's mournful and weak condition amid the loss of their children, gone into captivity⁸.

Thus closes the first general portion of the prophecy. The people had cast aside its own Glory, God; now its sons, its pride and its trust, shall go away from it:

"⁹The eagle, laying aside its old feathers and taking new, is a symbol of penitence and of the penitents who lay aside their former evil habits, and become other and new men. True, but rare form of penitence!" S. Gregory the Great thus applies this to the siege of Rome by the Lombards. "¹⁰That happened to her which we know to have been foretold of Judea by the Prophet, enlarge thy baldness like the eagle. For baldness befalls man in the head only, but the eagle in its whole body; for, when it is very old, its feathers and pinions fall from all its body. She lost her feathers, who lost her people. Her pinions too fell out, with which she was wont to fly to the prey; for all her mighty men, through whom she plundered others, perished. But this which we speak of, the breaking to pieces of the city ed in the same verse, Lev. xi. 13; viz. the ossifrage, עוף, and the black eagle, עוף, so called from its strength, like the valeria, of which Pliny says, "the melanætos or valeria, least in size, remarkable for strength, blackish in colour." x. 3. The same list of unclean birds contains also the vulture, נשר, Deut. xiv. 13, (as it must be, being a gregarious bird, Is. xxxiv. 15.) in its different species; (Deut. ib.) the gier-eagle, (i. e. Geyer [vulture] eagle, gypætos, or vultur percnopterus, (Hasselquist, Forskal, Shaw, Bruce in Savigny p. 77.) partaking of the character of both, (נשר Lev. xi. 18. Deut. xiv. 17.) together with the falcon (נשר Lev. xi. 14.) and hawk, with its subordinate species, (נשר Lev. xi. 18. Deut. xiv. 15.

¹ In this case, nesher, being a name taken from a quality common to birds of prey, might at once be a generic term, corresponding to the modern term, (aves) rapaces, and might also designate what all account the king of birds. Its Greek name detor is doubtless the Hebrew, נשר, (Bochart ii. 2. p. 170.) a generic name for birds of prey. The Gypætos forms a link between the vulture and the eagle. Seeing the prey afar, lofty flight out of human sight, strength of pinion, building nests in the rocks, attributed in H. Scr. to the nesher, belong also to the vulture. The feeding on dead bodies belongs especially to the vulture, although affirmed of eagles also if the body be not decayed. The Arabic nasr seems to comprise the vulture also. See in Bochart ii. 27. T. iii. p. 79 sqq. Leipzig. Savigny says, "Nisr is a generic name which has always been translated Aquila, but now the people and Arabic naturalists use it to designate the great vulture." (Descr. del'Eg. i. 73.) and of 'Okab, "Okab is a generic name, but it becomes specific for the small black eagle which, properly speaking, is the 'Okâb." (Ib. 85.) ² "The only 'bald-headed Eagle' is an American rather than an European species. Though it is not exclusively of the new world, it is yet rarely seen in the old, and then chiefly in the Northern latitudes." Dr. Rolleston, MS. letter, who kindly guided me to the modern authorities quoted above. ³ Ps. ciii. 5. ⁴ xl. 31. ⁵ וְיִצְחָק כֹּחַ ⁶ וְיִצְחָק כֹּחַ ⁷ וְיִצְחָק כֹּחַ ⁸ וְיִצְחָק כֹּחַ ⁹ וְיִצְחָק כֹּחַ ¹⁰ וְיִצְחָק כֹּחַ whence Chaliph) is used of the fresh shoots of grass, (Ps. xc. 5, 6.) of the stump of a felled tree, putting forth fresh suckers, Job xiv. 7. then, causatively, of the putting forth fresh proof of injustice and idolatry. 12 A promise of restoring Jacob. Before CHRIST

cir. 730.

WOE to them ^a that devise iniquity, ^b and ^c work evil upon their beds! ^d Hos. 7. 6. Ps. 36. 4.

of Rome, we know has been done in all the cities of the world. Some were desolated by pestilence, others devoured by the sword, others racked by famine, others swallowed by earthquakes. Despise we them with our whole heart, at least, when brought to nought; at least with the end of the world, let us end our eagerness after the world. Follow we, wherein we can, the deeds of the good." One whose commentaries S. Jerome had read, thus applies this verse to the whole human race. "O soul of man! O city, once the mother of saints, which wast formerly in Paradise, and didst enjoy the delights of different trees, and wast adorned most beautifully, now being cast down from thy place aloft, and brought down unto Babylon, and come into a place of captivity, and having lost thy glory, make thee bald and take the habit of a penitent; and thou who didst fly aloft like an eagle, mourn thy sons, thy offspring, which from thee is led captive."

CHAP. II. The Prophet had declared that evil should come down on Samaria and Jerusalem for their sins. He had pronounced them sinners against God; he now speaks of their hard unlovingness towards man, as our Blessed Lord in the Gospel speaks of sins against Himself in His members, as the ground of the condemnation of the wicked. The time of warning is past. He speaks as in the person of the Judge, declaring the righteous judgments of God, pronouncing sentence on the hardened, but blessing on those who follow Christ. The sins thus visited were done with a high hand; first, with forethought:

1. Woe, all woe, woe from God; "¹¹the woe of temporal captivity; and, unless ye repent, the woe of eternal damnation, hangeth over you." Woe to them that devise iniquity. They devise it, "¹²they are not led into it by others, but invent it out of their own hearts." They plot and forecast and fulfil it even in thought, before it comes to act. And work evil upon their beds. Thoughts and imaginations of evil are works of the soul¹³. *Upon their beds*¹⁴, which ought to be the place of holy thought, and of communing with their own hearts and with God¹⁵. Stillness must be filled with thought, good or bad; if not with good, then with bad. The chamber, if not the sanctuary of holy thoughts, is filled with unholy purposes and strength, in contrast with the exhaustion and utter stumbling of the young and strong. In Arab. conj. iv. one of its many special meanings is "put forth fresh feathers" after moulting.

⁶ Bochart ii. 1. T. ii. p. 745. So the LXX πτεροφυλάσσειν. S. Jer. assumpt pennis. So also Syr. Saad. ܡܬܠܝܢ is used of bringing flesh on the bones, (Ez. xxxvii. 6.) putting on the figures of Cherubim on the veil, (2 Chr. iii. 14.) gold on a shield, (1 Kgs. x. 17.) dress, (2 Sam. i. 24. Am. viii. 10. The E. V. (lit. "they shall ascend a pinion [i. e. with a pinion] like eagles," would not be too bold, but for the correspondence of Ps. ciii. 5. The word מִנְיָן, rendered wings E. V., is, in Ezek. xvii. 3, distinguished from the wing itself and the plumage; as is מִנְיָן Job xxxix. 13. In Ps. lxxviii. 14. מִנְיָן must be the pinion-feathers, not the pinions; and so מִנְיָן in Ps. xci. 4. In Job xxxix. 26. the denom. מִנְיָן might mean the same, (Boch. Ib.) the first hemistich describing the acquiring the new feathers, the 2nd the emigration of the hawks. The radical meaning of מִנְיָן is strength.

⁷ Bochart, Hieroz. ii. 1. p. 74, 5. The Kamoo quotes, among the 10 characteristics of the Anook, (the Rachma, Heb. נשר), "It flies in the time of shedding its feathers and is not emperilled in its young plumage, &c." Boch. ii. 26. T. iii. p. 57. Demetrius Const. in his ἱερακοσσοφ. gives remedies for making fresh feathers put forth fast, (c. 17.) and grow quick, (c. 18.) and against diseases in moulting, (c. 32.) shewing that birds of prey are liable to the same laws as other birds. (See Buffon, Hist. Nat. i. 44, 5. 69, 70.) Cuvier says, "In certain states of moulting, you see in the plumage [of the royal eagle] the white at the base of the feathers. It is then called Falco Canadensis." (Régne Animal.) To this Grey adds, that the names Melanætos and Mogilnik (in Gmelin) only describe it when moulting. (Cuvier Anim. Kingd. vi. 33.) So then the change at moulting is so great, that the royal eagle, when moulting, has been thought to be four different species.

⁸ In Greek also the loss of wealth by pillage is compared to moulting, not in Aristoph. Av. 284-6. only, but in Philostratus, "he moults as to the wealth," p. 273.

¹⁰ in Ezek. Hom. 18, fin. L. ¹¹ Dion. ¹² Rup. Rib. ¹³ Ps. lxxiii. 2

¹⁴ See Ps. xxxvi. 4. ¹⁵ Ib. iv. 4.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 730.

Gen. 31. 29.
Isai. 5. 8.

Or, defraud.

when the morning is light, they practise it, because^c it is in the power of their hand.

2 And they covet^d fields, and take them by violence; and houses, and take them away: so they || oppress a man and his house, even a man and his heritage.

imaginations. Man's last and first thoughts, if not of good, are especially of vanity and evil. The Psalmist says¹, Lord, have I not remembered Thee in my bed, and thought upon Thee when I was waking? These men thought of sin on their bed, and did it on waking. When the morning is light, lit. in the light of the morning, i. e. instantly, shamelessly, not shrinking from the light of day, not ignorantly, but knowingly, deliberately, in full light. Nor again through infirmity, but in the wantonness of might, because it is in the power of their hand², as, of old, God said³, This they begin to do, and now nothing will be restrained from them which they have imagined to do. ⁴ "Impiously mighty, and mighty in impiety."

⁵ See the need of the daily prayer, "Vouchsafe, O Lord, to keep us this day without sin;" and "Almighty God, Who hast brought us to the beginning of this day, defend us in the same by Thy mighty power, that we may fall into no sin, &c." The illusions of the night, if such be permitted, have no power against the prayer of the morning.

2. And they covet fields and take them by violence, [rend them away] and houses, and take them away. Still, first they sin in heart, then in act. And yet, with them, to covet and to rob, to desire and to take, are the same. They were prompt, instantaneous, without a scruple, in violence. So soon as they coveted, they took⁶. Desired, acquired! Coveted, robbed! 'They saw, they coveted, they took,' had been their past history. They did violence, not to one only, but, touched with no mercy, to whole families, their little ones also; they oppressed a man and his house. They spoiled not goods only, but life, a man and his inheritance; destroying him by false accusations or violence and so seizing upon his inheritance⁷. Thus Ahab first coveted Naboth's vineyard, then, through Jezebel, slew him; and ⁸ they who devoured widows' houses, did at the last plot by night against Him of Whom they said, Come, let us kill Him and the inheritance shall be our's; and in the morning, they practised it, leading Him away to Pilate. ⁹ "Who of us desires not the villas of this world, forgetful of the possessions of Paradise? You see men join field to field, and fence to fence. Whole places suffice not to the tiny frame of one man." ¹⁰ Such is the fire of concupiscence, raging within, that, as those seized by burning fevers cannot rest, no bed suffices them, so no houses or fields content these. Yet no more than seven feet of earth will suffice them soon. ¹¹ Death only owns, how small the frame of man."

3. Such had been their habitual doings. They had done all this, he says, as one continuous act, up to that time. They were habitually *devisers of iniquity, doers of evil*¹². It was ever-renewed. By night they sinned in heart and thought; by day, in act. And so he speaks of it in the present. *They do it*¹³. But, although renewed in fresh acts, it was one unbroken course of acting. And so he also uses the form, in which the Hebrews spoke of uninterrupted habits, They have ¹ lxiii. 6. ² This phrase can have no other meaning, Gen. xxxi. 29. Prov. iii. 27; nor the corresponding phrase with the negative, Deut. xxviii. 32. Neh. v. 5. ³ Gen. xi. 6. ⁴ Rup. ⁵ from Lap. ⁶ The force of וּלְקַח. ⁷ Comp. the woes, Is. v. 7. on oppression; 8. covetousness. ⁸ Theoph. ⁹ S. Jer. ¹⁰ Rib. ¹¹ Juv. Sat. x. 172, 3. ¹² חֲסִידֵי אֵל, פְּעִילֵי רַע.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 730.

Jer. 8. 3.

Amos 5. 13.
Eph. 5. 16.

3 Therefore thus saith the Lord; Be- hold, against^e this family do I devise an evil, from which ye shall not remove your necks; neither shall ye go haughtily: ^f for^g this time is evil.

4 ¶ In that day shall one^h take up a pa-coveted, they have robbed, they have taken¹⁴. Now came God's part.

Hab. 2. 6.

Therefore, thus saith the Lord, since they oppress whole families, *behold I will set Myself against this whole family*¹⁵; since they devise iniquity, behold I too, Myself, by Myself, in My own Person, am devising. Very awful is it, that Almighty God sets His own Infinite Wisdom against the devices of man and employs it fittingly to punish. 'I am devising no common punishment, but one to bow them down without escape; an evil from which—He turns suddenly to them, ye shall not remove your necks, neither shall ye go haughtily.' ¹⁶ "Pride then was the source of that boundless covetousness," since it was pride which was to be bowed down in punishment. The punishment is proportioned to the sin. They had done all this in pride; they should have the liberty and self-will wherein they had wanted, tamed or taken from them. Like animals with a heavy yoke upon them, they should live in disgraced slavery. The ten tribes were never able to withdraw their necks from the yoke. From the two tribes God removed it after the 70 years. But the same sins against the love of God and man brought on the same punishment. Our Lord again spake the woe against their covetousness¹⁶. It still shut them out from the service of God, or from receiving Him, their Redeemer. They still *spoiled the goods*¹⁷ of their brethren. In the last dreadful siege, ¹⁸ there were insatiable longings for plunder, searching-out of the houses of the rich; murder of men and insults of women were enacted as sports; they drank down what they had spoiled, with blood." And so the prophecy was for the third time fulfilled. They who withdraw from Christ's easy yoke of obedience shall not remove from the yoke of punishment; they who, through pride, will not bow down their necks, but make them stiff; shall be bent low, that they go not upright or haughtily any more. ¹⁹ The Lord alone shall be exalted in that Day. For it is an evil time. Perhaps he gives a more special meaning to the words of Amos²⁰, that a time of moral evil will be, or will end in, a time, full of evil, i. e. of sorest calamity.

4. In that day shall one take up a parable against you. The marshal or likeness may, in itself, be any speech in which one thing is likened to another; 1) "figured speech", 2) "proverb," and, since such proverbs were often sharp sayings against others, 3) "taunting figurative speech." But of the person himself it is always said, *he is made, becomes a proverb*²¹. To take up or utter such a speech against one, is, elsewhere, followed by the speech itself; ²² Thou shalt take up this parable against the king of Babylon, and say, &c. ²³ Shall not all these take up a parable against him, and say, &c. Although then the name of the Jews has passed into a proverb of reproach²⁴, this is not contained here. The parable here must be the same as the doleful lamentation, or dirge, which follows. No mockery is more cutting or fiendish, than to repeat in jest

¹³ עָשָׂה. ¹⁴ חֲסִידֵי אֵל וְשֹׂאֵי. ¹⁵ as in Am. iii. 1. p. 178. ¹⁶ S. Luke xvi. 13, 14. xi. 39. S. Matt. xxiii. 14. 23. 25. S. Mark xii. 40. ¹⁷ Heb. x. 34. ¹⁸ Jos. B. J. iv. 9. 10. add v. 1. 1. ¹⁹ Is. ii. 11. ²⁰ v. 13. ²¹ Deut. xxviii. 37. 1 Kings ix. 7. 2 Chr. vii. 20. Ps. xlv. 15. lxix. 12. Jer. xxiv. 9. Ezek. xiv. 8. ²² Is. xiv. 4. ²³ Hab. ii. 6. ²⁴ Jer. l. c.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 730. rable against you, and ^blament † with a doleful lamentation, and say, We be utterly ^bspoiled: [†]he hath changed the portion of my ^alamentation of lamentations. ¹ch. 1. 15.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 730. || turning away he hath divided our fields.
5 Therefore thou shalt have none that
^{||}Or, instead of restoring.

words by which one bemoans himself. The dirge which Israel should use of themselves in sorrow, the enemy shall take up in derision, as Satan does doubtless the self-condemnation of the damned. "Men do any evil, undergo any peril, to avoid shame. God brings before us that deepest and eternal shame," the shame and everlasting contempt, in presence of Himself and angels and devils and the good², that we may avoid shame by avoiding evil.

And lament with a doleful lamentation. The words in Hebrew are varied inflections of a word imitating the sounds of woe. It is the voice of woe in all languages, because the voice of nature. *Shall wail a wail of woe*³, It is the funeral dirge over the dead⁴, or of the living doomed to die⁵; it is sometimes the measured mourning of those employed to call forth sorrow⁶, or mourning generally⁷. Among such elegies, are still Zion-songs⁸, (elegies over the ruin of Zion,) and mournings for the dead⁹. The word woe is thrice¹⁰ repeated in Hebrew, in different forms, according to that solemn way, in which the extremest good or evil is spoken of; the threefold blessing, morning and evening, with the thrice-repeated name of God¹¹, impressing upon them the mystery which developed itself, as the Divinity of the Messiah and the personal agency of the Holy Spirit were unfolded to them. The dirge which follows is purposely in abrupt brief words, as those in trouble speak, with scarce breath for utterance. First, in two words, with perhaps a softened inflection¹², they express the utterness of their desolation. Then, in a threefold sentence, each clause consisting of three short words, they say what God had done, but name Him not, because they are angry with Him. God's chastisements irritate those whom they do not subdue¹³.

The portion of my people He changeth;

How removeth He (it) as to me!

To a rebel¹⁴ our fields He divideth.

They act the patriot. They, the rich, mourn over "the portion of my people" (they say) which they had themselves despoiled: they speak, (as men do,) as if things were what they ought to be: they hold to the theory and ignore the facts. As if, because God had divided it to His people, therefore it so remained! as if, because the poor were in theory and by God's law provided for, they were so in fact! Then they are enraged at God's dealings. He removeth the portion as to me; and to whom giveth He our fields? To a rebel! the Assyrian, or the Chaldee. They had deprived the poor of their portion of the Lord's land¹⁵. And now they marvel that God resumes the possession of His own, and requires from them, not the fourfold¹⁶ only of their spoil, but His whole heritage. Well might Assyrian or Chaldee, as they did, jeer at the word, renegade. They had not forsaken their gods;—but Israel, what was its whole history but a turning back? Hath a nation changed their gods, which yet are no gods? But My people have changed their glory for that which doth not profit.

Such was the meaning in their lips. The word divideth had the more bitterness, because it was the reversal of that first division at the entrance into Canaan. Then, with the use of this same word¹⁸, the division of the land of the heathen was appointed to them. Ezekiel, in his great symbolic vision, afterwards prophesied the restoration of Israel, with the use of this same term¹⁹. Joel spoke of the parting of their land, under this same term, as a sin of the heathen²⁰. Now, they say, God divideth our fields, not to us, but to the Heathen, whose lands He gave us. It was a change of act: in impenitence, they think it a change of purpose or will. But what lies in that, we be utterly despoiled? Despoiled of everything; of what they felt, temporal things; and of what they did not feel, spiritual things. Despoiled of the land of promise, the good things of this life, but also of the Presence of God in His Temple, the grace of the Lord, the image of God and everlasting glory. Their portion was changed, as to themselves and with others. As to themselves, riches, honor, pleasure, their own land, were changed into want, disgrace, suffering, captivity; and yet more bitter was it to see others gain what they by their own fault had forfeited. As time went on, and their transgression deepened, the exchange of the portion of that former people of God became more complete. The casting-off of the Jews was the grafting-in of the Gentiles. Seeing ye judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo! we turn to the Gentiles. And so they who were²² no people, became the people of God, and they who were His people, became, for the time,²³ not My people: and ²⁴ the adoption of sons, and the glory, and the covenants, and the lawgiving, and the service of God, and the promises, came to us Gentiles, since to us Christ Himself our God blessed for ever came, and made us His.

How hath He removed. The words do not say what He removed. They thought of His gifts, the words include Himself²⁵. They say How! in amazement. The change is so great and bitter, it cannot be said. Time, yea eternity cannot utter it. He hath divided our fields. The land was but the outward symbol of the inward heritage. Unjust gain, kept back, is restored with usury; ²⁶ it taketh away the life of the owners thereof. The vineyard whereof the Jews said, the inheritance shall be ours, was taken from them and given to others, even to Christians. So now is that awful change begun, when Christians, leaving God, their only unchanging Good, turn to earthly vanities, and, for the grace of God which He withdraws, have these only for their fleeting portion, until it shall be finally exchanged in the Day of Judgment. ²⁷ Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things; but now he is comforted and thou art tormented.

Israel defended himself in impenitence and self-righteousness. He was already the Pharisee. The doom of such was hopeless. The prophet breaks in with a renewed, Therefore.

¹ Rib. ² Ps. lii. 6, 7. Is. lxvi. 24. ³ נהה נהה נהה from the sounds, נהה pas-sim, in Am. v. 16. Ezek. ii. 10. נהה, i. q. נהה Ezek. xxx. 2. ⁴ Jer. xxxi. 15. ⁵ Ez. xxxii. 18. ⁶ Am. v. 16. Jer. ix. 17, 19. ⁷ 1 Sam. vii. 2. Jer. ix. 18. ⁸ נהה Furst. v. ⁹ נהה Id. ¹⁰ There is no plea for separating נהה in the sense, "it has been," like "fruit Ilium." By itself נהה would rather be, "it came to pass." נהה also, which follows, explains what the proverb and dirge is, as in Isaiah and Habakkuk. The single word נהה, actum est, is no dirge. The feminine and masculine together make up a whole as in Is. iii. 1; or it might stand as a superlative, as in the Eng. Marg. ¹¹ Num. vi. 24-26. ¹² נהה נהה The ~ for the ~ repeating the sound oo. ¹³ See ab. on Am. vi. 10. p. 207. ¹⁴ שובב, "backsliding," occurs Jer. xxxi. 22. and, of Ammon, xlix. 4. This rendering is favoured by the contrast between the ~ and the שובב, and gives an adequate meaning to the ~ in the ל שובב; whereas, as part of the infinitive, it is superfluous, and unusual as superfluous. ¹⁵ See on Hos. ix. 3. p. 55, 6. ¹⁶ Ex. xxii. 1. 2 Sam. xii. 6. S. Luke xix. 5. ¹⁷ Jer. ii. 11. ¹⁸ Num. xxvi. 53, 55, 6. Josh. xiii. 7. xiv. 5. xviii. 2, 5, 10. xix. 51. ¹⁹ xlvi. 21. ²⁰ iv. 2. [iii. 2. Eng.] ²¹ Acts xiii. 46. ²² Rom. x. 19. ²³ Hos. i. 9. ²⁴ Rom. ix. 4, 6. ²⁵ יס is mostly transitive; it was intransitive ii. 3, and is so (if not Kal) Prov. xvii. 13. ²⁶ Prov. i. 19. ²⁷ S. Luke xvi. 25.

Before CHRIST shall^k cast a cord by lot in the congregation of the Lord.
cir. 730.

^kDeut. 32. 8, 9. 6 || †^l Prophecy ye not, say they to them that prophecy: they shall not prophecy to them, that they shall not take shame.
|| Or, Prophecy not as they prophecy.
† Heb. Drop, &c. Ezek. 21. 2. ^l Isai. 30. 10. Amos 2. 12. & 7. 16.

He had already prophesied that they should lose the lands which they had unjustly gotten, the land which they had profaned. He had described it in their own impenitent words. Now on the impenitence he pronounces the judgment which impenitence entails, that they should not be restored.

5. Therefore thou shalt have none that shall cast a cord by lot in the congregation of the Lord. Thou, in the first instance, is the impenitent Jew of that day. God had promised by Hosea¹ to restore Judah; shortly after, the Prophet himself foretells it². Now he forewarns these and such as these, that they would have no portion in it. They had³ neither part nor lot in this matter. They, the not-Israel then, were the images and ensamples of the not-Israel afterwards, those who seem to be God's people and are not; members of the body, not of the soul of the Church; who have a sort of faith, but have not love. Such was afterwards the Israel after the flesh, which was broken off, while the true Israel was restored, passing out of themselves into Christ. Such, at the end, shall be those, who, being admitted by Christ into their portion, renounce the world in word not in deed. Such shall have "4 no portion for ever in the congregation of the Lord. For⁵ nothing defiled shall enter there, nor whatsoever worketh abomination or a lie, but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life."

The ground of their condemnation is their resistance to light and known truth. These not only⁶ entered not in, themselves, but, being hinderers of God's word, them that were entering in, they hindered.

6. Prophecy ye not, say they to them that prophecy; they shall not prophecy to them, that they shall not take shame. The words are very emphatic in Hebrew, from their briefness, *Prophecy not; they shall indeed prophecy; they shall not prophecy to these; shame shall not depart*⁷. The people, the false prophets, the politicians, forbade God and Micah to prophecy; Prophecy not. God, by Micah, recites their prohibition to themselves, and forewarns them of the consequences.

Prophecy ye not, lit. drop not. Amaziah and the God-opposing party had already given an ungodly meaning to the word⁸. 'Drop not,' 'distil not,' thus unceasingly, these same words, ever warning, ever telling of⁹ *lamentation and mourning and woe; prophesying not good concerning us, but evil*¹⁰. So their descendants commanded the Apostles¹¹ not to speak at all or to teach in the Name of Jesus.¹² *Did we not straitly command you, that ye should not teach in this Name?*¹³ This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place and the law. God answers; They shall certainly prophecy. The Hebrew word is emphatic¹⁴. The Prophets had their commission from God, and Him they must obey, whether Israel¹⁵ would hear or whether they would forbear. So must Micah and Isaiah¹⁶ now, or Jeremiah¹⁷, Ezekiel, and the rest afterwards. They shall not prophecy to these. He does not say only, They shall not prophecy to them, but, to these; i.e. they shall prophecy to others who would receive their words: God's word would not be stayed; they who would hearken shall never be deprived of their portion; but to these who despise, they shall not prophecy. It shall be all one, as though they did not prophecy; the soft rain shall not bedew them. The barn-floor shall be dry, while the fleece is moist¹⁸. So God says by Isaiah¹⁹; I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it. The dew of God's word shall be transferred to others. But so shame [lit. *shames*²⁰, manifold shame,] shall not depart, but shall rest upon them for ever. God would have turned away the shame from them; but they, despising His warnings, drew it to themselves. It was the natural fruit of their doings; it was in its natural home with them. God spake to them, that they might be freed from it. They silenced His Prophets; deafened themselves to His words; so it departed not. So our Lord says²¹, Now ye say, we see; therefore your sin remaineth; and S. John Baptist²², The wrath of God abideth on him. It hath not now first to come. It is not some new thing to be avoided, turned aside. The sinner has but to remain as he is; the shame encompasseth him already, and only departeth not. The wrath of God is already upon him, and abideth on him.

Before CHRIST 7 ¶ O thou that art named the house of Jacob, is the spirit of the Lord || straitened? are these his doings? do not my || Or, shortened? words do good to him that walketh † up-† Heb. upright? rightly?

7. O thou that art named the house of Jacob; as Isaiah says²³, Hear ye this, O house of Jacob, which are called by the name of Israel—which make mention of the God of Israel, not in truth, nor in righteousness. For they call themselves of the holy city, and stay themselves upon the God of Israel. They boasted of what convicted them of faithlessness. They relied on being what in spirit they had ceased to be, what in deeds they denied, children of a believing forefather. It is the same temper which we see more at large in their descendants; ²⁴*We be Abraham's seed and were never in bondage to any man; how sayest Thou, ye shall be made free?* ²⁵*Abraham is our Father.* It is the same which S. John Baptist and our Lord and S. Paul reproveth. ²⁶*Think not to say within yourselves, we have Abraham to our father.* ²⁷*If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham.* Now ye seek to kill Me, a Man that hath told you the truth—This did not Abraham. ²⁸*He is not a Jew which is one outwardly, neither is that circumcision which is outward in the flesh.—Behold thou art called a Jew, and restest in the law and makest thy boast of God, and knowest His Will and approvest the things that are more excellent—&c.* The Prophet answers the unexpressed objections of those who forbade to prophecy evil. 'Such could not be of God,' these said; 'for God was pledged by His promises to the house of Jacob. It would imply change in God, if He were to cast off those whom He had chosen.' Micah answers; 'not God is changed, but you.' God's promise was to Jacob, not to those who were but named Jacob, who called themselves after the name of their father, but did not his deeds. *The Spirit of the Lord was not straitened*²⁹, so that He was less long-suffering than

¹ See on Hos. v. 11. p. 42, 3. ² ii. 12. ³ Acts viii. 21. ⁴ Rib. ⁵ Rev. xxi. 27. ⁶ S. Luke xi. 52. ⁷ Poc. gives this distribution of the words from Abulwalid v. יצא. ⁸ See on Am. vii. 16. p. 214. ⁹ Ezek. ii. 10. ¹⁰ 1 Kings xxii. 18. ¹¹ Acts iv. 18. v. 40. ¹² Ib. v. 28. ¹³ Ib. vi. 13. ¹⁴ יצא. ¹⁵ Ezek. ii. 5. 7. ¹⁶ xxviii. 9-14. 22. ¹⁷ i. 7. 17. xxvi. 10-15. ¹⁸ Judg. vi. 37.

¹⁹ Is. v. 6. ²⁰ כְּלִמָּתָא אֲשֶׁר מִשְׁמַע, omnigenæ salutes, manifold salvation. ²¹ S. John ix. 41. ²² Ib. iii. 36. ²³ xlvi. 1. ²⁴ S. John viii. 33. ²⁵ Ib. 39. ²⁶ S. Matt. iii. 9. ²⁷ S. John viii. 39, 40. ²⁸ Rom. ii. 17-28. ²⁹ קָדַשׁ רִחוּם, (as in part Zech. xi. 8.) as opposed to יִצְחָק אֲדָמָה (Ex. xxxiv. 6. &c. longanimis, longsuffering,) and i. q. קָדַשׁ אֲדָמָה Prov. xx. 17. coll. 29.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 730.

† Heb.
yesterday.
† Heb. over against a garment.
‡ Or, wives.

8 Even † of late my people is risen up as an enemy: ye pull off the robe † with the garment from them that pass by securely as men averse from war.

9 The || women of my people have ye heretofore. These, which He threatened and of which they complained, were not His doings, not what He of His own Nature did, not what He loved to do, not His, as the Author or Cause of them, but theirs. God is Good, but to those who can receive good, *the upright in heart*¹. God is only Loving unto Israel. He is all Love; nothing but² Love: all His ways are Love; but it follows, unto what Israel, the true Israel, the pure of heart.³ All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth; but to whom? unto such as keep His covenant and His testimonies.⁴ The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting; but unto them that fear Him. But, they becoming evil, His good became to them evil. Light, wholesome and gladdening to the healthful, hurts weak eyes. That which is straight cannot suit or fit with the crooked. Amend your crookedness, and God's ways will be straight to you. Do not My words do good? He doth speak⁵ good words and comfortable words. They are not only good, but do good.⁶ His word is with power. Still it is with those who walk uprightly; whether those who forsake not, or those who return to, the way of righteousness. God flattereth not, deceiveth not, promiseth not what He will not do. He cannot⁷ speak peace where there is no peace. As He saith,⁸ Behold the goodness and severity of God; on them which fell, severity, but towards thee, goodness, if thou continue in His goodness. God Himself could not make a heaven for the proud or envious. Heaven would be to them a hell.

8. Even of late [lit. *yesterday*⁹.] “¹⁰ He imputeth not past sins, but those recent and, as it were, of yesterday.” *My people is risen up vehemently*¹¹. God upbraideth them tenderly by the title, Mine own people, as S. John complaineth¹², He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. God became not their enemy, but they arose as one man,—is risen up, the whole of it, as His. In Him they might have had peace and joy and assured gladness, but they arose in rebellion against Him, requiting Him evil for good, (as bad Christians do to Christ,) and brought war upon their own heads. This they did by their sins against their brethren. Casting off the love of man, they alienated themselves from the love of God.

Ye pull off [strip off violently¹³] the robe with the garment, lit. over against the cloak. The *salmah*¹⁴ is the large enveloping cloak, which was worn loosely over the other dress, and served by night for a covering¹⁵. *Eder*¹⁶, translated robe, is probably not any one garment, but the remaining dress, the comely, becoming¹⁷, array of the person. These they stripped violently off from persons, peaceable, unoffending, off their guard, *passing by securely, men averse from war*¹⁸ and strife. These they stripped of their raiment by day, leaving them half-naked, and of cast out from their pleasant houses; from their children have ye taken away my glory for ever.

10 Arise ye, and depart; for this is not ^m your rest: because it is ⁿ polluted, it shall

Before
CHRIST
cir. 730.

^m Deut. 12. 9.
ⁿ Lev. 18. 25, 28.
Jer. 3. 2.

their covering for the night. So making war against God's peaceful people, they, as it were, made war against God.

9. The women of my people have ye cast out from their pleasant houses, [lit. from her pleasant house,] each from her home. These were probably the widows of those whom they had stripped. Since the houses were their's, they were widows; and so their spoilers were at war with those whom God had committed to their special love, whom He had declared the objects of His own tender care, the widows and the fatherless. The widows they *drove vehemently forth*¹⁹, as having no portion in the inheritance which God had given them, as God had driven out their enemies before them, each from her pleasant house, the home where she had lived with her husband and children in delight and joy.

From [off] their [young²⁰] children have ye taken away My glory. Primarily, the glory, comeliness, was the fitting apparel which God had given them²¹, and laid upon them²², and which these oppressors stripped off from them. But it includes all the gifts of God, wherewith God would array them. Instead of the holy home of parental care, the children grew up in want and neglect, away from all the ordinances of God, it may be, in a strange land. For ever. They never repented, never made restitution; but so they incurred the special woe of those who ill-used the unprotected, the widow, and the fatherless. The words for ever anticipate the punishment. The punishment is according to the sin. They never ceased their oppression. They, with the generation who should come after them, should be deprived of God's glory, and cast out of His land for ever.

10. Arise ye and depart. Go your way, as being cast out of God's care and land. It matters not whither they went. For this is not your rest. As ye have done, so shall it be done unto you. As ye cast out the widow and the fatherless, so shall ye be cast out; as ye gave no rest to those averse from war, so shall ye have none.²³ He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity; he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. The land was given to them as a temporary rest, a symbol and earnest of the everlasting rest to the obedient. So Moses spake²⁴, ye are not as yet come to the rest²⁵ and the inheritance which the Lord your God giveth you. But when ye go over Jordan, and dwell in the land which the Lord your God giveth you to inherit, and when He giveth you rest²⁶ from your enemies round about, so that ye dwell in safety &c. And Joshua²⁷, Remember the word which Moses commanded you, saying, The Lord your God giveth you rest²⁸. But the Psalmist had warned them, that, if they hardened their hearts like their forefathers, they too would *not enter into His rest*²⁹.

should have been worn together with the לבוש.¹⁷ This meaning seems to lie in the root; comp. סלסול, array, apparel, dress.¹⁸ שׁוּבִי is doubtless an adjective form, distinct from the participle שׁוֹבֵי, (Is. lix. 20.) like סוּד Jer. ii. 21. ¹⁹ הִרְעִי is doubly intensive, as the intensive form with the emphatic ן. It is the word used of God's driving out the nations before Israel, (Ex. Jud. &c.) or of man being driven out of Paradise, (Gen. iii. 24.) Hagar being cast out. (Gen. xxi. 10.) The word itself, by its rough sound, expresses the more of harshness; and that as opposed to softness, הִרְעִי. This is the same word as that rendered delicate, i. 16. ²⁰ בָּנֵיהֶם.

²¹ as Hos. ii. 11. רְעִי I. H. Mich. ²² Ez. xvi. 14. Id. ²³ Rev. xiii. 10. ²⁴ Deut. xii. 9. 10. add 1 Kings viii. 56. ²⁵ הַנַּחֲמָה, the same word. ²⁶ הַנַּחֲמָה. ²⁷ Ps. xcv. 11. comp. לְמַחֲמָה. ²⁸ נַחֲמָה. ²⁹ נַחֲמָה.

¹ Ps. lxxiii. 1. ² The force of אֵל. ³ Ps. xxv. 10. ⁴ Ps. ciii. 17. S. Luke i. 50. ⁵ Zech. i. 13. ⁶ S. Luke iv. 32. ⁷ Jer. vi. 14. ⁸ Rom. xi. 22. ⁹ אֶתְמַלֵּא is i. q. אֶתְמַלֵּא, in Is. xxx. 33. ¹⁰ S. Jer. ¹¹ קָמָה in Isaiah (xlv. 26. lviii. 12. lxi. 4.) transitive, but only of the raising up, rebuilding of ruins. The use of קָמָה actively in that one sense is no ground for taking it so, where the idea is different. To raise up an adversary is expressed by הִקָּמָה Mic. v. 4. Am. vi. 14. 1 Kings xi. 14. and so raising up evil also. ¹² i. 11. ¹³ הִרְעִי. This is intensive, as in Arabic. ¹⁴ שָׁלֵחַ here and Ex. xxii. 8. i. q. שָׁלֵחַ, elsewhere. ¹⁵ Deut. xxii. 17. ¹⁶ אֶדֶר occurs here only. There is no ground to identify it with the well-known אֶדֶר. It is not likely that the common garment should have been called, this once, by a different name; nor that the אֶדֶר, a wide enveloping garment, (see on Jonah iii. 6. p. 279. n. 9.)

Before
CHRIST
cir. 730.

destroy you, even with a sore destruction.
11 If a man || ° walking in the spirit and falsehood do lie, saying, I will prophesy Or, walk with the wind, and lie falsely. ° Ezek. 13. 3.

Because it is polluted [lit. because of its pollution¹] by idolatry, by violence, by uncleanness. So Moses (using the same word) says, *the land is defiled*² by the abominations of the heathen; and warns them, that the land spue you not out, when you defile it, as it spued out the nations which were before you. Ezekiel speaks of that defilement³, as the ground why God expelled Israel⁴. It shall destroy you, even with a sore [lit. sharp] *destruction*⁵. It is a sore thing to abuse the creatures of God to sin, and it is unfit that we should use what we have abused. Hence Holy Scripture speaks, as though even the inanimate creation took part with God, made subject to vanity, not willingly, and could not endure those who employed it against His Will.

The words, Arise, depart ye, for this is not your rest, became a sort of sacred proverb, spoken anew to the soul, whenever it would find rest out of God. "We are bidden to think of no rest for ourselves in any things of the world; but, as it were, arising from the dead, to stretch upwards, and walk after the Lord our God, and say, My soul cleaveth hard after Thee. This if we neglect, and will not hear Him Who saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light, we shall indeed slumber, but shall be deceived and shall not find rest; for where Christ enlighteneth not the risen soul, what seemeth to be rest, is trouble." All rest is wearisome which is not in Thee, O our God.

11. If a man walking in the spirit and falsehood, lit. in spirit [not My Spirit] and falsehood, i. e. in a lying spirit; such as they, whose woe Ezekiel pronounces⁷, *Woe unto the foolish prophets who walk after their own spirit and what they have not seen*⁸; prophets out of their own hearts, who⁹ prophesied a vision of falsehood, and a destruction and nothingness¹⁰; prophesied falsehood; yea, prophets of the deceit of their hearts. These, like the true prophets, walked in spirit; as Isaiah speaks of walking in righteousness¹¹, and Solomon of one walking in the frowardness of the mouth¹². Their habitual converse was in a spirit, but of falsehood. If such an one do lie, saying, I will prophesy unto thee of wine and strong drink. Man's conscience must needs have some plea in speaking falsely of God. The false prophets had to please the rich men, to embolden them in their self-indulgence, to tell them that God would not punish. They doubtless spoke of God's temporal promises to His people, the land flowing with milk and honey, His promises of abundant harvest and vintage, and assured them, that God would not withdraw these, that He was not so precise about His law. Micah tells them in plain words, what it all came to; it was a prophesying of wine and strong drink.

He shall even be the prophet of this people, lit. and shall be bedewing this people. He uses the same words, which scornors of Israel and Judah employed in forbidding to prophesy. They said, drop not; forbidding God's word as a wearisome dropping. It wore away their patience, not their hearts of stone. He tells them, who might speak to them without wearying, of whose words they would never tire, who might do

Before
CHRIST
cir. 730.

unto thee of wine and of strong drink; he shall even be the prophet of this people.
12 ¶ P I will surely assemble, O Jacob, P ch. 4. 6, 7.

habitually¹³ what they forbade to God,—one who, in the Name of God, set them at ease in their sensual indulgences. This is the secret of the success of every thing opposed to God and Christ. Man wants a God. God has made it a necessity of our nature to crave after Him. Spiritual, like natural, hunger, debarred from or loathing wholesome food, must be stilled, stifled, with what will appease its gnawings. Our natural intellect longs for Him; for it cannot understand itself without Him. Our restlessness longs for Him; to rest upon. Our helplessness longs for Him, to escape from the unbearable pressure of our unknown futurity. Our imagination craves for Him; for, being made for the Infinite, it cannot be content with the finite. Aching affections long for Him; for no creature can soothe them. Our dissatisfied conscience longs for Him, to teach it and make it one with itself. But man does not want to be responsible, nor to owe duty; still less to be liable to penalties for disobeying. The Christian, not the natural man, longs that his whole being should tend to God. The natural man wishes to be well-rid of what sets him ill at ease, not to belong to God. And the horrible subtlety of false teaching, in each age or country, is to meet its own favourite requirements, without calling for self-sacrifice or self-oblation, to give it a god, such as it would have, such as might content it. "The people willeth to be deceived, be it deceived," is a true proverb. Men turn away their ears from the truth¹⁵ which they dislike; and so are turned unto fables which they like. They who receive not the love of the truth,—believe a lie¹⁶. If men will not retain God in their knowledge, God giveth them over to an undistinguishing mind¹⁷. They who would not receive our Lord, coming in His Father's Name, have ever since, as He said, received them who came in their own¹⁸. Men teach their teachers how they wish to be mistaught, and receive the echo of their wishes as the Voice of God.

12. I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee; I will surely gather the remnant of Israel. God's mercy on the penitent and believing being the end of all His threatenings, the mention of it often bursts in abruptly. Christ is ever the Hope as the End of prophecy, ever before the Prophets' mind. The earthquake and fire precede the still small voice of peace in Him. What seems then sudden to us, is connected in truth. The Prophet had said¹⁹, where was not their rest and how they should be cast forth; he saith at once how they should be gathered to their everlasting rest. He had said, what promises of the false prophets would not be fulfilled²⁰. But, despair being the most deadly enemy of the soul, he does not take away their false hopes, without shewing them the true mercies in store for them. "Think not," he would say, "that I am only a prophet of ill. The captivity foretold will indeed now come, and God's mercies will also come, although not in the way, which these speak of." The false prophets spoke of worldly abundance ministering to sensuality, and of unbroken security. He tells of God's mercies, but after chastisement, to the remnant of Israel. But the restoration is complete, far beyond

¹ as pointed in most accurate copies, without Metheg.

² נִשְׁחָטָה Lev. xviii. 28.

³ Ezek. xxxvi. 17.

⁴ Ezek. xxxvi. 18, add Jer. ii. 7.

⁵ This is the common rendering of חָבַל. Others, with Sal. B. Mel. have understood it of travail-pains, (Cant. viii. 5. Ps. vii. 15.) but this would have the opposite sense of bringing forth, re-birth, not of ejection. (See Is. lxvi. 8.) The sharp bitter pang would express the pains of travail, not its fruitlessness or that they were cast out any whither.

⁶ Fruitlessness of travail-pangs is expressed, if intended, (as in Is. xxvi. 18.)

⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁰ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹¹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹² Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹³ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁴ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁵ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁶ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

²⁰ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

²¹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

²² Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

²³ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

²⁴ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

²⁵ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

²⁶ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

²⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

²⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

²⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

³⁰ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

³¹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

³² Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

³³ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

³⁴ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

³⁵ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

³⁶ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

³⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

³⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

³⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁴⁰ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁴¹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁴² Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁴³ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁴⁴ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁴⁵ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁴⁶ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁴⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁴⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁴⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁵⁰ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁵¹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁵² Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁵³ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁵⁴ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁵⁵ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁵⁶ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁵⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁵⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁵⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁶⁰ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁶¹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁶² Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁶³ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁶⁴ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁶⁵ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁶⁶ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁶⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁶⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁶⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁷⁰ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁷¹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁷² Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁷³ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁷⁴ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁷⁵ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁷⁶ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁷⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁷⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁷⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁸⁰ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁸¹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁸² Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁸³ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁸⁴ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁸⁵ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁸⁶ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁸⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁸⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁸⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁹⁰ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁹¹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁹² Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁹³ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁹⁴ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁹⁵ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁹⁶ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁹⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁹⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

⁹⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁰⁰ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁰¹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁰² Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁰³ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁰⁴ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁰⁵ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁰⁶ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁰⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁰⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹⁰⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹¹⁰ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹¹¹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹¹² Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹¹³ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹¹⁴ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹¹⁵ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹¹⁶ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹¹⁷ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹¹⁸ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

¹¹⁹ Jer. xiv. 14, חָבַל שָׁמַיִם, as here חָבַל שָׁמַיִם.

Before CHRIST
cir. 730.
Jer. 31. 10. all of thee; I will surely gather the remnant of Israel; I will put them together as the sheep of Bozrah, as the flock in the midst of their fold: they shall make great noise by reason of the multitude of men.
Ezek. 36. 37.

Before CHRIST
cir. 730.
Hos. 3. 5. 13 The breaker is come up before them: they have broken up, and have passed through the gate, and are gone out by it: and their king shall pass before them, and the Lord on the head of them.
Is. 52. 12.

their then condition. He had foretold the desolation of Samaria¹, the captivity of Judah²; he foretells the restoration of all Jacob, as one. The images are partly taken (as is the Prophets' wont,) from that first deliverance from Egypt³. Then, as the image of the future growth under persecution, God multiplied His people exceedingly⁴; then ⁵ the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud to lead them the way; then God brought them up⁶ out of the house of bondage⁷. But their future prison-house was to be no land of Goshen. It was to be a captivity and a dispersion at once, as Hosea had already foretold⁸. So he speaks of them emphatically⁹, as a great throng, assembling I will assemble, O Jacob, all of thee; gathering I will gather the remnant of Israel. The word, which is used of the gathering of a flock or its lambs¹⁰, became, from Moses' prophecy¹¹, a received word of the gathering of Israel from the dispersion of the captivity¹². The return of the Jews from Babylon was but a faint shadow of the fulfilment. For, ample as were the terms of the decrees of Cyrus¹³ and Artaxerxes¹⁴, and widely as that of Cyrus was diffused¹⁵, the restoration was essentially that of Judah, i. e. Judah Benjamin and Levi¹⁶: the towns, whose inhabitants returned, were those of Judah and Benjamin¹⁷; the towns, to which they returned, were of the two tribes. It was not a gathering of all Jacob; and of the three tribes who returned, there were but few gathered, and they had not even an earthly king, nor any visible Presence of God. The words began to be fulfilled in the many¹⁸ tens of thousands who believed at our Lord's first Coming; and all Jacob, that is, all who were Israelites indeed, the remnant according to the election of grace¹⁹, were gathered within the one fold of the Church, under One Shepherd. It shall be fully fulfilled, when, in the end, the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, and all Israel shall be saved²⁰. All Jacob is the same as the remnant of Israel, the true Israel which remains when the false severed itself off; all the seed-corn, when the chaff was winnowed away. So then, whereas they were now scattered, then, God saith, I will put them together [in one fold] as the sheep of Bozrah, which abounded in sheep²¹, and was also a strong city of Edom²²; denoting how believers should be fenced within the Church, as by a strong wall, against which the powers of darkness should not prevail, and the wolf should howl around the fold, yet be unable to enter it, and Edom and the heathen should become part of the inheritance of Christ²³. As a flock in the midst of their fold, at rest,²⁴ like sheep, still and subject to their shepherd's voice. So shall these, having one faith and One Spirit, in meekness and simplicity, obey the one rule of truth. Nor shall it be a small number;²⁵ for the place where they shall be gathered shall be too narrow to contain them, as is said in Isaiah; Give place to me, that I may dwell²⁵.

They shall make great noise (it is the same word as our hum, "the hum of men,") by reason of the multitude of men. He explains his image, as does Ezekiel²⁶, And ye are My flock, the flock of My pasture; men are ye; I, your God, saith the Lord God: and, ²⁷ As a flock of holy things, as the flock of Jerusalem in her solemn feasts; so shall the waste cities be full of a flock of men, and they shall know that I am the Lord. So many shall they be, that "throughout the whole world they shall make a great and public sound in praising God, filling Heaven and the green pastures of Paradise with a mighty hum of praise;" as St. John saw²⁸ a great multitude which no man could number, "with one united voice praising the Good Shepherd, Who smoothed for them all rugged places, and evened them by His Own Steps, Himself the Guide of their way and the Gate of Paradise, as He saith, I am the Door; through Whom, bursting through and going before, being also the Door of the way, the flock of believers shall break through It. But this Shepherd is their Lord and King." Not their King only, but the Lord God; so that this, too, bears witness that Christ is God.

13. The Breaker is come up (gone up) before them; they have broken up, (broken through²⁹) and have passed the gate, and have gone forth. The image is not of conquest, but of deliverance. They break through, not to enter in but to pass through the gate and go forth. The wall of the city is ordinarily broken through, in order to make an entrance³⁰, or to secure to a conqueror the power of entering in³¹ at any time, or by age and decay³². But here the object is expressed, to go forth. Plainly then they were confined before, as in a prison; and the gate of the prison was burst open, to set them free. It is then the same image as when God says by Isaiah³³; I will say to the North, give up; and to the South, Hold not back, or ³⁴ Go ye forth of Babylon, Say ye, the Lord hath redeemed His servant Jacob; or, with the same reminiscence of God's visible leading of His people out of Egypt, ³⁵ Depart ye, depart ye; for ye shall not go out with haste, nor yet by flight, for the Lord God shall go before you, and the God of Israel will be your rearward; or as Hosea describes their restoration³⁶; Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together and appoint themselves one Head, and they shall go up out of the land³⁷. Elsewhere, in Isaiah, the spiritual meaning of the deliverance from the prison is more distinctly brought out, as the work of our Redeemer³⁸. I will give Thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles, to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from ¹ i. 6. ² i. 16. ii. 4. ³ Hengst. Christ. i. 499.

⁴ Ex. i. 12. ⁵ Ib. xiii. 21. ⁶ Ex. iii. 8, 17. Lev. xi. 45. The people went up. Ex. xiii. 18, add xii. 38. i. 10.
vi. 11. p. 42, 3. ix. 17. p. 61, 2. ⁷ See below, vi. 4. ⁸ See on Hos. 11. p. 11. ⁹ See below, iv. 6. Ps. cvi. 47. cvii. 3. Is. xi. 12. xliii. 5. liv. 7. lvi. 8. Zeph. iii. 19, 20. Jer. xxiii. 3. xxix. 14. xxxi. 8, 10. xxxii. 37. Ezek. xi. 17. xx. 34, 41. xxviii. 25. xxxiv. 13. xxxvii. 21. xxxviii. 8. xxxix. 27. Zech. x. 10. ¹⁰ Is. xl. 11. xliii. 14. ¹¹ Deut. xxx. 3, 4. see Neh. i. 9. ¹² See below, iv. 6. Ps. cvi. 47. cvii. 3. Is. xi. 12. xliii. 5. liv. 7. lvi. 8. Zeph. iii. 19, 20. Jer. xxiii. 3. xxix. 14. xxxi. 8, 10. xxxii. 37. Ezek. xi. 17. xx. 34, 41. xxviii. 25. xxxiv. 13. xxxvii. 21. xxxviii. 8. xxxix. 27. Zech. x. 10. ¹³ Ezr. i. 2-4. ¹⁴ vii. 13. ¹⁵ Ib. i. 1. ¹⁶ Ib. i. 5. ii. 1. iv. 1. x. 7, 9. Josephus, who alone mentions that Ezra sent a copy of Artaxerxes' letter to him, "to all those of his nation who were in Media," and that "many of them, taking their property, came to Babylon, longing for the return to Jerusalem," adds, "but the whole people of Israelites [i. e. the great mass] remained where they were."

Ant. xi. 5. 2. ¹⁷ Ezr. ii. Neh. vii. ¹⁸ μυστρίδες Acts xxi. 20. ¹⁹ Rom. xi. 5. ²⁰ Ib. xi. 25, 6. ²¹ Is. xxxiv. 6. ²² See ab. on Am. i. 12. p. 160, 7. ²³ See ab. on Am. ix. 12. p. 224. ²⁴ Rev. vii. 9. ²⁵ xxxiv. 31. ²⁶ Ib. xxxvi. 38. ²⁷ Rev. vii. 9. ²⁸ See ab. on Am. ix. 12. p. 224. ²⁹ See below, vi. 4. ³⁰ Is. xl. 11. xliii. 14. ³¹ Prov. xxv. 23. 2 Kgs. xiv. 13. 2 Chr. xxv. 23. xxvi. 6. ³² Ps. lxxx. 13. lxxxix. 41. Is. v. 5. Neh. ii. 13. ³³ Prov. xxv. 23. 2 Kgs. xiv. 13. 2 Chr. xxv. 23. xxvi. 6. ³⁴ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ³⁵ 2 Chr. xxxii. 5. ³⁶ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ³⁷ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ³⁸ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ³⁹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁴⁰ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁴¹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁴² Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁴³ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁴⁴ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁴⁵ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁴⁶ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁴⁷ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁴⁸ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁴⁹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁵⁰ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁵¹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁵² Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁵³ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁵⁴ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁵⁵ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁵⁶ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁵⁷ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁵⁸ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁵⁹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁶⁰ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁶¹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁶² Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁶³ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁶⁴ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁶⁵ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁶⁶ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁶⁷ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁶⁸ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁶⁹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁷⁰ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁷¹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁷² Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁷³ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁷⁴ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁷⁵ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁷⁶ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁷⁷ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁷⁸ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁷⁹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁸⁰ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁸¹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁸² Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁸³ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁸⁴ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁸⁵ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁸⁶ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁸⁷ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁸⁸ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁸⁹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁹⁰ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁹¹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁹² Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁹³ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁹⁴ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁹⁵ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁹⁶ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁹⁷ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁹⁸ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ⁹⁹ Is. lxi. 11, 12. ¹⁰⁰ Is. lxi. 11, 12.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

CHAPTER III.

1 The cruelty of the princes. 5 The falsehood of the prophets. 8 The security of them both.

the prison, them that sit in darkness out of the prison-house; and¹ the Spirit of the Lord God is upon Me, because the Lord hath anointed Me to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound.

From this passage, the "Breaker-through" was one of the titles of the Christ, known to the Jews², as One Who should be "from below and from above" also; and from it they believed that "captives should come up from Gehenna, and the She-chinah," or the Presence of God, "at their head." "He then, Who shall break the way, the King and Lord Who shall go up before them, shall be the Good Shepherd, Who puts them together in the fold. And this He doth when, as He saith, He putteth forth His own sheep, and He goeth before them, and the sheep follow Him, for they know His Voice. How doth He go before them but by suffering for them, leaving them an example of suffering, and opening the entrance of Paradise? The Good Shepherd goeth up to the Cross,³ and is lifted up from the earth, laying down His Life for His sheep, to draw all men unto Him. He goeth up, trampling on death by His Resurrection; He goeth up above the heaven of heavens, and sitteth on the Right Hand of the Father, opening the way before them, so that the flock, in their lowliness, may arrive where the Shepherd went before in His Majesty. And when He thus breaketh through and openeth the road, they also break through and pass through the gate and go out by it, by that Gate, namely, whereof the Psalmist saith⁴, This is the Gate of the Lord; the righteous shall enter into It. What other is this Gate than that same Passion of Christ, beside which there is no gate, no way whereby any can enter into life? Through that open portal, which the lance of the soldier made in His Side when crucified, and there came thereout Blood and Water, they shall pass and go through, even as the children of Israel passed through the Red Sea, which divided before them, when Pharaoh, his chariots and horsemen, were drowned." "He will be in their hearts, and will teach and lead them; He will shew them the way of salvation,⁵ guiding their feet into the way of peace, and they shall pass through the strait and narrow gate which leadeth unto life; of which it is written⁶, Enter ye in at the strait gate; because strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. And their King shall pass before them, as He did, of old, in the figure of the cloud, of which Moses said⁷, If Thy Presence go not, carry us not up hence; and wherein shall it be known that I have found grace in Thy sight, I and Thy people, is it not in that Thou goest up with us? and as He then did when He passed out of this world to the Father. And the Lord on (that is, at) the head of them, as of His army. "For the Lord is His Name, and He is the Head, they the members; He the King, they the people; He the Shepherd, they the sheep of His pasture. And of this passing through He spake⁸, By Me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture. For a man entereth in, when, receiving the faith, he becomes a sheep of this Shepherd, and goeth out, when he closeth this present life, and then findeth the pastures of unfading, ever-

AND I said, Hear, I pray you, O heads of Jacob, and ye princes of the house of Israel; Is it not for you to know judgment? Jer. 5. 4, 5.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

lasting life;" "passing from this pilgrimage to his home, from faith to sight, from labour to reward." Again, as describing the Christian's life here, it speaks of progress. "Whoso shall have entered in, must not remain in the state wherein he entered, but must go forth into the pasture; so that, in entering in should be the beginning, in going forth and finding pasture, the perfecting of graces. He who entereth in, is contained within the bounds of the world; he who goeth forth, goes, as it were, beyond all created things, and, counting as nothing all things seen, shall find pasture above the Heavens, and shall feed upon the Word of God, and say⁹, The Lord is my Shepherd, (and feedeth me,) I can lack nothing. But this going forth can only be through Christ; as it followeth, and the Lord at the head of them." Nor, again, is this in itself easy, or done for us without any effort of our own. All is of Christ. The words express the closeness of the relation between the Head and the members; and what He, our King and Lord, doth, they do, because He Who did it for them, doth it in them. The same words are used of both, shewing that what they do, they do by virtue of His Might, treading in His steps, walking where He has made the way plain, and by His Spirit. What they do, they do, as belonging to Him. He breaketh through, or, rather, in all is the Breaker-through. They, having broken through, pass on, because He passeth before them. He will break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron. He breaketh through whatever would hold us back or oppose us, all might of sin and death and Satan, as Moses opened the Red Sea, for¹⁰ a way for the ransomed to pass over; and so He saith, I will go before thee; I will break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron, and I will give thee the treasures of darkness, and hidden riches of secret places. So then Christians, following Him, the Captain of their salvation, strengthened by His grace, must burst the bars of the flesh and of the world, the chains and bonds of evil passions and habits, force themselves through the narrow way and narrow gate, do violence to themselves,¹¹ endure hardness, as good soldiers of Jesus Christ. The title of our Lord, the Breaker-through¹², and the saying, they break through, together express the same as the New Testament doth in regard to our being partakers of the sufferings of Christ. Joint heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together. If we be dead with Him, we shall also live with Him; if we suffer, we shall also reign with Him. Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh—arm yourselves likewise with the same mind.

The words may include also the removal of the souls of the just, who had believed in Christ before His Coming, into Heaven after His Resurrection, and will be fully completed when, in the end, He shall cause His faithful servants, in body and soul, to enter into the joy of their Lord.

СНАР. III. вер. 1. And I said. God's love for us is the great incitement, constrainer, vivifier of His creature's love. Micah had just spoken of God's love of Israel; how He would ¹ Is. lxi. 1. ² Huls. Theol. Jud. pp. 143, 144. ³ R. Mos. Haddars. in Mart. Pug. Fid. p. 432. It is interpreted of the Messiah in the Bereshith Rabba, § 48. f. 47. 2. (Schöttg. de Mess. p. 61.) the Echa Rabbathi, f. 60. 2, (Ib. p. 69.) the Pesikta Rabbathi, f. 60. 1, (Ib. p. 135.) and the Midrash Mishle, ad c. vi. 1. (Ib. ad loc. p. 212.) So also Jonathan, Rashi, Tanchum, Abarbanel in Poc. ⁴ Quoted by Pearson on the Creed, art. 6, note y. ⁵ Rup.

⁶ S. John x. 4. ⁷ Ib. 15. xii. 32. ⁸ Ps. cxviii. 20. ⁹ Dion. ¹⁰ S. Luke i. 79. ¹¹ S. Matt. vii. 13, 14. ¹² Ex. xxxiii. 15, 16. ¹³ S. John x. 9. ¹⁴ S. Jer. ¹⁵ Ps. xxiii. 1. ¹⁶ Is. xlv. 2. ¹⁷ Ib. li. 10. ¹⁸ Ib. xlv. 2, 3. ¹⁹ 2 Tim. ii. 3. ²⁰ It is from the same word as Pharez, Judah's son, whose birth was typical. Gen. xxxviii. 29. ²¹ Rom. viii. 17. ²² 2 Tim. ii. 11, 12. ²³ 1 Pet. iv. 1.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

2 Who hate the good, and love the evil ;
who pluck off their skin from off them ; and their flesh from off their bones ;

^b Ps. 14. 4.

3 Who also ^b eat the flesh of my people, and flay their skin from off them ; and they gather them into one fold under One Shepherd, guard them, lead them, remove all difficulties before them, be Himself their Head and enable them to follow Him. He turns then to them. These are God's doings ; this, God has in store for you hereafter. Even when mercy itself shall require chastisement, He doth not cast off for ever. The desolation is but the forerunner of future mercy. What then do ye ? The Prophet appeals to them, class by class. There was one general corruption of every order of men, through whom Judah could be preserved, princes¹, prophets², priests³. The salt had lost its savour ; wherewith could it be seasoned ? whereby could the decaying mass of the people be kept from entire corruption ?

Hear, I pray you, O heads of Jacob, and ye princes of the house of Israel. He arraigns them by the same name, under which He had first promised mercy. He had first promised mercy to all Jacob and the remnant of Israel. So now he upbraids the heads of Jacob, and the princes of the house of Israel, lest they should deceive themselves. At the same time he recalls them to the deeds of their father. Judah had succeeded to the birthright, forfeited by Reuben, Simeon and Levi ; and in Judah all the promises of the Messiah were laid up. But he was not like the three great Patriarchs, the father of the faithful, or the meek Isaac, or the much-tried Jacob. The name then had not the reminiscences, or force of appeal, contained in the titles, seed of Abraham, or Isaac, or Israel.

Is it not for you to know judgment ? It is a great increase of guilt, when persons neglect or pervert what it is their special duty and office to guard ; as when teachers corrupt doctrine, or preachers give in to a low standard of morals, or judges pervert judgment. The princes here spoken of are so named from judging, "deciding"⁴ causes. They are the same as the rulers, whom Isaiah at the same time upbraids, as being, from their sins, *rulers of Sodom*⁵, whose ⁶ hands were full of blood. They who do not right, in time cease, in great measure, to know it. As God withdraws His grace, the mind is darkened and can no longer see it. So it is said of Eli's sons, they ⁷ were sons of Belial, they knew not the Lord ; and, ⁸ Into a malicious soul Wisdom shall not enter, nor dwell in a body that is subject unto sin. Such ⁹ "attain not to know the judgments of God which are a great deep : and the depth of His justice the evil mind findeth not." But if men will not know judgment by doing it, they shall by suffering it.

2. Who hate the good and love the evil ; i. e. they hate, for its own sake, that which is good, and love that which is evil. The Prophet is not here speaking of their hating good men, or loving evil men, but of their hating goodness and loving wickedness¹⁰. "It is sin not to love good ; what guilt to hate it ! it is faulty, not to flee from evil, what ungodliness to love it !" Man, at first, loves and admires the good, even while he doth it not ; he hates the evil, even while he does it, or as soon as he has done it. But man cannot bear to be at strife with his conscience, and so he ends it, by excusing himself and telling lies to himself. And then, he hates the truth or good

¹ 1-4. ² 5-7. ³ 11.
⁴ קצין from קצה, "cut, decide," whence Cadhi.
⁵ 1b. 15. ⁶ 1 Sam. ii. 12. ⁷ Wisd. i. 4. ⁸ S. Jer. ⁹ The word is the same, Is. i. 10.
¹⁰ This appears from the Kethib קרין.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

break their bones, and chop them in pieces, as for the pot, and ^c as flesh within the caldron.

^c Ezek. 11. 3, 7.
^d Ps. 18. 41.
Prov. 1. 28.
Is. 1. 15.
Ezek. 8. 18.
Zech. 7. 13.

4 Then ^d shall they cry unto the Lord, but he will not hear them : he will even with a bitter hatred, because it disturbs the darkness of the false peace with which he would envelope himself. At first, men love only the pleasure connected with the evil ; then they make whom they can, evil, because goodness is a reproach to them : in the end, they love evil for its own sake¹¹. Heathen morality too distinguished between the incontinent and the unprincipled¹², the man who sinned under force of temptation, and the man who had lost the sense of right and wrong. "Every one that doeth evil, hateth the light. Whoso longeth for things unlawful, hateth the righteousness which rebuketh and punisheth"¹³.

Who pluck off their skin from off them, and their flesh from off their bones. He had described the Good Shepherd ; now, in contrast, he describes those who ought to be "shepherds of the people," to feed, guard, direct them, but who were their butchers ; who did not shear them, but flayed them ; who fed on them, not fed them. He heaps up their guilt, act by act. First they flay, i. e. take away their outer goods ; then they break their bones in pieces, the most solid parts, on which the whole frame of their body depends, to get at the very marrow of their life, and so feed themselves upon them. And not unlike, though still more fearfully, do they sin, who first remove the skin, as it were, or outward tender fences of God's graces ; (such as is modesty, in regard to inward purity ; outward demeanour, of inward virtue ; outward forms, of inward devotion ;) and so break the strong bones of the sterner virtues, which hold the whole soul together ; and with them the whole flesh, or softer graces, becomes one shapeless mass, shred to pieces and consumed. So Ezekiel says¹⁴ ; Woe to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves ; should not the shepherds feed the flock ? Ye eat the fat and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed, ye feed not the flock. The diseased have ye not strengthened, &c.

4. Then shall they cry unto the Lord. Then. The Prophet looks on to the Day of the Lord, which is ever before his mind. So the Psalmist, speaking of a time or place not expressed, says, ¹⁵ There were they in great fear. He sees it, points to it, as seeing what those to whom he spoke, saw not, and the more awfully, because he saw, with super-human and so with certain vision, what was hid from their eyes. The then was not then, in the time of grace, but when the Day of grace should be over, and the Day of Judgment should be come. So of that day, when judgment should set in, God says in Jeremiah¹⁷, Behold I will bring evil upon them which they shall not be able to go forth of, and they will cry unto Me, and I will not hearken unto them. And David¹⁸, They cried and there was none to save ; unto the Lord, and He answered them not. And Solomon¹⁹, Whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he shall cry himself and shall not be heard. And St. James²⁰, He shall have judgment without mercy, that hath shewed no mercy. The prayer is never too late, until judgment comes²¹ ; the day of grace is over, when the time of judgment has arrived. "They shall cry unto the Lord, and shall not be heard, because they ¹¹ Rom. i. 32. ¹² The ἀκαρτῆς and ἀκόλαστος of Aristotle. ¹³ S. John iii. 20.

¹⁴ Dion. ¹⁵ xxxiv. 2-4. add 6-10.

¹⁶ Ps. liii. 5. ¹⁷ xl. 11. ¹⁸ Ps. xviii. 41. ¹⁹ Prov. xxi. 13. ²⁰ ii. 13.

²¹ See ab. on Hos. v. 6. p. 34, 5.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

Is. 56. 10, 11.
Ezek. 13. 10.
& 22. 25.

hide his face from them at that time, as they have behaved themselves ill in their doings.

5 ¶ Thus saith the LORD ^e concerning the prophets that make my people err, that too did not hear those who asked them, and the Lord shall turn His Face from them, because they too turned their face from those who prayed them."

He will even hide His Face. He will not look in mercy on those who would not receive His look of grace. Your sins, He says by Isaiah, have hid His face from you, that He heareth not. O what will that turning away of the Face be, on which hangs eternity!

As. There is a proportion between the sin and the punishment. ¹ As I have done, so God hath requited me. They have behaved themselves ill in their doings. lit. have made their deeds evil. The word rendered doings is almost always used in a bad sense, mighty deeds, and so deeds with a high hand. Not ignorantly or negligently, nor through human frailty, but with set purpose they applied themselves, not to amend but to corrupt their doings, and make them worse. God called to them by *all His prophets, make good your doings*²; and they, reversing it, used diligence to make their doings evil. ³ "All this they shall suffer, because they were not rulers, but tyrants; not Prefects, but lions; not masters of disciples, but wolves of sheep; and they sated themselves with flesh and were fattened, and, as sacrifices for the slaughter, were made ready for the punishment of the Lord. Thus far against evil rulers; then he turns to the false prophets and evil teachers, who by flatteries subvert the people of God, promising them the knowledge of His word."

5. The prophets that make My people err, flattering them in their sins and rebellions, promising that they shall go unpunished, that God is not so strict, will not put in force the judgments He threatens. So Isaiah saith⁴; O my people, they which lead thee, mislead thee; and⁵, the leaders of this people are its misleaders, and they that are led of them are destroyed. And Jeremiah⁶, The prophets have seen for thee vanity and folly; and they have not discovered thine iniquity to turn away thy captivity, and have seen for thee false burdens and causes of banishment. No error is hopeless, save what is taught in the Name of God.

That bite with their mouths. The word⁷ is used of no other biting than the biting of serpents. They were doing real, secret evil while they cry, i. e. proclaim peace; they bit, as serpents, treacherously, deadlily. They fed, not so much on the gifts, for which they hired themselves to⁸ speak peace when there was no peace, as on the souls of the givers. So God says by Ezekiel⁹, Will ye pollute Me among My people for handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, to slay the souls that should not die, and to save the souls alive that should not live, by your lying to My people that hear your lies? Because with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad; and strengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, by promising him life—therefore ye shall see no more vanity nor divine divinations. It was with a show of peace that Joab slew Abner and Amasa, and with a kiss of peace Judas betrayed our Lord.

And he that putteth not into their mouths, they prepare war against him, lit. and (i. e. forthwith; it was all one; bribes

^f bite with their teeth, and cry, Peace; and ^g he that putteth not into their mouths, they even prepare war against him:

6 ^h Therefore night shall be unto you,

^h Is. 8. 20, 22. Ezek. 13. 23. Zech. 13. 4.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

ch. 2. 11.
Matt. 7. 15.
Ezek. 13.
18, 19.

refused, war proclaimed,) they sanctify war against him. Like those of whom Joel prophesied¹⁰, they proclaim war against him in the Name of God, by the authority of God which they had taken to themselves, speaking in His Name Who had not sent them. So when our Lord fed the multitude, they would take Him by force and make Him a king; when their hopes were gone and they saw that His Kingdom was not of this world, they said, Crucify Him, crucify Him. Much more the Pharisees, who, because He rebuked their covetousness, their devouring widows' houses, their extortion and excess, their making their proselytes more children of hell than themselves, said, Thou blasphemest. So, when the masters of the possessed damsel whom St. Paul freed, ¹¹ saw that the hope of their gains was gone, they accused him, that he exceedingly troubled their city, teaching customs not lawful to be received. So Christians were persecuted by the Heathen as ¹² "hating the human race," because they would not partake of their sins; as ¹³ "atheists," because they worshipped not their gods; as ¹⁴ "disloyal" and "public enemies," because they joined not in unholy festivals; as "unprofitable," because they neglected things not profitable but harmful. So men are now called "illiberal," who will not make free with the truth of God; "intolerant," who will not allow that all faith is matter of opinion, and that there is no certain truth; "precise," "censorious," who will not connive at sin, or allow the levity which plays, mothlike, around it and jests at it. The Church and the Gospel are against the world, and so the world which they condemn must be against them; and such is the force of truth and holiness, that it must carry on the war against them in their own name.

6. Therefore night shall be unto you, that ye shall not have a vision. In the presence of God's extreme judgments, even deceivers are at length still; silenced at last by the common misery, if not by awe. The false prophets had promised peace, light, brightness, prosperity; the night of trouble, anguish, darkness, fear, shall come upon them. So shall they no more dare to speak in the Name of God, while He was by His judgments speaking the contrary in a way which all must hear. They abused God's gifts and long-suffering against Himself: they could misinterpret His long-suffering into favor, and they did it: their visions of the future were but the reflections of the present and its continuance; they thought that because God was enduring, He was indifferent, and they took His government out of His Hands, and said, that what He appeared to be now, He would ever be. They had no other light, no other foresight. When then the darkness of temporal calamity enveloped them, it shrouded in one common darkness of night all present brightness and all sight of the future.

¹⁵ After Caiaphas had in heart spoken falsehood and a prophecy of blood, although God overruled it to truth which he meant not, all grace of prophecy departed. ¹⁶ The law and the prophets prophesied until John. The Sun of Righteousness went down over them, inwardly and outwardly, withdrawing the brightness of His Providence and the inward light of flatter the people, it is as if they bit it with the teeth." So A. E. also and Tanch. in Poc.

⁸ Ezek. xiii. 10. ⁹ Ib. 19, 22, 23. ¹⁰ See ab. on Joel iii. 9. p. 137. ¹¹ Acts xvi. 19-21. ¹² Tertullian, Apol. c. 10. and note k. Oxf. Tr. ¹³ Ib. c. 35. ad Scap. c. 2. ¹⁴ Ib. 42, 43. ¹⁵ Rup. ¹⁶ S. Matt. xi. 13.

¹ Judg. i. 7. "As the Jews speak 'measure for measure'." Poc. from Abarh.

² Jer. xxxv. 15. הַיְשִׁבוּ כִּלְיֵיהֶם; here, הִרְעוּ כִּלְיֵיהֶם. ³ St. Jer. ⁴ iii. 12.

⁵ ix. 16. (15, Heb.) ⁶ Lam. ii. 14. ⁷ Gen. xlix. 17. Num. xxi. 8, 9. Prov. xxiii. 32. Eccl. x. 8, 11. Am. v. 19. ix. 3. Hence, Kimchi, "While they proclaim peace, and

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

† Heb. from a vision.

† Heb. from divining.

† Amos 8. 9.

† that ye shall not have a vision; and it shall be dark unto you, † that ye shall not divine; and the sun shall go down over the prophets, and the day shall be dark over them. 7 Then shall the seers be ashamed, and the diviners confounded: yea, they shall all cover their † lips; * for there is no answer of God.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

† Heb.
upper lip.

Ps. 74. 9.

Amos 8. 11.

† Is. 53. 1.

8 ¶ But truly I am full of power by the spirit of the LORD, and of judgment, and of might, † to declare unto Jacob his transgression, and to Israel his sin.

grace." So Christ Himself forewarned; ¹ Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you. And so it has remained ever since. ² The veil has been on their hearts. The light is in all the world, but they see it not; it arose to lighten the Gentiles, but they walk on still in darkness. As opposed to holiness, truth, knowledge, Divine enlightening of the mind, bright gladness, contrariwise darkness is falsehood, sin, error, blindness of soul, ignorance of Divine things, and sorrow. In all these ways, did the Sun go down over them, so that the darkness weighed heavily upon them. So too the inventors of heresies pretend to see and to enter into the mysteries of Christ, yet find darkness instead of light, lose even what they think they see, fail even of what truth they seem most to hold; and they shall be in night and darkness, being cast into outer darkness; ³ sinning against the brethren, and wounding the weak conscience of those for whom Christ died.

7. They shall cover their lips, lit. the hair of the upper lip ⁴. This was an action enjoined on lepers ⁵, and a token of mourning ⁶; a token then of sorrow and uncleanness. With their lips they had lied, and now they should cover their lips, as men dumb and ashamed. For there is no answer of God, as these deceivers had pretended to have. When all things shall come contrary to what they had promised, it shall be clear that God did not send them. And having plainly no answer of God, they shall not dare to feign one then. ⁷ Then not even the devils shall receive power to deceive them by their craft. The oracles shall be dumb; the unclean spirit shall not dare to delude. ⁸ All this is spoken against those who, in the Church of Christ, flatter the rich, or speak as men-pleasers, out of avarice, ambition, or any like longing for temporal good, to whom that of Isaiah ⁹ fitteth; the leaders of this people [they who profess to lead them aright] mislead them, and they that are led of them are destroyed.

8. And truly I, [lit. contrariwise I,] i. e. whereas they shall be void and no word in them, I am full of (or filled with) power by the Spirit of the Lord and of judgment and might. The false prophets ¹⁰ walked after their own spirit. Their only power or influence was from without, from favouring circumstances, from adapting themselves to the great or to the people, going along with the tide, and impelling persons whither they wished to go. The power of the true prophet was inherent, and that by gift of the Spirit of the Lord ¹¹. And so, while adverse circumstances silenced the false prophets, they called forth the more the energy of the true, whose power was from Him in Whose Hands the world is. The adverse circumstances to the false prophets were God's judgments; to the true, they were man's refractoriness, rebellion, oppressiveness. Now was the time of the false prophets; now, at a distance, they could foretell hardily, because they could not yet be convicted of untruth. When trouble came, they went into the inner chamber to hide ¹² themselves. Micah, amid the wild tumult of the people ¹³, was fearless, upborne by Him who controls, stills, or looses it, to do His Sovereign Will.

I am filled with power. So our Lord bade His Apostles ¹⁴, Tarry ye, until ye be endued with power from on high: ¹⁵ ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ¹⁶ they were all filled with the Holy Ghost. The three gifts, power, judgment, might, are the fruits of the One Spirit of God, through Whom the Prophet was filled with them. Of these, power is always strength residing in the person, whether it be the power ¹⁷ or might of wisdom ¹⁸ of Almighty God Himself, or power which He imparts ¹⁹ or implants ²⁰. But it is always power lodged in the person, to be put forth by him. Here, as in St. John Baptist ²¹ or the Apostles ¹⁴, it is Divine power, given through God the Holy Ghost, to accomplish that for which he was sent, as St. Paul was endued with might ²², casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ. It is just that, which is so wanting to human words, which is so characteristic of the word of God, power. Judgment is, from its form ²³, not so much discernment in the human being, as "the thing judged," pronounced by God, the righteous judgment of God, and righteous judgment in man conformably therewith ²⁴. It was what, he goes on to say, the great men of his people abhorred ²⁵, equity. With this he was filled. This was the substance of his message, right judgment to be enacted by them, to which he was to exhort them, or which, on their refusal, was to be pronounced upon them in the Name of God the Judge of all, and to be executed upon them. Might is courage or boldness to deliver the message of God, not awed or hindered by any adversaries. It is that holy courage, of which St. Paul speaks ²⁶, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the gospel, for which I am an ambassador in bonds, that therein I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak. So too, after the Apostles had been ²⁷ straitly threatened that they should speak no more in the Name of Jesus, all, having prayed, were filled with the Holy Ghost, and spake the word of God with boldness. ²⁸ Whoso is so strengthened and arrayed, uttereth fiery words, whereby hearers' hearts are moved and changed. But whoso speaketh of his own mind, doth good neither to himself nor others.

So then, of the three gifts, power expresses the Divine might lodged in him; judgment, the substance of what he had to deliver; might or courage, the strength to deliver it in face of human power, persecution, ridicule, death.

²⁹ These gifts the Prophets know are not their own, but are from the Spirit of God, and are by Him inspired into them. Such was the spirit of Elijah, unconquered, energetic, fiery, of whom it is said, ³⁰ Then stood up Elias as fire, and his word burned like a lamp. Such was Isaiah ³¹, Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew My people their

¹ S. John xii. 35.

² 2 Cor. iii. 15.

³ 1 Cor. viii. 12.

⁴ Kim.

⁵ Lev. xiii. 45.

⁶ Ezek. xxiv. 17, 22.

⁷ S. Jer.

⁸ Dion.

⁹ iii. 12.

¹⁰ Ezek. xiii. 3.

¹¹ The use of נָא before מִן only, shews plainly that the objects of the verb are נִבְרָא, נִבְרָא, and that the מִן is "with" "through," as in Gen. iv. 1.

¹² 1 Kgs. xxii. 25.

¹³ Ps. lxx. 7.

¹⁴ S. Luke xxiv. 49.

¹⁵ Acts i. 8.

¹⁶ Ib. ii. 4.

¹⁷ Ex. xv. 6. xxxii. 11. Num. xiv. 17, &c.

¹⁸ Job xxxvi. 5.

¹⁹ Deut. viii. 18.

²⁰ Judg. xvi. 5. 9. 19.

²¹ Deut. viii. 17.

²² Deut. viii. 17.

²³ As in Prov. i. 3. Is. i. 21. v. 7.

²⁴ S. Luke i. 17.

²⁵ 2 Cor. x. 5.

²⁶ Ps. 74. 9.

²⁷ Amos 8. 11.

²⁸ Is. 53. 1.

²⁹ Acts iv. 18, 31.

³⁰ Dion.

³¹ ver. 9.

³² Eph. vi. 19, 20.

³³ Eccles. xlviii. 1.

³⁴ Ib. vii. 4.

³⁵ Ex. xv. 6.

³⁶ Num. xiv. 17, &c.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

9 Hear this, I pray you, ye heads of the house of Jacob, and princes of the house of Israel, that abhor judgment, and pervert all equity.

transgression and the house of Jacob their sins. Such was Jeremiah¹; Therefore I am full of the fury of the Lord; I am weary of holding in. I have set thee for a trier among My people, a strong fort; and thou shalt know and try their ways. Such was John Baptist, who said,² O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Such was Paul, who, when he³ reasoned of temperance, righteousness and judgment to come, made Felix tremble, though unbelieving and ungodly. Such were the Apostles, who, when they had received the Holy Spirit, ⁴ brake, with a mighty breath, ships and kings of Tarshish. Such will be Elias and Enoch at the end of the world, striving against Anti-Christ, of whom it is said⁵, If any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth and devoureth their enemies."

9. Hear this, I pray you. The Prophet discharges upon them that judgment, whercof, by the Spirit of God, he was full, and which they abhorred; judgment against their perversion of judgment. He rebukes the same classes as before⁶, the heads and judges, yet still more sternly. They abhorred judgment, he says, as a thing loathsome and abominable⁷, such as men cannot bear even to look upon; they not only dealt wrongly, but they perverted, distorted, all equity: "⁸ that so there should not remain even some slight justice in the city." All equity; all of every sort, right, rectitude, uprightness, straight-forwardness⁹, whatever was right by natural conscience or by God's law, they distorted, like the sophists making the worse appear the better cause. Naked violence crushes the individual; perversion of equity destroys the fountain-head of justice. The Prophet turns from them in these words, as one who could not bear to look upon their misdeeds, and who would not speak to them; they pervert; building; her heads, her priests, her prophets; as Elisha, but for the presence of Jehoshaphat, would not look on Jehoram, nor see him¹⁰. He first turns and speaks of them, as one man, as if they were all one in evil;

10 They build up [lit. building, sing.] Zion with blood. This may be taken literally on both sides, that, the rich built their palaces, "with wealth gotten by bloodshed¹¹, by rapine of the poor, by slaughter of the saints," as Ezekiel says¹², her princes in the midst thereof are like wolves, to shed blood, to destroy souls, to get dishonest gain. Or by blood he may mean that they indirectly took away life, in that, through wrong judgments, extortion, usury, fraud, oppression, reducing wages or detaining them, they took away what was necessary to support life. So it is said¹³; The bread of the needy is their life, he that defraudeth him thereof is a man of blood. He that taketh away his neighbour's living slayeth him, and he that defraudeth the labourer of his hire is a bloodshedder. Or it may be, that as David prayed to God, ¹⁴ Build Thou the walls of Jerusalem, asking Him thereby to maintain or increase its well-being, so these men thought to promote the temporal prosperity of Jerusalem by doings which were unjust, oppres-

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

10 ^m They build up Zion with ⁿ blood, and Jerusalem with iniquity.

11 ^o The heads thereof judge for reward, and ^p the priests thereof teach for hire, and sive, crushing to their inferiors. So Solomon, in his degenerate days, made the yoke upon his people and his service grievous¹⁴. So ambitious monarchs, by large standing-armies or filling their exchequers drain the life-blood of their people. The physical condition and stature of the poorer population in much of France was lowered permanently by the conscriptions under the first Emperor. In our wealthy nation, the term poverty describes a condition of other days. We have had to coin a new name to designate the misery, offspring of our material prosperity. From our wealthy towns, (as from those of Flanders,) ascends to heaven against us "¹⁵ the cry of 'pauperism' i. e. the cry of distress, arrived at a condition of system and of power, and, by an unexpected curse, issuing from the very developement of wealth. The political economy of unbelief has been crushed by facts on all the theatres of human activity and industry." Truly we build up Zion with blood, when we cheapen luxuries and comforts at the price of souls, use Christian toil like brute strength, tempt men to dishonesty and women to other sin, to eke out the scanty wages which alone our selfish thirst for cheapness allows, heedless of every thing save of our individual gratification, or the commercial prosperity, which we have made our god. Most awfully was Zion built with blood, when the Jews shed the innocent Blood, that ¹⁶ the Romans might not take away their place and nation. But since He has said¹⁷, Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye did it not unto Me, and, ¹⁸ Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? when Saul was persecuting Christ's members, then, in this waste of lives and of souls, we are not only wasting the Price of His Blood in ourselves and others, but are anew slaying Christ, and that, from the self-same motives as those who crucified Him. ¹⁹ When ye sin against the members, ye sin against Christ. Our commercial greatness is the price of His Blood²⁰. In the judgments on the Jews, we may read our own national future; in the woe on those through whom the weak brother perishes for whom Christ died²¹, we, if we partake or connive at it, may read our own.

† Heb. bloods. ° Is. 1. 23. Ezek. 22. 12. Hos. 4. 18. ch. 7. 3. p Jer. 6. 13.

11. The heads thereof judge for reward. Every class was corrupted. One sin, the root of all evil²², covetousness, entered into all they did. It, not God, was their one end, and so their god. Her heads, the secular authority, who ²³ sat to judge according to the law, judged, contrary to the law, for rewards. They sat as the representatives of the Majesty of God, in Whose Name they judged, Whose righteous Judgment and correcting Providence law exhibits and executes, and they profaned it. To judge for rewards was in itself sin, forbidden by the law²⁴. To refuse justice, unless paid for it, was unjust, degrading to justice. The second sin followed hard upon it, to judge unjustly, absolving the guilty, condemning the innocent, justifying the oppressor, legalising wrong.

And her priests teach for hire. The Lord was the portion and inheritance²⁵ of the priest. He had his sustenance as-of the two "plains," Sharon, and Mishor in Reuben (Deut. iii. 10. iv. 43.) being formed from it. ¹⁰ 2 Kgs. iii. 14. ¹¹ xxii. 27. ¹² Eccles. xxxiv. 21, 22. ¹³ Ps. li. 16. ¹⁴ 1 Kgs. xii. 4. ¹⁵ Lacordaire, Conférences, T. ii. p. 300. ¹⁶ S. John xi. 48. ¹⁷ S. Matt. xxv. 45. ¹⁸ Acts ix. 4. ¹⁹ 1 Cor. viii. 12. ²⁰ S. Matt. xxvii. 6. ²¹ 1 Cor. viii. 11. ²² 1 Tim. vi. 10. ²³ Acts xxiii. 3. ²⁴ Ex. xxiii. 8. Deut. xvi. 19. ²⁵ Num. xviii. 20. Deut. xvi. 2.

¹ vi. 11, 27. ² S. Matt. iii. 7. ³ Acts xxiv. 25. ⁴ Ps. xlviii. 8. ⁵ Rev. xi. 5. ⁶ iii. 1. ⁷ תַּעֲבֹרָה, one of the two strongest Hebrew words to express abomination, comp. תַּעֲבֹרָה. ⁸ S. Jer. ⁹ Frequent as the adj. יָשָׁר, "right, upright," is, the abstract יִשְׁרָאֵל occurs here only in the O. T. The original force is "straight," "even," and hence "straight-forwardness, rectitude." The idea of "evenness" (which Gcs. denies) belonged to the root in early times, the names

Before CHRIST
cir. 710. the prophets thereof divine for money: yet will they lean upon the Lord, † and say, signed him by God, and, therewith, the duty to ¹ put difference between holy and unholy, and between clean and unclean, and to teach all the statutes, which God had commanded. Their lips were to keep knowledge². This then, which they were bound to give, they sold. But ³ whereas it is said to the holy, ⁴ Freely ye have received, freely give, these, producing the answer of God upon the receipt of money, sold the grace of the Lord for a covetous price.⁵ Probably too, their sin co-operated with and strengthened the sin of the judges. Authorised interpreters of the law, they, to please the wealthy, probably misinterpreted the law. For wicked judges would not have given a price for a righteous interpretation of the law. The civil authorities were entrusted by God with power to execute the law; the priests were entrusted by Him with the knowledge to expound it. Both employed in its perversion that which God gave them for its maintenance. The princes obtained by bribery the misjudgment of the priests and enforced it; the priests justified the injustice of the Princes. So Arian Bishops, themselves hirelings⁶, by false expositions of Scripture, countenanced Arian Emperors in the oppression of the faithful. ⁷ "They propped up the heresy by human patronage;" the Emperors ⁸ "bestowed on" them their "reign of irreligion." The Arian Emperors tried to efface the Council of Nice by councils of Arian Bishops⁹. Emperors perverted their power, the Bishops their knowledge. Not publicly only but privately doubtless also, these priests taught falsely for hire, lulling the consciences of those who wished to deceive themselves as to what God forbade, and to obtain from His priests answers in His Name, which might explain away His law in favor of laxity or sin. So people now try to get ill-advised to do against God's will what they are bent on doing; only they get ill-advised for nothing. One who receives money for giving an irresponsible opinion, places himself in proximate peril of giving the answer which will please those who pay him. ¹⁰ "It is Simony to teach and preach the doctrine of Christ and His Gospel, or to give answers to quiet the conscience, for money. For the immediate object of these two acts, is the calling forth of faith, hope, charity, penitence, and other supernatural acts, and the reception of the consolation of the Holy Spirit; and this is, among Christians, their only value. Whence they are accounted things sacred and supernatural; for their immediate end is to things supernatural; and they are done by man, as he is an instrument of the Holy Ghost."

⁴ Is. 48. 2. Jer. 7. 4. Rom. 2. 17. † Heb. saying.

¹¹ "Thou art permitted, O Priest, to live," not to luxuriate, from the altar. ¹² The mouth of the ox which treadeth out the corn is not muzzled. Yet the Apostle ¹³ abused not the liberty, but ¹⁴ having food and raiment, was therewith content; ¹⁵ labouring night and day, that he might not be chargeable to anybody. And in his Epistles he calls God to witness that he ¹⁶ lived holily and without avarice in the Gospel of Christ. He asserts this too, not of himself alone but of his disciples, that he had sent no one who would either ask or receive anything from the Churches¹⁷. But in some Epistles he expresses pleasure, and calls the gifts of those who sent, the *grace*¹⁸ of God, he ga-

Is not the Lord among us? none evil can come upon us.

Before CHRIST
cir. 710.

thers not for himself but for the ¹⁹ poor saints at Jerusalem. But these poor saints were they who of the Jews first believed in Christ, and, being cast out by parents, kinsmen, connections, had lost their possessions and all their goods, the priests of the temple and the people destroying them. Let such poor receive. But if on plea of the poor, a few houses are enriched, and we eat in gold, glass and china, let us either with our wealth change our habit, or let not the habit of poverty seek the riches of Senators. What avails the habit of poverty, while a whole crowd of poor longs for the contents of our purse? Wherefore, for our sake who are such, who build up Zion with blood and Jerusalem by iniquity, who judge for gifts, give answers for rewards, divine for money, and thereon, claiming to ourselves a fictitious sanctity, say, Evil will not come upon us, hear we the sentence of the Lord which follows. Sion and Jerusalem and the mountain of the temple, i. e. the temple of Christ, shall, in the consummation and the end, when ²⁰ love shall wax cold and the faith shall be rare²¹, be ploughed as a field and become heaps as the high places of a forest; so that, where once were ample houses and countless heaps of corn, there should only be a poor cottage, keeping up the show of fruit which has no refreshment for the soul."

The three places, Zion, Jerusalem, the Temple, describe the whole city in its political and religious aspects. Locally, Mount Zion, which occupies the South-West, "had upon it the Upper city," and "was by much the loftier, and lengthways the straighter." Jerusalem, as contrasted with Zion, represented the lower city, "supported" on the East by Mount Acra, and including the valley of Tyropæon. South of Mount Acra and lower than it, at the South Eastern corner of the city, lay Mount Moriah or the Mount of the Lord's House, separated at this time from Mount Acra by a deep ravine, which was filled up by the Asmonæan princes, who lowered Mount Acra. It was joined to the N. E. corner of Mount Zion by the causeway of Solomon across the Tyropæon. The whole city then in all its parts was to be desolated.

And her prophets divine for money. The word rendered²², divine, is always used in a bad sense. These prophets then were false prophets, her prophets and not God's, which divined, in reality or appearance, giving the answer which their employers, the rich men, wanted, as if it were an answer from God. ²³ Yet they also judge for rewards, who look rather to the earthly than to the spiritual good; they teach for hire, who seek in the first place the things of this world, instead of teaching for the glory of God and the good of souls, and regarding earthly things in the second place only, as the support of life.

And say, Is not the Lord among us? And after all this, not understanding their sin, as though by their guilt they purchased the love of God, they said in their impenitence, that they were judges, prophets, priests, of God. They do all this, and yet lean on the Lord; they stay and trust, not in themselves, but in God; good in itself, had not they been evil! And say, Is not the Lord among us? none evil can [shall] come upon us. So Jeremiah says²⁴, Trust ye not in lying words

¹ Lev. x. 10, 11. add Deut. xvii. 10, 11. xxxiii. 10. Hag. ii. 11 sqq.

² Mal. ii. 7. ³ S. Jer. ⁴ S. Matt. x. 8. ⁵ S. Ath. ag. Arians, i. 8. p. 191. and n. c. Oxf. Tr. ⁶ Id. ii. 43. p. 341. ⁷ Conc. Arim. § 3. p. 77.

⁸ Pusey's Councils of the Church, p. 118-180, &c. ⁹ Less de Justit. ii. 35. de Simonia Dub. 13. p. 389. L. ¹⁰ S. Jer. ¹¹ 1 Cor. ix. 13. ¹² Ib. 9. ¹³ Ib. 18.

¹⁴ 1 Tim. vi. 8.

¹⁵ 1 Thess. ii. 6. 2 Thess. iii. 8.

¹⁶ 1 Thess. ii. 10.

¹⁷ 2 Cor. xii. 17, 18. ¹⁸ Ib. viii. 6. 7. ¹⁹ Rom. xv. 26. ²⁰ S. Matt. xxiv. 12.

²¹ S. Luke xviii. 8. ²² Jos. B. J. v. 4. 1. ²³ In Prov. xvi. 10. (quoted as an exception) it is used of that penetrating acuteness which is like a gift of divination; as we speak of "divining a person's thoughts, purposes," &c. ²⁴ From Dion. ²⁵ vii. 4.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

12 Therefore shall Zion for your sake be 'plowed as a field, ^s and Jerusalem shall be^r Jer. 26. 18. ch. 1. 6.

^s Ps. 79. 1.

Before CHRIST
cir. 710.

saying, The temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, The temple of the Lord are these. ¹He called them lying words, as being oftentimes repeated by the false prophets, to entice the credulous people to a false security" against the threatenings of God. As though God could not forsake His own people, nor cast away Zion which He had chosen for an habitation for Himself, nor profane His own holy place! Yet it was true that God was among them, in the midst of them, as our Lord was among the Jews, though they knew Him not. Yet if not in the midst of His people so as to hallow, God is in the midst of them to punish. But what else do we than these Jews did, if we lean on the Apostolic line, the possession of Holy Scripture, Sacraments, pure doctrine, without setting ourselves to gain to God the souls of our Heathen population? or what else is it for a soul to trust in having been made a member of Christ, or in any gifts of God, unless it be bringing forth fruit with patience? ²Learn we too hence, that all trust in the Merits of Christ is vain, so long as any wilfully persist in sin." ³Know we, that God will be in us also, if we have not faith alone, nor on this account rest, as it were, on Him, but if to faith there be added also the excelling in good works. For faith without works is dead. But when with the riches of faith works concur, then will God indeed be with us, and will strengthen us mightily, and account us friends, and gladden us as His true sons, and free us from all evil."

12. Therefore shall Zion for your sake [for your sake shall Zion] be plowed as a field. They thought to be its builders; they were its destroyers. They imagined to advance or secure its temporal prosperity by bloods; they (as men ever do first or last,) ruined it. Zion might have stood, but for these its acute, far-sighted politicians, who scorned the warnings of the prophets, as well-meant ignorance of the world or of the necessities of the state. They taught, perhaps they thought, that for Zion's sake they, (act as they might,) were secure. Practical Antinomians! God says, that, for their sake, Zion, defiled by their deeds, should be destroyed. The fulfilment of the prophecy was delayed by the repentance under Hezekiah. Did he not, the elders ask ³, fear the Lord and besought the Lord, and the Lord repented Him of the evil which He had pronounced against them? But the prophecy remained, like that of Jonah against Nineveh, and, when man undid and in act repented of his repentance, it found its fulfilment.

Jerusalem shall become heaps, [lit. of ruins ⁴,] and the mountain of the house, Mount Moriah, on which the house of God stood, as the high places of the forest, lit. as high places of a forest. It should return wholly to what it had been, before Abraham offered up the typical sacrifice of his son, a wild and desolate place covered with tangled thickets ⁵.

The prophecy had a first fulfilment at its first capture by Nebuchadnezzar. Jeremiah mourns over it; ⁶*Because of the mountain of Zion which is desolate, foxes walk* [habitually ⁷] upon it. Nehemiah said, ⁸*Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste*; and Sanballat mocked at the attempts to rebuild it, as a thing impossible; ⁹*Will they revive the stones out of the heaps of dust, and these too, burned?* and the builders complained; ¹⁰*The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed* [lit. sinketh under them], and there is much dust, and we are not able to build the wall. In the desolation under Antiochus again it is related; ¹¹*they saw the sanctuary desolate, and the altar profaned, and the gates burned up, and shrubs growing in the courts, as in a forest or in one of the mountains*. When, by the shedding of the Blood of the Lord, they ¹²*filled up the measure of their fathers*, and called the curse upon themselves, ¹³*His Blood be upon us and upon our children*, destruction came upon them to the uttermost. With the exception of three towers, left to exhibit the greatness of Roman prowess in destroying such and so strong a city, they ¹⁴*so levelled to the ground the whole circuit of the city, that to a stranger it presented no token of ever having been inhabited*. He "effaced the rest of the city," says the Jewish historian, himself an eyewitness ¹⁵. The elder Pliny soon after, A.D. 77. speaks of it, as a city which had been and was not. ¹⁶*Where was Jerusalem, far the most renowned city, not of Judæa only, but of the East,* ¹⁷*"a funeral pile."* With this corresponds S. Jerome's statement, ¹⁸*"relics of the city remained for fifty years until the Emperor Hadrian."* Still it was in utter ruins ¹⁹. The toleration of the Jewish school at Jamnia ²⁰ the more illustrates the desolation of Jerusalem where there was none. The Talmud ²¹ relates how R. Akiba smiled when others wept at seeing a fox coming out of the Holy of holies. This prophecy of Micah being fulfilled, he looked the more for the prophecy of good things to come, connected therewith. Not Jerusalem only, but well-nigh all Judæa was desolated by that war, in which a million and a half perished ²², besides all who were sold as slaves. "Their country to which you would expel them, is destroyed, and there is no place to receive them," was Titus' expostulation ²³ to the Antiochenes, who desired to be rid of the Jews their fellow-citizens. A heathen historian relates how, before the destruction by Hadrian, ²⁴*"many wolves and hyænas entered their cities howling."* Titus however having left above 6000 ²⁵ Roman soldiers on the spot, a civil population was required to minister to their wants. The Christians who, following our Lord's warning, had fled to Pella ²⁶, returned to Jerusalem ²⁷, and continued there until the second destruction by Hadrian, under fifteen successive Bishops ²⁸. Some few Jews had been left there ²⁹; some very probably returned, since we hear of no prohibition from the

that they were utter ruins. ²⁰ Gittin, f. 56. Jost, iii. 184. Anhang, p. 165.

²¹ Maccoth, fin. ²² Josephus' numbers. ²³ Jos. B.J. vii. 5. 2.

²⁴ Dio lxi. 14.

²⁵ "The tenth legion and some troops of horse and companies of foot." (Jos. Ib. vii. 1. 2.) The legion was 6000 men; the troop, 64; the company, 100.

²⁶ Eus. H. E. iii. 5. ²⁷ S. Epiph. de Mens. c. 15. p. 171.

²⁸ Eus. H. E. iv. 5. "from written documents."

²⁹ Josephus makes Eleazar say in the siege of Masada, "Jerusalem has been plucked up by the roots, and the only memorial of it remaining is the camp of those who took it, still seated on its remains. Hapless elders sit by the dust of the temple, and a few women preserved by the enemy for the fondest insolence." B. J. vii. 8. 7. The statement of S. Epiphanius (de Mens. 15. p. 170.) "in that part of Zion which survived after the desolation, there were both parts of dwellings around Zion itself and seven synagogues which alone stood in Zion as cabins, one of which survived till the time of Bishop Maximus and the Emperor Constantine, as a but in a vineyard," is remarkably confirmed by the indepen-

¹ Sanch. ² J. H. Mich. ³ Jer. xxvi. 19. ⁴ "y from my, "distort, pervert, subvert." ⁵ Gen. xxii. 13. ⁶ Lam. v. 18. ⁷ Neh. ii. 17. ⁸ Ib. iv. 2. [iii. 34. Heb.] ⁹ Ib. 10. [iv. 4. Heb.] ¹⁰ 1 Macc. iv. 38. ¹¹ S. Matt. xxiii. 32. ¹² Ib. xxvii. 25. ¹³ Nat. Hist. v. 14.

¹⁴ Joseph. B. J. vii. 1. 1. ¹⁵ Ib. vi. 9. 1. ¹⁶ Pliny says of Engedi, "Below these was the town Engadda, second only to Jerusalem in fertility and palm-groves, now a second funeral pile." [bustum] N. H. v. 18. See at length in Deyling de Æliæ Capit. Orig. in his Obs. sacr. v. 436-490. and on the whole subject Lightfoot, Chronicon de Excidio urb. Hieros. Opp. ii. 136 sqq. Tillemont, Hist. d. Emp. T. i. Ruine des Juifs; T. ii. Révoltes des Juifs; Munter, d. Jud. Krieg unt. Traj. u. Hadr. (translated in Dr Robinson's Bibl. Sac. T. iii. 1st series) who, however, gives too much weight to very late authorities; Jost, Gesch. d. Juden, B. xii. ¹⁷ Ep. 129. ad Dard. fin.

¹⁸ The Talmud speaks of R. Jose (who lived before Hadrian) "praying in one of the ruins of Jerusalem," but only when on a journey. Berachoth, f. 3. The context implies

Before CHRIST come heaps, and 'the mountain of the cir. 710. ' ch. 4. 2.

Romans, until after the fanatic revolt under Bar-cocheba. But the fact that when towards the close of Trajan's reign they burst out simultaneously, in one wild frenzy¹, upon the surrounding Heathen, all along the coast of Africa, Libya, Cyrene, Egypt, the Thebais, Mesopotamia, Cyprus², there was no insurrection in Judæa, implies that there were no great numbers of Jews there. Judæa, aforetime the centre of rebellion, contributed nothing³ to that wide national insurrection, in which the carnage was so terrible, as though it had been one convulsive effort of the Jews to root out their enemies⁴. Even in the subsequent war under Hadrian, Orosius speaks of them, as "laying waste the province of Palestine, once their own," as though they had gained possession of it from without, not by insurrection within it. The Jews assert that in the time of Joshua Ben Chananiah (under Trajan) "the kingdom of wickedness decreed that the temple should be rebuilt⁵." If this was so, the massacres towards the end of Trajan's reign altered the policy of the Empire. Apparently the Emperors attempted to extinguish the Jewish, as, at other times, the Christian faith. A heathen Author mentions the prohibition of circumcision⁷. The Jerusalem Talmud⁸ speaks of many who for fear became uncircumcised, and renewed the symbol of their faith "when Bar Cozibah got the better, so as to reign 2½ years among them." The Jews add, that the prohibition extended to the keeping of the sabbath and the reading of the law¹⁰. Hadrian's city, Ælia, was doubtless intended, not only for a strong position, but also to efface the memory of Jerusalem by the Roman and Heathen city which was to replace it. Christians, when persecuted, suffered; Jews rebelled. The recognition of Barcocheba, who gave himself out as the Messiah¹¹, by Akibah¹² and "all the wise [Jews] of his generation¹³," made the war national. Palestine was the chief seat of the war, but not its source. The Jews throughout the Roman world were in arms against their dent Latin statement of the Bourdeaux pilgrim. "Within the wall of Zion appears the place where David had his palace; and of seven synagogues, which were there, one only has remained, the rest are ploughed and sowed." Itin. Hieros. p. 592. ed. Wess. Optatus also mentions the 7 synagogues. (iii. 2. Edd. before Dupin, and all MSS. but one. See p. 53.) Before the destruction there are said to have been 480. Echa Rabbathi, f. 52. col. 2. f. 71. col. 4. ¹ sub uno tempore, quasi rabie efferati. Oros. L. vii. B. P. vi. 437. "as if rekindled by some dreadful seditious spirit." Eus. H. E. iv. 2. ² Oros. Dio mentions Cyrene, Egypt, Cyprus; to these Eusebius adds Mesopotamia; also in S. Jer. Chron. A.D. 117. ³ Abulfaraj (A.D. 1270.) mentions an invasion of Judæa by one whom the Egyptian Jews made their king; and whom "the Roman armies sought and slew with some ten thousands of Jews every where." (Hist. Ar. p. 120. Chron. Syr. p. 56.) He is too late to be an authority; but his account equally implies that there was no rebellion in Judæa. ⁴ Dio speaks of their destroying 220,000 Romans and Greeks in Cyrene; committing much the same horrors in Egypt; destroying 240,000 in Cyprus. lxxviii. 32. The Jews, ascribing this to Barcocheba, say that they destroyed "in Africa a great multitude of Romans and Greeks like the sand on the sea-shore innumerable," and in Egypt more than 200,000 men; and in Cyprus, so as to leave none. Zemach David, f. 27. 1. in Eisenmenger, Entd. Jud. ii. 655. (The coincidence is remarkable, but the statement is too late to have any independent value.) Orosius says that "Libya was so desolated through the slaughter of its peasants, that, had not Hadrian re-colonised it, it would have remained empty." l. c. ⁵ l. c. Sulpicius Severus in like way speaks of the Jews "wishing to rebel, essaying to plunder Syria and Palestine." ii. 4. ⁶ Bereshith Rabba, c. 64. ⁷ Spartian Hadrian, c. 14. It was repealed by Antonine. See Munter, § 26. ⁸ Yebammoth, f. 9. 1. and R. Nissim. (See in Lightfoot, Chron. Opp. ii. 143.) Berachoth f. 16. 2. in Jost B. xii. Anhangn. 21. ⁹ R. Nissim in Lightfoot, l. c. ¹⁰ Jost xii. 9. p. 228. ¹¹ Eus. H. E. iv. 6. Zemach David, f. 27. in Eisenmenger, Entd. Jud. ii. 654. "He was called Bar Cocheba, because he interpreted, as said of himself, a star shall arise out of Jacob, &c. (Num. xxiv. 17.) Shalshale hakabbala (in De Voisin on Martini, Pug. Fid. p. 265.) Sanhedrin, Chelek. (Mart. p. 320.) ¹² And R. Akibah himself, when he saw him, said of him, This is the king Messiah, as it is in the Echa Rabbathi on the verse Lam. ii. 2." (Ib.) "He applied Hagg. ii. 6, 7. to him" (quoting v. 7. "I will bring the desire of the nations to Jerusalem.") Sanh. Chelek in Mart. See more of him Wolf, Bibl. Hebr. i. n. 1801. R. Bechai said, God revealed to him things unknown to Moses. (Ib.) See also Midrash Cant. in Mart. p. 320. Bartolocci, Bibl. Rabb. p. 274. ¹³ Maimon. Yad Chazaka, Sanhedrin, c. 11. in Mart. p. 873. "R. Akiba and all the wise of his generation thought that he was the Messiah, until he was slain in his iniquities, and it was known that he was not." This was doubtless the ground of their death, mentioned in the Avoda Zara. See p. 128 sqq. F. C. Ewald, trans. ¹⁴ "The house as the high places of the forest. Before CHRIST

cir. 710.

conquerors¹⁴; and the number of fortresses and villages which they got possession of, and which were destroyed by the Romans¹⁵, shews that their successes were far beyond Judæa. Their measures in Judæa attest the desolate condition of the country. They fortified, not towns, but "the advantageous positions of the country, strengthened them with mines and walls, that, if defeated, they might have places of refuge, and communication among themselves underground unperceived." For two years, (as appears from the coins struck by Barcocheba¹⁷), they had possession of Jerusalem. It was essential to his claim to be a temporal Messiah. They proposed, at least, to "rebuild their temple¹⁸" and restore their polity." But they could not fortify Jerusalem. Its siege is just named¹⁹; but the one place which obstinately resisted the Romans was a strong city *near Jerusalem*²⁰, known before only as a deeply indented mountain tract, Bether²¹. Probably, it was one of the strong positions, fortified in haste, at the beginning of the war¹⁶.

The Jews fulfilled our Lord's words²², I am come in My Father's Name and ye receive Me not; if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive. Their first destruction was the punishment of their Deicide, the crucifixion of Jesus, the Christ; their second they brought upon themselves by accepting a false Christ, a robber²³ and juggler²⁴. "580,000 are said to have perished in battle²⁵," besides "an incalculable number by famine and fire, so that all Judæa was made well-nigh a desert." The Jews say that "no olives remained in Palestine." Hadrian "destroyed it," making it "an utter desolation" and "effacing all remains of it." "We read²⁶," says St. Jerome³⁰, "the expedition of Ælius Hadrianus against the Jews, who so destroyed Jerusalem and its walls, as, from the fragments and ashes of the city to build a city, named from himself, Ælia." At this time³¹ there appears to have been a formal act, whereby the Romans marked the legal annihilation of ci-

Romans made no account of them at first, but when all Judæa was moved and all the Jews throughout the world were set in commotion and conspired and publicly and privately inflicted much evil on the Romans, and many foreigners helped them in hope of gain, and the whole world was shaken, Hadrian sent his best general against them." Dio Cass. lxi. 13. ¹⁵ "50 fortresses of much account and 935 very well-known villages." Dio C. (almost a contemporary) lb. 14. ¹⁶ Ib. 12.

¹⁷ De Saulcy, Numismatique Judaïque, p. 156-70. The coins bear the inscription "the 1st year of the redemption of Jerusalem," "the first" and "second year of the freedom of Jerusalem." Two of them are cast upon coins of Trajan and Vespasian. Ib. p. 162. The Abbé Barthélemi (App. to Bayer Num. Hebr. Sam. Vind. L. iii. p. ix-xi.) mentions four of Trajan's, recast by Barcocheba. Bayer mentions coins of the 3rd and 4th year, but anonymous. (Num. Hebr. Sam. p. 171.) De Saulcy supposes these to belong to the revolt against Vespasian. (p. 153, 4.) The title and the name "Simon" which probably Barcocheba took, were doubtless intended to recall the memory of the Maccabees. The Jerusalem Talmud speaks of money with the impress of Ben Coziba, ("son of a lie" as the Jews changed his name.) Lightfoot, Opp. ii. 143. Mr Vaux, keeper of the coins, British Museum, tells me that these coins (of which some are in the British Museum) are certainly genuine. See also Madden, p. 161-182.

¹⁸ S. Chrys. adv. Jud. v. 10. He does not apparently mean that they actually began it. ¹⁹ Eus. Dem. Ev. ii. 38. vi. 18. The Samaritan Chronicle (c. 47. ed. Juynboll) gives an account of a siege by Adrian in which it mixes up fables and facts belonging to the siege of Titus, (which it omits,) but I do not see any traces of traditional fact.

²⁰ Eus. H. E. iv. 6. ²¹ The Rev. G. Williams, (Holy City, i. 209-13.) has at once identified Bether with the name, the mountains of Bether, (Cant. ii. 17), and ruins, "khirbet el yehd," (ruins of the Jews) near the village still called Bittir near Jerusalem. (See Robinson's or Kiepert's map.) There are traces both of fortifications and excavations, such as Dio speaks of. Bether as well as Bithron beyond Jordan (2 Sam. ii. 29.) had their name from deep incisions. (See the use of חָבַר, חָבַר, חָבַר, Gen. xv. 10.) ²² S. John v. 43.

²³ "given to murder and robbery." Eus. H. E. iv. 6. See Maimonides above, n. 13.

²⁴ S. Jer. Apol. 2. c. Ruf. § 31. He pretended to breathe fire, a trick ascribed by Florus iii. 19. to Eunus author of the servile war in Sicily. Vallars. ²⁵ Dio l. c.

²⁶ Talm. Jerus. Pea 7 in Lightfoot, l. c. ²⁷ Appian de reb. Syr. 50. "Jerusalem, which Ptolemy king of Egypt first destroyed; then, when rebuilt, Vespasian razed to the ground, and again Hadrian, in my time." ²⁸ S. Chrys. l. c. § 11.

²⁹ S. Jerome then took this statement from written history. ³⁰ in Joel i. 4.

³¹ The Mishnah places it after the capture of Bether. "On the 9th of Ab, it was decreed against our fathers, that they should not enter the land; and the Temple was laid ties; an act esteemed, at this time, one of most extreme severity¹. When a city was to be built, its compass was marked with a plough; the Romans, where they willed to unmake a city, did, on rare occasions, turn up its soil with the plough. Hence the saying, "A city with a plough is built, with a plough overthrown." The city so ploughed forfeited all civil rights²; it was counted to have ceased to be. The symbolical act under Hadrian appears to have been directed against both the civil and religious existence of their city, since the revolts of the Jews were mixed up with their religious hopes. The Jews relate that both the city generally, and the Temple, were ploughed. The ploughing of the city was the last of those mournful memories, which made the month Ab a time of sorrow. But the ploughing of the temple is also especially recorded. S. Jerome says, "In this [the 5th Month] was the Temple at Jerusalem burnt and destroyed, both by Nebuchadnezzar, and many years afterwards by Titus and Vespasian; the city Bether, whither thousands of Jews had fled, was taken; the Temple was ploughed, as an insult to the conquered race, by Titus Annius Rufus." The Gemara says, "When Turnus, [or it may be "when Tyrant] Rufus ploughed the porch," [of the temple.] Perhaps Hadrian meant thus to declare the desecration of the site of the Temple, and so to make way for the further desecration by his temple of Jupiter. He would declare the worship of God at an end. The horrible desecration of placing the temple of Ashtaroth over the Holy Sepulchre⁶ was probably a part of the same policy, to make the Holy City utterly Heathen. The "Capitoline"⁷ was part of its new name in honor of the Jupiter of the Roman Capitol. Hadrian intended, not to rebuild Jerusalem, but to build a new city under his own name. "The city being thus bared of the Jewish nation, and its old inhabitants having been utterly destroyed, and an alien race settled there, the Roman city which afterwards arose, having changed its name, is called Ælia in honor of the Emperor Ælius Hadrianus." It was a Roman colony⁸, with Roman temples, Roman amphitheatres. Idolatry was stamped on its coins⁹. Hadrian excluded from it, on the North, almost the whole of Bezetha or the new city, which Agrippa had enclosed by his wall, and, on the South, more than half of Mount Zion¹⁰, which was left, as Micah foretold, to be ploughed as a field. The Jews themselves were prohibited from entering the Holy Land¹¹, so that the heathen Celsus says, "they have neither a clod nor a hearth left." Ælia, then, being a new city, Jerusalem was spoken of, as having ceased to be. The Roman magistrates, even in Palestine, did not know the name¹². Christians too used the name Ælia¹³, and that, in solemn documents, as the Canon of Nice¹⁴. In the 4th century the city was still called Ælia by the Christians¹⁵, and, on the first Mohammedan coin¹⁷ in the 7th century, it still bore that name. A series of writers speak of the desolation of Jerusalem. In the next century Origen addresses a Jew, "If going to the earthly city, Jerusalem, thou shalt find it overthrown, reduced to dust and ashes, weep not, as ye now do." "From that [Hadrian's] time until now, the extremest desolation having taken possession of the place, their once renowned hill of Zion—now no wise differing from the rest of the country, is cultivated by Romans, so that we ourselves have with our own eyes observed the place ploughed by oxen and sown all over. And Jerusalem, being inhabited by aliens, has to this day the stones gathered out of it, all the inhabitants, in our own times too, gathering up the stones out of its ruins for their private or public and common buildings. You may observe with your own eyes the mournful sight, how the stones from the Temple itself and from the Holy of holies have been taken for the idol-temples and to build amphitheatres." "Their once holy place has now come to such a state, as in no way to fall short of the overthrow of Sodom." S. Hilary, who had been banished into the East, says, "The Royal city of David, taken by the Babylonians and overthrown, held not its queenly dignity under the rule of its lords; but, taken afterwards and burnt by the Romans, it now is not." S. Cyril of Jerusalem, Bishop of the new town, and delivering his catechetical lectures in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, pointed out to his hearers the fulfilment of prophecy; "The place [Zion] is now filled with gardens of cucumbers." "If they [the Jews] plead the captivity," says S. Athanasius²³, "and say that on that ground Jerusalem is not." "The whole world, over which they are scattered," says S. Gregory of Nazianzum²⁴, "is one monument of their calamity, their worship closed, and the soil of Jerusalem itself scarcely known."

It is apparently part of the gradual and increasing fulfilment of God's word, that the ploughing of the city and of the site of the Temple, and the continued cultivation of so large a portion of Zion, are recorded in the last visitation when its iniquity was full. It still remains ploughed as a field. "At the time I visited this sacred ground, one part of it supported a crop of barley, another was undergoing the labour of the plough, and the soil, turned up, consisted of stone and lime filled with earth, such as is usually met with in the foundations of ruined cities. It is nearly a mile in circumference." "On the S. E. Zion slopes down, in a series of cultivated terraces, sharply though not abruptly, to the sites of the Kings' gardens.—Here and round to the S. the whole declivities are sprinkled with olive trees, which grow luxuriantly among the narrow slips of corn." Not Christians only, but Jews also have seen herein the fulfilment upon themselves of Micah's words, spoken now "26 centuries ago."

desolate the first and second time; and Bether was taken; and the city was ploughed." Taanith, c. 6. § 6. Mishna, ii. p. 382. ed. Surenhus. Rashi regards this as a fulfilment of Jer. xxvi. 18. and of this place. Ib. p. 383. col. 2. Buxtorf quotes also Yotseroth, (Jewish hymns), c. Comm. f. 35. l. 1. for the fact. Lex. Rabb. p. 916.

¹ Seneca de clem. i. 26. Deyl. ² Isidor. lxxv. I. &c. ³ "If the usufruct [annual produce] be left to a city, and the plough be passed over it, (as befel Carthage,) it ceases to be a city, and so by a sort of death it ceases to have the usufruct." Modestinus in l. Si usus fructus 21. ff. quibus modis usus fructus amittatur. L.

⁴ On Zech. viii. 16, 17. S. Jerome has the same order as the Talmud.

⁵ Taanith, l. c. The Jerusalem Talmud has "the temple" for "the porch."

⁶ Eus. Vit. Const. iii. 26. Socr. i. 17. Soz. ii. 1. S. Jer. Ep. 58, ad Paul. § 3.

⁷ Col. Æl. Capitol. i. e. Colonia Ælia Capitolina. ⁸ Eus. H. E. iv. 6.

⁹ See Roman coins in De Saulcy, p. 171-187. from Hadrian, A.D. 136, to Hostilian, A.D. 250.

¹⁰ See Pierotti's excellent map of Jerusalem, (also reduced in his "Jerusalem explored," n. 3.)

¹¹ Eusebius, l. c. affirms this on the authority of Aristo of Pella, a contemporary; Tertullian says, "they are not permitted, even in the right of strangers, to greet their native land so much as with the sole of their foot" (Apol. c. 21. p. 45. Oxf. Tr. and adv. Jud. c. 13.) S. Jerome affirms the same. (on Is. vi. 11-13. and on Dan. ix. end.) Celsus urges the fact of their total expulsion as a proof of God's breach of promise; (in Orig. c. Cels. viii. 69.) and Origen agrees as to the fact. S. Justin speaks of their expulsion (as a nation) after their defeat, (Dial. c. 110.) so that, when he speaks of Jerusalem only, (Apol. i. 47.) it may have been that he spoke of it alone, as sufficing for the prophecy which he was explaining. The prohibition was subsequently limited to Jerusalem, with the well-known concession to behold it without entering, one day in the year, to weep. Itin. Hieros. p. 591. S. Hil. on Ps. 58. § 7. S. Jer. on Zeph. i. 15, 16, &c. Both S. Chrysostom and S. Augustine speak of the Jews, as excluded from Jerusalem. "Dost thou for thy sins, O Jew, remain so long out of Jerusalem?" S. Chrys. adv. Jud. vi. 2. "They were excluded from the place where they crucified Christ; now that place is full of Christians who praise Him; it hath no Jew." S. Aug. in Pa. lxiii. n. 18. "Now thou seekest a Jew in the city of Jerusalem, and findest not." in Ps. cxiv. n. 3. ¹² L. c.

¹³ Eus. de mart. Pal. c. 11. ¹⁴ "In the suburbs of what is now Ælia." Eus. H. E. ii. 12. add vi. 20. de mart. Pal. c. 11. (Deyl.) ¹⁵ Can. vii.

¹⁶ "From that [Hadrian's] time until now, it is called Ælia from the name of him who conquered and destroyed it." (S. Chrys. adv. Jud. v. 11. T. i. p. 645.) "Which is now Ælia." S. Jer. Ep. 129, ad Dard. § 5.

¹⁷ De Saulcy, p. 188. ¹⁸ In Jos. Hom. xvii. 1. Opp. ii. 438.

¹⁹ Eus. Dem. Ev. viii. 8. p. 406. ²⁰ Ib. v. 23. p. 250.

²¹ S. Hil. in Ps. 131. § 18. ²² Lect. xvi. 9. § 18. see Oxf. Tr.

²³ de Incarn. n. 39. T. i. p. 81. Ben. ²⁴ Orat. 6. § 18. Ben.

²⁵ Richardson's Travels, p. 359, quoted by Keith on Prophecy, p. 257. ²⁶ Porter, Ildbook, p. 92.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The glory, 3 peace, 8 kingdom, 11 and victory of the church.

V. 1. But [And] in the last days it shall come to pass. God's promises, goodness, truth, fail not. He withdraweth His Presence from those who receive Him not, only to give Himself to those who will receive Him. Mercy is the sequel and end of chastisement. Micah then joins on this great prophecy of future mercy to the preceding woe, as its issue in the order of God's Will. And it shall be. He fixes the mind to some great thing which shall come to pass; it shall be. Then follows, in marked reference to the preceding privations, a superabundance of mercy. For the mountain of the house, which should be as a forest and which was left unto them desolate, there is the mountain of the Lord's house established; for the heap of dust and the ploughed field, there is the flowing-in of the Gentiles; for the night and darkness, that there shall be no vision, there is the fulness of revelation; for corrupt judgment, teaching, divining, a law from God Himself going forth through the world; for the building of Jerusalem with blood, one universal peace.

In the last days, lit. the end¹ of the days, i. e. of those days which are in the thoughts of the speaker. Politically, there are many beginnings and many endings; as many endings as there are beginnings, since all human polity begins, only to end, and to be displaced in its turn by some new beginning, which too runs its course, only to end. Religiously, there are but two consummations. All time, since man fell, is divided into two halves, the looking forward to Christ to come in humility; the looking forward to His Coming in glory. These are the two events on which man's history turns. To that former people the whole period of Christ's kingdom was one future, the fulness of all their own shadows, types, sacrifices, services, prophecies, longings, being. The end of their days was the beginning of the new Day of Christ: the coming of His Day was necessarily the close of the former days, the period of the dispensation which prepared for it. The Prophets then by the words, the end of the days, always mean the times of the Gospel². The end of the days is the close of all which went before, the last dispensation, after which there shall be no other. Yet this too has last days of its own, which shall close God's kingdom of grace and shall issue in the Second Coming of Christ; as the end of those former days, which closed the times of "the law," issued in His First Coming. We are then at once living in the last times, and looking on to a last time still to come. In the one way St. Peter speaks³ of the last times, or *the end of the times*⁴, in which Christ was manifested for us, in contrast with the foundations of the world, before which He was foreordained. And St. Paul contrasts God's⁵ speaking to the fathers in the Prophets, and at the end of these days⁶ speaking to us in the Son; and of our Lord coming⁷ at the end, consummation, of the times⁸, to put away sins

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.
Is. 2, 2, &c.
Ezek. 17, 22, 23

BUT in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the LORD shall be established in by the sacrifice of Himself; and says that the things which befel the Jews⁹ were written for our admonition, unto whom the ends of the times¹⁰ [i. e. of those of the former people of whom he had been speaking] are come; and St. John speaks of this as¹¹ the last time. In the other way, they contrast the last days, not with the times before them but with their own, and then plainly they are a last and distant part of this their own last time. ¹²The Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith: ¹³In the last days perilous times shall come: ¹⁴There shall come at the end of the days scoffers: ¹⁵They told you that there should be mockers in the last time. The Jews distributed all time between "this world" and "the coming world"¹⁶, including under "the coming world" the time of grace under the Messiah's reign, and the future glory. To us the names have shifted, since this present world¹⁷ is to us the kingdom of Christ, and there remains nothing further on this earth to look to, beyond what God has already given us. Our future then, placed as we are between the two Comings of our Lord, is, of necessity, beyond this world¹⁸.

The mountain of the house of the Lord shall be [abidingly] established. He does not say merely, it shall be established. Kingdoms may be established at one time, and then come to an end. He says, *it shall be a thing established*¹⁹. His saying is expanded by Daniel; ²⁰*In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall not be destroyed for ever, and it shall abide for ever.* The house of the Lord was the centre of His worship, the token of His Presence, the pledge of His revelations and of His abiding acceptance, protection, favor. All these were to be increased and continuous. The image is one familiar to us in the Hebrew Scriptures. People were said to go up²¹ to it, as to a place of dignity. In the Psalm on the carrying of the Ark thither, the hill of God is compared to the many-topped mountains of Basan²², (the Hermon-peaks which bound Basan,) and so declared to be greater than they, as being the object of God's choice. The mountain where God was worshipped rose above the mountains of idolatry. Ezekiel, varying the image, speaks of the Gospel as an overshadowing cedar²³, planted by God upon an high mountain and an eminent, in the mountain of the height of Israel, under which should dwell all foul of every wing; and, in his vision of the Temple, he sees this, the image of the Christian Church, ²⁴upon a very high mountain. Our Lord speaks of His Apostles and the Church in them, as ²⁵a city set upon a hill which cannot be hid. The seat of God's worship was to be seen far and wide; nothing was to obscure it. It, now lower than the surrounding hills, was then to be as on the summit of them. Human elevation, the more exalted it is, the more unstable is it. Divine greatness alone is at once solid and exalted. The new kingdom of God was at once to ¹ Gesenius adduces, as the single instance in which עֲשֵׂה is to mean "sequel," Is. xlv. 10, where "the end" answers to "the beginning," עֲשֵׂה to עָשָׂה. It is the end of the year, Deut. xi. 12; the end of a person, Pr. v. 4, Ps. xxxvii. 37; of a nation, Jer. xxxi. 17; of a thing, i. e. its issue, Pr. xxiii. 32; "the end of the sea," Ps. cxxxix. 9. The phrase is rendered rightly by the Ch. עֲשֵׂה יוֹם. The ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τῶν χρόνων of S. Paul S. Peter and S. Jude is nearly the translation of עֲשֵׂה יוֹם.

² Hos. iii. 5. Is. ii. 2, Jer. xxiii. 20, xxx. 24, xlvi. 47, xlix. 39, Ezek. xxxviii. 16. Dan. x. 14. Daniel uses it in Chaldee. (ii. 28.) Nebuchadnezzar's dream which he is interpreting ended in the kingdom of Christ. On the Jewish agreement, see on Hos. iii. 5. p. 25. n. 10.

³ 1 Ep. i. 20. ⁴ According to the reading ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τῶν χρόνων, preferred by Alter and Tischendorf. ⁵ Heb. i. 1.

⁶ ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τῶν ἡμερῶν τούτων, preferred by Griesbach, Matthiae, Scholz, Tisch. ⁷ Heb. ix. 26. ⁸ ἐπὶ συντελείᾳ τῶν αἰώνων, comp. S. Matt. xiii. 40. xxiv. 3.

⁹ 1 Cor. x. 11.

¹⁰ τὰ τέλη τῶν αἰώνων. ¹¹ 1 Ep. ii. 18.

¹² 1 Tim. iv. 1. ἐν ὑστέροις χρόνοις. ¹³ 2 Tim. iii. 1. ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις.

¹⁴ 2 Pet. iii. 3. ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τῶν ἡμερῶν, preferred by Griesb., Alter, Matthiae, Scholz.

¹⁵ Jude 18. ἐν ἐσχάτῳ χρόνῳ or ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τοῦ χρόνου, preferred by Scholz, Tisch.

¹⁶ עולם הזה ועולם הבא. See Schöttg. de Messia i. 2. 4. p. 23-27.

¹⁷ S. Matt. xiii. 40. Eph. i. 21. Tit. ii. 12.

¹⁸ S. Mark x. 30. S. Luke xviii. 30. xx. 35. Eph. i. c. Heb. vi. 5. Attention to this language of Holy Scripture and the distant future which it looks on to, should have saved misbelievers from imagining that Apostles erroneously expected a near end of the world.

¹⁹ יְהִי נֹכַח, as in 1 Kgs. ii. 45, of the throne of David. "It is an expression denoting continuance and perpetuity, that it shall continually remain on its settlement." Poc. from Abarb. ²⁰ ii. 44. ²¹ See on Hos. i. 11. p. 12.

²² Ps. lxxviii. 16, 17. ²³ xvii. 22, 23. ²⁴ xl. 2. ²⁵ S. Matt. v. 14.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it.

be exalted above the hills, and established on the top of the mountains; exalted, at once, above every thing human, and yet established, strong as the mountains on which it rested, and unassailable, unconquerable, seated secure aloft, between heaven, whence it came and to which it tends, and earth, on which it just rests in the sublime serenity of its majesty.

The image sets forth the supereminence of the Lord's House above all things earthly. It does not define wherein that greatness consists. The flowing in of the nations is a fruit of it¹. The immediate object of their coming is explained to be, to learn to know and to do the will of God². But the new revelation does not form all its greatness. That greatness is from the Presence of God, revealing and evermore teaching His Will, ruling, judging, rebuking, peacemaking³. "The mountain of the Lord's House was then exalted above the hills by the bodily Presence of Christ, when He, in the Temple built on that mountain, spake, preached, worked so many miracles; as, on the same ground, Haggai saith⁴, the glory of this latter house shall be greater than the glory of the former." "This mountain, the Church of Christ, transcends all laws, schools, doctrines, religions, Synagogues of Jews and Philosophers, which seemed to rise aloft among men, like mountain-tops, yea, whatever under the sun is sublime and lofty, it will overpass, trample on, subdue to itself."

Even Jews have seen the meaning of this figure. Their oldest mystical book explains it⁵. "And it shall be in the last days, when namely the Lord shall visit the daughter of Jacob, then shall the mountain of the house of the Lord be firmly established, i.e. the Jerusalem which is above, which shall stand firmly in its place, that it may shine by the light which is above. (For no light can retain its existence, except through the light from above.) For in that time shall the light from above shine sevenfold more than before; according to that⁶, Moreover the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun; and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days, in the day that the Lord bindeth up the breach of His people and healeth the stroke of their wound." Another, of the dry literal school, says⁷, "It is well known that the house of the Temple is not high. The meaning then is, that its fame shall go forth far, and there shall return to it from all quarters persons with offerings, so that it shall be, as if it were on the top of all hills, so that all the inhabitants of the earth should see it."

Some¹⁰ interpret the mountain to be Christ, Who is called the Rock¹¹, on the confession of Whom, God-Man, the house of the Lord, i.e. the Church is built¹², the precious Corner-stone¹³, which is laid, beside which no foundation can be laid¹⁴; the great mountain, of which Daniel¹⁵ prophesied. It is firmly established, so that the gates of Hell shall not prevail against the Church, being built thereon; exalted above hills and mountains, i.e. above all besides, greater or smaller, which has any eminence; for He in truth is¹⁶ highly exalted and hath a Name above every name, being¹⁷ at the Right Hand of God in the heavenly places, far above all principality and power and

2 And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world but also in that which is to come; and all things are under His Feet. And this for us, in that He, the Same, is the Head over all things to the Church which is His Body, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all. "He is God and Man, King and Priest, King of kings, and a Priest abiding for ever. Since then His Majesty reacheth to the Right Hand of God, neither mountains nor hills, Angels nor holy men, reach thereto; for¹⁹ to which of the Angels said God at any time, Sit thou on My Right Hand?"

"Aloft then is the Church of God raised, both in that its Head is in heaven and the Lord of all, and that, on earth, it is not like the Temple, in one small people, but²¹ set on a hill that it cannot be hid, or remain unseen even to those far from it. Its doctrine too and life are far above the wisdom of this world, shewing in them nothing of earth, but are above; its wisdom is the knowledge and love of God and of His Son Jesus Christ, and its life is hid with Christ in God, in those who are justified in Him and hallowed by His Spirit." In Him, it is lifted above all things, and with the eyes of the mind beholdeth (as far as may be) the glory of God, soaring on high towards Him Who is the Author of all being, and, filled with Divine light, it owneth Him the Maker of all.

And people, [peoples, nations,] shall flow unto [lit. upon] it. A mighty tide should set in to the Gospel. The word²² is appropriated to the streaming in of multitudes, such as of old poured into Babylon, the merchant-empire of the world²³. It is used of the distant nations who should throng in one continuous stream into the Gospel, or of Israel streaming together from the four corners of the world²⁴. So Isaiah foretells²⁵, Thy gates shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night; that they may bring unto thee the forces of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought. These were to flow upon it, perhaps so as to cover it, expressing both the multitude and density of the throng of nations, how full the Church should be, as the swollen river spreads itself over the whole champaign country, and the surging flood-tide climbs up the face of the rock which bounds it. The flood once covered the highest mountains to destroy life; this flood should pour in for the saving of life. "It is a miracle, if waters ascend from a valley and flow to a mountain. So is it a miracle that earthly nations should ascend to the Church, whose doctrine and life are lofty, arduous, sublime. This the grace of Christ effecteth, mighty and lofty, as being sent from heaven. As then waters, conducted from the fountains by pipes into a valley, in that valley bound up and rise nearly to their original height, so these waters of heavenly grace, brought down into vallies, i.e. the hearts of men, make them to bound up with them into heaven and enter upon and embrace a heavenly life."

2. And many nations shall come. Isaiah²⁷ added the word all to Micah's prophecy. So our Lord said, "This Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and the elect are to be gathered out of all nations and kindreds and people and tongues"²⁹. All

¹ iv. 1, 2. ² iv. 2. ³ iv. 3, 4. ⁴ Dion. ⁵ ii. 9.
⁶ Lap. ⁷ Zohar, f. 93. ⁸ Is. xxx. 26. ⁹ Aben Ezra.
¹⁰ Tert. c. Jud. i. 3. Orig. c. Cels. ii. 33. S. Cypr. Test. ii. 18. Euseb. Ecl. Proph. iv. 1. p. 171. ed. Ox. S. Jerome here, S. Aug. de Civ. D. xviii. 30. Ps. Basil on Is.
¹¹ 1 Cor. x. 4-6. ¹² S. Matt. xvi. 18. see Note Q. on Tertull. p. 492 sqq. Oxf. Tr.
¹³ Is. xxviii. 16. 1 Pet. ii. 6. Eph. ii. 20. ¹⁴ 1 Cor. iii. 11.

¹⁵ Dan. ii. 35. ¹⁶ Phil. ii. 9. ¹⁷ Eph. i. 20-23. ¹⁸ from Rup.
¹⁹ Heb. i. 13. ²⁰ from S. Cyr.
²¹ S. Matt. v. 14. ²² נהר (from נהר river, stream) is used only figuratively.
²³ Jer. li. 44. ²⁴ Ib. xxxi. 12. It is used in these places only, and Is. ii. 2.
²⁵ Is. lx. 11. add Rev. xxi. 25, 26. ²⁶ Lap. ²⁷ Is. ii. 2.
²⁸ S. Matt. xxiv. 14. ²⁹ Rev. vii. 9.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

God of Jacob; and he will teach us of nations shall flow into it. The all might be many or few. Both prophets say that those all should be many. Judah probably knew already of many. The history of Genesis gave them a wide-expanding knowledge of the enlargement of mankind after the flood, in Europe, Asia, Africa, as they then existed in their nations. The sons of Japhet had already spread over the whole coast of our Western sea, and far North; the Cimmerians¹, or Cymry, Scandinavians², Carpathians³, (probably Celts,) Armenians⁴, (including the kindred Phrygians,) Scythians⁵, Medes, Ionians⁶, Æolians⁷, Iberians⁸, Cypriotes⁹, Dardani¹⁰, Tybarenes¹¹, Moschi¹², and the Turseni¹³, or perhaps the Thracians. On the East, the sons of Shem had spread in Elam, Asshur, Arrapachitis¹⁴; they occupied the intervening tract of Aram; in the N. W. they reached to Lydia. Southward the sons of Joktan were in Arabia. Micah's hearers knew how, of the sons of Ham, Cush had spread far to the S. E. and S. from Babylonia to Æthiopia; Egypt they remembered too well, and, beyond it, they knew of the far-scattered tribes of the Libyans, who extended along the coast of Africa. Phœnician trade filled up this great outline. They themselves had, in Solomon's time, traded with India¹⁵; about this time, we know that they were acquainted with the furthest East, China¹⁶. Such was the sight before the human mind of the Prophet; such the extent of the nations whom his people knew of. Some were the deadly enemies of his people; some were to be its conquerors. He knew that the ten tribes were to be abidingly *wanderers among the nations*¹⁷, despised by them¹⁸; "a people, the strangers and sojourners of the whole world"¹⁹. He knew many of those nations to be sunk in idolatry, viciousness; proud, contemptuous, lawless; he saw them fixed in their idolatries. All people will walk every one in the name of his god. But he saw what eye of man could not see, what the will of man could not accomplish, that He, Whom now Judah alone partially worshipped, would turn the hearts of His creatures to Himself, to seek Him, not in their own ways, but as He should reveal Himself at Jerusalem. Micah tells them distinctly, that those who should believe would be a great multitude from many nations. In like way Isaiah expresses the great multitude of those for whom Christ should atone. ²⁰*He bare the sin of many.* ²¹*By knowledge of Him shall My righteous Servant make many righteous.* And our Lord Himself says; ²²*The Son of man came to give His life a ransom for many.* ²³*This is My Blood—which is shed for many for the remission of sins.* In Micah's time not one people, scarcely some poor fragments of the Jewish people, went up to worship God at Zion, to call to remembrance His benefits, to learn of Him. Those who should thereafter worship Him, should be many nations.

And say, exhorting one another, in fervor and mutual love, as Andrew exhorted his brother Simon, and Philip Nathanael, and the woman of Samaria those of her city, to come to Christ: and so all since, who have been won by Him, by word or example, by preaching or by deed, in public or in pri-

¹ Gomer. ² Ashkenaz, Scandinavia, Scanzia in Jornandes. Knobel, Völkertafel d. Genesis, p. 35. ³ Riphath, from whom also the Montes Riphæi are named. ⁴ Togarmah. ⁵ Magog. ⁶ Javan. ⁷ Elishah, Αἰολεῖς or Αἰλῆς, Knobel; Elis, Boch. iii. 4. ⁸ Tarshish. "Tarceis, whence the Iberians." Eus. (Tuch ad loc.) ⁹ Chittim. ¹⁰ Dodanim. ¹¹ Tubal. ¹² Meshech. ¹³ Tiras, Tyrseni, (Tuch,) Thracians, Boch. iii. 2. Knobel. ¹⁴ Arphaxad, Gen. x. 22. ¹⁵ As appears from the Tamul name for the peacock ṭṭam. ṭṭam 1 Kgs. x. 22; the Sanskrit or Malabar name for the ape, ṭṭam kapi; (Ib. see Ges.) which came with the crea-

his ways, and we will walk in his paths: Before CHRIST
cir. 710.

vate, bear along with them others to seek Him Whom they themselves have found.

Let us go up, leaving the lowness and earthliness of their former conversation, and mounting upward on high where Christ is, desiring righteousness, and athirst to know His ways.

To the house of the God of Jacob. They shall seek Him as Jacob sought Him, "who left his father's house and removed into another land, was a man of heavy toils and served for hire, but obtained special help from God, and, undistinguished as he was, became most glorious. So too the Church, leaving all Heathen wisdom, and having its conversation in Heaven, and therefore persecuted and enduring many hardships, enjoys now glory with God."

And He, i. e. the God of Jacob of Whom he had just spoken, shall teach us of His ways. They do not go to God, because they know Him, but that they may know Him. They are drawn by a mighty impulse towards Him. Howsoever attracted, they come, not making bargains with God, (as some now would,) what they should be taught, that He should reveal to them nothing transcending reason, nothing exceeding or contradicting their notions of God; they do not come with reserves, that God should not take away this or that error, or should not disclose any thing of His incomprehensibility. They come in holy simplicity, to learn whatever He will condescend to tell them; in holy confidence, that He, the Infallible Truth, will teach them infallibly. They say, of His ways. For all learning is by degrees, and all which all creatures could learn in all eternity falls infinitely short of His truth and Holiness. Nay, in all eternity the highest creature which He has made and which He has admitted most deeply into the secrets of His Wisdom will be as infinitely removed as ever from the full knowledge of His Wisdom and His Love. For what is finite, enlarged, expanded, accumulated to the utmost degree possible, remains finite still. It has no proportion to the Infinite. But even here, all growth in grace implies growth in knowledge. The more we love God, the more we know of Him; and with increased knowledge of Him come higher perceptions of worship, praise, thanksgiving, of the character of faith, hope, charity, of our outward and inward acts and relations to God, the unboundedness of God's love to us and the manifoldness of the ways of pleasing Him, which, in His love, He has given us. Since then the whole Christian life is a growth in grace, and even St. Paul, ²⁵*forgetting those things which are behind and reaching forth to those which are before, pressed towards the mark for the high calling of God in Christ Jesus*, then St. Paul too was ever learning, in intensity, what he knew certainly by revelation, of His ways. Again, as each blade of grass is said to differ from another, so, and much more, each soul of man which God has created for Himself. No one ever saw or could imagine two human beings, in whom the grace of God had unfolded itself in exactly the same way. Each saint will have his distinct beauty around the Throne. But then each will have learnt of His ways, in tures themselves; a Sanskrit name for elephant, ibha, in ṭṭam ivory, lit. "elephant's tooth;" (Ib.) and a Malabar name for a wood, algu, valgu (ka.) See Max Müller, Science of language, p. 205. ed. 3. Ophir itself, (which is mentioned in connection with these things,) Max Müller identifies, beyond question, with the Abiria of Ptolemy above Patalene; the people, "called by Hindu Geographers Abhira and "the Ahirs" in "Macmurdo's account of the province of Cutch." Ib. ¹⁶ Is. xlix. 12. see Gesenius Thes. p. 948-50. ¹⁷ See on Hos. ix. 17. p. 61, 2. ¹⁸ See on Hos. viii. 8. p. 52. ¹⁹ S. Greg. Naz. Or. 22. n. 2. ²⁰ Is. liii. 12. ²¹ Ib. 11. ²² S. Matt. xx. 28. ²³ Ib. xxvi. 28. add Rom. v. 15. ²⁴ Theoph. ²⁵ Phil. iii. 13, 14

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

3 ¶ And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into ^b plowshares, and

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

^b Is. 2. 4.
Joel 3. 10.

a different proportion or degree. His greatest saints, yea His Apostles, have been preeminent, the one in one grace, another in another. St. John Baptist came as a pattern of repentance, and contempt of self; St. John the Evangelist, stands out preeminent in deep tender burning personal love; St. Paul in zeal to spread the knowledge of Christ Crucified; St. Mary Magdalene in loving penitence. Even the Blessed Virgin herself, under inspiration, seems, in part, to speak of her *lowly lowness*¹, as that which God specially regarded in her, when He made her the Mother of God. Eternity only will set forth the fulness of the two words², He will teach us of His ways. For eternity will shew, how in all ³ worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as He will; and how the countless multitude of the redeemed have corresponded to His gifts and drawings. "⁴ The way of the life to God-wards is one, in that it looketh to one end, to please God; but there are many tracks along it, as there are many modes of life;" and each several grace is a part of the way to God.

And we will walk in His paths, "⁵ by believing, hoping, loving, well-doing, and bearing patiently all trouble." "⁶ For it sufficeth not to believe, unless we act as He commandeth, and strive to enter on His ways, the strait and narrow path which leadeth unto life. He Himself then, when He had said, ⁷ Go, teach all nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, added, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." They say too, we will walk, i. e. go on from strength to strength, not stand still after having laboured for a while to do His Will, but hold on to all His ways and to Himself Who is the Way, until they appear before the Lord in Zion.

For the law, [lit. law⁸,] shall go forth from Zion. These are the Prophet's words, declaring why the nations should so flock to Zion. For he says, shall go forth, but the nations were not gathered to Zion, until the Gospel was already gone forth. He speaks of it as law simply, not the Jewish law as such, but a rule of life⁹ from God. Man's better nature is ill at ease, being out of harmony with God. It cannot be otherwise. Having been made in His likeness, it must be distressed by its unlikeness; having been made by Him for Himself, it must be restless without Him. What they indistinctly longed for, what drew them, was the hope to be conformed by Him to Him. The sight of superhuman holiness, life, love, endurance, ever won and wins those without to the Gospel or the Church. Our Lord Himself gives it, as the substance of prophecy¹⁰, that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His Name among all nations beginning at Jerusalem. The image may be that of a stream, issuing forth from Jerusalem¹¹ and watering the whole world. "¹² The law of the Gospel and the word of the Apostles, beginning from Jerusalem, as from a fountain, ran through the whole world, watering those who approached with faith." But in that it went forth, it may be meant, that it left those from among whom it went forth, and "¹³ Zion was indeed desolate of the law and Jerusalem bared of the Divine word." "¹⁴ The word of God passed from Jerusalem to the Gentiles." "¹⁵ For the shadow was done away, and the types ceased, and sacrifices were abolished, and every thing of Moses was, in the letter, brought to a close."

He does not say here, through whom God would so teach, but he does speak of a direct teaching of God. He does not say only, "God will give us a law," or "will make a revelation of Himself." He speaks of a Personal, direct, continuous act of teaching by God, carried on upon earth, whether the teacher be our Lord's word spoken once on earth, which does not pass away¹⁵, or God the Holy Ghost, as teaching in the Church and in the hearts which receive Him. The words which follow speak of a personal reign, as these speak of personal teaching.

3. And He shall judge among many people and rebuke strong nations afar off. Hitherto, they had walked each in their own ways¹⁶; now, they sought to be taught in the ways of God. Before, they had been lords of the world; now they should own a Judge higher than themselves. They were no common, but mighty¹⁷ nations, such as had heretofore been the oppressors of Israel. They were to be many, and those mighty, nations. He should "¹⁸ not only command, but rebuke, not weak or petty nations only, but mighty, and those not only near but afar." Mohammed had moral strength through what he stole from the law and the Gospel, and by his owning Christ as the Word of God. He was a heretic, rather than a heathen. Fearful scourge as he was, and as his successors have been, all is now decayed, and no mighty nation is left upon earth, which does not profess the Name of Christ.

He shall rebuke them; for it was an office of the Holy Ghost¹⁹ to reprove the world as to its sin, the righteousness of Christ, the judgment of the prince of this world. The Gospel conquered the world, not by compromises or concordats, but by convicting it. It alone could rebuke with power; for it was, like its Author, all-holy. It could rebuke with efficacy; for it was the word of Him Who knew what is in man. It could rebuke with awe; for it knew the secrets of eternal Judgment. It could rebuke winningly; for it knew²⁰ the love of Christ which passeth knowledge. Its martyrs suffered and rebuked their judges; and the world was amazed at the impotence of power and the might of suffering. It rebuked the enthroned idolatry of centuries; it set in rebellion by its rebukes every sinful passion of man, and it subdued them. Tyrants, whom no human power could reach, trembled before its censures. Then only is it powerless, if its corrupted or timid or paralysed ministers forfeit in themselves the power of rebuke.

And they shall beat their spears into ploughshares. "All things are made new in Christ." As the inward disquiet of evil men makes them restless, and vents itself towards others

¹ S. Luke i. 48. ταπεινότης in Prov. xvi. 19. LXX. is, "lowliness." The whole phrase ἐπιβλέψεν ἐπὶ τὴν ταπεινότητα τῆς δούλης αὐτοῦ, corresponds more to the use in 1 Kgs. (Sam.) i. 11. 2 Kgs. xvi. 12. 4 Kgs. xiv. 26. Neh. ix. 9. Ps. ix. 13. LXX. where the prominent sense is low estate. Perhaps, as in ὡς, the two meanings are blended.

² יְהוָה יִרְכָּנֵנוּ ³ 1 Cor. xii. 11. ⁴ Theoph. ⁵ Dion. ⁶ Rup. ⁷ S. Matt. xxviii. end. ⁸ תורה, not תורה. ⁹ תורה is always law, not, as some have said, "religion," or "doctrine" generally. It is used without the article, in this sense, as rule of life, (Prov. vi. 23. xxviii. 4, 7, 9. xxix. 18.) such as the Heathen had not, (Lam. ii. 9.) but which should be revealed to them, (here, Is. ii. 3. li. 4.) The תורה corresponds with the ὡς.

¹⁰ S. Luke xxiv. 47. ¹¹ See ab. on Joel iii. 18. p. 240. ¹² Theod. ¹³ S. Cyr.

¹⁴ S. Jer. ¹⁵ S. Matt. xxiv. 35. ¹⁶ Is. liii. 6.

¹⁷ צָבָה, which originally signified bound together, (coll. Arab.) thence used of the closing of the eyes. (Is. xxix. 10. xxxiii. 15.) included the idea of number. The secondary idea of strength, (as we use "well-knit,") is so prominent, that the idea of number, in the verb, only occurs in Ps. xl. 13. Jer. xv. 8; in the adj. Num. xxxii. 1. ¹⁸ Rib.

¹⁹ S. John xvi. 8-11.

²⁰ Eph. iii. 19.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710. their spears into || pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against || Or, scythes.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710. nation, 'neither shall they learn war any more.

Ps. 72. 7.

in envy, hatred, maliciousness, wrong, so the inward peace whereof He saith, My peace I give unto you, shall, wherever it reacheth, spread out abroad and, by the power of grace, bring to "all nations unity, peace, and concord." All, being brought under the one empire of Christ, shall be in harmony, one with the other. As far as in it lies, the Gospel is a Gospel of peace, and makes peace. Christians, as far as they obey Christ, are at peace, both in themselves and with one another. And this is what is here prophesied. The peace follows from His rule. Where He judges and rebukes, there even the mighty beat their swords into ploughshares. The universal peace, amid which our Lord was born in the flesh, the first which there had been since the foundation of the Roman empire, was, in God's Providence, a fruit of His kingdom. It was no chance coincidence, since nothing is by chance. God willed that they should be contemporaneous. It was fitting that the world should be still, when its Lord, the Prince of peace, was born in it. That outward cessation of public strife, though but for a brief time, was an image how His peace spread backwards as well as forwards, and of the peace which through Him, our Peace, was dawning on the world. "First, according to the letter, before That Child was born to us, ³on Whose shoulder the government is, the whole world was full of blood; people fought against people, kings against kings, nations against nations. Lastly, the Roman state itself was torn by civil wars, in whose battles all kingdoms shed blood. But after that, at the time of the Empire of Christ, Rome gained an undivided empire, the world was laid open to the journeys of Apostles, and the gates of cities were open to them, and, for the preaching of the One God, one single empire was formed. It may too be understood as an image, that, on receiving the faith of Christ, anger and unrestrained revilings were laid aside, so that each putteth his hand to the plough and looketh not back, and, breaking in pieces the shafts of contumelies, seeketh to reap spiritual fruit, so that, others labouring, we enter into their labours; and of us it is said, *They shall come with joy, bringing their sheaves*⁴. Now no one fighteth; for we read, ⁵*Blessed are the peacemakers*; no one learneth to ⁶*strive, to the subverting of the hearers*. And every one shall rest under his vine, so as to press out that ⁷*Wine which gladdeneth the heart of man*, under that ⁸*Vine*, whereof the Father is the Husbandman; and under his figtree, gathering the sweet ⁹*fruits of the Holy Spirit, love, joy, peace, and the rest*.²²

The fathers had indeed a joy, which we have not, that wars were not between Christians; for although "just wars are lawful," war cannot be on both sides just; very few wars have not, on both sides, what is against the spirit of the Gospel. For, except where there is exceeding wickedness on one side, or peril of further evil, the words of our Lord would hold good, in public as in private, ¹⁰*I say unto you, that ye resist not evil*.

This prophecy then is fulfilled 1) in the character of the Gospel. "The law of the Gospel worketh and preserveth peace. For it plucketh up altogether the roots of all war, avarice, ambition, injustice, wrath. Then, it teacheth to bear injuries, and, so far from requiting them, willet that we be prepared to receive fresh wrongs. He saith, ¹²*If any one smite thee on the right cheek, turn to him the other also, &c.* ¹³*I say unto you, Love your enemies, &c.* For neither did the old law give these counsels, nor did it explain so clearly the precept implied in them, nor had it that wonderful and most efficacious example of the patience and love of Christ, nor did it supply grace, whereby peace could be preserved; whereas now the first-fruits of the Spirit are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness.² 2) The prophecy has been fulfilled within and without, among individuals or bodies of men, in body or mind, in temper or in deed, as far as the Gospel has prevailed. ¹⁴*The multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one mind*; one, through One indwelling Spirit; one, though a great multitude, through one bond of love. ¹⁵"See how these Christians love one another;" "see how ready they are to die for one another," was, in the third century, a heathen proverb as to Christian love. ¹⁶"They love one another, almost before they know one another." ¹⁷"Their first lawgiver has persuaded them that they are all brethren." "We (which grieves you)," the Christian answered ¹⁸, "so love one another, because we know not how to hate. We call ourselves 'brethren' which you take ill, as men who have one Father, God, and are sharers in one faith, in one hope, coheirs." For centuries too, there was, for the most part, public peace of Christians among themselves. Christian soldiers fought only, as constrained by the civil law, or against Barbarian invaders, to defend life, wife, children, not for ambition, anger, or pride. Christians could then appeal, in fulfilment of the prophecy, to this outward, the fruit of the inward, peace. "We," says an early martyr ¹⁹, "who formerly stained ourselves with mutual slaughter, not only do not wage war with foes, but even, in order not to lie and deceive those who consume us, willingly professing Christ, meet death." "From the coming of the Lord," says another martyr ²⁰, "the New Testament, reconciling unto peace, and a life-giving law, went forth into all lands. If then another law and word, going forth from Jerusalem, produced such peace among the nations which received it, and thereby reproved much people of want of wisdom; then it would follow that the prophets spake of some other. But if the law of liberty, that is, the law of God preached by the Apostles, which went forth out of Jerusalem to all the world, worked such a transformation, that swords and spears of war He wrought into plough-shares and pruning-hooks, instruments of peace, and now men know not how to fight, but, when smitten, yield the other cheek, then the prophets spake of no other, but of Him who brought it to pass." "Even from this," says Tertullian ²¹, "you may know that Christ was promised, not as one mighty in war, but as a peace-bringer. Either deny that these things were prophesied, since they are plain to see; or, since they are written, deny that they are fulfilled. But if thou mayest deny neither, thou must own that they are fulfilled in Him, of Whom they are prophesied." "Of old ²²," says St. Athanasius, "Greeks and Barbarians, being idolaters, warred with one another, and were fierce towards those akin. For through their implacable war-slay one another," are Tertullian's statements as to the contemporary condition of the Hea-then, which their amazement at Christian love rather confirms. ¹⁶ Minut. Felix, p. 81. ed. Ouz. ¹⁷ Lucian, de morte Peregrini, l. 507. ed. Grav. ¹⁸ Min. F. p. 312, 3. ¹⁹ S. Justin M. Apol. i. 39. ²⁰ S. Iren. iv. 34, 4. ²¹ adv. Marc. iii. 21. ²² de Incarn. Verbi Dei, c. 51, 2.

¹ Litany. ² S. Jer. ³ Is. ix. 6. ⁴ Ps. cxxvi. 6. ⁵ S. Matt. v. 9. ⁶ 2 Tim. ii. 14. ⁷ Ps. civ. 15. ⁸ S. John. xv. 1. ⁹ Gal. v. 22. ¹⁰ S. Matt. v. 39. ¹¹ Rib. ¹² S. Matt. v. 39-42. ¹³ Ib. 44-48. ¹⁴ Acts iv. 32. ¹⁵ Tertull. Apol. e. 39. "For they themselves hate one another." "For they themselves are more ready to

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

4^d But they shall sit every man un-

1 Kings 4. 25. Zech. 3. 10.

fare no one might pass land or sea, unarmed. Their whole life was passed in arms; the sword was to them for staff and stay. They worshipped idols, sacrificed to demons, and yet from their reverence for idols they could gain no help to correct their minds. But when they passed into the school of Christ, then, of a truth, pricked in mind, they wondrously laid aside their savage slaughters, and now think no more of things of war; for now all peace and friendship are alone their mind's delight. Who then did this, Who blended in peace those who hated one another, save the Beloved Son of the Father, the common Saviour of all, Christ Jesus, Who, through His love, endured all things for our salvation? For of old too, the peace which should hold sway from Him was prophesied, they shall beat their swords into ploughshares. Nor is this incredible, since now too, the Barbarians with innate savageness, while they yet sacrifice to their idols, are mad with one another, and cannot for one hour part with their swords. But when they have received the teaching of Christ, forthwith for ever they turn to husbandry; and, in lieu of arming their hands with swords, stretch them out to prayer. And altogether, instead of warring with one another, they arm themselves against the devil and demons, warring against them with modesty and virtue of soul. This is a token of the Godhead of the Saviour. For what men could not learn among idols, this they have learned from Him. Christ's disciples, having no war with one another, array themselves against demons by their life and deeds of virtue, chase them and mock their captain the devil, chaste in youth, enduring in temptation, strong in toils, tranquil when insulted, unconcerned when despoiled."

And yet later, S. Chrysostome says, "1 Before the Coming of Christ, all men armed themselves and no one was exempt from this service, and cities fought with cities, and every where were men trained to war. But now most of the world is in peace; all engage in mechanical art or agriculture or commerce, and few are employed in military service for all. And of this too the occasion would cease, if we acted as we ought and did not need to be reminded by afflictions." "2 After the Sun of righteousness dawned, so far are all cities and nations from living in such perils, that they know not even how to take in hand any affairs of war.—Or if there be still any war, it is far off at the extremity of the Roman Empire, not in each city and country, as heretofore. For then, in any one nation, there were countless seditions and multiform wars. But now the whole earth which the sun surveys from the Tigris to the British isles, and therewith Lybia too and Egypt and Palestine, yea, all beneath the Roman rule,—ye know how all enjoy complete security, and learn of war only by hearsay." S. Cyril³ and Theodoret³ carry on this account into the fifth century after our Lord's Coming. Christians then during those four centuries could point to a present fulfilment of der his vine and under his fig tree; Before CHRIST

cir. 710.

prophecy, when we, for our sins, can only speak of the past. "The Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save: neither His ear heavy, that it cannot hear; but our iniquities have separated between us, and our God, and our sins have hid His Face from us, that He will not hear. Those first Christians could urge against the Jews the fulfilment of their prophecies herein, where the Jews can now urge upon us their seeming non-fulfilment; "5 In the time of king Messiah, after the wars of Gog and Magog, there shall be peace and tranquillity in all the world, and the sons of men shall have no need of weapons, but these promises were not fulfilled." The prophecy is fulfilled, in that the Gospel is a Gospel of peace and makes peace. Christians, as far as they obey Christ, are at peace both in themselves and with one another. The promises of God are perfect on His part: He is faithful to them. But He so wills to be freely loved by His intelligent creatures whom He formed for His love, that He does not force our free-agency. We can fall short of His promises, if we will. To those only who will it, the Gospel brings peace, stilling the passions, quelling disputes, banishing contentions, removing errors, calming concupiscence, soothing and repressing anger, in individuals, nations, the Church; giving oneness of belief, harmony of soul, contentment with our own, love of others as ourselves; so that whatever is contrary to this has its origin in something which is not of Christ nor of His Gospel.

4. But (And) they shall sit every man, under his vine and under his fig-tree. Palestine was a home of the vine and the fig-tree. Vineyards were a common property, possessed by all but the very poor⁶, or even by them⁷. The land was⁸ a land of bread and vineyards. The vine was the emblem of the people, in Psalmists and Prophets⁹. The bunch of grapes or the vine-leaf appear as characteristic emblems on Jewish coins¹⁰, chiefly in the times of their revolts under Vespasian and Hadrian¹¹. The fig is also mentioned as part of the characteristic fruitfulness of Palestine¹². It too was an universal property¹³. Both formed natural arbours; the fig had its name probably from its length¹⁴, the vine from the arch made by its drooping boughs¹⁵. Both formed, in those hot countries, a grateful shade. The vine, rising with its single stem, was spread over trellis-work or by props, so as to enclose a considerable space¹⁶. Even in Italy, a single vine shaded a portico¹⁷. In Palestine it grew *by the walls of the house*¹⁸. Rabbins relate how their forefathers sat and studied under the fig-tree¹⁹, as Nathanael was doubtless meditating or praying under one, when Jesus, being God, saw him²⁰. It exhibits a picture of domestic peace, each family gathered in harmony and rest under the protection of God, each content with what they have, neither coveting another's, nor disturbed in their own. Wine is explained in Holy Scripture to be an emblem of gladness, and the fig of sweetness²¹. "22 For exceeding sweet

¹ in Ps. xlv. § 3. T. v. p. 186. and here.

⁴ Is. lix. 1, 2.

² in Is. ii. n. 5. T. vi. p. 24, 5.

³ on Is. ii.

⁵ R. Isaac, Munim. Fid. i. 5. 7. et all.

⁶ This is implied in the laws concerning them, as Ex. xxiii. 11. Lev. xix. 10. xxv. 3, 4. Deut. xx. 6, &c. comp. Num. xvi. 14. Deut. vi. 11. 1 Sam. viii. 14. xxii. 7. 2 Kgs. xviii. 32. Ps. cvii. 37. Prov. xxxi. 16. 7 Neh. v. 4. Jer. xxxix. 10. 8 2 Kgs. xviii. 32.

⁹ Ps. lxxx. 8 sqq. Is. iii. 14. v. 1 sqq. xxvii. 2. Jer. ii. 21. xii. 10. Ezek. xv. xvii. 5-10. xix. 10. Hos. x. 1.

¹⁰ The bunch of grapes appears on coins of Herod Archelaus, Madden, Jew. Coinage, p. 94, 5. also of Tiberius, Ib. p. 144. See De Saulcy, p. 134, 140, 1. The golden vine, given by Alexander to the Romans is mentioned by Strabo. (Jos. Ant. 14. 3. 1.) The vine-tree stood at the porch of the Temple for receiving alms. Middoth 3. 8. in Levy Jüd. Münz. p. 134. Madden, p. 210.

¹¹ Madden, p. 162, 4, 7, 8. 170, 2, 3, 7. 180, 206, 7, 8, 9. See also De Saulcy, p. 160, 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, &c.

¹² Deut. viii. 8.

¹³ 2 Kgs. xviii. 32.

¹⁴ תאנה (its name still in the East) from תאן i. q. תן.

¹⁵ תאן i. q. תן. ¹⁶ "We passed the evening, under a large vine, whose stem was about 1 1/2 foot in diameter. Its height was 30 feet; its branches had to be propped up; and so it covered an arbour more than 50 feet wide and long. I remembered Micah. I have seen in this land the people living under both the fig and the vine; the fig between Jerusalem and Arimathea; the vine, here [Beitjinn]." Schulz. Leit. v. 285. in Paulus Reisen, vii. 103.

¹⁷ Plin. N. H. xiv. 3. ¹⁸ Ps. cxxviii. 3. ¹⁹ "R. Haia and his disciples—others say, R. Akiba, used to rise very early and sit and study under a fig-tree." Bereshith Rabba in Winer Reallex. [wrong reference]

²⁰ S. John i. 43. ²¹ Jud. ix. 11. 13. "The תאנה is the fig, distinguished for its more perfect sweetness, so that none such can be found, save in the land of Israel." Maimonid. in Demai c. ii. § 1. in Cels. Hierob. ii. 369. "It is appropriated to the food of man." Id. de jure anni 7 et jubil. c. v. § 8. Ib. Our Lord made it, as well as the grape, the figure of good fruit, which an evil nature could not bear. S. Matt. vii. 16. S. Luke vi. 44. ²² S. Cyr.

Before CHRIST
cir. 710. and none shall make them afraid :
for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it.

* Jer. 2. 11. 5 For^e all people will walk every one is the word of the Saviour, and it knoweth how to gladden man's heart; sweet also and full of joy is the hope of the future, wherewith we are enriched in Christ."

Such had been Israel's lot in the peaceful days of Solomon¹, the peace of whose times had already been made the image of the Gospel²; the coming of the Queen of the South from the uttermost parts of the earth, to hear the wisdom of Solomon³, had made her kingdom to be selected as an emblem of those who should fall down before Christ and serve Him⁴. "Such is that most quiet fearlessness which the law of Christ bringeth, as being the law of charity, peace, and concord."

And none shall make them afraid. "Neither man, nor devil; for the Lord hath given us power to⁷ tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy, and said, nothing shall by any means hurt you, and bade us, fear not them which kill the body." Witness the might which He gave to His Apostles and Martyrs.

For the mouth of the Lord of Hosts hath spoken it. The Prophets often add this, when what they say, seems, for its greatness, past belief. Yet it will be, because He hath spoken it, the Lord Who changeth not, the Lord of Hosts, to Whose commands all creatures are subject, Whose word is truth with Whom to speak is to do.

5 For all people will walk, every one in the name of his god, and we will walk in the name of the Lord our God. Hitherto unsteadfastness had been the very characteristic sin of Israel. It was "constant only in its inconstancy," ever¹⁰ falling away like their forefathers, starting aside like a broken bow. The heathen persevered in their worship, because it was evil or had evil in it, not checking but feeding their passions. Israel did not persevere in his, because it required him to deny himself things unlawful. "Hath a nation changed their gods which are yet no gods? But My people have changed their glory for that which doth not profit. Henceforth, the Prophet professeth for his people, the true Israel, that he will be as steadfast in good, as the heathen in evil; so our Lord sets forth¹² the children of this world in their generation, as an example of wisdom to the children of light.

"¹³ They who are eager to go up into the mountain of the Lord, and wish to learn thoroughly His ways, promise a ready obedience, and receive in themselves the glories of the life in Christ, and undertake with their whole strength to be earnest in all holiness. 'For let every one,' he saith, 'in every country and city go the way himself chooseth, and pass his life, as to him seemeth good; but our care is Christ, and His laws we will make our straight path; we will walk along with Him; and that not for this life only, present or past, but yet more for what is beyond. ¹⁴ It is a faithful saying. For they who now suffer with Him, shall walk with Him for ever, and with Him be glorified, and with Him reign. But they make Christ their care, who prefer nothing to His love, who cease from the vain distractions of the world, and seek in the name of his god, and we will walk in the name of the Lord our God for ever and ever.

6 In that day, saith the LORD, will I as-
Before CHRIST
cir. 710. ^f Zech. 10. 12. ^g Ezek. 34. 16. ^h Zeph. 3. 19.

rather righteousness and what is pleasing unto Him, and to excel in virtue. Such an one was the divine Paul; for he writeth, ¹⁵ I am crucified with Christ; and now no longer I live, but Christ liveth in me; and again¹⁶, I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified.

To walk is so uniformly in Holy Scripture used of a person's moral or religious "ways"¹⁷ (as we say), that the Prophet here too is doubtless speaking of the opposite religious ways of the Heathen and of the future people of God. The name was often, in Hebrew, expressive of the character; and, in regard to God Himself, that Name which He vouchsafed to give to Himself¹⁸, expressed His Self-existence, and, as a result, His Unchangeableness and His Faithfulness. The names, by which it was foretold that Christ should be called, express both His Deity and attributes¹⁹; the human Name, which He bare and vouchsafes to bear yet, was significant of His office for us, Saviour²⁰. To praise the Name of the Lord then, is to praise Him in that character or relation which He has revealed to us. "²¹ He walketh in the Name of the Lord, who ordereth every act and motion worthily of the vocation wherewith he is called, and, ²² whether he eateth or drinketh, doth all to the glory of God." This promise hath its own reward; for it is for ever and ever. They who walk in the Name of the Lord, shall walk²³ before Him in the land of the living, for ever and ever. Such walk on, with quickened steps, lingering not, in the Name of the Lord our God, i. e. doing all things in His Name, as His great Name requires, conformed to the holiness and all other qualities which His Name expresseth. For ever and ever, lit. for ever and yet, or, more strictly still, for that which is hidden and yet, which is the utmost thought of eternity we can come to. Time indeed has no relation to eternity; for time, being God's creature, is finite; eternity, being the mode of the existence of God, is infinite. Still, practically to us, our nearest conception of eternity, is existence, on and on and on, an endless, unchanging, ever-prolonged future, lost in distance and hidden from us, and then, and yet, an ever-to-come yet, which shall never come to an end. Well then may we not faint, as tho' it were long to toil or to do without this or that, since the part of our way which lies amid toils and weariness is so short, and will soon be at an end; what lies beyond, in joy, is infinite in infinite joy, ever full and still ever a yet to come.

The Prophet says, we will walk; "²⁴ uniting himself in longing, hope, faith, to the sons of the New Testament, i. e. Christians, as his brethren, reborn by the grace of the same Christ;" "²⁵ ministers of the Old, heirs of the New Testament, because they loved through that same faith whereby we love; believing in the Incarnation, Passion, Resurrection of Christ yet to be, as we believe in it, having been."

6. In that day, i. e. in that day of Christ and of His Gospel, of grace and salvation, the last days of which he had been speaking. Hitherto he had prophesied the glory of Zion,

¹ 1 Kings. iv. 25. ² Ps. lxxii. ³ S. Matt. xii. 42. ⁴ Ps. lxxii. 10, 11. ⁵ Lap. ⁶ Theoph. ⁷ S. Luke x. 19. ⁸ S. Matt. x. 28. ⁹ Rib. ¹⁰ Ps. lxxviii. 57. ¹¹ Jer. ii. 11. ¹² S. Luke xvi. 8. ¹³ S. Cyr. ¹⁴ 2 Tim. ii. 11, 12. ¹⁵ Rom. viii. 17. ¹⁶ Rev. iii. 4. ¹⁷ Gal. ii. 20. ¹⁸ 1 Cor. ii. 2. ¹⁹ As to walk in God's statutes, (Ezek. v. 6, 7. &c. and seven other places) in His judgments, (Ps. lxxxix. 31. Ez. xxxvi. 27.) in His commandments, (2 Chr. xvii. 4.) in His law, (Ps. lxxviii. 10 &c.) in His fear, (Neh. v. 9.) and, in the corresponding place in Isaiah, in the light of the Lord. (Is. ii. 5.) see Ges. Thes. v. 781. p. 378. and above on Mic. ii. 11. p. 368. So again to walk with God, (Gen. v. 22.) or before God, (Ib. xvii. 1.) or contrary to God, (Lev. xxvi. 21.) ²⁰ See ab. on Hos. xii. 6. p. 77. ²¹ Is. vii. 14. Immanuel, i. e. God with us; ix. 6. Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God &c. ²² S. Matt. i. 21. ²³ Theoph. ²⁴ 1 Cor. x. 31. ²⁵ Ps. cxvi. 9. ²⁶ Tir. ²⁷ S. Aug. c. 2 Epp. Pelag. iii. 4.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

semble her that halteth,^h and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted;ⁱ

¹ Pa. 147, 2. ² Ezek. 34, 13. ³ & 37, 21. ⁴ ch. 2, 12. ⁵ & 5, 3, 7, 8. ⁶ & 7, 18.

7 And I will make her that haltedⁱ a remnant, and her that was cast far off

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

a strong nation: and the Lord^k shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever.

8 ¶ And thou, O tower of || the flock, the strong hold of the daughter of Zion, ||

¹ Is. 9, 6. & 24, 23. ² Dan. 7, 14, 27. ³ Luke 1, 33. ⁴ Rev. 11, 15. ⁵ Or, Edar: Gen. 35, 21.

chiefly through the coming-in of the Gentiles. Now he adds, how the Jews should, with them, be gathered by grace into the one fold; in that long last day of the Gospel, at the beginning, in the course of it, and completely at the end¹.

Her that halteth. The Prophet resumes the image of the scattered flock, under which he had before² foretold their restoration. This was no hope of his own, but His word Who cannot fail. The course of events, upon which he is entering, would be, at times, for their greatness and their difficulty, past human belief. So he adds straightway, at the outset, saith the Lord. To halt is used of bodily lameness³, and that, of a flock, worn out by its wanderings⁴. It is used also of moral halting⁵, such as had been a chief sin of Israel, serving partly God, partly Baal⁶; God, with a service of fear, Baal with a service of that counterfeit of love, sensuality. So it was sick, both in body and soul, and *driven out*⁷ also, and afflicted.

7. And her that was cast off a strong nation. The prophecy, that there should be a remnant, was depressing. Yet what a remnant should it be! A remnant, which should multiply like the stars of heaven or the sand on the sea-shore. Israel had never been a strong nation, as a kingdom of this world. At its best estate, under David, it had subdued the petty nations around it, who were confederated to destroy it. It had never competed with the powers of this world, East or West, Egypt or Nineveh, although God had at times marvellously saved it from being swallowed up by them. Now, the remnant of Judah, which itself was but a remnant of the undivided people, was to become a strong nation. So Isaiah prophesied, A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation. Plainly not in temporal greatness, both because human strength was not, and could not be, its characteristic, and because the Prophet had been speaking of spiritual restoration.

⁸ Strong are they, whom neither torture nor allurements can separate from the love of Christ." "Strong are they, who are strong against themselves." Strong were they who said¹⁰, We ought to obey God rather than men, and¹¹, Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us. God does not only restore in the Gospel; He multiplies exceedingly. ¹² I will so clothe her with the spirit of might, that, as she shall be fruitful in number, so shall she be glorious in victories, so that of her it shall be said¹³, Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, terrible as an army with banners?" For, not to name those, whose whole life is one warfare against invincible enemies and the evil desires of the flesh, who shall count the martyrs of Christ? We know that that remnant and strong nation owe wholly to grace all which they are, as they themselves in the Revelations give thanks; ¹⁴ Thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by Thy Blood, out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth; that same Lord, of Whom it is here said,

The Lord shall reign over them in Zion from henceforth even for ever. The visible kingdom of God in Judah was often obscured, kings, princes, priests, and false prophets combining to encourage one another in rebellion against God. In the captivity it even underwent an almost total eclipse by the overshadowing of earthly power, save when the Divine light flashed forth for an instant in the deeds or words of power and wisdom, related by Daniel. Henceforth, i. e. from the time, when the law should go forth out of Zion, God should indeed reign, and that kingdom should have no end.

8. And thou, O tower of the flock. "Tower of Ader," which is interpreted 'tower of the flock,' about 1000 paces (a mile) from Bethlehem," says St. Jerome¹⁵ who lived there, "and foreshadowing [in its very name] by a sort of prophecy the shepherds at the Birth of the Lord." There Jacob fed his sheep¹⁶, and there (since it was hard by Bethlehem) the shepherds, keeping watch over their flocks by night, saw and heard the Angels singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill towards men." The Jews inferred from this place that the Messiah should be revealed there¹⁷.

Stronghold [Ophel¹⁸] of the daughter of Zion. Ophel was a strong place in the South of Jerusalem, the last which the wall, enclosing Zion, reached, before, or as, it touched on the Eastern porch of the temple¹⁹, with whose service it was connected. We know that, after the captivity, the Nethinim, who did the laborious service of the temple, dwelt there²⁰. It lay very near to the priests' district²¹. It was probably, a lower acclivity, "swelling out," (as its name seems to mean²²), from the mountain of the temple. In the last war, it was held together with ²³ the temple, and the adjoining parts to no slight extent, and the valley of Kedron." It was burnt²⁴ before the upper city was taken. It had been encircled by a wall of old; for Jotham ²⁵ built greatly upon its wall." Manasseh ²⁶ encircled it," (probably with an outer wall) "and raised meaning, and so in the 6 places, where it occurs in the prose books, keeps the article; 2 Chron. xxvii. 3. xxxiii. 14. Neh. iii. 26, 7. xi. 21. and 2 Kings v. 24. in which last place it may very possibly be a place in Samaria, named after that in Jerusalem. It occurs without the art. here and Is. xxxii. 14. and in Josephus, 'Οφελς. The E.V. retains the word as a Proper name in the historical books, 2 Chron. and Neh.

¹⁹ "The oldest wall was hard to be taken on account of the ravines, and the ridge above them on which it was built.—On the West—turning to the S. over the pool of Siloam, and then again bending Eastward to Solomon's pool, and extending to a place which they call Ophlas, it was joined on to the Eastern porch of the temple." Jos. B. J. v. 4. 2.

²⁰ Neh. iii. 26. xi. 21. ²¹ Ib. iii. 28. ²² Like tumulus from tumeo. Fürst. It is used of a local tumour in Arab. and in Deut. xxviii. 27. 1 Sam. v. 6. 12. vi. 4. 5. and of the swelling of pride. Num. xiv. 44. Hab. ii. 4. ²³ by John. Jos. B. J. v. 6. 1.

²⁴ Together with "the archive, Acra, the Council-hall." Ib. vi. 6. 3. after the destruction of the temple. Ib. vi. 4. 5-7. ²⁵ 2 Chron. xxvii. 3. ²⁶ Ib. xxxiii. 14.

¹ Rom. xi. 26. ² ii. 12, 13. ³ Gen. xxxii. 32. ⁴ Zeph. iii. 19. ⁵ Ps. xxxv. 15. xxxviii. 18. ⁶ 1 Kings xviii. 21. The word is different here. ⁷ נִקְחָהּ is used with the same image of the dispersed flock, Zeph. iii. 19. Ez. xxxiv. 4. 16. and נִקְחָהּ Jer. l. 17. ⁸ lx. 22. ⁹ Gloss. ¹⁰ Acts v. 29. ¹¹ Rom. viii. 35, 37. ¹² Rup. ¹³ Cant. vi. 10. ¹⁴ Rev. v. 9, 10. ¹⁵ de loc. Hebr. Arculf A.D. 670 found "a Church of the Shepherds," a mile from Bethlehem. Early trav. in Pal. p. 6. The Migdal Edar is mentioned also in the Mass. Shekalim c. 7. 4. "Of the herds, in the space between Jerusalem and 'the tower of the flock' and on both sides, the males are for burnt-offerings, the female for peace-offerings. R. Jehuda says, whatever male animals are found (there) thirty days before the passover fit for it, are to be used thereto." in Sepp Heil. Land ii. 470. ¹⁶ Gen. xxxv. 21. ¹⁷ Ps. Jon. on Gen. xxxv. 21. "This is the place, where in the last days Messiah shall be revealed."

¹⁸ Ophel, like many other Hebrew Proper names, did not lose its original appellative

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem.

¹ Jer. 8. 19. ² Now why dost thou cry out aloud? ³ is there no king in thee? ⁴ is thy counsellor perished? for ⁵ pangs it exceedingly," i.e. apparently raised artificially the whole level.

Yet, as a symbol of all Jerusalem, Ophel is as remarkable, as the "tower of the flock" is as to Bethlehem. For Ophel, although fortified, is no where spoken of, as of any account¹. It is not even mentioned in the circuit of the walls, at their dedication under Nehemiah², probably as an outlying spot. It was probably of moment chiefly, as giving an advantage to an enemy who might occupy it.

Both then are images of lowliness. The lonely Shepherd-tower, for Bethlehem, the birthplace of David; Ophel for Jerusalem, of which it was yet but an outlying part, and deriving its value probably as an outwork of the temple. Both symbols anticipate the fuller prophecy of the littleness, which shall become great in God. Before the mention of the greatness of the dominion to come, is set forth the future poverty to which it should come. In lowliness Christ came, yet is indeed a Tower protecting and defending the sheep of His pasture, founded on earth in His Human Nature, reaching to Heaven in His Divine; ³ a strong Tower; the righteous runneth into it, and is safe.

Unto thee shall it come; (lit. *unto thee shall it come*⁴, and there shall arrive &c.) He saith not at first what shall come, and so raises the soul to think of the greatness of that which should come. The soul is left to fill up what is more than thought can utter. Unto thee, (lit. *quite up to thee*⁵.) No hindrances should withhold it from coming. Seemingly it was a great way off, and they in a very hopeless state. He suggests the difficulty even by his strength of assurance. One could not say, it shall come quite up to thee, of that which in the way of nature would readily come to any one. But amid all hindrances God's Might makes its way, and brings His gifts and promises to their end. And there shall arrive. He twice repeats the assurance, in equivalent words, for their fuller assurance, ⁶ to make the good tidings the gladder by repeating and enforcing them.

The first or former, dominion. The word often stands, as our, "former⁷," in contrast with the "later." It is not necessarily the first, strictly; and so here, not the dominion of David and Solomon exclusively. Rather the Prophet is placed in spirit in the later times when the kingdom should be suspended, and foretells that the former dominion, i.e. that of the line of David, should come to her, not in its temporal greatness, but the line itself. So the Angel said, ⁸ He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David, and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever.

The [A] kingdom to the daughter of Jerusalem, i.e. a kingdom, which should not be of her, but which should come

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

have taken thee as a woman in travail.

10 Be in pain, and labour to bring forth, O daughter of Zion, like a woman in travail: for now shalt thou go forth out of the city, and thou shalt dwell in the field, and thou shalt go even to Babylon;

to her; not her's by right, but by His right. Who should merit it for her, and, being King of kings, makes His own, ⁹ kings and priests unto God and His Father.

The Jews themselves seem to have taken these words into their own mouths, just before they rejected Him, when they hoped that He would be a king, such as they wished for. ¹⁰ Blessed be the kingdom of our father David that cometh in the Name of the Lord. And in a distorted form, they held it even afterwards¹¹.

9. Now. The prophet places himself in the midst of their deepest sorrows, and out of them he promises comfort. *Why dost thou cry out aloud? is there no King in thee? is thy Counsellor perished*¹²? Is then all lost, because thou hast no visible king, none to counsel thee or consult for thee¹²? Very remarkably he speaks of their King and Counsellor as one, as if to say, 'When all besides is gone, there is One Who abides. Though thou be a captive, God will not forsake thee. When thou hadst no earthly king, ¹³ the Lord thy God was thy King. He is the First, and He is the Last. When thou shalt have no other, He, thy King, ceaseth not to be.' ¹⁴ 'Thou shouldst not fear, so long as He, Who counselleth for thee, liveth; but He liveth for ever.' Thy Counsellor, He, Who is called ¹⁵ Counsellor, Who counselleth for thee, Who counselleth thee, will, if thou obey His counsel, make birth-pangs to end in joy.

For pangs have taken thee, as a woman in travail, restless, remediless, doubling the whole frame, redoubled until the end, for which God sends them, is accomplished, and then ceasing in joy. The truest comfort, amid all sorrow, is in owning that the travail-pains must be, but that the reward shall be afterwards. ¹⁶ 'It is meet to look for deliverance from God's mercy, as certainly as for punishment from our guilt; and that the more, since He who foretold both; willingly saves, punishes unwillingly.' So the prophet adds,

10. Be in pain, and labour to bring forth, (lit. Write and burst forth), as if to say, 'thou must suffer, but thy suffering and thy joy shall be one. Thou canst not have the joy without the suffering. As surely as thou sufferest, thou shalt have joy. In all sorrow, lose not faith and hope, and ¹⁷ thou shalt be sorrowful, but thy sorrow shall be turned into joy.' ¹⁸ 'Good daughter, be very patient in the pangs, bear up against your sorrows,' so shall the birth be nigh. Yet for the time she must go forth out of the city into captivity. And thou shalt dwell in the field, houseless, under tents, as captives were wont to be kept, until all were gathered together to be led away; a sore exchange for her former luxury, and in requital of their oppression¹⁹.

And thou shalt go even to Babylon. Not Babylon, but Assyria was the scourge of God in Micah's time. Babylon was scarcely known, *a far country*¹⁹. Yet Micah is taught of God to ¹ Josephus calls it, "that which was called Ophlas," B. J. v. 4. 2. vi. 6. 3.

² Neh. xii. 31-40. ³ Prov. xviii. 10. ⁴ The Masorethes seem rightly to have marked this by the accents.

⁵ עָלֶיךָ. ⁶ רָפָא. ⁷ So, the former time, (Is. viii. 23.) deeds, (2 Chron. ix. 29. xvi. 11, xx. 34.) king, (Num. xxi. 26.) tables, (Ex. xxxiv. 1.) benefits, (Ps. lxxxix. 50.) days, (Deut. iv. 32, x. 10.) kings, (Jer. xxxiv. 5.) prophets, (Zech. i. 4, vii. 7. 12.) temple, (Ezr. iii. 12. Hagg. ii. 3. 9.) See Ges. Thes. p. 1251. ⁸ S. Luke i. 32, 3. ⁹ Rev. i. 6. ¹⁰ S. Mark xi. 10.

¹¹ Targ. "And thou, O Messiah of Israel, who art hid on account of the sins of the congregation of Israel, to thee the kingdom will come," giving to עָלֶיךָ the sense of עָלֶיךָ, (as in the LXX. Vulg. Aq. Symm. Syr.) and thence obtaining the sense "hidden," in reference to their fable that He was born before the destruction of the temple and hidden by God.

¹² 1 Sam. xii. 12.

¹⁴ Mont.

¹⁵ Is. ix. 6.

¹⁶ S. John xvi. 20.

¹⁷ S. Cyr.

¹⁸ Am. vi. Micah ii. 8, 9.

¹⁹ 2 Kings xx. 14.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

there shalt thou be delivered; there the Lord shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies.

^a Lam. 2. 16.

11 ¶ ^a Now also many nations are gathered against thee, that say, Let her be defiled, and let our eye ^o look upon Zion.

^o Obad. 12.
ch. 7. 10.

declare that thither shall the two tribes be carried captive, although the ten were carried captive by Assyria. There¹ shalt thou be delivered, there the Lord shall redeem thee from the hand² of thine enemies. God's judgments, or purifying trials, or visitation of His saints, hold their way, until their end be reached. They who suffer them cannot turn them aside; they who inflict them cannot add to them or detain them. The prison-house is the place of deliverance to Joseph and St. Peter; the Red-sea to Israel; the judges were raised up, when Israel was mightily oppressed; Jabesh-Gilead was delivered when the seventh day was come³; the walls of Jerusalem were the end of Sennacherib; Judah should have long been in the very hand and grasp of Babylon, yet must its clenched hand be opened.

11. Now also. [And now.] The prophet had already spoken of the future before them, with this word Now. Then, he distinctly prophesied the captivity to Babylon. Twice more he begins anew; as Holy Scripture, so often, in a mystery, whether speaking of evil or of good, of deliverance or of punishment, uses a threefold form. In these two, no mention is made of the enemy, and so there is some uncertainty. But the course must apparently be either backwards or forwards. They must either be two nearer futures before the Captivity, or two more distant after it. This second gathering might, in itself, either be that of the Assyrian hosts under Sennacherib out of all the nations subject to him; or that of the many petty nations in the time of the Maccabees, who took advantage of the Syrians' oppression, to combine to eradicate the Jews⁴. If understood of Sennacherib, the prophet, having foretold the entire captivity of the whole people to Babylon, would have prophesied the sudden destruction of a nearer enemy, whose miraculous and instantaneous overthrow should be the earnest of the destruction of Babylon and of their deliverance from it. This would suit well with the description, He shall gather them as sheaves to the floor, and would correspond well with the descriptions in Isaiah. On the other hand, whereas this description would suit any other event, in which man gathered his strength against God and was overthrown, the following words, Arise and thresh, O daughter of Zion &c., fit better with the victories of the Maccabees, in which Israel was active, than with the overthrow of Sennacherib, in which they were wholly passive, and God did all for them, as Isaiah and Nahum foretell the same overthrow⁵. Then also, if the course of the description was backward, 1) the captivity in Babylon, 2) the destruction of Sennacherib, there is no earlier event to correspond with the smiting of the judge of Israel on the cheek. The malice also of the nations gathered against Zion suits better with the abiding character of the petty nations, and of their hereditary envy against Israel and its high claims. To Nineveh and Babylon, Israel was but one little corner of ground, which rounded their territory and connected them with Egypt. They dis-

12 But they know not the thoughts of the Lord, neither understand they his counsel: for he shall gather them as the sheaves into the floor.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

^p Is. 55. 8.
Rom. 11. 33.

^q Is. 21. 10.

^r Is. 41. 15, 16.
Jer. 51. 33.

13 Arise and thresh, O daughter of dained them, even while they sought to subdue them. Micah describes the exultation of petty gratified rivalry.

That say, let her be defiled. The bad have a keen eye for the haltings and inconsistencies and falls of God's people, for which they are ever on the watch. Like Satan, they are first tempters, then the accusers; first desecrators, then sanctimonious justiciaries. God, in His judgment, leaves what has been inwardly defiled to be outwardly profaned. If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple are ye. ⁸*The faithful city had become a harlot.* ⁹*The land had become polluted by its inhabitants.* Now it was to be polluted by the enemy. Its seducers ask for the judgment of God. 'It has become like us in its deeds; let it no more be distinguished from us by the name of the people of God.'

And let our eye look upon Zion, with pleasure upon its desolation, and feed itself with its misery. ¹⁰*Where the eye, there love; where the hand, there pain.* ¹¹*They opened their mouth wide against me: they said, Aha, Aha, our eye hath seen.* The world hates the Church; Edom, Israel; it cannot be satisfied with beholding its chastisements¹². The sufferings of the Martyrs were the choice spectacle of the Heathen.

12. But they know not the thoughts of the Lord, neither understand they His counsel. The heathen did, for their own ends, what God willed for His. The first step was the same; God willed that His people should be punished; they willed to punish them. But all which lay beyond, they saw not; that God willed (on their repentance) to pardon His own people, but to punish themselves for their pride¹³ and cruelty¹⁴. ¹⁵*Almighty God corrects the elect through the reprobate, as with a rod; after which He condemns the reprobate eternally, as when the son has been disciplined, the rod is cast into the fire.*

For He shall gather them as the sheaves into the floor. The multitude of the sheaves hinders not the threshing; the multitude of God's enemies hinders not their destruction. They think that they strengthen themselves, as they gather together; God sees them but as ripened and fitted for destruction, gathered into one bundle together, to perish together. God gathers them, not by constraint or force, but by giving free scope to their own wayward wills, and overruling these to His ends.

13. Arise (it may be,) from the dust in which they were lying, I will make thine horn iron, and I will make thy hoofs brass. Threshing in the East is partly with oxen, partly with wheels of iron, or with planks set with sharp flints on an open place made hard to this end. The Prophet joins another image, with this and represents Judah as being by God endued with strength, first as with a *horn of iron*¹⁶ to cast the enemy to the ground, and then with hoofs of brass, wherewith to trample them to dust, as the stubble and chaff. And I will

¹ See on Hos. ii. 15.

² lit. "the hollow of the hand," and so "the grasp."

³ 1 Sam. xi. 3, 10, 11.

⁴ 1 Macc. v. 1, 2.

⁵ Is. x. 24-34, xiv. 24, 5, xvii. 12-14, xxix. 7, 8, Nah. i. 10-13.

⁶ v. 1-4. Heb.

⁷ 1 Cor. iii. 17.

¹⁰ Proverb in Lap.

¹³ Is. x. 7, 12.

⁸ Is. i. 21.

¹¹ Ps. xxxv. 21.

¹⁴ Zech. i. 15, 19.

⁹ Jer. iii. 9. Ps. cvi. 38. Is. xxiv. 5.

¹² Mic. vii. 10. Ob. 12.

¹⁵ Dion.

¹⁶ 1 Kings xxii. 11.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

Zion: for I will make thine horn iron, and I will make thy hoofs brass: and • Dan. 2. 44. thou shalt ^s beat in pieces many people: and I will consecrate their gain unto the Lord, and their substance unto the Lord of the whole earth.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

Isai. 18. 7.
& 23. 18.
& 60. 6, 9.

^a Zech. 4. 14. & 6. 5.

consecrate their gain unto the Lord, i. e. to Myself; the Lord gathered them into the floor by His Providence; the Lord gave His people strength to subdue them; and now, in His own Person, He says, I will complete My own work.

The very image of the "threshing" implies that this is no mere destruction. While the stubble is beaten or bruised to small pieces, and the chaff is far more than the wheat, and is carried out of the floor, there yet remains the seed-corn. So in the great judgments of God, while most is refuse, there yet remains over, what is severed from the lost heap and wholly consecrated to Him. Whatever things were the object of the "Cherem" ¹ or "thing devoted to the Lord," could not be redeemed, but must remain wholly the Lord's. If it had life, it was to be put to death ². And so the use of the word here may the rather shew, how those converted to God, and who became gain, hallowed to Him, were to pass through death to life, to die to themselves that they might live to Him: what was evil was to be slain in them, that they themselves might live.

The Israelites and God's dealings with them are ³ ensamples of us upon whom the ends of the world are come. And so the whole section fits wonderfully with the condition of the single soul.

She who halteth is "the soul, who would serve God, yet not so as wholly to give up the service of the world, which it had in Baptism renounced, who, after it had gone astray like a lost sheep, and been scattered amid the manifoldness of earthly things, was gathered again into the fold, to love One only, long for One only, give itself to One," its Good Shepherd, and over it the Lord reigneth for ever, if, taught by experience the deceitfulness of Satan's promises, and stung by the sense of its own thanklessness and vileness, and conscious of the peril of self confidence, it abideth more closely than others with God. He shall gather her that is driven out, i. e. "He shall restore her, from whom He had, for the time, withdrawn His grace," and her that was afflicted, trouble being God's most effectual instrument, in recalling the soul to Himself. "For the Lord raiseth them that are bowed down. And will make her that halteth, a remnant, placing her among the elect and holy, and her that was cast off strong; for Christ giveth oft to such souls great richness of Divine graces, so that ⁴ where sin abounded, grace should much more abound." "To it, when enlightened and purified by affliction and by repentance, it is promised, that its Lord, the Great King, shall come to it, and again reign in it, which is the great bliss of souls in grace. For then doth the soul really reign, when it submits wholly to Christ, Whom to serve is to reign, and so, under Him, receives power to command its wrong desires, and rule itself;" that great and wonderful power which the Evangelist expresses in words so brief, ⁵ To them gave He power to become the sons of God. Thus He maketh it strong, so that ⁶ neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, can separate it from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Then, "he describes the condition of the soul fluctuating between good and evil, called one way by God through inward inspirations, and another way by the enticements and habits of sin. And, wishing to follow God, yet not to be without its sinful pleasures, and knowing this to be impossible, it is in anguish and hesitates. Her the prophet justly rebukes, why thus cry aloud, as though thou must be led captive by the Devil, not knowing or unable to extricate thyself? Hast thou no King, aided by Whose power, thou mayest fight against all enticements, habit, the flesh? Paul felt this and cried aloud, ⁷ I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members. O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death? You see his grief. But he despairs not. He knows that he has a King. I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Or why grieveest thou, as if thou hadst no counsellor, by whose counsels to free thee from these snares? Thy Counsellor indeed perished on the Cross, but for thy sake, that thou mayest live. He died, to destroy him who hath the power of death. But He rose the third day and is still with thee; at the Right Hand of the Father He still reigns Immortal for ever. See how many counsels He has left thee in the Gospel, how many admonitions, whereby thou mayest lead a happy and tranquil life. Now pain seizes thee like a woman in travail. For such a soul travails, having conceived inspirations from God, which it wishes to obey, but that the flesh, overcome by concupiscence, resists, and so it never brings forth, nor experiences that joy, whereof the Lord speaketh, ⁸ When she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world. Wherefore he adds; be in pain, for thou art indeed in travail; thou wilt not cease to be in pain, until thou bring forth. Thou wilt go forth &c. "God, by a provision of His great mercy, allows lukewarm souls, who will be at no pains to gain grace, to fall into foulest sins, in order that, owning at last their misery, they may cease to be lukewarm, and with great ardor of soul may embrace virtue. For, warned by the result, they understand that they themselves emboldened the tempter, (for he chiefly attacks the lukewarm and remiss,) and they become ardent in the conflict and in well-doing." Wherefore he says, thou shalt go forth out of the city, that City of God, whereof He is the Builder and Maker ⁹, which is gladdened by the river of His Spirit; "and it dwells in the open field, unprotected, ready to be a prey, in the broad way of its own concupiscences, out of the narrow road which leadeth to life, and goeth even to Babylon, the city of 'confusion,' in tumult and din and unrest, and the distractions of this life. Yet even there shall it be delivered, like the poor Prodigal, who came to himself in a far country, when worn out by its hard service. Even there it must not despair, but remember, with him, its Father's house, its former home, the Heavenly Jerusalem. Its pains within or without, whereby it is brought back, are travail-pains. Though all is dark, it must not say, I have no Counsellor. For its Redeemer's Name is ¹⁰ Counsellor, "one Counsellor of a thousand." "Thine Intercessor never dies." Out of the very depth of misery will the Divine Mercy draw thee. Though thou seem held by the strong hand of the enemy, and he seems to triumph over thee and to jeer thee,

¹ Lev. xxvii. 28.

² Ib. 29.

³ 1 Cor. x. 11.

⁴ Rib.

⁵ Dion.

⁶ Ps. cxlvi. 8.

⁷ Rom. v. 20.

⁸ S. John i. 12.

⁹ Rom. viii. 38, 9.

¹⁰ Rom. vii. 23, 24.

¹¹ S. John xvi. 21.

¹² Heb. xi. 10.

¹³ Is. ix. 6.

¹⁴ Eccclus. vi. 6.

¹⁵ Christian Year.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

CHAPTER V.

1 The birth of Christ. 4 His kingdom. 8 His conquest.

NOW gather thyself in troops O daughter of troops: he hath laid siege against us: they shall smite the judge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek.

2 But thou, ^b Beth-lehem Eph-ratah though thou be little

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710,

^a Lam. 3. 30.
Matt. 5. 39.
& 27. 30.
Matt. 2. 6.
John 7. 42.

¹ There, there so would we have it, we have devoured him, and hosts of devils seek thy utter destruction, and thou seem to be ² delivered over to them to the destruction of the flesh; yet is it only that the spirit may be saved in the Day of the Lord. Even Satan, when he is tormenting souls, knows not the thoughts of the Lord, nor understands His counsels, how, by the very pain which he inflicts, God is bidding them, Rise and ³ look up to heaven and long for heavenly things and trample on all which they had hitherto foully served, honor or vain glory or covetousness or lust; how He will exalt their horn in the Lord, make it strong as iron that they should do all things through Christ instrengthening them, and conquer all through the might of Christ; how He should bruise Satan under their feet shortly, and they consecrate wholly to God their whole strength, every power of soul and body which hitherto had been the adversary's.

v. 1. Now gather thyself in troops, O daughter of troops. The daughter of troops is still the same who was before addressed, Judah. The word is almost always ⁴ used of "bands of men employed in irregular, marauding, inroads." Judah is entitled daughter of troops, on account of her violence, the robbery and bloodshed within her ⁵, as Jeremiah says ⁶, Is this house which is called by My Name become a den of robbers in your eyes? She then who had spoiled ⁷ should now be spoiled; she who had formed herself in bands to lay waste, shall now be gathered thick together, in small bands ⁸, unable to resist in the open field; yet in vain should she so gather herself; for the enemy was upon her, in her last retreat.

This description has obviously no fulfilment, except in the infliction by the Romans. For there was no event, before the invasion by Sennacherib and accordingly in the prophet's own time, in which there is any seeming fulfilment of it. But then, the second deliverance must be that by the Maccabees; and this siege, which lies, in order of time, beyond it, must be a siege by the Romans. With this it agrees, that whereas, in the two former visitations, God promised, in the first, deliverance, in the second, victory, here the Prophet dwells on the Person of the Redeemer, and foretells that the strength of the Church should not lie in any human means ⁹. Here too Israel had no king, but a judge only. Then the "gathering in robber-bands" strikingly describes their internal state in the siege of Jerusalem; and although this was subsequent to and consequent upon the rejection of our Lord, yet there is no reason why the end should be separated from the beginning since the capture by Titus was but the sequel of the capture by Pompey, the result of that same temper, in which they crucified Jesus, because He would not be their earthly king. It was the close of the organic existence of the former people; after which the remnant from among them with the Gentiles, not Israel after the flesh, were the true people of God.

¹ Ps. xxxv. 25. ² 1 Cor. v. 5. ³ Rib. ⁴ i.e. except Job xxv. 3. (where it is used of the armies of God) and Job xxix. 25. In Job xix. 5. it is used metaphorically of the "host" of evils sent against Job. S. Jerome renders "filia latronis," and says that Aq. Symm. Theod. and Ed. V. agree with that rendering.

⁵ ii. 8. iii. 2. &c. Hos. v. 10. ⁶ Jer. vii. 11. comp. S. Matt. xxi. 13. ⁷ Is. xxxiii. 1. ⁸ תַּחְמוֹתָם וְהָיָה לָהֶם בְּחַיָּתָם are manifestly to be taken in corresponding senses. That of "gathering in troops" is the only known sense of תַּחְמוֹתָם, Jer. v. 7, except that of "making incisions in one's flesh," which is obviously irrelevant here. ⁹ v. 8-15. ¹⁰ Acts xxiii. 3. ¹¹ St. John xix. 15. ¹² Dan. xii. 2. ¹³ iv. 9. ¹⁴ דָּבָרָה iv. 8. ¹⁵ v. 1. Heb.

He hath laid siege against us. The Prophet, being born of them, and for the great love he bore them, counts himself among them, as St. Paul mourns over his brethren after the flesh. They shall smite the judge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek. So St. Paul said to him who had made himself high priest, ¹⁰ God shall smite thee, thou whitened wall; for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law. It is no longer "the king" (for they had said, ¹¹ We have no King but Cæsar) but the judge of Israel, they who against Christ and His Apostles gave wrong judgment. As they had smitten contrary to the law, so were the chief men smitten by Titus, when the city was taken. As they had done, it was done unto them. To be smitten on the face, betokens shame; to smite with the rod, betokens destruction. Now both shall meet in one; as, in the Great Day, the wicked ¹² shall awake to shame and everlasting contempt, and shall perish for ever.

2. But [And] thou, Bethlehem Ephratah. With us, the chequered events of time stand in strong contrast, painful or gladdening. Good seems to efface evil, or evil blots out the memory of the good. God orders all in the continuous course of His Wisdom. All lies in perfect harmony in the Divine Mind. Each event is the sequel of what went before. So here the Prophet joins on, what to us stands in such contrast, with that simple, And. Yet he describes the two conditions as bearing on one another. He had just spoken of the judge of Israel smitten on the cheek, and, before ¹³, that Israel had neither king nor counsellor; he now speaks of the Ruler in Israel, the Everlasting. He had said, how Judah was to become mere bands of men; he now says, how the little Bethlehem was to be exalted. He had said before, that the rule of old was to come to the tower of the flock, the daughter of Jerusalem; now, retaining the word ¹⁴, he speaks of the Ruler, in Whom it was to be established. Before he had addressed the tower of the flock; now, Bethlehem. But he has greater things to say now, so he pauses ¹⁵, And thou! People have admired the brief appeal of the murdered Cæsar, "Thou too, Brutus." The like energetic conciseness lies in the words, And thou! Bethlehem Ephratah. The name Ephratah is not seemingly added, in order to distinguish Bethlehem from the Bethlehem of Zabulon, since that is but once named ¹⁶, and Bethlehem here is marked to be the Bethlehem Judah ¹⁷, by the addition, too little to be among the thousands of Judah. He joins apparently the usual name, Bethlehem, with the old Patriarchal, and perhaps poetic ¹⁸ name, Ephratah, either in reference and contrast to that former birth of sorrow near Ephratah ¹⁹, or, (as is Micah's wont,) regarding the meaning of both names. Both its names were derived from "fruitfulness;" "House of Bread" and "fruitfulness;" and, despite of centuries of Mohammedan oppression, it is fertile still ²⁰.

¹⁵ As marked by the accent, "double Garesh." Casp. ¹⁶ Jos. xix. 15. ¹⁷ Its name in Jud. xvii. 7-9. xix. 1, 2. 18. Ruth i. 1, 2. 1 Sam. xvii. 12. ¹⁸ Ps. cxxxii. 6.

¹⁹ Gen. xxxv. 19. xlviii. 7. ²⁰ "The district country around Bethlehem abounds in fields, vineyards, hills, vallies, oliveyards, fig-trees, and is especially supported by wines and corn." Quaresm. Elucid. Terræ S. ii. 620. "Round the hill is fruitful garden and corn land." Russeger iii. 79. "The terraces, admirably kept, and covered with rows of luxuriant olives, intermixed with the fig and vine, sweep in graceful curves round the ridge, regular as stairs." Porter Hdbk p. 206. "It is still one of the best-cultivated and most fertile parts of Palestine." Rev. G. Williams in Smith's Gr. and R. Geogr. Add Volney ii. 298.

Before CHRIST
cir. 710. c among the d thousands of Judah, c 1 Sam. 23. 23. d Ex. 18. 25.

Before CHRIST
cir. 710. yet out of thee shall he come forth

It had been rich in the fruitfulness of this world; rich, thrice rich, should it be in spiritual fruitfulness. "1 Truly is Bethlehem, 'house of bread,' where was born² the Bread of life, which came down from heaven," "3 Who with inward sweetness refreshes the minds of the elect," "4 Angel's Bread, and "5 Ephratah, fruitfulness, whose fruitfulness is God," the Seed-corn, stored wherein, died and brought forth much fruit, all which ever was brought forth to God in the whole world."

Though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, lit. small to be, i. e. too small to be among &c. Each tribe was divided into its thousands, probably of fighting men, each thousand having its own separate head⁶. But the thousand continued to be a division of the tribe, after Israel was settled in Canaan⁶. The thousand of Gideon was the meanest in Manasseh⁷. Places too small to form a thousand by themselves were united with others, to make up the number⁸. So lowly was Bethlehem that it was not counted among the possessions of Judah. In the division under Joshua, it was wholly omitted⁹. From its situation, Bethlehem can never have been a considerable place. It lay and lies, East of the road from Jerusalem to Hebron, at six miles from the capital¹⁰. It was "11 seated on the summit-level of the hill country of Judæa with deep gorges descending East to the Dead Sea and West to the plains of Philistia," "2704 feet above the sea¹²." It lay "13 on a narrow ridge," whose whole length was not above a mile¹³, swelling at each extremity into a somewhat higher eminence, with a slight depression between¹⁴. "15 The ridge projects Eastward from the central mountain range, and breaks down in abrupt terraced slopes to deep vallies on the N. E. and S." The West end too "16 shelves gradually down to the valley." It was then rather calculated to be an outlying fortress, guarding the approach to Jerusalem, than for a considerable city. As a garrison, it was fortified and held by the Philistines¹⁷ in the time of Saul, recovered from them by David, and was one of the 15 cities¹⁸ fortified by Rehoboam. Yet it remained an unimportant place. Its inhabitants are counted with those of the neighbouring Netophah, both before¹⁹ and after²⁰ the captivity, but both together amounted after the captivity to 179²¹ or 183²² only. It still does not appear among the possessions of Judah²³. It was called a city²³, but the name included even places which had only 100 fighting men²⁴. In our Lord's times it is called a village²⁵, a city²⁶, or a strong spot²⁷. The royal city would become a den of thieves. Christ should be born in a lowly village. "28 He Who had taken the form of a servant, chose Bethlehem for His Birth, Jerusalem for His Passion."

St. Matthew relates how the Chief Priest and Scribes in their answer to Herod's enquiries, where Christ should be born²⁹, alleged this prophecy. They gave the substance rather than the exact words, and with one remarkable variation, art not the least among the princes of Judah. St. Matthew did not correct their paraphrase, because it does not affect the object for which they alleged the prophecy, the birth of the Redeemer in Bethlehem. The sacred writers often do not correct the translations, existing in their time, when the variations do not affect the truth³⁰. Both words are true here. Micah speaks of Bethlehem, as it was in the sight of men; the chief priests, whose words St. Matthew approves, speak of it as it was in the sight of God, and as, by the Birth of Christ, it should become. "31 Nothing hindered that Bethlehem should be at once a small village and the Mother-city of the whole earth, as being the mother and nurse of Christ Who made the world and conquered it." "32 That is not the least, which is the house of blessing, and the receptacle of Divine grace." "33 He saith that the spot, although mean and small, shall be glorious. And in truth," adds S. Chrysostom, "the whole world came together to see Bethlehem, where, being born, He was laid, on no other ground than this only." "34 O Bethlehem, little, but now made great by the Lord, He hath made thee great, Who, being great, was in thee made ¹ in vit. S. Jer. Ep. 108. de vit. Paulæ. n. 10. ² S. Joh. vi. 48, 51. ³ S. Greg. Hom. 8. in Ev. ⁴ Ps. lxxviii. 25. ⁵ Num. i. 16. x. 4. ⁶ Jos. xxii. 21. 30. 1 Sam. x. 19. xxiii. 23. ⁷ Jud. vi. 15. ⁸ As in 1 Chron. xxiii. 11. four brothers, not having many sons, were counted as one "house." Hengst. ⁹ Jos. xv. The LXX interpolate it in Jos. xv. 59. ¹⁰ Eus. S. Jer. de loc. Hebr. "6 miles [in the 6th mile, S. Jer.] from Ælia to the South, near the road which leadeth to Hebron." Itin. Hieros. p. 598. "From Jerusalem, as you go to Bethlehem, on the high road at 4 miles on the right is the monument where Rachel, Jacob's wife, was buried. Thence 2 miles on the left is Bethlehem where our Lord Jesus Christ was born." "Two parasangs," (6 miles) Benj. Tnd. (i. 40. ii. 90). "6 miles," Arculf. (Early travels in Pal. p. 6.) Bernard (Ib. 29.) Sæ. wulf. (Ib. 44.) "2 hours." Maundrell. (Ib. 455.) Robinson. (i. 470.) ¹¹ Thomson. The land ii. 509. ¹² van de Velde memoir p. 180. "convent at Bethlehem, 2704 Eng. feet." Russ. ¹³ Arculf in Early Travels in Palestine p. 6. ¹⁴ Ritter Erdk. xvi. 285. and Russ. in n. 15. ¹⁵ Porter's Hdbook i. 207. "It stands upon an eminence surrounded by small vallies or depressions, devoted to the culture of the olive and vine."—"From this height there is a pretty steep slope on both the North and Southern sides, particularly the former, the two Wadis or gorges which form its boundaries. On the flanks of these Wadis are the principal gardens, vineyards, and plantations of olives and figs. They unite a little to the E. of the town, and form what is called the Wadi-et-Taamarah from the village of Beit-Taamr, in the neighbourhood." Wilson, Lands i. 394. "A narrow ridge, surrounded on all sides by vallies." Arculf. Ib. "On the N. the other side of the deep, abruptly-sinking valley, on the top of the hill, lay Bethlehem." V. Schubert ii. 493, coming from the south. "It stands on the slope of a hill, of difficult ascent, at least by night." Lord Lindsay p. 240. "The first sight of Bethlehem has something strangely picturesque. It lies quite on a bare summit in the Jura limestone of Palestine, 2338 Paris feet above the sea. The summit is divided by a shallow saddle-back. On the West side lies Bethlehem, on the East the great monastery and Church, like a fortress over the precipice, which falls into the deep valley." Russeger iii. 79. "The little city of David, seated on a lofty hill, shines, like a brilliant crown, among the mountains of Judah." Mislin. c. 32. iii. 6. From one spot, you can see the Church of Bethlehem, where our Saviour was born; the Church of the Holy Sepulchre where He was buried; the Mount of Olives whence He ascended to heaven." Id. Ib.

¹⁶ Grove in Smith Dict. of Bib. "Towards the W. the hill is higher than the village, and then sinks down very gradually towards Wadi Ahmed." Rob. i. 470. ¹⁷ 2 Sam. xxiii. 14. ¹⁸ 2 Chron. xi. 6. "A low wall without towers surrounds the brow of the hill, and overlooks the valley." Arculf. p. 6. "scarcely a 1/2 of an hour." Ritter p. 236. ¹⁹ 1 Chron. ii. 54. ²⁰ Neh. vii. 26. ²¹ Ezr. ii. 21, 2. ²² Neh. xi. 25-30. ²³ Ruth i. 19. Ezr. ii. 1. with 21. Neh. vii. 6. with 26. ²⁴ Am. v. 3. ²⁵ S. John vii. 42. ²⁶ S. Luke ii. 4. ²⁷ Jos. Ant. v. 2. 8. (xwpiov) ²⁸ S. Leo de Epiph. Serm. 1. ²⁹ S. Matt. ii. 4-6. ³⁰ See ab. on Am. ix. 12. p. 224. Pococke has employed much learning to make this passage verbally accord with the allegation of it by the chief priest recorded by S. Matthew (Notæ miscell. on the Porta Mosis, Works i. 134-9.) He follows the eminent authority of Abulwalid (followed by R. Tanchum and a Hebr. Arab. Gloss.) in supposing גר, "little," to have had the opposite sense of "great," and that it actually had that meaning in Jer. xlviii. 4. Zech. xiii. 7. In neither of those passages, however, have גר, גר, that meaning, nor do the cases alleged of words containing opposite meanings bear out such an one as this. For the two senses, although differing at last, can be traced up to one common source, which could not be done as to גר. Thus 1) קדש, "holy," is used of idolatrous consecrations which were in fact horrible desecrations, (see ab. on Hos. iv. 14. p. 31.) 2) נפש, "soul," is used of the "person," as we speak of "1000 souls." Thence the idiom נפש חיה, lit. "the soul of one dead," Lev. xxi. 11. Num. vi. 6; then in one idiom נפש חיה, "defiled as to the dead," but נפש does not signify one alive or dead indifferently. 3) כרע, lit. "bent the knee," prayed, includes prayers for evil as well as for good, cursing as well as blessing. 4) רחם, love, piety, hence perhaps, what is forbidden by natural piety, (Lev. xx. 17.) and a reproach; (Prov. xiv. 34. Ib. xxv. 10.) unless different roots have accidentally coalesced, (see Fürst Conc.) as in לול, to use "insight," hence wisdom, and כול vacillate, hence folly, meet in one Syriac word; or our let, "hinder," is from lata, "slow," latyan, "retard;" Goth. our let, "allow," from "letan" i. q. lassen.) In Arabic this is the more common on account of the severance of the different tribes who spoke it, before Mohammed united them into one, as the same word receives modifications in different languages of Europe. The meaning, "great," also, if it could be obtained for גר, would still not yield the meaning desired. For למית implies a comparison. It means little to be in the thousands of Judah i. e. too little. If גר were rendered great, it would still be "great to be among the thousands" &c. i. e. too great to be. Chald. Lxx. Syr. and the Latin in S. Aug. de Civ. D. xviii. 30. give another explanation, it is little that thou shouldst be. This does not agree better with the words in St. Matthew, and is against the idiom. In this idiom 1) גר is not used, but mostly גר, or גר Is. xlix. 6. or גר 2 Sam. vii. 19. 2) The person spoken to is always expressed. ³¹ S. Greg. Naz. Orat. 18. in patr. § 17. ³² S. Ambr. Ep. 70. § 11. ³³ S. Chrys. Quod Christus sit Deus § 3. i. 561. ³⁴ S. Bern. Serm. I. in Vig. Nativ. § 4. i. 763

Before CHRIST
cir. 710. 4 ¶ And he shall stand and ||¹ feed in the strength of the LORD, in the majesty of the name of the LORD his Or, rule.
Is. 40. 11. & 49. 10. Ezek. 34. 23. ch. 7. 14.

God; and they shall abide: for now Before CHRIST cir. 710. shall he be great unto the ends of the earth. Ps. 72. 8.
Is. 52. 13.
Zech. 9. 10. Luke 1. 32.

first be called. All in each generation, who are the true Israel, shall be converted, made one in Christ, saved. So, whereas, since Solomon, all had been discord, and, at last, the Jews were scattered abroad every where, all, in the true Prince of Peace, shall be one¹. This has been fulfilled in each generation since our Lord came, and shall be yet further in the end, when they shall haste and pour into the Church, and so all Israel shall be saved².

But "³ the promise of God was not only to Israel after the flesh, but to all" also *that were afar off, even as many as the Lord our God should call*⁴. All these may be called the remnant of His brethren, even those that were, before, aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and afar off,⁵ but now, in Christ Jesus, made one with them; all, brethren among themselves and to Christ their ruler. "⁶ Having taken on Him their nature in the flesh, He is not ashamed to call them so, as the Apostle speaketh, confirming it out of the Psalm, where in the Person of Christ he saith⁶, I will declare Thy name unto My brethren. There is no reason to take the name, brethren, here in a narrower sense than so to comprehend all⁷ the remnant whom the Lord shall call, whether Jews or Gentiles. The word "brethren" in its literal sense includes both, and, as to both, the words were fulfilled.

4. And He shall stand. The Prophet continues to speak of personal acts of this Ruler Who was to be born. He was not to pass away, not to rule only by others, but by Himself. To stand is the attitude of a servant, as Jesus, although God and Lord of all, said of Himself,⁸ He shall come forth and serve them; ⁹ The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister. He shall stand as a Shepherd¹⁰, to watch, feed, guard them, day and night; He shall stand, as St. Stephen saw Christ¹¹ standing on the Right Hand of God, "¹² to succour all those who suffer for Him." "¹³ For to sit belongs to one judging; to stand, to one fighting or helping." He shall stand, as abiding, not to pass from them, as Himself saith,¹⁴ Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world: and He shall feed His flock by His Spirit, His Word, His Wisdom and doctrine, His example and life; yea by His own Body and Blood¹⁵. They whom He feedeth¹⁶ lack nothing.

In the strength of the Lord. He, Who feedeth them with Divine tenderness, shall also have Divine might, His Father's and His own, to protect them; as He saith,¹⁷ My sheep hear My Voice, and I know them and they follow Me, neither shall any man pluck them out of My Hand. My Father Which gave them Me is greater than all, and no man is able to pluck them out of My Father's Hand. I and My Father are One. With authority, it is said¹⁸, He commandeth even the unclean spirits and they come out. His feeding or teaching also was¹⁹ with authority, and not as the scribes.

In the Majesty of the Name of the Lord His God, as St. John says²⁰, We beheld His Glory, the Glory as of the Only-Begot-

¹ See Hosea i. 11. Is. xi. 10. &c. ² Rom. xi. 26. ³ Poc. ⁴ Acts ii. 39. ⁵ Eph. ii. 12-14. ⁶ Ps. xxii. 22. ⁷ Joel ii. 32. ⁸ S. Luke xii. 37. ⁹ S. Matt. xx. 28. ¹⁰ See Is. lxi. 5. ¹¹ Acts vii. 55. ¹² Collect for S. Stephen's Day. ¹³ S. Greg. Hom. 29. in Evang. n. 7. ¹⁴ S. Matt. xxviii. 20. ¹⁵ S. John vi. ¹⁶ Ps. xxiii. 1. ¹⁷ S. John x. 27-30. ¹⁸ S. Luke iv. 36. ¹⁹ S. Matt. vii. 29. ²⁰ S. John i. 14. ²¹ S. Matt. xxviii. 18. ²² S. John xvii. 11, 12. ²³ Theoph. ²⁴ S. John xx. 17. Lipmann, in Nizzachon, objects, that, "as God, He has no God; as Man, He is not from everlasting to everlasting," not knowing, as a Jew, the Divine Personality of our Lord, whence, He being "not two but one Christ," (Ath. Creed), both the attributes of His Divine and Human Nature can be said of Him. (in Poc.)

ten of His Father; and He saith,²¹ All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth; so that the Divine Glory should shine through the Majesty of His teaching, the power of His Grace, upholding His own, and the splendour of the miracles wrought by Him and in His Name. Of the Name of the Lord; as He saith again,²² Holy Father, keep through Thine own Name those whom Thou hast given Me, that they may be one as We are. While I was with them in the world, I kept them in Thy Name. "²³ Whoever then is set to feed His flock must stand, i. e. be firm and unshaken; feed, not sell, nor slay; and feed in might, i. e. in Christ." His God, as our Lord Himself, as Man, saith,²⁴ Unto My Father, and your Father, and to My God and your God. But that Majesty He Himself wields, as no mere man can; He Himself is invested with it. "²⁵ To ordinary kings God is strength²⁶, or gives strength²⁷; men have strength in God; this Ruler is clad in the strength of the Lord, that same strength, which the Lord hath, Whose is strength. Of Him, as Israel's King, the same is said as of the Lord, as King of the whole earth²⁸; only that the strength of the Messiah is not His own, but the Lord's. He is invested with the strength of the Lord, because He is Man; as Man, He can be invested with the whole strength of the Lord, only because He is also God."

And they shall abide (lit. sit, dwell) in rest and security and unbroken peace under Christ their Shepherd and their King; they shall not wander to and fro as heretofore. "²⁹ He, their Shepherd, shall stand; they shall sit." "The word³⁰ is the more emphatic, because it stands so absolutely. This will be a sitting or dwelling, which will indeed deserve the name. The original promise, so often forfeited by their disobedience, should be perfectly fulfilled; ³¹ and ye shall dwell in your land safely, and I will give peace in the land, and ye shall lie down, and none shall make you afraid. So Amos and Micah had before promised.³² And this is the result of the greatness of the promised Ruler, as the like promise of the Psalm is rested on the immutability of God³³; Thou art the Same, and Thy years shall have no end. The children of Thy servants shall dwell³⁴, and their seed shall be established before Thee. For it follows,

For now, (in the time which Micah saw as did Abraham with the eye of faith,) now, in contrast to that former time of lowliness. His life shall be divided between a life of obscurity, and a life of never-ending greatness.

Shall He be great unto the [very³⁵] ends of the earth, embracing them in His rule, (as David and Solomon had foretold³⁶), and so none shall harm those whom He, the King of all the earth, shall protect. The universality of protection is derived from an universality of power. To David God says,³⁷ I have made thee a great name, like the name of the great that are in the earth. Of Uzziah it is said³⁸, His name went forth far; for he was marvellously helped, until he was strong; but of ²⁵ Casp. ²⁶ Ps. xxviii. 7. cxl. 7. ²⁷ 1 Sam. ii. 10. ²⁸ Ps. xciii. 1. ²⁹ from Casp. ³⁰ יָשָׁב. ³¹ Lev. xxvi. 5, 6. "comp. Hos. ii. 20. [18 Eng.] Is. xiv. 30. xxxii. 18. Jer. xxiii. 8. Ezek. xxviii. 25, 6. xxxiv. 25, 28. xxxvii. 25. xxxviii. 8. Zech. xiv. 10, 11." Casp. ³² Am. ix. 14. Mic. iv. 4. Both use the same word as here. ³³ Ps. cii. 27, 28. ³⁴ יִשְׁכְּנוּ. ³⁵ עַד. ³⁶ Ps. ii. 8. "the ends of the earth for His possession;" Ps. lxxii. 8. "from the river unto (עַד) the ends of the earth." In both cases the מֵאֵי אֶרֶץ as here. See "Daniel the Proph." p. 439. ³⁷ 2 Sam. vii. 9. ³⁸ 2 Chron. xxvi. 15. add Ib. 8.

R. Tanchum owns, that the Ruler here spoken of can, for His greatness, be no other than the Messiah. (Ib.)

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

5 And this man¹ shall be the peace, when the Assyrian shall come into our land : and when he shall tread in our pa-Zech 9. 10. Luke 2. 14. Eph. 2. 14.

the Messiah alone it is said, that His power should reach to the ends of the earth ; as God prophesies of Himself, that His¹ Name should be great among the Heathen. So Gabriel said to His Mother, ²This, Whom she should bear, shall be great.

5. And this Man shall be the Peace. This, emphatically, i. e. "This Same," as is said of Noah, ³This same shall comfort us, or, in the song of Moses, of the Lord, ⁴This Same is my God. Of Him he saith, not only that He brings peace, but that He Himself⁵ is that Peace ; as St. Paul saith, ⁶He is our Peace, and Isaiah calls Him ⁷the Prince of peace, and at His Birth the heavenly host proclaimed ⁸peace on earth ; and He ⁹preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh ; and on leaving the world He saith, ¹⁰Peace I leave with you, My Peace I give unto you. He shall be our Peace, within by His Grace, without by His Protection. ¹¹Wouldest thou have peace with God, thine own soul, thy neighbour ? Go to Christ Who is our Peace, and follow the footsteps of Christ. "Ask peace of Him Who is Peace. Place Christ in thy heart and thou hast placed Peace there."

When the Assyrian shall come into our land, and when he shall tread in our palaces. Assur stands for the most powerful and deadliest foe, "ghostly and bodily," as the Assyrian then was of the people of God. For since this plainly relates to the time after Christ's coming, and, (to say the least,) after the captivity in Babylon and deliverance¹² from it, which itself followed the dissolution of the Assyrian Empire, the Assyrians cannot be the literal people, who had long since ceased to be¹³. In Isaiah too the Assyrian is the type of Anti-Christ and of Satan¹⁴. As Christ is our Peace, so one enemy is chosen to represent all enemies who¹⁵ vex the Church, whether the human agents or Satan who stirs them up and uses them. "By the Assyrian," says St. Cyril, "he here means no longer a man out of Babylon, but rather marks out the inventor of sin, Satan. Or rather, to speak fully, the implacable multitude of devils, which spiritually ariseth against all which is holy, and fights against the holy city, the spiritual Zion, whereof the Divine Psalmist saith, Glorious things are spoken of thee, thou city of God. For Christ dwelleth in the Church, and maketh it, as it were, His own city, although by His Godhead filling all things. This city of God then is a sort of land and country of the sanctified and of those enriched in spirit, in unity with God. When then the Assyrian shall come against our city, i. e. when barbarous and hostile powers fight against the saints, they shall not find it unguarded." The enemy may tread on the land and on its palaces, i. e. lay low outward glory, vex the body which is of earth and the visible temple of the

¹ Mal. i. 11. 14.

² S. Luke i. 32. οὗτος ἔσται μέγας,

³ Gen. v. 29. ⁴ Ex. xv. 2. ⁵ The word "this" might grammatically be taken as agreeing with "peace." "This [viz. this thing] shall be our peace," as Eccl. vi. 9, נַחַם הוּא, "this too is vanity ;" Ex. iii. 15, הוּא הוּא, "this is My memorial," i. e. הוּא is not necessarily personal. But this would not alter the sense. For, "this thing is our peace," must necessarily refer to what had been said, viz. the greatness, majesty, tender care of the Messiah. It is most natural to take הוּא = οὗτος, as a person, since a person was the subject of the verse before.

⁶ Eph. ii. 14. ⁷ Is. ix. 6. ⁸ S. Luke ii. 14.

⁹ Eph. ii. 17.

¹⁰ S. John xiv. 27.

¹¹ Lap.

¹² iv. 10.

¹³ A disbeliever in prophecy writes, "If he would quote Micah as designating Bethlehem for the birthplace of the Messiah, he cannot shut his eyes to the fact that the Deliverer to come from thence was to be a contemporary shield against the Assyrian." Dr. Williams in Ess. and Rev. p. 68. Not "contemporary," unless it be certain that Psalmists and Prophets cannot identify themselves with the past and future of their people. The course of events interposed shews, that the deliverance was not to be contemporary. As the Psalmist speaking of the passage of the Red Sea, says, there did we rejoice in Him, (Ps. lxxvi. 6.) making himself one with them ; as Micah himself, speaking of times after the de-laces, then shall we raise against him seven shepherds, and eight † principal men.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

6 And they shall † waste the land of † † Heb. eat up. † Heb. princes of men.

Holy Ghost, as he did St. Paul by the thorn in the flesh, the minister of Satan to buffet him, or Job in mind body or estate, but¹⁶ after that he has no more that he can do ; he cannot hurt the soul, because nothing can separate us from the love of Christ, and¹⁷ Christ Who is our Peace is in us ; and of the saint too it may be said, ¹⁸The enemy cannot hurt him. ¹⁹Much as the Church has been vexed at all times by persecutions of devils and of tyrants, Christ has ever consoled her and given her peace in the persecutions themselves : ²⁰Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we are comforted of God. For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ. The Apostles²¹ departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for His Name. And St. Paul writeth to the Hebrews, ²²ye had compassion of me in my bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing that ye have in heaven a better and more enduring substance.

Then shall we raise against him seven shepherds and eight principal men (lit. anointed, although elsewhere used of heathen princes.)

The shepherds are manifestly inferior, spiritual, shepherds, acting under the One Shepherd, by His authority, and He in them. The princes of men are most naturally a civil power, according to its usage elsewhere²³. The seven is throughout the Old Testament a symbol of a sacred whole, probably of the union of God with the world²⁴, reconciled with it ; eight, when united with it, is something beyond it²⁵. Since then seven denotes a great, complete, and sacred multitude, by the eight he would designate "an incredible and almost countless multitude." ²⁶So in defence of the Church, there shall be raised up very many shepherds and teachers (for at no time will it be forsaken by Christ;) yea by more and more, countless, so that, however persecutions may increase, there shall never be wanting more to teach, and exhort to, the faith."

6. And they shall waste, lit. feed on, and so eat up. They who were shepherds of their own people, should consume their enemies. Jeremiah uses the same image. ²⁷The shepherds with their flocks shall come unto her ; they shall pitch tents against her round about ; they shall feed, each his space. So Joshua and Caleb say, ²⁸They, (the inhabitants of Canaan,) are bread for us. So it was said to St. Peter, ²⁹Arise, Peter, kill and eat ; and what once was common, defiled and unclean, shall turn to the nourishment and growth of the Church, and be incorporated into Christ, being made part of His Body.

solution of the land, (vii. 13.) says, "He will turn again, He will have compassion upon us;" (Ib. vii. 19.) nay, as our Lord Himself says to the Apostles, "I am with you alway, even to the end of the world," (S. Matt. xxviii. 20.) i. e. with them and their successors to the end of time ; so Micah, who had sorrowed with his people in their sorrows, (i. 8. 10.) here rejoices with them in a deliverance far away, after God should for a long time have given them up, v. 3. and which he should not see. "Even L. Bauer translated, 'And if another Assur,' comparing the passage of Virgil which Castalio had already quoted, 'Alter erit tum Tiphys, et altera quæ vehat Argo Delectos heroas.'" Hengst.

¹⁴ Is. x. and including Babylon Ch. xiv. ¹⁵ Acts xii. 1. ¹⁶ S. Luke xii. 4. ¹⁷ Rup. ¹⁸ Ps. lxxxix. 23. ¹⁹ Rib. ²⁰ 2 Cor. i. 4, 5. ²¹ Acts v. 41. ²² x. 34. ²³ Jos. xiii. 21, Ps. lxxxiii. 12, Ezek. xxxii. 30. The word stands rather in contrast with נָחַם than as equivalent to it, since נָחַם is always used of one, anointed by God, נָחַם, unless it be in this place, never.

²⁴ See Bähr Symbolik, ii. 107. sqq. ²⁵ See ab. on Amos i. 3. p. 155. This instance in Micah so far differs from the others, that the two numbers are not united with one substantive ; and, unless the shepherds and the princes of men be the same class of persons, (which scarcely seems probable,) they have kindred, yet different, subjects.

²⁶ vi. 3.

²⁷ Num. xiv. 9.

²⁸ Acts x. 13.

Before CHRIST
cir. 710.

^m Gen. 10.
8, 10, 11.
Or, with her own naked swords.
ⁿ Luke 1. 71.

Assyria with the sword and the land of ^m Nimrod || in the entrances thereof: thus shall he ⁿ deliver us from the Assyrian, when he cometh into our land, and when he treadeth within our borders.

And the land of Nimrod. Babylon, which should displace Assyria, but should carry on its work of chastising God's people, is joined by Micah, as by Isaiah¹, as an object of His judgment. In Isaiah, they are the actual Assyria² and Babylon³ whose destruction is foretold, yet so as to shadow out rebellion against God in its intensest form, making itself independent of, or measuring itself against, God. Hence, probably, here alone in holy Scripture, Babylon is called the land of Nimrod, as indeed he founded it⁴, but therewith was the author of the tower of Babel also, which was built in rebellion against God, whence his own name was derived⁵. Assyria then, and the world-empire which should succeed it, stand as representing the God-opposed world.

In the entrances thereof, [lit. *in the gates thereof*⁶.] The shepherds of Israel shall not act on the defensive only, but shall have victory over the world and Satan, carrying back the battle into his own dominions, and overthrowing him there. Satan's malice, so far from hurting the Church, shall turn to its good. Wherein he hoped to waste it, he shall be wasted; wherein he seemed to triumph, he shall be foiled. So it has been ever seen, how, under every persecution, the Church grew. ⁷ "The more it was pressed down, the more it rose up and flourished;" ⁸ "Shivering the assault of the Pagans, and strengthened more and more, not by resisting, but by enduring." Yet all, by whomsoever done, shall be the work of Christ Alone, enduring in martyrs, teaching in pastors, converting through the Apostles of Heathen nations. Wherefore he adds;

Thus, [And] He shall deliver us from the Assyrian. Not they, the subordinate shepherds, but He, the Chief Shepherd until the last enemy shall be destroyed and death shall be swallowed up in victory, shall deliver, whether by them or by Himself as He often so doth,—not us only (the saying is the larger because unlimited) but—He shall deliver, absolutely. Whosoever shall be delivered, He shall be their deliverer; all, whom He Alone knoweth, Who Alone ⁹ knoweth them that are His. ¹⁰ Neither is there salvation in any other. ¹¹ Whoso glorieth, let him glory in the Lord. Every member of Christ has part in this, who, through the grace of God, "has power and strength to have victory and to triumph against the devil, the world, and the flesh"—not he, but the grace of God which is with him; and much more, all, whether Apostles or Apostolic men, or Pastors, or Bishops and Overseers, who, by preaching or teaching or prayer, bring those to the knowledge of the truth, who ¹² sat in darkness and the shadow of death, and by whom ¹³ God translates us into the kingdom of His dear Son.

7. And the remnant of Jacob. Micah¹⁴, as well as Isa-

¹ Is. x. 5-34, xlii-xiv. 27. ² Is. x. 12-15. ³ xiv. 13-15. ⁴ Gen. x. 10.
⁵ Lit. "We will rebel." There is no other even plausible etymology.
⁶ The E. V. has followed the analogy of the "Caspian pylæ," &c. and has paraphrased, "openings" or "gates" by "entrances," as if they were "the gates of the country;" which, however, belongs only to narrow entrances, such as Thermopylæ. The rendering in the E. M. "with their own drawn swords," (from Aq. and Ed. v. A. E. and Kim.) is owing to a slavish adherence to parallelism, פתחו, &c. "drawn swords," (Ps. lv. 22.) is fem. after the analogy of פתח itself. The uniform meaning of פתח "opening," "door," "port," "gate," is plainly not to be deserted in a single case, on the ground of parallelism only. The fem. aff. also belongs naturally to the land, her's, not their's, i. e. the people's.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

^o ver. 3.
Deut. 32. 2.
Ps. 72. 6.
& 110. 3.

7 And ° the remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people ^p as a dew from the Lord, as the showers upon the grass, that tarrieth not for man, nor wait-eth for the sons of men.

iah¹⁵, had prophesied, that a remnant only should return unto the Mighty God. These, though very many in themselves, are yet but a remnant only of the unconverted mass; yet this, ¹⁶ the remnant, who shall be saved, who believe in Christ, ¹⁷ the little flock, of whom were the Apostles and their disciples, shall be, in the midst of many people, whom they won to the faith, as John in Asia, Thomas in India, Peter in Babylon and Rome, Paul well-nigh in the whole world, what? something to be readily swallowed up by their multitude? No, but as a dew from the Lord, as the showers from the grass, which tarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the sons of men, quickening to life that, which, like soon-withered¹⁸ grass, no human cultivation, no human help, could reach.

In the Gospel and the grace of Christ there are both, gentleness and might; softness, as the dew, might as of a lion. For ¹⁹ "Wisdom reacheth from one end to another mightily; and sweetly doth she order all things." The dew is, in Holy Scripture, a symbol of Divine doctrine. ²⁰ My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass. The dew comes down from heaven, is of heavenly not of earthly birth, transparent, glistening with light, reflecting the hues of heaven, gentle, slight, weak in itself, refreshing, cooling the strong heats of the day²¹, consumed itself, yet thereby preserving life, falling on the dry and withered grass wherein all nature droops, and recalling it to freshness of life. And still more in those lands, where from the beginning of April to the end of October²², the close of the latter and the beginning of the early rain, during all the hot months of summer, the life of all herbage depends upon the dew alone²³. Showers²⁴ are so called from the "multitude" of drops, slight and of no account in themselves, descending noiselessly yet penetrating the more deeply. So did the Apostles ²⁵ bedew the souls of believers with the word of godliness and enrich them abundantly with the words of the Gospel, themselves dying, and the Church living the more through their death²⁶, quenching the fiery heat of passions, and watering the dry and barren soil, that it might bring forth fruits unto Christ. Yet, they say²⁷, the excellency of the power was of God and not of us, and ²⁸ God gave the increase. For neither was their doctrine ²⁹ of man nor by man; but it came from heaven, the Holy Spirit teaching them invisibly and making unlearned and ignorant men mighty in word and deed. ³⁰ Whence these and these alone the Church of Christ looks up to, as furnishing the rule of truth. ³¹ The herb, upon which this dew falleth, groweth to God without any aid of man, and flourisheth, and needeth neither doctrines of philosophers, nor the rewards or praises of men."

7 S. Anton. in S. Athan. vit. ej. c. 79. ⁸ S. Aug. de Ag. Christ. c. 12, and other fathers quoted Tertull. Apol. c. ult. n. a. Oxf. Tr. ⁹ 2 Tim. ii. 19. ¹⁰ Acts iv. 12.
¹¹ 2 Cor. x. 17. ¹² Ps. cvii. 10. ¹³ Col. i. 13. ¹⁴ iv. 7. ¹⁵ x. 21. ¹⁶ Rom. ix. 27. ¹⁷ S. Luke xii. 32. ¹⁸ עשב. See Ps. cii. 5, 12, 2 Kings xix. 26, Is. xxxvii. 27.
¹⁹ Wisd. viii. 1. ²⁰ Deut. xxxii. 2. ²¹ Eccles. xviii. 16, xliii. 22.
²² Called פֶּתַח, because only "perennial" streams still flowed. ²³ On its importance to vegetable life, see Gen. xxvii. 28, Deut. xxxiii. 13, 28, Hag. i. 10, Zech. viii. 12.
²⁴ רִבְבִּים. It occurs Deut. xxxii. 2. Ps. lxxv. 11. (Heb.) lxxii. 6, as especially refreshing.
²⁵ S. Cyr. ²⁶ 2 Cor. iv. 12. ²⁷ 1b. 7. ²⁸ 1 Cor. iii. 6, 7.
²⁹ Gal. i. 12. ³⁰ Rup. ³¹ Rib.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

8 ¶ And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver.

¶ Or, goats

9 Thine hand shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off.

8. And the remnant of Jacob shall be as a young lion. “¹What more unlike than the sweetness of the dew and the fierceness of the lion? What so different as the gentle shower distilling on the herb, and the savageness or vehemence of a lion roaring among the flocks of sheep? Yet both are ascribed to the remnant of Jacob. Why? Because the Apostles of Christ are both tender and severe, tender in teaching and exhorting, severe in rebuking and avenging. How does Paul teach, ²*God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself, and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation; now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God!* What sweeter than the dew of love, the shower of true affection? And so, on to that, “our heart is enlarged.” They are such drops of dew as no one could doubt came from ³*the Lord, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort.* Yet the same Apostle after a little writes, ⁴*This is the third time I am coming to you. I told you before and foretell you, and being absent now I write to them which heretofore have sinned and to all others, that if I come again, I will not spare, since ye seek a proof of Christ speaking in me.* See the severity of a master, like the roaring of a lion among the beasts of the forest. For such surely are they whom he rebukes for the ⁵*uncleanness and fornication and lasciviousness which they had committed.* Was he not to such as a lion⁶? Was not Peter such, when he rebuked Ananias first and then Sapphira his wife, and they fell down and gave up the ghost? They tread down or ⁷*cast down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God; as Christ Himself, Who spake in them, is both a lamb and the ⁸Lion of the tribe of Judah, and nothing is so terrible as ⁹the wrath of the Lamb.*

And none can deliver. “¹⁰For as the Apostles past from nation to nation, and trod down Heathenism, subduing it to Christ, and taking within their net the many converted nations, none could withdraw from the Apostles' doctrine those whom they had converted.” The Heathen world “¹¹cried out that the state is beset, that the Christians are in their fields, their forts, their islands.” “¹²We are a people of yesterday, and yet we have filled every place belonging to you, cities, islands, castles, towns, assemblies, your very camp, your tribes, companies, palace, senate, forum! We leave you your temples only. We can count your armies, our numbers in a single province will be greater.”

9. Their hand shall be lifted up upon their adversaries. The might of the Church is the Might of Christ in her, and the glory of the Church is His from Whom it comes and to

10 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord, that I will cut off thy horses out of the midst of thee, and I will destroy thy chariots:

11 And I will cut off the cities of thy land, and throw down all thy strong holds:

12 And I will cut off witchcrafts out of thine hand and thou shalt have no more soothsayers:

13 Thy graven images also will I cut off,

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

¹ Zech. 9. 10.

² Is. 2. 6.

³ Zech. 13. 2.

Whom it returns. It is all one, whether this be said to Christ or to the remnant of Jacob, i. e. His Church. Her enemies are His, and her's only because they are His, and hate her as belonging to Him. They shall be cut off; either ceasing to be His enemies, or ceasing to be, as Julian or Arius or Anti-Christ, ¹³*whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His Mouth and shall destroy with the brightness of His Coming.* And in the end, Satan also, over whom Christ gave the Apostles ¹⁴*power to tread on all the power of the Enemy, shall be bruised under our feet*¹⁵.

10. And it shall come to pass in that day, of grace in the kingdom of Christ and of His Presence in the Apostles and with the Church, I will cut off thy horses out of the midst of thee. The greater the glory and purity of the Church, the less it needs or hangs upon human aid. The more it is reft of human aid, the more it hangs upon God. So God promises, as a blessing, that He will remove from her all mere human resources, both what was in itself evil, and what, although good, had been abused. Most of these things, whose removal is here promised, are spoken of at the same time by Isaiah, as sin, or the occasion of sin, and of God's judgments to Judah. ¹⁶*Soothsayers, (the same word) horses, chariots, idols the work of their hands; high towers, fenced walls.* “¹⁷I will take, from thee all arms wherewith, while unconverted, thou opposedst the faith,” all which thou settest up as idols in place of God. (Such are witchcrafts, soothsayers, graven images, images of Ashtaroth.) “I will take from thee all outward means and instruments of defence which aforetime were turned into pride and sin;” as horses and chariots. Not such shall be the arms of the Church, not such her strongholds. A horse is a vain thing to save a man. Her arms shall be the despised Cross of shame; her warriors, they who bear it; their courage, to endure in holy patience and meekness; their might, the Holy Spirit within them; their victories, through death, not of others, but their Master's and, in His, their own. They shall overcome the world, as He overcame it, and through Him Alone and His Merits Who overcame it by suffering.

11-15. I will cut off the cities of thy land. So God promised by Zechariah ¹⁸*Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls; for I will be unto her a wall of fire round about.* The Church shall not need the temptation of human defence; for God shall fence her in on every side. Great cities too, as the abode of luxury and sin, of power and pride, and, mostly, of cruelty, are chiefly denounced as the objects of God's anger. Babylon stands as the emblem of the whole city of the world or of the devil, as opposed to God. “¹⁹The first city was built by Cain; Abel and the other saints had no continu-

¹ Rur. ² 2 Cor. v. 19—vi. 11. ³ Ib. i. 3. ⁴ Ib. xiii. 1-3. ⁵ Ib. xii. 21. ⁶ See again 1 Cor. v. 2-5. ⁷ 2 Cor. x. 5. ⁸ Rev. v. 5. ⁹ Ib. vi. 16. ¹⁰ Dion.

¹¹ Apol. c. 1. p. 2. Oxf. Tr. ¹² Ib. c. 37. p. 78. ¹³ 2 Thess. ii. 8. ¹⁴ S. Luke x. 19. ¹⁵ Rom. xvi. 20. ¹⁶ Is. ii. 6-8. 15. ¹⁷ Rib. Lap. ¹⁸ ii. 4, 5.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

|| Or, statues.
Is. 2. 8.

and thy || standing images out of the midst of thee; and thou shalt ^tno more worship the work of thine hands.

|| Or, enemies.

14 And I will pluck up thy groves out of the midst of thee: so will I destroy thy || cities.

Ps. 149. 7.

ver. 8.

2 Thess. 1. 8. 15 And I will ^uexecute vengeance in anger and fury upon the heathen, such as they have not heard.

ing city¹ here. Cities then will include ²all the tumults and evil passions and ambition and strife and bloodshed, which Cain brought in among men. Cities are collectively called and are Babylon, with whom, (as in the Revelations we hear a voice from heaven saying), ³the kings of the earth committed fornication and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies; and of which it is written, ⁴And a mighty Angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city, Babylon, be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all. "Great rest then is promised to holy Zion i. e. the Church, when the cities or strongholds of the land [strongholds, as they are, of earthliness] shall be destroyed. For together with them are included all objects of desire in them, with the sight whereof the citizens of the kingdom of God, while pilgrims here, are tempted; whereof the wise man saith, Vanity of vanities, all is vanity." The fulfilment reaches on to the Day of Judgment, when the Church shall finally receive glory from the Lord, and be ⁵without spot and wrinkle. All looks on to that Day. The very largeness of the promise, which speaks, in its fullest sense, of the destruction of things, without which we can hardly do in this life, (as cities⁶), or things very useful to the needs of man, (as horses,) carries us on yet more to that Day when there will be no more need of any outward things; ⁷when the heavy body shall be changed, and shall have the swiftness of angels, and shall be transported whither it willeth, without chariots and horses; and all things which tempt the eye shall cease; and no evil shall enter; and there shall be no need of divining, amid the presence and full knowledge of God, and where the ever-present Face of God, Who is Truth, shall shine on all, and nothing be uncertain or unknown; nor shall they need to form in their souls images of Him Whom His own shall see as He Is; nor shall they esteem any thing of self, or the work of their own hands; but God shall be All in all." In like way, the woe on those who obey not the truth, also looks on to the end. It too is final. There is nothing to soften it. Punishments in the course of life are medicinal. Here no mention is made of Mercy, but only of executing vengeance; and that, with wrath and fury; and that, such as they have not heard. For as eye hath not seen, nor heart conceived the good things laid up in store for those who love God; so neither the evil things prepared for those who, in act, shew that they hate Him.

Ch. vi. The foregoing prophecy closed with the final cleansing of the Church and the wrath of God resting on the wicked, when, as St. Paul saith, ⁷The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking ven-

¹ Heb. xiii. 14. ² Rup. ³ Rev. xviii. 8. ⁴ Ib. 21. ⁵ Eph. v. 27. ⁶ In ver. 14. Jon. has "I will cut off thy enemies," whence E. M. But although stands for enemy 1 Sam. xxviii. 16, and plur. Ps. cxxxix. 20, (in both places with affix,) here every object mentioned is of things, belonging to Judah, its own. ⁷ 2 Thess. i. 7-10.

CHAPTER VI.

Before CHRIST
cir. 710.

1 God's controversy for unkindness, 6 for ignorance, 10 for injustice, 16 and for idolatry.

HEAR ye now what the LORD saith; Arise; contend thou || before the mountains, and let the hills hear thy voice.

|| Or, with.
Deut. 32. 1.
Ps. 50. 1, 4.
Is. 1. 2.
Hos. 12. 2.

2 ^aHear ye, O mountains, ^bthe LORD's controversy, and ye strong foundations of the earth: for ^cthe LORD hath a contro-

Is. 1. 18.
& 5. 3, 4.
& 43. 26.
Hos. 4. 1.

geance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power; when He shall come to be glorified in His Saints, and to be admired in all them that believe. The Prophet here begins his third and last summons to judgment, in the Name, as it were, of the All-Holy Trinity, against Whom they had sinned.

1. Hear ye now what the Lord saith: If ye will not hear the rebuke of man, hear now at last the word of God. "Arise thou, Micah." The prophet was not willing to be the herald of woe to his people; but had to arise at the bidding of God, that he might not ⁸be rebellious like that rebellious house. Stand up; as one having all authority to rebuke, and daunted by none. He rouses the hearer, as shewing it to be a very grave urgent matter, to be done promptly, urgently, without delay. Contend thou before [better, as in E. M. with⁹] the mountains. Since man, who had reason, would not use his reason, God calls the mountains and hills, who ¹⁰unwillingly, as it were, had been the scenes of their idolatry, as if He would say, ¹¹Insensate though ye be, ye are more sensible than Israel, whom I endowed with sense; for ye feel the voice and command of God your Creator and obey Him; they do not. I cite you, to represent your guilty inhabitants, that, through you, they may hear My complaint to be just, and own themselves guilty, repent, and ask forgiveness." "The altars and idols, the blood of the sacrifices, the bones and ashes upon them, with unuttered yet clear voice, spoke of the idolatry and guilt of the Jews, and so pronounced God's charge and expostulation to be just. Ezekiel is bidden, in like way, to prophesy against the mountains of Israel¹², I will bring a sword upon you, and I will destroy your high places, and your altars shall be desolate." ¹³Lifeless nature without voice tells the glory of God; without ears it hears what the Lord speaks¹⁴.

2. Hear, ye strong [or, it may be, *ye enduring*¹⁵], foundations of the earth. Mountains and rocks carry the soul to times far away, before and after. They change not, like the habitable, cultivated, surface of the earth. There they were, before the existence of our short-lived generations; there they will be, until time shall cease to be. They have witnessed so many vicissitudes of human things, themselves unchanging. The prophet is directed to seize this feeling of simple nature. "They have seen so much before me," Yes! "then they have seen all which befel my forefathers; all God's benefits, all along, to them and to us, all their and our unthankfulness."

He will plead with Israel. God hath a strict severe judg-

⁸ Ezek. ii. 8. ⁹ This is the uniform sense of עם with אם as well as with עם. See Num. xx. 13, Jud. viii. 1, Prov. xxv. 9, Is. xlv. 9, 1. 8, Jer. ii. 9, Neh. v. 7, xiii. 11, 17. (all, in Fürst Conc.) ¹⁰ Rom. viii. 20. ¹¹ Lap. ¹² Ezek. vi. 2-5. ¹³ Ps. xix. 3, S. Luke xix. 40. ¹⁴ See Ges. Lex. p. 644.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

versy with his people, and he will plead with Israel.

⁴ Jer. 2. 5, 31.

3 O my people, ^d what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? testify against me.

• Ex. 12. 51.
& 14. 30.
& 20. 2.
Deut. 4. 20.
Amos 2. 10.

4 ^e For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the ment¹ with His people, and yet vouchsafes to clear Himself before His creatures, to come down from His throne of glory and place Himself on equal terms with them. He does not plead only, but mutually (such is the force of the word) *im-pleads with*² His people, hears if they would say aught against Himself, and then gives His own judgment³. But this willingness to hear, only makes us condemn ourselves, so that we should be without excuse before Him. We do owe ourselves wholly to Him Who made us and hath given us all things richly to enjoy. If we have withdrawn ourselves from His Service, unless He dealt hardly with us, we dealt rebelliously and ungratefully with Him. God brings all pleas into a narrow space. The fault is with Him or with us. He offers to clear Himself. He sets before us His good deeds, His Loving kindness, Providence, Grace, Long-suffering, Bounty, Truth, and contrasts with them our evil deeds, our unthankfulness, despitefulness, our breach of His laws, and disorderings of His creation. And then, in the face of His Goodness, He asks, 'What evil have I done, what good have I left undone?' so that our evil and negligences should be but a requital of His. For if it is evil to return evil for evil, or not to return good for good, what evil is it to return evil for His exceeding good! As He says by Isaiah, What could have been done more to My vineyard and I have not done in it? Wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes? And our Blessed Lord asks; Many good works have I shewed you from My Father. For which of those works do ye stone Me? Which of you convinceth Me of sin? And if I say the truth, why do ye not believe Me? Away from the light of God, we may plead excuses, and cast the blame of our sins upon our temptations, or passions, or nature, i. e. on Almighty God Himself, Who made us. When His light streams in upon our conscience, we are silent. Blessed if we be silenced and confess to Him then, that we be not first silenced in the Day of Judgment. Righteous Job said, I desire to reason with God; but when his eye saw Him, he said, wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes.

3. O My people. This one tender word¹⁰, twice repeated¹¹, contains in one a whole volume of reproof. It sets before the eyes God's choice of them of His free grace, and the whole history of His loving-kindness; if so they could be ashamed of their thanklessness and turn to Him. 'Mine,' He says, 'ye are by creation, by Providence, by great deliverances and by hourly love and guardianship, by gifts of nature, the world, and grace; such things have I done for thee; what against thee? what evil have I done unto thee?' ¹² Thy foot did not swell these forty years, for He upbears in all ways where He leads. Wherein have I wearied thee? for ¹³ His commandments are not grievous. Thou hast been weary of Me, O

¹ רָב. ² תִּתְּקֶנּוּ. ³ Comp. Is. xliii. 26, Jer. ii. 5, 6, 9. So עָנָה בִּי, "testify against Me," (ver. 3.) is a judicial term, lit. "answer against Me," i. e. "answer judicial interrogatories," then generally "depose," "testify," Num. xxxv. 30, Deut. xix. 18, Job xv. 6, Ruth i. 21, Is. iii. 9, lix. 12, Jer. xiv. 7.
⁴ Is. v. 4. ⁵ S. John x. 32. ⁶ Ib. viii. 46. ⁷ Job i. 8. ii. 3, Ezek. xiv. 20.

house of servants; and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

5 O my people, remember now what ^f Balak king of Moab consulted, and what Balaam the son of Beor answered him from ^g Shittim unto Gilgal; that ye may know ^h the righteousness of the LORD.

^f Num. 22. 5.
& 23. 7. &
24. 10. 11.
Deut. 23. 4, 5.
Josh. 24. 9, 10.
Rev. 2. 14.
^g Num. 25. 1.
& 33. 49.
Josh. 4. 19.
& 5. 10.
^h Judg. 5. 11.

Israel, God says by Isaiah¹⁴, I have not wearied thee with in-cense; thou hast wearied Me with thine iniquities.

4. For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants. What wert thou? What art thou? Who made thee what thou art? God reminds them. They were slaves; they are His people in the heritage of the heathen, and that by His outstretched arm. God mentions some heads of the mercies which He had shewn them, when He had made them His people, His redemption of them from Egypt, His guidance through the wilderness, His leading them over the last difficulty to the promised land. The use of the familiar language of the Pentateuch¹⁵ is like the touching of so many key-notes, recalling the whole harmony of His love. Moses, Aaron, and Miriam together, are Lawgiver, to deliver and instruct; Priest, to atone; and Prophetess¹⁶ to praise God; and the name of Miriam at once recalled the mighty works at the Red Sea and how they then thanked God.

5. Remember now. The word translated now is a very tender one, like our "do now remember" or "do remember," beseeching instead of commanding. ¹⁷ I might command, but I speak tenderly, that I may lead thee to own the truth. What Balak king of Moab consulted, and what Balaam the son of Beor answered him. God did not only raise up Moses, Aaron, Miriam, out of their brethren, but He turned the curse of the alien Balaam into a blessing; and that, not for their righteousness, (for even then they were rebellious,) but against their deserts, out of His own truth and righteousness. Not that the curse of Balaam could in itself have hurt them; but, in proportion to his reputation, it would have infused great energy into their enemies, and its reversal must have struck a great panic into them and into others. Human might having failed in Sihon and Og, Balak sought superhuman. God shewed them by their own diviner, that it was against them. Even after they had seduced Israel, through Balaam's devilish counsel, Midian seems to have been stricken by God with panic, and not to have struck a blow¹⁸.

From Shittim unto Gilgal. The words are separated by the Hebrew accent from what went before. It is then probably said in concise energy for, "Remember too from Shittim to Gilgal," i. e. all the great works of God from Shittim¹⁹, the last encampment of Israel out of the promised land, where they so sinned in Baal-peor, unto Gilgal, the first in the promised land, which they entered by miracle, where the Ark rested amid the victories given them, where the Covenant was renewed, and ²⁰ the reproach of Egypt was rolled away. Remember all, from your own deep sin and rebellion to the deep mercy of God.

That ye may know the righteousness [righteousnesses] of ⁸ Joh. iii. 3. ⁹ xlii. 5, 6. ¹⁰ עָנָה. ¹¹ Here and v. 5.

¹² Dent. viii. 4. ¹³ 1 S. John v. 3. ¹⁴ Is. xliii. 22-24. ¹⁵ העֲלֵךְ בְּאִשְׁתֵּי מִדְיָן see Gen. i. 24. בֵּית עֲקֵרִים Ex. xlii. 3, 14, xx. 2, Deut. viii. 14, xiii. 10; and united, as here, with שָׁמָּה, Deut. vii. 8; xiii. 5. ¹⁶ Ex. xv. 20. ¹⁷ Dion. ¹⁸ Num. xxxi. 49.
¹⁹ See on Hos. ix. 10. p. 59. and on Jo. iii. 18. p. 141. ²⁰ Jos. v. 9.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

† Heb. sons of a year?
1 Ps. 50. 9.
& 51. 16.
Isai. 1. 11.
Job. 29. 6.
2 Kin. 16. 3.
& 21. 6. &
23. 10.
Jer. 7. 31.
& 19. 5. Ezek. 23. 37.

6 ¶ Wherewith shall I come before the Lord, and bow myself before the high God? shall I come before him with burnt offerings, with calves † of a year old?

7ⁱ Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil? ^k shall I give my firstborn

the Lord; His Faithfulness in performing His promises to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. God speaketh of His promises, not as what they were in themselves, mere mercy, but as what they became, through that gracious and free promise, righteousness, in that He had bound Himself to fulfil what He had, out of mere grace, promised. So in the New Testament He saith, ¹ God is not unrighteous that He should forget your works and labour which proceedeth of love; and, ² He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins. Micah speaks, by a rare idiom, of the *righteousnesses*³ of the Lord, each act of mercy being a separate effluence of His Righteousness. The very names of the places suggest the righteous acts of God, the unrighteous of Israel. ⁴ "But we too, who desire with unveiled face to behold the glory of the Lord, and have Abraham really for our father, let us, when we have sinned, hear God pleading against us, and reproving us for the multitude of His benefits. For we too once served Pharaoh and the people of Egypt, labouring in works of mire and clay; and He redeemed us Who gave Himself a Redemption for all; that we, the redeemed of the Lord⁵, whom He redeemed out of the hand of the enemy and gathered from the lands, might say, His mercy endureth for ever. He sent also before our face Moses, the spiritual Law, and Aaron the High Priest, not bearing the typical Ephod and Urim, but having in His Forehead the seal of holiness which God the Father sealed; and Miriam, the foreshewing of prophets. Recollect we too what he thought against us who willed to devour us, the true Balak, Satan, who laid snares for us through Balaam, the destroyer of the people, fearing lest we should cover his land and occupy it, withdrawing the earthly-minded from his empire."

6, 7. Wherewith shall I come before the Lord? The people, thus arraigned, bursts in, as men do, with professions that they would be no more ungrateful; that they will do any thing, every thing—but what they ought. With them it shall be but "Ask and have." They wish only to know, with what they shall come? They would be *beforehand*⁶ with Him, anticipating His wishes; they would, with all the submission of a creature, *bow*⁷, prostrate themselves before God; they acknowledge His High Majesty, who dwelleth on high⁸, the most High God, and would *abase themselves*⁹ before His lofty greatness, if they but knew, "how" or "wherewith." They would give of their best; sacrifices the choicest of their kind, which should be wholly His, whole-burnt-offerings, offered exactly according to the law¹⁰, bullocks of a year old; then too, the next choice offering, the rams; and these, as they were offered for the whole people on very solemn occasions, in vast multitudes,

¹ Heb. vi. 10. ² 1 S. John i. 9. ³ מַצְדִּיק, only occurs besides Jud. v. 11. (bis) 1 Sam. xii. 7; thence מַצְדִּיק, Dan. ix. 16. Else only Ps. ciii. 6. ⁴ From S. Jer. Ps. cvii. 1-3. ⁵ מִצְדִּיק ⁶ אֶקְדָּם ⁷ אֶקְדָּם ⁸ מֵעַל ⁹ The word occurs only of one sinking, bowed down, amid persecutions, Ps. lvii. 7; of the "bowed down," whom God raiseth up, Ps. cxlv. 14, cxlvi. 8; and in Is. lviii. 5, of "ostentatious outward humiliation before God." So probably here, where alone the reflective occurs. ¹⁰ Lev. ix. 2, 3. ¹¹ At Solomon's dedication, 22,000 oxen and 120,000 sheep, 1 Kings viii. 63; by Hezekiah, 2000 bullocks and 17,000 sheep, 2 Chron. xxx. 24; by Josiah, 30,000 lambs and for my transgression, the fruit of my † body for the sin of my soul?

8 He hath^m shewed thee, O man,^m what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but ⁿ to do justly, and to love mercy, and to † walk humbly with thy God?

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

† Heb. belly
Deut. 10. 12.
1 Sam. 15. 22.
Hos. 6. 6.
& 12. 6.
Gen. 18. 19.
Isai. 1. 17.
† Heb. humble thyself to walk.

thousands or ten thousands¹¹; the oil which accompanied the burnt sacrifice, should flow in rivers¹²; nay, more still; they would not withhold their sons, their first born sons, from God, part, as they were, of themselves, or any fruit of their own body. They enhance the offering by naming the tender relation to themselves¹³. They would offer every thing, (even what God forbade) excepting only what alone He asked for, their heart, its love and its obedience¹⁴. The form of their offer contains this; they ask zealously, "with what shall I come." It is an outward offering only, a thing which they would bring. Hypocritical eagerness! a sin against light. For to enquire further, when God has already revealed anything, is to deny that He has revealed it. It comes from the wish that He had not revealed what He has revealed. ¹⁵ "Who-so, after he hath found the truth, discusseth any thing further, seeketh a lie." God had told them, long before, from the time that He made them His people, what he desired of them; So Micah answers,

8. He hath shewed thee. Micah does not tell them now, as for the first time; which would have excused them. He says, He hath shewed thee; He, about Whose mind and will and pleasure they were pretending to enquire, the Lord their God. He had shewn it to them. The law was full of it. He shewed it to them, when He said, ¹⁶ And now, Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord thy God, to walk in all His ways, and to love Him and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, to keep the commandments of the Lord and His statutes which I command thee this day for thy good? They had asked, "with what outward thing¹⁷ shall I come before the Lord;" the prophet tells them, "what thing is good," the inward man of the heart, righteousness, love, humility.

And what doth the Lord require [search, seek] of thee? The very word¹⁸ implies an earnest search within. He would say, ¹⁹ "Trouble not thyself as to any of these things, burnt-offerings, rams, calves, without thee. For God seeketh not thine, but thee; not thy substance, but thy spirit; not ram or goat, but thy heart." ²⁰ "Thou askest, what thou shouldest offer for thee? Offer thyself. For what else doth the Lord seek of thee, but thee? Because, of all earthly creatures, He hath made nothing better than thee, He seeketh thyself from thyself, because thou hadst lost thyself."

To do judgment, are chiefly all acts of equity; to love mercy, all deeds of love. Judgment, is what right requires; mercy, what love. Yet, secondarily, "to do judgment" is to pass righteous judgments in all cases; and so, as to others, kids for the paschal offerings and 3000 bullocks. Ib. xxxv. 7. ¹² Comp. Job xx. 17, "rivers" (נָחַל as here) "of streams of honey and cream." Oil was used in all meal-offerings which accompanied the burnt-offering, Lev. ii. 1, 2. 4-7, vii. 10, 12, and so entered into the daily sacrifice, Ex. xxix. 40, and all sacrifices of consecration, Ex. xxix. 2, 23, Lev. vi. 15, 21, Num. viii. 8. ¹³ See Deut. xxviii. 53. ¹⁴ Conc. Chalc. Act. 3. ¹⁵ The enquiry, v. 7, was, Will the Lord be pleased? הֲיִרְצֶה. The subject of, He hath shewn thee, is obviously that same Lord. ¹⁶ Dent. x. 12, 13. ¹⁷ נֶפֶשׁ, 6. נֶפֶשׁ, 8. ¹⁸ רָצָה ¹⁹ רֹחַ ²⁰ S. Aug. Serm. 43. ad loc. § 2.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

9 The LORD's voice crieth unto the city, and || the man of wisdom shall see thy

|| Or, thy name shall see that which is.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

¹ judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment; and as to one's self also. Judge equitably and kindly of others, humbly of thyself. “² Judge of thyself in thyself without acceptance of thine own person, so as not to spare thy sins, nor take pleasure in them, because thou hast done them. Neither praise thyself in what is good in thee, nor accuse God in what is evil in thee. For this is wrong judgment, and so, not judgment at all. This thou didst, being evil; reverse it, and it will be right. Praise God in what is good in thee; accuse thyself in what is evil. So shalt thou anticipate the judgment of God, as He saith, ³ If we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged of the Lord.” He addeth, love mercy; being merciful, out of love, ⁴ not of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver. These acts together contain the whole duty to man, corresponding with and formed upon the mercy and justice of God. All which is due, any how or in any way, is of judgment; all which is free toward man, although not free toward God, is of mercy. There remains, walk humbly with thy God; not, bow thyself only before Him, as they had offered⁶, nor again walk with Him only, as did Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Job; but walk humbly (lit. *bow down*⁷ the going) yet still with thy God; never lifting up thyself, never sleeping, never standing still, but ever walking on, yet ever casting thyself down; and the more thou goest on in grace, the more cast thyself down; as our Lord saith, ⁸ When ye have done all these things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants; we have done that which was our duty to do.

It is not a “crouching before God” displeased, (such as they had thought of,) but the humble love of the forgiven; walk humbly, as the creature with the Creator, but in love, with thine own God. Humble thyself with God, Who humbled Himself in the flesh; walk on with Him, Who is thy Way. Neither humility nor obedience alone would be true graces; but to cleave fast to God, because He is thine All, and to bow thyself down, because thou art nothing, and thine All is He and of Him. It is altogether a Gospel-precept; bidding us, ⁹ Be ye perfect, as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect; ¹⁰ Be merciful, as your Father also is merciful; and yet, in the end, have ¹¹ that same mind which was also in Christ Jesus, Who made Himself of no reputation.

The offers of the people, stated in the bare nakedness in which Micah exhibits them, have a character of irony. But it is the irony of the truth and of the fact itself. The creature has nothing of its own to offer; ¹² the blood of bulls and goats cannot take away sin; and the offerings, as they rise in value, become, not useless only but, sinful. Such offerings would bring down anger, not mercy. Micah's words then are, for their vividness, an almost proverbial expression of the nothingness of all which we sinners could offer to God. “¹³ We, who are of the people of God, knowing that ¹⁴ in His sight shall no man living be justified, and saying, ¹⁵ I am a beast with Thee, trust in no pleas before His judgment-seat, but pray; yet we put no trust in our very prayers. For there is nothing worthy to be offered to God for sin, and no humility can wash away the stains of offences. In penitence for our sins, we hesitate and say, Wherewith shall I come before the Lord? how shall I come, so as to be admitted into familiar intercourse with my God? One and the same spirit revolveth these things in each of us or of those before us, who have been pricked to repentance, ‘what worthy offering can I make to the Lord?’ This and the like we revolve, as the Apostle saith; ¹⁶ We know not what to pray for as we ought; but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. ‘Should I offer myself wholly as a burnt-offering to Him? If, understanding spiritually all the Levitical sacrifices, I should present them in myself, and offer my first-born, i. e. what is chief in me, my soul, I should find nothing worthy of His greatness. Neither in ourselves, nor in ought earthly, can we find any thing worthy to be offered to reconcile us with God. For the sin of the soul, blood alone is worthy to be offered; not the blood of calves, or rams, or goats, but our own; yet our own too is not offered, but given back, being due already¹⁷. The Blood of Christ Alone sufficeth to do away all sin.’ “¹⁸ The whole is said, in order to instruct us, that, without the shedding of the Blood of Christ and its Virtue and Merits, we cannot please God, though we offered ourselves and all that we have, within and without; and also, that so great are the benefits bestowed upon us by the love of Christ, that we can repay nothing of them.”

But then it is clear that there is no teaching in this passage in Micah, which there is not in the law¹⁹. The developments in the Prophets relate to the Person and character of the Redeemer. The law too contained both elements; 1) the ritual of sacrifice, impressing on the Jew the need of an Atoner; 2) the moral law, and the graces inculcated in it, obedience, love of God and man, justice, mercy, humility, and the rest. There was no hint in the law, that half was acceptable to God instead of the whole; that sacrifice of animals would supersede self-sacrifice or obedience. There was nothing, on which the Pharisee could base his heresy. What Micah said, Moses had said. The corrupt of the people offered a half-service, what cost them least, as faith without love always does. Micah, in this, reveals to them nothing new; but tells them that this half-service is contrary to the first principles of their law. He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good. Sacrifice, without love of God and man, was not even so much as the body without the soul. It was an abortion, a monster. For one end of sacrifice was to inculcate the insufficiency of all our good, apart from the Blood of Christ; that, do what we would, ²⁰ all came short of the glory of God. But to substitute sacrifice, which was a confession that at best we were miserable sinners, unable, of ourselves, to please God, for any efforts to please Him or to avoid displeasing Him, would be a direct contradiction of the law, antinomianism under the dispensation of the law itself.

Micah changes the words of Moses, in order to adapt them to the crying sins of Israel at that time. He then upbraids them in detail, and that, with those sins which were patent, which, when brought home to them, they could not deny, the sins against their neighbour.

9. The voice of the Lord crieth unto the city, i. e. Jerusa-

¹ S. John vii. 24. ² S. Aug. l. c. ³ 1 Cor. xi. 31. ⁴ 2 Cor. ix. 7. ⁵ Ps. ci. l. lxi. 7. ⁶ v. 6. ⁷ קָנַע. The root only occurs besides in the form קָנַע Prov. xi. 2, where it is opposed to pride. In the Targg. Afel is = Heb. קָנַע. The noun is also used of humility. The Arabic has no bearing upon it, all its meanings being derived from the original “formed.”

⁸ S. Luke xvii. 10. ⁹ S. Matt. v. 48. ¹⁰ S. Luke vi. 36. ¹¹ Phil. ii. 5, 7. ¹² Heb. x. 4. ¹³ from S. Jer. S. Cyr. Rup. Dion. ¹⁴ Ps. cxliii. 2. ¹⁵ Ib. lxxiii. 22. ¹⁶ Rom. viii. 26. ¹⁷ Ps. cxvi. 8. ¹⁸ Dion. ¹⁹ As is so often said, in order to depreciate the law, e. g. in Dr. Stanley's J. Church p. 448. ²⁰ Rom. iii. 23.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

name: hear ye the rod, and who hath appointed it.

Or, Is there yet unto every man an house of the wicked, &c.
† Heb. measure of leanness, Amos 8. 5. ° Deut. 25. 13,—16. Prov. 11. 1. & 20. 10, 23

10 ¶ Are there yet the treasures of wickedness in the house of the wicked, and the † scant measure ° that is abominable?

lem, as the metropolis of their wealth and their sin, the head and heart of their offending. Crieth, aloud, earnestly, intently, so that all might hear. So God says, Doth not wisdom cry? and understanding put forth her voice? She crieth at the gates,—unto you, O men, I cry, and my voice is to the sons of men; and Isaiah prophesied of St. John Baptist, as the voice of one crying in the wilderness; and our Lord saith, He that heareth you, heareth Me. And the man of wisdom shall see Thy Name. The voice of God is in the hearing of all, but the wise only seeth the Name of God⁴. The word rendered wisdom means, *that which is*⁵, and so, that which alone is, which alone has any real solid being, because it alone abides, wisdom, or counsel according to God. Such as are thus wise shall see the Name of God, (as Jeremiah says to his generation⁶, See ye the word of the Lord.) They shall see His power and majesty and all which His Name expresses, as they are displayed severally in each work of His: He shall speak to them by all things wherein He is; and so seeing Him now in a glass darkly, they shall hereafter see all, His Glory, His Goodness, His Love, Himself, face to face.

Hear ye the rod, i. e. the scourge of the wrath of God. The name and the image recall the like prophecies of Isaiah, so that Micah in one word epitomises the prophecies of Isaiah, or Isaiah expands the word of Micah. The rod in thine hand is My indignation; As if the rod lifted up Him, Who is not wood; He lifteth up his rod against thee; Thou hast broken the rod (which is) on his shoulder; The Lord hath broken the rod of the wicked; whereon the grounded [i. e. fixed by the decree of God] staff shall pass.

And Who hath appointed it, i. e. beforehand, fixing the time and place, when and where it should come. So Jeremiah says, How canst thou (sword of the Lord) be quiet, and the Lord hath given it a charge to Ashkelon and to the sea-shore? there hath He appointed it. He Who has appointed it, changeth not His decree, unless man changeth; nor is He lacking in power to fulfil it. He will surely bring it to pass. All which can be thought of, of fear, terror, motives to repentance, awe, hope, trust, is in that word Who. It is God; hopes and fears may be infinite.

10. Are there yet, still after all the warnings and long-suffering of God, the treasures of wickedness in the house of the wicked? Treasures of wickedness are treasures gotten by wickedness; yet it means too that the wicked shall have no treasure, no fruit, but his wickedness. He treasureth up treasures, but of wickedness; as St. James saith, Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days, i. e. of the miseries that shall 11 ¶ Shall I count them pure with the wicked balances, and with the bag of deceitful weights?

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

Or, Shall I be pure with, &c.
Hos. 12. 7.

12 For the rich men thereof are full of violence, and the inhabitants thereof have come upon them¹⁶. The words stand over against one another; house of the wicked, treasures of wickedness; as though the whole house of the wicked was but a "treasure-house of wickedness." Therein it began; therein and in its rewards it shall end. Are there yet? the Prophet asks. There shall soon cease to be. The treasure shall be spoiled; the iniquity alone shall remain.

And the scant ephah (lit. "ephah of leanness" E. M.) which is abominable? Scant itself, and, by the just judgment of God, producing scantness, emaciated and emaciating¹⁷; as He says, He gave them their desire, and sent leanness withal into their soul; and St. James¹⁸, it shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Even a heathen said, "Gain gotten by wickedness is loss;" and that, as being "abominable" or "accursed" or, one might say, "bewrathed"²¹, lying under the wrath and curse of God. "What they minish from the measure, that they add to the wrath of God and the vengeance which shall come upon them; what is lacking to the measure shall be supplied out of the wrath of God." The Ephah was a corn-measure²³, containing about six bushels; the rich, in whose house it was, were the sellers; they were the necessities of life then, which the rich retailers of corn were selling dishonestly, at the price of the lives of the poor²⁴. Our subtler ways of sin cheat ourselves, not God. In what ways do not competitive employers use the scant measure which is accursed? What else is all our competitive trade, our cheapness, our wealth, but scant measure to the poor, making their wages lean, full and overflowing with the wrath of God?

11. Shall I count them pure? rather, (as E. M.) *Shall I be pure*²⁵? The Prophet takes for the time their person and bids them judge themselves in him. If it would defile me, how are ye, with all your other sins, not defiled? All these things were expressly forbidden in the law. Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment, in mete-yard, in weight or in measure. Just balances, just weights, a just ephah and a just hin, shall ye have; and, Thou shalt not have in thy bag divers weights, a great and a small. Thou shalt not have in thine house divers measures, a great and a small. For all that do such things, and all that do unrighteousness are an abomination unto the Lord thy God. Yet are not these things common even now?

12. For the rich men thereof, i. e. of the city²³, are full of violence. It had been little, had thieves and robbers lived by violence, but now, (as Isaiah at the same time upbraids them,) her princes were become companions of thieves. Not the poor out of distress, but the rich, out of wantonness and ex-

¹ Prov. viii. 1, 3, 4. ² Is. xl. 3. S. Matt. iii. 3. ³ S. Luke x. 16.
⁴ This, the simplest, is the most energetic rendering. Other possible renderings of the simple words, וְיָשִׁיבָה דָּמָא קִדְמָה, come to the same. Such are, "And wisdom (i. e. wholly wise) is he who regards Thy Name;" or "Thy Name (i. e. Thou, such as Thy Name expresses of Thee) beholdeth wisdom," i. e. the really wise, or religious; or, "And wisdom is it, that one regards Thy Name; or, with the change of a vowel (וְיָשִׁיבָה דָּמָא קִדְמָה), "and wisdom is it, to fear Thy Name." In regard to the use of the abstract, wisdom, for the concrete, the wise, Poc. compares Prov. xiii. 6, "wickedness overthrows sin," i. e. the sinner, and Ib. xx. 1, "wine" for a man of wine. He quotes also אִשָּׁה קִלְכָּהּ, Eccl. i. 2. in illustration of the anomaly of gender, and vii. 8, אִשָּׁה יָדָהּ.
⁵ There is no other even plausible etymology of תִּשָּׁה, than שָׂה, whose 3rd radical appears in אִשָּׁה in Daniel, and in Syriac, and in אִשָּׁה, Heb. See "Daniel the Proph." p. 49.

⁶ Jer. ii. 31. add "Ex. xx. 18, and all the people saw קוֹלֹת הַקּוֹלִים, or thunders. and, see the smell of my son, Gen. xxvii. 27." Poc. ⁷ Is. x. 5. ⁸ Ib. 15.
⁹ Ib. 24. ¹⁰ Ib. ix. 3. Heb. ¹¹ Ib. xiv. 5. ¹² Ib. xxx. 32.
¹³ Jer. xlvii. 7. יָדָהּ is used in regard to time, 2 Sam. xx. 5. It is used of both time and place in the Arab. Conj. iii. as in יָדָהּ, and the Syr.
¹⁴ אִשָּׁה i. q. שָׂה, as in 2 Sam. xiv. 19, the א occurring together with the י (here indicated by the vowel) in Arab. Chald. Syr. Sam. Pers. and Heb. אִשָּׁה. See n. 5.
¹⁵ S. Jam. v. 3. ¹⁶ Ib. 1. ¹⁷ See v. 14. ¹⁸ Ps. cvi. 15. ¹⁹ v. 3.
²⁰ Chilon in Diog. Laert. i. 4. ²¹ תִּשָּׁה. ²² Rib. ²³ Am. viii. 5. ²⁴ It seems necessary, I see, in so-called Christian London, to advertise in shops, that bread is of its alleged weight. ²⁵ נֹכַח in Kal is only intransitive. ²⁶ Lev. xix. 35, 36.
²⁷ Deut. xxv. 13, 15, 16. add Prov. xi. 1. xvi. 11. xx. 10. ²⁸ ver. 9. ²⁹ Is. i. 23.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

spoken lies, and ^atheir tongue is deceitful in their mouth.

^a Jer. 9. 3, 5, 6, 8.

^b Lev. 26. 16. Ps. 107. 17.

13 Therefore also will I ^cmake thee sick in smiting thee, in making thee desolate because of thy sins.

^c Lev. 26. 26. Hos. 4. 10.

14 ^dThou shalt eat, but not be satisfied; and thy casting down shall be in the midst of thee; and thou shalt take hold, but shalt not deliver; and that which thou deliverest will I give up to the sword.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

15 Thou shalt ^esow, but thou shalt not ^freap; thou shalt tread the olives, but thou shalt not anoint thee with oil; and sweet wine, but shalt not drink wine.

Deut. 28. 38. 39. 40. Amos 5. 11. Zeph. 1. 13, Hag. 1. 6.

ceeding covetousness and love of luxury, not only did wrong but were filled, not so much with riches, as with violence. Violence is the very meat and drink wherewith they are filled, yea, and wherewith they shall be filled, when it is returned upon their heads.

And the inhabitants thereof have spoken lies. Fraud is itself lying, and lying is its inseparable companion. "Lying followeth the gathering together of riches, and the hard wont to lay up riches hath a deceitful tongue." The sin, he saith, is spread throughout all her inhabitants; i. e. all of them, as their wont, have spoken lies, and, even when they speak not, the lie is ready; their tongue is deceitful (lit. deceit) in their mouth. It is deceit, nothing but deceit, and that, deceit which should "overthrow" and ruin others. One intent on gain has the lie ever ready to be uttered, even when he speaks not. It lurks concealed, until it is needed.

13. Therefore also will I, [lit. And I too,] i. e. this dost thou, and thus will I too do. "As thou madest sick the heart of the poor oppressed, so will I, by My grievous and severe punishments, make thee sick," or make thy wound incurable, as in Nahum ⁴, thy wound is grievous, lit. made sick. In making thee desolate because of thy sins. The heaping up riches shall itself be the cause of thy being waste, deserted, desolate.

14. Thou shalt eat, but not be satisfied. The correspondence of the punishment with the sin shall shew that it is not by chance, but from the just judgment of God. The curse of God shall go with what they eat, and it shall not nourish them. The word, thou, is thrice repeated⁵. As God had just said, I too, so here, Thou. Thou, the same who hast plundered others, shalt thyself eat, and not be satisfied; "thou shalt sow, and not reap; thou shalt tread the olive, and thou shalt not anoint thee with oil." "Upon extreme but ill-gotten abundance, there followeth extreme want. And whoso," adds one⁶, "seeth not this in our ways and our times is absolutely blind. For in no period have we ever read that there was so much gold and silver, or so much discomfort and indigence, so that those most true words of Christ Jesus seem to have been especially spoken of us, ⁷*Take heed, for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth*." And is not this true of us now?

Thy casting down shall be in the midst of thee. Where thou hast laid up thy treasures, or rather thy wickedness, there thou shalt sink down, or give way, from inward decay, in the very centre of thy wealth and thy sin. They had said, ⁸*Is not the Lord in the midst of us? None evil can come upon us*. Micah tells them of a different indweller. God had departed from them, and left them to their inherent nothingness. God had been their stay; without God, human strength collapses. Scarcely any destruction is altogether hopeless, save that which cometh from within. Most storms pass over, tear off boughs and leaves, but the stem remains. Inward decay or excision alone are humanly irrecoverable. The political death of the people was, in God's hands, to be the instrument of their regeneration.

Morally too, and at all times, inward emptiness is the fruit of unrighteous fulness. It is disease, not strength; as even Heathen proverbs said; "the love of money is a dropsy; to drink increaseth the thirst," and "amid mighty wealth, poor;" and Holy Scripture, ⁹*The rich He sendeth empty away*. And truly they must be empty. For what can fill the soul, save God? "This is true too of such as, like the Bishop of Sardis, ¹¹*have a name that they live and are dead*," "such as do some things good, feed on the word of God, but attain to no fruit of righteousness;" "who corrupt natural and seeming good by inward decay; who appear righteous before men, are active and zealous for good ends, but spoil all by some secret sin or wrong end, as vain-glory or praise of men, whereby they lose the praise of God. Their casting down shall be in the midst of them. The meaning of the whole is the same, whether the word be rendered casting down, i. e. downfall, (lit. sinking down ¹³), or emptiness, especially of the stomach, perhaps from the feeling of "sinking."

Thou shalt take hold to rescue or remove to a safe place from the enemy, those whom he would take from thee, but shalt not wholly deliver; and that which thou deliverest for a time, will I give up to the sword, i. e. the children for whose sake they pleaded that they got together this wealth; as, now too, the idols, for whose sake men toil wrongly all their life, are often suddenly taken away. Their goods too may be said to be given to the sword, i. e. to the enemy.

15. Thou shalt sow, but thou shalt not reap. Micah renews the threatenings of the law ¹⁴, which they had been habitually breaking. Those prophecies had been fulfilled before, throughout their history; they had been fulfilled lately in Israel for the like oppression of the poor ¹⁵. Their frequent fulfilment spoke as much of a law of God's righteousness, punishing sin, as the yearly supply in the ordinary course of nature spoke of His loving Providence. It is the bitterest punishment to the covetous to have the things which they coveted, taken away before their eyes; it was a token of God's Hand, that He took them away, when just within their grasp. The prophet brings it before their eyes, that they might feel beforehand the bitterness of forgetting them. "They should lose, not only what they gained unjustly, but the produce of their labour, care, industry, as, in agriculture, it is said that there is mostly much labor, little fraud, much benefit." Harvest is a proverb for joy; ¹⁷*they joy before Thee according to the*

¹ S. Jer. ² רָמָה from רָמָה. It is used of the tongue in Ps. lii. 4, ci. 7, cxx. 2, 3; of a bow, Ps. lxxviii. 57, Hos. vii. 16. ³ Poc. ⁴ iii. 19. ⁵ חָמָה once in v. 14, twice in v. 15. ⁶ Arias Montanus, a Spaniard. His Commentary on the Minor Prophets was published at Antwerp 1571. ⁷ S. Luke xii. 15. ⁸ iii. 11.

⁹ S. Luke i. 53, comp. 1 Sam. ii. 5. ¹⁰ Rib. ¹¹ Rev. iii. 1. ¹² Dion. ¹³ It is possible, as Gesenius conjectures, that מָשׁ (אֲמָשׁ) is a transposed form of the Arab. مَش; more probably it may be from the bi-litteral מָשׁ, which gave rise to the other forms, מָשׁ, מָשׁ. ¹⁴ Lev. xxvi. 16, Deut. xxviii. 30, 38-41. ¹⁵ Am. v. 11. ¹⁶ Mont. ¹⁷ Is. ix. 3.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

Or, he doth much keep the &c. 1 Kings 16. 25. 26. Hos. 5. 11. 1 Kings 16. 30, &c. & 21. 25, 26. 2 Kin. 21. 3.

16 ¶ For || the statutes of Omri are kept, and all the works of the house of Ahab, and ye walk in their counsels; that I should make thee a || desolation, and the inhabitants thereof an hissing: therefore ye shall bear the reproach of my people.

|| Or, astonishment.

Isai. 25. 8. Jer. 51. 51. Lam. 5. 1.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

1 Kin. 9. 8. Jer. 19. 8.

joy in harvest; ¹ wine maketh glad the heart of man, and oil is to make him a cheerful countenance. But the harvest shall be turned into sorrow, ² the oil and wine shall be taken away, when all the labour had been employed. Yet, since all these operations in nature are adapted to be, and are used as, symbols of things spiritual, then the words which describe them are adapted to be spiritual proverbs. Spiritually, ³ he soweth and reapeth not, who ⁴ soweth to the flesh, and of the flesh reapeth corruption, things corruptible, and inward decay and condemnation. He treadeth the olive, who, by shameful deeds contrary to the law, ⁵ grieveth the Holy Spirit of God, and therefore obtaineth not gladness of spirit; he maketh wine, yet drinketh not wine, who teacheth others, not himself. They too take hold but do not deliver, who for a while believe and in time of temptation fall away, who repent for a while and then fall back into old sins, or in other ways bring no fruit to perfection; taking up the Cross for a while and then wearying; using religious practices, as, more frequent prayer or fasting, and then tiring; cultivating some graces and then despairing because they see not the fruits. These tread the olive, but are not anointed with the oil of the Holy Spirit of grace, who ⁶ end by doing for the sake of man, what they had thought to do out of the love for God, and abandon, for some fear of man, the good which they had begun."

16. For the statutes of Omri are kept, rather, (like E. M. he doth much keep,) And he doth keep diligently for himself. Both ways express much diligence in evil ⁷. To "keep God's commandments" was the familiar phrase, in which Israel was exhorted, by every motive of hope and fear, to obedience to God. ⁸ I know him, God says of Abraham, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do judgment and justice. This was the fundamental commandment immediately after the deliverance from Egypt upon their first murmuring. ⁹ The Lord made there (at Marah) for them a statute and ordinance, and said, If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the Lord thy God, and wilt do that which is right in His sight, and wilt give ear to His commandments and keep all His statutes, I will put none of these diseases upon thee which I have brought upon the Egyptians. In this character He revealed Himself on Mount Sinai, as ¹⁰ shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love Me and keep My commandments. This was their covenant, ¹¹ Thou hast avouched the Lord this day to be thy God and to walk in His ways, and to keep His statutes and His commandments and His judgments and to hearken unto His voice. This was so often enforced upon them in the law, as the condition upon which they should hold their land, if they kept the covenant ¹², the commandments ¹³, the judgments ¹⁴, the statutes ¹⁵, the testimonies ¹⁶, the charge ¹⁷ of the Lord. Under this term all the curses of the law were threatened, if they ¹⁸ hearkened not unto the voice of the Lord their God, to keep His commandments and His statutes which He commanded them.

Under this again the future of good and evil was, in Solomon, set before the house of David; of unbroken succession on his throne, if ¹⁹ thou wilt keep My commandments; but contrariwise, if ye or your children will not keep My commandments and My statutes, banishment, destruction of the temple, and themselves to be ²⁰ a proverb and a byword among all people. This was the object of their existence, ²¹ that they might keep His statutes and observe His laws. This was the summary of their disobedience, ²² they kept not the covenant of God. And now was come the contrary to all this. They had not kept the commandments of God; and those commandments of man which were the most contrary to the commandments of God, they had kept and did keep diligently. Alas! that the Christian world should be so like them! What iron habit or custom of man, what fashion, is not kept, if it is against the law of God? How few are not more afraid of man than God! Had God's command run, Speak evil one of another, brethren, would it not have been the best kept of all His commandments? God says, Speak not evil; custom, the conversation around, fear of man, say, Speak evil; man's commandment is kept; God's is not kept. And no one repents or makes restitution; few even cease from the sin.

Scripture does not record, what was the special aggravation of the sin of Omri, since the accursed worship of Baal was brought in by Ahab ²³, his son. But, as usual, "like father, like son." The son developed the sins of the father. Some special sinfulness of Omri is implied, in that Athaliah, the murderess of her children, is called after her grandfather, Omri, not after her father, Ahab ²⁴. Heresiarchs have a deeper guilt than their followers, although the heresy itself is commonly developed later. Omri settled for a while the kingdom of Israel, after the anarchy which followed on the murder of Elah, and slew Zimri, his murderer. Yet before God, he did worse than all before him, and he walked in all the way of Jeroboam ²⁵. Yet this too did not suffice Judah; for it follows, And all the doings of the house of Ahab, who again ²⁶ did evil in the sight of the Lord above all that were before him and served Baal; Ahab, to whom none ²⁷ was like in sin, who did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the Lord. These were they, whose statutes Judah now kept, as diligently and accurately as if it had been a religious act. They kept, not the statutes of the Lord, but the statutes of Omri; they kept, as their pattern before their eyes, all the doings of the house of Ahab, his luxury, oppression, the bloodshedding of Naboth; and they walked onward, not, as God bade them, humbly with Him, but in their counsels. And what must be the end of all this? that I should make thee a desolation. They acted, as though the very end and object of all their acts were that, wherein they ended, their own destruction and reproach ²⁸.

Therefore ye shall bear the reproach of My people. The title of the people of God must be a glory or a reproach. Judah had gloried in being God's people, outwardly, by His

¹ Ps. civ. 15.

² Comp. Is. xvi. 9, 10, Jer. v. 17, xlviii. 37.

³ Theoph.

⁴ Gal. vi. 8.

⁵ Eph. iv. 30.

⁶ Rib.

⁷ In the construction of the E. V.

(which is possible) the force of the union of the sing. verb with the plural noun would be that "the statutes of Omri, one and all, are kept diligently."

⁸ Gen. xviii. 19.

⁹ Ex. xv. 25, 26.

¹⁰ Ib. xx. 6.

¹¹ Deut. xxvi. 17.

¹² Ex. xix. 5. the words of this covenant, Deut. xxix. 9.

¹³ כל המצוות והשבות, or כל המצוות, Lev. xxii. 31.

¹⁴ xxvi. 3, Deut. iv. 2, vi. 17, vii. 11, viii. 6, 11, x. 13, xi. 1, 8, 22, xii. 5, Heb. 19. xv. 5. xix. 9, xxvii. 1, xxviii. 9, xxx. 10.

¹⁵ כל מצוותי Lev. xviii. 5, 26, xx. 22, Deut. vii. 11, viii. 11, xi. 1.

¹⁶ מן or מִן Lev. xviii. 5, 26, xx. 8, 22, Deut. iv. 40, vi. 17, vii. 11,

x. 13, xi. 1, xxx. 10.

¹⁷ מִן Deut. vi. 17.

¹⁸ מִן Lev. xviii. 30, Deut. xi. 1.

¹⁹ Deut. xxviii. 15.

²⁰ 1 Kings ix. 4-6.

²¹ Ib. 7.

²² Ps. cv. 45.

²³ Ib. lxxviii. 11.

²⁴ The worship of Baal was the result of Ahab's marriage with Jezebel, the daughter of one, whose name designates his devotedness to that idolatry, Eth-baal, (i. e. "with the help of Baal.") And this marriage is spoken of as Ahab's act, not his father's. 1 Kings xvi. 31.

²⁵ 2 Kings viii. 26. 2 Chron. xxii. 2.

²⁶ 1 Kings

xvi. 25, 26.

²⁷ Ib. 30-33.

²⁸ Ib. xxi. 25.

²⁹ See on Hos. viii. 4. p. 51.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

CHAPTER VII.

- 1 The church, complaining of her small number, 3 and the general corruption, 5 putteth her confidence not in man, but in God. 8 She triumpheth over her enemies. 14 God comforteth her by pro- covenant and protection; they were envied for the outward distinction. They refused to be so inwardly, and gave themselves to the hideous, desecrating, worship of Baal. Now then what had been their pride, should be the aggravation of their punishment. Now too we hear of people every where zealous for a system, which their deeds belie. Faith, without love, (such as their character had been,) feels any insult to the relation to God, which by its deeds it disgraces. Though they had themselves neglected God, yet it was a heavy burden to them to bear the triumph of the heathen over them, that God was unable to help them, or had cast them off. ¹ These are the people of the Lord and are gone forth, out of His land. ² Wherefore should they say among the heathen, where is their God? ³ We are confounded, because we have heard reproach, shame hath covered our faces, for strangers are come into the sanctuaries of the Lord's house. ⁴ We are become a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and derision to them that are round about us. ⁵ Thou makest us a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and derision to them that are round about us. Thou makest us a byword among the heathen, a shaking of the head among the people. My confusion is daily before me, and the shame of my face hath covered me, for the voice of him that slandereth and blasphemeth, by reason of the enemy and the avenger.

The words, the reproach of My people, may also include “⁶the reproach wherewith God in the law⁷ threatened His people if they should forsake Him”, which indeed comes to the same thing, the one being the prophecy, the other the fulfilment. The word hissing in itself recalled the threat to David's house in Solomon; ⁸ At this house, which is high, every one that passeth by it shall be astonished and hiss. Micah's phrase became a favourite expression of Jeremiah⁹. So only do God's prophets denounce. It is a marvellous glimpse into man's religious history, that faith, although it had been inoperative and was trampled upon without, should still survive; nay, that God, Whom in prosperity they had forsaken and forgotten, should be remembered, when He seemed to forget and to forsake them. Had the captive Jews abandoned their faith, the reproach would have ceased. The words, ye shall bear the reproach of My people are, at once, a prediction of their deserved suffering for the profanation of God's Name by their misdeeds, and of their perseverance in that faith which, up to that time, they had mostly neglected.

CHAP. VII. The Prophet's office of threatening woe is now over. Here, out of love, he himself cryeth woe unto himself. He hath ¹⁰ continual sorrow in heart for his people. He bewails what he cannot amend, and, by bewailing, shews them how much more they should bewail it, over whose sins he sorrows; how certain the destruction is, since there is none to stand in the gap and turn away the wrath of God, no “ten mises, 16 by confusion of the enemies, 18 and by his mercies.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

WOE is me! for I am as † when they † Heb. the gatherings of summer. Isai. 17. 6. & 24. 13.
have gathered the summer fruits, as † the grape gleanings of the vintage: † righteous,” for whose sake the city may be spared. “¹¹ These words flow out of the fount of pity, because the good zeal, wherewith the holy seem to speak severely, is never without pity. They are wroth with the sins, they sympathise with the sinner.” So Isaiah mourned for the judgment, which he prophesied against the world, ¹² Woe is me! he sorrowed even for Moab¹³; and Joel, ¹⁴ Alas for the day! and Jeremiah, in that exclamation of impassioned sorrow; ¹⁵ Woe is me, my mother, that thou hast borne me a man of strife and a man of contention to the whole world!

1. Woe¹⁶ is me! for I am, as when they have gathered the summer fruits¹⁷, as the grape-gleanings of the vintage. The vineyard of the Lord of hosts, Isaiah said at the same time¹⁸, is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah His pleasant plants. Isaiah said, it brought forth wild grapes; Micah, that there are but gleanings, few and poor. It is as though Satan pressed the vineyard of the Lord, and made the most his prey, and few were left to those who glean for Christ; ¹⁹ the foxes have eaten the grapes. Some few remain too high out of their reach, or hidden behind the leaves, or, it may be, ²⁰ falling in the time of gathering, fouled, sullied, marred and stained, yet left.” So in the gleanings there may be three sorts of souls; ²¹ two or three in the top of the uppermost bough, which were not touched; or those unripe, which are but imperfect and poor; or those who had fallen, yet were not wholly carried away. These too are all sought with difficulty; they had escaped the gatherer's eye, they are few and rare; it might seem at first sight, as though there were none. There is no cluster to eat; for the vintage is past, the best is but as a sour grape which sets the teeth on edge. *My soul desired the first-ripe fig*²². These are they which, having survived the sharpness of winter, ripen early, about the end of June; they are the sweetest²³; but he longed for them in vain. He addressed a carnal people, who could understand only carnal things, on the side which they could understand. Our longings, though we pervert them, are God's gift. As they desired those things which refresh or recruit the thirsty body, as their whole self was gathered into the craving for that which was to restore them, so was it with him. Such is the longing of God for man's conversion and salvation; such is the thirst of His ministers; such, their pains in seeking, their sorrow in not finding. “²⁴ There were none, through whose goodness the soul of the prophet might spiritually be refreshed, in joy at his growth in grace, as St. Paul saith to Philemon, ²⁵ refresh my bowels in the Lord. So our Lord saith in Isaiah, ²⁶ I said, I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength for nought and in vain. ²⁷ Jesus was grieved at the hardness of their hearts.

“²⁷ The first-ripe fig may be the image of the righteous of old, as the Patriarchs or the Fathers, such as in the later days we fain would see.”

¹⁷ lit. as the gatherings of the fig-harvest. It is one of those concise comparisons, which have to be filled up. In prose it would be, ‘I am as one who, at the gatherings of the fig-harvest, should still look for fruit on the trees.’ The meaning, “summer,” E. M. is doubtless a secondary sense of the word, resulting from the fact, that the main fig-harvest was about the summer solstice. ¹⁸ Is. v. 7. ¹⁹ Cant. ii. 15. ²⁰ Poc. from Tanch. ²¹ Is. xvii. 6. ²² The bikkurah, boccure, Albacora. (Span.) See Shaw's Travels p. 370. Its goodness was proverbial. See Hos. ix. 10, Is. xxviii. 4, Jer. xxiv. 2. ²³ Dion. ²⁴ Philem. 20. ²⁵ Is. xlix. 4. ²⁶ S. Mark iii. 5. ²⁷ From Rib.

¹ Ezek. xxxvi. 20. ² Joel ii. 17. See my Comm. p. 122. ³ Jer. li. 51. ⁴ Ps. lxxix. 4. ⁵ Ps. xlv. 13-16. ⁶ Rib. and others in Poc. ⁷ Deut. xxviii. 36. ⁸ 1 Kgs. ix. 8. ⁹ Jer. li. 37. ¹⁰ Jer. xix. 8. ¹¹ Jer. xxv. 18. ¹² Jer. xxix. 18. Else it is only used by Hezekiah, 2 Chron. xxix. 8. ¹³ Rom. ix. 2. ¹⁴ Rup. ¹⁵ Is. xxiv. 16. ¹⁶ Ib. xv. 5. ¹⁷ xvii. 11. ¹⁸ Joel i. 15. ¹⁹ Jer. xv. 10. ²⁰ The word occurs besides only in Job x. 15. but it is the cry of nature. Among the Greeks it is chiefly of joy or triumph, but of sorrow too; in Latin chiefly of sorrow, “ululo,” our, “howl.”

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

^b Is. 23. 4.
Hos. 9. 10.
^c Ps. 12. 1.
& 14. 1, 3.
Is. 57. 1.
^d Or, godly,
or, merciful.
^e Hab. 1. 15.

^f Hos. 4. 18.
^g Is. 1. 23.
ch. 3. 11.
^h Heb. the mischief of his soul.
ⁱ 2 Sam. 23. 6, 7.
Ezek. 2. 6.
See Is. 55. 13.

there is no cluster to eat: ^b my soul desired the firstripe fruit.

2 The ^c || good man is perished out of the earth: and there is none upright among men: they all lie in wait for blood; ^d they hunt every man his brother with a net.

3 ¶ That they may do evil with both hands earnestly, ^e the prince asketh, ^f and the judge asketh for a reward; and the great man, he uttereth ^g his mischievous desire: so they wrap it up.

4 The best of them ^h is as a brier: the most upright is sharper than a thorn hedge: Before CHRIST

cir. 710.
the day of thy watchmen and thy visitation cometh; now shall be their perplexity.

5 ¶ ^h Trust ye not in a friend, put ye ⁱ Jer. 9. 4.
not confidence in a guide: keep the doors of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy bosom.

6 For ⁱ the son dishonoureth the father, ^j Ezek. 22. 7.
the daughter riseth up against her mother, Matt. 10. 21.
the daughter in law against her mother in 35. 36.
law; a man's enemies are the men of his Luke 12. 53.
own house. & 21. 16.
2 Tim. 3. 2, 3.

2. The good [or godly, or merciful, E. M.] man. The Hebrew word contains all. It is 'he who loveth tenderly and piously' God, for His own sake, and man, for the sake of God. Mercy was probably chiefly intended, since it was to this that the prophet had exhorted ¹, and the sins which he proceeds to speak of, are against this. But imaginary love of God without love of man, or love of man without the love of God, is mere self-deceit. Is perished out of the earth, i. e. by an untimely death ². The good had either been withdrawn by God from the evil to come ³, or had been cut off by those who laid wait for blood; in which case their death brought a double evil, through the guilt which such sin contracted, and then, through the loss of those who might be an example to others, and whose prayers God would hear. The loving and upright, all, who were men of mercy and truth, had ceased. They who were left, all lie in wait for blood, lit. bloods ⁴, i. e. bloodshedding; all, as far as man can see; as Elijah complains that he was left alone. Amid the vast number of the wicked, the righteous were as though they were not. Isaiah, at the same time, complains of the like sins, and that it was as though there were none righteous; ⁵ Your hands are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquity; your lips have spoken lies, your tongue hath muttered perverseness. None calleth for justice, nor any pleadeth for truth. Indirectly, or directly, they destroyed life ⁶. To violence they add treachery. The good and loving had perished, and all is now violence; the upright had ceased, and all now is deceit. They hunt every man his brother with a net. Every man is the brother of every man, because he is man, born of the same first parent, children of the same Father: yet they lay wait for one another, as hunters for wild beasts ⁷.

3. That they may do evil with both hands earnestly, [lit. upon evil both hands to do well,] i. e. "both their hands are upon evil to do it well," or "earnestly" ⁸, as our translation gives the meaning; only the Hebrew expresses more, that evil is their good, and their good or excellence is in evil. Bad men gain a dreadful skill and wisdom in evil, as Satan has; and cleverness in evil is their delight. ⁹ "They call the evil of their hands good." The prince asketh, and the judge asketh (or, it may more readily be supplied, judgeth, doth that which is his office,) against right for a reward, (which was strictly forbidden ¹⁰), and the great man he uttereth his mischievous desire, (or the desire of his soul.) Even the shew of good is laid aside; whatever the heart conceives and covets, it utters; —mischief to others and in the end to itself. The mischief comes forth from the soul, and returns upon it. The elders and nobles in the city ¹¹, as well as Ahab, took part, (as one instance,) in the murder of Naboth. The great man, however, here, is rather the source of the evil, which he induces others to effect; so that as many as there were great, so many sources were there of oppression. All, prince, judges, the great, unite in the ill, and this not once only, but they are ever doing it ¹², and so they wrap it up, (lit. twist ¹³, intertwine it.) Things are twisted, either to strengthen, or to pervert or intricate them. It might mean, they strengthen it, that which their soul covets against the poor, or they pervert it, the cause of the poor.

4. The best of them is as a brier; the gentlest of them is a thorn, ¹⁴ strong, hard, piercing, which letteth nothing unre-sisting pass by but it taketh from it, "robbing the fleece, and wounding the sheep." The most upright, those who, in comparison of others still worse, seem so, is sharper than a thorn hedge. (lit. the upright, than a thorn hedge.) They are not like it only, but worse, and that in all ways; none is specified, and so none excepted; they were more crooked, more tangled, sharper. Both, as hedges, were set for protection; both, turned to injury. ¹⁵ "So that, where you would look for help, thence comes suffering." And if such be the best, what the rest?

The day of thy watchmen and thy visitation cometh. When all, even the good, are thus corrupted, the iniquity is full. Nothing now hinders the visitation, which the watchmen, or prophets, had so long foreseen and forewarned of. Now shall be their perplexity ¹⁶; now, without delay; for the day of destruction ever breaketh suddenly upon the sinner. ¹⁷ When they say, peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them. ¹⁸ Whose destruction cometh suddenly at an instant. They had perplexed the cause of the oppressed; they themselves were tangled together, intertwined in mischief, as a thorn-hedge. They should be caught in their own snare; they had perplexed their paths and should find no outlet.

5. 6. Trust ye not in a friend. It is part of the perplexity of crooked ways, that all relationships are put out of joint.

¹ ויחזק vi. 8. ויחזק vii. 2. ² אבד. ³ Is. lviii. 1. where אבד is, in like way, used.
⁴ See Hos. v. 2, and Mic. iii. 10. They build up Zion with bloods: Isaiah says in like way, Your hands are full of bloods. i. 15. ⁵ Is. lix. 2, 3. ⁶ See ab. p. 314, on iii. 10.
⁷ Comp. Ps. xxxv. 7, lvii. 7, cxl. 6, Jer. v. 26.
⁸ דקק, like our, "do it well," can signify "do it thoroughly;" yet not so as to supersede the idea of its being "done well" in the mind of the actor. The two cases cited to the contrary, the thorough destruction of the calf, (Deut. ix. 21,) and of the house of Baal, (2 Kings xi. 18,) were, of course, good acts. So to "search well." Deut. xvii. 4, xix. 13.

⁹ S. Jer. ¹⁰ Deut. xvi. 19. See ab. iii. 11. ¹¹ 1 Kings xxi. 8, 11. ¹² The force of the partic. שואל, שואל, ¹³ שואל, the verb, is a שואל. What remains of the root has the meaning of "twisted," (in שואל, "a rope") or "entangled," (in שואל, שואל "thick boughs.") ¹⁴ The Heb. שואל seems to have been different from the Arab, which is a "solanum," (Cels. Hierob. ii. 35.) but Prov. xv. 19, (where it occurs besides, shews that it served as a hedge. ¹⁵ In the Hebrew the two words "mesucah," "thorn hedge," and "mebucah," "perplexity," are alike in sound. ¹⁶ 1 Thess. v. 3. ¹⁷ See Is. xxx. 13, comp. 2 Pet. ii. 1, "swift destruction;"

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.
Isai. 8. 17

7 Therefore ^k I will look unto the Lord; I will wait for the God of my salvation: my God will hear me.

Before CHRIST
cir. 710.

Selfishness rends each from the other, and disjoins the whole frame of society. Passions and sin break every band of friendship, kindred, gratitude, nature. "Every one seeketh his own." Times of trial and of outward harass increase this; so that God's visitations are seasons of the most frightful recklessness as to every thing but self. So had God foretold¹; so it was in the siege of Samaria², and in that of Jerusalem both by the Chaldeans³ and by the Romans⁴. When the soul has lost the love of God, all other is but seeming love, since natural affection is from Him, and it too dies out, as God gives the soul over to itself⁵. The words describe partly the inward corruption, partly the outward causes which shall call it forth. There is no real trust in any, where all are corrupt. The outward straitness and perplexity, in which they shall be, makes that to crumble and fall to pieces, which was inwardly decayed and severed before. The words deepen, as they go on. First, the friend, or neighbour, the common band of man and man; then the guide, (or, as the word also means, one familiar, united by intimacy, to whom, by continual intercourse, the soul was used;) then the wife who lay in the bosom, nearest to the secrets of the heart; then those to whom all reverence is due, father and mother. Our Lord said that this should be fulfilled in the hatred of His Gospel. He begins His warning as to it, with a caution like that of the prophet; ⁶*Be ye wise as serpents, and beware of men*. Then He says, how these words should still be true⁷. There never were wanting pleas of earthly interest against the truth. He Himself was cut off, lest ⁸*the Romans should take away their place and nation*. The Apostles were accused, that they meant to *bring this Man's Blood upon the chief priests*⁹; or as ¹⁰*ring-leaders of the sect of the Nazarenes, pestilent fellows and movers of sedition, turning the world upside down, setters up of another king; troublers of the city; commanding things unlawful for Romans to practise; setters forth of strange gods; turning away much people; endangering not men's craft only, but the honor of their gods; evil doers*. Truth is against the world's ways, so the world is against it. Holy zeal hates sin, so sinners hate it. It troubles them, so they count it, *one which troubleth Israel*¹¹. Tertullian, in a public defence of Christians in the second century, writes, "¹²Truth set out with being herself hated; as soon as she appeared, she is an enemy. As many as are strangers to it, so many are its foes; and the Jews indeed appropriately from their rivalry, the soldiers from their violence, even they of our own household from nature. Each day are we beset, each day betrayed; in our very meetings and assemblies are we mostly surprised." There was no lack of pleas. "¹³A Christian thou deemest a man guilty of every crime, an enemy of the gods, of the Emperors, of law, of morals, of all nature;" "factious," "authors of all public calamities through the anger of the heathen gods," "impious," "atheists," "disloyal," "public enemies." The Prov. i. 27, "cometh as a whirlwind," Ps. xxxv. 8, "unawares." ¹ Deut. xxviii. 53. ² 2 Kings vi. 28. ³ Lam. iv. 3-16. ⁴ Jos. B. J. vi. §§ 3, 4. ⁵ Rom. i. 28. ⁶ S. Matt. x. 16. 17. ⁷ Ib. 21, 35, 36. ⁸ S. John xi. 48. ⁹ Acts v. 28. ¹⁰ Acts xxiv. 5. xvi. 20, 21. xvii. 6, 7, 18. ¹¹ 1 Kings xviii. 17. ¹² Tert. Apol. c. 7. p. 17. Oxf. Tr. ¹³ Ib. c. 2. p. 7. O. T. c. 7. 38, 10. (and note k. Oxf. Tr.) 24, 28, 40, and notes e. f; ad Scap. c. 2. ¹⁴ Tert. ad Nat. i. 24. ¹⁵ The most atrocious calumnies against the Christians," S. Justin M. says, "were invented and circulated from country to country by the Jews." Apol. i. 49. See also Dial. c. Tryph. § 16. 108. Orig. c. Cels. vi. 27. ¹⁶ S. Jer. ¹⁷ Dion. ¹⁸ 1 John iv. 1. ¹⁹ S. Matt. xxiv. 12. ²⁰ 2 Tim. iii. 2, 4. ²¹ נָשָׂא, intensive, (as in Ps. v. 4.) "will espy intently," as towards that which can be seen only by intent gazing; and with 3 pers. "so as to dwell upon."

Jews, in the largest sense of the word they of their own household, were ever the deadliest enemies of Christians, the inventors of calumnies, the authors of persecutions. "What other race," says ¹⁴Tertullian, "is the seed-plot of our calumnies?" Then the Acts of the Martyrs tell, how Christians were betrayed by near kinsfolk for private interest, or for revenge, because they would not join in things unlawful. "¹⁵So many are the instances in daily life, [of the daughter rising against the mother] that we should rather mourn that they are so many, than seek them out."—"I seek no examples, [of those of a man's own household being his foes] they are too many, that we should have any need of witness." "¹⁶Yet ought we not, on account of these and like words of Holy Scripture, to be mistrustful or suspicious, or always to presume the worst, but to be cautious and prudent. For Holy Scripture speaketh with reference to times, causes, persons, places." So St. John saith, ¹⁷*Believe not every spirit, but try the spirits, whether they are of God*.

7. Therefore, (And,) when all these things come to pass and all human help fails, I, for my part, will look unto, (lit. on) the Lord God, the Unchangeable. The prophet sets himself, I, with emphasis, against the multitude of the ungodly. When all forsake, betray, fail, when ¹⁸*love is waxed cold*, and men, in the last days, shall be ¹⁹*lovers of their own selves*, not lovers of God, I,—he does not say, "will trust," but—will, "¹⁶with the eye of the heart contemplating, loving, venerating God most High, and weighing His mercy and justice," *gaze intently*²⁰ with the devotion of faith toward Him, though I see Him not: yet so too I will rest in Him²¹ and on Him, as the eyes are wont to rest in trust and love and dependence, and as, on the other hand, the Eyes of God ²²*espy into* man and dwell on him, never leaving him unbeheld. I will espy Him, although from afar, with the eyes of the soul, as a watchman, (the word is the same,) looking for His Coming and announcing it to others; and until He comes, I will wait [I would wait] with trust unbroken by any troubles or delay, as Job saith, ²³*Though He slay me, yet will I put my trust in Him*. The word is almost appropriated to a longing waiting for God²⁴. For the God of my salvation. This too became a wonted title of God²⁵, a title, speaking of past deliverances, as well as of confidence and of hope. Deliverance and salvation are bound up with God, and that, in man's personal experience. It is not only, "Saviour God," but "God, my Saviour," Thou who hast been, art, and wilt be, my God, my saving God. It is a prelude to the name of Jesus, our Redeeming God. The Lord will hear me. His purpose of waiting on God he had expressed wistfully. *I would wait*²⁶; for man's longing trust must be upheld by God. Of God's mercy he speaks confidently, the Lord will hear me, He, Who is ever "more ready to hear than we to pray." He has no doubts, but, as Abraham said, ²⁷*The Lord will provide*, 'so he, The Lord will hear me.

²¹ Comp. Ps. xxv. 15. cxlii. 1. cxli. 8. ²² Ps. lxxvi. 7. ²³ Job xiii. 15. ²⁴ לְמַחְלָה, as in Ps. xxxviii. 16, xlii. 6, 12, xliii. 5, cxxx. 5, 2 Kings vi. 33, Lam. iii. 24. לְמַחְלָה is almost appropriated to one who so waiteth for God. Abs. Hifil, Lam. iii. 21. Pi. Job vi. 11, xiv. 14, Ps. lxxi. 14. לְמַחְלָה, adj. Lam. iii. 26. and Prop. Name "Waiter" on God, as expressed in לְמַחְלָה. Pi. with לְ, Ps. xxxi. 25, xxxiii. 22, lxix. 4; with בְּ, of God, Ps. cxxx. 7, cxxx. 3; with לְ, of the word of God, Ps. cxix. 74, 81, 114, 147; of His mercy, Ps. xxxiii. 18, cxlvii. 11; of His judgments, Ps. cxix. 43; of His Arm, Is. li. 5; of His law, Is. xlii. 4. Transitivity, Ps. cxix. 40. So נִחַם, abs. Pr. x. 28, Lam. iii. 18; with לְ, Ps. xxxix. 8. ²⁵ "God of my salvation," (יְיָ) Ps. xviii. 47; (2 Sam. xxii. 47.) xxv. 5, xxvii. 9, Hab. iii. 18. "God, my s." Ps. lxii. 8. "God of our s." Ps. lxxv. 6, lxxix. 9, lxxxv. 5. "God of thy s." Is. xvii. 10. "God of his s." Ps. xxiv. 5. "Rock of our s." Ps. xcv. 1. ²⁶ נִחַם, optat. ²⁷ Gen. xxii. 8, 14.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

8 ¶¹ Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy: "when I fall, I shall arise; when I sit in darkness," the LORD shall be a light unto me.
¹ Prov. 24. 17. ² Lam. 4. 21. ³ Ps. 37. 24. ⁴ Prov. 24. 16. ⁵ Ps. 27. 1. ⁶ Lam. 3. 39.

So, when Jehoshaphat prayed, ¹ We have no might against this great company that cometh against us, neither know we what to do, but our eyes are upon Thee; God answered by the prophet, Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for the battle is not yours, but God's. Micah unites with himself all the faithful as one, "in the unity of the spirit," wherein all are one hand, looking, waiting, praying for His Coming in His kingdom. "God is our only refuge and asylum in things desperate, and rejoices to help in them, in order to shew His supreme Power and Goodness especially to those who believe, hope, and ask it. Therefore all mistrust and despondency is then to be supremely avoided, and a certain hope and confidence in God is to be elicited. This will call forth the help of God assuredly, yea though it were by miracle, as to Lot in Sodom, to Moses and the people from Pharaoh, to David from Saul, to Hezekiah from Sennacherib, to the Maccabees from Antiochus. This our proverbs express³, how God aids, when there is least sign of it."

8. Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy. The Prophet still more makes himself one with the people, not only as looking for God, but in penitence, as Daniel bewails ⁴ his own sins and the sins of his people. The enemy is Babylon and Edom⁵; and then, in all times, (since this was written for all times, and the relations of the people of God and of its enemies are the same,) whosoever, whether devils or evil men, rejoice over the falls of God's people. Rejoice not; for thou hast no real cause; the triumphing of the ungodly, and the fall of the godly, ⁶ is but for a moment. When I fall, I shall arise; (lit. when I have fallen, I have arisen;) expressing both the certainty and speed of the recovery. To fall⁷ and to arise is one. "The fall of infirmity is not grave, if free from the desire of the will. Have the will to rise, He is at hand Who will cause thee to rise." "Though I have sinned, Thou forgivest the sin; though I have fallen, thou raisest up; lest they, who rejoice in the sins of others, should have occasion to exult. For we who have sinned more, have gained more; for Thy grace maketh more blessed than our own innocence."

When I sit in darkness, the Lord shall be a light unto me. "He does not say 'lie,' but sit; she was not as one dead, without hope of life, but she sat solitary as a widow, helpless, unable to restore herself, yet waiting for God's time. The darkness of the captivity was lightened by the light of the prophetic grace which shone through Daniel and Ezekiel, and by the faithfulness of the three children, and the brightness of Divine glory shed abroad through them, when Nebuchadnezzar proclaimed to all people that their God was ¹¹ God of gods and Lord of kings, and that none should ¹² speak any thing amiss against Him. Still more when, at the close of the captivity, they were delivered from sorrow, trouble, bondage, death, to joy, rest, freedom, life. Yet how much more in Christ, (for Whom this deliverance prepared,) when ¹³ the people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the LORD, because I have sinned against him, until he plead my cause, and execute judgment for me: ¹⁴ he will bring me forth to the light, and I shall behold his righteousness.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

light shined. God is not only our light, as "restoring us" outwardly "to gladness, freedom, happiness, whereof light is a symbol, as darkness is of sorrow, captivity, adversity, death." Scripture speaks of God, in a directer way, as being Himself our light. ¹⁵ The Lord is my light. ¹⁶ The Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light. He calls Himself, ¹⁷ The light of Israel. He is our light, by infusing knowledge, joy, heavenly brightness, in any outward lot. He does not say, "after darkness, comes light," but when I shall sit in darkness, then, the Lord is light unto me. The sitting in darkness is the occasion of the light, in that the soul or the people in sorrow turns to Him Who is their light. In their sin, which was so punished, they were turned away from the light.

9. I will bear the indignation of the Lord, because I have sinned against Him. This is the temper of all penitents, when stricken by God, or under chastisement from Him. ¹⁸ It is the Lord, let Him do what seemeth Him good. ¹⁹ So let him curse, because the Lord hath said unto him, curse David. Who shall then say, Wherefore hast thou done so? ²⁰ He putteth his mouth in the dust; if so be there may be hope. The penitent owns the just sentence of God, and, knowing that he deserves far more than God inflicts, is thankful to endure it, until He remove it, until He plead my cause and execute judgment for me, i. e. until God Himself think the punishments inflicted, enough, and judge between me and those through whose hands they come. The judgments which God righteously sends, and which man suffers righteously from Him, are unrighteously inflicted by those whose malice He overrules, whether it be that of evil men (as the Assyrian or the Chaldean or the Edomite) or of Satan. The close of the chastisements of His people is the beginning of the visible punishment of their misdeeds, who used amiss the power which God gave them over it. Whence it is said, ²¹ Daughter of Babylon, the wasted! blessed he that rewardeth thee as thou hast served us. But all is of the mercy of God. So He saith, He shall bring me forth to the light of His Countenance and His favor and His truth. Micah speaks in the name of those who were penitent, and so were forgiven, and yet, in that they were under punishment, seemed to lie under the wrath of God. For, although God remits at once the eternal penalty of sin, yet we see daily, how punishment pursues the forgiven sinner, even to the end of life. The light of God's love may not, on grounds which He knoweth, shine unchequered upon him. We should not know the blackness of the offence of sin, and should never know the depth of God's mercy, but for our punishment. The indignation of God toward the penitent is an austere form of His love. So then penitents may well say, in every grief or sickness or visitation or disappointment, I will bear the indignation of the Lord, because I have sinned against Him. He says, I shall behold His righteousness, because they had a righteous cause against man, although not towards God, and God in His just judgment on their enemies shewed Himself as the righteous Judge of the world.

which he shall rise, in contrast with the stumbling (כשול) of the wicked, without recovery.
¹ S. Ambr. in Ps. 37. [38 Eng.] v. 15. ² Ib. v. 47. ³ Mont. ⁴ Dan. ii. 47. ⁵ Ib. iii. 29. ⁶ Is. ix. 2. ⁷ Lap. ⁸ Ps. xxvii. 1. ⁹ Is. lx. 19. ¹⁰ Ib. x. 17. ¹¹ 1 Sam. iii. 18. ¹² 2 Sam. xvi. 10. ¹³ Lam. iii. 29. ¹⁴ Ps. cxxxvii. 8.

¹ 2 Chron. xx. 12, 15. ² Lap. ³ Deus ex machinâ. ⁴ Dan. ix. 10. ⁵ Obad. 10. 12. Ps. cxxxvii. 7. ⁶ Ps. xxx. 5. ⁷ כשול is used of the fall of a people, Am. v. 2, viii. 14, Is. xxi. 9, Jer. li. 8; of a king and his people, 2 Kings xiv. 10; of many individuals, Is. viii. 15. In Prov. xxiv. 16. it is used of the fall of the righteous, from

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

10 || Then she that is mine enemy shall see it, and ¹ shame shall cover her which said unto me, ² Where is the Lord thy God? ³ mine eyes shall behold her: now ⁴ † shall she be trodden down ⁵ † as the mire of the streets.

¹ Ps. 42, 3, 10. & 79. 10. & 115. 2. Joel 2. 17. ² ch. 4. 11. ³ Ps. 35. 26. † Heb. she shall be for a treading down. ⁴ 2 Sam. 22. 43. Zech. 10. 5.

10. Then [And] she that is mine enemy shall see it, and shame shall cover her which said unto me, *Where is He*¹, He of Whom thou boastest, the Lord thy God? The cause of her gladness then is, that the blasphemies of the enemy of God were to cease. This was the bitterest portion of her cup, that they said daily, 'Where is now thy God? let Him come and save thee;' as though He could not, or as though He loved her not, and she vainly presumed on His help. Even when fallen, it was for His sake that she was hated, Who seemed to be overcome in her: as He was hated in His Martyrs, and they asked, "Where is the God of the Christians?" Now the taunt was closed, and turned back on those who used it. The wheel, which they had turned against her, rolled round on themselves. They who had said, Let our eye look on Zion, now were ashamed that their hope had failed. They had longed to feed their sight on her miseries; Zion had her reverent gladness in gazing on ³ the righteousness of God. Babylon was trodden down by the Medes and Persians, and they whom she had led captive beheld it. Daniel was in the palace, when Belshazzar was slain.

The soul of one, who has known the chastenings of God, cannot but read its own history here. The sinful soul is at once the object of the love of God and bath that about it which God hates. God hates the evil in us, even while He loves us, being, or having been, evil. He forgives, but chastens. His displeasure is the channel of His good-pleasure. Nathan said to David, 'The Lord hath put away thy sin, but also, the sword shall never depart from thy house.' It is part of His forgiveness to cleanse the soul with a ⁵ spirit of burning. "It seemeth to me," says St. Jerome, "that Jerusalem is every soul, which had been the temple of the Lord, and had had the vision of peace and the knowledge of Scripture, and which afterwards, overcome by sins, hath fallen captive by its own consent, parting from that which is right in the sight of God, and allowing itself to sink among the pleasures of the world." So then ⁶ 'captive, and tortured, she saith to Babylon, i. e. the confusion of this world and the power of the enemy which ruleth over the world, and sin who lordeth it over her, Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy; when I fall, I shall arise;' ⁷ 'from sin by repentance, and from tribulation by the consolation of the Holy Spirit, Who, after weeping, poureth in joy. For ⁸ the Lord helpeth them that are fallen, and saith by the prophet, ⁹ Shall they fall and not arise? and ¹⁰ I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live. If I walk in darkness, the Lord is my light! For although ¹¹ the rulers of the darkness of this world have deceived me, and I ¹² sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and ¹³ my feet stumble upon the dark mountains, yet ¹⁴ to them who sit in the region and shadow of death, light is sprung up, and ¹⁵ light shineth in darkness, and ¹⁶ the Lord is my light, and my salvation; whom then shall I fear? and I will

¹ Ep. The pronoun is inserted emphatically. ² Ep. of Churches of Vienne and Lyons, in Eus. H. E. v. 1 fin, ³ תְּרִיבָהּ בְּאֵימָהּ ver. 9, corresponding to תְּרִיבָהּ, v. 10. ⁴ 2 Sam. xii. 10, 13: ⁵ Is. iv. 4. ⁶ S. Cyr. ⁷ Dion. ⁸ Ps. cxlvi. 8. ⁹ Jer. viii. 4. ¹⁰ Ezek. xxxiii. 11.

11 In the day that thy ^a walls are to be built, in that day shall the decree be far removed.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

^a Amos 9. 11, &c. Is. 11. 16. & 19. 23. &c. & 27. 18. Hos. 11. 11. || Or, even to.

12 In that day also ^a he shall come even ^a to thee from Assyria, || and from the fortispeak to Him and will say, ¹⁷ Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path. "He draweth me from the darkness of ignorance and from the black night of sin, and giveth a clear view of future bliss, and brighteneth the very inmost soul within." ¹⁸ "Even if a mist have come upon me and I have been in darkness, I too shall find the light, i. e. Christ; and the Sun of Righteousness arising on my mind shall make it white." I will bear patiently, yet gladly, the indignation of the Lord, ¹⁹ 'all adversity, trial, tribulation, persecution, which can happen in this life; because I have sinned against Him, and such is the enormity of sin, offered to the Majesty and dishonouring the Holiness of God, and such punishment doth it deserve in the world to come, that if we weigh it well, we shall bear with joy whatever adversity can befall us.' ²⁰ "For although for a short time I be out of His Presence, and be ²¹ given to an undistinguishing mind, yet, seeing I suffer this rejection justly, I will bear the judgment, for I am not chastened in vain." ²² All chastening for the present seemeth not to be joyous but grievous, nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them who are exercised thereby. ²³ "The soul, feeling that it hath sinned, and hath the wounds of sins and is living in dead flesh and needs the cautery, says firmly to the Physician, 'Burn my flesh, cut open my wounds, all my imposthumes. It was my fault, that I was wounded; be it my pain, to endure such sufferings and to regain health.' And the true Physician shews to her, when whole, the cause of His treatment, and that He did rightly what He did. Then after these sufferings, the soul, being brought out of outer darkness, saith, I shall behold His Righteousness, and say, ²⁴ Thou, O Lord, art upright; Righteous are Thy judgments, O God. But if Christ is ²⁵ made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption, he who, after the indignation of God, saith that he shall see His Righteousness, promiseth to himself the sight of Christ." ²⁶ "Then, having considered in her mind the grace of the righteousness in Christ and the overthrow of sin, the soul, in full possession of herself, crieth out, Mine enemy shall see it &c. For, after that Christ came unto us, justifying sinners through faith, the mouth of the ungodly One is stopped, and the Author of sin is put to shame. He hath lost his rule over us, and sin is trodden down, like mire in the streets, being subjected to the feet of the saints. But the blotting-out of sin is the Day of Christ." ²⁷ "And, because the end of all punishment is the beginning of good," God saith to the poor, penitent, tossed, soul, 'the walls of virtues shall be built up in thee, and thou shalt be guarded on all sides, and the rule of thine oppressors shall be far removed, and thy King and God shall come unto thee, and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of God.' ²⁸ "All this shall be most fully seen in the Day of Judgment."

11, 12. On this confession of unworthiness and trust the ¹¹ Eph. vi. 12. ¹² Ps. cvii. 10. ¹³ Jer. xiii. 16. ¹⁴ Is. ix. 2. ¹⁵ S. John i. 5. ¹⁶ Ps. xxvii. 1. ¹⁷ Ps. cxix. 105. ¹⁸ Rom. i. 28. ¹⁹ Heb. xii. 11. ²⁰ S. Jer. ²¹ Ps. cxix. 137. ²² 1 Cor. i. 30.

Before CHRIST
cir. 710. fied cities, and from the fortress even to the river, and from sea to sea, and from mountain to mountain.

Before CHRIST
cir. 710.

message of joy bursts in, with the abruptness¹ and conciseness of Hosea or Nahum:

A day to build thy fences; [i. e. cometh;]

That day, far shall be the decree;

That day, and he shall come quite to thee²;

and there follows, in a longer but still remarkably measured and interrupted cadence³, the statement of the length and breadth from which the people shall come to her;

Up to and from Assyria and the cities of strong-land [Egypt;]

Up to and from strong-land and even to river [Euphrates;]

And sea from sea, and mountain to mountain.

It is not human might or strength which God promises to restore. He had before predicted, that the kingdom of the Messiah should stand, not through earthly strength⁴. He promises the restoration, not of city walls, but of the fence of the vineyard⁵ of God, which God foretold by Isaiah that He would break down⁶. It is a peaceful renewal of her estate under God's protection, like that, with the promise whereof Amos closed his prophecy; In that day I will raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof. This decree, which he says shall be far away, might in itself be the decree either of God or of the enemy⁸. The sense is the same, since the enemy was but the instrument of God. Yet it seems more in accordance with the language of the prophets, that it should be the decree of man. For the decree of God for the destruction of Jerusalem and the captivity of His people was accomplished, held its course, was fulfilled. The destruction, captivity, restoration, were parts of one and the same decree of God, of which the restoration was the last accomplished in time. The restoration was not the removal, but the complete fulfilment, of the decree. He means then probably, that the decree of the enemy, whereby he held her captive, was to remove and be far off, not by any agency of her's⁹. The people were to stream to her of themselves. One by one, shall all thy banished, captive, scattered, children be brought quite home unto thee from all parts of the earth, whither they have been driven, from Assyria, and from strong-land. The name Matsor, which he gives to Egypt, modifying its ordinary dual name Mitsraim, is meant, at once to signify "Egypt"¹⁰ and to mark the strength of the country; as, in fact, "Egypt was on all sides by nature strongly guarded." A country, which was still strong relatively to Judah, would not, of itself, yield up its prey, but held it straitly; yet it should have to disgorge it. Isaiah and Hosea prophesied, in like way, the return of Israel and Judah from Assyria and from Egypt¹². And from strong-land even to the river [Euphrates]; the ancient, widest, boundary of the promised land¹³; and from sea to sea, and from mountain to mountain. These last are too large to be the real boundaries of the land. If understood geographically, it would be narrowing those which had just been spoken of, from Egypt to the Euphrates. Joel likens the destruction of the Northern army to the perishing of locusts in the two opposite seas, the Dead sea and the Mediterranean¹⁴; but the Dead sea was not the entire Eastern boundary of all Israel. Nor are there any mountains on the South, answering to Mount Libanus on the North. Not the mountains of Edom which lay to the South-East, but the desert¹⁵ was the Southern boundary of Judah. In the times too of their greatest prosperity, Edom, Moab, Ammon, Syria, had been subject to them. The rule of the Messiah from sea to sea had already been predicted by Solomon¹⁶, enlarging the boundaries of the promised land to the whole compass of the world, *from the sea, their bound westward, to the further encircling sea beyond all habitable land, in which, in fact, our continents are large islands*¹⁷. To this, Micah adds a new description, from mountain to mountain, including, probably, all subdivisions in our habitable earth, as the words, sea to sea, had embraced it as a whole. For, physically and to sight, mountains are the great natural divisions of our earth. Rivers are but a means of transit. The Euphrates and the Nile were the centres of the kingdoms which lay upon them. Each range of mountains, as it rises on the horizon, seems to present an insuperable barrier. No barrier should avail to hinder the inflow to the Gospel. As Isaiah foretold that all obstacles should be removed¹⁸, every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low, so Micah prophesies, from mountain to mountain they shall come.

The words are addressed as a promise and consolation to the Jews, and so, doubtless, the restoration of the Jews to their own land after the captivity is foretold here, as Micah had already foretold it¹⁹. But is the whole limited to this? He says, with remarkable indefiniteness, *there shall come*²⁰. He does not say, who "shall come." But he twice sets two opposite boundaries, from which men should come; and, since these boundaries, not being coincident, cannot be predicted of one and the same subject, there must be two distinct incomings. The Jews were to come from those two countries,

¹ Hence the omission of the preposition עַל before סָמַךְ וְעַל מִן, and of any preposition in the last clause, הָרִי הַזֶּה. ² The three sentences, which begin with מִן, are manifestly each complete in itself. ³ Ver. 12 is divided into four clauses, of which each consists of four words, and these in pairs;

"Yôm hoo, ve'adeica yabo leminni asshur, ve'arê matsôr, ooleminni matsôr, ve'ad nahar veyam miyyam, vebhar habar.

⁴ י. 9-13. ⁵ חֹמֶת is the wall of a vineyard, Num. xxii. 24, Is. v. 5, Ps. lxxx. 13; a wall pushed down, Ps. lxii. 4; one in which a serpent might lurk, Eccl. x. 8; a wall with gaps in it, Ezek. xiii. 5, xxii. 30; the wall of the court of the temple, Ib. xlii. 7; a fence, Ezr. ix. 9. It is no where used of "the wall of a city." חֹמֶת too is the wall of the court of the temple, Ezek. xlii. 10; the wall of a vineyard, Prov. xxiv. 31. חֹמֶת is "a sheepfold," Num. xxxii. 16, 24, 36, 1 Sam. xxiv. 4, Zeph. ii. 6; fences under which locusts lodge, Nah. iii. 17; in the open field, Jer. xlix. 3, Hos. ii. 8. Heb.; fences, Ps. lxxxix. 41. Heb. ⁶ Is. v. 5. ⁷ ix. 11.

⁸ ph is used chiefly of a "statute" of God, either those positive laws given by Moses, (its common use) or such laws as God has impressed upon the physical world, Job xxvi. 10, xxviii. 26, xxxviii. 10, 33, Prov. viii. 29, Jer. v. 22, xxxi. 35, 6; of the time appointed by God for man's life, Job xiv. 5, 13; a decree of God, Job xxiii. 14, Ps. ii. 7, Zeph. ii. 2; of a portion of food appointed by God, Job xxiii. 12, Prov. xxx. 8, Ezek. xvi. 27; by man, Gen. xlvii. 22, Prov. xxxi. 15; of a statute made by man, Gen. xlvii. 26, 1 Sam.

xxx. 25; a custom, Jud. xi. 39, (Plur. Jer. xxxii. 11, Ez. xx. 18.); a task appointed by man, Ex. v. 14. But in all cases the idea of "appointment" is prominent; so that although ph expresses the law of God determining the bounds of the sea or the term of man's life, it cannot therefore signify a mere point in space or time. ph also, with which it is united by alliteration, (probably to fix the words in men's memories,) is not to "expand," but to "be far off." Then also פָּרַח, corresponding to נִפְּחַל which implies a future, must itself be a future, not a mere aorist or vivid present. These three observations together exclude such renderings as, "the decree for thy restoration shall be promulged far and wide;" "the decree of God shall not be confined to Babylon but shall extend to other countries." "In that day, the interval is distant;" (Ew.) "the bound set to her will be far off," i. e. Israel shall be enlarged.

⁹ This is conveyed by the simple neuter, פָּרַח, "shall be far off."

¹⁰ As it certainly does in Isaiah at the same date, Is. xix. 6, xxxvii. 25, (2 Kings xix. 24.).

¹¹ Diod. Sic. i. 31. ¹² Is. xi. 11, xxvii. 13, Hos. xi. 11. ¹³ Gen. xv. 18, Ex. xxiii. 31, Deut. i. 7, xi. 24, Jos. i. 4, 1 Kings iv. 21, 24. ¹⁴ Joel ii. 20.

¹⁵ Ex. xxiii. 31, Num. xxxiv. 3, Deut. xi. 24. ¹⁶ Comp. Ps. lxxxii. 8. See "Daniel the Prophet" p. 479 sqq. ¹⁷ See Aristot. de mundo c. 3. in "Daniel the Prophet," p. 625. Strabo speaks as though Homer too knew the fact that the sea encircled the land, "hinting at those in East and West, in that they were washed by the Ocean."

¹⁸ Is. xl. 4. ¹⁹ Mic. iv. 10. ²⁰ בָּאָה, not, "they shall come;" nor again is it, "he," Israel, "shall come," since they were to come to Israel, "there shall come to thee;" nor is it an individual, since one person could not come from all these places.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

13 || Notwithstanding the land shall be desolate because of them that dwell therein,

Or, After that it hath been.

for the fruit of their doings.

Jer. 21. 14. ch. 3. 12.

whither its people were then to be carried captive or would flee. From the boundaries of the world, the world was to come.

Thus Micah embraces in one the prophecies, which are distinct in Isaiah, that not only God's former people should come from Egypt and Assyria, but that Egypt and Assyria themselves should be counted as one with Israel¹; and while, in the first place, the restoration of Israel itself is foretold, there follows that conversion of the world, which Micah had before promised², and which was the object of the restoration of Israel. This was fulfilled to Jews and heathen together, when the dispersed of the Jews were gathered into one in Christ, the Son of David according to the flesh, and the Gospel, beginning at Jerusalem, was spread abroad among all nations. The promise is thrice repeated, It is the day, assuring the truth thereof, as it were, in the Name of the All-Holy Trinity.

13. Notwithstanding [And] the land (i. e. that spoken of, the land of Judah) shall be desolate, not through any arbitrary law or the might of her enemies, but through the sins of the people, because of them that dwell therein, for the fruit of their doings. Truly "the fruit of their doings," what they did to please themselves, of their own minds against God. As they sow, so shall they reap. This sounds almost as a riddle and contradiction beforehand; "the walls built up," "the people gathered in," and "the land desolate." Yet it was all fulfilled in the letter as well as in spirit. Jerusalem was restored; the people was gathered, first from the captivity, then to Christ; and yet the land was again desolate through the fruit of their doings who rejected Christ, and is so until this day.

The prophet now closes with one earnest prayer³; to which he receives a brief answer, that God would shew forth His power anew, as when He first made them His people⁴. On this, he describes vividly the awed submission of the world to their God⁵, and closes with a thanksgiving of marvelling amazement at the greatness and completeness of the forgiving mercy of God⁶, ascribing all to His free goodness⁷.

14. Feed thy people with Thy rod. The day of final deliverance was still a great way off. There was a weary interval before them of chastisement, suffering, captivity. So Micah lays down his pastoral office by committing his people to Him Who was their true and abiding Shepherd. Who that has had the pastoral office, has not thought, as the night drew nigh in which no man can work, 'what will be after him?' Micah knew and foretold the outline. It was for his people a passing through the valley of the shadow of death. Micah then commits them to Him, Who had Himself committed them to him, Who alone could guide them through it. It is a touching parting with his people; a last guidance of those whom he had taught, reprov'd, rebuked, in vain, to Him the Good Shepherd Who led Israel like a flock. The rod is at times the shepherd's staff⁸, although more frequently the symbol of chastisement. God's chastisement of His people is an austere form of His love. So He says, If his children

14 || Feed thy people with thy rod, the flock of thine heritage, which dwell solitarily in the wood, in the midst of Car-

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

Or, Rule,
Ps. 28. 9.
ch. 5. 4.

Is. 37. 24.

forsake My law, I will visit their offences with a rod and their sin with scourges: nevertheless My loving-kindness will I not utterly take from them.

The flock of Thine inheritance. So Moses had appealed to God,¹⁰ Destroy not Thy people and Thine inheritance which Thou hast redeemed through Thy greatness—They are Thy people and Thine inheritance; and Solomon, in his dedication-prayer, that, on their repentance in their captivity, God would forgive His people,¹¹ for they be Thy people and Thine inheritance which Thou broughtest forth out of Egypt; and Asaph,¹² O Lord, the heathen are come into Thine inheritance; and again,¹³ Why doth Thine anger smoke against the sheep of Thy pasture? Remember the tribe of Thine inheritance which Thou hast redeemed; and Joel,¹⁴ Spare Thy people and give not Thine heritage to reproach; and a Psalmist,¹⁵ They break in pieces Thy people, O Lord, and afflict Thine heritage; and Isaiah,¹⁶ Return for thy servants' sake, the tribes of Thine inheritance. The appeal excludes all merits. Not for any deserts of their's, (for these were but evil,) did the Prophets teach them to pray; but because they were God's property. It was His Name, which would be dishonoured in them; it was His work, which would seemingly come to nothing; it was He, Who would be thought powerless to save. Again, it is not God's way, to leave half-done what He has begun. ¹⁷*Jesus, having loved His own which were in the world, loved them unto the end.* God's love in creating us and making us His, is the earnest, if we will, of His everlasting love. We have been the objects of His everlasting thought, of His everlasting love. Though we have forfeited all claim to His love, He has not forfeited the work of His Hands; Jesus has not forfeited the price of His Blood. So holy men have prayed; ¹⁸*I believe that Thou hast redeemed me by Thy Blood: permit not the price of the Ransom to perish.* ¹⁹*O Jesu Christ, my only Saviour, let not Thy most bitter Passion and Death be lost or wasted in me, miserable sinner!*

Which dwell solitarily, or alone. Micah uses the words of Balaam, when he had been constrained by God to bless Israel. ²⁰*The people shall dwell alone and shall not be reckoned among the nations.* Moses had repeated them, ²¹*Israel shall dwell in safety alone.* This aloneness among other nations, then, was a blessing, springing from God's being in the midst of them²², the deeds which He did for them²³; the law which He gave them²⁴. So Moses prayed, ²⁵*Wherein shall it be known here, that I and Thy people have found grace in Thy sight? is it not in that Thou goest with us? So shall we be separated, I and Thy people, from all the people that are on the face of the earth.* It was, then, a separate appeal to God by all His former loving-kindness, whereby He had severed and elected His people for Himself.

In the wood, in the midst of Carmel. God ²⁶*turneth a fruitful land into barrenness for the wickedness of them that dwell therein. He turneth the wilderness into a standing water and dry ground into watersprings.* Isaiah at the same

¹ Is. xix. 23-25. ² iv. 1-3. ³ v. 14. ⁴ v. 15. ⁵ v. 16, 17. ⁶ v. 18, 19. ⁷ v. 20.
⁸ שֶׁבֶט Lev. xxvii. 32, Ps. xxiii. 4. ⁹ Ps. lxxxix. 31, 33. ¹⁰ Deut. ix. 26, 29.
¹¹ 1 Kings viii. 51. ¹² Ps. lxxix. 1. ¹³ Ps. lxxiv. 1, 2. ¹⁴ Joel ii. 17.
¹⁵ Ps. xciv. 5. ¹⁶ Is. lxiii. 17. ¹⁷ S. John xiii. 1. ¹⁸ Bp. Andrewes Preces quotid. Græc. p. 150. Tracts for the Times No. 88. p. 66. ¹⁹ Paradise for the Christian Soul. On the Passion c. 5. ²⁰ Num. xxiii. 9. ²¹ Deut. xxxiii. 28.

In both cases, as in Micah, שֶׁבֶט is used; as also in Jer. xlix. 31, of Hazor dwelling in security alone. The idiom שֶׁבֶט בְּיָדוֹ, "sit alone," is different. It occurs first of the separation of the leper, "he shall sit alone, without the camp shall his dwelling be (שֶׁבֶט)," Lev. xiii. 46; then of an individual in sorrow, Jer. xv. 17, Lam. iii. 28; and, in one case, of the deserted city personified, Lam. i. 1. ²² Ex. xxxiii. 16, Deut. iv. 7. ²³ Ex. xxxiv. 10, Deut. iv. 34. ²⁴ Deut. iv. 8. 33. ²⁵ Ex. xxxiii. 16. ²⁶ Ps. cvii. 34, 5.

Before CHRIST
cir. 710.
^a Ps. 68, 22.
& 78, 12.

mel: let them feed in Bashan and Gilead,
as in the days of old.

15 ^a According to the days of thy coming

Before CHRIST
cir. 710.

out of the land of Egypt will I shew unto him marvellous things.

16 ¶ The nations ^b shall see and be con- ^b Is. 26, 11.

time used the like image, that ¹*Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field [Carmel], and the fruitful field [Carmel] shall be esteemed as a forest*². The wild forest was to be like the rich domestic exuberance of Carmel³. He would say, "Feed Thy people in Babylon, which is to them a wild homeless tract, that it may be to them as their own peaceful Carmel." Without God, all the world is a wilderness; with God, the wilderness is Paradise.

Let them feed in Bashan and Gilead. The former words were a prayer for their restoration. Gilead and Bashan were the great pasture-countries of Palestine⁴, "a wide table-land, with undulating downs clothed with rich grass throughout," where the cattle ranged freely. They were the first possessions, which God had bestowed upon Israel; the first, which they forfeited. Micah prays that God, Who protected them in their desolation, would restore and protect them in the green pasture where He placed them. They are a prayer still to the Good Shepherd Who laid down His life for His sheep⁵, our Lord Jesus Christ, that He would feed His flock whom He has redeemed, who have been given to Him as an inheritance⁷, the little flock⁸, to which it is the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom, which cleaveth to Him and shall be heirs with Him⁹. "Christ feedeth His own with a rod, guiding them gently, and repressing by gentle fears the tendency of believers to listlessness. He bruise¹⁰th as with a rod of iron, not them, but the rebellious disobedient and proud, who receive not the faith; believers He instructs and forms tenderly, ¹¹*feeds them among the lilies*, and leads them into good pastures and rich places, namely the Divinely-inspired Scriptures, making the hidden things thereof clear through the Spirit to those of understanding, that they ¹²*may grow up unto Him in all things which is the Head, even Christ*, with minds well-fed and nourished and gladdened with all spiritual delights. But the chosen and elect dwell solitarily, being apart from the rest who think only of the things of earth, and give themselves to the pleasures of sense. So then these, having the mind at rest, freed from the vain and abominable tumults, are placed apart as in a wood and in a mountain. By the wood you may understand, the rich and varied and solid instruction (as it were trees and flowers) both in doctrine and life; by the mountain, what is high and lofty. For none of the wisdom, accounted of in the Church, is low. They are fed in Bashan and Gilead, as in the days of old, rich pastures; for the mind of the holy is beautified, delighting itself in the contemplation of the inspired Scriptures, and filled, as it were, with a certain richness, and shares without stint all excellenc^e in thought or in deed; and that, not for a brief and narrow season, but for ever. For what gladdeneth the flesh falleth therewith and fadeth and hasteth away like a shadow; but the participation of the good things from above and of the Spirit, stretcheth out along endless ages."

15. According to the days of thy coming out of the land of Egypt. God answers the prayer, beginning with its closing words¹³. Micah had prayed, "Turn Thy people like the days of old¹⁴;" God answers, "like the days of thy coming¹⁴ out of the land of Egypt." Micah had said, in the name of his people, ¹⁵*I shall behold His righteousness*; God answers, I will make him to behold marvellous things. The word *marvellous things*¹⁶ was used of God's great marvels in the physical world¹⁷, or the marvellous mercies of His Providence towards individuals or nations¹⁸, and especially of those great miracles, which were accumulated at the deliverance from Egypt¹⁹, and the entrance of the promised land²⁰ which was its completion. The reference to the Exodus must have led them to think of actual miracles; since, in regard to the Exodus, it is used of nothing else. But there were no miracles at the return from the captivity. ²¹*When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion*, said a Psalmist of the returned people, we were like them that dream. The Lord hath done great things for us; we are glad. Great things, but not miraculous. The promise then kept the people looking onward, until He came, ²²*a Prophet mighty in word and deed*, as to Whom St. Peter appealed to the people, that He was ²³*approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by Him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know*; Who gave also to them who believed on Him power to do ²⁴*greater works than He did*, through His own power, because He went to His Father; and when they believed, He shewed to him, viz. to the whole people gathered into the One Church, Jew and Gentile, yet more marvellous things, things, every way more marvellous and beyond nature than those of old, ²⁵*the unsearchable riches of Christ, the mystery which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God*.

16. The nations shall see. God had answered, what He would give to His own people, to see. Micah takes up the word²⁶, and says, what effect this sight should have upon the enemies of God and of His people. The world should still continue to be divided between the people of God and their adversaries. Those who are converted pass from the one to the other; but the contrast remains. Assyria, Babylon, Egypt, pass away or become subject to other powers; but the antagonism continues. The nations are they, who, at each time, waste, oppress, are arrayed against, the people of God. When the Gospel came into the world, the whole world was arrayed against it²⁷. These then, he says, shall see, i. e. the marvellous works of God, which God should shew His people, and be ashamed at, i. e. because of all their might, their own might. They put forth their whole might, and it failed them

¹ Is. xxix. 17. ² מִבְּרֵאשִׁית לְעֵרֵיחָם. The phrase recurs Is. xxxii. 15, except that the Kethib omits the article, which makes the contrast of עֵרֵי בָרֵאשִׁית exactly the same as in Micah. ³ See ab. on Am. i. 2. p. 154.

⁴ See on Am. i. 3. p. 158, iv. 1. p. 185. ⁵ Rev. G. H. Palmer in Dr. Stanley Pal. p. 320. See also Porter's Handbook p. 307 sq. "One can scarcely get over the impression that he is roaming through some English park. The graceful hills, the rich vales, the luxuriant herbage, the bright wild-flowers, the plantations of evergreen oak, pine, and arbutus, now a tangled thicket, and now sparsely scattered over the gentle slope, as if intended to reveal its beauty, the little rivulets fringed with oleander &c.—such are the features of the mountains of Gilead." p. 310. "The country from Jerash to Wady Gâbes [Jahesh Gilead] 8 hours, resembles in scenery that from es-Salt to Jerash. We have the thickly wooded hills, the deep and fertile valleys, and the luxuriant pasturage in every part of it." p. 316. See also Thomson, The Land and the Book, i. 304.

⁶ S. John x. 11, 15. ⁷ Ps. ii. 8. ⁸ S. Luke xii. 32. ⁹ Rom. viii. 17. ¹⁰ S. Cyr. ¹¹ Cant. vi. 3. ¹² Eph. iv. 15. ¹³ Casp. ¹⁴ עָלָם ver. 14. עָלָם עָלָם ver. 15. The word עָלָם is necessarily restrained to time, in that it relates to man's past, and that, according to the context, a limited past, the time of their coming out of Egypt. This does not interfere with its use as to eternity. See ab. on Mic. v. 2. p. 332. ¹⁵ ver. 9. Casp. ¹⁶ עֲלָמוֹת ¹⁷ Job v. 9, xxxvii. 5, 14. ¹⁸ Ps. ix. 2, xxvi. 7, lxxi. 17, lxxii. 18, &c. ¹⁹ Neh. ix. 17, Ps. lxxviii. 4, 11, 32, cv. 2, 5, cvi. 7, 22. ²⁰ Ex. xxxiv. 10. Of the passage of the Jordan Jos. iii. 5. ²¹ Pa. cxxvi. 1, 3. ²² S. Luke xxiv. 19. ²³ Acts ii. 22. ²⁴ S. John xiv. 12. ²⁵ Eph. iii. 8, 9. ²⁶ עֲלָמוֹת end of ver. 15; עָלָם beg. of ver. 16. Casp. ²⁷ See ab. p. 347.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

founded at all their might: ^cthey shall lay their hand upon their mouth, their ears shall be deaf.

^c Job 21. 5.
& 29. 9.
^d Ps. 72. 9.
Is. 49. 23.

17 They shall lick the ^ddust like a ser-against the marvellous might of God. They should array might against might, and be ashamed at the failure of all their might¹. The word all is very emphatic; it implies that they had put forth all, and that all had failed them, and proved to be weakness. So the Heathen might was often put to shame and gnashed its teeth, when it could avail nothing against the strength to endure which God gave to His martyrs. Its strength to inflict and to crush was baffled before the hidden might of God's Spirit. They shall lay their hand upon their mouth, in token that they were reduced to silence, having no more to say²; for He promised, ³*I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist*; and they had to own, ⁴*indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them, and we cannot deny it*. Their ears shall be deaf; they shall be silent, as though they had heard nothing, as if they were both dumb and deaf⁵. Yet it seems too that they are wilfully deaf, shutting their ears out of envy and hatred, that they might not hear what great things God had done for His people, nor hear the voice of truth and be converted and healed. ⁶*The nations and the Emperors of the nations saw, Jews and Gentiles saw, and were ashamed at all their might, because their might, great as it was accounted, upheld by laws and arms, could not overcome the mighty works, which the Good Shepherd did among His people or flock by His rod, i. e. by His power, through weak and despised persons, the aged, or oftentimes even by boys and girls. They were then ashamed at all their might which could only touch the ⁷earthen vessels, but could not take away the treasure which was in them. What shall I say of the wisdom of those same nations? Of this too they were ashamed, as he adds, They shall put their hands upon their mouths. For, in comparison with the heavenly wisdom, which spake by them and made their tongues eloquent, dumb was all secular eloquence, owning by its silence that it was convicted and confounded."*

17. They shall lick the dust like a [the] serpent. To lick the dust, by itself, pictures the extreme humility of persons who cast themselves down to the very earth⁸. To lick it "like the serpent" seems rather to represent the condition of those who share the serpent's doom⁹, whose lot, viz. earth and things of earth, they had chosen⁶. They shall move out of their holes, or, better, shall tremble, (i. e. "come tremblingly,") out of their close places¹⁰, whether these be strong places or prisons, as the word, varied in one vowel¹¹, means. If it be strong places, it means, that ¹²"the enemies of God's people should, in confusion and tumultuously with fear, leave their strong holds, wherein they thought to be secure, not able to lift themselves up against God and those by Him sent against pent, ^ethey shall move out of their holes like || worms of the earth: ^fthey shall be afraid of the LORD our God, and shall fear because of thee.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

^e Ps. 18. 45.
Or, creeping things.
^f Jer. 33. 9.

them." Like worms of the earth, lit. creeping things, or, as we say, *reptiles*¹³, contemptuously. They shall be afraid of, or rather come trembling to, the Lord our God; it is not said they, but our God, Who hath done so great things for us. And shall fear because of [lit. from] Thee, O Lord, of Whom they had before said, Where is the Lord thy God?

It is doubtful, whether these last words express a "servile fear," whereby a man turns away and flees from¹⁴ the person or thing which he fears, or whether they simply describe fear of God¹⁵, the first step towards repentance. In Hosea's words¹⁶, they shall fear towards the Lord and His goodness, the addition, and His goodness, determines the character of the fear. In Micah, it is not said that the fear brings them into any relation to God. He is not spoken of, as becoming, any how, their God, and Micah closes by a thanksgiving, for God's pardoning mercy, not to them but to His people.

And so the Prophet ends, as he began, with the judgments of God; to those who would repent, chastisement, to the impenitent, punishment: "sentencing Samaria, guilty and not repenting¹⁷, to perpetual captivity; "to Jerusalem, guilty but repenting, promising restoration. So from the beginning of the world did God; so doth He; so shall He unto the end. So did He shew Himself to Cain and Abel, who both, as we all, sinned in Adam. Cain, being impenitent, He wholly cast away; Abel, being penitent, and through faith offering a better sacrifice than Cain, and "bringing forth fruits worthy of repentance, He accepted. So He hath foreshewn as to the end¹⁷. "And that we may know how uniformly our Judge so distinguisheth, at the very moment of His own Death while hanging between the two thieves, the one, impenitent and blaspheming, He left; to the other, penitent and confessing, He opened the gate of paradise; and, soon after, leaving the Jewish people unrepentant, He received the repentance of the Gentiles." Thus the Prophet parts with both out of sight; the people of God, feeding on the rich bounty and abundance of God, and His marvellous gifts of grace above and beyond nature, multiplied to them above all the wonders of old time; the enemies of God's people looking on, not to admire, but to be ashamed, not to be healthfully ashamed, but to be wilfully deaf to the voice of God. For, however to lay the hand on the mouth might be a token of reverent silence, the deafness of the ears can hardly be other than the emblem of hardened obstinacy. What follows, then, seems more like the unwilling creeping-forth into the Presence of God, when they cannot keep away, than conversion. It seems to picture the reprobate, who would not¹⁸ hear the Voice of the Son of God and live, but who, in the end, shall be forced to hear it out of their close places or prisons, i. e. the grave, and come forth in

¹ This is the force of בָּיָא with כִּן. כִּן designates, as usual, the cause and source of the shame; and mostly with this aggravation, that they had trusted in it, and it had failed them. See Hos. iv. 19, "they shall be ashamed because of their sacrifices; x. 6, because of their own counsel" (see ab. pp. 64, 72. on x. 6.); "They shall be afraid and ashamed because of Ethiopia, their expectation, and of Egypt, their glory," Is. xx. 5; "because of the oaks, which ye have desired," 1b. i. 29; "thou shalt be ashamed because of Egypt, as thou wast ashamed because of Assyria," Jer. ii. 36; "Moab shall be ashamed because of Chemosh, as the house of Israel was ashamed because of Bethel their confidence," 1b. xlviii. 13; add xii. 13. The idiom itself, בְּיָא בְּיָא, "ashamed because of their might," occurs in Ezek. xxxii. 30, of the nations, which had perished in war. In a few cases, the idiom is used of the source of shame, where the idea of previous trust in them is less prominent, as in Ezek. xxxvi. 32, Zeph. iii. 11. But here, this is involved in the subject itself, and is illustrated by Ezek. xxxii. 30.

Job. xxi. 5, xxix. 9, xl. 4, Prov. xxx. 32.

⁴ Acts iv. 16.

⁵ As in Ps. xxxviii. 14, "I was as a man that heareth not, and in whose mouth are no reproofs."

⁶ 12 Cor. iv. 7.

⁷ As in Ps. lxxii. 9. Is. xlix. 23.

⁸ So our Version renders the word in Ps. xviii. 45, 2 Sam. xxii. 46.

⁹ Is. xxiv. 22, xlii. 7, Ps. cxlii. 8; here and in Ps. xviii. 46, קָנָה fem.

¹⁰ Pcc.

¹¹ The idiom occurs besides only in Deut. xxxii. 24, with the variation only of פָּן with פָּן.

¹² פָּן with פָּן is used of a fear of God, whereby one is kept from evil.

¹³ Lev. xix. 14. Yet also generally of fear of God, Ps. xxxiii. 8.

¹⁴ S. Matt. xxv.

¹⁵ S. John v. 23.

¹⁶ Hos. iii. 5.

¹⁷ Z. Z.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710. ^h 18 ^a Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and passeth by the transgression of ⁱ the remnant of his heritage? ^k he retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy.
^a Ex. 15. 11. ^b Ex. 34. 6, 7. ^c Jer. 50. 20.
^d ch. 4. 7. & ^e 5. 3, 7, 8.
^f Ps. 103. 9. ^g Is. 57. 16. ^h Jer. 3. 5.

fear, when they shall ¹ say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us. Thus the Prophet brings us to the close of all things, the gladness and joy of God's people, the terror of His enemies, and adds only the song of thanksgiving of all the redeemed.

18. Who is a God (and, as the word means, A Mighty God,) like unto Thee? He saith not, ² Who hast made heaven and earth, the sea and all that therein is; nor, ³ Who telleth the number of the stars; and calleth them all by their names; nor, ⁴ Who by His strength setteth fast the mountains and is girded about with power; but Who forgivest! For greater is the work of Redemption than the work of Creation. That pardoneth, and beareth and taketh away also, and passeth by the transgression of the remnant of His heritage, i. e. His heritage, which is a remnant still when ⁵ the rest are blinded; and this, not of its merits but of His mercy; since it is not His nature to retain His anger for ever; not for any thing in them, but because He delighteth in mercy, as He saith, ⁶ I am merciful, saith the Lord, and I will not keep anger for ever. ⁷ I am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for Mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins. ⁸ For although God for a time is angry with His elect, chastening them mercifully in this life, yet in the end He hath compassion on them, giving them everlasting consolations."

Moses, after the completion of his people's deliverance at the Red Sea, used the like appeal to God, in unmingled joy. Then the thanksgiving ran, ⁹ glorious in holiness, awful in praises, doing wonders. Now, it ran in a more subdued, yet even deeper, tone, taken from God's revelation of Himself after that great transgression on Mount Sinai, ¹⁰ forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin. With this, Micah identified his own name ¹¹. This was the one message which he loved above all to proclaim; of this, his own name was the herald to his people in his day. Who is like the Lord, the Pardoner of sin, the Redeemer from its guilt, the Subduer of its power? For no false god was ever such a claim made. The heathen gods were symbols of God's workings in nature; they were, at best, representatives of His Government and of His displeasure at sin. But, being the creatures of man's mind, they could not freely pardon, for man dared not ascribe to them the attribute of a freely-pardoning mercy, for which he dared not hope. Who is a God like to Thee, mighty, not only to destroy but to pardon? is the wondering thanksgiving of time, the yet greater amazement of eternity, as eternity shall unveil the deep blackness of sin over-against the light of God, and we, seeing God, as He is, shall see what that Holiness is, against which we sinners sinned. The soul, which is truly penitent, never wearies of the wondering love, Who is a God like unto Thee?

19. He will turn again, Who seemed to be turned away from us when we were turned away from Him ¹². He will

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710. 19 He will turn again, he will have compassion upon us; he will subdue our ini-quities; and thou will cast all their sins into the depths of the sea.

20 ¹ Thou wilt perform the truth to ¹ Luke. 1. 72, 73.

subdue, or trample under foot, our worst enemy, our iniquities, as He saith, ¹³ He shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly. Hitherto, sinful passions had not rebelled only, but had had the mastery over us. Sin subdued man; it was his lord, a fierce tyrant over him; he could not subdue it. Holy Scripture says emphatically of man under the law, that he was sold under sin ¹⁴, a slave under a hard master, oppressed, weighed down, and unable to throw off the bondage. ¹⁵ We have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin; ¹⁶ the Scripture hath concluded all under sin. Under the Gospel, God, he says, would subdue sin "under us," and make it, as it were, our "footstool ¹⁷." It is a Gospel before the Gospel. God would pardon; and He, not we, would subdue sin to us. He would bestow, ¹⁸ of sin the double cure, Save us from its guilt and power. ¹⁹ Not I, but the grace of God, which was with me.

And Thou wilt cast,—not, some ("for it is impious to look for a half-pardon from God") but—all their sins into the depths ²¹ of the sea, so that as in the passage of the Red Sea there was not one Egyptian left of those who pursued His people, so neither shall there be one sin, which, through Baptism and on Repentance, shall not through His free mercy be pardoned. As they, which ²² sank as lead in the mighty waters, never again rose, so shall the sins, unless revived by us, not rise against us to condemnation, but shall in the Day of Judgment be sunk in the abyss of hell, as if they had never been.

20. Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob and the mercy to Abraham. What was free mercy to Abraham, became, when God had once promised it, His truth. Abraham also stands for all those, who in him and his Seed should be blessed, those who were ²³ aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world, in no covenant or relation with God, as well as those who were the children of the faith; heathen, as well as Jews. Jacob represents those who were immediately his children, such of the children of Israel, as were also the true Israel and children of faithful Abraham. In both ways the gift to Abraham was mercy, to Jacob, truth. So also St. Paul saith ²⁴, "Jesus Christ was a Minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made to the fathers, and that the Gentiles might glorify God for His mercy." Yet mercy and truth ²⁵, together, are all the paths of the Lord; they ²⁶ met together in Christ; yea Christ Himself is full of Mercy as well as ²⁷ Truth: and woe were it to that soul to whom He were Truth without mercy. ²⁸ For to be saved, we look not so much to the truth of the Judge as to the mercy of the Redeemer." And mercy, in the counsel of God, reacheth wider than truth; for truth is given to Jacob, the father of one nation, Israel; but mercy to Abraham, ²⁹ the father of many nations. Isaac, it may be, is not here mentioned, because all to whom the blessing should come are already spoken of in Ja-

¹ S. Luke xxiii. 30, Rev. vi. 16. ² Ex. xx. 11. ³ Ps. cxlvii. 4. ⁴ Ps. lxxv. 6.
⁵ Rom. xi. 7. ⁶ Jer. iii. 12. ⁷ Is. xliii. 25. ⁸ Dion. ⁹ Ex. xv. 11.
¹⁰ ¹¹ See Introd. to Micah, ab. p. 288. ¹² See Jo. ii. 14. ¹³ Rom. xvi. 20.
¹⁴ Ib. vii. 14. ¹⁵ Ib. iii. 9. ¹⁶ Gal. iii. 22. ¹⁷ ¹⁸ ¹⁹ ²⁰ ²¹ ²² ²³ ²⁴ ²⁵ ²⁶ ²⁷ ²⁸ ²⁹

(as in Syr. Ch.) from the same root. ¹⁸ Hymn, "Rock of ages." ¹⁹ 1 Cor. xv. 10.
²⁰ S. Amb. ap. Alb. ²¹ ²² ²³ ²⁴ ²⁵ ²⁶ ²⁷ ²⁸ ²⁹

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.
m Ps. 105. 9, 10.

Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, m which thou hast sworn

Before
CHRIST
cir. 710.

unto our fathers from the days of old.

cob and Abraham; in Jacob, all to whom the promise was first made; in Abraham, all nations of the world who should be blessed in his Seed, through the mercy of God overflowing the bounds of that covenant. Isaac is, in his sacrifice, chiefly a type of our Lord Himself.

Which Thou hast sworn unto our fathers. ¹*That by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation.*

From the days of old. ²From eternity, in the counsel of God; in promise, from the foundation of the world, as is said in the hymn of Zacharias ³, As He spake by the mouth of His holy Prophets, which have been since the world began. ⁴The inspired hymns of the Blessed Virgin Mary and of Zachariah take up the words of the prophet, and shew that they are already fulfilled in Christ, although they shall be more and more fulfilled unto the world's end, as Jew and Gentile are brought into His fold; ⁵*He remembering His mercy, as He spake to our fathers, to Abraham and to his seed for ever.* ⁶*To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember*

His holy covenant, the oath which He sware to our father Abraham that He would grant unto us.

"I too," St. Jerome subjoins, "sealing the labour of my little work by calling upon the Lord, will say at the close of this tract, O God, who is like unto Thee? Take away the iniquity of Thy servant, pass by the sin of my decayed soul, and send not Thine anger upon me, nor rebuke me in Thy indignation; for Thou art full of pity and great are Thy mercies. Return and have mercy upon me; drown mine iniquities, and cast them into the depth of the sea, that the bitterness of sin may perish in the bitter waters. Grant the truth which Thou didst promise to Thy servant Jacob, and the mercy which Thou didst pledge to Abraham Thy friend, and free my soul, as Thou didst swear to my fathers in the days of old; ⁷*As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live. Then shall mine enemy see and be crowned with confusion, who now saith unto me, where is now thy God?*" Amen, Amen, O Good Lord Jesu.

¹ Heb. vi. 18.

² Alb.

³ S. Luke i. 70.

⁴ Poc.

⁵ S. Luke i. 54, 55.

⁶ Ib. 72-74.

⁷ Ezek. xxxiii. 11.

Bethlehem from the North.

INTRODUCTION

TO

THE PROPHET NAHUM.

THE prophecy of Nahum is both the complement and the counterpart of the book of Jonah. When Moses had asked God to shew him His glory, and God had promised to let him see the outskirts of that glory, and to proclaim the Name of the Lord before him, the Lord, we are told, passed by before him and proclaimed,^a The Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering and abundant in goodness and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty. God proclaimed at once His mercy and His justice. Those wondrous words echo along the whole of the Old Testament. Moses himself^b, David^c, other Psalmists^d, Jeremiah^e, Daniel^f, Nehemiah^g, plead them to God or rehearse some part of them in thanksgiving. Joel repeated them as a motive to repentance^h. Upon the repentance of Nineveh, Jonah had recited to God the bright side of that His declaration of Himself, I knew that Thou art a gracious God and merciful, slow to anger and of great goodness, repeating to God His words to Moses, and adding, and repenting of the evil. Nineveh, as appears from Nahum, had fallen back into the violence of which it had repented. Nahum then, in reference to that declaration of Jonah, begins by setting forth the awful side of the attributes of God. First, in a stately rhythm, which, in the original, reminds us of the gradual Psalms, he enunciates the solemn threefold declaration of the severity of God to those who will be His enemies.

^a*A jealous God and Avenger is the Lord;
An Avenger is the Lord, and lord of wrath;
An Avenger is the Lord to His adversaries:
And a Reserver of wrath to His enemies.*

Then, he too recites that character of mercy recorded by Moses, The Lord is slow to anger, and great in power. But anger, although slow, comes, he adds, not the less certainly on the guilty; and will not at all clear the guilty. The iniquity is full. As a whole, there is no place more for repentance. Nineveh had had its prophet, and had been spared, and had sunk back into its old sins. The office of Nahum is to pronounce its sentence. That sentence is fixed. ^m*There is no healing of thy bruise*. Nothing is said of its ulterior conversion or restoration. On the contrary, Nahum says, ⁿ*He will make the place thereof an utter desolation*.

The sins of Nineveh spoken of by Nahum are the same as those from which they had turned at the preaching of Jonah. In Jonah, it is, ^o*the violence of their hands*. Nahum describes Nineveh as ^p*a dwelling of lions, filled with prey and with ravin*, the feeding-place of young lions, where the lion tore enough for his whelps; ^q*a city of bloods, full of lies and robbery*, from which the prey departeth not.

But, amid this mass of evil, one was eminent, in direct antagonism to God. The character is very peculiar. It is not simply of rebellion against God, or neglect of Him. It is a direct disputing of His Sovereignty. The prophet twice repeats the characteristic expression, What will ye devise so vehemently against the Lord? ^r*devising evil against the Lord*; and adds, counsellor of evil. This was exactly the character of Sennacherib, whose wars, like those of his forefathers, (as appears from the cuneiform inscriptions^t;) were religious wars, and who blasphemously compared God to the local deities of the countries, which his forefathers or himself had destroyed^u. Of this enemy Nahum speaks, as having "gone forth;" out of thee (Nineveh) hath gone forth^v one, devising evil against the Lord, a counsellor of Belial. This was past. Their purpose was inchoate, yet incomplete. God challenges them, ^w*What will ye devise so vehemently against the Lord?* The destruction too is proximate. The prophet answers for God, ^x*He Himself, by Himself, is already making an utter end*. To Jerusalem he turns, ^y*And now I will break his yoke from off thee, and will break his bonds asunder*. Twice the prophet mentions the device against God; each time he answers it by the prediction of the sudden utter destruction of the enemy, while in the most perfect security. ^z*While they are intertwined as thorns, and swallowed up as their drink, they are devoured as stubble fully dry*; and, ^{aa}If they be perfect, unimpaired in their strength, and thus many, even thus shall they be mown down. Their destruction was to be, as their numbers, complete. With no previous loss, secure and at ease, a mighty host, in consequence of their prosperity, all were, at one blow, mown down; and he (their king, who counselled against the Lord) shall pass away and perish. "The abundance of the wool in the fleece is no hindrance to the shears," nor of the grass to the scythe, nor of the Assyrian host to the will of the Lord. After he, the chief, had thus passed away, Nahum foretells that remarkable death, in connection with the house of his gods; "Out of the house of thy gods I will cut off the graven image and the molten image: I will make thy grave. There is no natural construction of these words, except, I will make it thy grave^d. Judah too was, by the presence of the Assyrian, hindered from going up to worship at Jerusalem. The prophet bids proclaim peace to Jerusalem; keep thy feasts—for the wicked shall no more pass through thee. It was then by the presence of the wicked, that they were now hindered from keeping their feasts, which could be kept only at Jerusalem.

^a Ex. xxxiv. 6, 7. ^b Num. xiv. 17, 18. ^c Ps. lxxxvi. 15, ciii. 8, cxlv. 8. ^d Ps. cxl. 4, cxlii. 4, cxvi. 5. ^e xxxii. 18, 19. ^f ix. 4. ^g ix. 17. ^h ii. 13. ⁱ Jon. iv. 2. ^j i. 2. ^k Ib. 3. ^l iii. 19. ^m i. 8. ⁿ iii. 8. ^o Nah. ii. 11, 12. ^p Ib. iii. 1. ^q Ib. i. 9, קָהַל עֲשָׂה. ^r The verb is doubly intensive, both as Piel, and as having the intens. j. ^s i. 11. ^t See on "Daniel the Prophet" pp. 444, 5. ^u Is. xxxvi. 18-20, xxxviii. 10-13. ^v i. 11. נָקָה. ^w i. 9. קָהַל עֲשָׂה. ^x i. 13. עָתָה. ^y i. 10. ^z i. 12.

The prophecy of Nahum coincides then with that of Isaiah, when Hezekiah prayed against Sennacherib. In the history^e, and in the prophecy of Isaiah, the reproach and blasphemy and rage against God are prominent, as an evil design against God is in Nahum. In Isaiah we have the messengers sent to blaspheme^f; in Nahum, the promise, that the voice of thy messengers shall no more be heard. Isaiah prophesies the fruitlessness of his attempt against Jerusalem^g; his disgraced return; his violent death in his own land^h; Nahum prophesies the entire destruction of his army, his own passing away, his grave. Isaiah, in Jerusalem, foretells how the spontaneous fruits of the earth shall be restored to themⁱ, and so, that they shall have possession of the open country; Nahum, living probably in the country, foretells the free access to Jerusalem, and bids them to ^kkeep their feasts, and perform the vows, which, in their trouble, they had promised to God. He does not only foretell that they may, but he enjoins them to do it. The words, ^lthe emptiers have emptied them out and marred their vinebranches, may relate to the first expedition of Sennacherib, when, Holy Scripture says, he ^mcame up against all the fenced cities of Judah and took them, and Hezekiah gave him thirty talents of gold, and 300 talents of silver. Sennacherib himself saysⁿ, "Hezekiah, king of Judah, who had not submitted to my authority, forty-six of his principal cities, and fortresses and villages depending upon them of which I took no account, I captured, and carried away their spoil. And from these places I captured and carried off as spoil 200,150 people," &c. This must relate to the first expedition, on account of the exact correspondence of the tribute in gold, with a variation in the number of the talents of silver, easily accounted for^o. In the first invasion Sennacherib relates that he besieged Jerusalem. "Hezekiah himself I shut up in Jerusalem his capital city, like a bird in a cage, building towers round the city to fence him in, and raising banks of earth against the gates, so as to prevent escape." It is perhaps in reference to this, that, in the second invasion, God promises by Isaiah; ^pHe shall not come into this city, and shall not shoot an arrow there; and shall not present shield before it, and shall not cast up bank against it. Still, in this second invasion also, Holy Scripture relates, that ^qthe king of Assyria sent Rabshakeh from Lachish to Jerusalem unto king Hezekiah with a great army.

^c i. 14. ^d So Chald. Syr. S. Jer. and moderns, as soon as they have no bias, e. g. Ros. Ew. It is not asah, but sim; i. e. not ποιεῖν, but θεῖναι; not, in our sense, I will "make a grave," but "I will set" or "make" something else, viz. the house of his gods of which Nahum had just spoken, "to be his grave."
^e 2 Kings xix. 4, 22-23. ^f Is. xxxvii. 4, 23-29. ^g Ib. 33, 34.
^h Ib. 7. ⁱ 2 Kings xix. 29, Is. xxxvii. 30. ^j Nah. i. 15, ii. 1. [2 Heb.]
^k Ib. ii. 2. [3 Heb.] ^l 2 Kings xviii. 13, 14, Is. xxxvi. 1.
^m Dr Hincks in Layard Nin. and Bab. pp. 143, 4. Sir H. Rawlinson, quoted ib. and Rawl. Bampton. L. p. 141. ⁿ See Hayard ib. pp. 144, 5. Rawl. B. L. p. 143.

Perhaps it is in regard to this second expedition, that God says, Though I have afflicted thee, I will afflict thee no more; i. e. this second invasion should not desolate her, like that first. Not that God absolutely would not again afflict her, but not now. The yoke of the Assyrian was then broken, until the fresh sins of Manasseh drew down their own punishment.

Nahum then was a prophet for Judah, or for that remnant of Israel, which, after the ten tribes were carried captive, became one with Judah, not in temporal sovereignty, but in the one worship of God. His mention of Basan, Carmel and Lebanon alone, as places lying under the rebuke of God, perhaps implies a special interest in Northern Palestine. Judah may have already become the name for the whole people of God who were left in their own land, since those of the ten tribes who remained had now no separate religious or political existence. The idol-centre of their worship was gone into captivity.

With this agrees the old tradition as to the name of the birth-place of Nahum, the Elkoshite. "Some think," says St. Jerome¹, "that Elcesæus was the father of Nahum, and, according to the Hebrew tradition, was also a prophet; whereas Elcesi² is even to this day a little village in Galilee, small indeed, and scarcely indicating by its ruins the traces of ancient buildings, yet known to the Jews, and pointed out to me too by my guide." The name is a genuine Hebrew name, the El, with which it begins, being the name of God, which appears in the names of other towns also, as, El'ale, Eltolad, Elteke, Eltolem. The author of the shortlived Gnostic heresy of the Elcesaites, called Elkesai, êlksai, êlxaioi, Elksaioi³, probably had his name from that same village. Eusebius mentions Elkesa, as the place "whence was Nahum the Elkesæan." S. Cyril of Alexandria says, that Elkesa was a village somewhere in Judæa.

On the other hand Alcush, a town in Mosul, is probably a name of Arabic origin, and is not connected with Nahum by any extant or known writer, earlier than Masius towards the end of the 16th century⁴, and an Arabic scribe in 1713⁵. Neither of these mention the tomb. "The tomb," says Layard⁶, "is a simple plaster box, covered with green cloth, and standing at the upper end of a large chamber. The house containing the tomb is a modern building. There are no inscriptions, nor fragments of any antiquity near the place." The place is now revered by the Jews, but in the 12th century Benjamin of Tudela⁷ supposed his tomb to be at Ain Japhata, South of Babylon. Were anything needed to invalidate statements above 2000 years after the time of Nahum, it might suffice that the Jews, who are the authors of this story, maintain that not Jonah only but Obadiah and Jephthah the Gileadite are also buried at Mosul⁸. Nor were the ten tribes placed there, but "in the cities of the Medes." The name Capernaum, "the village of Nahum," is probably an indication of his residence in Galilee. There is nothing in his language peculiar to the Northern tribes. One very poetic word⁹, common to him with the song of Deborah, is not therefore a "provincialism," because it only happens to occur in the rich, varied, language of two prophets of North Pa-

¹ Sir H. Rawl. transl. in B. L. ib. ² xxxvii. 33. ³ Ib. xxxvi. 2.
⁴ 2 Kings xviii. 17. ⁵ Nah. i. 12. ⁶ Præf. to Nah. ⁷ 'Ελκεσαί, 'Ελκασαί, (Theod. Hær. Fab. i. 27.) 'Ηλκασαί, (Hippol. Philosoph. ix. 4. &c.) 'Ηλξαί, 'Ηλξαίος, 'Ελκεσσαίος, S. Epiph. Hær. xix. 5, xxx. 3, iii. 1. 'Ελκασαίος or 'Ελκεσαίος, Method. Conviv. in Combef. Nov. Coll. p. 234. A.
⁸ Assem. Bibl. Or. i. 525. ⁹ Ib. iii. 1. 352. ¹⁰ Nin. i. 233.
¹¹ Travels i. 310. ed. Asher. ¹² Niebuhr Voyage en Arabie ii. 289, 90.
¹³ 2 Kings xvii. 6. ¹⁴ דָּוָר = the "circling" of the forefeet of the horse in his speed, Nah. iii. 2, Jud. v. 22.

lestine. Nor does the occurrence of a foreign title^a interfere with "purity of diction." It rather belongs to the vividness of his description.

The conquest of No-Ammon or Thebes and the captivity of its inhabitants, of which Nahum speaks, must have been by Assyria itself. Certainly it was not from domestic disturbances^f; for Nahum says, that the people were carried away captive^g. Nor was it from the Ethiopians^h; for Nahum speaks of them, as her alliesⁱ. Nor from the Carthaginians^j; for the account of Ammianus^k, that "when first Carthage was beginning to expand itself far and wide, the Punic generals, by an unexpected inroad, subdued the hundred-gated Thebes," is merely a mistaken gloss on a statement of Diodorus, that "Hanno took Hekatompylos by siege;" a city, according to Diodorus himself^m, "in the desert of Libya." Nor was it from the Scythiansⁿ; for Herodotus, who alone speaks of their maraudings and who manifestly exaggerates them, expressly says, that Psammetichus induced the Scythians by presents not to enter Egypt^o; and a wandering predatory horde does not besiege or take strongly-fortified towns. There remain then only the Assyrians. Four successive Assyrian Monarchs, Sargon, his son, grandson and great grandson, Sennacherib, Esarhaddon, Asshur-bani-pal, from B.C. 718 to about B.C. 657, conquered in Egypt^p. The hostility was first provoked by the encouragement given by Sabacho the Ethiopian (Sab'e^q, in the cuneiform inscriptions, S b k, in Egyptian), the So of Holy Scripture^r, to Hoshea to rebel against Shalmaneser^s. Sargon, who, according to his own statement, was the king who actually took Samaria^t, led three expeditions of his own against Egypt. In the first, Sargon defeated the Egyptian king in the battle of Raphia^u; in the second, in his seventh year, he boasts that Pharaoh became his tributary^x; in a third, which is placed three years later, Ethiopia submitted to him^y. A seal of Sabaco has been found at Koyunjik, which, as has been conjectured^z, was probably annexed to a treaty. The capture of Ashdod by the Tartan of Sargon, recorded by Isaiah^a, was probably in the second expedition, when Sargon deposed its king Azuri, substituting his brother Akhimit^b: the rebellion of Ashdod probably occasioned the third expedition, in which, as it seems, Isaiah's prophecy was fulfilled, that Egyptians and Ethiopians, young and old, should be carried captive by the king of Assyria. The king of Ashdod, Yaman, is related to have fled to Egypt, which was subject to Merukha or Meroe; and to have been delivered up by the king of Meroe who himself fled to some unnamed desert afar, a march of (it is conjectured) months^c. The king of Meroe, first, from times the most distant, became tributary. "His forefathers had not" in all that period "sent to the kings my ancestors to ask for peace and to acknowledge the power of Merodach." The fact, that his magnificent palace, "one of the few remains of external decoration," Layard says^d, "with which we are acquainted in Assyrian architecture," "seems" according to Mr Fergusson^e, "at first sight almost purely Egyptian," implies some lengthened residence in Egypt or some capture of Egyptian artists.

^a נָשִׂי, doubtless a Ninevite title, probably signifying "noble prince," from נָשִׂי, as Prof. Lee conjectured. Lee denies that it bears in Persian the meaning ascribed to it by Böhlen. Richardson renders tabdar, "an elevated window;" Vüllers notes, "in others it occurs not." Gesenius was satisfied with no explanation of those before him.
^f Ewald's theory. ^g iii. 10. ^h Vitringa, Grot. ⁱ iii. 9. ^j Heeren. ^k xvii. 4. ^l Excerpt. ex L. xxiv. T. ii. p. 565. ^m v. 18. T. i. p. 263.
ⁿ Gesenius Lit. Zeit. 1841. n. 1. ^o i. 105. ^p See Rawlinson Five Empires ii. 409-486.
^q Oppert, les rapports de l' Eg. et de l' Ass. p. 12. ^r סו. In the LXX, in different MSS. ^s Σαβδ, Σαβδ, Σαβδ, in the Complut. Σοῦδ, Vulg. Sua. Sir G. Wilkinson in Rawl. Herod. ^t 2 Kings xvii. 4. ^u Layard Nim. and Bab. p. 618, Rawl. Herod. i. 472, Five Empires ii. 406. ^v Rawl. Five Emp. ii. 414. ^w Rawl. Ib. pp. 415, 6.

Of Sennacherib, the son of Sargon, Josephus writes, "Berosus, the historian of the Chaldee affairs, mentions the king Sennacherib, and that he reigned over the Assyrians, and that he warred against all Asia and Egypt, saying as follows." The passage of Berosus itself is wanting, whether Josephus neglected to fill it in, or whether it has been subsequently lost; but neither Chaldee nor Egyptian writers record expeditions which were reverses; and although Berosus was a Babylonian, not an Assyrian, yet the document, which he used, must have been Assyrian. In the second expedition of Sennacherib, Rabshakeh, in his message to Hezekiah, says, Behold thou trustest upon the staff of this bruised reed, upon Egypt. The expression is remarkable. He does not speak of Egypt, as a power, weak, frail, failing, but, passively, as *crushed*ⁱ by another. It is the same word and image which he uses in his prophecy of our Lord, a bruised reed (kaneh ratsuts) shall He not break, i. e. He shall not break that which is already bruised. The word implies, then, that the king of Egypt had already received some decided blow before the second expedition of Sennacherib. The annals of Sennacherib's reign, still preserved in his inscriptions, break off in the eighth of his twenty-two years^k, and do not extend to the time of this second expedition against Hezekiah^l. Nor does Holy Scripture say, in what year this 2nd expedition took place. In this he defeated "the kings of Egypt and the king of Meroe at Altakou [Elteke] and Tamna [Timnatha]."

Sennacherib's son Esarhaddon appears for the time to have subdued Egypt and Ethiopia, and to have held them as kingdoms dependent on himself. "He acquired Egypt and the inner parts of Asia," is the brief statement of Abydenus^m: (i. e. of Berosus.) "He established" (his son relates) "twenty kings, satraps, governors in Egyptⁿ," among which can be recognised Necho, (the father of Psammetichus) king of Memphis and Sais; a king of Tanis, or Zoan (now Sân); Natho (or, according to another copy, Sept), Hanes, Sebennytus, Mendes, Bubastis, Siyout or Lycopolis, Chemmis, Tinis, and No. These were all subordinate kings; for so he entitles each separately in the list, although he sums up the whole, "These are the names of the Kings, Pechahs, Satraps who in Egypt obeyed my father who begat me." Tearcho or Taracho himself, "king of Egypt and Ethiopia^o," was in like way subject to Esarhaddon. The account of the revolt, which his son Asshur-bani-pal quelled, implies also a fixed settlement in Egypt. The 20 kings were involved in the rebellion through fear of Taracho, but there is notice of other servants of Esarhaddon who remained faithful and were maltreated by Taracho^p. Asshur-bani-pal says also, that he strengthened his former garrisons^q. One expedition of Esarhaddon (probably towards the close of his reign, since he does not mention it in his own annals which extend over eight years) is related by his son Asshur-bani-pal. "He defeated Tirhakali in the lower country, after which, proceeding Southwards, he took the city, where the Ethiopian held his court," and assumed the title, "king of the kings of Egypt and conqueror of Ethiopia." On another inscription in a palace built for his son, at Tarbisi, now Sherif-khan, he entitles himself "king of the kings of ^y Rawl. Ib. pp. 416, 7. ^z Rawl. Herod. i. 473 note 1. ^a xx. 1. ^b Inscription in Oppert, les rapports de l' Eg. &c. p. 18. ^c Ib. p. 19. ^d Ib. ^e Nin. and Bab. p. 130. ^f Palaces of Nineveh and Persepolis restored, p. 223, quoted by Layard Ib. Rawl. Her. i. 474. ^g Ant. x. 1. 4. ^h 2 Kings xviii. 21. ⁱ רָצַץ, "quassatum," Vulg. Gesenius says well, "It differs from רָצַץ in this, that רָצַץ signifies, 'broke, crushed,' without severance of the parts; רָצַץ signifies, 'broke asunder.'" ^j Rawl. Her. i. 478. ^k See Rawl. i. 479, note 1. ^l Inscr. in Oppert Rapports pp. 26, 27. ^m In Eus. Chron. Arm. P. 1, c. 9. ⁿ Inscr. in Opp. Ib. pp. 51, 53. ^o Ib. p. 58. ^p Ib. pp. 51, 62, 63. ^q Ib. p. 64. ^r Ib. pp. 53, 68. ^s Rawl. 5 Emp. ii. 474, 5. ^t Ib. 476. He also entitles himself, "king of Assyria, Babylon, Egypt, Meroe and Ethiopia." Oppert Sargonides, p. 53. Rawl. Ib. 484. ^u Inscript. Oppert Rapp. p. 41.

Egypt, Pathros, Ethiopia." We do not, however, find the addition, which appears to recur upon every conquest of a people not before conquered by Assyria, "which the kings, my fathers, had not subdued." This addition is so regular, that the absence of it, in itself, involves a strong probability of a previous conquest of the country.

The subdual apparently was complete. They revolted at the close of the reign of Esarhaddon (as his son Asshur-bani-pal relates) from fear of Tarach^o rather than from any wish of their own to regain independence. Asshur-bani-pal accordingly, after the defeat of Tarach^o, forgave and restored them². Even the second treacherous revolt was out of fear, lest Tarach^o shall return^a, upon the withdrawal of the Assyrian armies. This second revolt and perhaps a subsequent revolt of Urdamanie^b a stepson of Tarach^o, who succeeded him, Asshur-bani-pal seems to have subdued by his lieutenants^c, without any necessity of marching in person against them. Thebes was taken and retaken; but does not appear to have offered any resistance. Tarach^o, upon his defeat at Memphis, fled to it, and again abandoned it as he had Memphis, and the army of Asshur-bani-pal made a massacre in it^d. Once more it was taken, when it had been recovered by Urdamanie^e, and then, if the inscriptions are rightly decyphered, strange as it is, the carrying off of men and women from it is mentioned in the midst of that of "great horses and apes." "Silver, gold, metals, stones, treasures of his palace, dyed garments, berom and linen, great horses, men male and female, immense apes—they drew from the midst of the city, and brought as spoils to Nineveh the city of my dominion, and kissed my feet."

All of those kings having been conquerors of Egypt, the captivity of No might equally have taken place under any of them. All of them employed the policy, which Sargon apparently began, of transporting to a distance those whom they had conquered^f. Yet it is, in itself, more probable, that it was at the earlier than at the later date. It is most in harmony with the relation of Nahum to Isaiah that, in regard to the conquest of Thebes also, Nahum refers to the victory over Egypt and Ethiopia foretold by Isaiah, when Sargon's general, the Tartan, was besieging Ashdod. The object of Isaiah's prophecy was to undeceive Judah in regard to its reliance on Egypt and Ethiopia against Assyria, which was their continual bane, morally religiously nationally. But the prophecy goes beyond any mere defeat in battle, or capture of prisoners. It relates to conquest within Egypt itself. For Isaiah says, "the king of Assyria shall lead into captivity Egyptians and Ethiopians, young and old." They are not their choice young men^h, the flower of their army, but those of advanced age and those in their first youthⁱ, such as are taken captive, only when a population itself is taken captive, either in a marauding expedition, or in the capture of a city. The account of the captivity of No exactly corresponds with this. Nahum says nothing of its permanent subdual, only of the captivity of its inhabitants. But Esarhaddon apparently did not carry the Egyptians captive at all^k. Every fact given in the Inscriptions looks like a permanent settlement. The establishment of the 20 subordinate kings, in the whole length and breadth of Egypt, implies the continuance of the previous state of things, with the exception of that subordination.

No itself appears as one of the cities settled apparently under its native though tributary king^l.

In regard to the fulfilment of prophecy, they who assume as an axiom, or petitio principii, that there can be no prophecy of distant events, have overlooked, that while they think that, by assuming the later date, they bring Nahum's prophecy of the capture of Nineveh nearer to its accomplishment, they remove in the same degree Isaiah's prophecy of the captivity of Egyptians and Ethiopians, young and old, from its accomplishment. "Young and old" are not the prisoners of a field of battle; young and old of the Ethiopians would not be in a city of lower Egypt. If Isaiah's prophecy was not fulfilled under Sargon or Sennacherib, it must probably have waited for its fulfilment until this last subdual by Asshurbanipal. For the policy of Esarhaddon and also of Asshurbanipal, until repeated rebellions wore his patience, was of settlement, not of deportation. If too the prophecy of Nahum were brought down to the reign of Asshurbanipal, it would be the more stupendous. For the empire was more consolidated. Nahum tells the conqueror, flushed with his own successes and those of his father, that he had himself no more inherent power than the city whose people he had carried captive. Thebes too, like Nineveh, dwelt securely, conquering all, unreached by any ill, sea-girt, as it were, by the mighty river on which she rested. She too was strengthened with countless hosts of her own and of allied people. Yet she fell. Nineveh, the prophet tells her, was no mightier, in herself. Her river was no stronger defence than that sea of fresh water, the Nile; her tributaries would disperse or become her enemies. The Prophet holds up to her the vicissitudes of No-amon, as a mirror to herself. As each death is a renewed witness to man's mortality, so each marvellous reverse of temporal greatness is a witness to the precariousness of other human might. No then was an ensample to Nineveh, although its capture was by the armies of Nineveh. They had been, for centuries, two rivals for power. But the contrast had far more force, when the victory over Egypt was fresh, than after 61 years of alternate conquest and rebellion.

But, any how, the state of Nineveh and its empire, as pictured by Nahum, is inconsistent with any times of supposed weakness in the reign of its last king: the state of Judah, with reference to Assyria, corresponds with that under Sennacherib but with none below. They are these. Assyria was in its full unimpaired strength^m. She still blended those two characters so rarely combined, but actually united in her and subsequently in Babylon, of a great merchant and military people. She had, at once, the prosperity of peace and of war. Lying on a great line of ancient traffic, which bound together East and West, India with Phœnicia, and with Europe through Phœnicia, both East and West poured their treasures into the great capital, which lay as a centre between them, and stretched out its arms, alike to the Indian sea and the Mediterranean. Nahum can compare its merchants only to that which is countless by man, the locusts or the stars of heavenⁿ. But amid this prosperity of peace, war also was enriching her. Nineveh was still sending out its messengers (such as was Rabshakeh), the leviers of its tribute, the demanders of submission. It was still one vast ^f Ib. p. 58.

^g Ib.

^a Ib. p. 59.

^b p. 77.

^c Ib. 70. where he speaks of sapite-ya (שפית) "my judges" pp. 77, 78. In another inscription, however, Oppert observes that Asshurbanipal speaks, as if he had been there in person. pp. 73-76. It has been observed, long since, that the Assyrian monarchs speak at times of what was done by their generals as done by themselves.

This, however, scarcely appears here, where he says "I returned in safety to Nineveh." p. 76.

^d Ib. 66, 68.

^e Ib. p. 79. In p. 75 it is said that Urdamanie abandoned No and fled to Kipkip.

^f See on Am. i. 5. pp. 160, 1.

^g Is. xx. 4.

^h במורס

ⁱ נערים וקנים

^k Rawl. Ib. 474, 475.

^l Rawl. Ib. p. 485.

^m i. 12. ii. 12.

ⁿ iii. 16.

lion-lair, its lions still gathering in prey from the whole earth^o, still desolating, continually, unceasingly, in all directions^p, and now, specially, devising evil against God and His people^q. Upon that people its yoke already pressed, for God promises to break it off from them^r; the people was already afflicted, for God says to it, Though I have afflicted thee, I will afflict thee no more^s, viz. by this invader. The solemn feasts of Judah were hindered through the presence of ungodly invaders; Belial, the counsellor of evil spoken of under that name, already passing through her^t. War was around her, for he promises that one should publish peace upon her mountains^u. This was the foreground of the picture. This was the exact condition of things at Hezekiah's second invasion, just before the miraculous destruction of his army. Sennacherib's yoke was heavy; for he had exacted from Hezekiah three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold^v; Hezekiah had not  two thousand horsemen*; the great host^w of the Assyrians encircled Jerusalem. They summoned it to surrender on the terms, that they should pay a new tribute, and that Sennacherib, whenever it pleased him, should remove them to Assyria^x.

At no subsequent period were there any events corresponding to this description. Manasseh was carried captive to Babylon by Esarhaddon; but probably this was no formidable or resisted invasion, since the book of Kings passes it over altogether, the Chronicles mention only that the Assyrian generals took Manasseh prisoner in a thicket^a, accordingly not in Jerusalem, and carried him to Babylon. Probably, this took place, in the expedition of Esarhaddon to the West, when he settled in the cities of Samaria people of different nations, his captives^b. The capture of Manasseh was then, probably, a mere incident in the history. Since he was taken among the thickets, he had probably fled, as Zedekiah did afterwards, and was taken in his place of concealment. This was simply personal. No taking of towns is mentioned, no siege, no terror, no exaction of tribute, no carrying away into captivity, except of the single Manasseh. The grounds of his restoration are not mentioned. The Chronicles mention only the religious aspect of his captivity and his restoration, his sin and his repentance. But it seems probable that he was restored by Esarhaddon, upon the same system of policy, on which he planted subjects of his own in Samaria and the country around Zidon, built a new town to take the place of Zidon, and joined in the throne of Edom one, brought up in his own palace. For, when restored, Manasseh was set at full liberty to fortify Jerusalem^c, as Hezekiah had done, and to put "captains of war in all the cities of Judah." This looks as if he was sent back as a trusted tributary of Esarhaddon, and as a frontier-power against Egypt. At least, sixty years afterwards, we find Josiah, in the like relation of trust to Nebuchadnezzar, resisting the passage of Pharaoh-Necho. However, the human cause of his restoration must remain uncertain. Yet clearly, in their whole history, there is nothing to correspond to the state of Judæa, as described by Nahum.

A recent critic writes, "Nahum's prophecy must have been occasioned by an expedition of mighty enemies against Nineveh.—The whole prophecy is grounded on the certain danger, to which Nineveh was given over; only the way in which this visible danger is conceived of, in connection with the eternal truths, is here the properly prophetic." Ewald does not explain how the danger, to which "Nineveh was given over" was certain, when it did not happen. The explanation must come to this. Nahum described a siege of Nineveh and its issue, as certain. The description in itself might be either of an actual siege, before the Prophet's eyes, or of one beheld in the Prophet's mind. But obviously no mere man, endowed with mere human knowledge, would have ventured to predict so certainly the fall of such a city as Nineveh, unless it was "given over to certain danger." But according to the axiom received in Ewald's school, Nahum, equally with all other men, could have had only human prescience. Therefore Nahum, prophesying the issue so confidently, must have prophesied when Nineveh was so "given over." The a priori axiom of the school rules its criticism. Meanwhile the admission is incidentally made, that a prophecy so certain, had it related to distant events, was what no man, with mere human knowledge, would venture upon. Ewald accordingly thinks that the prophecy was occasioned by a siege of Phraortes; which siege Nahum expected to be successful; which however failed, so that Nahum was mistaken, although the overthrow which he foretold came to pass afterwards! The siege, however, of Nineveh by Phraortes is a mere romance. Herodotus, who alone attributes to Phraortes a war with Assyria, has no hint, that he even approached to Nineveh. He simply relates that Phraortes "subdued Asia, going from one nation to another, until, leading an army against the Assyrians, he perished himself, in the 22nd year of his reign, and the greater part of his army." It is not necessary to consider the non-natural expositions, by which the simple descriptions of Nahum were distorted into conformity with this theory, which has no one fact to support it. Herodotus even dwells on the good condition of the Assyrian affairs, although isolated from their revolted allies, and seemingly represents the victory as an easy one. And, according to Herodotus, whose account is the only one we have, Phraortes (even if he ever fought with the Ninevites, and Herodotus' account is not merely the recasting of the history of another Median Frawartish who, according to the Behistun Inscription, claimed the throne of Media against Darius, and perished in battle with him^e) had only an unorganised army. Herodotus says of Cyaxares, his son, "He is said to have been more warlike far than his forefathers, and he first distributed Asiatics into distinct bands, and separated the spearmen and archers and horsemen from one another, whereas, before, everything had alike mixed into one confused mass." Such an undisciplined horde could have been no formidable enemy for a nation, whom the monuments and their history exhibit as so warlike and so skilled in war as the Assyrians.

^o ii. 12, 13. ^p iii. 19. ^q i. 9, 11. ^r i. 13. ^s i. 12. ^t i. 15. ^u 2 Kings xviii. 14. ^v Ib. 23. ^w Ib. 17. ^x Ib. 31, 32. ^a 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11. The uniform meaning of לָכַד is "look, took prisoner;" of חֲרָמִים, "thorns;" the singular only, חֶרֶם, in one of the two places in Job, is "a hook," in the other it is a "thorn." לָכַד, which occurs 120 times in

Another critic^f, then, seeing the untenableness of this theory, ventures (as he never hesitated at any paradox) to place the prophet Nahum, as an eye-witness of the first siege of Cyaxares.

Herodotus states that Cyaxares, the son of Phraortes, twice besieged Nineveh. First, immediately after his father's death, to avenge it^g; the second, after the end of the Scythian troubles, when he took it^h. The capture of Nineveh was in the first year of Nabopolassar B. C. 625. The accession of Cyaxares, according to Herodotus, was B. C. 633. Eight years then only elapsed between his first siege and its capture, and, if it be true, that the siege lasted two years, there was an interval of six years only. But, at this time, the destruction the O. T., never means "dragged captive." The meaning ascribed to the words, "bound him with chains," is wholly conjectural. לָכַד does not mean "bound," nor חֲרָמִים "chains."

^b Ezr. iv. 2, 9, 10.

^c 2 Chron. xxxiii. 14.

^d Ewald, Proph. i. 349.

^e In Rawl. i. 409. ^f i. 103.

^g Hitzig, followed by Davidson, iii. 293. ^h i. 106.

of Nineveh was no longer a subject of joy to Judah. Since the captivity of Manasseh, Judah had had nothing to fear from Assyria; nor do we know of any oppression from it. Holy Scripture mentions none. The Assyrian monuments speak of expeditions against Egypt; but there was no temptation to harass Judah, which stood in the relation of a faithful tributary and an outwork against Egypt, and which, when Nineveh fell, remained in the same relation to its conquerors, into whose suzerainty it passed, together with the other dependencies of Assyria. The relation of Josiah to Babylon was the continuation of that of Manasseh to Esarhaddon.

The motive of this theory is explained by the words, "With a confidence, which leaves room for no doubt, Nahum expects a siege and an ultimate destruction of Nineveh. The security of his tone, nay that he ventures at all to hope so enormous a revolution of the existing state of things, must find its explanation in the circumstances of the time, out of the then condition of the world; but not till Cyaxares reigned in Media, did things assume an aspect, corresponding to this confidence." It is well that this writer doffs the courteous language, as to the "hopes," "expectations," "inferences from God's justice," and brings the question to the issue, "there is such absolute certainty of tone," that Nahum must have had either a Divine or a human knowledge. He acknowledges the untenableness of any theory which would account for the prophecy of Nahum on any human knowledge, before Cyaxares was marching against the gates of Nineveh. Would human knowledge have sufficed then? Certainly, from such accounts as we have, Nineveh might still have stood against Cyaxares and its own rebel and traitorous general, but for an unforeseen event which man could not bring about, the swelling of its river.

But, as usual, unbelief fixes itself upon that which is minutest, ignores what is greatest. There are, in Nahum, three remarkable predictions. 1) The sudden destruction of Sennacherib's army and his own remarkable death in the house of his god. 2) The certain, inevitable, capture of Nineveh, and that, not by capitulation or famine, not even by the siege or assault, which is painted so vividly, but the river, which was its protection, becoming the cause of its destruction. 3) Its utter desolation, when captured. The first, men assume to have been the description of events past; the second, the siege, they assume to have been present; and that, when human wisdom could foresee its issue; the third, they generalise. The first is beyond the reach of proof now. It was a witness of the Providence and just judgement of God, to those days, not to our's. A brief survey of the history of Assyrian Empire will shew, that the second and third predictions were beyond human knowledge.

The Assyrian Empire dated probably from the ninth century before Christ. Such, it has been pointed out, is the concurrent result of the statements of Berosus and Herodotus. Moses, according to the simplest meaning of his words, spake of the foundation of Nineveh as contemporary with that of Babylon. ¹*The beginning of the kingdom of Nimrod, he relates, was Babel and Erech, and Accad and Calneh, in the land of Shinar. Out of that land went forth Asshur, and builded Nineveh.* Oppressed probably and driven forth by Nimrod, Asshur and his Semitic descendants went forth from the plain of Shinar, the Babylonia of after-ages. Had Moses intended to express (what some have thought), that Nimrod "went forth out of that land to Assyria," he would doubtless have used the ordinary style of connected narrative; "^kAnd he went forth thence." He would probably also have avoided ambiguity, by expressing that Nimrod "went forth to Asshur," using a form, which he employs a little later. As it is, Moses has used a mode of speech, by which, in Hebrew, a parenthetic statement would be made, and he has not used the form, which occurs in every line of Hebrew narrative to express a continued history. No one indeed would have doubted that such was the meaning, but that they did not see, how the mention of Asshur, a son of Shem, came to be anticipated in this account of the children of Ham. This is no ground for abandoning the simple construction of the Hebrew. It is but the history, so often repeated in the changes of the world, that the kingdom of Nimrod was founded on the expulsion of the former inhabitants. Nimrod began his kingdom; "Asshur went forth."

It is most probable, from this same brief notice, that Nineveh was, from the first, that aggregate of cities, which it afterwards was. Moses says, "^mAnd he builded Nineveh and Rehoboth-Ir and Calach and Resen, between Nineveh and Calach; this is that great cityⁿ." This cannot be understood as said exclusively of Nineveh; since Nineveh was mentioned first in the list of cities, and the mention of the three others had intervened; and, in the second place where it is named, it is only spoken of indirectly and subordinately; it is hardly likely to be said of Resen, of whose unusual size nothing is elsewhere related. It seems more probable, that it is said of the aggregate of cities, that they formed together one great city, the very characteristic of Nineveh, as spoken of in Jonah.

Nineveh itself lay on the Eastern side of the Tigris, opposite to the present Mosul. In later times, among the Syrian writers, Asshur becomes the name for the country, distinct from Mesopotamia and Babylonia^o, from which it was separated by the Tigris, and bounded on the North by Mount Niphates.

This distinction, however, does not occur until after the extinction of the Assyrian empire. On the contrary, in Genesis, Asshur, in one place, is spoken of as West^p of the Hiddekel or Tigris, so that it must at that time have comprised Mesopotamia, if not all on this side of the Tigris, i. e. Babylonia. In another place, it is the great border-state of Arabia on the one side, as was Egypt on the other. The sons of Ishmael, Moses relates^q, dwelt from Havilah unto Shur that is before Egypt, as thou goest to Assyria; i. e. they dwelt on the great caravan-route across the Arabian desert from Egypt to Babylonia. Yet Moses mentions, not Babylon, but Asshur. In Balaam's prophecy^r, Asshur stands for the great Empire, whose seat was at one time at Nineveh, at another at Babylon, which should, centuries afterwards, carry Israel captive.

Without entering into the intricacies of Assyrian or Babylonian history further than is necessary for the immediate object, it seems probable, that the one or other of the sovereigns of these nations had an ascendancy over the others, according to his personal character and military energy. Thus, in the time of Abraham, Chedorlaomer king of Elam, in his xiv. 23.) The Philistines too were obviously facing Saul who was at Gilgal (1 Sam. xiii. 12). In Ezek. xxxix. 11, the words "eastward of the sea," express that the carcasses were outside the promised land. In Gen. iv. 16, Cain was not one to linger over-against the lost Eden. Probably he went Eastward, because then too the stream of population went Westward. In Isaiah vii. 20 the king of Assyria is spoken of as beyond the river, i. e. the Euphrates. ^q Gen. xxv. 18. ^r Num. xxiv. 22.

¹ Gen. x. 10, 11. ^k כִּן הָאֵרָץ שֶׁנָּא נִמְרוֹד נִבְנָא. ^l Gen. xxv. 18. ^m Gen. x. 11, 12. ⁿ העיר הגדולה. ^o Bar-Hebr. in Tuch de Nino urbe pp. 9, 10. ^p Gen. ii. 14. There is no reason, with Kell, to disturb the rendering. מִן הָאֵרָץ is most naturally rendered Eastward, in the other three places; Michmash was E.S.E. of Bethaven (1 Sam. xiii. 5), but was not over-against it, being some four miles from it, in a valley. The battle which began at Michmash, passed over to Bethaven. (1 Sam.

expedition against the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah, took with him, as subordinate allies, the kings of Shinar, (or Babylon) and Ellasar, as well as Tidal king of nations, a king probably of Nomadic tribes. The expedition was to avenge the rebellion of the petty kings in the valley of Siddim against Chedorlaomer, after they had been for twelve years tributary. But, although the expedition closed with the attack on the five kings of Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar, its extent on the East side of the Jordan from Ashteroth Karnaim in Basan to Elparan (perhaps Elath on the Red Sea), and the defeat of the giant tribes, the Rephaim, Zuzim, Emim, Horites, the Amalekites and the Amorites in their several abodes, seems to imply one of those larger combinations against the aggressions of the East, which we meet with in later times^a. It was no insulated conflict which spread over nearly three degrees of latitude. But it was the king of Elam, not the king of Babylon or of Asshur, who led this expedition; and those other kings, according to the analogy of the expeditions of Eastern monarchs, were probably dependent on him. It has been observed that the inscriptions of a monarch whose name partly coincides with that of Chedorlaomer, viz. Kudurmapula, or Kudurmapula, shew traces of a Persian influence on the Chaldee characters; but cuneiform decyphers having desponded of identifying those monarchs^b, Chedorlaomer appears as yet only so far connected with Babylon, that its king was a tributary sovereign to him or a vice-king^c like those of later times, of whom Sennacherib boasts, "Are not my princes altogether kings?"

Assyria, at this time, is not mentioned, and so, since we know of its existence at an earlier period, it probably was independent. Lying far to the North of any of the nations here mentioned, it, from whatever cause or however it may have been engaged; took no share in the war. Subsequently also, down to a date almost contemporary with the Exodus, it has been observed that the name of Asshur does not appear on the Babylonian inscriptions, nor does it swell the titles of the king of Babylon^d. A little later than the Exodus, however, in the beginning of the 14th century B. C., Asshur and Egypt were already disputing the country which lay between them. The account is Egyptian, and so, of course, only relates the successes of Egypt. Thothmes III, in his fortieth year, according to Mr Birch, received tribute from a king of Nineveh^e. In another monument of the same monarch, where the line, following on the name Nineveh, is lost, Thothmes says that he "erected his tablet in Naharaina (Mesopotamia) for the extension of the frontiers of Kami" [Egypt]. Amenophis III, in the same century, represented Asiatic captives^f, with the names of Patana [Padan-Aram], Asuria, Karukamishi [Carchemish]. "On another column are Saenkar (Shinar), Naharaina, and the Khita (Hittites)." The mention of these contiguous nations strengthens the impression that the details of the interpretation are accurate. All these inscriptions imply that Assyria was independent of Babylon. In one, it is a co-ordinate power: in the two others, it is a state which had measured its strength with Egypt, under one of its greatest conquerors, though, according to the Egyptian account, it had been worsted.

^a Sir H. Rawl. in Rawl. Herod. i. 446.

^b "On the one hand the general resemblance of Kudurmapula's legends to those of the ordinary Chaldaean monarchs is unquestionable; on the other hand, it is remarkable that there are peculiarities in the forms of the letters, and even in the elements composing the names upon his bricks which favour his connection with Elam." Sir H. Rawlinson in Rawl. Herod. i. 436.

^c Rawl. Five Empires i. 206.

Another account, which has been thought to be the first instance of the extension of Babylonian authority so far northward, seems to me rather to imply the ancient self-government of Assyria. "A record of Tiglathpileser I. declares him to have rebuilt a temple in the city of Asshur, which had been taken down 60 years previously, after it had lasted for 641 years from the date of its first foundation by Shamas-Iva, son of Ismi-Dagon." Sir H. Rawlinson thinks that it is probable (although only probable)^g, that this Ismi-Dagon is a king, whose name occurs in the brick-legends of Lower Babylonia. Yet the Ismi-Dagon of the bricks does not bear the title of king of Babylon, but of king of Niffer only^h: "his son," it is noticed, "does not take the title of king; but of governor of Hurⁱ." The name Shamas-Iva nowhere occurs in connection with Babylonia, but it does recur, at a later period, as the name of an Assyrian Monarch^j. Since the names of the Eastern kings so often continue on in the same kingdom, the recurrence of that name, at a later period, makes it even probable, that Shamas-Iva was a native king. There is absolutely nothing to connect his father Ismi-Dagon with the Ismi-Dagon king of Niffer, beyond the name itself, which, being Semitic, may just as well have belonged to a native king of Nineveh as to a king of Lower Babylonia. Nay, there is nothing to shew that Ismi-Dagon was not an Assyrian Monarch who reigned at Niffer; for the name of his father is still unknown; there is no evidence that his father was ever a king, or, if a king, where he reigned. It seems to me in the last degree precarious to assume, without further evidence, the identity of the two kings. It has, further, yet to be shewn that Lower Babylonia had, at that time, an empire, as distinct from its own local sovereignty. We know from Holy Scripture of Nimrod's kingdom in Shinar, a province distinct from Elymais, Mesopotamia, Assyria, and probably Chaldaea. In Abraham's time, 1900 B. C., we find again a king of Shinar. Shinar again, it is supposed, appears in Egyptian inscriptions, in the 14th century, B. C.^k; and, if so, still distinct from Mesopotamia and Assyria. But all this implies a distinct kingdom, not an empire.

Again, were it ever so true, that Shamas-Iva was a son of a king in Lower Babylonia, that he built a temple in Kilch-Shergat, as being its king, and that he was king; as placed there by Ismi-Dagon, this would be no proof of the continual dependence of Assyria upon Babylonia. England did not continue a dependency of France, because conquered by William of Normandy. How was Alexander's empire broken at once! Spain under Charles the V. was under one sovereignty with Austria; Spain with France had, even of late, alike Bourbon kings. A name would, at most, shew an accidental, not a permanent, connection.

But there is, at present, no evidence implying a continued dependence of Assyria upon Babylon. Two facts only have been alleged; 1) that the cuneiform writing of inscriptions at Kilch-Shergat, 40 miles South of Nineveh, has a Babylonian character; 2) that, on those bricks, four names have been found of inferior Satraps.

But 1) the Babylonian character of the inscriptions would show a dependence of civilisation, not of empire. Arts flourished early at Babylon, and so the graven character of the Inscriptions too may have been carried to the rougher and ^g Ib. p. 447.

^h From statistical Tablet of Karnak, quoted by Layard Nin. and Bab. c. xxvi. p. 631, Birch in Archaeologia Vol. xxxv. pp. 116-66. ⁱ Ib. p. 630, note 1.

^j Ib. ^k Sir H. Rawlinson from the Shergat Cylinders in Rawl. Herod. Ess. vi. i. 433. note 1. ^l Ib. p. 456. note 5. ^m Ib. p. 437. ⁿ Ib. § 7.

^o Sir H. Rawlins., Journ. As. Soc. xvi. P. 1. Ann. Rep. p. xii. sq. Rawl. Herod. i. p. 466. ^p Mr. Birch in Layard Nin. and Bab. p. 631.

warlike North. The garment, worked at Babylon, was, in the 15th century B. C., exported as far as Palestine, and was, for its beauty, the object of Achan's covetousness^b.

2) In regard to the satraps whose names are found on the bricks of Kileh-Shergat, it does not appear, that they were tributary to Babylon at all; they may, as far as it appears, have been simply inferior officers of the Assyrian empire. Any how, the utmost which such a relation to Babylon would evince, if ever so well established, would be a temporary dependence of Kileh-Shergat itself, not of Nineveh or the Assyrian kingdom. Further, the evidence of the duration of the dependency would be as limited at its extent. Four satraps would be no evidence as to this period of 700 years, only a century less than has elapsed since the Norman conquest. The early existence of an Assyrian kingdom has been confirmed by recent cuneiform discoveries, which give the names of 8 Assyrian kings, the earliest of whom is supposed to have reigned about 3½ centuries before the commencement of the Assyrian Empireⁱ.

The "empire," Herodotus says^k, "Assyria held in Upper Asia for 520 years;" Berosus^l, "for 526 years." The Cuneiform Inscriptions give much the same result. Tiglath-pileser^m, who gives five years' annals of his own victories, mentions his grandfather's grandfather, the 4th king before him, as the king who "first organised the country of Assyria," who "established the troops of Assyria in authority." The expression, "established in authority," if it may be pressed, relates to foreign conquest. If this Tiglathpileser be the same whom Sennacherib, in the 10th year of his own reign, mentions as having lost his gods to Merodach-ad-akhi, king of Mesopotamia, 418 years beforeⁿ, then, since Sennacherib ascended the throne about 703 B.C.^o, we should have B.C. 1112 for the latter part of the reign of Tiglath-pileser I., and counting this and the six preceding reigns at 20 years each^p, should have about 1252 B.C. for the beginning of the Assyrian empire. It has been calculated that if the 526 years, assigned by Berosus to his 45 Assyrian kings, are (as Polyhistor^q states Berosus to have meant) to be dated back from the accession of Pul who took tribute from Menahem, and so from between B.C. 770 and B.C. 760, they carry back the beginning of the dynasty to about 1290 B.C. If they be counted, (as is perhaps more probable) from the end of the reign of Pul^r, i.e. probably B.C. 747, "the era of Nabonassar," the Empire would commence about 1273 B.C. Herodotus, it has been shewn^s, had much the same date in his mind, when he assigned 520 years to the Assyrian empire in upper Asia, dating back from the revolt of the Medes. For he supposed this revolt to be 179 years anterior to the death of Cyrus B.C. 529 (and so, B.C. 708) + a period of anarchy before the accession of Darius. Allowing 30 years for this period of anarchy, we have 738 B.C. + 520, i.e. 1258 B.C., for the date of the commencement of Assyrian empire according to Herodotus. Thus, the three testimonies would coincide in placing the beginning of that Empire any how between 1258 and 1273 B.C.

But this Empire started up full-grown. It was the concentration of energy and power, which had before existed.

Herodotus' expression is "rulers of Upper Asia." Tiglath-pileser attributes to his forefather, that he "organised the country," and "established the armies of Assyria in authority." The 2nd king of that list takes the title of "ruler over the people of Bel," i. e. Babylonia. The 4th boasts to have reduced "all the lands of the Magian world." Tiglath-pileser I. claims to have conquered large parts of Cappadocia, Syria from Tsukha to Carchemish, Media and Muzr. According to the inscription at Bavian^u, he sustained a reverse, and lost his gods to a king of Mesopotamia, which gods were recovered by Sennacherib from Babylon. Yet this exception the more proves that conquest was the rule. For, had there been subsequent successful invasions of Assyria by Babylonia, the spoils of the 5th century backward would not have been alone recovered or recorded. If the decyphering of the Inscriptions is to be trusted, Nineveh was the capital, even in the days of Tiglath-pileser I. For Sennacherib brought the gods back, it is said, and put them in their places, i. e. probably where he himself reigned, at Nineveh. Thence then they were taken in the reign of Tiglath-pileser. Nineveh then was his capital also.

Of an earlier portion we have as yet but incidental notices; yet the might of Assyria is attested by the presence of Assyrian names in the Egyptian dynastic lists, whether the dynasties were themselves Assyrian, or whether the names came in through matrimonial alliances between two great nations^x.

With few exceptions, as far as appears from their own annals (and these are in the later times confirmed by Holy Scripture), the Assyrian Empire was, almost whenever we hear of it, one long series of victory and rapine. It is an exception, if any monarch is peaceful, and content to "repair the buildings" in his residence, "leaving no evidence of conquest or greatness." Tiglath-Nin, father of the warlike Asshur-i-danipal or Sardanapalus, is mentioned only in his son's monument, "among his warlike ancestors, who had carried their arms into the Armenian mountains, and there set up stelæ to commemorate their conquests." Civil wars there were, and revolutions. Conquerors and dynasties came to an untimely end; there was parricide, fratricide; but the tide of war and conquest rolled on. The restless warriors gave no rest. Sardanapalus terms himself, "the conqueror from the upper passage of the Tigris to Lebanon and the great sea, who all countries, from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof, has reduced under his authority." His son, Shalmanubar or Shalmaneser, in his thirty-five years of reign led, in person twenty-three military expeditions. 20,000, 16,000, are the numbers of his enemies left dead upon a field of battle with Benhadad and Hazael^b. Cappadocia, Pontus, Armenia, Media, Babylonia, Syria, Phœnicia^c, 15 degrees of longitude and 10 of latitude, save where the desert or the sea gave him nothing to conquer, were the range of his repeated expeditions. He circled round Judæa. He thrice defeated Benhadad with his allies (on several occasions, twelve kings of the Hittites). His own army exceeded on occasions 100,000 fighting men. Twice he defeated Hazael. Israel under Jehu, Tyre, Sidon, 24 kings in Pontus, kings of the Hittites, of Chaldæa, 27 kings of Persia

^b Josh. vii. 21. ⁱ Rawl. 5 Emp. ii. 291; comp. i. 212. ^k i. 95. ^l Fragm. 11.

^m Rawl. Her. i. 457. ⁿ Dr. Hincks, from Bavian Inscription in Layard Nin. and Bab. pp. 212, 3.

^o His annals mention that, having expelled Merodach-baladan in the first year of his reign, he set up Belib in Babylôn (Hincks in Layard Bab. and Nin. 140, 1); but, in the Canon of Ptolemy, the date of Belib is B.C. 703. ^p Rawl. gives this as the average of Assyrian reigns (Five Empires ii. 93.). The whole calculation is his. An interregnum of 20 years, carries the whole back to the date of Berosus 1273 B.C.

^q In Euseb. Chron. Arm. pp. 40, 1. ^r 2 Kings xv. 19. ^s Rawl. Herod. i. 407.

^t Rawl. i. 458.

^u Layard N. and B. 207-12. 614. Rawl. 459.

^x Rawlinson's conjecture. Five Emp. ii. 335. The period is one of "obscurity," as Rawl. says, but that very obscurity forbids our deciding, as he does, that it was one of "extraordinary weakness and depression."

^y Asshur-adan-akhi and three following kings. See Rawl. Her. i. 460. The accession of Asshur-adan-akhi was placed by some, referred to by Rawl. Ib., at B.C. 1050, by himself, at B. C. 950, Five Emp. ii. 291. ^z Sir H. Rawl. Ib. in Rawl. Her. i. 460, n. 7.

^a in Layard N. and B. pp. 361, 2. Rawl. p. 461. ^b Rawl. Ib. 464, 5. ^c Nimrud Obelisk translated by Dr. Hincks, in Dubl. Univ. Mag. Oct. 1853. pp. 422, 5, 6. Rawl. Her. i. 462.

are among his tributaries^d; "the shooting of his arrows struck terror," he says, "as far as the sea" [Indian Ocean]; "he put up his arrows in their quiver at the sea of the setting sun." His son Shamasisa apparently subdued Babylonia, and in the West conquered tribes near Mount Taurus, on the North the countries bordering on Armenia to the South and East, the Medes beyond Mount Zagros, and "the Zimri^f in upper Luristan." His son Ivalush III. or IV. received undisturbed tribute from the kingdoms which his fathers conquered, and ascribes to his god Asshur the grant of "the kingdom of Babylon to his son." Thus "Assyria with one hand grasped Babylonia; with the other Philistia and Edom; she held Media Proper, S. Armenia, possessed all Upper Syria, including Commagene and Amanus, bore sway over all the whole Syrian coast from Issus to Gaza, and from the coast to the desert." Tiglath-pileser II. and Shalmaneser are known to us as conquerors from Holy Scripture^h. Tiglath-pileser, we are told from the inscriptions, warred and conquered in Upper Mesopotamia, Armenia, Media, Babylonia, drove into exile a Babylonian prince, destroyed Damascus, took tribute from a Hiram king of Tyre, and from a Queen of the Arabs^h. And so it continued, until nearly the close of the Monarchy.

The new dynasty which began with Sargon were even greater conquerors than their predecessors. Sargon, in a reign of seventeen or nineteen years, defeated the king of Elam, conquered in Iatbour beyond Elam, reigned from Ras, a dependency on Elam, over Poukoud (Pekod), Phœnicia, Syria, &c. to the river of Egypt, in the far Media to the rising sun, in Scythia, Albania, Parthia, Van, Armenia, Colchis, Tubal to the Moschi: he placed his lieutenants as governors over these countries, and imposed tribute upon them, as upon Assyrians; he, probably, placed Merodach-Baladan on the throne of Babylon, and after 12 years displaced him; he reduced all Chaldæa under his rule; he defeated "Sebech (i. e., probably, So), Sultan of Egypt, so that he was heard of no more;" he received tribute from the Pharaoh of Egypt, from a Queen of Arabia and from Himyar the Sabæan. To him first the king of Meroë paid tribute. He finally captured Samaria: he took Gaza, Kharkar, Arpad and Damascus, Ashdod (which it cost Psammetichus 29 years to reconquer), and Tyre, (which resisted Nebuchadnezzar for 13 years). He added to the Satrapy of Parthia, placed a Satrap or Lieutenant over Commagene and Samaria, Kharkar, Tel-Garimmi, Gamgoum, Ashdod, and a king of his own choice over Albania. He seized 55 walled cities in Armenia, 11, which were held to be "inaccessible fortresses;" and 62 great cities in Commagene; 34 in Media; he laid tribute on the "king of the country of rivers." He removed whole populations at his will; from Samaria, he carried captive its inhabitants, 27,800, and placed them in "cities of the Medesⁱ;" he removed those of Commagene to Elam; all the great men of the Tibareni, and the inhabitants of unknown cities, to Assyria; Cammanians, whom he had conquered, to Tel-Garimmi, a capital which he rebuilt; others whom he had vanquished in the East he placed in Ashdod: again he placed "Assyrians devoted to his empire" among the Tibareni; inhabitants of cities unknown to us, in Damascus; Chaldæans in Commagene^k. "The Comukha were removed from the extreme North to Susiana, and Chaldæans were brought from the extreme South to supply their place." "Seven kings of Iatnan, seven days' voyage off in the Western seas, whose names were unknown to the kings" his "fathers, hearing of" his "deeds, came before" him to Babylon with "presents;" as did the king of Asmoun, who dwelt in the midst of the Eastern sea (the Persian gulf). He placed his statue, "writing on it the glory of Asshur his master," in the capital of Van, in Kikisim (Circesium) as also in Cyprus, which he does not name, but where it has been discovered in this century^m. The Moschian king, with his 3000 towns, who had never submitted to the kings his predecessors, sent his submission and tribute to him.

Sennacherib, the son of Sargon, says of himself, "Assour, the great lord, has conferred on me sovereignty over the peoples; he has extended my dominion over all those who dwell in the world. From the upper Ocean of the setting sun to the lower Ocean of the rising sun, I reduced under my power all who carried aloft their head." He defeated Merodach-Baladan and the king of Elam togetherⁿ; took in one expedition, "79 great strong cities of the Chaldæans and 820 small towns;" he took prisoners by hundreds of thousands; 200,150 in his first expedition against Hezekiah, from 44 great walled cities which he took and little villages innumerable^o; 208,000 from the Nabathæans and Hagarenes^p: he employed on his great buildings 360,000 men, gathered from Chaldæa and Aramæa, from Cilicia and Armenia^q; he conquered populations in the North, which "had of old not submitted to the kings my brothers^r," annexed them to the prefecture of Arrapachitis and set up his image^r; he received tribute from the governor of Khararat^r, wasted the 2 residence-cities, 34 smaller cities of Ispahara king of Albania, joining a part of the territory to Assyria, and calling its city, Ilhinzas, the city of Sennacherib^s; he reduced countries of "Media, whose names the kings his brothers had not heard^t;" he set a king, Toubaal, over the great and little Sidon, Sarepta, Achzib, Acco, Betzitti, Mahalliba; the kings of Moab, Edom, Bet-Amman, Avvad, Ashdod, submitted to him^t; he defeated an "innumerable host" of Egyptians at Altakou^u [Elteke]; sons of the king of Egypt fell into his hands; he captured Ascalon, Bene-Barak, Joppa, Hazor^v; put back at Angarron [Migron] the expelled king Padi, who had been surrendered to Hezekiah^w; gave portions of the territory of Hezekiah to the kings of Ashdod, Migron, Gaza^x; he drove Merodach-baladan again to Elam, captured his brothers, wasted his cities, and placed his own eldest son, Assur-nadin, on the throne of Babylon^y; took seven impregnable cities of the Tukkharri, placed like birds' nests on the mountains of Nipour^z; conquered the king of Oukkou in Dayi, among mountains which none of his ancestors had penetrated; took Oukkou and 33 other cities^z; attacked Elam, "crossing" the Persian gulf "in Syrian vessels^z;" capturing the men, and destroying the cities^z; in another campaign, he garrisoned, with prisoner-warriors of his own, cities in Elam which his father had lost^c; destroyed 34 large cities and others innumerable of Elam^c. His account of his reign closes with a great defeat of Elam, whom the escaped Souzoub had hired with the treasures of the temples of Babylon, and of 17 rebel tribes or cities, at Khalouli, and their entire subdual^d. He repelled some Greeks

^d Dr. Hincks, Athenæum N. 1476. p. 174. Rawl. Ib. Five Emp. ii. 360. ^e Rawl. Herod. i. 466. Five Emp. ii. 374. ^f Jer. xxv. 25. ^g Rawl. Her. i. 467, Five Empires ii. 380. ^h Rawl. Her. i. 470. ⁱ 2 Kings xvii. 6, xviii. 11.

^k The above account of Sargon is taken from Oppert's Inscriptions Assyriennes des Sargonides, p. 19—40, extracted from the Annales de Philosophie Chrétienne T. vi. (5^e série). Oppert, p. 8, gives as the meaning of his name, "actual king," "roi de fait." Sargon himself, if Oppert has translated him rightly, gives as its meaning, statement is not in Oppert's Inscriptions.

"righteous prince," (𐎶𐎵𐎶) p. 38.

^m Now in the Royal Museum at Berlin. Layard Bab. p. 618.

ⁿ Oppert Sarg. p. 41.

^o Ib. p. 45.

^p Rawl. Her. i. 476.

^q p. 44.

^r pp. 44, 5.

^s pp. 47, 8.

^t Ib. p. 45.

^u Opp. pp. 42, 3.

^v p. 45.

^w p. 48.

^x p. 45.

^y p. 48.

^z Rawl. 5 Emp. ii. 423. This

^c Layard Bab. p. 141.

^d pp. 43, 4.

^e p. 47.

^f pp. 49-51.

in Cilicia, set up his image there, with a record of his deeds, and built Tarsus, on the model of Babylon^e. It has been noticed, what a "keen appreciation of the merits of a locality"^f his selection of its site evinced. The destruction of his army of 185,000 men, at the word of God, might well deter him from again challenging the Almighty; but we have seen, in the wars of Napoleon I., that such losses do not break the power of an empire. It was no vain boast of Sennacherib, that he had gathered all the earth, and carried captive the gods of the nations. The boast was true; the application alone was impious. God owned in him the instrument which He had formed, the rod of His anger. He condemned him, only because the axe boasted itself against Him Who hewed therewith. Victorious, except when he fought against God, and employed by God to tread down the people as the mire of the streets^g, Sennacherib was cut off as God foretold, but left his kingdom to a victorious son.

His son, Esarhaddon, takes titles, yet more lofty than those of Sennacherib. He calls himself, "^h King of Assyria, Vicar of Babylon, King of the Sumirs and Accads, King of Egypt Meroe and Cush, who reigned from sunrise to sun-set, unequalled in the imposition of tributes." In Armenia, he killed Adrammelechⁱ, his half-brother, one of his father's murderers, who fled to Armenia, probably to dispute thence his father's crown. In every direction he carried his conquests further than his powerful father^k. He speaks of conquests in the far Media, "^l where none of the kings, our fathers," had conquered, whose kings bore well-known Persian names^m.

They and their subjects were carried off to Assyria. Others, who "ⁿ had not conspired against the kings my fathers and the land of Assyria, and whose territories my fathers had not conquered," submitted voluntarily in terror, paid tribute and received Assyrian governors. In the West, he pursued by sea a king of Sidon who rebelled, divided the Syrians in strange countries, and placed mountaineers, whom his bow had subdued in the East, with a governor, in a castle of Esarhaddon which he built in Syria. He warred successfully in Cilicia, Khou-bousna, and destroyed 10 large cities of the Tibareni and carried their people captive; trod down the country of Masnaki, transported rebels of Van; he established on the Southern shore that son of Merodach-baladan who submitted to him, removing the brother who trusted in Elam, himself reigned in Babylon^o, whither he carried Manasseh^p. He reconquered "the city of Adoumou (Edom), (the city of the power of the Arabs,) which Sennacherib had conquered, and carried off its people to Assyria;" he named as Queen of the Arabs, Tabouya, born in his palace; put the son of Hazael on his father's throne. An expedition to "^q a far country to the bounds of the earth beyond the desert," Bazi (Buz), reached by traversing 140 farsakhs (?) of sandy desert, then 20 farsakhs (?) of fertile land and a stony region, Khazi (Uz), looks like an expedition across Arabia, and, if so, was unparalleled except by Nushirvan. Some of the other names are Arabic. Any how, it was a country, whither none of his predecessors had gone; he killed 8 kings, carried off their subjects and spoils. He conquered the Gomboulou in their marshes. Twelve kings on the coast of Syria whom he recounts by name, (Ba'lou king of Tyre, Manasseh king of Judah, and those of Edom, Maan, Gaza, Ascalon, Angarron, Byblos, Aradus, Ousimouroun, Bet-Ammon, Ashdod) and 10 kings of Yatnan in the sea (Cyprus),—Ægisthus (Ikistousi), King of Idalion (Idial), Pythagoras (Pitagoura) K. of Citium (Kitthim), Ki—, K. of Salamis (Silhimmi), Ittodagon ("Dagon is with him," Itoudagon), K. of Paphos (Pappa), Euryalus (Irieli), K. of Soli (Sillou), Damasou, K. of Curium (Kuri), Ounagousou, K. of Limenion (Limini), Roumizu, K. of Taniassus (Tamizzi), Damutsi of Amti-Khadasti, Puhali of Aphrodisium (Oupridissa)^r;—held their rule from him.

The names of the countries, from which he brought those whom he settled in Samaria, attest alike his strength and the then weakness of two of the nations, which afterwards concurred to overthrow his empire. The colonists, according to their own letters to Artaxerxes^s, comprehended, among others, Babylonians; Archevites i. e. inhabitants of Erech, mentioned in Genesis^t, as, together with Babel, part of the beginning of the kingdom of Nimrod; Susanchites, i. e. inhabitants of Susiana or Chusistan; Dehavites, Daans in Herodotus^u, one of the wandering Persian tribes, whose name (Taia) still exists^v; Elamites^w, or the dwellers on the Persian gulf, bordering on Susiana; Apharsites or the Persians in their original abode in Paraça, Paraic, now Farsistan. It seems also probable that the Apharsachites^x are those more known to us as Sacæ or Scythians, whom Esarhaddon says that he conquered^y; and that the Apharsachthites (with the same word Aphar prefixed) are the Sittaceni on the Caspian. The Dinaites and the Turphelites are as yet unidentified, unless the Tarpetes^b of the Palus Mæotis near the Sittaceni, or the Tapiri^c in Media be a corruption of the name. The Samaritan settlers add, And the rest of the nations, whom the great and noble Asnapper carried captive, and settled in the cities of Samaria and the rest on this side the river. Under this general term, they include the Mesopotamian settlers brought from Avvali and Sepharvaim, and those from Hamath^d, probably wishing to insist to the Persian Monarch on their Persian, Median, or Babylonian descent. They attest at the same time that their forefathers were not willingly removed but transported, carried into exile^e, and accordingly that Esarhaddon, in whose reign they were removed, had power in all these countries. The condensation also of settlers from twelve nations in so small a space as the cities of Samaria (analogous as it is to the dispersion of the Jews over so many provinces of their captors) illustrates the policy of these transportations, and the strength which they gave to the empire. Nations were blended together among those foreign to them, with no common bond except their relation to their conqueror. A check on those around them, and themselves held in check by them, they had no common home to which to return, no interest to serve by rebelling. Esarhaddon built 36 temples in Assyria by the labour of foreign slaves, his captives, who worshipped his gods^f.

This collection of people of twelve nations in the cities of Samaria represents moreover one portion only of the conquests of Esarhaddon, and, for the most part, that furthest from Judæa. For the principle of the policy was to remove them far from their own land. Ethiopian and Egyptian captives would be placed, not here whence they could easily return, but, like Israel in the cities of the Medes, whence they could find no escape.

The son of Esarhaddon, Asshurbanipal^g II., yet further enlarged and consolidated the conquests of his conquering father. His expeditions into Egypt have been already dwelt upon;

^e Polyhist. in Eus. Chr. i. c. 5. Abyden. ib. c. 9. ^f Rawl. 5 Emp. ii. 456. ^g Is. x. 5-15, xxxvi. 18-20. ^h Oppert p. 53. ⁱ Abyden. in Eus. Chron. Arm. p. 53. ^k The murder then of Sennacherib was no sign of the decadence of the empire, but one of the common fruits of the polygamy of Eastern monarchs. ^l Oppert pp. 56, 7. ^m Sitarparna and Iparna. ⁿ Ib. Two of the names again, Rawl. observes (5 Emp. ii. 473), are Aryan, Zanasana and Ramatiya; a 3rd is Arpis. ^o Babyl. tablet in Rawl. Her. i. 482.

^p 2 Chr. xxxiii. 11. ^q Oppert p. 56. Rawl. 5 Emp. ii. 470, 1. Oppert does not identify the names of distances. ^r Rawl. Her. i. 483, 4. 5 Emp. ii. 483. Oppert p. 58. ^s Ezr. iv. 9. ^t Gen. x. 10. ^u i. 125. ^v Ritter Erdk. vii. 668. ^w Is. xxi. 2, xxii. 6. ^x Ezr. v. 6. Rawl. Journ. of Asiat. Soc. xv. p. 164. ^y Rawl. Her. i. 481. ^b Strabo xl. 2. 8. 11. ^c Id. xl. 8. and 13. 2. ^d 2 Kgs. xvii. 24. ^e Ezr. iv. 10. ^f Assyr. texts p. 16, Oppert p. 57, Rawl. 5 Emp. ii. 482. ^g Or Asordanes, Layard Nin. and B. p. 452.

his victories were easy, complete. Tirhaka, himself a great conqueror, fled into unknown deserts beyond reach of pursuits. His step-son Urdaminie attempted to recover his kingdom, was defeated at once, fled and his capital was taken. In Asia, he took away the king of Tyre, who offended him; made conquests beyond Mt. Taurus, where his fathers had never been^b; received an embassy from Gyges; attached to Assyria a tract of Minni or Persarmenia, took the capital of Minni; took Shushanⁱ and Badaca, slew their kings, united Susiana to Babylonia; subdued anew Edom, Moab, Kedar, the Nabathæans; received the submission of the king of Urarda, Ararat^k. While Assyria was extended wider than before, its old enemies were more incorporated with it, or, at least, more subdued; it was more at one within itself. Egypt, the great rival Empire, had tried to shake off the yoke, but was subdued; no people in Syria or the valley of the Euphrates stirred itself; the whole tract within the Taurus, once so rife with enemies, lay hushed under his rule: hushed were the Hittites, Hamathites, the Syrians of Damascus, the Tibareni who had once held their own against his father; war was only at the very extremities, in Minni or Edom, and that; rather chastisement than war; Babylon was a tranquil portion of his empire, except during the temporary rebellion of the brother, whom he had placed over it, and whom he pardoned. His death, amid the tranquil promotion of literature^l, when he had no more enemies to conquer or rebels to chasten, left his empire at the zenith of its power, some 22 years before its destruction. Calno had become, as Sennacherib boasted^m, like Carchemish; Hamath like Arpad; Samaria as Damascus. Heⁿ had removed the bounds of the people and gathered all the earth, as one gathereth eggs, left by the parent bird, undefended even by its impotent love. There was not a cloud on the horizon, not a token whence the whirlwind would come. The bas-reliefs attest, that neither the energy nor the cruelty of the Assyrians were diminished^o.

Of those twenty two years, we have nothing reliable except their close. There was probably nothing to relate. There would not be any thing, if Asshurbanipal had consolidated his empire, as he seems to have done, and if his son and successor inherited his father's later tastes, and was free from the thirst of boundless conquest, which had characterised the earlier rulers of Assyria. Any how, we know nothing authentic. The invasion of Assyria by Phraortes, which Herodotus relates, is held, on good grounds, to be a later history of a rebellion against Darius Hystaspes, adapted to times before the Medes became one nation^p. There was no reason why it should not have been recorded, had it taken place, since it is admitted to have been a total defeat, in which Phraortes lost his life^q. The invasion of the Scythians, which is to have stopped the siege of Nineveh under Cyaxares, was reported in a manifestly exaggerated form to Herodotus. The 28 years, during which Herodotus relates the Scythian rule to have lasted^r, is longer than the whole of the reign of the last king of Assyria; and yet, according to Herodotus, is to have been interposed between the two sieges of Cyaxares. And as its empire gave no sign of decay, so far as we can trace its history within 22 years before its destruction, so, with the like rapidity, did the empire rise, which was to destroy it. The account which Herodotus received, that the Medians had thrown off the yoke of Assyria before Deioces^s, is in direct contradiction to the Assyrian inscriptions. This was, they state, the time, not of the revolt, but of the conquest of Media. They are confirmed by Holy Scripture, which says that the Assyrian king [Sargon] placed in the cities of the Medes^t his Israelitish captives. The utmost, which Herodotus ascribes to Deioces however, is, that he consolidated the six Median tribes and built a capital, Agbatana^u. It is an union of wild hordes into one people, held together for the time by the will of one man and by their weariness of mutual oppressions. Even according to their accounts, Cyaxares (about B.C. 633, i. e. 8 years before the fall of Nineveh) first organised the Median army; the Greeks, in the time of Æschylus, believed Cyaxares to have been the first of the Median kings^v; rebels in Media and Sagartia claimed the Median throne against Darius, as descended from Cyaxares, as the founder of the Monarchy^w.

Further, the subsequent history supports the account of Abydenus against Herodotus, that not the Medes, but the rebel general of the last Monarch of Nineveh was, with his Babylonian troops, the chief author of the destruction of Nineveh. The chief share of the spoil, where no motives of refined policy intervene, falls to the strongest, who had chief portion in the victory. "The Medes," says Herodotus, "took Nineveh, and conquered all Assyria, except the Babylonian portion^x." But Babylon was no spared province, escaping with its independence as a gain. Babylonia, not Media, succeeded to the Southern and Western dominions of the Assyrian empire; and the place, where Nineveh had stood, Cyaxares retaining the North. This was a friendly arrangement, since subsequently too we find a Babylonian prince in the expedition of Cyaxares against Asia Minor, and Medians assisting Nebuchadnezzar against the king of Egypt^y. Abydenus represents the Babylonians and Medes, as equal^z, but exhibits the rebel general, as the author of the attack. "After him [Sardanapal], Sarac held the empire of Assyria, who, being informed of a horde of mingled troops which were coming against him from the sea, sent Busalossor [Nebopalassar] general of his army, to Babylon. But he, having determined to revolt, betrothed to his son, Nebuchodrossor, Amuhea, daughter of Asdahag, prince of the Medes, and soon made a rapid attack on Nineveh. King Sarac, when he knew the whole, set the palace Evorita on fire. Then Nebuchodrossor, attaining to the empire, encircled Babylon with strong walls."

The "horde of mingled troops" "from the sea" were probably those same Susians and Elymæans, whom the Assyrians had, in successive reigns, defeated. If the account of Herodotus were true, the father of the Median Monarch had perished in conflict with Assyria. The grandfather of the Assyrian Monarch had himself reigned in Babylon. Assyria ruled Babylon by viceroys to the end. It has been noticed that Nahum mentions no one enemy who should destroy Nineveh. True, for no one enemy did destroy her.

Even now its fall is unexplained. The conquests of its Monarchs had not been the victories of talented individuals. They were a race of world-wide conquerors. In the whole history, of which we have the annals, they are always on the aggressive. They exacted tribute where they willed. The tide of time bore them on in their conquests. Their latest conquests were the most distant. Egypt, her early rival, had been subdued by her. The powers, which did destroy her, had no common bond of interest. They were united, for one ⁱ The name is spelt as in Daniel.

^b Rawl. remarks that the names are new.

^k Rawl. 5 Emp. ii. 484-93.

^l Ib. 495, 6.

^m Is. x. 9.

ⁿ Ib. 13, 14.

^o See plates in Layard Nin. and B. pp. 457, 8. Rawl. 5 Emp. iii. 504, and Layard Monuments Ser. 2. Pl. 47, 49. quoted Ib.

^p Rawl. Herod. i. 403, 9.

^q Herod. i. 102.

^r Ib. 106.

^s i. 95, 6.

^t 2 Kgs. xvii. 6.

^u Her. i. 101.

^v Persæ 761-4.

^w Behistun Inscr., quoted by Rawl. Her. i. 409.

^x i. 106.

^y Rawl. Herod. i. 415, 6.

^z Conf. Tobit xiv. 15. "Before he died, he heard of the destruction of Nineveh, which was taken by Nabuchonosor and Ahasuerus."

¹ Euseb. Chron. P. 1. c. 9.

reign, not by natural interests, but, as far as we see, by the ambition of two individuals. These crushed, at once and for ever, the empire which for so many centuries had been the ravager of the world. But who could have foreseen such a combination and such results, save God, in Whose hands are human wills and the fate of empires?

The fiery empire of conquerors sank like a tropic sun. Its wrath had burned, unassuaged, "from" (in their own words) "the rising to the setting sun." No gathering cloud had tempered its heat or allayed its violence. Just ere it set, in those last hours of its course, it seemed, as if in its meridian. Its bloodstained disk cast its last glowing rays on that field of carnage in Susiana; then, without a twilight, it sank beneath those stormy waves, so strangely raised, at once and for ever. All, at once, was night. It knew no morrow.

Its fall is inexplicable still. It may have accelerated its own destruction by concentrating the fierce Chaldees at Babylon. It was weakened by the revolt of its own general, and with him the defection of an army. Still, in those days, the city of 1200 towers, each 200 feet high, its ordinary wall 100 feet high and of such breadth, that three chariots could drive on it abreast^d, could not be taken by mounds, except by some most gigantic army with patience inexhaustible. Famine could not reduce a city, which, in its 60 miles in circumference, enclosed, like Babylon, space for much cattle, and which could, within its walls, grow corn enough for its population of 600,000. With its perennial supply of provision, it might have laughed to scorn a more formidable foe than the Medes, Elamites and Babylonians, unaccustomed to sieges, except in as far as any had fought in its armies, while the Ninevites possessed the hereditary skill of centuries. Babylon, smaller than Nineveh^e, was at rest amidst the siege of the more powerful grandson of Cyaxares. Cyrus could only take it by stratagem; Darius Hystaspes, by treachery. Then, every Ninevite was a warrior. Their descendants, the Kurds, are still among the fiercest and most warlike people of Asia. The bas-reliefs, which bear internal evidence of truth, exhibit a wonderful blending of indomitable strength of will, recklessness of suffering, inherent physical energy, unimpaired by self-indulgence. A German writer on art says^f, "You recognise a strong thickset race, of very powerful frame, yet inclined to corpulence; a very peculiar blending of energy and luxury.—The general impression of the figures, whether men, women or eunuchs, has uniformly something earnest and imposing." An English writer says still more vividly; "^gAll the figures indicate great physical development, animal propensities very strongly marked, a calm, settled ferocity, a perfect nonchalance amidst the most terrible scenes; no change of feature takes place, whether the individual is inflicting or experiencing horrid sufferings.—The pictures are very remarkable as indicating the entire absence of higher mental and moral qualities: and the exuberance of brutal parts of man's nature. At the same time there is not wanting a certain consciousness of dignity and of inherent power. There is a tranquil energy and fixed determination, which will not allow the beholder to feel any contempt of those stern warriors."

How then could it fall? The prophecy of Nahum describes, with terrible vividness, a siege; the rousing of its king from a torpor of indolence; he remembereth his nobles; the orderly advance, the confused preparations for defence; and then, when expectation is strung, and we see besiegers and besieged prepared for the last decisive strife, there is a sudden pause. No human strength overthrows the city. "The gates of the rivers shall be opened, and the palace shall be dissolved. And it is decreed, she shall be led away captive." Her captivity follows on the opening of the gates of the rivers. The rivers, ordinarily her strength, were also her weakness. The annals of Sennacherib relate, how he repaired a palace which had been undermined by the Tigris. "^hThe small palace, which was become very ruinous in every part, because the river Tigris, during 16 years, had undermined and ravaged it, [I repaired.]" Dionysius, the Jacobite Patriarch, relates how in his own time, A.D. 763, "ⁱthe Tigris, overflowing, laid waste all the towns around it, and especially Mosul" (opposite to Nineveh). Barhebræus, in four different years, mentions the destruction of houses in Bagdad through the overflow of the Tigris^j. He mentions also a city-wall, overthrown by an inundation, so that 3000 men were drowned in their houses^k. Ives relates^l; "The Bishop (of Babylon) remembers that" about 1733 "the Euphrates and Tigris were so overflowed, that the whole country between them appeared as one large sea. Over all the plain between Bagdad and Hilla, people could pass only in boats. The water flowed quite up to the glacis, the ditch was full, the city also overflowed, and the foundation of most of the buildings hurt; 300 houses were entirely destroyed. To prevent as much as possible" the recurrence of such a calamity, "the Turks now face the foundation-wall of their houses with a composition of charcoal, ashes, and Demar (bitumen)." "The river Khosar," also, which would be swollen by the same causes as the Tigris, "entered the city," says Ainsworth^m, "by an aperture in the walls on the East side, which appears to have formed part of the original plan and to have been protected by a gateway and walls, vestiges of which still remain." "The Khausser," says Mr. Richⁿ, "is generally drawn off for irrigating the cotton-plantations in the alluvial ground of the river; when it is much overflowed, it discharges itself into the Tigris above the bridge." "^oThe Khausser now [Dec. 1. after "very heavy tropical rain,"] discharges itself direct into the Tigris, and brings an immense body of water." "After rain, it becomes an impetuous torrent, overflowing its banks and carrying all before it." "^pThe stone-bridge was carried away one night by the violence of the Khausser, on a sudden inundation." On a lesser swelling of the river,—"the water-wheels were removed" in precaution "and the bridge of boats opened." Cazwini, the Arabic geographer, speaks of "^qthe rivers of Nineveh."

Ctesias, being a writer of suspected authority, cannot safely be alleged in proof of the fulfilment of prophecy. Yet in this case his account, as it is in exact conformity with the obvious meaning of the prophecy of Nahum, so it solves a real difficulty, how Nineveh, so defended, could have fallen. It seems certain that the account of the siege taken from him by Diodorus, is that of the last siege. It has been remarked^r that the only event of the siege, known from any other source, viz. that the last Assyrian king, when he had learned the combination of the Medes and Babylonians against him, set fire to his palace, is related also by Ctesias. Ctesias has also the same fact, that the Babylonian revolt was recent; the name of the revolted general in Ctesias, Belisis, is the latter half of that given to him by Abydenus^s, Nebopalassar, omitting only the name of the god, Nebo. The rest of the history is in itself probable. The success of the Assyrian monarch at first against ^d Diod. Sic. ii. 3. ^e Jon. iv. 11. ^f Strabo xvi. p. 757. ^g Kugler Kunst-Geschichte, (2) p. 75, 6. in Strauss Nahum p. li. ^h Edwards in Kitto Scr. Lands pp. 50, 1. ⁱ ii. 5, [6.] ^j ii. 6, 7. [7, 8.] ^k Assy. Texts p. 7. ^l Ass. B.O. ii. 112. ^m A.D. 835, 941, 988, 1211. Barh. p. 153. 188. 204. 500. ⁿ Ib. p. 153.

^p Voyage 1773. p. 281.

^q Travels ii. 142, 3.

^r Koordistan, ii. 56.

^s Ib. p. 64.

^t Layard N. and B. p. 77.

^u Quoted by Tuch de Nino urbe p. 24.

^v Rawl. Her. i. 413.

^w Abydenus in Euseb. Chron. Can. P. i. c. 9.

the combined armies, and the consequent revelry, are that same blending of fierceness and sensuality which is stamped on all the Assyrian sculptures, continued to the end. The rest of his relation, which, on account of the facts of nature, which we know, but which, since they are gathered from sources so various, Ctesias probably did not know, is, in itself, probable, accounts for what is unaccounted for, and corresponds with the words of Nahum. It is, "a Sardanapalus, seeing the whole kingdom in the greatest danger, sent his three sons and two daughters with much wealth to Paphlagonia to Cotta the Governor, being the best-disposed of his subjects. He himself sent by messengers to all his subjects for forces, and prepared what was needed for the siege. He had an oracle handed down from his forefathers, that no one should take Nineveh, unless the river first became an enemy to the city. Conceiving that this never would be, he held to his hopes, purposing to abide the siege and awaited the armies to be sent by his subjects." "The rebels, elated by their successes, set themselves to the siege, but on account of the strength of the walls, could in no wise injure those in the city." "But these had great abundance of all necessities through the foresight of the king. The siege then being prolonged for two years, they pressed upon it; assaulting the walls and cutting off those therein from any exit into the country." "In the 3rd year, the river, swollen by continuous and violent rains, inundated a part of the city and overthrew 20 stadia of the wall. Then the king, thinking that the oracle was fulfilled, and that the river was plainly an enemy to the city, despaired of safety. And, not to fall into the enemy's hands, he made an exceeding great pile in the palace, heaped up there all the gold and silver and the royal apparel, and having shut up his concubines and eunuchs in the house formed in the midst of the pile, consumed himself and all the royalties with them all. The rebels, hearing that Sardanapalus had perished, possessed themselves of the city, entering by the broken part of the wall."

Yet Nahum had also prophesied^b; "the fire shall devour thy bars;" "fortify thy strong holds, there shall the fire devour thee;" "I will burn her chariots in the smoke," and all the ruins of Nineveh still speak from beneath the earth where they lie interred, that, overthrown as they have been by some gigantic power, fire consumed them within. "The palaces of Khorsabad (Dur Sarjina) and Nimrud shew equal traces of fire with those of Kouyunjik." "The recent excavations have shown that fire was a great instrument in the destruction of the Nineveh palaces. Calcined alabaster, masses of charred wood and charcoal, colossal statues split through with the heat, are met with in parts of the Ninevite mounds, and attest the veracity of prophecy." "It is evident from the ruins that Khorsabad and Nimroud were sacked, and set on fire."

Yet this does not exhaust the fulness of the prophecy. Nahum not only foretold the destruction of Nineveh, that it should be empty, void, waste, there is no healing of thy bruise, but in emphatic words, that its site also should be a desolation. With an overrunning flood He shall make the place thereof (mekomah) a desolation^c. This was then new in the history of the world. Cities have remained, while empires passed away. Rome, Constantinople, Athens, Damascus, Alexandria, Venice, abide, although their political might is extinct. No or Thebes itself survived its capture by Sargon and a yet later loss of its inhabitants nearly two centuries, when the more fatal conquest of Cambyses, and perhaps the rise of Memphis perpetuated its destruction. Nahum foretells emphatically as to Nineveh, "He will make the place thereof an utter consumption." Not only would God destroy the then Nineveh; but the very place or site thereof should be an utter desolation. There was, then, no instance of so great a city passing away. Such had not been Babylonian, Assyrian, Egyptian policy. It had become an established policy in Sennacherib's time to remove populations, not to destroy cities. And these two policies were incompatible. For a conqueror who would remove populations must have, whither to remove them. Nineveh itself had conquered Babylon and Shushan, and the cities of the Medes; but had placed her own lieutenants in them. The mere destruction of such a city as Nineveh was "contrary to experience." Even later than this, Babylon, notwithstanding its rebellions, was spared by its first conqueror, and survived to be the grave of its second, Alexander. Xenophon describes Nineveh under the name of Mespila (of which Mosul has been supposed to be a corruption) "a wall, void, large, lying against the city—the basement was of polished stone, full of shells, its width 50 feet, its height 50 feet. Thereon was built a wall of brick, its breadth 50 feet, the height 100; the circuit was six farsangs," i. e. 22½ miles. The shell remained; the tumult of life was gone. Its protecting bulwarks remained; all, which they protected, had disappeared. They had forgotten already on the spot what it had been or by whom it had perished. "The Medes inhabited it formerly. It was said that Media, a king's wife, had fled thither, when the Medes were losing their power through the Persians. The Persian king, besieging this city, could not take it, either by time or force; but Zeus made the inhabitants senseless, and so it was taken." A little later, Alexander marched over its site to gain the world, not knowing that a world-empire, like that which he gave his life to found, was buried under his feet^d. Gaugamela, near which Darius lost his empire, must have been close to its site. Yet three centuries, and history, not its mere neighbours only, had forgotten when it had perished. Strabo says^e, "It was effaced immediately after the destruction of the Syrians." Nearly two centuries later is Lucian's saying, "Nineveh has perished, and there is no trace left where it once was." Yet before this time, in the reign of Claudius, the Romans had built a new Nineveh which they called by his name "Ninive Claudiopoli." In the 6th century, it is mentioned as a Christian see^f. Its episcopate was taken away, probably on account of its decline, early in the 9th century; and it was united to Mosul^g. It was still in being at the beginning of the 14th century^h. Yet, in the 12th century, as a whole, "it was desolate, but there were there many villages and castles." This was not the Nineveh of prophecy; but it too was swept away, and a few coins alone attest the existence of the Roman city. "The city, and even the ruins of the city," relates Gibbonⁱ of the last victory of Heraclius,

* In Diod. Sic. ii. 27. Diodorus has "Euphrates" in conformity with his own error, that Nineveh was on that river.

^b iii. 13. 15. ii. 13. ^c Rawl. Herod. i. 488. quoting "Layard Nin. and its Remains i. 12. 27. 40. &c. Nin. and B. [of Nimrud] p. 351, 357, 359. &c. Vaux Nineveh and Persopolis p. 196-8. Botta Letter ii. p. 26. iii. p. 41. &c." "They [the human-headed bulls] had suffered, like all those previously discovered, from the fire." Lay. N. and B. p. 71. "It [the wall] contained some fragments of calcined sculptured alabaster, evidently detached from the bas-reliefs on the walls." Ib. Add of Kouyunjik, Athenæum N. 900, Jan. 25. 1845. p. 99. ^d Rawl. Ib. note 2. ^e Bonomi p. 461. ^f i. 8. ^g Anab. iii. 4. 10. ^h Ib. 12.

ⁱ It is noticed, that Arrian alone mentions the name of Nineveh; and he too speaks of it, in relation to the course of the Tigris, not of the battle. "The lake, into which the Tigris discharges itself, which, flowing by the city Ninus formerly a great and wealthy city, forms the country between it [Tigris] and the Euphrates." Ind. p. 197. ed. Vall. ^k xvii. 1. 3. ^l Charon c. 23.

^m See Ass. B. O. iii. 1. p. 104. ⁿ By Josua Bar Nun Catholicus A. D. 820-824. Ass. iii. p. 344, coll. p. 165. ^o Ebedjesu, who died A.D. 1318, (Ass. i. 539.) wrote to the Ninevites on the plague. Ass. iii. 1. 143.

^p Benjamin Tud. p. 21 ed. Asher.

^q c. 46.

"had long since disappeared; the vacant space afforded a spacious field for the operation of the two armies." A line of lofty mounds, on the East of Tigris, long drew but a momentary gaze from the passers-by; a few cottages surmounted the heaps, which entombed the palaces of kings, who were the terror of the East; the plough turned up, unheeded, the bricks, which recorded their deeds; the tide of war swept over it anew; the summer's sands again filled up "the stupendous mass of brick-work, occasionally laid bare by the winter rains." The eyes rested on nothing but "the stern shapeless mound, rising like a hill from the scorched plain." "The traveller is at a loss to give any form to the rude heaps, upon which he is gazing. Those of whose works they are the remains, unlike the Roman and the Greek, have left no visible traces of their civilization or of their arts; their influence has long since passed away. The scene around him is worthy of the ruin he is contemplating; desolation meets desolation; a feeling of awe succeeds to wonder, for there is nothing to relieve the mind, to lead to hope, or to tell of what has gone by. Those huge mounds of Assyria made a deeper impression upon me, gave rise to more serious thoughts and more earnest reflection, than the temples of Baalbec and the theatres of Ionia."

In 1827, Buckingham still wrote*: "we came in about an hour to the principal mounds which are thought to mark the site of the ancient Nineveh. There are four of these mounds, disposed in the form of a square; and these, as they shew neither bricks, stones, nor other materials of building, but are in many places overgrown with grass, resemble the mounds left by entrenchments and fortifications of ancient Roman camps. The longest of these mounds runs nearly N. and S. and consists of several ridges of unequal height, the whole appearing to extend for four or five miles in length. There are three other distinct mounds, which are all near to the river, and in the direction of E. and W.—There are appearances of mounds and ruins extending for several miles to the southward; and still more distinctly seen to the Northward of this, though both are less marked than the mounds of the centre. The space between these is a level plain, over every part of the face of which, broken pottery, and the other usual debris of ruined cities are seen scattered about." "Mounds and smaller heaps of ruins were scattered widely over the plain, sufficient to prove, that the site of the original city occupied a vast extent." Niebuhr had ridden through Nineveh unknowingly. "I did not learn that I was at so remarkable a spot, till near the river. Then they showed me a village on a great hill, which they call Nunia, and a mosque, in which the Prophet Jonah was buried. Another hill in this district is called Kalla Nunia, or the Castle of Nineveh. On that lies a village Koindsjug. At Mosul, where I dwelt close by the Tigris, they showed me in addition the walls of Nineveh, which in my journey through I had not observed, but supposed to be a set of hills." "It is well known," begins an account of the recent discoveries, "that in the neighbourhood of Mosul, travellers had observed some remarkable mounds, resembling small hills, and that Mr. Rich had, thirty years ago, called attention to one called Koyunjik, in which fragments of sculpture and pottery had been frequently discovered."

And yet, humanly speaking, even if destroyed, it was probable before-hand, that it would not altogether perish. For a town near its site was needed for purposes of commerce. Of the two routes of commerce from the Persian gulf to the North by the Euphrates or by the Tigris, the Tigris-route was free from the perils of the arid wilderness, through which the line by the Euphrates passed. If, for the downward course, the Euphrates itself was navigable, yet the desert presented a difficulty for caravans returning upwards from the Persian gulf. Arrian, who mentions the two lines of travel, says that Alexander, having crossed the Euphrates at Thapsacus, chose the less direct line by the Tigris, as having a better supply of all things, food for his cavalry, and a less scorching heat. The mention of Haran (afterwards Carrhæ) Canneh, and Asshur in Ezekiel, (in one verse⁷) seems to indicate the continuation of the same line of commerce with Tyre, which must have existed from præhistoric times (i. e. from times of which we have no definite historic account), since there is no ground to question the statement of the Phœnicians themselves in Herodotus, that they had come from the Erythræan sea², i. e. the Persian gulf. The later hindrances to the navigation of the Tigris by the great dams (probably for irrigation), were of Persian date; but they could have had no great effect on the actual commerce; since for the greater part of the upward course on the Tigris line, this also must, on account of the rapidity of the river, have been by caravans. The route was still used in the middle ages³. "The ancient road and the modern one on the upper Tigris follow, pretty nearly throughout, the same line, it being determined by the physical necessities of the soil." In the 16th century, "from the head of the Persian gulf two commercial lines existed: by one of them goods were carried some way up the Euphrates, and then by land to Bir, Aleppo, Iskenderun. By the other they followed the Tigris to Baghdad and were carried by Diyar-Bekr and Sivas to Terabuzum. [But Mosul was necessarily on the way from Baghdad to Diyar Bekr]. Mosul still lies on the line of commerce, from the Persian gulf, Basrah, Baghdad, Mosul, Mardin, Diyar-Bekr to Iskenderun, the port of Aleppo⁴, or Trebizond [Tarabuzum⁵]. It still carries on some commerce with Kurdistan and other provinces⁶ [besides Diyar-Bekr and Baghdad]. Col. Chesney, in 1850, advocated the advantages of extending the line of commerce by British stations at Diyar-Bekr and Mardin, in addition to and connection with those already existing at Baghdad and Mosul⁷. There is, in fact, a consent as to this. Layard writes; "The only impediment between the Syrian coast and the Tigris and Euphrates in any part of their course, arises from the want of proper security. The navigation of the Persian gulf is, at all times, open and safe; and a glance at the map will shew that a line through the Mediterranean, the port of counts Mosul among the flourishing commercial centres in the time of Abu'l Abbas A. D. 749. Expedition ii. 581.

⁷ W. S. V. Vaux in Geogr. Dict. ii. 438. ⁸ Arr. iii. 7. The same route was recommended to Antiochus the great. Polyb. v. 51. Xenophon relates the scarcity in Cyrus' advancing army on the Euphrates route, Anab. i. 5. 4; Dio Cassius, the sufferings of the army of Severus L. lxxv. 1.

⁹ Ezek. xxvii. 23. "Eden" (Ib.) is mentioned in 2 Kgs. xix. 12, as having been subdued by Assyria; "Chalmod" remains unknown; "Sheba" spread too widely to the desert of Syria (Strabo xvi. 4. 21.) for the mention of it to be any indication that those thus grouped together did not live in the same direction.

¹⁰ Herod. i. 1. vii. 89. and Rawlinson ib. and App. to B. vii. Essay 2. T. iv. pp. 241. sqq.

¹¹ Abulpharaj Hist. Dyn. p. 218. sqq. quoted by Tuch de Nino urbe p. 32. Col. Chesney

¹² Layard, Nineveh i. pp. 6, 7. ¹³ Travels ii. 49-52, 62. ¹⁴ Reisebeschr. ii. 353.

¹⁵ Ainsworth Travels ii. 337. Tuch quotes also Campbell's Land journey to India p. 252, that "the merchants still, from the nature of the country, go from the Persian gulf to Armenia and Syria and thence again to Bagdad by the same route through Mosul and Arbela, by which large bodies of men went formerly."

¹⁶ Chesney's Expedition ii. 580. ¹⁷ Ib. ii. 595. ¹⁸ Ib. 596. ¹⁹ Ib. i. 21.

²⁰ "The Tigris being already provided with stations at Bagdad and Mosul—it only requires another at Diyar Bekr, and the neighbouring town of Mardin, since the connection of the former places with the countries about it would speedily cause a revival of its ancient commerce." Chesney Expedition ii. 602. ²¹ Nin. and Bab. p. 469.

or other peculiarities of language which Hitzig would have to be evidences of a later date, and from some of which others would infer that Nahum lived at Nineveh itself, "the wish has been father to the thought." One only solid ground there would be why Nahum should not have written his prophecy, when, according to all history, it could alone have

11. סלא קתנא חלה Is. xxi. 3. But in a) כלה עתה is an idiom used not in Is. only but in Jeremiah (5 times) in Ezekiel (twice) Zephaniah and Nehemiah. It is then an ordinary Hebrew idiom. The peculiarity of Isaiah, that in both places (Is. x. 23, xxviii. 22) he adds עתה, does not occur in Nahum. Nahum also has not the verb עתה, which Isaiah uses in 5 places; Isaiah does not use the noun עתה, which Nahum has, and which occurs in a Psalm of David (xxxii. 6). Nahum too speaks of a flood which shall pass over and overwhelm; Isaiah, of a man who should pass over and pass away. In b) there is only in common, that Isaiah joins the two like-sounding words בך and בלך as active verbs (of which, the word common to the two prophets must be older than the Prophet Nahum (comp. "Balak" in the Pent.). Nahum unites two nouns, one from a different root בך, the other a pass. intens. part. עתה, as an abstract noun. The gradual lengthening of the alliterate form occurs in Nahum only. Two of the three words in Nahum are אר. לג. c) The mention of חלה, "great writhing anguish," in connection with the loins, is more remarkable, since חלה occurs in those places only and Ez. xxx. 4. 9 (with the same constr. with ב) ; yet עתה (although not חלה) occurs with בשר Ps. lxxvi. 11. It may then only be an accidental coincidence of the same term.

O. Strass thinks that d) Nah. i. 13 is from Is. x. 27; e) iii. 5 from Is. xlvii. 2. 3; f) Nah. iii. 7 from Is. li. 19. But in d and e there is no characteristic word the same; in Nah. i. 13 there is only the common imagery of breaking the yoke. כלה masc. occurs in Nahum only; נקם בשר in Ps. ii. 3 (of men rebelling) and Jerem. 3 times. It is then a common idiom. In f there is the correspondence of the idiom נקם בשר in Is. (which also occurs Jer. xv. 5) in N. יר לך, but with the difference that in Is. God speaks of the heaviness of a sorrow which He will comfort; Nahum speaks of desolation which none can comfort. The construction of נקם with ל occurs Job ii. 11, xlii. 11, Jer. xvi. 5, xxii. 10, xlviii. 17; in Job and Ps. lxxix. 21 נקם is united with עם. The expression seems then to belong to the common stock of the language; the idiom נקם בשר "Who (in what character) shall I comfort thee?" is peculiar to Isaiah.

Hitzig further would have it, that, "נכבד" occurs in N. iii. 10 exactly as in Is. xxxii. 9 alone besides; "whereas the only correspondence is, that Isaiah has the idiom, "honoured of earth," "all honoured of earth," נכבד ארץ; Nahum has, with the affix, "her honoured," נכבדת as Ps. cxlix. 8. נכבדת.

Of the forms or words, which Hitzig would make characteristic of a later time 1) עתה i. 3 is only orthographically different from the more common, עתה; yet not only does עתה occur Job ix. 17, and the masc. עתה, Is. xxviii. 2, but the verb is written with ע in the same meaning Ps. l. 3, lviii. 10, Job xxvii. 21.

2) קל occurs in Jos. xxiv. 19, the oldest book next to the Pentateuch, and having much in common with it (see on Dan. p. 312 note 2), and in no later book. קל occurs 5 times in the Pentateuch; this form קל (not קל) survived in the Chaldee.

3) נכבד iii. 18, is simply Nif. from נכבד, a word as old as the Pentateuch, since the river, Pishon, נכבד, is derived from it. Hitzig obtains his "pronunciation" by making it kal, עתה, a word not extant in Heb.

4) "The form of the suffix of the 2nd person, ii. 14," סלךך, which has been urged by all writers on his side, is the more singular ground of argument, because it turns entirely on the vowels, which only represent a tradition of the expiring language. Gesenius calls it "an especial form, which perhaps ought properly to be pronounced כק, as masc., out of which the punctuator first made כק, in order in some sort of way to indicate the feminine" (Lehrp. p. 216). Written סלךך, it is only the full and original form of the pronominal affix, כק (אך, אף, אף), as it is found in the Pentateuch, Gen. iii. 9, כק, Ex. xiii. 16, אף, Ex. xxix. 35. Nahum chose it probably as a fuller form. It occurs in a Psalm of David, xxxix. 5, at the close, כק, and in Jer. xix. 25, כק: as also with the verb, כק, 1 Kgs. xviii. 44, and, in the pause, כק, Prov. ii. 11, כק, 1 Kings xviii. 10. Mss. have, some כלכך (19 De Rossi, 3 by correction, and 3 early Edd. De R.). "many have כלכך;" 3 of De R. and 3 or 4 in the first instance, had the regular כלכך. The messengers were the king's messengers (Is. xxxvi. 2. 12. 13, xxxvii. 4. 6. 9. 17. 24.) and so the masculine form is in its place. Punctuators probably (as Ges. conjectured) wished to assimilate it to the preceding feminines; Ewald lays down that כק is a dialectic difference (p. 638 note) and uses it as an argument for Nahum's living near Nineveh (Proph. i. 350). Davidson (iii. 301.) follows Hitzig.

5) "The form of the suffix of the 3rd person, i. 13, ii. 4. comp. Hab. iii. 10." The form ו lies nearer to the original ו, than the contracted ו; it also occurs in the word ו, 14 times in the Pentateuch (in Gen. 8 times, Levit. 5 times, Deut. once); it occurs most (Ges. observes, Lehrp. p. 213) in words ending in ו, אף, 10 times (3 in Levit.) אף 7 times (5 in Gen. Ex. Lev.) אף in Ps. i. Ezek. twice, Jerem. once; אף in Gen. 4 times, Exod. twice, Job twice: although אף absolutely occurs 3 times only; אף is the rule: it occurs 114 times, of which 42 are in the Pentateuch. The form ו also occurs in אף Jud. xix. 24, אף Job xxv. 3. It is united with the plur. noun אף Prov. xix. 28, and אף 1 Sam. xxx. 26, Job xlii. 10; also אף Hab. iii. 10, אף Job xiv. 23. It is obviously used by Nahum for its more stately sound.

6) "The meaning of נל iii. 6," is one attributed to it by Hitz. only.

7) "As Pilpel occurs more and more in later times, so נל ii. 11, (comp. נל ii. 5) only occurs in Is. xxi. 3, Ez. xxx. 4. 9." Pilpel is formed on exactly the same principle, as the other rarer intensive conjugations, the doubling of those letters of the root, most capable of being doubled. In נל, it occurs from Genesis downwards. The use of the word נל by two contemporaries, Isaiah and Nahum, was nothing remarkable.

8) "So, plainly נל ii. 3 could only in later times be used transitively, otherwise than as united with נל." Why? If נל is transitive in the phrase, נל, "restore the captivity" of Jacob, the corresponding phrase, נל, is but a variation of the phrase, such as would naturally occur in any original writer. נל is transitive, also in Ps. lxxxv. 5, and Ezek. xlvii. 7, (since if intrans., as Abulwalid pointed out, it would have been נל) if not in Num. x. 36. Gesenius also pointed out that the corresponding Arab נل is both transitive, and intransitive, so that the use of the causative conj. נל is dialectic, according to Djauhari, or less pure (See Lane sub v. T. i. p. 1038). It is consistent in Hengst. to deny the transitive meaning of נל altogether, but not to make any idiomatic difference between נל and נל, as belonging to different dates.

9) "נל (ii. 2) in the sense of munitio, first occurs in the Chronicles." In the Chronicles, the phrase is different. The idiom is a slight variation of the old masc., נל Ps. xxxi. 22, lx. 11 (which the Chronicles too has, 2 C. vii. 5). The Chronicles, on whatever ground, mostly adopt the feminine form in speaking historically of the fortified cities built in Judah; once in the sing. נל 2 C. xiv. 5; else with two plurals נל, 2 C. xi. 10. 23. xii. 4. xiv. 5. xxi. 3. In one place only, having ended a verse, xi. 10, "and in Benjamin נל," the writer begins the next, (omitting the נל) "and he strengthened נל." Nor is there any thing characteristic of a later period in the use of the feminine; and, any how, since the Chronicles were compiled after the captivity, probably by Ezra, the use of the same form could have proved nothing, as to whether a book were written 85 years, sooner or later, before the captivity.

"Also the Hebrew of Nahum is in part impure; נל iii. 17, is probably not Semitic." It probably is Semitic (see above p. 358) and Assyrian. The occurrence of what probably is a title of an Assyrian commander, not only fits the times of Nahum, when Assyrian invasions had begun, but the occurrence of an official title, (like that of "Pechah" elsewhere, see Daniel the Prophet pp. 570, 571,) without any Syriasm, belongs to Nahum's time and life in Palestine. When three officers of Hezekiah understood Assyrian (Is. xxxvi. 11.), there is nothing surprising in the mention of an Assyrian title. Pechah is also an Assyrian title, occurring in the Inscriptions in the plural "pahati," Oppert Rapports p. 51. 52. 53. 57. 65. 74. "Tartan," in Isaiah and 2 Kings, is also probably an Assyrian title, since Rabaris, "Chief of the Ennuchs," Rab-shakeh, Chief-cupbearer, (with which Tartan is united in 2 Kings xviii. 17) are names of officers. Yet no satisfactory etymology has been found for "Tartan."

10) "נל, iii. 4, stands in Arabic meaning." The coincidence with Arabic would have proved nothing; but Nahum uses נל in its common meaning. In Arabic also it signifies "deceived," not (as Hitzig would have it) "meshed."

11) "נל, ii. 8, in Syriac meaning." נל, not in Syriac only, but in Arabic, signifies to be "violently out of breath;" but this, which is its only meaning which could be brought to bear on this passage, does not suit it, whereas that suggested by the Hebrew itself does. In Nahum it is evidently a modification of the biliteral נל, in the same sense as נל which is used of the low moaning of the dove, Is. xxxviii. 14, lix. 11; and the subst. נל "moaning" is united with נל and נל (for נל) Ezek. ii. 10. Another modification of the biliteral is נל Ps. v. 2, xxxix. 4.

12) "נל too, iii. 2 (only besides in the song of Deborah Jud. v. 22) is probably equally only a Syriasm;" i. e. supposing its meaning to be derived from נל "circle," the substitution of נל for נל occurs oftenest in Aramaic. In the root נל itself however, the nearest correspondence of Hebrew with any Semitic dialect is not with the Syriac but with the Arabic; נל "generation" and the Arab. נل "prolonged time," but also the period of life (see Lane p. 923); whereas the Syr. נל only signifies "a mill." But Hitzig himself sets aside these last, with the observation, "these appearances however are sufficiently explained, if the home of Deborah was also Nahum's country, a border-country towards Syria, inhabited in part by non-Israelites."

13) Hitzig makes neither נל the Queen's name and so Assyrian, nor נל, although he has his own fantastic meaning for each, derived from misapplication of the Arabic. The alleged Syriasm in נל rests on an odd ground-work. The Syriac word נל has not been found in any Syriac author; in one of three Syro-Arab. Lexica (Bar-Bahlul's) it is explained by the Arabic word, "filādsō." This in its turn is interpreted by the Persian, which again has, in Vüllers, no Persian etymology. On the other hand the Arabic "faladsa" "cut," conj. ii. "cut to pieces," does give a good etymology for any sharp instrument, as the "scythe" of a scythed chariot.

Yet this is the evidence on which Davidson tells the unlearned (Introd. iii. 301), "The language is pure and classical with a few exceptions, as נל to mourn, ii. 8, נל iii. 2, נל ii. 4, which are Syriasm."—These Syriasm cannot well be explained by the native locality of the prophet, which was towards the border-land of Syria and inhabited any interest for Judah, long before the event itself, viz. if He to Whom all, past and future, are present, could not or did not declare beforehand things to come². If there be in part by people who were not Israelites, because other prophets of the Northern kingdom do not use Syriac words or idioms. They imply intimate contact with a people beyond Palestine." Yet נר does not, in this sense, exist beyond Palestine; נר was, in the time of the Judges, used within it, and the Arabic does give an etymology for פלור, natural and adequate, which Syriac does not. The only difficulty is, that the Arabic word for "steel" is not a pure Semitic form, like the Hebrew, but a Persian, "fālādsō" or "fālūdso." Yet the Arabic has also the genuine Arabic form "maflūdso" "formed of steel," of a sword. The direct connection of פלור with "fālādsō" or "fālūdso" must be given up, since it seems that the direct connection of the Arabic falādsā and fālūdso or fālūdso must be abandoned. For Prof. F. Justi whose judgement Prof. Max Müller kindly obtained for me says; "The Arabic fālūdso must be borrowed from the Persian pālādo, not conversely (as Freytag and Vüllers also assume in their Lexica); for Persian retains the f in Arabic words which it adopts, but Arabic changes a Persian p into f, because it has no p. So Arabic again changes a Persian d, especially between or after vowels, always into ds. The relation of the Arabic fālūdso, fālūdso, with the root falādsā is consequently only apparent, whence the derivation of פלור from פלר is also shewn to be untenable, especially since this Hebrew root is not evidenced but assumed." Yet as relates to the Hebrew פלר, since the Heb. ר is often interchanged with prophecy, the siege of Nineveh might be as vividly presented to the Prophet's mind, as if he saw it with his bodily eyes^a.

the Arab. ds ("which in some Arab. dialects is pronounced d" Ges.), the etym. from the Arabic falādsā, "cuts," lies nearer to it than any other, designating a sharp instrument. It is remarkable that the Heb.-Arab. Lexicogr., Abraham B. David and Abulwalid, were not aware of any connected Arabic root, both regarding פלר as inverted from פלר. The Syr. בלחיתא "spark" or "sparks" (which Ew. compares, Proph. ii. p. 11) is too remote, insulated, uncertain, not being connected with any known root, and being written also בלחיתא. See Dr. P. Smith's Lex. Syr. s. v. "The Arab. בלחיתא" must be a mis-print.

■ "Did Nahum predict the downfall of Nineveh a century before the event? If he was a younger contemporary of Isaiah, he did so. He prophesied, say some, about the 14th year of Hezekiah and graphically painted the overthrow of Assyria's metropolis. The interval consists of about one hundred years. Is not the analogy of Prophecy violated here? If a specific event be foretold long before it happened, what becomes of the canon or principle that prophecy presents nothing more than the prevision of events in the immediate future? [Dr. Da. italica] The principle in question is almost axiomatic." [Introd. iii. 298.] It passes for an axiom in the school, whose results Dr. Davidson gives to the English; i. e. it is a petitio principii applied to each prophecy in turn.

■ "Nahum must have seen this peril with his own eyes." Ewald Proph. i. 349."

OUTER DEFENCES OF NINEVEH AS THEY NOW ARE. From Layard.

"He will make an utter end of the place thereof."—Nah. i. 8.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

eth; the LORD revengeth, and [†]is furious; the LORD will take vengeance on his adversaimpenitent. And this He says at the last, an Avenger to¹ His adversaries, (lit. "those who hem and narrow Him in"). The word *avenged*² is almost appropriated to God in the Old Testament, as to punishment which He inflicts, or at least causes to be inflicted³, whether on individuals⁴, or upon a people, (His own⁵ or their enemies⁶), for their misdeeds. In man it is a defect⁷. Personal vengeance is mentioned only in characters, directly or indirectly censured, as Samson⁸ or Saul⁹. It is forbidden to man, punished in him, claimed by God as His own inalienable right.¹⁰ Vengeance is Mine and requital. ¹¹ Thou shalt not avenge nor keep up against the children of My people. Yet it is spoken of, not as a mere act of God, but as the expression of His Being. ¹² Shall not My soul be avenged of such a nation as this?

[†] Heb. that hath fury.

And a Reserver of wrath for His enemies, the hardened and unbelieving who hate God, and at last, when they had finally rejected God and were rejected by Him, the object of His aversion. It is spoken after the manner of men, yet therefore is the more terrible. There is that in God, to which the passions of man correspond; they are a false imitation of something which in Him is good, a distortion of the true likeness of God, in which God created us and which man by sin defaced. ¹³ Pride doth imitate exaltedness: whereas Thou Alone art God exalted over all. Ambition, what seeks it, but honours and glory? whereas Thou, Alone art to be honoured above all and glorious for evermore. The cruelty of the great would fain be feared; but who is to be feared but God Alone, out of Whose power what can be wrested or withdrawn, when, or where, or whither, or by whom? The tendernesses of the wanton would fain be counted love: yet is nothing more tender than Thy charity; nor is aught loved more healthfully than that Thy truth, bright and beautiful above all. Curiosity makes semblance of a desire of knowledge; whereas Thou supremely knowest all. Yea, ignorance and foolishness itself is cloked under the name of simplicity and uninjuriousness: because nothing is found more single than Thee; and what less injurious, since they are his own works which injure the sinner? Yea, sloth would fain be at rest; but what stable rest besides the Lord? Luxury affects to be called plenty and abundance; but Thou art the fullness and never-failing plenteousness of incorruptible pleasures. Prodigality presents a shadow of liberality; but Thou art the most overflowing Giver of all good. Covetousness would possess many things; and Thou possessest all things. Envy disputes for excellency: what more excellent than Thou? Anger seeks revenge: who revenges more justly than Thou? Fear startles at things unwonted or sudden, which endanger things beloved, and takes fore-thought for their safety; but to Thee, what unwonted or sudden, or who separateth from Thee what Thou lovest? Or where but with Thee is unshaken safety? Grief pines away for things lost, the delight of its rics, and he reserveth wrath for his enemies.

¹ נָקַם with לָּ p., only besides Ez. xxv. 12. ² נָקַם ³ Nu. xxxi. 2, 3. Ps. cxlix. 9. Hence almost the same as, punished by law, Ex. xxi. 20, 21. ⁴ Gen. iv. 15, 24. 1 Sam. xxiv. 12. 2 Sam. iv. 8. 2 Kgs. ix. 7. Jer. xi. 20. xv. 15. xx. 12. ⁵ Lev. xxvi. 25. Ps. xcix. 8. Ez. xxiv. 8. ⁶ Deut. xxxii. 41, 43. Ps. xviii. 48. Is. xxxiv. 8. xxxv. 4. xlvii. 3. lix. 17. lxi. 2. lxiii. 4. Mi. v. 14. Jer. xlv. 10. l. 15. 28. li. 6. 11. 36. Ezek. xxv. 14, 17. ⁷ נִקְמָה, a self-avenger, Ps. viii. 3. xlv. 17. It is punished by God Ezek. xxv. 12, 15, being moreover unjust; Jer. xx. 10. 12. Lam. iii. 60. coll. 64.

⁸ Jud. xv. 7. xvi. 20. ⁹ 1 Sam. xiv. 24. xviii. 25. Else only historically Pr. vi. 34.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

3 The LORD is ^dslow to anger, and ^egreat in

⁴ Ex. 34. 6, 7. Neh. 9. 17. Ps. 103. 8. Jonah 4. 2. ^e Job 9. 4.

desires; because it would have nothing taken from it, as nothing can from Thee. Thus doth the soul seek without Thee what she findeth not pure and untainted, till she returns to Thee. Thus all pervertedly imitate Thee, who remove far from Thee, and lift themselves up against Thee. But even by thus imitating Thee, they imply Thee to be the Creator of all nature; whence there is no place, whither altogether to retire from Thee." And so, in man, the same qualities are good or bad, as they have God or self for their end. ¹⁴ "The joy of the world is a passion. Joy in the Holy Spirit or to joy in the Lord is a virtue. The sorrow of the world is a passion. The sorrow according to God which worketh salvation is a virtue. The fear of the world which hath torment, from which a man is called fearful, is a passion. The holy fear of the Lord, which abideth for ever, from which a man is called reverential, is a virtue. The hope of the world, when one's hope is in the world or the princes of the world, is a passion. Hope in God is a virtue, as well as faith and charity. Though these four human passions are not in God, there are four virtues, having the same names, which no one can have, save from God, from the Spirit of God." In man they are "passions," because man is so far "passive" and suffers under them, and, through original sin, cannot hinder having them, though by God's grace he may hold them in. God, without passion and in perfect holiness, has qualities, which in man were jealousy, wrath, vengeance, unforgiveness, a "rigor of perfect justice towards the impenitent, which punisheth so severely, as though God had fury;" only, in Him it is righteous to punish man's unrighteousness. Elsewhere it is said, ¹⁵ God keepeth not for ever, or it is asked, ¹⁶ will He keep for ever? and He answers, ¹⁷ Return, and I will not cause Mine anger to fall upon you; for I am merciful, saith the Lord, I will not keep for ever. Man's misdeeds and God's displeasure remain with God, to be effaced on man's repentance, or ¹⁸ by his hardness and impenitent heart man treasureth up unto himself wrath in the day of wrath and of the revelation of the righteous judgment of God, Who will reward each according to his works.

3. The Lord is slow to anger. Nahum takes up the words of Jonah¹⁹ as he spoke of God's attributes towards Nineveh, but only to shew the opposite side of them. Jonah declares how God is slow to anger, giving men time of repentance, and if they do repent, repenting Him also of the evil; Nahum, that the long-suffering of God is not slackness, that He is long-suffering to usward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

*And strong in power*²⁰. Divine long-suffering goes along with Divine power. God can be long-suffering, because He can, whenever He sees good, punish. His long-suffering is a token, not of weakness, but of power. He can allow persons the whole extent of trial, because, when they are past cure, He can end it at once. ²¹ *God is a righteous judge, strong and patient, and God wratheth*²² every day. The wrath cometh only at the Esth. viii. 13. David thanks God for keeping him from it towards Nabal 1 Sam. xxv. 32, 33.

¹⁰ Deut. xxxii. 35, comp. Ps. xciv. 1. ¹¹ Lev. xix. 18. ¹² Jer. v. 9. 29. ix. 9.

¹³ S. Aug. Conf. B. ii. n. 13. 14. ¹⁴ Rnp. ¹⁵ Ps. ciii. 9. The idiom נִקְמָה stands alone. ¹⁶ Jer. iii. 5. ¹⁷ Ib. 12. ¹⁸ Rom. ii. 5, 6. ¹⁹ iv. 2. ²⁰ The full form

נִקְמָה, Cheth. belongs probably to the stately character of Nahum. The like occurs only in Ps. cxlv. 8. נִקְמָה. ²¹ Ps. vii. 11. ²² The word expresses continuously present action, נִקְמָה. The lxx added strong and patient to bring out the meaning.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

power, and will not at all acquit the wicked:
¹ the LORD hath his way in the whirlwind and in the storm, and the clouds are the dust of his feet.

⁴ He rebuketh the sea, and maketh it dry, and drieth up all the rivers: ^h Bashan

last, but it is ever present with God. He cannot but be displeased with the sin; and so the Psalmist describes in the manner of men the gradual approximation to its discharge. ¹ If he (the sinner) will not return [from evil or to God], He will whet His sword; He hath trodden His bow and directed it: He hath prepared for him instruments of death; He hath made His arrows burning. We see the arrow with unextinguishable fire, ready to be discharged, waiting for the final decision of the wicked, whether he will repent or not, but that still the Day of the Lord will come². He will not at all acquit³. The words occur originally in the great declaration of God's attributes of mercy by Moses, as a necessary limitation of them⁴; they are continued to God's people, yet with the side of mercy predominant⁵; they are pleaded to Himself⁶; they are the sanction of the third commandment⁷. He will not acquit of His own will, apart from His justice. So He saith⁸, I can of Mine own self do nothing, i. e. (in part), not as unjust judges, who call good evil and evil good, following their own will, not the merits of the case; but, as I hear, I judge, and My judgement is just. He cannot even have mercy and spare unjustly, nor without the lowliness of penitence. Even if it be Jerusalem, over which He wept, or His companion, His own familiar friend⁹, He, Who is no acceptor of persons, cannot of mere favour forgive the impenitent.

The Lord hath His way in the whirlwind and in the storm. The vengeance of God comes at last swiftly, vehemently, fearfully, irresistibly. When they say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them¹⁰, and all creation stands at the command of the Creator against His enemies. He shall take to Him His jealousy for complete armour, and make the creature His weapon, for the revenge of His enemies¹¹.

And the clouds are the dust of His feet. Perhaps the imagery is from the light dust raised by an earthly army, of which Nahum's word is used¹². The powers of heaven are arrayed against the might of earth. On earth a little dust, soon to subside; in heaven, the whirlwind and the storm, which sweep away what does not bow before them. The vapours, slight in outward seeming¹³, but formed of countless multitudes of mist-drops, are yet dark and lowering, as they burst, and resistless. "The Feet of God are that power whereby He trampleth upon the ungodly." So it is said to the Son, Sit Thou on My Right Hand until I make Thine enemies Thy footstool. Tempests have also, without figure, been used to overthrow God's enemies¹⁴.

4. He rebuketh the sea and maketh it dry¹⁵, delivering His ¹ Ib. 12. 13. ² 2 Pet. iii. 9, 10. ³ חק לא יקח ⁴ Ex. xxxiv. 7. The Samaritan Pentateuch characteristically changes the words into חק לו יקח "the innocent shall be held guiltless by Him." ⁵ Jer. xxx. 11. xlv. 28. ⁶ Nu. xiv. 18.

⁷ Ex. xx. 7. Deut. v. 11. ⁸ John v. 30. ⁹ Ps. lv. 14. ¹⁰ 1 Thess. v. 3. ¹¹ Wisdom v. 17. ¹² Ezek. xxvi. 10. ¹³ חמק occurs six times in the O. T. It is by itself "light dust" Ex. ix. 9. De. xxviii. 24. Is. v. 24, but has ק added Is. xxix. 5.

¹⁴ Ex. xiv. 27. Josh. x. 11. Judges v. 20. 1 Sam. ii. 10. and vii. 10. 2 Sam. xxii. 15. ¹⁵ The contracted form, חמק, is again for emphasis. The like contraction חמק occurs in Lam. iii. 53. Ib. 33. חמק 2 Chr. xxxii. 30. Kri. ¹⁶ Ps. cvi. 9. ¹⁷ Wisd. xii. 9.

¹⁸ Is. lvii. 20. ¹⁹ Josh. ii. 11. ²⁰ Hos. xiv. 7, Cant. iv. 11.

languisheth, and Carmel, and the flower of Lebanon languisheth.

⁵ The mountains quake at him, and ^k the hills melt, and ^l the earth is burned at his presence, yea, the world, and all that dwell therein.

Before CHRIST
cir. 713.

¹ Ps. 68. 8.
² Judg. 5. 5.
³ Ps. 97. 5.
⁴ Mic. i. 4.
⁵ 2 Pet. 3. 10.

people, as He did from Pharaoh¹⁶, the type of all later oppressors, and of Antichrist. His word is with power; to destroy them at once with one rough word¹⁷. The restlessness of the barren and troubled sea is an image of the wicked¹⁸. And drieth up all the rivers, as He did Jordan. His coming shall be far more terrible than when all the hearts of the inhabitants of the land did melt¹⁹. Bashan languisheth and Carmel; and the flower of Lebanon languisheth. Bashan was richest in pastures; Carmel, according to its name, in gardens and vineyards; Lebanon, in vines also and fragrant flowers²⁰, but chiefly in the cedar and cypress; it had its name from the whiteness of the snow, which rests on its summit. These mountains then together are emblems of richness, lasting beauty, fruitfulness, loftiness; yet all, even that which by nature is not, in the variety of seasons, wont to fade, dries up and withers before the rebuke of God. But if these things are done in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry? All freshness, beauty, comeliness, shew of outward nature, shall fade as grass; all ornament of men's outward graces or gifts, all mere shew of goodness, shall fall off like a leaf and perish. If the glory of nature perishes before God, how much more the pride of man! Bashan also was the dwelling-place of the race of giants, and near Libanus was Damascus; yet their inhabitants became as dead men and their power shrank to nothing at the word of God.

5. The mountains quaked at Him, and the hills melted, as of their own accord. The words are a renewal of those of Amos²¹. Inanimate nature is pictured as endowed with the terror, which guilt feels at the presence of God. All power, whether greater or less, whatsoever lifteth itself up, shall give way in that Day, which shall be²² upon all the cedars of Lebanon that are high and lifted up, and upon all the oaks of Bashan, and upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills that are lifted up. And the earth is burned [rather lifteth itself up²³]; as in an earthquake it seems, as it were, to rise and sink down, lifting itself as if to meet its God or to flee. What is strongest, shaketh; what is hardest, melteth; yea, the whole world trembleth and is removed. "If," said even Jews of old, "when God made Himself known in mercy, to give the law to His people, the world was so moved at His Presence, how much more, when He shall reveal Himself in wrath!" The words are so great that they bear the soul on to the time, when the heaven and earth shall flee away from the Face of Him Who sitteth on the throne, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat²⁵. And since all judgements are images

²¹ Am. ix. 13. חמק occurs besides only in Ps. cvii. 26, of the heart of man through terror. Delitzsch (on Hab. p. 156) supposed that the hithpaal or hithpalel conveyed "the operation of an outward cause, completing itself within the subject, as it were in continued vibrations," alleging Ew. Lehrb. 124 a, coll. חמק Mic. i. 4, חמק Ps. xviii. 8, חמק Is. xxiv. 19, חמק Jer. iv. 24, but there is no ground for making the form at once passive and reflexive; and it is less vivid.

²² Is. ii. 13, 14. ²³ חמק intrans. as Ps. lxxxix. 10, חמק, of the sea. With this agrees the constr. חמק "from His Presence," as the cause of its fear. Tho E. V. "is burned" is taken from Rashi.

²⁴ Jon.

²⁵ Rev. xx. 11; 2 Pet. iii. 10.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

6 Who can stand before his indignation? and ^m who can [†] abide in the fierceness of his anger? ⁿ his fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks are thrown down by him.

of the Last, and the awe at tokens of God's Presence is a shadow of the terror of that coming, he adds,

6. Who can stand before His indignation? This question appeals to our own consciences, that we cannot¹. It anticipates the self-conviction at every day of God's visitation, the forerunners of the last. The word rendered "indignation" is reserved almost exclusively to denote the wrath of God². "Who can trust in his own righteousness, and, for the abundance of his works or consciousness of his virtues, not be in need of mercy? Enter not into judgement with Thy servant, O Lord, for in Thy sight shall no man living be justified; and in Job it is said truly, Behold He put no trust in His servants, and His Angels He charged with folly. How much less in them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust, which are crushed before the moth³? It were needless now to prove, that man's own deserts suffice to no one, and that we are not saved but by the grace of God, for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God⁴. Wherefore he saith, before His indignation, standing face to Face before Him in wrath."

lit. in the Face of: guilt cannot look in the face of man, how much less, of God. The bliss of the righteous is the punishment of the wicked, to behold God face to Face. For "who so trusteth in his own works deserveth His indignation, and thinking he standeth, righteously does he fall."

His fury is poured out⁵ like fire, sweeping away, like a torrent of molten fire, him who presumeth that he can stand before His Face, as He did the cities of the plain⁶, the image of the everlasting fire, which shall burn up His enemies on every side⁷. And rocks are thrown down. The rocks are like so many towers⁸ of nature, broken down and crushed by Him lit. from Him. It needeth not any act of God's. He wills and it is done. Those who harden themselves, are crushed and broken to pieces, the whole fabric they had built for themselves and their defences, crumbling and shivered. If then they, whose hearts are hard as rocks, and bold against all peril, and even Satan himself, whose¹⁰ heart is as firm as a stone, yea, as hard as a piece of the nether millstone, shall be crushed then, who shall abide?

7. The Lord is good: a stronghold in the day of trouble. "Good and doing good," and full of sweetness; alike good and mighty; Good in giving Himself and imparting His goodness to His own; yea¹¹ none is good, save God; Himself the stronghold wherein His own may take refuge; both in the troubles of this life, in which¹² He will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able, and in that Day, which shall hem them in on every side, and leave no place of escape except Himself.

And He knoweth them that trust in Him; so as to save them; as Rahab was saved when Jericho perished, and Lot ¹ As in Jo. ii. 11, Mal. iii. 2; renewed Rev. vi. 17. ² The noun נֶאֱדָר (used here) occurs 21 times in the O. T.; of men only once; the verb נֶאֱדָר occurs 13 times, 5 times only of man's anger. ³ Rup. ⁴ Job iv. 18, 19. ⁵ Rom. iii. 23. ⁶ נֶאֱדָר is used of the pouring out of God's wrath, Jer. vii. 20, xlii. 18, 2 Chr. xii. 7 (as more commonly נֶאֱדָר); here its native meaning is brought out the more, by adding נֶאֱדָר. ⁷ Gen. xix. ⁸ Ps. xcvi. 3. l. 3, lxviii. 3, xviii. 8. ⁹ נֶאֱדָר (not in the dialects) is used 34 times of the "breaking down" of walls, buildings, a statue, altar, shrine; in Ps. lvi. 7. only, of the teeth of lions, and, by metaphor, of men in Ps. lii. 7, Job xix. 10. Three times it is used elliptically. ¹⁰ Job xli. 24. ¹¹ S. Luke xviii. 19. ¹² 1 Cor. x. 13. ¹³ נֶאֱדָר ¹⁴ Ps. i. 6. ¹⁵ Ps. xxxviii. 18. ¹⁶ S. John

7 ° The Lord is good, a || strong hold in the day of trouble; and ^p he knoweth them that trust in him.

8 ° But with an overrunning flood he will make an utter end of the place thereof,

^a Dan. 9. 26. & 11. 10, 22, 40.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

° 1 Chr. 16. 34.
Ps. 100. 5.
Jer. 33. 11.
Lam. 3. 25.
|| Or, strength.
Ps. 1. 6.
2 Tim. 2. 19

out of the midst of the overthrow and Hezekiah from the host of Sennacherib. He knoweth them with an individual, ever-present, knowledge¹³. He says not only, "He shall own them," but He ever knoweth them. So it is said; ¹⁴ The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, ¹⁵ The Lord knoweth the days of the upright; and our Lord says, ¹⁶ I know My sheep; and S. Paul, ¹⁷ The Lord knoweth them that are His. God speaks of this knowledge also in the past, of His knowledge, when things as yet were not, I have known thee by name; or of lovingkindness in the past, ¹⁸ I knew thee in the wilderness, ¹⁹ you alone have I known of all the families of the earth, as contrariwise our Lord says, that He shall say to the wicked in the Great Day, ²⁰ I never knew you. That God, being what He is, should take knowledge of us, being what we are, is such wondrous condescension, that it involves a purpose of love, yea, His love towards us, as the Psalmist says admiringly, Lord, what is man that Thou takest knowledge of him²¹?

Them that trust in Him. It is a habit, which has this reward; the trusters in Him²², the takers of refuge in Him. It is a continued unvarying trust, to which is shewn this ever-present love and knowledge.

Yet this gleam of comfort only discloseth the darkness of the wicked. Since those who trust God are they whom God knoweth, it follows that the rest He knoweth not. On this opening, which sets forth the attributes of God towards those who defy Him and those who trust in Him, follows the special application to Nineveh.

8. But with an overrunning flood He will make an utter end of the place thereof²³, i. e. of Nineveh, although not as yet named, except in the title of the prophecy, yet present to the Prophet's mind and his hearers, and that the more solemnly, as being the object of the wrath of God, so that, although unnamed, it would be known so to be. Image and reality, the first destruction and the last which it pictures, meet in the same words. Nineveh itself was overthrown through the swelling of the rivers which flowed round it and seemed to be its defence²⁴. Then also, the flood is the tide of armies, gathered from all quarters, Babylonians²⁵, Medes, Persians, Arabians, Bactrians, which like a flood should sweep over Nineveh and leave nothing standing. It is also the flood of the wrath of God, in Whose Hands they were, and Who, by them, should make a full end of it, lit. make the place thereof a thing consumed, a thing which has ceased to be. For a while, some ruins existed, whose name and history ceased to be known; soon after, the ruins themselves were effaced and buried²⁶. Such was the close of a city, almost coeval with the flood, which had now stood almost as many years as have passed since Christ came, but which now

x. 14. 27. ¹⁷ 2 Tim. ii. 19. ¹⁸ Hos. xiii. 5. ¹⁹ Am. iii. 2. ²⁰ S. Matt. vii. 23. ²¹ Ps. cxliv. 3.

²² It is the well known construction בִּי, in which, the verb being united with its object by a preposition, (like our "trust in,"), the "in Him" stands as gen. as marked by the stat. const. בִּי, as it were "all trusters of Him," as כל הַבֹּטְרִים בִּי Ps. ii. 12, כל הַבֹּטְרִים בִּי Ps. v. 12. Elsewhere the art. is used to express the class, הַבֹּטְרִים בִּי 2 Sam. xxii. 31 (Ps. xviii. 31.) Ps. xxxiv. 23, הַבֹּטְרִים בִּי, Ps. xxxi. 20, הַבֹּטְרִים בִּי Pr. xxx. 5, הַבֹּטְרִים בִּי Is. lvii. 13.

²³ So Ezek. xi. 13, xx. 17, קִלָּה being the second object of the verb, "He made them as a thing consumed," or כִּלְיָה is used abs. as in v. 9, or with אֵם Jer. v. 18.

²⁴ See on ii. 6. ²⁵ Diod. Sic. ii. 25. ²⁶ See ab. Intro. pp. 368, 369.

Before CHRIST and darkness shall pursue his enemies.
CHRIST cir. 713.

9¹ What do ye imagine against the LORD? ²he will make an utter end: affliction shall not rise up the second time.

defied God. Marvellous image of the evil world itself, which shall flee away from the Face of Him Who sat on the throne¹, and there was found no place for it.

And darkness shall pursue His enemies; better, He shall pursue His enemies into darkness². Darkness is, in the O.T., the condition, or state in which a person is, or lives; it is not an agent, which pursues. Isaiah speaks of the ³inhabitants of darkness⁴, entering into darkness; ⁵those who are in darkness. The grave is all⁶ darkness,⁷ darkness, and the shadow of death. Hence even Jews rendered, ⁸"He shall deliver them to hell." Into this darkness it is said, God shall pursue them, as other prophets speak of being driven forth into darkness⁹. The darkness, the motionless drear abode, to which they are driven, anticipates the being cast into the outer darkness, where shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. ¹⁰The vengeance of God on those who remain "His enemies" to the last, "ends not with the death of the body; but evil spirits, who are darkness and not light, pursue their souls, and seize them." They would not hear Christ calling to them, ¹¹Walk, while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you. ¹²They are of those that rebel against the light; they know not the ways thereof, nor abide in the paths thereof. ¹³They loved darkness rather than light. And so they were driven into the darkness which they chose and loved.

9. The Prophet had in few words summed up the close of Nineveh; he now upbraids them with the sin, which should bring it upon them, and foretells the destruction of Sennacherib. Nineveh had, before this, been the instrument of chastising Israel and Judah. Now, the capture of Samaria, which had cast off God, deceived and emboldened it. Its king thought that this was the might of his own arm; and likened the Lord of heaven and earth to the idols of the heathen, and said, ¹⁴Who are they among all the gods of the countries, that have delivered their country out of mine hand, that the Lord should deliver Jerusalem out of mine hand? He sent ¹⁵to reproach the living God and ¹⁶defied the Holy One of Israel. His blasphemy was his destruction. It was a war, not simply of ambition, or covetousness, but directly against the power and worship of God.

What will ye so mightily¹⁷ devise, imagine against the Lord? He¹⁸ Himself, by Himself, is already making an utter end. It is in store; the Angel is ready to smite. Idle are man's devices, when the Lord doeth. ¹⁹Take counsel together, and it shall come to nought; speak the word, and it shall not stand: for in darkness, into which they shall be driven and fall therein."

¹ Rev. xx. 11. ² So S. Jer. The punctuators marked this by the Makkef, מִן-הַחֹשֶׁךְ. ³ Is. xlii. 7. ⁴ Ib. xlvii. 5. ⁵ Ib. xlix. 9. ⁶ Ps. lxxxviii. 12. Job xvii. 13. ⁷ Job x. 21. ⁸ Jon. ⁹ Is viii. 22. מִן-הַחֹשֶׁךְ Jer. xxxiii. 12. מִן-הַחֹשֶׁךְ

¹⁰ Rup. ¹¹ S. John xii. 35. ¹² Job xxiv. 13. ¹³ S. John iii. 19.

¹⁴ 2 Kings xviii. 35. ¹⁵ Ib. xix. 16. ¹⁶ See xix. 15-34. ¹⁷ The Hebrew form is doubly emphatic, מְחַשְׁבֵּת. The same construction occurs with מֵ, "towards," Hos. vii. 15, מֵאֵל (in the same general sense as the stronger עַל Nah. i. 11, Dan. xi. 24), in Job xv. 25, מֵאֵל "runneth at" i. e. against Him (God) Ib. 26. מֵחֶשֶׁב is not simply "think," but "excogitated," "calculated" (Lev. 5 times), "devised" Pr. xvi. 9; with ל and inf. "to do evil to" Pr. xxiv. 8. In kal, also, מֵחֶשֶׁב is used for "devising against," alike with עַל Jer. xi. 19. xviii. 11. 18. xlix. 30, and with אֵל Jer. xlix. 20. l. 45; and with עַל in a good sense, Jer. xxix. 11. מֵחֶשֶׁב is used also of "thinking over" the past, Ps. lxxvii. 6. cxix. 59; with ל and inf. "thinking over," in order to know, Ps. lxxiii. 16; with acc. p. "take account of" Ps. cxliv. 3, 2 Kgs. xii. 16; but in none of these cases

10 For while they be folden together¹ as thorns, ²and while they are drunken as drunkards, ³they shall be devoured as stubble fully dry.

Before CHRIST cir. 713.

¹ 2 Sam. 23. 6, 7. ch. 3. 11. ² Mal. 4. 1.

God is with us. While the rich man was speaking comfort to his soul as to future years, God was making an utter end. Thou fool, this night shall thy soul be required of thee.

²⁰ Affliction shall not rise up the second time: as he says afterwards, Though I have afflicted thee, I will afflict thee no more²¹. God, He had said, is good for a refuge in the day of affliction; now, personifying that affliction, he says, that it should be so utterly broken, that it should rise up no more to vex them, as when a serpent's head is, not wounded only but, crushed and trampled under foot, so that it cannot again lift itself up. The promises of God are conditioned by our not falling back into sin. He saith to Nineveh, "God will not deliver Judah to thee, as He delivered the ten tribes and Samaria." Judah repented under Hezekiah, and He not only delivered it from Sennacherib, but never afflicted them again through Assyria. Renewal of sin brings renewal or deepening of punishment. The new and more grievous sins under Manassah were punished, not through Assyria but through the Chaldeans.

The words have passed into a maxim, "God will not punish the same thing twice," not in this world and the world to come, i. e. not if repented of. For of the impenitent it is said, ²²destroy them with a double destruction. Chastisement here is a token of God's mercy; the absence of it, or prosperous sin, of perdition; but if any refuse to be corrected, the chastisement of this life is but the beginning of unending torments.

10. For while they be folden together as thorns²³, i. e. as confused, intertwined, sharp, piercing, hard to be touched, rending and tearing whosoever would interfere with its tangled ways, and seemingly compact together and strong; and while they are drunken as their drink²⁴, not "drinkers²⁵" only but literally "drunken," swallowed up, as it were, by their drink which they had swallowed, mastered, overcome, powerless, they shall be devoured as stubble fully dry²⁶, rapidly, in an instant, with an empty crackling sound, unresisting, as having nothing in them which can resist. Historically, the great defeat of the Assyrians, before the capture of Nineveh, took place while its king, flushed with success, was giving himself to listlessness; and having distributed to his soldiers victims, and abundance of wine, and other necessities for banquetting, the whole army²⁷ was negligent and drunken." In like way Babylon was taken amid the feasting of Belshazzar²⁸; Benhadad was smitten, while ²⁹drinking himself drunk in the pavilions, he and the kings, the thirty and two kings with מֵ. ¹⁸ The use of the pronoun in Heb. is again emphatic. ¹⁹ Is. viii. 10.

²⁰ Others have understood this, "affliction shall not rise up the second time," but shall destroy at once, utterly and finally (comp. 1 Sam. xxvi. 8. 2 Sam. xx. 10.); but 1) the idiom there, לֹא שָׁנָה לוֹ, "he did not repeat to him," as we say, "he did not repeat the blow," is quite different: 2) it is said, "affliction shall not rise up," itself, as if it could not. The causative of the idiom occurs in 2 Sam. xii. 11. דָּנִי בָקִים עָלַי רָחֵם "lo, I will cause evil to rise up against thee." ²¹ v. 12. ²² Jer. xvii. 18. ²³ עָלֵי לִיט. "quite up to," so as altogether to equal; as חֲבִילָה, Job xi. 7, בְּרִיחוֹתָי, 1 Chr. iv. 27. ²⁴ כֶּמֶן, wine, Is. i. 22. Hos. iv. 18.

²⁵ As elsewhere בָּקִים, Deut. xxi. 20, Pr. xxxiii. 20, 21, סִכָּא Cheth. Ez. xxxiii. 42.

²⁶ כֶּמֶן is best united with יִשָּׁר. כֶּמֶן is used of ripe corn, Ex. xxii. 28. Dt. xxii. 9; but this may be so called, from the ear being full. The idiom, in which כֶּמֶן is joined with the verb, כֶּמֶן אֵרָאָה Jer. xii. 6, is different, being derived from a phrase, קָרָא אֵרָאָה "cry aloud, fill," i. e. with a full voice, Jer. iv. 5. Schultens compares Arab. نَمَلٌ "he did and filled" = did fully. For the imagery of the devouring of the stubble by fire, see Is. v. 24. xlvii. 14. Jo. ii. 5. Ob. 18. ²⁷ Diod. Sic. ii. 26. ²⁸ Dan. v. 1-30. ²⁹ 1 Kings xx. 16.

^{Before}
CHRIST
cir. 713. ment concerning thee, that no more of thy name be sown: out of the house of thy gods will I cut off the graven image and the molten image: ^c I will

^{Before} CHRIST
cir. 713. make thy grave; for thou art vile.
15 Behold ^d upon the mountains the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace! O Judah, dressed to be different. ¹ "By His command alone, and the word of His power, He cut off the race of the Assyrian, as he says in Wisdom, of Egypt, ² Thine Almighty word leaped down from Heaven, out of Thy royal throne; as a fierce man of war into the midst of a land of destruction, and brought Thine unfeigned commandment as a sharp sword, and standing up filled all things with death," or else it may be, He gave command to the Angels His Ministers. God commandeth beforehand, that, when it cometh to pass, it may be known ³ "that not by chance," nor by the will of man, "nor without His judgement but by the sentence of God" the blow came.

No more of thy name be sown, as Isaiah saith, ⁴ the seed of evil-doers shall never be renowned. He prophesies, not the immediate but the absolute cessation of the Assyrian line. If the prophecy was uttered at the time of Sennacherib's invasion, seventeen years before his death, not Esarhaddon only, but his son Assurbanipal also, whose career of personal conquest, the last glory of the house of the Sargonides and of the empire, began immediately upon his father's reign of thirteen years, was probably already born. Assurbanipal in this case would only have been thirty-one, at the beginning of his energetic reign, and would have died in his fifty-second year. After him followed only an inglorious twenty-two years. The prophet says, the Lord hath commanded. The decree as to Ahab's house was fulfilled in the person of his second son, as to Jeroboam and Baasha in their sons. It waited its appointed time, but was fulfilled in the complete excision of the doomed race.

Out of the house of thy gods will I cut off graven image and molten image⁵; as thou hast done to others⁶, it shall be done to thee. ⁷ "And when even the common objects of worship of the Assyrian and Chaldean were not spared, what would be the ruin of the whole city!" So little shall thy gods help thee, that ⁸ "there shalt thou be punished, where thou hopest for aid. Graven and molten image shall be thy grave; amid altar and oblations, as thou worshippiest idols," thanking them for thy deliverance, "shall thy unholy blood be shed," as it was by his sons Adrammelech and Sharezer⁹. I will make it ¹⁰ thy grave; ¹¹ "what God maketh remains immovable, cannot be changed. But He "maketh thy grave" in hell, where not only that rich man in the Gospel hath his grave; but all who are or have been like him, and especially thou, O Asshur, of whom it is written, ¹² Asshur is there and all her company; his graves are about him: all of them slain, fallen by the sword. Whose graves are set in the sides of the pit and her company is round about her grave: all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which caused terror in the land of the living. Graven and molten image, the idols which men adore, the images of their vanity, the created things which they worship instead of the true God (as they whose god is their belly), in which they busy themselves in this life, shall be their destruction in the Day of Judgement.

For thou art vile. Thou honouredst thyself and dishonouredst God, so shalt thou be dishonoured¹², as He saith, ¹³ Them that honour Me I will honour, and they that despise Me shall be lightly esteemed. So when he had said to Edom, ¹⁴ thou art greatly despised, he adds the ground of it, ¹⁵ The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee. For thou art vile. Great, honoured, glorious as Assyria or its ruler were in the eyes of men, the prophet tells him, what he was in himself, being such in the eyes of God, light, empty, as Daniel said to Belshazzar, ¹⁶ *Thou art weighed in the balances, and found wanting, of no account, vile*¹⁷.

15. Behold upon the mountains, the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace. From mountain-top to mountain-top by beacon-fires they spread the glad tidings. Suddenly the deliverance comes, sudden its announcement. Behold! Judah, before hindered by armies from going up to Jerusalem, its cities taken¹⁸, may now again keep the feasts there, and pay the vows, which "in trouble she promised;" for the wicked one, the ungodly Sennacherib, is utterly cut off, he shall no more pass through thee; "the army and king and empire of the Assyrians have perished." But the words of prophecy cannot be bound down to this. These large promises, which, as to this world, were forfeited in the next reign, when Manasseh was taken captive to Babylon, and still more in the seventy years' captivity, and more yet in that until now, look for a fulfilment, as they stand. They sound so absolute. "I will afflict thee no more," "the wicked shall no more pass through thee," "he is utterly (lit. the whole of him) cut off." Nahum joins on this signal complete deliverance from a temporal enemy, to the final deliverance of the people of God. The invasion of Sennacherib was an avowed conflict with God Himself. It was a defiance of God. He would make God's people, his; he would cut it off, that it be no more a people, and that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance¹⁹. There was a more "evil counsellor" behind, whose agent was Sennacherib. He, as he is the author of all murders and strife, so has he a special hatred for the Church, whether before or since Christ's Coming. Before, that he might cut off that Line from whom the Seed of the woman should be born, which should destroy his empire and crush himself, and that he might devour the Child who was to be born²⁰. Since, because her members are his freed captives, and she makes inroads on his kingdom, and he hates them because he hates God and Christ Who dwells in them. As the time of the birth of our Lord neared, his hate became more concentrated. God overruled the hatred of Edom or Moab, or the pride of Assyria, to His own ends, to preserve Israel by chastising it. Their hatred was from the evil one, because it was God's people, the seed of Abraham, the tribe of Judah, the line of David. If they could be cut off, they of whom Christ was to be born according to the flesh, and so, in all seeming, the hope of the world, were gone. Sennacherib then

¹ Alb. ² Wisd. xviii. 15. 16. ³ S. Jer. ⁴ xiv. 20. ⁵ חָסַד וּפְלִי are so joined De. xxvii. 15. Jud. xvii. 3, 4, xviii. 14. ⁶ Is. xxxvii. 19. ⁷ Rup. ⁸ S. Jer. ⁹ Is. xxxvii. 33. ¹⁰ He does not use the word עָשָׂה "made," but שָׂם "appointed" it, set it to be. "There I will make thy grave." Jon. Even Ew. has "making them thy grave." ¹¹ Ez. xxxii. 22, 23. ¹² From Dion. ¹³ 1 Sam. ii. 30. ¹⁴ Ob. 2. ¹⁵ Ib. 3. ¹⁶ Dan. v. 27. ¹⁷ So in Job's confession of himself, xl. 4, which, as addressed to God, can only be said of his intrinsic worthlessness. It stands contrasted with those whom God honours (כָּבֵד) 1 Sam. ii. 30; in Hif. "held cheap" (2 Sam. xix. 44, Ez. xxii. 7.) put to dishonour, Is. viii. 23. (contrasted with כָּבֵד). In Gen. xvi. 4, 5, it is added "in the eyes of" another; it is used of a thing 1 Sam. xviii. 23, 2 Kgs. iii. 13. The physical sense "were lightened" (of the waters of the deluge Gen. viii. 11.) does not authorise the interpretation of some, "art lessened in number;" nor would this be a ground why God should make its grave.

¹⁸ 2 Kings xviii. 13.

¹⁹ Ps. lxxxiii. 4.

²⁰ Rev. xii. 4.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.
† Heb. feast.
† Heb. Belial. * ver. 11, 12.

† keep thy solemn feasts, perform thy vows: for † the wicked shall no more pass through thee; † he is utterly cut off.

Before CHRIST
cir. 713.
† ver. 14.

was not a picture only, he was the agent of Satan, who used his hands, feet, tongue, to blaspheme God and war against His people. As then we have respect not to the mere agent, but to the principal, and should address him through those he employed (as Elisha said of the messenger who came to slay him, is not the sound of his master's feet behind him?), so the Prophet's words chiefly and most fully go to the instigator of Sennacherib, whose very name he names, Belial. It is the deliverance of the Church and the people of God which he foretells, and thanks God for. To the Church he says in the Name of God, *Though I have afflicted thee, I will afflict thee no more*². The yoke which He will burst is the yoke of the oppressor, of which Isaiah speaks, and which the Son, to be born of a Virgin, "the Mighty God, the Prince of Peace," was to *break*³; the yoke of sin and the bands of fleshly pleasure and evil habits, wherewith we were held captive, so that henceforth we should walk upright, unbowed, look up to heaven our home, and run the way of Thy commandments when Thou hast set my heart at liberty. Behold, then, upon the mountains, i. e. above all the height of this world, the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, i. e. of remission of sins and sanctification by the Spirit and the freedom and adoption as sons, and the casting out of the Prince of this world, that publisheth peace. O Judah, thou, the true people of God, keep thy solemn feasts, the substance of the figures of the law." "He who is ever engaged on the words deeds and thoughts of Him, Who is by nature Lord, the Word of God, ever liveth in His days, ever keepeth Lord's days. Yea he who ever prepareth himself for the true life and abstaineth from the sweets of this life which deceive the many, and who cherisheth not the mind of the flesh but chastens the body and enslaves it, is ever keeping the days of preparation. He too who thinketh that Christ our Passover was sacrificed for us, and that we must keep festival, eating the flesh of the Word, there is no time when he keepeth not the Passover, ever passing over in thought and every word and deed from the affairs of this life to God, and hastening to His city. Moreover whoso can say truthfully, we have risen together with Christ, yea and also, He hath together raised us and together seated us in the heavenly places in Christ, ever liveth in the days of Pentecost; and chiefly, when, going up into the upper room as the Apostles of Jesus, he giveth himself to supplication and prayer, that he may become meet for the rushing mighty wind from heaven, which mightily effaceth the evil in men and its fruits, meet too for some portion of the fiery tongue from God." "Such an one will keep the feast excellently, having the faith in Christ fixed, hallowed by the Spirit, glorious with the grace of adoption. And he will offer to God spiritual sacrifice, consecrating himself for an odour of sweetness, cultivating also every kind of virtue, temperance, continence, fortitude, endurance, charity, hope, love of the poor, goodness, longsuffering: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased. Every power of the enemy, which before had dominion over him, shall pass through no more, since Christ commanded the unclean spirits to depart into the abyss and giveth to those who love Him power to resist the enemy, and subdue the passions, and destroy sin and tread on serpents and scorpions and every power of the enemy."

And these feasts were to be kept "in the spirit not in the letter. For what availeth it to keep any feast without, unless there be the feast of contemplation in the soul?" Wherefore he adds, and pay thy vows, i. e. thyself, whom in Baptism thou hast vowed: for the Wicked One shall no more pass through thee. "For from what time, O Judah, Christ, by dying and rising again, hallowed thy feasts, he can no longer pass through thee. Thenceforth he perished wholly. Not that he has, in substance, ceased to be, but that the death of the human race, which through his envy came into this world, the two-fold death of body and soul, wholly perisheth. Where and when did this Belial perish? When died the death which he brought in, whence himself also is called Death? When Christ died, then died the death of our souls; and when Christ rose again, then perished the death of our bodies. When then, O Judah, thou keepest thy feasts, remember that thy very feast is He, of Whom thou sayest that by dying He conquered death and by rising He restored life. Hence it is said, Belial shall no more pass through thee. For if thou look to that alone, that Sennacherib departed, to return no more, and perished, it would not be true to say, Belial hath wholly perished! For after him many a Belial, such as he was, passed through thee, and hurt thee far more. Perchance thou sayest, 'so long as Nineveh standeth, how sayest thou, that Belial has wholly perished? So long as the world standeth, how shall I be comforted, that death hath perished? For lo! persecutors armed with death have stormed, and besides them, many sons of Belial, of whom Anti-Christ will be the worst. How then sayest thou, that Belial has wholly perished?' It follows, the Scatterer hath gone up before thee. To Judah in the flesh, Nebuchadnezzar who went up against Nineveh, was worse than Sennacherib. Who then is He Who went up before thee, and dispersed the world, that great Nineveh, that thou shouldst have full consolation? Christ Who descended, Himself ascended; and as He ascended, so shall He come to disperse Nineveh, i. e. to judge the world. What any persecutor doth meanwhile, yea or the Devil himself or Anti-Christ, taketh nothing from the truth, that Belial hath wholly perished. The prince of this world is cast out. For nothing which they do, or can do, hinders, that both deaths of body and soul are swallowed up in His victory, Who hath ascended to heaven? Belial cannot in the members kill the soul, which hath been made alive by the death of the Head, i. e. Christ; and as to the death of the body, so certain is it that it will perish, that thou mayest say fearlessly that it hath perished, since Christ the Head hath risen."

Each fall of an enemy of the Church, each recovery of a sinful soul being a part of this victory, the words may be applied to each. The Church or the soul are bidden to keep the feast and pay their vows, whatever in their trouble they promised to God. "It is said to souls, which confess the Lord, that the devil who, before, wasted thee and bowed thee with that most heavy yoke hath, in and with the idols which thou madest for thyself, perished; keep thy feasts and pay to God thy vows, singing with the Angels continually, for no more shall Belial pass through thee, of whom the Apostle too saith, What concord hath Christ with Belial? The words too, Behold upon the mountains the feet of him that bringeth

¹ 2 Kings vi. 32.² v. 12.³ ix. 4, and 6.⁴ Orig. c. Cels. viii. n. 22.⁵ S. Cyr.⁶ Rup.⁷ S. Jer.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

CHAPTER II.

1 The fearful and victorious armies of God against Nineveh.

|| Or, The disperser, or, hammer.
a Jer. 60. 23.
b Jer. 51. 11,
12. ch. 3. 14.

HE ||^a that dasheth in pieces is come up before thy face: ^bkeep the munition, watch the way, make thy good tidings, that publisheth peace" belong, in a degree, to all preachers of the Gospel. "1 No one can preach peace, who is himself below and cleaveth to earthly things. For wars are for the good things of earth. If thou wouldest preach peace to thyself and thy neighbour, be raised above the earth and its goods, riches and glory. Ascend to the heavenly mountains, whence David also, lifting up his eyes, hoped that his help would come."

C. II. The Prophet, having foretold the destruction of Sennacherib, and in him how the enemy of Judah is wholly cut off, goes on to describe the destruction of Nineveh, and with it of his whole kingdom, and, under it, of Anti-Christ and Satan.

1. *He that dasheth in pieces, rather, the Disperser*², the instrument of God, whereby He should break her in pieces like a potter's vessel, or should scatter her in all lands, is come up against thy face, O Nineveh, i. e. either, over against thee³, confronting her as it were, face to face, or directed against thee⁴. From the description of the peace of Judah, the Prophet turns suddenly to her oppressor, to whom, not to Judah, the rest of the prophecy is directed. Jacob and Israel are spoken of, not to⁵. The destroyer of Nineveh went up against the face of Nineveh, not in the presence of Judah and Jacob, who were far away and knew nothing of it. Keep the munition. While all in Judah is now peace, all in Nineveh is tumult. God Whom they had defied, saying that Hezekiah could not ⁶turn away the face of one captain of the least of his servants, now bids them prepare to meet him whom He would send against them. *Gird up thy loins now, like a man*⁷. Thou who wouldest lay waste others, now, if thou canst, keep thyself. The strength of the words is the measure of the irony. They had challenged God; He in turn challenges them to put forth all their might.

*Fence thy defences*⁸, we might say. Their strong walls, high though they were, unassailable by any then known skill of besiegers, would not be secure.

The prophet uses a kindred and allusive word, that their protection needed to be itself protected; and this, by one continued watchfulness. Watch, he adds, the way: espy out⁹ (as far as thou canst), the coming of the enemy; strengthen the loins, the seat of strength¹⁰. Elsewhere they are said to be girded up for any exertion. Fortify thy strength exceedingly. The expression is rare¹¹: commonly it is said of some part of the human frame, knees, arms, or mind, or of man by God.

The same words are strong mockery to those who resist God, good counsel to those who trust in God. *Keep the munition, for He Who keepeth thee will not sleep*¹²; watch the way, by which the enemy may approach from afar, for Satan approachloins strong, fortify thy power mightily.

2 ^cFor the LORD hath turned away || the excellency of Jacob, as the excellency of Israel: for ^dthe emptiers have emptied them out, and marred their vine branches.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

^c Isa. 10. 12.
Jer. 25. 29.
|| Or, the pride of Jacob as the pride of Israel.
^d Ps. 80. 12.
Hos. 10. 1.

eth, sometimes suddenly, sometimes very stealthily and subtly, transforming himself into an angel of light. "13 Watch also the way by which thou art to go, as it is said, 14 Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein; so that, having stood in many ways, we may come to that Way which saith, I am the Way." Then,¹⁵ make thy loins strong, as the Saviour commandeth His disciples, *Let your loins be girded about*¹⁶, and the Apostle says, 17 Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth; for nothing so strengtheneth as the Truth. For Christ being the Truth, whoso with his whole heart hath believed in Christ, is strong against himself, and hath power over the loins, the seat of the passions. Then, since this warfare is hard, he adds, be strong, fortify thy power mightily; resist not listlessly, but vehemently; and that, in His strength Who hath strengthened our nature, taking it to Himself and uniting it with the Godhead. For without Him, strong though thou be, thou wilt avail nothing.

2. For the Lord hath turned away (rather restoreth) the excellency of Jacob, speaking of what should come, as already come. For Nineveh falls, because God restores His people, whom it had oppressed. The restoration of God's favour to His Church is the season of His punishment of their enemies; as, again, His displeasure against her enemies is a token of His favour to her. When Herod was smitten by God, 18 the word of God grew and multiplied. A long captivity was still before Judah, yet the destruction of the Assyrian was the earnest that every oppressing city should cease¹⁹.

The excellency of Jacob. The word, excellency, is used in a good or bad sense; bad, if man takes the excellency to himself; good, as given by God. This is decisive against a modern popular rendering; "20 has returned to the excellency of Jacob;" for Scripture knows of no excellency of Jacob, except God Himself or grace from God. Jacob, if separated from God or left by Him, has no excellency, to which God could return.

As the excellency of Israel. Both the ten and the two tribes had suffered by the Assyrian. The ten had been carried captive by Shalmanezzer, the two had been harassed by Sennacherib. After the captivity of the ten tribes, the name Jacob is used of Judah only. It may be then, that the restoration of God's favour is promised to each separately. Or, 21 there may be an emphasis in the names themselves. Their forefather bore the name of Jacob in his troubled days of exile; that of Israel was given him on his return²². It would then mean, the afflicted people (Jacob) shall be restored to its utmost glory as Israel. The sense is the same.

For the emptiers have emptied them out. Their chastisement would have it, that Judah is addressed.

¹ Theoph. ² כִּסֵּי is a partic. used as a proper name. כִּסֵּי is indeed used as a noun = כִּסֵּי as united with the sword and arrow, and so an instrument of war, battle axe or the like (Prov. xxv. 18.), like כִּסֵּי (Jer. li. 20.), used of Nebuchadnezzar by God. Yet the like phrase אֵלֶּי כִּסֵּי (Mic. ii. 13.) and the use itself of אֵלֶּי, "went up," make it probable that an agent is meant. כִּסֵּי is always "dispersed;" the sense, "broke in pieces," occurs only in כִּסֵּי Jer. xxiii. 29, כִּסֵּי Job. xvi. 12, חֲקֵץ חֲבִיבָה Hab. iii. 6, חֲקֵץ חֲבִיבָה Jer. xxv. 34, and in כִּסֵּי, כִּסֵּי.

³ As Gen. xxxii. 22, וְהָיָה עָלַי מִיָּדָה; Job iv. 15, מִיָּדָה עָלַי.

⁴ As Ps. xxi. 13, וְהָיָה עָלַי מִיָּדָה, which is supported by the use of עָלַי, "went up against," as 2 Kgs. xvii. 3, xviii. 25, Jo. i. 6. ⁵ ver. 2. Jon., Rashi, Kim., Abarb.

⁶ Is. xxxvi. 9. ⁷ Job. xl. 7. ⁸ אֲרֹחַ קִשְׁיָהוּ The Imp. אֲרֹחַ would have expressed a simple command; the Infin. says, what has to be done. ⁹ עֵקֶה ¹⁰ The use of the adj. אֲרֹחַ "strong" Dan. vii. 7, shows that the meaning of the root was not lost, though occurring only in the adj. אֲרֹחַ.

¹¹ It occurs Prov. xxiv. 5. of the man of understanding, and Am. ii. 14, of what man cannot do. ¹² Ps. cxxi. 3. ¹³ S. Jer. ¹⁴ Jer. vi. 16.

¹⁵ From S. Jer. ¹⁶ Luke xii. 35. ¹⁷ Eph. vi. 14. ¹⁸ Acts xii. 24. ¹⁹ Is. xxxiii. 1. ²⁰ See ab. Intrap. 371. n. 3. ²¹ Sanct. ²² Gen. xxxii. 28.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

Isa. 63. 2, 3:
Or, dyed
scarlet.
Or, fiery torches.

3 The shield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet: the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken.

4 The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jumble one against another in the broad ways: † they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings.

5 He shall recount his worthies: they shall stumble in their walk; they shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the † defence shall be prepared.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

† Heb.
their show.

Or,
gallants.

† Heb. covering, or,
coverer.

is the channel of their restoration. Unlike the world, their emptiness is their fulness, as the fulness of the world is its emptiness. The world is cast down, not to arise; for 1 woe to him that is alone when he falleth: for he hath not another to help him up. The Church falleth, but *to arise*²; the people is restored, because it had borne chastening³; *for the Lord hath restored the excellency of Jacob; for the emptiers have emptied them out and marred their vinebranches*⁴, i. e. its fruit-bearing branches, that, as far as in them lay, it should not bear fruit unto God; but to cut the vine is, by God's grace, to make it shoot forth and bear fruit more abundantly.

3, 4. Army is arrayed against army; the armies, thus far, of God against the army of His enemy; all without is order; all within, confusion. The assailing army, from its compactness and unity, is spoken of, both as many and one. The might is of many; the order and singleness of purpose is as of one. The shield, collectively, not shields. His mighty men; He, who was last spoken of, was Almighty God, as He says in Isaiah; 5 I have commanded My consecrated ones; I have also called My mighty ones, them that rejoice in My highness.

Is reddened, either with blood of the Assyrians, shed in some previous battle, before the siege began, or (which is the meaning of the word elsewhere⁶), an artificial colour, the colour of blood being chosen, as expressive of fiery fierceness. The valiant men are in scarlet; for beauty and terror, as, again being the colour of blood⁷. It was especially the colour of the dress of their nobles⁸, one chief colour of the Median dress, from whom the Persians adopted their's⁹. The chariots shall be with flaming torches, literally *with the fire of steels*¹⁰, or of sharp incisive instruments. Either way the words seem to indicate that the chariots were in some way armed with steel. For steel was not an ornament, nor do the chariots appear to have been ornamented with metal. Iron would have hindered the primary object of lightness and speed. Steel, as distinct from iron, is made only for incisiveness. In either way, it is probable, that scythed chariots were already in use. Against such generals, as the younger Cyrus¹¹ and Alexander¹², they were of no avail; but they must have been terrific instruments against undisciplined armies. The rush and noise of the British chariots disturbed for a time even Cæsar's Roman troops¹³. They were probably in use long before¹⁴. Their use among the ancient Britons¹⁵, Gauls¹⁶ and Belgians¹⁷, as also probably among the Canaanites¹⁸, evinces that they existed among very rude people. The objection that the Assyrian chariots are not represented in the monuments as armed with scythes is an oversight, since those spoken of by Nahum may have been Median, certainly were not Assyrian. *In the day of His preparation*¹⁹, when He mustereth the hosts for the battle; and the fir-trees shall be terribly shaken; i. e. fir-spears²⁰ (the weapon being often named from the wood of which it is made) shall be made to quiver through the force wherewith they shall be hurled.

The chariots shall rage (or *madden*²¹, as the driving of Jchu is said to be furiously, lit. in madness) in the streets. The city is not yet taken; so, since this takes place in the streets and broad ways, they are the confused preparations of the besieged. They shall jumble one against another, shall run rapidly to and fro, restlessly; their show (E. M.) is like torches, leaving streaks of fire, as they pass rapidly along. *They shall run vehemently*²², like the lightnings, swift but vanishing.

5. He shall recount his worthies. The Assyrian king wakes as out of a sleep, lit. "he remembers his mighty men"²³; they stumble in their walk, lit. *paths*²⁴, not through haste only and eager fear, but from want of inward might and the aid of God. Those whom God leadeth stumble not²⁵. "Perplexed every way and not knowing what they ought to do, their mind wholly darkened and almost drunken with ills, they reel to and fro, turn from one thing to another, and in all labour in vain."

They shall make haste to the walls thereof, and the defence (lit. the covering) shall be prepared. The Assyrian monuments leave no doubt that a Jewish writer²⁷ is right in the main, in describing this as a covered shelter, under which an enemy approached the city; "a covering of planks with skins upon them; under it those who fight against the city come to the wall and mine the wall underneath, and it is a shield over them from the stones, which are cast from off the wall."

The monuments, however, exhibit this shelter, as connected not with mining but with a battering ram, mostly with a sharp point, by which they loosened the walls²⁸. Another covert was employed to protect single miners who picked out Arrian, Tactic. c. 3.) attributes their invention to Cyrus. For Xenophon, who was a good witness as to what he saw, shews himself ignorant of the previous history (See ab. p. 368.). He himself quotes Ctesias as an authority (Anab. i. 8.). The exaggerations of Ctesias are probably those of his Persian informants.

¹⁵ Sil. Ital. xvii. 417, 418. Tac. Agric. 35, 36. Mela iii. 6. Jornandes de reb. Goth. c. 2

¹⁶ Mela iii. 6. ¹⁷ Lucan i. 426. S. Jerome in Is. ult.

¹⁸ The use of a little iron, more or less, in strengthening the wheels &c., could hardly entitle them to be called "chariots of iron." Jos. xvii. 16, 18. Jnd. i. 19, iv. 3, 13.

¹⁹ Jos. as in Jer. xlv. 14, Ez. vii. 14, xxxviii. 7. ²⁰ See on Hos. xiv. 8. p. 91.

²¹ The words are adopted by Jeremiah xlv. 9.

²² פָּרַח Intensive from פָּרַח. ²³ As iii. 18. Jud. v. 13. Neh. iii. 5.

²⁴ So the Heb. text. Their many ways may be opposed to the oneness of the army of God (See v. 3.) ²⁵ Is. lxiii. 13. ²⁶ S. Cyr. ²⁷ Kimchi.

²⁸ See in Rawlinson's 5 Empires ii. 78. "All of them [the battering-rams] were covered with a frame-work of osier, wood, felt, or skins, for the better protection of those

¹ Eccles. iv. 10. ² Micah vii. 8. ³ Ez. xxxvi. 3, 6, 7. ⁴ See Ps. lxxx. 12, 13.

⁵ Is. xlii. 3. ⁶ The form דָּמָם is used five times in Exodus of the artificial colour of the dyed ramskins. But there is no proof of any such custom as to the shields. If reddened by actual blood, it must have been in a previous battle, since Nahum is thus far describing the preparations, לְפָנֵי הַמָּלָכִים. The gleaming of the brass of the shields in the sun (1 Macc. vi. 39) could hardly be called their being reddened. ⁷ Ælian V. H. vi. 6. Val. Max. ii. 6. 2. ⁸ Xenophon (Cyrop. viii. 3, 3) implies that they were costly treasures which Cyrus distributed. ⁹ Strabo xi. 13. 9. ¹⁰ On פָּרַח see Introd. pp. 371, 372.

¹¹ At Cunaxa, Xen. Anab. i. 8. ¹² At Arbela, Arr. iii. 13, Q. Curt. iv. 51, and, upon experience, by Eumenes, "haud ignarus pugnae," Liv. xxxvii. 41, Appian Syr. 33. Diodorus (xvii. 58.) describes their terrible vehemence, when not evaded. Uneven ground naturally disordered them. Tac. Agr. c. 36. Vegetius iii. 24.

¹³ De bell. Gall. iv. 33, 34.

¹⁴ Ctesias, who speaks of them as long prior (quoted by Diod. Sic. ii. 5.) is, on Persian matters, much better authority than Xenophon who (Cyrop. vi. 1. as explained by

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

6 The gates of the rivers shall be opened, and the palace shall be dissolved.

Or, molten.
Or, that which was established,
or, there was a stand made.
Or, discovered.

7 And Huzzab shall be led away captive, she shall be brought up, and her maids shall lead her as with the voice single stones with a pick-axe¹. The Assyrian sculptures shew, in the means employed against or in defence of their engines, how central a part of the siege they formed². Seven of them are represented in one siege³. The "ram"⁴ is mentioned in Ezekiel as the well-known and ordinary instrument of a siege.

Thus v. 3. describes the attack; v. 4, the defence; the two first clauses of v. 5, the defence; the two last, the attack. This quick interchange only makes the whole more vivid.

"⁵ But what availeth it to build the house, unless the Lord build it? What helpeth it to shut the gates, which the Lord unbarreth?" On both sides is put forth the full strength of man; there seems a stand-still to see, what will be, and God brings to pass His own work in His own way.

6. The gates of the rivers shall be opened, and the palace shall be dissolved. All gives way in an instant at the will of God; the strife is hushed; no more is said of war and death; there is no more resistance or bloodshed; no sound except the wailing of the captives, the flight of those who can escape, while the conquerors empty it of the spoil, and then she is left a waste. The swelling of the river and the opening made by it may have given rise to the traditional account of Ctesias, although obviously exaggerated as to the destruction of the wall. The exaggerated character of that tradition is not inconsistent with, it rather implies, a basis of truth. It is inconceivable that it should have been thought, that walls, of the thickness which Ctesias had described, were overthrown by the swelling of any river, unless some such event as Ctesias relates, that the siege was ended by an entrance afforded to the enemy through some bursting-in of the river, had been true. Nahum speaks nothing of the wall, but simply of the opening of the gates of the rivers, obviously the gates, by which the inhabitants could have access to the rivers⁶, which otherwise would be useless to them except as a wall. These rivers correspond to the rivers, the artificial divisions of the Nile, by which No or Thebes was defended, or ⁷ the rivers of Babylon which yet was washed by the one stream, the Euphrates. But Nineveh was surrounded and guarded by actual rivers, the Tigris and the Khauser, and, (assuming those larger dimensions of Nineveh, which are supported by evidences so various⁸) the greater Zab, which was "called ⁹ the frantic Zab" on account of the violence of its current." contained (says Ainsworth¹⁰), when we saw it, a larger body who worked the implement;—some appear to have been stationary, others in early times had six wheels, in the later times four only. Sometimes with the ram and its framework was a moveable tower, containing soldiers, who, at once, fought the enemy on a level and protected the engine."

² "Fire was the weapon usually turned against the ram, torches, burning tow or other inflammable substances being cast from the walls upon its framework." To prevent this [its being set on fire], the workers of the ram were sometimes provided with a supply of water; sometimes they suspended from a pole in front of their engine, a curtain of leather, or some other non-inflammable substance. In a bas-relief (Layard's Monuments Series ii. Pl. 21.) where an enormous number of torches are seen in the air, every battering-ram is so protected. Or the besieged sought to catch the point of the ram by a chain, drawing it upwards; the besieger with metal hooks to keep it down." from Rawl. Ib. pp. 79, 80, referring further to Layard's Monuments, Series i. Pl. 17, 19. ³ lb. p. 79. ⁴ Ezek. iv. 2. ⁵ S. Jer.

⁶ Such explanations as "gates whereby the enemy poured in as rivers" (Ros.), or "gates of Nineveh which was guarded by rivers" (Ew.), or "of the streets, where the inhabitants surged like rivers" (Hitz.), are plainly not literal.

⁷ Ps. cxxxvii. 1.

⁸ Kaswini, quoted by Tuch p. 35.

⁹ The word, which occurs 18 times, is used of the melting of the earth at the voice or of doves, tabering upon their breasts.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

8 But Nineveh is of old like a pool of water: yet they shall flee away. Stand, shall they cry; but none shall look back..

Isa. 38. 14, & 59. 11.
Or, from the days that she hath been.
Or, cause them to turn.

of water than the Tigris, whose tributaries are not supplied by so many snow-mountains as those of the Zab." Of these, if the Tigris be now on a level lower than the ruins of Nineveh, it may not have been so formerly. The Khauser, in its natural direction, ran through Nineveh where, now as of old, it turns a mill, and must, of necessity, have been fenced by gates; else any invader might enter at will; as, in modern times, Mosul has its "gate of the bridge." A break in these would obviously let in an enemy, and might the more paralyze the inhabitants, if they had any tradition, that the river alone could or would be their enemy, as Nahum himself prophesied. Subsequently inaccuracy or exaggeration might easily represent this to be an overthrow of the walls themselves. It was all one, in which way the breach was made.

The palace shall be dissolved. The prophet unites the beginning and the end. The river-gates were opened; what had been the fence against the enemy became an entrance for them: with the river, there poured in also the tide of the people of the enemy. The palace, then, the imperial abode, the centre of the empire, embellished with the history of its triumphs, sank, was dissolved¹¹, and ceased to be. It is not a physical loosening of the sun-dried bricks by the stream which would usually flow harmless by; but the dissolution of the empire itself. "¹² The temple i. e. his kingdom was destroyed." The palaces both of Khorsabad and Kouyunjik lay near the Khauser¹³ and both bear the marks of fire¹⁴.

7. The first word should be rendered, *And it is decreed; She shall be laid bare. It is decreed*¹⁵. All this took place, otherwise than man would have thought, because it was the will of God. She (the people of the city, under the figure of a captive woman) *shall be laid bare*¹⁶, in shame, to her reproach; *she shall be brought up*¹⁷, to judgement, or from Nineveh as being now sunk low and depressed; and her maids, the lesser cities, as female attendants on the royal city, and their inhabitants represented as women, both as put to shame and for weakness. The whole empire of Nineveh was overthrown by Nebopalassar. Yet neither was the special shame wanting, that the noble matrons and virgins were so led captives in shame and sorrow. They shall lead her, as with the voice of doves, moaning; yet, for fear, with a subdued voice.

8. But Nineveh is of old like a pool of water i. e. of many presence or touch of God, Ps. xlv. 7, Nah. i. 5, Am. ix. 5; of the "melting away" of a multitude, 1 Sam. xiv. 16; of all Philistia, Is. xiv. 31; (act.) of God working the dissolution of one being, Job xxx. 22, or of many, Is. lxiv. 6; of the hearts of people, melting for fear, Ex. xv. 15, Jos. ii. 9, 24, Ps. lxxv. 4, cvii. 26, Jer. xlix. 23, Ez. xxi. 20: once only it is used physically of water, of the clouds softened by showers, Ps. lxxv. 11; and in the ideal image "the hills shall melt," being dissolved, as it were, in the rich stream of the abundant vintage. Am. ix. 13.

¹² See above Introd. to Jonah p. 255. Assurbanipal, the last great monarch of Assyria, built his palace on the mound of Kouyunjik. (Rawl. 5 Emp. ii. 496). "The Khors-su, which runs on this side of the Khorsabad ruins, often overflows its banks, and pours its waters against the palace-mound. The gaps N. and S. of the mound, may have been caused by its violence." Ib. i. 358.

¹³ See ab. p. 368 n. c. ¹⁴ This is the simple rendering of חָרַב, Hof. of נָחַץ. In Ch. יִצֵּר, "firm," Dan. vi. 13; "reliable," Dan. ii. 45, vii. 10; יָצִיב, "certainly," Dan. iii. 24, יִצֵּר, "of a certainty," Dan. ii. 8. Also in Phoen.; Ges. Thes. p. 66. The retention of Huzzab as a proper name for the queen, is derived from R. Samuel Hannagid in Ibn Ezra. The ground for this, alleged in Rashi, viz. the use of חָרַב Ps. xlv. 10, betrays its origin. Kimchi, with the same etymology, explains it of the palace.

¹⁵ The meaning of חָרַב (חר) is determined by that of the active חָרַב, which is always "laid bare," not "carried captive."

¹⁶ As in c. iii. 5. Is. xlvii. 2, 3.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

Or, and their infinite store,
Heb. vessels of desire.

* Isa. 13. 7,
Dan. 5. 6.
† Jer. 30. 6.

* Joel 2. 6.

† Job 4. 10, 11.
Ezek. 19. 2-7.

9 Take ye the spoil of silver, take the spoil of gold: || for there is none end of the store and glory out of all the † pleasant furniture.

10 She is empty, and void, and waste: and the ^sheart melteth, and ^bthe knees smite together, ⁱand much pain is in all loins, and ^kthe faces of them all gather blackness.

11 Where is the dwelling of ^lthe lions, peoples¹, gathered from all quarters and settled there, her multitudes being like the countless drops, full, untroubled, with no ebb or flow, fenced in, from the days that she hath been, yet even therefore stagnant and corrupted², not "a fountain of living waters," during 600 years of unbroken empire; even lately it had been assailed in vain³; now its hour was come, the sluices were broken; the waters poured out. It was full not of citizens only, but of other nations poured into it. An old historian says⁴, "The chief and most powerful of those whom Ninus settled there, were the Assyrians, but also, of other nations, whoever willed." Thus the pool was filled; but at the rebuke of the Lord they flee. Stand, stand, the Prophet speaks in the name of the widowed city; "shut the gates, go up on the walls, resist the enemy, gather yourselves together, form a band to withstand," but none shall look back to the mother-city which calls them; all is forgotten, except their fear; parents, wives, children, the wealth which is plundered, home, worldly repute. So will men leave all things, for the life of this world. All that a man hath, will he give for his life. Why not for the life to come?

9. Take ye the spoil of silver, take the spoil of gold. Nineveh had not hearkened of old to the voice of the Prophet, but had turned back to sin; it cannot hearken now, for fear. He turns to the spoiler to whom God's judgements assigned her, and who is too ready to hear. The gold and silver, which the last Assyrian king had gathered into the palace which he fired, was mostly removed (the story says, treacherously) to Babylon. Arbaces is said to have borne this and to have removed the residue, to the amount of many talents, to Agbatana, the Median capital⁵. For there is none end of the store. Nineveh had stored up from her foundation until then, but at last for the spoiler. ⁷*When thou shalt cease to spoil, thou shalt be spoiled.* Many ⁸*perish and leave their wealth to others.* ⁹*The wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just. And glory out of all the pleasant furniture*, [lit. as in the Margin, "glory out of all vessels of desire"] i. e. however large the spoil, it would be but a portion only; yet all their wealth, though more than enough for the enemy and for them, could not save them. Her "glory" was but a "weight" to weigh her down, that she should not rise again¹⁰. Their wealth brought on the day of calamity, availed not therein, although it could not be drawn dry even by the spoiler. ¹¹*They could not spoil so much as she supplied to be spoiled.*

10. She is empty and void and waste. The completeness of her judgement is declared first under that solemn number, and the feedingplace of the young lions, where the lion even the old lion, walked, and the lion's whelp, and none made them afraid?

12 The lion did tear in pieces enough for his whelps, and strangled for his lionesses, and filled his holes with prey, and his dens with ravin.

13 ^mBehold, I am against thee, saith the Lord of hosts, and I will burn her chariots in the smoke, and the sword shall

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

^m Ezek. 20. 3.
& 38. 3. & 39.
1. ch. 3. 5.

Three, and the three words in Hebrew are nearly the same¹², with the same meaning, only each word fuller than the former, as picturing a growing desolation; and then under four heads (in all seven) also a growing fear. First the heart, the seat of courage and resolve and high purpose, melteth; then the knees smite together, tremble, shake, under the frame; then, much pain is in all loins, lit. "strong pains as of a woman in travail," writhing and doubling the whole body, and making it wholly powerless and unable to stand upright, shall bow the very loins, the seat of strength¹³, and, lastly, *the faces of them all gather blackness*¹⁴, the fruit of extreme pain, and the token of approaching dissolution.

11. Where is the dwelling of the lions, and the feedingplace of the young lions? Great indeed must be the desolation, which should call forth the wonder of the prophet of God. He asks "where is it?" For so utterly was Nineveh to be effaced, that its place should scarcely be known, and now is known by the ruins which have been buried, and are dug up. The messengers of her king had asked, ¹⁵*Where are the gods of Hamath and of Arpad? of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivah?* And now of her it is asked, "Where is Nineveh?" It had destroyed utterly all lands, and now itself is utterly destroyed. The lion dwelt, fed, walked there, up and down, at will; all was spacious and secure; he terrified all, and none terrified him; he tore, strangled, laid up, as he willed, booty in store; but when he had filled it to the full, he filled up also the measure of his iniquities, and his sentence came from God. Nineveh had set at nought all human power, and destroyed it; now, therefore, God appeareth in His own Person.

13. Behold I, Myself, am against thee [lit. toward thee]. God, in His long-suffering, had, as it were, looked away from him; now He looked towards¹⁶ him, and in His sight what wicked one should stand? Saith the Lord of hosts, Whose power is infinite and He changeth not, and all the armies of heaven, the holy angels and evil spirits and men are in His Hand, whereto He directs or overrules them. And I will burn her chariots in the smoke. The Assyrian sculptures attest how greatly their pride and strength lay in their chariots. They exhibit the minute embellishment of the chariots and horses¹⁷. Almost inconceivably light for speed, they are pictured as whirled onward by the two¹⁸ or, more often, three¹⁹ powerful steeds with eye of fire²⁰, the bodies of the slain²¹ (or, in peace, the lion²²) under their feet, the mailed warriors, with bows stretched to the utmost, shooting at the more distant foe. Sennacherib gives a terrific picture of the fierceness of their

¹ Rev. xvii. 1.

² By Cyaxares Her. i. 106.

³ Diod. Sic. ii. 28.

⁴ Pr. xiii. 22.

⁵ See ab. p. 370, 371. bookah, oomebookah, oomebullakah.

⁶ See Jer. xlviii. 11.

⁷ Ctesias ap. Diod. ii. 3.

⁸ Is. xxxiii. 1.

⁹ Zech. v. 8. Ex. xv. 10.

¹⁰ Job ii. 4.

¹¹ Ps. xlix. 10.

¹² S. Jer.

¹³ Prov. xxxi. 17.

¹⁴ See on Joel ii. 6.

¹⁵ As in Ps. xxxvii. 20.

¹⁶ See Rawl. 5 Emypres ii. 4-21.

¹⁷ Layard Monuments, Series i. Plate 18, 21, 23, 27, 28.

¹⁸ See a striking illustration in Rawl. ii. 15. (from Boutcher.)

¹⁹ Layard Ser. i. 27, 28. ii. 45, 46.

²⁰ 2 Kings xviii. 34.

²¹ Rawl. Ib. 10. 11. 13.

²² Rawl. 1b. 13. Layard Ninev. ii. 77.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713. devour thy young lions: and I will cut off thy prey from the earth, and the voice of thy messengers shall no more be heard. Before CHRIST

cir. 713.

2 Kin. 18. 17, 19. & 19. 9, 23.

onslaught. "The armour, the arms, taken in my attacks, swam in the blood of my enemies as in a river; the war-chariots, which destroy man and beast, had, in their course, crushed the bloody bodies and limbs¹." All this their warlike pride should be but fuel for fire, and vanish in smoke, an emblem of pride, swelling, mounting like a column towards heaven, disappearing. Not a brand shall then be saved out of the burning; nothing half-consumed; but the fire shall burn, until there be nothing left to consume, as, in Sodom and Gomorrah², the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace. And the sword of the vengeance of God shall devour the young lions, his hope for the time to come, the flower of his youth; and I will cut off thy prey, what thou hast robbed, and so that thou shouldest rob no more, but that thy spoil should utterly cease from the earth, and the voice of thy messengers shall be no more heard, such as Rabshakeh, whereby they insulted and terrified the nations and blasphemed God.

In the spiritual sense, Nineveh being an image of the world, the prophecy speaks of the inroad made upon it through the Gospel, its resistance, capture, desolation, destruction. First, He that ruleth with a rod of iron, came and denounced woe to it because of offencess; then His *mighty ones*³ in His Name. Their shield is red, the shield of faith, kindled and glowing with love. Their raiment too is red, because they wash it in the Blood of the Lamb, and conquer through the Blood of the Lamb, and many shed their own blood for a witness to them. The day of His preparation is the whole period, until the end of the world, in which the Gospel is preached, of which the prophets and apostles speak, as *the day of salvation*⁴; to the believing world a day of salvation; to the unbelieving, of preparation for judgement. All which is done, judgements, mercy, preaching, miracles, patience of the saints, martyrdom, all which is spoken, done, suffered, is part of the one preparation for the final judgement. The chariots, flashing with light as they pass, are the chariots of salvation, bearing the brightness of the doctrine of Christ and the glory of His truth throughout the world, enlightening while they wound; the "spears" are the word of God, slaying to make alive.

On the other hand, in resisting, the world clashes with itself. It would oppose the Gospel, yet knows not how; is "maddened with rage, and gnashes its teeth, that it can prevail nothing⁵." On the broad ways which lead to death, where Wisdom uttereth her voice and is not heard, it is hemmed in, and cannot find a straight path; its chariots dash one against another, and yet they breathe their ancient fury, and run to and fro like lightning, as the Lord saith, *I beheld Satan, as lightning, fall from Heaven*⁷. Then shall they remember their mighty ones, all the might of this world which they ascribed to their gods, their manifold triumphs, whereby in Heathen times their empire was established; they shall gather strength against strength, but it shall be powerless and real weakness. While they prepare for a long siege, without hand their gates give way; the kingdom falls, the world is taken captive by a blessed captivity, suddenly, unawares, as one says in the second century; "⁸ Men cry out that the state is beset, that the Christians are in their fields, in their forts, in their islands!" These mourn over their past sins, and beat their breasts, in token of their sorrow; yet sweeter shall be the plaint of their sorrow, than any past joy. So they shall mourn as doves, and their mourning is as melody and the voice of praise in the ear of the Most High. One part of the inhabitants of the world being thus blessedly taken, the rest are fled. So in all nearness of God's judgements, those who are not brought nearer, flee further. "They flee, and look not back, and none heareth the Lord speaking, *Return, ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings*⁹. So then, hearing not His Voice, stand, stand, they flee away from His Presence in Mercy, into darkness for ever. Such is the lot of the inhabitants of the world; and what is the world itself? The prophet answers what it has been. A pool of water, into which all things, the riches and glory, and wisdom, and pleasures of this world, have flowed in on all sides, and which gave back nothing. All ended in itself. The water came from above, and became stagnant in the lowest part of the earth. "⁷ For all the wisdom of this world, apart from the sealed fountain of the Church, and of which it cannot be said, the streams thereof make glad the city of God nor are of those waters which, above the heavens, praise the Name of the Lord, however large they may seem, yet are little, and are enclosed in a narrow bound." These either are hallowed to God, like the spoils of Egypt, as when the eloquence of S. Cyprian was won through the fishermen¹⁰, or the gold and silver are offered to Him, or they are left to be wasted and burned up. All which is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, all under the sun, remain here. "¹¹ If they are thine, take them with thee. *When he dieth, he shall carry nothing away, his glory shall not descend after him*¹². True riches are, not wealth, but virtues, which the conscience carries with it, that it may be rich for ever." The seven-fold terrors¹³, singly, may have a good sense⁶, that the stony heart shall be melted, and the stiff knees, which before were not bent to God, be bowed in the Name of Jesus. Yet more fully are they the deepening horrors of the wicked in the Day of Judgement, when *men's hearts shall fail them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth*¹⁴, closing with the everlasting confusion of face, the shame and everlasting contempt, to which the wicked shall rise. As the vessel over the fire is not cleansed, but blackened, so through the judgements of God, whereby the righteous are cleansed, the wicked gather but fresh defilement and hate. Lastly, the Prophet asks, Where is the dwelling of those who had made the world a den of ravin, where the lion, even the devil who is a roaring lion, and all Anti-Christ¹⁵, destroyed at will; where Satan made his dwelling in the hearts of the worldly, and tore in pieces for his whelps, i. e. slew souls of men and gave them over to inferior evil spirits to be tormented, and filled his holes with prey, the pit of hell with the souls which he deceived¹⁶? The question implies that they shall not be. "¹⁷ They which have seen him shall say, Where is he? God Himself answers, that He Himself will come against it to judgement, and destroy all might arrayed against God; and Christ shall ¹⁸*smite the Wicked one with the rod of His Mouth*, and the ¹⁹*sharp two-edged sword out of His mouth shall smite all nations, and the smoke of their*

¹ In Oppert Sargonides p. 51. The general accuracy of the decyphering is alone presupposed.

² Gen. xix. 23.

³ From Dion.

⁴ Is. xlix. 8. 2 Cor. vi. 2.

⁵ Habak. iii. 8.

⁶ S. Jer.

⁷ S. Luke x. 18.

⁸ Tert. Apol. c. 1. and p. 3. not. 9. Oxf. Tr. ⁹ Jer. iii. 22. ¹⁰ The Apostles. S. Aug.

¹¹ S. Bern. in Adv. Sermon. 4.

¹² Ps. xlix. 17.

¹³ v. 10.

¹⁴ S. Luke xxi. 26.

¹⁵ 1 John ii. 18. ¹⁶ Dion.

¹⁷ Job xx. 7.

¹⁸ Is. xi. 4.

¹⁹ Rev. i. 16, xix. 15. 21

Before CHRIST
cir. 713.

CHAPTER III.

1 The miserable ruin of Nineveh.

† Heb. city of bloods.

* Ezek. 22, 2,
3. & 24, 6, 9.
Hab. 2. 12.

† Jer. 47. 3.

WOE to the †^a bloody city! it is all full of lies and robbery; the prey departeth not;

2 The noise of a whip, and^b the noise of the rattling of the wheels, and of the torment ascendeth up for ever and ever¹; and it should no more oppress, nor "any messenger of Satan" go forth to harass the saints of God.

C. III. The prophecy of the destruction in Nineveh is resumed in a dirge over her; yet still as future. It pronounces a woe, yet to come².

1. Woe to the bloody city, lit. *city of bloods*³, i. e. of manifold bloodshedding, built and founded in blood⁴, as the prosperity of the world ever is. Murder, oppression, wresting of judgement, war out of covetousness, grinding or neglect of the poor, make it a city of bloods. Nineveh, or the world, is a city of the devil, as opposed to the "city of God." "Two sorts of love have made two sorts of cities; the earthly, love of self even to contempt of God; the Heavenly, love of God even to contempt of self. The one glorieth in itself, the other in the Lord." "Amid the manifold differences of the human race, in languages, habits, rites, arms, dress, there are but two kinds of human society, which, according to our Scriptures, we may call two cities. One is of such as wish to live according to the flesh; the other of such as will according to the Spirit."
"Of these, one is predestined to live for ever with God; the other, to undergo everlasting torment with the devil." Of this city, or evil world, Nineveh, the city of bloods, is the type.

It is all full of lies and robbery, better, it is all lie; it is full of robbery [rapine]. Lie includes all falsehood, in word or act, denial of God, hypocrisy; towards man, it speaks of treachery, treacherous dealing, in contrast with open violence or rapine⁷.
The whole being of the wicked is one lie, towards God and man; deceiving and deceived; leaving no place for God Who is the Truth; seeking through falsehood things which fail.
Man⁸ loveth vanity and seeketh after leasing. All were gone out of the way. "There were none in so great a multitude, for whose sake the mercy of God might spare so great a city."
It is full, not so much of booty as of rapine and violence.
The sin remains, when the profit is gone. Yet it ceaseth not, but persevereth to the end; *the prey departeth*¹⁰ not; they will neither leave the sin, nor the sin them; they neither repent, nor are weary of sinning. Avarice especially gains vigour in old age, and grows by being fed. The prey departeth not, but continues as a witness against it, as a lion's lair is defiled by the fragments of his prey.

2. The noise [lit. voice] of the whip. There is cry against cry;

¹ Rev. xiv. 11. ² נָקַד, when signifying "woe," is always of future woe, as lies in the word itself. It is used of classes of persons 25 times; against people, Samaria, Jerusalem or foreign nations, 13 times; of the past only as to the wailings at funerals. 1 Kgs.
xiii. 30, Jer. xxii. 18, xxxiv. 5. ³ As in E. M. The phrase occurs Ezek. xxii. 2, xxiv.
6, 9. So נָקַד, "a man" (2 Sam. xvi. 7, 8. Ps. v. 7) "men" (Ps. xxvi. 9, lv. 24, lix. 3, cxxxix. 19, Pr. xxx. 10) "a house" (2 Sam. xxi. 1) "of bloods," guilty of manifold bloodshed. ⁴ Hab. ii. 12, Jer. xxii. 13. ⁵ S. Aug. de Civ. D. xiv. 28. ⁶ Ib. c. 1.
⁷ נָקַד. The verb is used of the merciless "tearing" of the lion, "rending and there is no deliverer." Ps. vii. 3.

⁸ Ps. iv. 2. ⁹ Alb. ¹⁰ נָקַד is intrans. except in Mic. ii. 3, 4. ¹¹ Gen. iv. 10.
¹² נָקַד of the chariots, Jer. xlvii. 3, of the warhorse, Job xxxix. 24, of the loud tumult of battle, Is. ix. 4, Jer. x. 22.

¹³ נָקַד is used of the dancing of children, Job xxi. 11, of David before the ark, 1 Chr. xv. 29, of the satyrs, Is. xli. 21. Even when used of the trembling of the mountains before God, they are compared to living things, a calf, Ps. xxix. 6, rams, pransing horses, and of the jumping chariots. Before CHRIST

cir. 713.

3 The horseman lifteth up both † the[†] bright sword and the glittering spear:
and there is a multitude of slain, and a great number of carcases; and there is none end of their corpses; they stumble upon their corpses:

† Heb. the flame of the sword, and the lightning of the spear.

the voice of the enemy, brought upon them through the voice of the oppressed. Blood hath a voice which *crieth*¹¹ to heaven; its echo or counterpart, as it were, is the cry of the destroyer.
All is urged on with terrific speed. The chariot-wheels quiver¹² in the rapid onset; the chariots bound, like living things¹³; the earth echoes with the whirling swiftness¹⁴ of the speed of the cavalry. The Prophet within, with the inward ear and eye which heareth the *mysteries of the Kingdom of God*¹⁵ and seeth things to come, as they shall come upon the wicked, sees and hears the scourge coming, with¹⁶ a great noise, impetuously; and so describes it as present. Wars and rumours of wars are among the signs of the Day of Judgement. The scourge, though literally relating to the vehement onset of the enemy, suggests to the thoughts, the scourges of Almighty God, wherewith He chastens the penitent, punishes the impenitent; the wheel, the swift changes of man's condition in the rolling-on of time.
¹⁷ O God, make them like a rolling thing.

3. *The horseman lifteth up, rather, leading up*¹⁸: the flash of the sword, and the lightning of the spear. Thus there are, in all, seven inroads, seven signs, before the complete destruction of Nineveh or the world; as, in the Revelations, all the forerunners of the Judgement of the Great Day are summed up under the voice of seven trumpets¹⁹ and seven vials. "God shall not use horses and chariots and other instruments of war, such as are here spoken of, to judge the world, yet, as is just, His terrors are foretold under the name of those things, wherewith this proud and bloody world hath sinned. For so *all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword*²¹." They who, abusing their power, have used all these weapons of war, especially against the servants of God, shall themselves perish by them, and there shall be none end of their corpses, for they shall be corpses for ever: for, dying by an everlasting death, they shall, without end, be without the true life, which is God." And there is a multitude of slain. Death follows on death. The Prophet views the vast field of carnage, and every where there meets him only some new form of death, slain, carcases, corpses, and these in multitudes, an oppressive heavy number, without end, so that the yet living stumble and fall upon the carcases of the slain. So great the multitude of those who perish, and such their foulness; but what foulness is like sin?

Ps. cxiv. 4, 6. It is used also of the locusts Jo. ii. 5. [all]. Mostly, as here, it is intensive. In Syr. Pa. is "danced;" in Arabic the insulated نَكَد is used of "bounding as a kid." See Lane s. v.

¹⁴ The root only occurs besides Jud. v. 22. "Then smote [the earth] the horse-hoofs from the whirlings, the whirlings [probably "whirling speed" וָרָדָה q. v.] of his mighty ones" [i. e. steeds, Jer. viii. 16. xlvii. 3. l. 11.]. ¹⁵ S. Matt. xiii. 11. 16.

¹⁶ 2 Pet. iii. 10. The words in Hebrew are purposely chosen with rough sounds,
(r) "ra'ash, doher, merakkedah."

¹⁷ Ps. lxxxiii. 14. ¹⁸ This division is the more likely, because the words stand very broken, mostly in pairs, describing, as it were, by the very order of the words, the successive onsets, wherewith the destruction from God should break in upon them.

¹⁹ Rev. vi. viii. The foreboding cry "woe! woe!" before the destruction of Jerusalem, an image also of the Day of Judgement, was also seven-fold. See above on c. ii. 10.

²⁰ Rup.

²¹ S. Matt. xxvi. 52.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

4 Because of the multitude of the whoredoms of the wellfavoured harlot, the mistress of witchcrafts, that selleth nations through her whoredoms, and families through her witchcrafts.

4. Because of the multitude of the whoredoms of the wellfavoured harlot. There are multitudes of slain, because of the multitude of whoredoms and love of the creature instead of the Creator. So to Babylon Isaiah saith, "they [loss of children and widowhood] shall come upon thee in their perfection for the multitude of thy sorceries, for the great abundance of thine enchantments." The actual use of *enchantments*¹, for which Babylon was so infamous, is not elsewhere attributed to the Assyrians. But neither is the word elsewhere used figuratively; nor is Assyria, in its intimate relation to Babylon, likely to have been free from the longing, universal in Heathendom, to obtain knowledge as to the issue of events which would affect her. She is, by a rare idiom, entitled "*mistress*² of enchantments," having them at her command, as instruments of power. Mostly, idolatries and estrangement from God are spoken of as whoredoms, only in respect of those who, having been taken by God as His own, forsook Him for false gods. But Jezebel too, of whose offences Jehu speaks under the same two titles³, was a heathen. And such sins were but part of that larger all-comprehending sin, that man, being made by God for Himself, when he loveth the creature instead of the Creator, divorceth himself from God. Of this sin world-empires, such as Nineveh, were the concentration. Their being was one vast idolatry of self and of the god of this world. All, art, fraud, deceit, protection of the weak against the strong⁴, promises of good⁵, were employed, together with open violence, to absorb all nations into it. The one end of all was to form one great idol-temple, of which the centre and end was man, a rival worship to God, which should enslave all to itself and the things of this world. Nineveh and all conquering nations used fraud as well as force, enticed and entangled others, and so sold and deprived them of freedom⁶. Nor are people less sold and enslaved, because they have no visible master. False freedom is the deepest and most abject slavery. All sinful nations or persons extend to others the infection of their own sins. But, chiefly, the "wicked world," manifoldly arrayed with fair forms, and "beautiful in the eyes of those who will not think or weigh how much more beautiful the Lord and Creator of all," spreads her enticements on all sides, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, "her pomps and vanities," worldly happiness and glory and majesty, and ease and abundance, deceives and sells mankind into the power of Satan. It is called well-favoured [lit. good of grace], because the world has a real beauty, nor, "unless there were a grace and beauty in the things we love, could they draw us to them." They have their beauty, because from God; then are they deformed, when "things hold us back from God, which,

5 Behold, I am against thee, saith the Lord of hosts; and I will discover thy skirts upon thy face, and I will shew the nations thy nakedness, and the kingdoms thy shame.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.
d ch. 2. 13.
Isa. 47. 2, 3.
Jer. 13. 23, 26.
Ezek. 16. 36.
Mic. 1. 11.
Hab. 2. 16.

unless they were in God, were not at all." We deform them, if we love them for our own sakes, not in Him; or for the intimations they give of Him. "Praise as to things foul has an intensity of blame. As if one would speak of a skilled thief, or a courageous robber, or a clever cheat. So though he calls Nineveh a well-favoured harlot, this will not be for her praise, (far from it!) but conveys the heavier condemnation. As they, when they would attract, use dainty babblings, so was Nineveh a skilled artificer of ill-doing, well provided with means to capture cities and lands and to persuade them what pleased herself." She selleth not nations only but families, drawing mankind both as a mass, and one by one after her, so that scarce any escape.

The adultery of the soul from God is the more grievous, the nearer God has brought any to Himself, in priests worse than in the people, in Christians than in Jews, in Jews than in Heathen; yet God espoused mankind to Him when He made him. His dowry were gifts of nature. If this be adultery, how much sorer, when betrothed by the Blood of Christ, and endowed with the gift of the Spirit!

5. Behold I am against thee, saith the Lord of Hosts. "I will not send an Angel, nor give thy destruction to others; I Myself will come to destroy thee." "She has not to do with man, or war with man: He Who is angered with her is the Lord of hosts. But who would meet God Almighty, Who hath power over all, if He would war against him?" In the Medes and Persians it was God who was against them. Behold I am against thee, lit. towards thee. It is a new thing which God was about to do. Behold! God in His long-suffering had seemed to overlook her. Now, He says, I am towards thee, looking at her with His all-searching eye, as her Judge. Violence is punished by suffering; deeds of shame by shame. All sin is a whited sepulchre, fair without, foul within. God will strip off the outward fairness, and lay bare the inward foulness. The deepest shame is to lay bare, what the sinner or the world veiled within. *I will discover thy skirts*¹², i. e. the long flowing robes which were part of her pomp and dignity, but which were only the veil of her misdeeds. Through the greatness of thine iniquity have thy skirts been discovered, says Jeremiah in answer to the heart's question, why have these things come upon me? Upon thy face, where shame is felt. The conscience of thy foulness shall be laid bare before thy face, thy eyes, thy memory continually, so that thou shalt be forced to read therein, whatsoever thou hast done, said, thought. I will shew the nations thy nakedness, that all may despise, avoid, take example by thee, and praise God for His righteous judgements upon thee. The Evangelist heard much people it is not expressed to whom they were sold. But here the nations were not, as nations, sold by Assyria into the hands of others, but retained in its own power. Yet since כָּרַם occurs 80 times throughout the O. T. in the one sense "sell," and its derivatives כָּרַם, כָּרַם, כָּרַם, 14 times, it is against all idiom to assume that, in this one case, it meant "deceived" (as the Arab. כָּרַם with acc. p. and 2 of thg.); nor were the enchantments an instrument of deceit; the word then must here too retain its sense of depriving of liberty, "selling" to slavery or death. S. Aug. Conf. iv. 13.

12 כָּרַם always plural, for their profuseness, as we speak of "robes." It is the word used in the same image, Jer. xiii. 22, 26; Isaiah has the like, כָּרַם. Is. xlvii. 2.

¹ Is. xlvii. 9. ² כָּרַם (always plural) are spoken of as to Jezebel, 2 Kgs. ix. 22; Babylon, Is. i. c. and as to be abolished by God in Judah; Micah v. 11. Those who used them, כָּרַם, were employed by Pharaoh, Ex. vii. 11, and Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. ii. 2; were strictly forbidden to Israel (Ex. xxiii. 17. De. xviii. 10.); their employment was one chief offence of Manasseh. (2 Chr. xxxiii. 6.) ³ כָּרַם (fem.) only occurs besides in 1 Kgs. xvii. 17, of the widow of Zarephath, who, as being a widow, was the mistress of the house, and of the witch of Endor, as כָּרַם, 1 Sam. xxviii. 7.

⁴ 2 Kgs. ix. 22. ⁵ 2 Kgs. xvi. 7-9, 2 Chr. xxviii. 20, 21. ⁶ Is. xxxvi. 16, 17. ⁷ See Joel iii. 3. The word כָּרַם, as the act of selling, implies elsewhere, "to part with into the hands of another." This is implied, even where (as in De. xxxii. 30, Ps. xlv. 13)

Before
C H R I S T
cir. 713.

6 And I will cast abominable filth upon thee, and ^amake thee vile, and will set thee as ^ba gazingstock.

7 And it shall come to pass that all they that look upon thee ¹shall flee from thee, and say, Nineveh is laid waste: ^kwho will in heaven saying Alleluia to God that He hath judged the whore which did corrupt the earth with her fornication¹. And Isaiah saith, They shall go forth and look upon the carcasses of the men that have transgressed against Me².

6. And I will cast abominable filth upon thee, "^alike a weight, that what thou wouldst not take heed to as sin, thou mayest feel in punishment." Abominable things had God seen⁴ in her doings; with abominable things would He punish her. Man would fain sin, and forget it as a thing past. God maketh him to possess the iniquities of his youth⁵, and bindeth them around him, so that they make him to appear what they are, vile⁶. ⁷These things hast thou done and I kept silence;—I will reprove thee and set them in order before thine eyes. And will set thee as a gazing-stock, that all, while they gaze at thee, take warning from thee⁸. ⁹I will cast thee to the ground; before kings will I give thee, for them to gaze upon thee. "¹⁰Whoso amendeth not on occasion of others, others shall be amended on occasion of him."

7. All they that look upon thee shall flee from thee through terror, lest they should share her plagues, as Israel did, when the earth swallowed up Corah, Dathan and Abiram; and they who ¹¹had been made rich by Babylon, stand afar off, for the fear of her torment. All they who look on thee. She was set as a thing to be gazed at ¹². He tells the effect on the gazers. Each one who so gazed¹³ at her should flee; one by one, they should gaze, be scared, flee¹⁴. Not one should remain. Who will bemoan her? Not one should pay her the passing tribute of sympathy at human calamity, the shaking of the head at her woe ¹⁵. Who had no compassion, shall find none.

8. Art thou better¹⁶, more populous or more powerful, than the populous No? rather than No-Amon, so called from the idol Ammon, worshipped there. No-Amon, (or, as it is decyphered in the Cuneiform Inscriptions, Nia), meaning probably "the portion of Ammon¹⁷," was the sacred name of the capital of Upper Egypt, which, under its common name, Thebes, was far-famed, even in the time of Homer, for its continually accruing wealth, its military power, its 20,000 chariots, its vast dimensions attested by its 100 gates¹⁸. Existing earlier, as the capital of Upper Egypt, its grandeur began in the 18th dynasty, after the expulsion of the Hyksos, or Semitic conquerors of Egypt. Its Pharaohs were conquerors, during the 18th-20th dynasties, B. C. 1706-1110, about six centuries. It was then the centre of a world-empire. Under a disguised name¹⁹, its rulers were celebrated in Greek story also, for their world-wide conquests. The Greek statements have in some main points been verified by the decyphering of the hieroglyphics. The monuments relate their victories in far bemoan her? whence shall I seek comforters for thee?

8 ¹Art thou better than || [†]populous ^mNo, that was situate among the rivers, that had the waters round about it, whose ramparts was the sea, and her wall was from the sea?

Before
C H R I S T
cir. 713.

¹ Amos 6. 2.
Or,
nourishing.
† Heb.
No Amon.
^m Jer. 46. 25.
26. Ezek. 30.
14.-16.

Asia, and mention Nineveh itself among the people who paid tribute to them. They warred and conquered from the Soudan to Mesopotamia. A monument of Tothmosis I. (1066 B. C.) still exists at Kerman, between the 20th and 19th degrees latitude, boasting, in language like that of the Assyrian conquerors; "All lands are subdued, and bring their tributes for the first time to the gracious god²⁰." "The frontier of Egypt," they say²¹, "extends Southward to the mountain of Aptâ (in Abyssinia) and Northward to the furthest dwellings of the Asiatics." The hyperbolic statements are too undefined for history²², but widely-conquering monarchs could alone have used them. "²³At all periods of history, the possession of the country which we call Soudan (the Black country) comprising Nubia, and which the ancients called by the collective name of Kous [Cush] or Æthiopia, has been an exhaustless source of wealth to Egypt." Whether by way of war or of commerce, barks laden with flocks, corn, hides, ivory, precious woods stones and metals, and many other products of those regions, descended the Nile into Egypt, to fill the treasures of the temples and of the court of the Pharaohs: and of metals, especially gold, mines whereof were worked by captives and slaves, whose Egyptian name noub seems to have been the origin of the name Nubia, the first province S. of Egypt." "The conquered country of Soudan, called Kous in the hieroglyphic inscriptions, was governed by Egyptian princes of the royal family, who bore the name of 'prince royal of Kous.'"

But the prophet's appeal to Nineveh is the more striking, because No, in its situation, its commerce, the sources of its wealth, its relation to the country which lay between them, had been another and earlier Nineveh. Only, as No had formerly conquered and exacted tribute from all those nations, even to Nineveh itself, so now, under Sargon and Sennacherib, Nineveh had reversed all those successes, and displaced the empire of Egypt by its own, and taken No itself. No had, under its Tothmoses, Amenophes, Sethos, the Ousertescens, sent its *messengers*²⁴, the leviers of its tribute, had brought off from Asia that countless mass of human strength, the captives, who (as Israel, before its deliverance, accomplished its hard labours) completed those gigantic works, which, even after 2000 years of decay, are still the marvel of the civilized world. Tothmosis I., after subduing the Sasou, brought back countless captives from Naharina²⁵ (Mesopotamia); Tothmosis III., in 19 years of conquests, (1603-1585 B. C.) "²⁶raised the Egyptian empire to the height of its greatness. Tothmosis repeatedly attacked the most powerful people of Asia, as the Routen (Assyrians?) with a number

¹⁸ Il. ix. 381-4, [all the wealth] "as much as comes to the Egyptian Thebes, where most possessions are laid up in the houses, which hath a hundred gates, and from each, 200 men go forth with horses and chariots."

¹⁹ Sesostris. Herod. ii. 102-110, and notes in Rawl. Her.; Diod. i. 53-59, Strabo xv. 1. 6. xvi. 4. and 7. xvii. 1. 5.

²⁰ Brugsch Hist. d'Ég. p. 88.

²¹ Ib. and (Tothmosis iii.) p. 109. ²² "Notwithstanding the length of the like texts, recording the victories gained by the Pharaohs, the historical subject is treated as accessory, as an occasion of repeating, for the thousandth time, the same formulas, the same hyperbolic words, the same ideas." Brugsch pp. 89. ²³ Brugsch ib. p. 89. 107. ²⁴ Nab. ii. 13. ²⁵ Brugsch p. 90. ²⁶ Ib. p. 104, the summary of pp. 95-103.

¹ Rev. xix. 1. 2. ² lxxi. 24. ³ Alb. ⁴ Jer. xiii. 27. ⁵ Job xiii. 26. ⁶ Comp. Wisdom iv. 18. ⁷ Ps. i. 21. ⁸ Comp. 2 Chron. vii. 20. ⁹ Ezek. xlviii. 17. ¹⁰ Ptol. Prov. ap. Alb. ¹¹ Rev. xviii. 15.

¹² רָאָה ¹³ קָלָה ¹⁴ Comp. Ps. xxxi. 11. lxxviii. 8. ¹⁵ Comp. Job xvi. 4. 5. ¹⁶ מִי־יִשְׁתַּחֲוֶה לְפָנָיו, as Ps. lxxii. 14. מִי־יִשְׁתַּחֲוֶה Mic. i. 8.

¹⁷ As the LXX. (from their acquaintance with Egypt) render, μερὶς Ἀμμὼν. The Coptic MSS. Martyrologies mention "the place of Ammon," (Jablonski Opp. i. 163) and the Hieroglyphics. Lepsius, Chronol. d. Æg. i. 272. The common name Ap-t or T-ap was the original of the name Thebes, by which it became known to the West through the Greeks.

of subordinate kingdoms, such as Asshur, Babel, Nineveh, Singar; such as the Remenen or Armenians, the Zahi or Phœnicians, the Cheta or Hittites, and many more. We learn, by the description of the objects of the booty, sent to Egypt by land and sea, counted by number and weight, many curious details as to the industry of the conquered peoples of central Asia, which do honour to the civilisation of that time, and verify the tradition that the Egyptian kings set up stelæ in conquered countries, in memory of their victories. Tothmosis III. set up his stele in Mesopotamia, 'for having enlarged the frontiers of Egypt.' Amenophis too is related to have "taken the fortress of Nenii (Nineveh)." "He returned from the country of the higher Routen, where he had beaten all his enemies to enlarge the frontiers of the land of Egypt." "he took possession of the people of the South, and chastised the people of the North: "at Abd-el-Kournah" he was represented as "having for his foot-stool the heads and backs of five peoples of the S. and four peoples of the N. or Asiatics." "Among the names of the peoples, who submitted to Egypt, are the Nubians, the Asiatic shepherds, the inhabitants of Cyprus and Mesopotamia." "The world in its length and its breadth" is promised by the sphinx to Tothmosis IV. He is represented as "subduer of the negroes." Under Amenophis III., the Memnon of the Greeks, "the Egyptian empire extended Northward to Mesopotamia, Southward to the land of Karou." He enlarged and beautified No, which had from him the temple of Louksor, and his vocal statue, "all people bringing their tributes, their children, their horses, a mass of silver, of iron and ivory from countries, the roads whereto we know not." The king Horus is saluted as "the sun of the nine people; great is thy name to the country of Ethiopia;" "the gracious god returns, having subdued the great of all people." Setj I (or Sethos) is exhibited⁸, as revered by the Armenians, conquering the Sasou, the "Hittites, Naharina (Mesopotamia), the Routen (Assyrians?) the Pount, or Arabs in the S. of Arabia, the Amari or Amorites, and Kedes, perhaps Edessa." Rameses II, or the great⁹ (identified with the Pharaoh of the Exodus¹⁰), conquered the Hittites in the N.; in the S. it is recorded, "the gracious god, who defeated the nine people, who massacred myriads in a moment, annihilated the people overthrown in their blood, yet was there no other with him." The 20th Dynasty (B. C. 1288-1110) began again with conquests. "Rameses III. triumphed over great confederations of Libyans and Syrians and the Isles of the Mediterranean. He is the only king who, as the monuments shew, carried on war at once by land and sea." Besides many names unknown to us, the Hittites, Amorites, Circesium, Aratus, Philistines, Phœnicia, Sasou, Pount, are again recognised. North South East and West are declared to be tributary to him, and of the North it is said, "The people, who knew not Egypt, come to thee, bringing gold and silver, lapis-lazuli, all precious stones." He adorned Thebes with the great temple of Medinet-Abou¹⁴ and the Ramesseum¹⁵. The brief notices of following Rameses' speak of internal prosperity and wealth: a fuller account of Rameses XII. speaks of his "being in Mesopotamia to exact the annual tribute," how "the kings of all countries prostrated themselves before him, and the king of the country of Bouchten [it has been conjectured, Bagistan, or Ecbatana] presented to him tribute and his daughter." "He is the last Pharaoh who goes to Mesopotamia, to collect the annual tributes of the petty kingdoms of that country." On this side of the Euphrates, Egypt still retained some possessions to the time of Necho; for it is said, "the king of Babylon had taken from the river of Egypt unto the river Euphrates all that pertained to the king of Egypt." Thebes continued to be embellished alike by "the high-priests of Ammon," who displaced the ancient line¹⁹, and kings of the Bubastite Dynasty, Sesonchis I. or Sisak²⁰, Takeclothis II.²¹, and Sesonchis III.²². The Ethiopian dynasty of Sabakos and Tearko or Tirkaka in another way illustrates the importance of No. The Ethiopian conquerors chose it as their royal city. Thither, in the time of Sabakos, Syria brought it tribute²³; there Tirkaka set up the records of his victories²³; and great must have been the conqueror, whom Strabo put on a line with Sesostris²⁴. Its site marked it out for a great capital; and as such the Ethiopian conqueror seized it. The hills on either side retired, encircling the plain, through the centre of which the Nile brought down its wealth, connecting it with the untold riches of the south. "They formed a vast circus, where the ancient metropolis expanded itself. On the West, the Lybian chain presents abrupt declivities which command this side of the plain, and which bend away above Bab-el-molouk, to end near Kournah at the very bank of the river. On the East, heights, softer and nearer, descend in long declivities toward Louksor and Karnak, and their crests do not approach the Nile until after Medamout, an hour or more below Karnak." The breadth of the valley, being about 10 miles²⁶, the city (of which, Strabo says, "traces are now seen of its magnitude, 80 stadia in length") must have occupied the whole. "The çam city embraced the great space, which is now commonly called the plain of Thebes and which is divided by the Nile into two halves, an Eastern and a Western, the first bounded by the edge of the Arabian wilderness, the latter by the hills of the dead of the steep Lybian chain." The capital of Egypt, which was identified of old with Egypt itself²⁹, thus lay under the natural guardianship of the encircling hills which expanded to receive it, divided into two by the river which was a wall to both. The chains of hills, on either side were themselves fenced in on East and West by the great sand-deserts unapproachable by an army. The long valley of the Nile was the only access to an enemy. It occupied apparently the victorious army of Asshur-banipal³⁰ "a month and ten days" to march from Memphis to Thebes. "At Thebes itself there are still remains of walls and fortifications, strong, skilfully constructed, and in good preservation, as there are also in other Egyptian towns above and below it. The crescent-shaped ridge of hills approaches so close to the river at each end as to admit of troops defiling past, but not spreading out or manœuvring. At each of these ends is a small old fort of the purely Egyptian, i. e. the Ante-Hellenic period. Both above and below there are several similar crescent sweeps in the same chain of hills, and at each angle a similar fort."

¹ Ib. p. 111. ² Ib. 112. ³ On the sphinx of Gizeh Ib. p. 113.

⁴ In the Isle of Konosso near Philæ Ib. p. 114. ⁵ Ib. pp. 114, 115.

⁶ In Brugsch p. 116. ⁷ Ib. pp. 124, 125. ⁸ Ib. pp. 128-132.

⁹ Ib. pp. 137 sqq. ¹⁰ Ib. p. 156. ¹¹ Ib. p. 158.

¹² Ib. p. 183. ¹³ Ib. p. 190. ¹⁴ Ib. p. 191. ¹⁵ Ib. pp. 197, 198.

¹⁶ Ib. p. 207. ¹⁷ Ib. p. 210. ¹⁸ 2 Kgs. xxiv. 7. ¹⁹ Brugsch p. 212.

²⁰ Ib. pp. 224-227. ²¹ Ib. p. 223. ²² Ib. p. 235. ²³ Ib. p. 244.

²⁴ xv. 1. 6. He mentions him again for his extensive removals of people, which implies extensive conquests. l. 3. 21.

²⁵ Joanne et Isambert, Itinéraire de l' Orient. p. 1039.

²⁶ Smith Bibl. Dict. v. Thebes. 27 xvii. 1. 46. ²⁸ Brugsch Geogr. d. Alt. Æg. p. 176.

²⁹ "In old times Thebes [the Thebais] was called Egypt." Herod. ii. 15. "Formerly Egypt was called Thebes." Aristot. Meteor. i. 14.

³⁰ Inser. in Oppert, Rapports. pp. 74, 78, 85.

³¹ Miss Harris, the learned daughter of a learned Egyptologist; "In several hieroglyphical inscriptions and notably in a papyrus in Miss Harris' possession, partly deciphered by her father and herself, there are minute accounts of fortresses existing at that date, about the time of the Exodus, she supposes, and of their armaments and garrisons." Thebes then was fortified, as well as Nineveh, and Homer is confirmed by the Hieroglyphical inscriptions.

All successive monarchs, during more centuries than have passed since our Lord came, successively beautified it. Every thing is gigantic, bearing witness to the enormous mass of human strength, which its victorious kings had gathered from all nations to toil for its and their glorification. Wonderful is it now in its decay, desolation, death; one great idol-temple of its gods and an apotheosis of its kings, as sons of its gods.

"¹ What spires are to a modern city, what the towers of a cathedral are to the nave and choir, that the statues of the Pharaohs were to the streets and temples of Thebes. The ground is strewn with their fragments; the avenues of them towered high above plain and houses. Three of gigantic size still remain. One was the granite statue of Rameses himself, who sat on the right side of the entrance to his palace.—The only part of the temple or palace, at all in proportion to him, must have been the gateway, which rose in pyramidal towers, now broken down and rolling in a wild ruin down to the plain." It was that self-deifying, against which Ezekiel is commanded to prophesy; ² Speak and say; thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt, the great dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is mine own, and I have made it for myself. "³ Every where the same colossal proportions are preserved. Every where the king is conquering, ruling, worshipping, worshipped. The palace is the temple. The king is priest. He and his horses are ten times the size of the rest of the army. Alike in battle and in worship, he is of the same stature as the gods themselves. Most striking is the familiar gentleness, with which, one on each side, they take him by each hand, as one of their own order, and then, in the next compartment, introduce him to Ammon, and the lion-headed goddess. Every distinction, except of degree, between divinity and royalty is entirely levelled." Gigantic dimensions picture to the eye the ideal greatness, which is the key to the architecture of No. "⁴ Two other statues alone remain of an avenue of eighteen similar or nearly similar statues, some of whose remnants lie in the field behind them, which led to the palace of Amenophis III., every one of the statues being Amenophis himself, thus giving in multiplication what Rameses gained in solitary elevation." "⁵ "Their statues were all of one piece." Science still cannot explain, how a mass of nearly 890 tons⁶ of granite was excavated at Syene, transported⁷ and set up at Thebes, or how destroyed⁸.

"⁹ The temper of the tools, which cut adamantine stone as sharply and closely as an ordinary scoop cuts an ordinary cheese, is still a mystery." Every thing is in proportion. The two sitting colossi, whose "breadth across the shoulders is eighteen feet, their height forty-seven feet, fifty-three above the plain, or, with the half-buried pedestal, sixty feet, were once connected by an avenue of sphinxes of eleven hundred feet with what is now 'Kom-el-Hettán,' or 'the mound of sand-stone,' which marks the site of another palace and temple of Amenophis III.; and, to judge from the little that remains, it must have held a conspicuous rank among the finest monuments of Thebes. All that now exists of the interior are the bases of its columns, some broken statues, and Syenite sphinxes of the king, with several lion-headed figures of black granite⁹." The four villages, where are the chief remaining temples, Karnak, Luksor, Medinet-Abou, Kournah, form a great quadrilateral¹⁰, each of whose sides is about one and a half mile, and the whole compass accordingly six miles. The avenue of six hundred sphinxes, which joined the temple of Luksor with Karnak must have been one and a half mile long¹¹: one of its obelisks is a remarkable ornament of Paris. Mostly massiveness is the characteristic, since strength and might were their ideal. Yet the massive columns still preserved, as in the temple of Rameses II.¹², are even of piercing beauty¹². And for the temple of Karnak! Its enclosure, which was some two miles in circumference¹³, bears the names of Monarchs removed from one another, according to the Chronology, by above two thousand years¹⁴. "¹⁵ A stupendous colonnade, of which one pillar only remains erect, once extended across its great court, connecting the W. gate of entrance with that at its extremity. The towers of the Eastern gate are mere heaps of stones, poured down into the court on one side and the great hall on the other; giant columns have been swept away like reeds before the mighty avalanche, and one hardly misses them. And in that hall, of 170 feet by 329 feet, 134 columns of colossal proportions supported its roof; twelve of them, 62 feet high and about 35 in circumference, and on each side a forest of 66 columns, 42 feet 5 in. in height. Beyond the centre-avenue are seen obelisks, gateways and masses of masonry; every portion of these gigantic ruins is covered with sculpture most admirably executed, and every column has been richly painted."

"¹⁶ Imagine a long vista of courts and doorways and colonnades and halls; here and there an obelisk shooting up out of the ruins, and interrupting the opening view of the forest of columns.—This mass of ruins, some rolled down in avalanches of stone, others perfect and painted, as when they were first built, is approached on every side by avenues of gateways. E. and W., N. and S., these vast approaches are found. Some are shattered, but in every approach some remain; and in some can be traced, besides, the further avenues, still in parts remaining by hundreds together, avenues of ram-headed sphinxes. Every Egyptian temple has, or ought to have, one of those grand gateways, formed of two sloping towers, with the high perpendicular front between." Then, over and above, is "their multiplied concentration.—Close before almost every gateway in this vast array were the colossal figures, usually in granite, of the great Rameses, sometimes in white and red marble, of Amenophis and of Thothmes. Close by them, were pairs of towering obelisks, which can generally be traced by pedestals on either side.—You have only to set up again the fallen obelisks which lie at your feet; to conceive the columns, as they are still seen in parts, overspreading the whole; to reproduce all the statues, like those which still remain in their august niches, to gaze on the painted walls and pillars of the immense hall, which even now can never be seen without a thrill

¹ Stanley Sin. and Pal. Introd. p. xxxviii. ² Ezek. xxix. 3. ³ Stanl. Ib. p. xxxix.

⁴ Wilkinson Anc. Eg. iii. 266.

⁵ "about 887 tons, 5½ hundred weight." Wilkinson Mod. Eg. ii. 145.

⁶ "The obelisks, transported from the quarries of Syene at the first cataract, in latitude 24° 5' 23" to Thebes and Heliopolis, vary in size from 70 to 93 feet in length. They are of one single stone, and the largest in Egypt (that of the great temple at Karnak) I calculate to weigh 297 tons. This was brought about 138 miles from the quarry to where it now stands; those taken to Heliopolis, more than 800 miles. The power, however, to move the mass was the same, whatever might be the distance, and the mechanical skill which transported it five or even one, would suffice for any number of miles. The two colossi of Amenophis iii., of a single block each, 47 feet in height, which contain about 11,500 cubic feet, are made of a stone not known within several days journey of the place; and at the Memnonium is another of Rameses which, when entire, weighed upwards of 887 tons, and was brought from E'Sooan to Thebes, 138 miles." Wilk. Anc. Eg. iii. 329, 330.

⁸ Nozrani in Eg. and Syr. p. 278.

⁹ Wilkinson Mod. Eg. ii. 157, 158, 160, 162.

¹⁰ Joanne et Isambert, Itiner. de l'Orient pp. 1039, 1040.

¹¹ Two kilometres, Joan. et Isamb. p. 1060.

¹² Memnonium. See Hoskins, Winter in upper and lower Eg. Frontispiece.

¹³ 13 Stadia. (Diod. S. i. 46.) "It will be found to surpass the measurement of the historian by at least two or three stadia." Wilkins. ii. 249.

¹⁴ Osirtasen, placed at 2803. B. C. to Tirhaka, 693. B. C., Wilkinson Mod. Eg. ii. 250.

¹⁵ Lord Lindsay Letters on Egypt &c. pp. 98, 99.

¹⁶ Stanley, Sinai and Pal. p. xli.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

9 Ethiopia and Egypt were her strength, and it was infinite; Put and Lubim were † Heb. in thy help. † thy helpers.

10 Yet was she carried away, she went into captivity: ^a her young children also were dashed in pieces ^o at the top of all the streets:

and they ^p cast lots for her honourable men,
and all her great men were bound in chains.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.
^a Ps. 137. 9.
^o Isa. 13. 16.
^p Hos. 13. 16.
^o Lam. 2. 19.
^p Joel 3. 8.
Obad. 11.

of awe, and you have ancient Thebes before you." And most of those paintings were records of their past might. "There remained on the massive buildings Egyptian letters, recording their former wealthiness; and one of the elder priests, bidden to interpret his native language, related that of old 700,000 of military age dwelt there; and with that army king Rhamses gained possession of Libya, Ethiopia, the Medes and Persians, the Bactrian and Scythian; and held in his empire the countries which the Syrians and Armenians and neighbouring Cappadocians inhabit, the Bithynian also and Lycian to the sea. There were read too the tributes imposed on the natives, the weight of silver and gold; the number of arms and horses, and the gifts to the temples, ivory and frankincense, and what supplies of corn and utensils each nation should pay, not less magnificent than are now enjoined by Parthian violence or by Roman power."

That was situate lit. the dweller, she that dwelleth. Perhaps the Prophet wished to express the security and ease², in which she dwelt among the rivers. They encircled, folded round her, as it were, so that she was a little world in herself, secluded from all who would approach to hurt her. The Prophet's word, *rivers*³, is especially used of the branches or canals of the Nile, which is also called *the sea*⁴. The Nile passed through No, and doubtless its canals encircled it. Egypt is said by a Heathen to be "walled by the Nile as an everlasting wall." Whose rampart was [rampart is] the sea. *Wall and rampart*⁶ are, properly, the outer and inner wall of a city, the wall and forewall, so to speak. For all walls and all defences, her enfolding walls of sea would suffice. Strong she was in herself; strong also in her helpers.

9. Ethiopia and Egypt were her strength; lit. *Egypt was strength*¹, and Ethiopia, and boundless. He sets forth first the imperial might of No; then her strength from foreign, subdued power. The capital is a sort of impersonation of the might of the state; No, of Egypt, as Nineveh, of Assyria. When the head was cut off or the heart ceased to beat, all was lost. The might of Egypt and Ethiopia was the might of No, concentrated in her. They were strength, and that strength unmeasured by any human standard. Boundless was the strength, which Nineveh had subdued: boundless, the *store*⁸ which she had accumulated for the spoiler; *boundless*⁹ the carcases of her slain. And it was infinite. "The people that came up with the king out of Egypt, were without number¹⁰." The Egyptians connected with Thebes are counted by a heathen author¹¹ at seven millions. Put or *Phut*¹² is mentioned third among the sons of Ham, after Cush and Mizraim¹³. They are mentioned with the Ethiopians in Pharaoh's army at the Euphrates¹⁴, as joined with them in the visitation of Egypt¹⁵; with Cush in the army of Gog¹⁶; with Lud in that of Tyre¹⁷; a country and river of that name were, Josephus tells us¹⁸, "frequently mentioned by Greek historians." They dwelt in the Libya, conterminous to the Canopic mouth of the Nile¹⁹.

And Lubim. These came up against Judah in the army of Shishak¹⁰ against Rehoboam, and with the Ethiopians, "a huge host" under Zerah the Ethiopian against Asa²⁰. The Ribou or Libou appear on the monuments as a people conquered by Menephtes²¹ and Rameses III.²² They were still to be united with Egypt and the Ethiopians in the times of Antiochus Epiphanes²³; so their connection with Egypt was not broken by its fall. Those unwearied enemies had become incorporated with her; and were now her help. These were (E. M.) in thy help; set upon it, given up to it²⁴. The prophet appeals to No herself, as it were, "Thou hadst strength." Then he turns away, to speak of her, unwilling to look on the miseries which he has to portray to Nineveh, as the preludes of her own. Without God, vain is the help of man.

10. Yet was she [also²⁵] carried away, lit. *She also became an exile*²⁶ band, her people were carried away, with all the barbarities of Heathen war. All, through whom she might recover, were destroyed or scattered abroad; the young, the hope of another age, cruelly destroyed²⁷; her honourable men enslaved²⁸, all her great men prisoners. God's judgements are executed step by step. Assyria herself was the author of this captivity, which Isaiah prophesied in the first years of Hezekiah when Judah was leaning upon Egypt²⁹. It was repeated by all of the house of Sargon³⁰. Jeremiah and Ezekiel foretold fresh desolation by Nebuchadnezzar³¹. God foretold to His people³², I gave Egypt for thy ransom, Ethiopia and Seba for thee; and the Persian monarchs,

¹ Tac. Ann. ii. 60.

² In Zech. i. 11, this is brought out by the addition of the word נְחִיחַ "and at rest," in Zech. vii. 7, by נְחִיחַ, "and tranquil." In Rev. xviii. 7, "I sit a queen," the addition, "as a queen" points to the other meaning, of שָׁבַת, "sat enthroned."

³ Yeorim.

⁴ Is. xviii. 2, xix. 5. In Arabic, the Nile is called "the sweet sea" in contrast with "the salt sea," or "the encircling sea;" a title given by Egyptian writers to the Mediterranean, as being connected with the Ocean. Egyptian writers mostly add an epithet to נְחִיחַ, to designate the sea, because נְחִיחַ, simply, is the Nile; as in India it is the Ganges; in Mesopotamia, the Euphrates. De Sacy Chrest. Arab. ii. 14, 15. ed. 2. The "white Nile" is called "Bahr-el-Abiad," the "blue Nile" Bahr-el-Azrek, and the great Ethiopian tributary to the Nile, the Albara, "Bahr-el-Aswad," "the black sea." Baker, Nile tributaries, p. 91. נְחִיחַ is also used of the Tigris. Lane sub v. At Thebes, the Nile is usually about half a mile in width, but, at the inundation, overflowing the plain, especially upon the western bank, for a breadth of two or more miles. Smith Bib. Dict. v. Thebes. "When the Nile overflows the country, the cities alone appear, surmounting it, like the islands in the Ægean; the rest of Egypt becomes a sea." Herod. ii. 97. "The water of the Nile is like a sea." Plin. H. N. xxxv. 11. "Homer gives to the river, the name 'Ocean,' because the Egyptians in their own language call the Nile, Ocean." Diod. S. i. 96.

⁵ Isocr. Busir. ap. Boch. Phal. i. 1. p. 7.

⁶ חֵל and חֵלָה, joined Lam. ii. 8, חֵל חֵלָה. It included the space between the two walls (pomœrium) 2 Sam. xx. 15, 1 Kgs. xxi. 23. It is the whole circuit of the wall as contrasted with the palaces of Zion, in Ps. xlviii. 14, cxvii. 7. As is common in Hebrew poetry, "wall and forewall," which together make one subject, are placed in the parallel columns. "Murus et antemurale" S. Jer. on Is. xxvii. "the lesser wall, which is before the greater," Rabb. ap. Kim. "the wall and the son of the wall." R. Chanina. 1b.

⁷ Not lit. "her strength." It is עֲצָמָה, not עֲצָמָה; the abstract for the concrete, as אִשָּׁה Job xli. 6, אִשָּׁה 1b. 7. ⁸ ii. 10. ⁹ iii. 3. נְחִיחַ in each.

¹⁰ 2 Chron. xii. 3. ¹¹ Cato in Steph. Byz. ap. Boch. iv. 27.

¹² Translated Lybians Jer. xli. 9, Ez. xxx. 5, xxxviii. 5. ¹³ Gen. x. 6. ¹⁴ Jer. l. c.

¹⁵ Ez. xxx. 5. ¹⁶ Ib. xxxviii. 15. ¹⁷ Ib. xxix. 10. ¹⁸ Jos. Ant. i. 6. 2.

¹⁹ See Ges. Thes. s. v. ²⁰ 2 Chron. xvi. 8. coll. 1b. xiv. 9. ²¹ B. C. 1341-1321 (Brugsch p. 172). ²² 1283 B. C. Ib. 186, 190, 191. ²³ Dan. xi. 43.

²⁴ נְחִיחַ קוֹחַ בְּנוֹתָי Ps. xxxv. 2. נְחִיחַ Ex. xviii. 4. ²⁵ The word is emphatic; "She also," her young children also. The same word also is repeated. ²⁶ נְחִיחַ might be either "captivity" or "the captives." But נְחִיחַ occurs 5 times, נְחִיחַ, 3 times; but נְחִיחַ with neither.

²⁷ See Hos. xiv. Is. xiii. 16, 2 Kgs. viii. 12. ²⁸ See Joel iii. 3. ²⁹ See Is. xx.

³⁰ See ab. pp. 361, 365. ³¹ Jer. xli. 25, 26. and Ezekiel xxx. 14-16. ³² Is. xliii. 3.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.
* Ps. 147. 13.
Jer. 51. 30.
ch. 2. 1.

enemies: the fire shall devour thy bars.
14 Draw thee waters for the siege, fortify thy strong holds: go into clay, and habitants called them, Pylæ¹, "gates," the narrow pass was further guarded by a wall². Its name recalls the brilliant history, how such approaches might be held by a devoted handful of men against almost countless multitudes. Of Assyria, Pliny says, "The Tigris and pathless mountains encircle Adiabene." When those gates of the land gave way, the whole land was laid open to its enemies.

The fire shall devour thy bars. Probably, as elsewhere, the bars of the gates, which were mostly of wood, since it is added expressly of some, that they were of the iron⁴ or brass⁵. "Occasionally the efforts of the besiegers were directed against the gate, which they endeavoured to break open with axes, or to set on fire by application of a torch.—In the hot climate of S. Asia wood becomes so dry by exposure to the sun, that the most solid doors may readily be ignited and consumed." It is even remarked in one instance that the Assyrians "have not set fire to the gates of this city, as appeared to be their usual practice in attacking a fortified place."

So were her palaces buried as they stood, that the traces of prolonged fire are still visible, calcining the one part and leaving others which were not exposed to it, uncalcined. "It is incontestable that, during the excavations, a considerable quantity of charcoal, and even pieces of wood, either half-burnt or in a perfect state of preservation, were found in many places. The lining of the chambers also bears certain marks of the action of fire. All these things can be explained only by supposing the fall of a burning roof, which calcined the slabs of gypsum and converted them into dust. It would be absurd to imagine that the burning of a small quantity of furniture could have left on the walls marks like these which are to be seen through all the chambers, with the exception of one, which was only an open passage. It must have been a violent and prolonged fire, to be able to calcine not only a few places, but every part of these slabs, which were ten feet high and several inches thick. So complete a decomposition can be attributed but to intense heat, such as would be occasioned by the fall of a burning roof."

"Botta found on the engraved flag-stones scoria and half-melted nails, so that there is no doubt that these appearances had been produced by the action of intense and long-sustained heat. He remembers, besides, at Khorsabad, that when he detached some bas-reliefs from the earthy substance which covered them, in order to copy the inscriptions that were behind, he found there coals and cinders, which could have entered only by the top, between the wall and the back of the bas-relief. This can be easily understood to have been caused by the burning of the roof, but is inexplicable in any other manner. What tends most positively to prove that the traces of fire must be attributed to the burning of a wooden roof is, that these traces are perceptible only in the interior of the building. The gypsum also that covers the wall inside is completely calcined, while the outside of the building is nearly every where untouched. But

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

tread the mortar, make strong the brickkiln.
15 There shall the fire devour thee; the sword shall cut thee off, it shall eat thee

wherever the fronting appears to have at all suffered from fire, it is at the bottom; thus giving reason to suppose that the damage has been done by some burning matter falling outside. In fact, not a single bas-relief in a state to be removed was found in any of the chambers, they were all pulverised."

The soul which does not rightly close its senses against the enticements of the world, does, in fact, open them, and *death is come up into our windows*⁹, and then "whatever natural good there yet be, which, as bars, would hinder the enemy from bursting in, is consumed by the fire," once kindled, of its evil passions.

14. Draw thee waters for the siege; fortify thy strongholds. This is not mere mockery at man's weakness, when he would resist God. It foretells that they shall toil, and that, heavily. Toil is added upon toil. Nineveh did undergo a two years' siege. Water stands for all provisions within. He bids them, as before¹¹, strengthen what was already strong; strongholds, which seemed to "cut off" all approach. These he bids them strengthen, not repairing decays only but making them *exceeding strong*¹³. Go into clay. We seem to see all the inhabitants, like ants on their nest, all poured out, every one busy, every one making preparation for the defence. Why had there been no need of it? What needed she of towers and fortifications, whose armies were carrying war into distant lands, before whom all which was near was hushed? Now, all had to be renewed. As Isaiah in his mockery of the idol-makers begins with the forging of the axe, the planting and rearing of the trees, which were at length to become the idol¹⁴, Nahum goes back to the beginning. The neglected brick-kiln, useless in their prosperity, was to be repaired; the clay¹⁵, which abounded in the valley of the Tigris¹⁶, was to be collected, mixed and kneaded by treading, as still represented in the Egyptian monuments. The conquering nation was to do the work of slaves, as Asiatic captives are represented, under their taskmasters¹⁷, on the monuments of Egypt, a prelude of their future. Xenophon still saw the massive brick-wall, on the stone foundation¹⁸.

Yet, though stored within and fenced without, it shall not stand¹⁹.

15. There, where thou didst fence thyself, and madest such manifold and toilsome preparation, shall the fire devour thee. All is toil within. The fire of God's wrath falls and consumes at once. Mankind still, with mire and clay, build themselves Babels. They go into clay, and become themselves earthly like the mire they steep themselves in. They make themselves strong, as though they thought *that their houses shall continue for ever*²⁰, and say, "Soul, take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry. God's wrath descends. Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee. It shall eat thee up like the canker-worm. What in thee is strongest, shall be devoured with as much ease as the locust devours the tender grass. The judgements of God, not only overwhelm as a whole, but find out each tender part, as the locust devours each single blade."

¹ Herod. vii. 201.

² Ib. 176. 208.

³ Plin. H. N. vi. 9. quoted by Tuch ii. 1.

⁴ Ps. cvii. 16, Is. xlv. 2.

⁵ 1 Kgs. iv. 13.

⁶ Rawl. 5 Emp. ii. 83. who relates how "the city of Candahar was ignited from the outside by the Afghanees, and was entirely consumed in less than an hour." Note.

⁷ Bonomi Nin. p. 205. ed. 2. on Botta plate 93. See also Ib. p. 221, 222, 225.

⁸ Ib. Sect. iv. c. 1, pp. 245-247.

⁹ Jer. ix. 21.

¹⁰ S. Jer.

¹¹ Is. i. 1.

¹² 2 Chr. xi. 12.

¹³ Is. xlv. 12, sqq.

¹⁴ Is. xlv. 12, sqq.

¹⁵ Is. xlv. 12, sqq.

¹⁶ Rawl. 5 Emp. i. 476.

¹⁷ See Is. xxvii. 10, 11.

¹⁸ Wilk. Anc. Eg. ii. 99.

¹⁹ Anab. iii. 4, 4.

²⁰ Ps. xlix. 11.

²¹ S. Luke xii. 19, 20.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.
* Joel i. 4.

up like ^athe cankerworm: make thyself many as the cankerworm, make thyself many as the locusts.

Make thyself many as the cankerworm, as though thou wouldst equal thyself in oppressive number¹ to those instruments of the vengeance of God, gathering from all quarters armies to help thee; yea, though thou make thy whole self² one oppressive multitude, yet it shall not avail thee. Nay, He saith, thou hast essayed to do it.

16. Thou hast multiplied thy merchants above the stars of Heaven; not numerous only but glorious in the eyes of the world, and, as thou deemest, safe and inaccessible; yet in an instant all is gone.

The commerce of Nineveh was carried back to præhistoric times, since its rivers bound together the mountains of Armenia with the Persian gulf, and marked out the line, by which the distant members of the human family should supply each others' needs. "Semiramis," they say³, "built other cities on the Euphrates and the Tigris, where she placed emporia for those who convey their goods from Media and Parætacene. Being mighty rivers and passing through a populous country, they yield many advantages to those employed in commerce; so that the places by the river are full of wealthy emporia." The Phœnicians traced back their Assyrian commerce (and as it seems, truly) to those same præhistoric times, in which they alleged, that they themselves migrated from the Persian gulf. They commenced at once, they said⁴, the long voyages, in which they transported the wares of Egypt and Assyria. The building of "Tadmor in the wilderness"⁵ on the way to Tiphscach (Thapsacus) the utmost bound of Solomon's dominions⁶, connected Palestine with that commerce. The great route for couriers and for traffic, extending for fifteen hundred or sixteen hundred miles in later times, must have lain through Nineveh, since, although no mention is made of the city which had perished, the route lay across the two rivers⁷, the greater and lesser Zab, of which the greater formed the Southern limit of Nineveh. Those two rivers led up to two mountain-passes which opened a way to Media and Agbatana; and pillars at the summit of the N. pass attest the use of this route over the Zagros chain about 700 B. C.⁸ Yet a third and easier pass was used by Nineveh, as is evidenced by another monument, of a date as yet undetermined⁹. Two other lines connected Nineveh with Syria and the West. Northern lines led doubtless to Lake Wan and the Black Sea¹⁰. The lists of plunder or of tribute, carried off during the world-empire of Egypt, before it was displaced by Assyria, attest the extensive imports or manufactures of Nineveh¹¹;

¹ החביר expresses more than mere number. כֶּבֶד retains always the idea of weight gravity or oppressiveness. We say "heavy hail" Ex. ix. 18, 24. It is used of the plague of flies, Ib. viii. 20, and, as here, of the locusts, Ib. x. 14; of the host, with which Esau opposed Israel, Nu. xx. 20, (adding וְיָבִיחַ אֶתְּחַבֵּר); of that sent with Rabshakeh to Jerusalem, Is. xxxvi. 2. and of the great train of the Queen of Sheba, camels laden with very much gold and precious stones, 1 Kgs. x. 2. כֶּבֶד occurs above iii. 3. of the heavy mass of corpses. In Ex. ix. 3, it is used of a grievous pestilence (Gesenius' instances Thes. s. v.).

² The two genders, החביר, החביר, are probably joined together, the more strongly to express universality, as וְיָבִיחַ אֶתְּחַבֵּר, Is. iii. 1; and Nahum himself unites כֶּבֶד and כֶּבֶד in two parallel clauses, ii. 13.

³ Diod. ii. 11.

⁴ Herod. i. 1.

⁵ 1 Kgs. ix. 18.

⁶ Ib. v. 4. (iv. 24.)

⁷ Herod. ii. 52.

⁸ See Rawl. 5 Emp. ii. 180, 181.

⁹ Ib. 181, 182.

¹⁰ Ib. 182, 183.

¹¹ "Dishes of silver with their covers; a harp of brass inlaid with gold; 823 pounds of perfumes" (Brugsch Hist. d' Eg. p. 100); "10 pounds of true lapis lazuli, 24 pounds of artificial lapis lazuli; vessels laden with ebony and ivory, precious stones, vases, (Ib. p. 203); besides many other articles, which cannot yet be made out.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.
|| Or, spreadeth himself.

16 Thou hast multiplied thy merchants above the stars of heaven: the cankerworm || spoileth, and fleeth away.

the titles of "Assyrian nard, Assyrian amomum, Assyrian odours, myrrh, frankincense"¹², involve its trade with the spice-countries: domestic manufactures of hers apparently were purple or dark-blue cloaks¹³, embroidery, brocades¹⁴, and these conveyed in chests of cedar; her metallurgy was on principles recognised now; in one practical point of combining beauty with strength, she has even been copied¹⁵.

A line of commerce, so marked out by nature in the history of nations, is not changed, unless some preferable line be discovered. Empires passed away, but at the end of the 13th century trade and manufacture continued their wonted course and habitation. The faith in Jesus had converted the ancient heathenism; the heresy of Mohammedanism disputed with the faith for the souls of men; but the old material prosperity of the world held its way. Mankind still wanted the productions of each others' lands. The merchants of Nineveh were to be dispersed and were gone: itself and its remembrance were to be effaced from the earth, and it was so; in vain was a new Nineveh built by the Romans; that also disappeared; but so essential was its possession for the necessities of commerce, that Mosul, a large and populous town, arose over against its mounds, a city of the living over-against its buried glories; and, as our goods are known in China by the name of our great manufacturing capital, so a delicate manufacture imposed on the languages of Europe (Italian, Spanish, French, English, German) the name of Mosul¹⁶.

Even early in this century, under a mild governor, an important commerce passed through Mosul, from India, Persia, Kurdistan, Syria, Natolia, Europe¹⁷. And when European traffic took the line of the Isthmus of Suez, the communication with Kurdistan still secured to it an important and exclusive commerce. The merchants of Nineveh were dispersed and gone. The commerce continued over-against its grave.

The cankerworm spoileth and fleeth away; better, the locust hath spread itself abroad (marauded) and is flown. The prophet gives, in three words¹⁸, the whole history of Nineveh, its beginning and its end. He had before foretold its destruction, though it should be oppressive as the locust; he had spoken of its commercial wealth; he adds to this, that other source of its wealth, its despoiling warfares and their issue. The heathen conqueror rehearsed his victory, "I came, saw, conquered." The prophet goes farther, as the issue of all human conquest, "I disappeared." The locust [Nineveh]

¹² See Rawl. 5 Emp. ii. 191, 192.

¹³ גלס תכלית Ez. xxvii. 24.

¹⁴ ברוסם

¹⁵ Layard Nin. and Bab. p. 191.

¹⁶ "All those cloths of gold and of silk which we call 'muslins' (Mossulini) are of manufacture of Mosul." Marco Polo, Travels o. 6. p. 37. ed. 1854. "The manufactures from fine transparent white cotton, like the stuffs now made in India under that name and like the lombazines manufactured at Arzingan, received in the following centuries the name 'muslins;' but not the silk brocades interwoven with gold, which had their name Baldachini from Baldak i. e. Bagdad, and perhaps were manufactured at that time at Mosul, unless indeed this name "muslin" was then given to gold-brocades as 'wares of Mosul.'" Ritter Erdk. x. 274, 275. "There is a very large deposition of merchandise [at Mosul] because of the river, wherefore several goods and fruits are brought thither from the adjacent countries, both by land and water, to ship them for Bagdad." Rauwolf's Travels P. 2, c. 9. p. 205. A. 1573. Niebuhr still witnessed "the great traffic carried on there, as also linen manufactures, dyeing and printing [of stuffs]."

¹⁷ Olivier Voyage (1808) ii. 359. In 1766, one caravan, in which Niebuhr travelled, had 1300 camel-loads of gall-apples from Kurdistan. It supplied yearly 2000 centners of them. Nieb. ii. 274.

¹⁸ לֵקַח מִשָּׁרְיָתָא.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

* Rev. 9. 7.

17 Thy crowned are as the locusts, and thy captains as the great grasshoppers, which camp in the hedges in the cold day, but when the sun ariseth they flee away, and their place is not known where they are.

spread itself abroad (the word is always used of an inroad for plunder¹), destroying and wasting, everywhere: it left the world a desert, and was gone². Ill-gotten wealth makes poor, not rich. Truly they who traffic in this world, are more in number than they who, seeking treasure in Heaven, shall shine as the stars for ever and ever. For many are called, but few are chosen. And when all the stars of light "shall abide and *praise God*³, these men, though multiplied like the locust, shall, like the locust, pass away, destroying and destroyed. They abide for a while in the chillness of this world; when the Sun of righteousness ariseth, they vanish. This is the very order of God's Providence. As truly as locusts, which in the cold and dew are chilled and stiffened, and cannot spread their wings, fly away when the sun is hot and are found no longer, so shalt thou be dispersed and thy place not any more be known⁴. It was an earnest of this, when the Assyrians, like locusts, had spread themselves around Jerusalem in a dark day of trouble and of rebuke and of blasphemy⁵, God was entreated and they were not. Midian came up like the grasshopper for multitude⁶. In the morning they had fled⁷. What is the height of the sons of men? or how do they spread themselves abroad?" At the longest, after a few years it is but as the locust spreadeth himself and fleeth away, no more to return.

17. Thy crowned are as the locust, and thy captains as the great locusts. What he had said summarily under metaphor, the prophet expands in a likeness. The crowned⁸ are probably the subordinate princes, of whom Sennacherib said⁹, Are not my princes altogether kings? It has been observed that the head-dress of the Assyrian Vizier has the ornament which "throughout the whole series of sculptures is the distinctive mark of royal or quasi-royal authority."¹⁰ All high officers of state, the crowned captains, were adorned with diadems, closely resembling the lower band of the royal mitre, separated from the cap itself. Such was that of the vizier, which was broader in front than behind, was adorned with rosettes and compartments, and terminated in two ribbons with embroidered and fringed ends, which hung down his back." Captain is apparently the title of some military office of princely rank. One such Jeremiah¹¹, in a prophecy in which he probably alludes to this, bids place over the ¹ Jud. ix. 44 bis, 1 Sam. xxiii. 27, xxvii. 8, 10, xxx. 1, 1 Chr. xiv. 9, 13, 2 Chr. xxv. 13, xxviii. 18. The object, against which the attack is directed, is joined on with אל Jud. xx. 37, 1 Sam. xxvii. 8, 10, xxx. 1, or על, Jud. ix. 33, 44, 1 Sam. xxiii. 27, xxvii. 10; even as to the object of plunder, "camels" Job i. 17. The place (Hos. vii. 1) or country (1 Chr. xiv. 9, 13, 2 Chr. xxv. 13, xxviii. 18) is joined with ב, and once (1 Sam. xxx. 14) stands in the accus. The idiom בגדי, "put off his clothes," is distinct. The object of the verb is always added Lev. vi. 4, xvi. 23, 1 Sam. xix. 24, Cant. v. 3, Ez. xxvi. 16, xlv. 19, Neh. iv. 17; except that, in Is. xxxii. 11, it is implied by the context, "strip ye, make ye bare." Credner's theory then (followed by Ewald Proph. iii. 14. ed. 2.) that על signifies the locust in its last moulting, which strips off the involucra of its wings, is contrary to the use of בגד, as well as to that of על. See ab. on Joel p. 99. Gesenius, under בגד, contradicts the explanation which he had given under על from Credner.

² עוף is used of shortness of human life; "like a dream he fleeth away," (עוף) Job xx. 8; "and we fly away" עוף, Ps. xc. 10. "Ephraim, like a bird, their glory fleeth away," יחנף, Hos. ix. 11, add Pr. xxiii. 5, of unjust wealth. ³ Ps. cxlviii. 3. ⁴ See c. i. 8.

⁵ Is. xxxvii. 3. ⁶ Judg. vi. 4, 5, vii. 12. ⁷ Judg. vii. 21. ⁸ The punctuation

18 Thy shepherds slumber, O king of Assyria: thy nobles shall dwell in the dust: thy people is scattered upon the mountains, and no man gathereth them.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

* Ex. 15. 16.
Ps. 76. 6.
Jer. 50. 18.
Ezek. 31. 3,
&c.

b 1 Kin. 22. 17. || Or, valiant ones.

armies of Ararat, Minni, and Ashchenaz, to marshal them against Babylon, against which he summons the cavalry like the rough locust. The captains are likened to the great caterpillars¹², either as chief in devastation, or as including under them the armies under their command, who moved at their will. These and their armies now subsided into stillness for a time under the chill of calamity, like the locust "whose nature it is, that, torpid in the cold, they fly in the heat." The stiffness of the locusts through the cold, when they lie motionless, heaps upon heaps, hidden out of sight, is a striking image of the helplessness of Nineveh's mightiest in the day of her calamity; then, by a different part of their history, he pictures their entire disappearance. "The locusts, are commonly taken in the morning when they are agglomerated one on another, in the places where they passed the night. As soon as the sun warms them, they fly away." When the sun ariseth, they flee away¹³, lit. it is chased away¹⁴. One and all; all as one. As at God's command the plague of locusts, which He had sent on Egypt, was removed¹⁵; there remained not one locust in all the coasts of Egypt; so the mighty of Nineveh were driven forth, with no trace where they had been, where they were. The wind carried them away¹⁶; the wind passeth over him and he is not, and his place knoweth him no more¹⁷. The triumphing of the wicked is short, and the joy of the ungodly for a moment: though his excellency mount up to the heavens, and his head reach unto the clouds, yet he shall perish for ever; they which have seen him shall say, where is he? He shall fly away, as a dream, and shall not be found; neither shall his place any more behold him¹⁸.

Where they are. So Zechariah asks, *Your fathers, where are they?*¹⁹ History, experience, human knowledge can answer nothing. They can only say, where they are not. God Alone can answer that much-containing word, *Where-they*²⁰. They had disappeared from human sight, from their greatness, their visible being, their place on earth.

18. Thy shepherds, i. e. they who should counsel for the people's good and feed it, and keep watch over their flocks by night, but are now like their master, the King of Assyria, are his shepherds not the shepherds of the people whom they care not for; these slumber, at once through listlessness and excess, and now have fallen asleep in death, as the Psalmist says²¹, of קצור is compared by Jewish grammarians too to קצור Ex. xv. 17; קצור Jo. i. 17.

⁹ Is. x. 8. ¹⁰ Rawl. 5 Empires i. 115. ¹¹ Gosse, Assyria p. 463, who remarks that "the Ten Thousand in Xerxes' army," crossed the Hellespont "crowned with garlands." Herod. vii. 55. ¹² Jer. li. 27. On the word, מכסר, see ab. p. 358. n. e.

¹³ נוב גוי, doubtless the common superlative, like ערב ערב Gen. ix. 25.

¹⁴ S. Jer. copied by S. Cyr. and Theod.

¹⁵ Casalis, on the proverb of the Bassouto, "locusts are taken in the heap." Etudes sur la langue Sechuana p. 87. Paris 1842, referred to by Ewald ad loc. who also refers to Ibn Babuta (in the Journ. As. 1843 March p. 240.) "The chase of locusts is made before sunrise; for then they are benumbed by the cold and cannot fly."

¹⁶ יום קרה, "the cold day," (also Prov. xxv. 20), of course does not mean "night," (as Hitzig &c) nor (as Ew. &c.) does חושך mean any thing but "sunrise," of which it is used 8 times besides, Gen. xxxii. 32, Ex. xxii. 2, Jud. ix. 33, 2 Sam. xxiii. 4, 2 Kgs. iii. 22, Ps. civ. 22, Eccl. i. 5, Jon. iv. 8; but the locusts, having been benumbed by a cold day, plainly would not be warmed till the sunrise of the following day. ¹⁷ נודר, passive.

¹⁸ Ex. x. 19. ¹⁹ Is. xli. 16. ²⁰ Ps. ciii. 16. ²¹ Job xx. 5-9. ²² Zechar. i.

²³ קצ, contracted for קצור.

²⁴ Ps. lxxvi. 6, נבו שנים.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

19 There is no †healing of thy bruise; †thy wound is grievous: †all that hear the bruit of thee shall clap

† Heb.
wrinkling.

• Mic. 1. 9. † Lam. 2. 15. Zeph. ii. 15. See Isa. 14. 8, &c.

They have slept their sleep. The prophet speaks of the future, as already past in effect, as it was in the will of God. All "the shepherds of the people¹," all who could shepherd them, or hold them together, themselves sleep the sleep of death; their mighty men dwelt² in that abiding-place, where they shall not move or rise³, the grave; and so as Micaiah, in the vision predictive of Ahab's death⁴, saw all Israel scattered on the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd, so the people of the Assyrian monarch shall be scattered on the mountains, shepherdless, and that irretrievably; no man gathereth them.

19. There is no healing [lit. dulling] of thy bruise; it cannot be softened or mitigated; and so thy wound is grievous [lit. sick], incurable, for when the wound ever anew inflames, it cannot be healed. The word, bruise, is the more expressive, because it denotes alike the abiding wound in the body⁵, and the shattering of a state, which God can heal⁶, or which may be great, incurable⁷. When the passions are ever anew aroused, they are at last without remedy; when the soul is ever swollen with pride, it cannot be healed; since only by submitting itself to Christ, "broken and contrite" by humility, can it be healed. Nineveh sank, and never rose; nothing soothed its fall. In the end there shall be nothing to mitigate the destruction of the world, or to soften the sufferings of the damned. The rich man, being in torments, asked in vain that Lazarus might dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue.

All that hear the bruit of thee shall clap the hands over thee, for none can grieve at thy fall.

Nineveh sinks out of sight amid one universal, exulting, exceeding joy⁸ of all who heard the report of her. For upon whom hath not thy wickedness passed continually? "In that he asketh, upon whom hath not thy wickedness passed continually?" he affirmeth most strongly that his evil did pass upon all continually." His wickedness, like one continual flood, which knew no ebb or bound, had passed upon the whole world and each one in it; now at length it had passed away, and the whole earth is at rest, is quiet; they break forth into singing⁹.

It is not without meaning, that having throughout the prophecy addressed Nineveh (in the feminine), now, in the close¹⁰, the prophet turns to him in whom all its wickedness is, as it were, gathered into one, the soul of all its evil, and the director of it, its king. As Nineveh is the image of the world, its pomps, wealth, luxury, vanity, wickedness, oppression, destruction, so its king is the image of a worse king, the Prince of this world. "And this is the song of triumph of those, over whom his wickedness has passed, not rested, but they have escaped out of his hands. Nahum, 'the comforter,' had rebuked the world of sin; now he pronounces that the prince of this world is judged. His shepherds are they the hands over thee: for upon whom hath not thy wickedness passed continually?

Before
CHRIST
cir. 713.

who serve him, who feed the flock of the slaughter, who guide them to evil, not to good. These, when they sleep, as all mankind, dwell there; it is their abiding-place; their sheep are scattered on the mountains, in the heights of their pride, because they are not of the sheep of Christ; and since they would not be gathered of Him, they are scattered, where none gathereth." "The king of Assyria (Satan) knoweth that he cannot deceive the sheep, unless he have first laid the shepherds asleep. It is ever the aim of the devil to lay asleep souls that watch. In the Passion of the Lord, he weighed down the eyes of the Apostles with heavy sleep, whom Christ arouseth¹², Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation; and again, What I say unto you, I say unto all, watch! And no man gathereth them, for their shepherds themselves cannot protect themselves. In the Day of God's anger, the kings of the earth and the great men, and the rich men and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains¹³. Such are his shepherds, and his sheep; but what of himself? Truly his bruise or breaking can not be healed; his wound or smiting is incurable; that namely whereby, when he came to Him in Whom he found nothing¹⁴, yet bruised His heel, and exacted of Him a sinner's death, his own head was bruised." And hence all who have ears to hear, who hear not with the outward only, but with the inner ears of the heart, clap the hands over thee, i. e. give to God all their souls' thanks and praise, raise up their eyes and hands to God in heaven, praising Him Who had bruised Satan under their feet. Ever since, through the serpent, the evil and malicious One lied, saying, ye shall not surely die, eat and ye shall be as gods, hath his evil, continually and unceasingly, from one and through one, passed upon all men. As the Apostle saith, *As by one man, sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned*¹⁵. Upon whom then hath not his sin passed? Who hath not been shapen in iniquity? and whom did not his mother conceive in sin? Yet, it passeth only, for the world itself also passeth away, and we pass away from it, and all the evil it can do us, unless we share in its evil, is not abiding, but passing. This then is the cause, and a great cause, why all that hear the bruit of thee should clap the hands over thee; because thee, whose wickedness passed through one upon all, One Man, Who Alonewas without sin, contemned and bruised, while He freed and justified from wickedness them who hearing rejoiced, and rejoicing and believing, clapped the hands over thee. Yet they only shall be glad, upon whom his wickedness, although it passed, yet abode not, but in prayer and good deeds, by the grace of God, they lifted up their hands to Him Who overcame, and Who, in His own, overcometh still, to Whom be praise and thanksgiving for ever and ever. Amen.

¹ Homer, passim. ² Comp. מִיֵּשֶׁבִּים Is. xxii. 16. ³ "They cannot rise" Rashi. "It means the rest of death, and so שְׁכֵנָה רִמְמָה נִשְׁכָּן Ps. xciv. 6, לִפְנֵי יֵשֶׁבֶן Ps. vii. 6." Sal. Ben Mel. "are still and move not." A. E. ⁴ 1 Kgs xxii. 17. ⁵ Lev. xxi. 19.

⁶ Ps. lx. 4, Is. xxx. 26. ⁷ Jer. xxx. 12. ⁸ חֲקֻקֵּי כֶּף, only here and Ps. xlvii. 2, expressing joy. ⁹ Is. xiv. 7. ¹⁰ v. 18, 19. ¹¹ S. Jer. Rup. ¹² S. Mat. xxvi. 41. ¹³ Rev. vi. 15. ¹⁴ S. John xiv. 30. ¹⁵ Rom. v. 12.

INTRODUCTION

TO

THE PROPHET HABAKKUK.

Habakkuk is eminently the prophet of reverential, awe-filled faith. This is the soul and centre of his prophecy. One word alone he addresses directly to his people. It is of marvel at their want of faith. ^aBehold among the heathen and gaze attentively, and marvel, marvel; for I am working a work in your days; ye will not believe, when it is declared unto you. He bids them behold, and gaze, for God is about to work in their own days; he bids them prepare themselves to marvel, and marvel on; for it was a matter, at which political wisdom would stagger; and they, since they had not faith, would not believe it. The counterpart to this, is that great blessing of faith, which is the key-stone of his whole book, ^bthe just shall live by his faith.

Isaiah had foretold to Hezekiah that his treasures should be carried to Babylon, his sons be eunuchs in the palace of its king^c. He had foretold the destruction of Babylon and the restoration of the Jews^d. Prophecy in Habakkuk, full as it is, is almost subordinate. His main subject is, that which occupied Asaph in the 73rd Psalm, the afflictions of the righteous amid the prosperity of the wicked. The answer is the same; the result of all will be one great reversal, the evil drawing upon themselves evil, God crowning the patient waiting of the righteous in still submission to His holy Will. The just shall live by his faith, occupies the same place in Habakkuk, as I know that my Redeemer liveth, does in Job^e, or Thou shalt guide me with Thy counsel, and after that receive me into glory, in Asaph^f.

His first subject^g is, faith struggling under the oppressive sight of the sufferings of the good from the bad within God's people; the second^h, the sufferings at the hands of those who are God's instruments to avenge that wickedness. The thirdⁱ, that of his great hymn, is faith, not jubilant until the end, yet victorious, praying, believing, seeing in vision what it prays for, and triumphing in that, of which it sees no tokens, whose only earnest is God's old loving-kindnesses to His people, and His Name, under which He had revealed Himself, "He Who Is," the Unchangeable.

The whole prophecy is, so to speak, a colloquy between the prophet and God. He opens it with a reverential, earnest, appeal to God, like that of the saints under the heavenly Altar in the Revelations^k, How long? The prophet had prayed to God to end or mitigate the violence, oppressions, strife, contention, despoiling, powerlessness of the law, crookedness of justice, entrapping of the righteous by the wicked^l. God answers^m, that a terrible day of retribution was coming, that He Himself would raise up the Chaldees, as the instruments of His chastisements, terrible, self-dependent, owning no law or authority but their own will, deifying their own power, sweeping the whole breadth of the land, possessing themselves of it, taking every fenced city, and gathering captives as the sand. This answers the one half of Habakkuk's question, as to the prosperity of the wicked among his people. It leaves the other half, as to the condition of the righteous, unanswered. For such scourges of God swept away the righteous with the wicked. Habakkuk then renews the question as to them. But, as Asaph began by declaring his faith, ⁿAll-good is God to Israel, the true Israel, the pure of heart, so Habakkuk, "Israel would not die, because He, their God, is Unchangeable." ^oArt not Thou of old, O Lord, my God, my holy One? we shall not die; Thou, O Lord, hast set him [the Chaldee] for judgement, and Thou, O Rock, hast founded him to chasten. Then he appeals to God, "Why then is this? Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil—wherefore keepest Thou silence, when the wicked devoureth him who is more righteous than he?" This closes the first chapter and the first vision, in which he describes, with the vividness of one who saw it before him, the irresistible invasion of the Chaldeans. Israel was meshed as in a net; should that net be emptied^p?

The second chapter exhibits the prophet waiting in silent expectation for the answer. This answer too dwells chiefly on those retributions in this life, which are the earnest of future judgements, the witness of the sovereignty of God. But although in few words, it does answer the question as to the righteous, that he has abiding life, that he lives and shall live. God impresses the importance of the answer in the words^q, Write the vision i. e. the prophecy, and make it plain on the tables, whereon the prophet was wont to write^r, that he may run who reads it. He says also, that it is for a time fixed in the mind of God, and that however, in man's sight, it might seem to linger, it would not be aught behind the time^s. Then he gives the answer itself in the words, ^tBehold his soul which is puffed up is not upright in him; and the just shall

^a i. 5. ^b ii. 4. ^c Is. xxxix. 6, 7. ^d Is. xii. xiii. xlvii. ^e Job xix. 25.
^f Ps. lxxiii. 24. ^g c. i. ^h c. ii. ⁱ c. iii.

^k Rev. vi. 10. ^l i. 2-4. ^m Ib. 6-11. ⁿ Ps. lxxiii. 1. ^o Hab. i. 12.
^p Ib. 17. ^q ii. 2. ^r על הלתות ^s ii. 3. ^t ii. 4.

live by his faith. The swelling pride and self-dependence of the Chaldee stands in contrast with the trustful submission of faith. Of the one God says, it has no ground of uprightness, and consequently will not stand before God; of faith, he says, the righteous shall live by it. But the life plainly is not the life of the body. For Habakkuk's ground of complaint was the world-wasting cruelty of the Chaldees. The woe on the Chaldee which follows is even chiefly for bloodshed, in which the righteous and the wicked are massacred alike. The simple word, shall live, is an entire denial of death, a denial even of any interruption of life. It stands in the same fulness as those words of our Lord, "because I live, ye shall live also." The other side of the picture, the fall of the Chaldees, is given in greater fulness, because the fulfilment of God's word in things seen was the pledge of the fulfilment of those beyond the veil of sense and time. In a measured dirge he pronounces a five-fold woe on the five great sins of the Chaldees, their ambition⁷, covetousness⁸, violence⁹, insolence², idolatry¹. It closes with the powerlessness of the Chaldee idols against God, and bids the whole world be hushed before the presence of the One God, its Maker, awaiting His sentence.

Then follows the prayer^b, that God would revive His work for Israel, which now seemed dead. He describes the revival as coming, under the images of God's miraculous deliverances of old. The division of the Red Sea and the Jordan, the standing-still of the sun and moon under Joshua, are images of future deliverances; all nature shakes and quivers at the presence of its Maker. Yet not it, but the wicked were the object of His displeasure. The prophet sees his people delivered as at the Red Sea, just when the enemy seemed ready to sweep them away, as with a whirlwind. And, in sight of the unseen, he closes with that wondrous declaration of faith, that all nature should be desolate, all subsistence gone, every thing, contrary to God's promises of old to His people, should be around him, and I will rejoice in the Lord, I will exult for joy in the God of my salvation.

This prophecy is not less distinct, because figurative. Rather it is the declaration of God's deliverance of His people, not from the Chaldees only, but at all times. The evil is concentrated in one Evil one, who stands over against the One anointed. *Thou art gone forth for the salvation of Thy people; for salvation with Thine anointed One. Thou crushedst the head out of the house of the wicked One, laying bare the foundation unto the neck, i. e. smiting the house, at once, above and below; with an utter destruction. It belongs then the more to all times, until the closing strife between evil and good, Christ and Antichrist, the ἀννομος and the Lord. It includes the Chaldee, and each great Empire which opposes itself to the kingdom of God, and declares that, as God delivered His people of old, so He would unto the end.*

It may be that Habakkuk chose this name to express the strong faith, whereby he embraced the promises of God. At least, it means one who "strongly enfolds".

Perhaps too it is on account of the form in which his prophecy is cast, as being spoken (with the exception of that one verse) to God or to the Chaldean, not to his own people, that he added the title of Prophet to his name. The burden which Habakkuk the prophet did see^d. For, however the name "prophet" includes all to whom revelations from God came, it is nowhere, in the Old Testament, added as the name of an office to any one, who did not exercise the practical office of the Prophet. Our Lord quotes David as the Prophet^e, and God says to Abimelech of Abraham^f, He is a Prophet, and, in reference to this, the Psalmist speaks of the Patriarchs, as Prophets^g. He reproved kings for their sakes, saying, Touch not Mine anointed and do My prophets no harm, and Hosea speaks of Moses as a prophet^h, and St. Peter says of Davidⁱ, He being a prophet. But the title is nowhere in the Old Testament added to the name as it is here, Habakkuk the prophet, and as it is elsewhere Samuel the prophet^k, the prophet Gad^l, Nathan the prophet^m, Abijah the prophetⁿ, the prophet Jehu^o, Elijah the prophet^p, Elisha the prophet^q, Shemaiah the prophet^r, the prophet Iddo^s, the prophet Obed^t, Isaiah the prophet^u, Jeremiah the prophet^v, Haggai the prophet^x, unless any have exercised the prophetic office. The title of the Prophet is not, in the Old Testament, added to the names of Jacob or even of Moses or David or Solomon or Daniel, although they all prophesied of Christ.

Since Holy Scripture often conveys so much incidentally, it may be that a large range of ministerial office is hinted in the words "write on the tables;" for "the tables" must have been well-known tables, tables upon which prophets (as Isaiah) and probably Habakkuk himself was accustomed to write. The writing of a few emphatic unexplained words in a public place, which should arouse curiosity, or startle passers-by, would be in harmony with the symbolical actions, enjoined on the prophets and used by them. The Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin, had, from their mysteriousness, an impressiveness of their own, apart from the miracle of the writing.

The words appended to the prophecy, to the chief singer, (as we should say, "the leader of the band") with or on my stringed instruments, imply, not only that the hymn became part of the devotions of the temple, but that Habakkuk too had a part in the sacred music which accompanied it. The word so rendered, neginothai, could only mean my stringed instruments, or "my song accompanied with music," as Hezekiah says⁷, we will sing my songs on the stringed instruments, nenaggen neginothai. But in Habakkuk's subscription, "To the chief musician binginothai," neginoth can have no other meaning than in the almost identical inscription of Psalms, "To the chief musician binginoth," nor this any other than with stringed instruments, "instruments struck with the hand^a." The addition, "with my stringed instruments," shews that Habakkuk himself was to accompany his hymn with instrumental music, and since the mention of the chief musician marks out that it was to form part of the temple-service, Habakkuk must have been entitled to take part in the temple-music, and so must have been a Levite. The Levitical order then had its prophet, as the sacerdotal in Jeremiah and Ezekiel. The tradition in the title to Bel and the Dragon, whatever its value, agrees with this; "^b from the prophecy of Ambakum, son of Jesus, of the tribe of Levi."

This, however, does not give us any hint as to the time when ^d i. 1. added iii. 1. ^e S. Matt. xiii. 35. ^f Gen. xx. 7. ^g Ps. cv. 14-15.

^h Hos. xii. 13. ⁱ Acts ii. 30. ^j 2 Chr. xxxv. 18. ^k 1 Sam. xxii. 5.

^l 1 Kgs. i. 32. ^m 1 Kgs. xi. 29. ⁿ Ib. xvi. 7, 12. ^o Ib. xviii. 36.

^p 2 Kgs. vi. 12. ^q 2 Chr. xii. 5. ^r Ib. xiii. 22. ^s Ib. xv. 8.

^t 2 Kgs. xix. 2, xx. 1. ^u Jer. xxviii. 6, xxxvi. 26, 2 Chr. xxxvi. 12.

^v Ezr. v. 1, vi. 14. ^w Is. xxxviii. 20. ^x Ps. iv. vi. liv. lxi. lxvii. lxxvi.

^y Coll. 1 Sam. xvii. 16, 23, xviii. 10, xix. 9, 2 Kgs. iii. 15.

^z Cod. Chis. of LXX from Origen's Tetraptar and the Syro-Hexaplar.

^a S. John xiv. 19. ^b ii. 5. 8. ^c ii. 9-11. ^d ii. 12-14.

^e ii. 15-17. ^f ii. 18-20. ^g c. iii.

^h There is no other form exactly like חַבְבִּיק. Yet it is manifestly intensive. It most resembles the form חַבְבִּיק "loved intensely." This form, in חַבְבִּיק, is changed into חַבְבִּיק. Equally חַבְבִּיק might be pronounced Habakkuk, the second ב being, as Delitzsch suggested, merged in the פ, for greater facility of pronunciation. The י is a form like חַבְבִּיק, חַבְבִּיק, חַבְבִּיק, חַבְבִּיק; yet it is impossible that the reduplication should be meaningless. (as Ew. 157. a. p. 405. ed. 7.)

The relation of Zephaniah to Habakkuk coincides with this. Zephaniah certainly adopted the remarkable wordsⁱ, lit. ^k Hush at the presence of the Lord God, from Habakkuk's fuller form^l, The Lord is in His holy temple; hush at His presence all the earth.

The sinful great men of Manasseh's and Amon's court and judicature are but too likely to have maintained their power in the early years of the reign of Josiah. For a boy of eight years old (at which age Josiah succeeded his father^v) could, amid whatsoever sense of right and piety, do little to stem the established wrong and ungodliness of the evil counsellors and judges of his father and grandfather. The sins, which Jeremiah denounces, as the cause of the future captivity of Jerusalem, are the very same, of which Habakkuk complains, "oppression, violence, spoil^z." Jeremiah speaks, in the concrete, of total absence of right judgement^a, as Habakkuk, in the abstract, of the powerlessness of the law^b. Zephaniah gives the like picture of those earlier years under Josiah^c. But Habakkuk's description would not suit the later years of Josiah, when judgement and justice were done. Did not thy father, Jeremiah appeals to Jehoiakim^d, eat and drink, and do judgement and justice, and then it was well with him; he judged the cause of the poor and needy, then it was well with him; was not this to know Me? saith the Lord^e. But while there is nothing to preclude his having prophesied in either reign, the earliest tradition places him in the close of the reign of Manasseh^f.

^b Hab. i. 4, "the law is chilled, and judgement will never go forth; for the wicked encompasseth the just: therefore judgement goeth forth perverted."

^a Hab. i. 8, קָצֵר הָיָה הָיָה הָיָה הָיָה seems to have suggested the like description of the Chaldee cavalry, Jer. iv. 13, קָצֵר הָיָה, although, with the slight variation, which he commonly used, Jeremiah has קָצֵר, after David probably on Saul and Jonathan, קָצֵר.

Modern critics have assigned an earlier or later date to Habakkuk, accordingly as they believed that God did, or did not, reveal the future to man, that there was or was not, superhuman prophecy. Those who denied that God did endow His prophets with knowledge above nature, fell into two classes; 1) Such as followed Eichhorn's unnatural hypothesis, that prophecies were only histories of the past, spoken of, as if it were still future, to which these critics gave the shameless title of "vaticinia post eventum^g." These plainly involved the prophets in fraud. 2) Those who laid down that each prophet lived at a time, when he could, with human foresight, tell what would happen. Would that those who count certainty, as to even a near future, to be so easy a thing, would try their hands at predicting the events of the next few years or months, or even days^h, and, if they fail, acknowledge God's Truth! This prejudice, that there could be no real prophecy, ruled, for a time, all German criticism. It cannot be denied, that "the unbelief was the parent of the criticism, not the criticism of the unbelief." It is simple matter of history, that the unbelief came first; and, if men, à priori, disbelieved that there could be prophecy, it must needs be a postulate of their criticism, that what seemed to be prophecy could not have belonged to a date, when human foresight did not suffice for positive prediction. I will use the words of Delitzsch rather than my own;

"ⁱThe investigation into the age of Habakkuk could be easily and briefly settled, if we would start from the prejudice, which is the soul of modern criticism, that a prediction of the future, which rested, not on human inferences or on a natural gift of divination, but on supernatural illumination, is impossible. For since Habakkuk foretold the invasion of the Chaldees, he must, in such case, have come forward at a time, at which natural acuteness could, with certainty, determine beforehand that sad event; accordingly in or after the time of the battle of Carchemish in the 4th year of Jehoiakim^j 606 B. C. In this decisive battle Nebuchadnezzar defeated Pharaoh Necho, and it was more than probable that the king of Babylon would now turn against Judæa, since Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, had been set on the throne by Pharaoh Necho^k, and so held with Egypt. And this is in reality the inference of modern critics. They bring the Chaldeans so close under the eyes of the prophet, that he could, by way of nature, foresee

^c Zeph. i. 9, where he too foretells the punishment of those, "which fill their masters' houses with violence and deceit, חֲסִידֵי יְהוָה" and iii. 1-4. ^d Jer. xxii. 15, 16.

^e Dr. Davidson rightly says, "the spoiling and violence, there (i. 2, 3.) depicted, refer to the internal condition of the theocracy, not to external injuries" (p. 305); but then he contradicts himself and Jeremiah, when he says, (p. 305) following Ewald (Proph. ii. 30.), "The safest conclusion respecting the time of the prophet, is that he lived in the time of Jehoiakim (606-604. B. C.), when the kingdom of Judah was in a good moral condition, justice and righteousness having entered into the life of the people after Josiah's reforms, and idolatry having almost disappeared."

^f "Seder Olam, from which Abarbanel, R. Dav. Ganz in Zemach David, p. 21, and Rabbins drew their opinion." Carpzoff Introd. P. iii. p. 410.

^g Eichhorn (Einl.) Bertholdt (Einl.) Justi Habakkuk neu übersetzt 1841. Wolf, der Proph. Hab. &c. 1822.

^h At every early stage of the great conflict (August 1870) it was remarkable how day after day journalists professed themselves to be at fault, as to the most immediate future. On one point only they were agreed that the war would be "long and severe." Then it was thought that one month would see its beginning and its end. "The course of the their invasion; and so much the closer under his eyes, the more deeply the prejudice, that there is no prophecy in the Biblical sense of the word, has taken root in them, and the more consistently they follow it out. 'Habakkuk prophesied under Jehoiakim, for,' so Jäger expresses himself, 'since Jehoiakim was on the side of the Egyptians, it was easy to foresee, that¹; &c.' Just so Ewald; ^m 'One might readily be tempted to think, that Habakkuk wrote, while the pious king Josiah was still living; but since the first certain invasion of the Chaldeans, of which our account speaksⁿ, falls within the reign of king Jehoiakim, somewhat between 608-604 B. C. we must abide by this date.' Hitzig defines the dates still more sharply, according to that principle of principles, to which history with its facts must adapt itself unconditionally. 'The prophet announces the arrival of the Chaldeans in Judæa, as something marvellous.' Well then, one would imagine, that it would follow from this, that at that time they had not yet come. But no! 'Habakkuk,' says Hitzig, 'introduces the Chaldeans as a new phenomenon, as yet entirely unknown; he prophesied accordingly at their first arrival into Palestine. But this beyond question falls in the reign of Jehoiakim^o. In Jehoiakim's fourth year, i. e. 606, they had fought the battle at Carchemish; in 605 the Chaldean army seems to have been on its march; the writing of Habakkuk is placed most correctly in the beginning of the year 604,' accordingly, at the time, when the Chaldeans were already marching with all speed straight on Jerusalem, and (as Hitzig infers from Hab. i. 9.) after they had come down from the North along the coast, were now advancing from the West, when they, as Ewald too remarks (resting, like Maurer on i. 2-4), ^p 'already stood in the holy land, trampling everything under foot with irresistible might, and allowing their own right alone to count as right.' Holding fast to that naturalist à priori, we go yet further. In ii. 17, the judgement of God is threatened to the Chaldean, on account of the violence practised on Lebanon, and the destruction of its animals. Lebanon is, it is said, the holy land; the animals, its inhabitants: in iii. 14, 17, the prophet sees the hostile hordes storming in: the devastation wrought through the war stands clearly before his eyes. This is not possible, unless the Chaldean were at that time already established in Judæa. However, then, c. i. was written before their invasion, yet c. ii., iii. must have been written after it. 'Wherefore,' says Maurer, 'since it is evident from Jer. xvi. 2, and xxxvi. 9, that the Chaldeans came in the year B. C. 605, in the 9th month of the 5th year of the reign of Jehoiakim, it follows that c. i. was written at that very time, but c. ii. iii. at the beginning of B. C. 604, the 6th of Jehoiakim.'

"Turn we away from this cheap pseudo-criticism, with its ready-made results, which sacrifices all sense for historical truth to a prejudice, which it seems to have vowed not to allow to be shaken by any thing. It seeks at any cost to disburden itself of any prophecy in Scripture, which can only present war," says a journal not wanting in self-reliance, "has gone far to verify the paradox, that nothing is certain but the unexpected. At any rate, nothing has happened but the unforeseen. Neither king nor Emperor, neither French nor German government or people had formed any anticipation of the events of the month now ending. The French expected to invade Germany, and they have been invaded themselves. The Germans, though confident of ultimate success, expected a long and toilsome conflict, whereas a month has brought them almost to the gates of Paris. The calculation of all parties as to the political effects of the war have been equally mistaken." The Times, Aug. 31st. And yet men, who, with our full information, would not risk a prediction as to the issue of things immediately before their eyes, think it so easy for Jewish prophets, living in their own small insulated country, to foretell certainly that Babylon would prevail over Egypt, when they knew either country only as their own superior, and political sagacity and feeling was on the side of Egypt.

¹ Der Proph. Habakkuk Einleit. pp. iv-vi.

^j Jer. xvi. 2.

^k 2 Kgs. xxiii. 34, 35.

^l "Facile erat prævidere fore ut &c." Jäger de ord. proph. minor. chronol. ii. 18. sqq.

^m Proph. iii. 30. ed. 2.

ⁿ 2 Kgs. xxiv. 1.

^o Ib. 2.

^p Proph. iii. 29. ed. 2.

be explained through supernatural agency; and yet it attains its end, neither elsewhere nor in our prophet. Chapter ii. contains a prediction of the overthrow of the Chaldean empire and of the sins whereby that overthrow was effected, which has been so remarkably confirmed by history even in details, that that criticism, if it would be true to its principles, must assume that it was written while Cyrus, advancing against Babylon, was employed in punishing the river Gyndes by dividing it off into 360 channels."

This major premiss, "there can be no superhuman prediction of the future," (in other words, "Almighty God, if He knows the future, cannot disclose it!") still lurks under the assumptions of that modern school of so-called criticism. It seems to be held no more necessary, formally to declare it, than to enounce at full length any axiom of Euclid. Yet it may, on that very ground, escape notice, while it is the unseen mainspring of the theories, put forth in the name of criticism. "That Habakkuk falls at a later time," says Stähelin, "is clear out of his prophecy itself; for he speaks of the Chaldeans, and the controversy is only, whether he announces their invasion, as Knobel, Umbreit, Delitzsch, Keil^a hold, or presupposes it, as Ewald, Hitzig, E. Meier maintain. To me the first opinion appears the right, since not only do i. 5. sqq. plainly relate to the future, but the detailed description of the Chaldeans points at something which has not yet taken place, at something hitherto unknown, and the terror of the prophet in announcing their coming, i. 12. sqq., recurs also iii. 1, 16, 17; and so, I think, that the time of Habakkuk's activity may be placed very soon after the battle of Carchemish, in the first half of the reign of Jehoiakim, and so his prophecy as contemporary with Jeremiah xxv." "Habakkuk," says De Wette, "lived and prophesied in the Chaldee period. It is, however, matter of dispute at what point of time in this period he lived. i. 5. sqq. clearly points to its beginning, the reign of Jehoiakim. Even ch. iii. seems to require no later point of time, since here the destruction of Judah is not yet anticipated. He was then Jeremiah's younger contemporary. Rightly do Perschke, Ranitz, Stickel, Knobel, Hitzig, Ewald, let the prophet prophesy a little before the invasion of the Chaldeans in Judah, which the analogy of prophecy favours;" for prophecy may still be human at this date, since so far it foretells only, what any one could foresee. A prophet of God foretells, these critics admit, an invasion which all could foresee, and does not foretell, what could not humanly be foreseen, the destruction of Jerusalem. The theory then is saved, and within these limits Almighty God is permitted to send His prophet. Condescending criticism!

Mostly criticism kept itself within these limits, and used nothing more than its axiom, "there was no prophecy." The freshness and power of prophetic diction in Habakkuk deterred most from that other expedient of picking out some two or three words as indicative of a later style. Stähelin however says; "His language too, although on the whole pure and without Aramaisms," (truly so! since there is not even an alleged or imagined Aramaism in his prophecy,) "still betrays, in single cases, the later period." And then he alleges that 1) one verb^r "only occurs besides in the books of Kings and in Ezekiel;" 2) another word "with the exception of Nahum, only in Jeremiah and Malachi;" 3) "the image of the cup of destiny only occurs in prophecies subsequent to Jeremiah." Marvellous precision of criticism, which can infer the date of a book from the facts, 1) that a verb, formed from a noun, occurs four times only in Holy Scripture, in 2 Kings, Habakkuk, and Ezekiel, whereas the noun from which it is derived occurs in a Psalm, which fits no later time than David's¹; 2) that a word, slightly varied in pronunciation from a common Hebrew word^u, occurs only in Nahum, Habakkuk, Jeremiah, and Malachi, once in each, when that word is the basis of the name of the river Pishon, mentioned in Genesis, and Stähelin himself places Nahum in the reign of Hezekiah; or that 3) no prophet before Jeremiah speaks of the image of the "cup of destiny^v," whereas the portion given by God for good^w or for ill^x, occurs under that same image in Psalms of David and Asaph; and if the question is to be begged as to the date of Isaiah li. 17, 22, the corresponding image of "drinking wine of reeling," occurs in a Psalm of David^y, and being "drunk, but not with wine" is imagery of an earlier chapter in Isaiah^z; the image occurs fully in Obadiah^a.

Such criticism is altogether childish. No one would tolerate it, except that it is adduced to support a popular and foregone conclusion. It would be laughed to scorn, were it used by believers in revelation. In the small remains of the Hebrew Scriptures and language, an induction, if it is to be of any value, must be very distinct. The largeness of Greek literature enables critics to single out Homeric, Herodotean, Æschylean, Pindaric words. In Hebrew we meet with ἀμαξ λεγόμενα in perhaps every prophet, in many Psalms; but it requires far more than the occurrence of the word in one single place, to furnish any even probable inference, that it was framed by the Prophet or Psalmist himself. Still less can it be inferred safely that because, in the scanty remains of Hebrew, a word does not occur before e. g. a certain historical book, it did not exist before the date of that book. Rather the occurrence of any word in language so simple as that of the historical books, is an evidence that it did exist and was in common use at the time. Poets and orators coin words, in order to give full expression for their thoughts. The characteristic of the sacred historians, both of the Old and New Testament, is to relate the facts in most absolute simplicity. It would be a singular "history of the Hebrew language," which should lay down as a principle, that all that it signifies ironical praise, as in Shem. rabba s. 27. In Ps. xlv. 14. נָחַם is retained for the Heb. נָחַם.

^a "חָסַד i. 8. with the exception of Nah. iii. 18, only besides in Jeremiah and Malachi." Stähelin. "חָסַד i. 8. in Jeremiah and Malachi besides;" Dr. Davidson; who avoids the absurdity of arguing relative lateness of diction from a word, occurring in Nahum, by omitting this fourth instance, but therewith falsifying the facts before him.

^r Ps. xlv. 14. ^u חָסַד (whence חָסַד Gen. ii. 11.) an early variation of חָסַד, ח for פ, as Rashi observes on Nah. iii. 18.

^v "The image of 'the cup of destiny' ii. 16, first occurs in the prophets after Jeremiah; and Hab. ii. 16. itself seems to refer to Jerem. xlix. 12." Stähelin pp. 288, 289. "The cup of judgement (ii. 16.) does not occur in the prophets before Jeremiah: whether Habakkuk refers in ii. 16. to Jer. xlix. 12. is doubtful, though Stähelin ventures to assert it;" Dr. Davidson (iii. 308) acknowledging, as usual, the source of his statements, where he dissents in one of them.

^w David, Ps. xi. 6. Asaph, lxxv. 8. ^x David, Ps. xvi. 5. xxxiii. 5. ^y Ps. lx. 5. [3. Eng.] ^z Is. xxix. 9. ^a ver. 16.

^a Stähelin mixed up Delitzsch and Keil, who believed in superhuman prediction, and Knobel &c. who denied it, joining himself on to the class in general and ignoring the radical difference. Dr. Davidson assumes the same principle. "As he mentions the Chaldeans by name, and his oracle refers to them, he lived in the Chaldean period. — The safest conclusion respecting the time of the prophet is that he lived in the time of Jehoiakim 606-601. B. C." "To put the prophet in Manasseh's reign is incorrect because the Chaldeans were not a people formidable to the Jews at that time." (Introd. iii. pp. 304, 305.) And so Habakkuk, without superhuman knowledge, could not foretell it!

^r "Thus the verb נָחַם occurs, only besides in the books of Kings and in Ezekiel." Stähelin. "The diction is pure and classical. Yet he has some late words, as נָחַם i. 10, which appears only in Kings and Ezekiel." Dr. Davidson. The primitive form נָחַם, which is alleged, does not occur at all; only נָחַם Ez. xvi. 31. and נָחַם with נ, "mock at," 2 Kgs. ii. 23, Hab. i. 10, Ez. xxii. 5, as denominatives from נָחַם Ps. xlv. 14. lxxix. 4. and Jer. xx. 8. There is nothing to shew that it is a late word, though occurring for the first time in the history of Elisha. In Aramaic, (not in Onk. or Jon.) it has the opposite meaning, "praised." In the exceptions in Chaldee, Ges. seems rightly to conjecture, those are later words, which do not happen to occur before the books of Kings, Habakkuk, or any other prophet, whom this criticism is pleased to rank among the later books. What are we to do with Habakkuk's own ἀπαξ λεγόμενα? Granted, that he framed some of them, yet it is impossible that he framed them all. As specimens of the results of such a critical principle, that words, occurring for the first time in any book, are characteristic of the date of that word, let us only take roots beginning with s. Had then the Hebrew no name for nails (as distinct from hooks, pegs^b), before those whom these critics would make late writers^c, as Ecclesiastes and Isaiah xli? Or had they none for ceiling a building before the book of Kings^d; although the ark had a third story^e, and Lot speaks of "the shadow of my roof^f?" Or had they none for a "decked vessel" before Jonah^g, although the Indian names of Solomon's imports show that Ophir, whither his navy sailed, was in India, Ophir itself being Abhira in the province of Cutch^h? Or had they no name for "divided opinions" before Elijahⁱ? Seed shed, which sprang up in the second year, was known in the Pentateuch^k; but that of the third year would, on that hypothesis, remain unknown till Hezekiah^l; nor did the Hebrews express to "drag along the ground," till Hushai^m, and, after him, Jeremiah. They had no name for winter, as distinct from autumn, until the Canticlesⁿ, and, but for the act of the Philistines in stopping up^o Abraham's wells, it might have been said that Hebrew had no word for this act, till the time of Jehoshaphat^p.

Or as to the criticism itself, שָׁחַ is to be a later word, because, except in that Psalm of the sons of Corah, it occurs first in the history of Elisha^q. Perhaps it is so rare (and this may illustrate the history of Elisha) because, as used, it seems to have been one of the strongest words in the language for, "derision;" at least the verb is used in an intensive form only, and always of strong derision^r. But then, did the old Hebrews never use derision? Happy exception for one nation, if they never used it wrongly or had no occasion to use it rightly! Yet even though (by a rare exception) Ewald allows the second Psalm to be David's, (Job however being placed about the 7th century B. C.) the evidence for שָׁחַ, as strong a word, would be of the time of David^s. "Scorning" "scoffing," (unless Psalm i. be allowed to be David's) did not begin till Solomon's time^t. "Mocking" was yet later^u. As belongs to a rude people, insult was only shewn in acts, of which הִתְעַלֵּל is used^v; and from those simple times of the Patriarchs, they had no stronger word than "to laugh at^w." For this is the only word used in the Pentateuch^x.

But to what end all this? To prove that Habakkuk had no superhuman knowledge of what he foretold? Prophecy occupies, as I said, a subordinate place in Habakkuk. He renews the "burden" of former prophets, both upon his own people and upon the Chaldaeans; but he does not speak even so definitely as they. His office is rather to enforce the connection of sin and punishment: he presupposes the details, which they had declared. Apart from those chapters, which pseudo-criticism denies to Isaiah^y, on account of the distinctness of the temporal prophecies, Isaiah had, in plainest words, declared to Hezekiah the carrying away of all the royal treasures to Babylon, and that his offspring should be eunuchs there^z; Micah had declared not only the complete desolation of Jerusalem^a, but that the people should be "b" carried to Babylon, and there delivered, there redeemed from the hands of the enemy." In the 13th year of Josiah, B. C. 628. and so, three years before the fall of Nineveh, while Babylon was still dependent on Nineveh and governed by a vice-roy, and while Nabopolassar was still in the service of the king of Nineveh, Jeremiah foretold, that c evil should break forth from the North upon all the inhabitants of the land, and all the families of the kingdoms of the North shall come and set every one his throne at the entering of the gates of Jerusalem and against all the walls thereof round about and against all the cities of Judah, to execute the judgements of God against them for their wickedness. This was his dirge over his country for twenty three years^d, ere yet there was a token of its fulfilment. Babylon had succeeded to Nineveh in the West and South-West, and Judah had fallen to the share of Babylon; but the relation of Josiah to Nabopolassar was of a tributary sovereign, which rebellion only could disturb. The greater part of Nabopolassar's 21 year's reign are almost a blank^e. Chastisement had come, but from the South, not from the North. Eighteen years had passed away, and Josiah had fallen, in resisting Pharaoh-Necho in discharge of his fealty to the king of Babylon. Pharaoh-Necho had taken away one king of Judah, Jehoahaz, the people's choice, whose continued fealty to Babylon represents their minds, and had set up another, Jehoiakim. For three years Judah's new allegiance was allowed to continue. Who, but God, could tell the issue of the conflict of those two great armies at Carchemish? Egypt with her allies, the Ethiopians, Phut and Lud, were come, rising up like a flood^f, covering the earth with her armies, as her rivers, when swollen, made her own land one sea. Necho had apparently in his alliance all the kings of the countries West of the Euphrates: for to them all, in connection with Egypt and subordinate to her, does Jeremiah at that moment give to drink the cup of the wrath of God; to g Pharaoh king of Egypt, and his servants and his princes and all his people, and all the mingled people [his auxiliaries] and all the kings of the land of Uz, and all the kings of the land

^b יָד, יָד. ^c סָחָה Is. xli. 7, סָחָה 1 Chr. xxii. 3, סָחָה, Jer. x. 4, סָחָה, 2 Chr. iii. 9. סָחָה Eccl. xii. 11.

^d סָחָה 1 Kgs. vi. 9, סָחָה 1 Kgs. vii. 3, 7, Jer. xxii. 14, Hagg. i. 4, (סָחָה Dt. xxxiii. 21. סָחָה 1b. 19, is 1. q. (סָחָה). סָחָה, "hold together," occurs 1 Kgs. vi. 6, 10, Ezek. xli. 6; סָחָה lit. "overshadowed" Neh. iii. 15; סָחָה occurs also 1 Kgs. vi. 5, 6, 10.

^e סָחָה Gen. vi. 16, as in 1 Kgs. vi. 8, Ez. xlii. 3. ^f סָחָה Gen. xix. 8, as being "beamed." Conf. סָחָה "laid beams" (met.) Ps. civ. 3. else 2 Chr. xxxiv. 11, Neh. ii. 8, iii. 3, 6; סָחָה beam 2 Kgs. vi. 2, 5, 2 Chr. iii. 7. Cant. i. 17. סָחָה Eccl. x. 18. ^g סָחָה Jon. i. 5. See ab. p. 249.

^h See ab. on Micah iv. p. 321. ⁱ סָחָה Gen. vi. 16, as in 1 Kgs. vi. 8, Ez. xlii. 3. ^j סָחָה Gen. xix. 8, as being "beamed." Conf. סָחָה "laid beams" (met.) Ps. civ. 3. else 2 Chr. xxxiv. 11, Neh. ii. 8, iii. 3, 6; סָחָה beam 2 Kgs. vi. 2, 5, 2 Chr. iii. 7. Cant. i. 17. סָחָה Eccl. x. 18.

^k סָחָה Lev. xxv. 5, 11. Else only with שָׁחַ or שָׁחַ. ^l סָחָה 2 Kgs. xix. 29, סָחָה 1b. xxxvii. 30.

^m סָחָה 2 Sam. xvii. 13, Jer. xv. 3, xxii. 19, xlix. 20. So סָחָה "sweet" occurs only Ezek. xxvi. 4, 10, Lam. iii. 45, but סָחָה is used by Solomon Prov. xxviii. 3.

ⁿ סָחָה Cant. ii. 11. ^o סָחָה Gen. xxvi. 15, 18.

^p סָחָה 2 Kgs. iii. 19, 25, 2 Chr. xxxii. 3, 4. Nif. of closing breaches in a wall, Neh. iv. 1. ^q סָחָה 2 Kgs. ii. 23. ^r Pih. Ez. xvi. 31. Hithp. 2 Kgs. i. c., Hab. i. c., Ez. xxii. 5, who has also סָחָה. ^s סָחָה. The verb occurs Ps. ii. 4, xxii. 8, lix. 9, lxxx. 7, Prov. i. 26, xvii. 5, xxx. 17. Job ix. 23, xi. 3, xxi. 3, xxii. 19, Is. xxxiii. 19, xxxvii. 22, Jer. xx. 7, 2 Chr. xxx. 10, Neh. ii. 19, iii. 33. סָחָה Job xxxiv. 7, Ps. cxxiii. 4, Hos. vii. 16, Ez. xxiii. 32, xxxvi. 4. with סָחָה Ps. xlv. 19, lxxix. 4. ^t סָחָה part. occurs 14 times in Prov. Ps. i. 1, and Is. xxix. 20. סָחָה (the verb), Pr. ix. 12. סָחָה Hos. vi. 5. סָחָה Is. xxxviii. 22. סָחָה Ps. cxix. 51, Pr. iii. 34, xiv. 9, xix. 28. ^u סָחָה Job xvii. 2, 1 Kgs. xviii. 27.

^v סָחָה with סָחָה of the pers. Num. xxii. 29, of Balaam's ass; 1 Sam. xxxi. 4, Jer. xxxviii. 19, 1 Chr. x. 4, of apprehended insult from an enemy.

^w סָחָה Gen. xix. 14, xxi. 9. insult in act, 1b. xxxix. 14, 17, revived from Genesis, Ez. xxiii. 32, elsewhere סָחָה. ^x The exact meaning of סָחָה (Ex. xxxii. 25) is uncertain. The E. V. "shame" follows most of the Heb. Intt., yet with an improbable etymol. "Whisper" seems the most probable meaning of Job iv. 12, xxvi. 14, from which that of "ill-report" is possible. The Arabic gives nothing nearer than "hurried in speech."

^y Is. xiii. xiv. 1-23, xl. sqq. ^z Is. xxxix. 6, 7. ^a Mic. iii. 12. ^b Ib. iv. 10.

^c Jer. i. 14-16. ^d 1b. xxv. 3. see also v. 15-17, vi. 1. 22-25, x. 22. Also in the collection of all his prophecies from the time of Josiah, which God bade him make in the 4th year of Jehoiakim, Jer. xxxvi. 2. 29, he provides them also with a saying against idolatry (in Chaldee) for their use in their captivity in Chaldea. x. 11.

^e Rawl. 5 Emp. iii. 484. ^f Jer. xlvii. 8, 9. ^g Ib. xxv. 19-24.

of the Philistines and Ashkelon and Azzah and Ekron and the remnant of Ashdod; Edom and Moab and the children of Ammon; and all the kings of Tyrus, and all the kings of Zidon and the kings of the isle beyond the sea [probably Caphtor^h, or Crete, or Cyprus] Dedan and Tema and Buz, and those whose hair is shorn [Arabiansⁱ] and all the kings of Arabia and all the kings of the mingled people that dwell in the desert, and all the kings of Zimri [^kdescendants of Abraham and Keturah.] It was a mighty gathering. All the kings of Elam, all the kings of the Medes, all the kings of the North far and near, all was hostile to Babylon; for all were to drink of the cup beforehand, at the hands of the king of Babylon, and then the king of Sheshach [Babylon] was to drink after them. Necho was one of the most enterprising monarchs^l. Nabopolassar had shewn no signs of enterprise. Nebuchadnezzar, the first and last conqueror of the Babylonian empire, though the alliance with Media and his father's empire had been cemented by his marriage, had, as far as we know, remained inactive during 20 years of his father's life^m. He was as yet untried. So little did he himself feel secure as to his inheritance of the throne, even after his success at the head of his father's army, that his rapid march across the desert, with light troops, to secure it, and its preservation for him by the chief priest, are recorded in a very concise historyⁿ. Neither Egypt nor Jehoiakim foresaw the issue. Defeat taught neither. Two voices only gave, in God's name, one unheeded warning. Pharaoh Hophra, the Apries of Herodotus, succeeded Pharaoh Necho in his self-confidence, his aggressions, his defeat. "I am against thee," God says^o, "Pharaoh, king of Egypt, the great dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is mine own and I have made it for myself." "It is said," relates Herodotus^p, "that Apries believed that there was not a god which could cast him down from his eminence, so firmly did he think that he had established himself in his kingdom."

For a time, Nebuchadnezzar must have been hindered by Eastern wars, since, on Jehoiakim's rebellion and perjury, he sent only bands of the Chaldees, with bands of tributary nations, the Syrians, Moabites, Ammonites, against him^q. But not in his time only, even after the captivity under his son Jehoiachin and his men of might^r, the conviction that Nebuchadnezzar could be resisted, still remained in the time of Zedekiah both in Egypt and Judah. Judah would have continued to hold under Babylonia that same position towards Egypt which it did under Persia, only with subordinate kings instead of governors. Apart from God's general promise of averting evil on repentance, Jeremiah, too, expressly tells Israel, "If thou wilt put away thine abominations out of My sight, thou shalt not remove;" "Then will I cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave to your fathers, for ever and ever." And "in the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim," "The Lord sent me to prophesy against this house and against this city all the words which ye have heard. Therefore now amend your ways and your doings and obey the voice of the Lord your God, and the Lord will repent Him of the evil that He hath pronounced against you."

Still later, to Zedekiah, "The nations that bring their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon and serve him, them will I let remain still in their own land, saith the Lord; and they shall till it and dwell therein." "I have sent unto you all My servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them, saying, Return ye now every man from his evil way and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers." Even on the very verge of the capture of Jerusalem, Jeremiah promised to Zedekiah^s; "If thou wilt go forth to the king of Babylon's princes;—this city shall not be burned with fire." Pharaoh Hophra was still strong enough to raise the siege of Jerusalem, when invested by the Chaldaean army^t. Jeremiah had the king, his princes, his prophets, all the people of the land against him, because he prophesied that Jerusalem should be burned with fire, that those already taken captives should not return, until the whole had been carried away, and the seventy years of captivity were accomplished^u. The warning and the promise of Jeremiah's inaugural vision had its accomplishment. "I have made thee a defenced city, and an iron pillar, and brazen walls, against the king of Judah, against the princes thereof and against the people of the land; and they shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee; for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to deliver thee." Had it been matter of human foresight, how was it, that all nations, all their politicians, all their wise men, all their prophets, all Judah, kings, priests, princes, people, were blinded, (as in Him of Whom Jeremiah was a shadow,) and Jeremiah alone saw? "Vaticinia post eventum" are, in one sense, easy; viz. to imagine, after an event has taken place, that one could have foreseen it. And yet who, after the retreat to Corunna, could have foreseen the victories of the Peninsular war? Or, when that tide of 647,000 men^v was rolling on towards Russia, who could imagine that only a small fraction of those hosts should return, that they should capture Moscow, but find it a tomb; and hunger and cold, reaching at last to 36 degrees below Zero, should destroy more than the sword? "What was the principal adversary of this tremendous power? By whom was it checked and resisted and put down? By none and by nothing but the direct and manifest interposition of God."

The distinctness and perseverance of the prophecy are the more remarkable, because the whole of the greatness of the Chaldaean empire was that of one man. Assyria, in this one case, overreached itself in its policy of transporting conquered populations. It had, probably to check the rebellions of Babylon, settled there a wild horde, which it hoped would neither assimilate with its people, nor itself rebel. Isaiah relates the fact in simple words: "Behold the land of the Chaldeans; this people was not; the Assyrian founded it for them that dwelt in the wilderness. This does not seem to me necessarily to imply, that the wild people, for whom Assyria founded it, were Chaldeans^w or Kurds, whom the king of Assyria had brought from their Northern dwellings in the Carduchæan mountains^x near Armenia, where Sennacherib con-

^h Jer. xlvii. 4.

ⁱ Herod. iii. 8.

^k Gen. xxv. 2. 1 Chr. i. 32. (יִצְחָק לְיִצְחָק)

^l As shewn in his attempt to make a canal across the isthmus of Suez (Herod. ii. 158.) and in the circumnavigation of Africa. Ib. iv. 42.

^m The battle of Carchemish was in the 4th of Jehoiakim. Jer. xlvii. 1. 2.

ⁿ Berosus in Joseph. c. Ap. i. 19. Opp. ii. 450. ^o Ezek. xxix. 3. ^p Herod. ii. 169.

^q 2 Kgs. xxiv. 2. ^r Ib. 14-16. ^s Jer. iv. 1. ^t Ib. vii. 7, add xvii.

25, 26. xxiii. 2-5. ^u Ib. xxvi. 1. ^v xxvi. 12, add ib. 2, 3.

^w xxvii. 11. ^x xxxv. 15. ^y xxxviii. 17. ^z Jer. xxxvii. 5.

^{aa} xxv. 11, 12, xxix. 10. ^{ab} Jer. i. 18, 19, renewed xv. 20.

^{ac} "Imperial muster rolls in Chambray Vol. i. App. No. 2." Alison Hist. of Europe x. 629.

^d Dr. Arnold lect. on Hist. ii. 139.

^e Is. xxiii. 13.

^f Jon. unites Asshur with the preceding אֲשׁוּר לֹא הָיָה וְהָיָה and so Syr. and Oxf. Arab. S. Jer. divides as the E. V., though with an opposite sense. "Talis populus non fuit." The E. V. is from Kim. The rendering, "This people was not Asshur," i. e. no longer Asshur, or not like Asshur, is very obscure; and יִי is every where "grounded it, that it might be," (Comp. Ps. civ. 8, Hab. i. 12, and the common use of יִי "founded a city, building, temple,") not that it should cease to be.

^g With this the only objection to the simple rendering falls away, that Jeremiah speaks of the Chaldees, as an ancient nation. Jer. v. 15.

^h Xen. Cyrop. iii. 2. 7 and 12. Anab. iv. 3. 4. v. 5. 9. vii. 8. 14.

quered. Isaiah simply uses the name, the land of the Chaldeans, as does Jeremiah¹ after him, as the name of Babylonia; the word Babylonia, had it existed, might have been substituted for it. Of this, he says, that it was not, i. e. was of no account², but that Assur founded it for wild tribes, whom he placed there. Whence he brought those tribes, Isaiah does not say. Æschylus (although indeed in later times) as well as Isaiah and Jeremiah, speak of the population of Babylon, as mingled of various nations; and the language is too large to be confined simply to its merchant-settlers. In Æschylus³, "the all-mingled crowd," which "it sends out in long array," are its military contingents. It is its whole population, of which Isaiah and Jeremiah say, it will flee, each to his own land. ⁴*It [Babylon] shall be as a chased roe, and as a sheep which no man gathereth; they shall, every man, turn to his own people, and flee every man to his own land. For fear of the oppressing sword they shall turn every one to his people: ⁵And they shall flee, every one to his own land.*

Thus Babylonia received that solid accession of strength which ultimately made it a powerful people, sixty years before the beginning of the reign of Josiah; its ancient and new elements would take some time to blend: they did not assume importance until the capture of Nineveh; nor had Judah any reason to dread any thing from them, until itself rebelled, early in the reign of Jehoiakim. But 18 years before the death of Josiah, while Judah was a trusted and faithful tributary kingdom, Jeremiah foretold that evil should come upon them from the North, i. e. as he himself explains it, from the Chaldees⁶. Even then if Habakkuk were brought down to be a contemporary of Jeremiah, still in the 13th year of Josiah, there was nothing to fear. Judah was not in the condition of an outlying country, which Babylonian ambition might desire to reduce into dependence on itself. It was already part of the Babylonian empire, having passed into it, in the partition with Assyria, and had no more to fear from it, than any of the conquered nations of Europe have now from those who have annexed them, unless they rebel. God alone knew the new ambition of the kings of the smitten and subdued Egypt, their momentary success, Josiah's death, Judah's relapse into the old temptation of trusting in Egypt—all, conditions of the fulfilment of Habakkuk's and Jeremiah's prophecies. Edom, Moab, Ammon, Tyre, Zidon, sent ambassadors to Zedekiah, to concert measures of resistance against Nebuchadnezzar⁷; they were encouraged by their ⁸*diviners, dreamers, enchanters, sorcerers, which spake to them, ye shall not serve the king of Babylon.* One alone told them that resistance would but bring upon them destruction, that submission was their only safety; there was prophecy against prophecy⁹, among these nations, in Jerusalem, in Babylon¹⁰; the recent knowledge of the political aspect of Babylon deterred not the false prophets there; all, with one voice, declared the breaking the yoke of the king of Babylon: Jeremiah only saw, that they were framing for themselves ¹¹*yokes of iron.* Had Jehoiakim or Zedekiah, their nobles, and their people possessed that human foresight which that pseudo-critical school holds to be so easy, Judah had never gone into captivity to Babylon. But He Who fashioneth the heart of man knoweth alone the issue of the working of those hearts, which He over-rules.

From the necessity of its case, the pseudo-critical school lowers down the words, in which Habakkuk declares the marvellousness of the event which he foretells, and the unbelief of his people. "Look well," he bids them, "marvel ye, marvel on; for I will work a work in your days which ye will not believe, when it shall be told you." It is "something which had not hitherto been, something hitherto unknown," says Stahelin¹². Yet things hitherto unknown, are not therefore incredible. "It is clear from the contents," says Bleek¹³, "that the Chaldees had at that time already extended to the West their expeditions of conquest and destruction, and on the other side, that this had only lately begun and that they were not yet come to Judah and Jerusalem, so that here they were hitherto little known." "The appearance of the Chaldees as world-conquerors was, in Judah, then a quite new phenomenon," says Ewald¹⁴. "The description of the Chaldees altogether is of such sort, that they appear as a people still little known to the Jews," says Knobel¹⁵. "That which is incredible for the people consists therein, that God employs just the Chaldees, such as they are described in what follows, for the unexpected chastisement of Israel," says even Umbreit¹⁶.

What was there incredible, that, when the king of Jerusalem had revolted from Babylon, and had sided with Egypt, its chief enemy, the Chaldeans, should come against it? As soon might it be said to be incredible that France should invade Prussia, when its hundred thousands were on their march towards the Rhine. During the reign of Manasseh it was incredible enough, that any peril should impend from Babylon; for Babylon was still subordinate to Assyria: in the early years of Josiah it was still incredible, for his thirty-one years were years of peace, until Pharaoh Necho disputed the cis-Euphratensian countries with Babylon. When the then East and West came to Carchemish, to decide whether the empire should be with the East or with the West, nothing was beyond human foresight but the result. Expectation lately hung suspended, perplexed between the forces of Europe. None, the most sagacious, could predict for a single day. Men might surmise; God only could predict. For three and twenty years Jeremiah foretold, that the evil would come from the North, not from the South. The powers were well-balanced. Take Habakkuk's prophecy as a whole—not that the Chaldeans should invade Judæa, (which in Jehoiakim's time was already certain) but that Egypt should be a vain help, and that the Chaldeans should mesh its people like the fishes of the sea, yet they should still have to disgorge them, because God's judgement would come upon them also. This too were incredible. Incredible it was to the kings, the wise, the politicians, the political prophets of Judæa, that Jerusalem itself should be taken. Incredible it was, and there was much human reason for the incredulity. Egypt and Assyria had been matched during centuries. Until the Sargo-

¹ Jer. xxiv. 5, l. 8. 25, li. 4; and, united with the name Babylon, xxv. 12, l. 1. 45, Ezek. xii. 13, as Isaiah does Chasdim alone, xlviii. 14, 20.

² Coll. by ³ Deut. xxxii. 21, ⁴ Ps. xxii. 7. See the like in the Classics in Perizon. Orig. Bab. c. vi. p. 70. sqq. and from him in Vittr.

⁵ Æsch. Pers. 52, 53, 54. ⁶ Is. xiii. 14. ⁷ Jer. l. 16.

⁸ There ought to be no question as to the identity of the invasion from the north, Jer. i. 15, vi. 22, x. 22, and Jeremiah's own summary of his prophecies from the 13th. of Josiah, xxv. 3-9 when he names Nebuchadnezzar; only then there would be definite prediction. Hence the mare's nest as to the dread of the Scythians, who marched down the sea coast and returned, being bought off by Psammetichus, doing no harm to Judah by this passing expedition.

⁹ Jer. xxvii. 3. ¹⁰ Ib. 9. ¹¹ Jer. v. 12-14. xiv. 14-16. xxiii. 16, 17, 21, 25-27, 30 sqq. xxvii. 14, 15-18, xxviii.

¹² xxviii. 13, 14. ¹³ Jer. xxix. 8, 9, 15, 21, 24, sqq.

¹⁴ Einl. p. 218.

¹⁵ Einl. ins. A. T. pp. 545, 546.

¹⁶ Die Proph. ii. 29. see also Delitzsch's quotation from him ab. p. 400.

¹⁷ Die Proph. u. Hebr. ii. 292. Dr. Davidson's sentences are chiefly gleaned from him.

¹⁸ Kl. Proph. p. 286.

nides, Egypt had, during centuries, the unbroken advantage. But the Sargonides had passed away. Yet Chaldæa had not, alone, prevailed against Assyria. Why should the yet untried Babylonian be so certain of success, when the whole West of the Euphrates was banded together against him, and fought within their own ground? The kings of Elam and the kings of the Medes^a were now, as under Cyrus, enemies of Babylon. Babylon had enemies before and behind: But God had raised up Nebuchadnezzar to be the hammer of the whole earth^a, and had given those cis-Euphratensian lands which leagued against him into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, My servant, God says^b, and all nations shall serve him and his son and his son's son, until the very time of his land come; and then many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of him. Whence this combination of almost superhuman but short-lived might, this certainty of wide sway down to the third generation, this certainty of its cessation afterwards? There was no time for decay. Alexander's empire was yet more short-lived, but it was divided among his successors. Alexander had, by his genius, founded his own empire, which the able generals, whom he had trained, divided among themselves. In the Chaldæan empire, we have an enterprising conspirator, who seizes an occasion, but does little besides which is recorded, nothing alone, nothing, besides that first grasp at power, for himself. He appears only as the ally of Media^c: then a son, a world-wide conqueror, with a genius for consolidating the empire which he inherited, forming an impregnable city, which should also be a province, filling his empire with fortresses^d, but leaving none after him to maintain what he had so consolidated. By whom could this be foreknown save by Him, with Whom alone it is, to root out and to pull down and to destroy and to throw down, to build and to plant^e?

It has been common to praise the outside of Habakkuk's prophecy, the purity of his language, the sublimity of his imagery. Certainly it is, humanly speaking, magnificent: his measured cadence is impressive in its simplicity. He too has words and forms, which are peculiar to him among the remains of Hebrew ^f. But his eminence is rather the condensed thought, expressed often in the simplest words; as when, having carried on the tide of victory of the Chaldæan to its height, every thing human subdued before him, all resistance derided, he gathers up his fall and its cause in those eight words, “^gThen sweeps-he-by, wind, and-passes, and-is-guilty; this his-strength (is) his-god.” Yet more striking is the religious greatness, in which he sums up the meaning of all this oppressiveness of man. “^h*Thou, Lord, hast placed him for judgement, and, O Rock, hast founded him to correct.*” Or, take the picture, prolonged relatively to his conciseness, of the utter helplessness of God’s people, meshed, hooked, dragged in their net; their captors worshipping the instrument of their success, revelling in their triumph, and then the sudden question, “ⁱ*Shall they therefore empty their net?*” He waits to hear the answer from God. Or, again, the antiphonal dirge of the materials of the blood-built city over him ^k. Or the cutting off of every stay, sustenance, hope, promise of God, and, amid this universal crash, what does he? It is not as the heathen, “^l*fearless will the ruins strike him:*” but, “^m*And I,*” as if it were the continuance and consequence of the failure of all human things; “I would exult in the Lord, I would bound for joy in the God of my salvation.” His faith triumphs most, when all, in human sight, is lost.

“Ill which Thou blessest is most good,
And unblest good is ill;
And all is right which seems most wrong,
So it be Thy sweet Will.”

17 (the form), ii. סכסכה ii. 18. הערל ii. 16. החפצין, iii. 6. חקר ii. 9. עילאט iii. 14. קצמ ii. 10. סכסכה ii. 4. נה ii. 5. חבין iii, 4. ינו iii, 2. חטול ii. 19. כערס ii: 15, חרד ii. 8, כפיש ii. 11. חססח ii. 17 (the form), ii. סכסכה ii. 18. הערל ii. 16. החפצין, iii. 6. חקר ii. 9. עילאט iii. 14. קצמ ii. 10. סכסכה ii. 4. נה ii. 5. חבין iii, 4. ינו iii, 2. חטול ii. 19. כערס ii: 15, חרד ii. 8, כפיש ii. 11. חססח ii. 17. They will recur for notice in the Comm. ^a Hab. i. 11. ^b Ib. 12. ^c Ib. 17. ^d ii. 11. ^e Hor. Od. iii. 3. 8. ^f iii. 10.

"IS NOT THIS GREAT BABYLON WHICH I HAVE MADE FOR MYSELF?"

"THE PURPOSE OF THE LORD IS AGAINST BABYLON TO DESTROY IT."

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

CHAPTER I.

1 Unto Habakkuk, complaining of the iniquity of the land, 5 is shewed the fearful vengeance by the Chaldeans. 12 He complaineth that vengeance should be executed by them who are far worse.

CHAP. I., Ver. 1. The burden¹ which Habakkuk the prophet did see. The prophet's name signifies "strong embrace." The word in its intensive form is used both of God's enfolding the soul in His tender supporting love², and of man clinging and holding fast to Divine wisdom³. It fits in with the subject of his prophecy, faith, cleaving fast to God amid the perplexities of things seen. "He who is spiritually Habakkuk, cleaving fast to God with the arms of love, or enfolding Him after the manner of one holily wrestling, until he be blessed, enlightened, and heard by Him, is the seer here." "Let him who would in such wise fervidly embrace God and plead with Him as a friend, praying earnestly for the deliverance and consolation of himself and others, but who sees not as yet, that his prayer is heard, make the same holy plaint, and appeal to the clemency of the Creator." "He is called 'embrace' either because of his love to the Lord; or because he engages in a contest and strife and (so to speak) wrestling with God. For no one with words so bold ventured to challenge God to a discussion of His justice and to say to Him, 'Why, in human affairs and the government of this world is there so great injustice?'"

The prophet. The title, the prophet, is added only to the names of Habakkuk, Haggai, Zechariah. Habakkuk may the rather have added it to his name, because prominently he expostulates with God, like the Psalmists, and does not speak in the name of God to the people. The title asserts that he exercised the pastoral office of the prophets, although not directly in this prophecy⁴.

Did see. "God multiplied visions, as is written⁵, and Himself spake to the prophets, disclosing to them beforehand what should be, and all but exhibiting them to sight, as if already present. But that they determined not to speak from their own, but rather transmit to us the words from God, he persuades us at the outset, naming himself a Prophet, and shewing himself full of the grace belonging thereto."

2. O Lord, how long shall I cry, lit. how long have I cried so intensely to Thee? For it is ever the cry of the creature to Him Who alone can hear or help, its God¹. Of this cry the Prophet expresses that it had already lasted long. In that long past had he cried to God and no change had come. There is an undefined past, and this still continues¹⁰. How long, as Asaph cries, how long hast Thou been, and, it is implied, wilt Thou be wroth against the prayer of Thy people? as we should say, how long shall Thy wrath continue? The words which the Prophet uses relate to domestic strife and wrong between man and man; violence¹¹, iniquity, strife, contention¹², nor are any of them used only of the oppression of a foreign enemy. He

THE burden which Habakkuk the prophet did see.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

2 O LORD, how long shall I cry, and thou wilt not hear! even cry out unto thee of violence, and thou wilt not save!

Lam. 3. 8.

complains too of injustice too strong for the law, and the perversion of justice¹³. And on this the sentence is pronounced. The enemy is to be sent for judgement and *correction*¹⁴. They are then the sins of Judah which the Prophet rehearses before God, in fellow-suffering with the oppressed. God answers that they shall be removed, but by the punishment of the sinners.

Punishment does not come without sin, nor does sin endure without punishment. It is one object of the Old Testament to exhibit the connection between sin and punishment. Other prophets, as commissioned by God, first denounced the sins and then foretold the punishment of the impenitent. Habakkuk appeals to God's justice, as requiring its infliction. On this ground too this opening of the prophecy cannot be a complaint against the Chaldees, because their wrong would be no ground of the punishment which the prophet denounced, but the punishment itself, requiting wrong to man through human wrong.

"The prophet considers the person of the oppressed, enduring the intolerable insolence and contumely of those wonted to do wrong, and very skilfully doth he attest the unutterable loving kindness of God. For he exhibits Him as very forbearing, though wont to hate wickedness. But that He doth not forthwith bring judgement on the offenders, he showed clearly, saying that so great is His silence and long-suffering, that there needeth a strong cry, in that some practise intolerable covetousness against others, and use an unbridled insolence against the weak. For his very complaints of God's endurance of evil attest the immeasurable loving kindness of God."

"You may judge hence of the hatred of evil in the Saints. For they speak of the woes of others as their own. So saith the most wise Paul, who is weak and I am not weak? who is offended, and I burn not? and bade us weep with those who weep, shewing that sympathy and mutual love are especially becoming to the saints."

The Prophet, through sympathy or fellow-suffering with the sufferers, is as one of them. He cries for help, as himself needing it, and being in the misery, in behalf of which he prays. He says, How long shall I cry? standing, as it were, in the place of all, and gathering all their cries into one, and presenting them before God. It is the cry, in one, of all which is wronged to the God of Justice, of all suffering to the God of love. "When shall this scene of sin, and confusion, and wrong be at an end, and the harmony of God's creation be restored? How long shall evil not exist only, but prevail?" It is the cry of the souls under the altar¹⁷, How long, O Lord, Holy and True, dost Thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? It is the voice of the oppressed against the ¹⁰ עֲרֵאֲנָה שָׁמָּה, as Ps. lxxx. 6. עֲרֵאֲנָה שָׁמָּה and Exod. xvi. 28. עֲרֵאֲנָה שָׁמָּה and Ex. x. 3. ¹¹ עֲרֵאֲנָה שָׁמָּה [all.] ¹² עֲרֵאֲנָה שָׁמָּה are united of individual internal violence, Jer. vi. 7. xx. 8. Ez. xlv. 9. Am. iii. 10: even שָׁמָּה Is. lix. 7. and שָׁמָּה alone Ps. xii. 6. Job xxiv. 9. Pr. xxi. 7. xxiv. 2. Hab. ii. 17. כֹּחַ שָׁמָּה Hos. xii. 2. אֶתְּעַלֵּם occur Ps. lv. 11, in Habakkuk's order; inverted in Ps. x. 7. אֶתְּעַלֵּם, שָׁמָּה occur in three clauses in Is. lix. 4. עֲרֵאֲנָה, שָׁמָּה, with כֹּחַ Job xv. 35.

¹³ i. 3. ¹⁴ i. 4. ¹⁵ i. 12. ¹⁶ 2 Cor. xi. 29. ¹⁷ Rev. vi. 10.

¹ On the word burden see on Nah. i. 1. p. 373. n. 1. ² Cant. ii. 6. viii. 3. ³ Prov. iv. 8. ⁴ Dion. ⁵ S. Jer. Abarbanel has the like, "He strengthens himself in pleading his cause with God as to the prosperity of Nebuchadnezzar as if he was joined with God for the cause of his people." Pref. to Ezek. pp. 123, 4, 124. 1. ⁶ See ab. p. 298. ⁷ S. Cyr. ⁸ Hos. xii. 10. ⁹ עֲרֵאֲנָה only occurs in the intensive form, and always of the cry to God, expressed by אֶתְּעַלֵּם, or implied, except perhaps Job xxxv. 9.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

3 Why dost thou shew me iniquity, and cause me to behold grievance? for spoiling and violence are before me: and there are that raise up strife and contention.

oppressor; of the Church against the world; weary of hearing the Lord's Name blasphemed, of seeing wrong set up on high, holiness trampled under foot. It is in its highest sense His Voice, Who, to sanctify our longings for deliverance, said in the days of His Flesh, I cry in the day time, but Thou hearest not.

Even cry out aloud (it is the cry of anguish). "2 We cry the louder, the more we cry from the heart, even without words; for not the moving of the lips, but the love of the heart sounds in the ears of God." Even cry out unto Thee. Whether as an exclamation or a continuance of the question, How long? the prophet gathered in one the prolonged cry of past and future. He had cried; he should cry on, *Violence*³. He speaks as if the one word, jerked out, as it were, wrung forth from his inmost soul, was, Violence, as if he said this one word to the God of Justice and love.

3. Why dost Thou shew me iniquity, and cause me to behold, or rather, Why beholdest Thou⁴ grievance? God seemed to reverse what He had said by Balaam, He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, and hath not seen grievousness in Israel; and in the Psalm, "6 Thou hast seen, for Thou [emph.] beholdest grievousness and wrong, to put it in Thy hand," i. e. Thou layest it up in Thy hand, to cast it back on the head of the evildoer. Now He seemed to behold it and leave it unpunished, which yet Habakkuk says to God below, He could not do; Thou canst not look upon iniquity. What then did this mean? What was the solution?

All forms and shapes of sin are multiplied; oppressive violence⁵, such as covered the earth before the flood, and brought it down; which Nineveh had to put away⁶, and it was spared; iniquity, i. e. what is unequal and contrary to truth, falsehood; grievance lit. burdensome wearisome toil; spoiling, or open robbery; strife and contention, both through perversion of the law and, without it, through endless jarrings of man with man. Sin recoils on the sinner. So what he beholds is not iniquity only, but (in the same word) vanity; grievance; which is a burden both to him who suffers, and yet more to him who inflicts it. For nothing is so burdensome as sin, nothing so empty as wickedness. And while to him who suffers, the suffering is temporal, to him who inflicts it, it is eternal. And yet the prophet and whoso prays against ungodliness, "10 must commiserate him who doth wrong yet more, since they hurt what is most precious, their own soul, and that eternally." All then is

¹ Ps. xxii. 2.

² Dion.

³ אָמַרְתָּ אֵלֶיךָ אֲשֶׁר אֵין אֵלֶיךָ אֲשֶׁר אֵין אֵלֶיךָ Jer. xx. 8. אָמַרְתָּ אֵלֶיךָ אֲשֶׁר אֵין אֵלֶיךָ Job xix. 7. [all of this construction]

⁴ Since רָאָה, occurring 67 times, is certainly no where else used causatively of its common meaning, behold, look, and Habakkuk himself uses it four times besides in that meaning, רָאָה, "look," i. 5. with אֵל, i. 13. with בְּיָדֵי. 13. with acc. pers. i. 13. it is wholly improbable that it should be used here of "causing to look;" the more, since he has not marked the supposed exceptional use by adding the affix, רָאָה. There is no ground to assume a causative of a causative.

⁵ Nu. xxiii. 21.

⁶ Ps. x. 14.

⁷ i. 13.

⁸ חָסַד Gen. vi. 11, 13.

⁹ Jonah iii. 8.

¹⁰ Theoph.

¹¹ The Lx. Syr. S. Jer. so divide; γέγονε κρισις καὶ ὁ κριτὴς λαμβάνει, "et factum est iudicium et contradicito potentior." So Tanchum. The E. V. has followed Jon. Kim. Aben Ezra.

¹² אֵין int. ans., as in Ps. lxxxix. 10; Nah. i. 5.

¹³ Ps. lxxiii. 15, 12, 13.

¹⁴ Eccl. viii. 11.

4 Therefore the law is slacked, and judgement doth never go forth: for the wicked doth compass about the righteous; therefore || wrong judgement proceedeth.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

^b Job 21. 7.
Ps. 94. 3, &c.
Jer. 12. 1.
|| Or, wrested.

full of evil. Whithersoever the Prophet looks, some fresh violence is before him; it confronts him on every side; *strife hath arisen*¹¹, come up, exists where it was not before; *contention lifteth itself*¹² on high, bowing down all besides.

4 Therefore, i. e. Because God seemed not to awake to avenge His own cause, men promised themselves that they might sin on with impunity. Sin produces sin, and wrong, wrong; it spreads like an infectious disease, propagating itself, and each, to whom it reaches, adds to its poison. At last, it reached those also, who should be in God's stead to restrain it. The Divine law itself is silenced, by the power of the wicked, by the sin of the judge, the hopelessness of all. When all around is evil, even those not yet lost are tempted to think; "Why should I be other than they? what evil befalls them? Why stand alone?" Even a Psalmist¹³ speaks as if tempted to speaking even as they. These are the ungodly who prosper in the world; they increase in riches; verily I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocency; and Solomon¹⁴, Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil.

The law is slacked, lit. *is chilled*¹⁵ (as we say, "is paralysed,") through lack of the fire of love. This is what our Lord says, Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. The Divine law, the source of all right, being chilled in men's hearts, judgement, i. e. the sentence of human justice, as conformed to Divine, *doth never go forth*¹⁷. Human sense of right is powerless, when there is not the love of God's law. It seems ever ready to act, but ever falls short, like an arrow from an unstrung bow. The man seems ever about to do right; he judges, sees, aright; all but does it; yet at last always fails. *It goes not forth. The children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth*¹⁸.

*For the wicked doth compass about*¹⁹ the righteous, laying snares for him, as the Jews for our Lord; evil is too strong for a weak will to do right, and overbears it. Pilate sought in many ways, how he might deliver Jesus, yet at last did deliver Him into their hands.

Therefore wrong judgement proceedeth, lit. *judgement proceedeth wrested*²⁰. He had said, "it never goes forth;" never, that is, in its true character; for, when it does go forth, it is distorted. "2 For gifts or favour or fear or hate the guiltless are condemned and the guilty acquitted, as saith the Psalmist, How long will ye judge unjustly and

¹⁵ It is used of Jacob's heart, who could not believe the good tidings, Gen. xlv. 26; the numbing of the comfortless heart of the penitent through grief (Nif.) Ps. xxxviii. 9. The Psalmist, holding on in prayer, denies it of himself. Ps. xxvii. 3. They quote "friget lex."

¹⁶ S. Matt. xxiv. 12.

¹⁷ According to the uniform use of לֹא יֵצֵא, 31 times and נִשְׁכַּח 6 times. This uniform usage cannot be overborne by the analogy of Is. xlii. 3. לֹא יֵצֵא דִּינָא, "He shall bring forth judgement to truth," as Syr. here, "with sincerity," Rashi, "according to truth."

¹⁸ Is. xxxvii. 3.

¹⁹ הִכְרִיחַ, "encompass for hostile end," as נִכְרַח Jud. xv. 43. Ps. xx. 13. "The wicked," רִשְׁעִי is collective, as implied by the word "encompass." "The righteous" is, in contrast, determined, אֲנִי הַיָּשָׁרִים.

²⁰ שֶׁקֶל. The root occurs only in intensive forms; in the verb here only; crooked ways are עֲקָלְקָלִים Jud. v. 6. Ps. cxxv. 5. the Serpent is called עֲקָלָן, Isa. xxvii. 1.

²¹ Ps. lxxxii. 2.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

Is. 29. 14.
Acts 13. 41.

5 ¶ Behold ye among the heathen, and regard, and wonder marvellously; for I will work a work in your days, which ye will not believe, though it be told you.

accept the persons of the ungodly?" "Judgement goes forth perverted in the seat of man's judgement (the soul), when, bribed by the pleasures of sense, it leans to the side of things seen, and the Ungodly one, the rebel angel, besets and overpowers him who has the sense of right; for it is right that things seen should give way to things unseen; ²for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." Why then all this? and how long? Why does God bring it before him and He Who is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity, behold grievance, which His Holy Eyes could not endure? Neither the Unseen Presence of God nor the mission of the Prophet checks. If he rebuke, no one hearkened; if he intercedes for sinners; or against sin, God made as though He would not hear. God answers that, though to man's impatience the time seems long, judgement shall come, and that, suddenly and speedily. While the righteous is enquiring, how long? and the wicked is saying ³, My Lord delayeth His coming, He is come, and seen in the midst of them.

5. The whole tone of the words suddenly changes. The Jews flattered themselves that, being the people of God, He would not fulfil His threats upon them. They had become like the heathen in wickedness; God bids them look out among them for the instrument of His displeasure. It was an aggravation of their punishment, that God, Who had once chosen them, would now choose these whom He had not chosen, to chasten them. So Moses had foretold; ⁴ They have moved Me to jealousy by that which is not God; they have provoked Me to anger with their vanities; and I will move them to jealousy with not-a-people, I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation. There were no tokens of the storm which should sweep them away, yet on the horizon. No forerunners yet. And so He bids them gaze on among the nations, to see whence it should come. They might have expected it from Egypt. It should come whence they did not expect, with a fierceness and terribleness which they imagined not. Regard, look narrowly, weigh well what it portends; and wonder marvellously; lit. be amazed, amazed. The word is doubled ⁵, to express how amazement should follow upon amazement; when the first was passing away, new source of amazement should come; for ⁶ I will work a work in your days, which ye will not believe, though it be told you. So incredible it will be, and so against their wills! He does not say, "ye would not believe if it were told you;" much less, "if it were told you of others;" in which case the chief thought would be left unexpressed. No condition is expressed. It is simply foretold, what was verified by the whole history of their resistance to the Chaldees until the capture of the city; "Ye will not

6 For, lo, ^d I raise up the Chaldeans, ^e that bitter and hasty nation, which shall march through the breadth of the land, to possess the dwellingplaces that are not their's.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

Dent. 28.
49. 50.
Jer. 5. 15.
|| fulfilled,
† Heb. breadths. 2 Chr. 36. 6.

believe, when it shall be told you." So it ever is. Man never believes, that God is in earnest, until His judgements come. So it was before the flood, and to Sodom, and Lot's sons-in-law; so it was to Ahab and Jezebel; so as to this destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans; and that which is shadowed forth, by the Romans. So Jeremiah complained, ⁷ *They have belied the Lord, and said, it is not He; neither shall evil come upon us; neither shall we see sword nor famine, and, ⁸ I am in derision daily; every one mocketh me. For since I spake, I cried out, I cried violence and spoil; because the word of the Lord was made a reproach unto me; and a derision daily; and Isaiah, ⁹ Who hath believed our report? and St. John Baptist speaks as though it were desperate; ¹⁰ O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? and our Lord tells them, ¹¹ Your house is left unto you desolate. And yet they believed not, but delivered Him up to be put to death, lest that should be, which did come, because they put Him to death. ¹² If we let Him thus alone, all men will believe on Him; and the Romans shall come, and take away both our place and nation. St. Paul ¹³, then, applies these words to the Jews in his day, because the destruction of the first temple by Nebuchadnezzar was an image of the destruction of the second (which by Divine appointment, contrary to man's intention, took place on the same day ¹⁴), and the Chaldeans were images of the Romans, that second Babylon, heathen Rome; and both foreshowed the worse destruction by a fiercer enemy, the enemy of souls, the spiritual wasting and desolation which came on the Jew first, and which shall come on all who disobey the Gospel. So it shall be to the end. Even now the Jews believe not, Whose work their own dispersion is; His, Who by them was crucified, but Who hath ¹⁵ all power in heaven and in earth. The Day of Judgement will come like a thief in the night to those who believe not or obey not our Lord's words.*

6. For lo. So God announces a future, in which His Hand shall be greatly visible, whether more or less distant. In His sight it is present. I raise up. God uses the freewill and evil passions of men or devils to His own ends; and so He is said to raise up ¹⁶ those whom He allows to be stirred up against His people, since the events which His Providence permits, favour their designs, and it rests with Him to withhold them. They lift themselves up for some end of covetousness or pride. But there is a higher order of things, in which God orders their actions to fulfil by their iniquities His righteousness. The Chaldeans, that bitter ¹⁷ and hasty ¹⁸ nation. "To its might and warlike boldness almost all the Greeks who have written histories of the barbarians, witness." Which shall march through the breadth of the land,

¹ Theoph. ² 2 Cor. iv. 18. ³ S. Matt. xxiv. 48. ⁴ Deut. xxxii. 21.

⁵ As in Ps. cxviii. 11, חֲבֵרָה וְחֵבֵרָה, Hos. iv. 18, אֲבִירָה וְחֵבֵרָה, Zeph. ii. 1. חֲבֵרָה וְחֵבֵרָה. If suggested by Is. xxix. 9, חֲבֵרָה וְחֵבֵרָה "be perplexed and marvel," Habakkuk changed the phrase, preserving the alliteration.

⁶ The "I" is omitted in the Hebrew; probably for conciseness, as if it were the finite verb. Del. quotes as omissions of the 3rd person, Ps. xxii. 20. lv. 20; of the second 1 Sam. ii. 24. vi. 3. Ps. vii. 10. Hab. ii. 10. Ewald adds "after חֵבֵרָה Gen. xli. 1. Ex. vii. 15. viii. 16. and without it, Ps. xxii. 29, xxxiii. 5. 7. lvi. 7. xvi. 13. Lehrb. p. 516. ed. 7. ⁷ Jer. v. 12. ⁸ Ib. xx. 7, 8. ⁹ Is. liii. 1. ¹⁰ S. Matt. iii. 7.

¹¹ Ib. xxiii. 38. S. Luke xiii. 35.

¹² S. John xi. 48. ¹³ Some of the words as there quoted (from the then received translation, the LXX.) differ; the sense is the same. ¹⁴ Jos. de B. J. x. 1-10.

¹⁵ S. Matt. xxviii. 18.

¹⁶ חֵבֵרָה is so used, 1 Kings xi. 14, 23. Am. vi. 14, and of evil (in the abstract) 2 Sam. xii. 11. Zech. xi. 16, as also חֵבֵרָה Ezek. xxiii. 22. 2 Chr. xxi. 16. and against Babylon, Is. xlii. 17. xli. 2, 25. Jer. l. 9. li. 1, 11.

¹⁷ חֵבֵרָה. In Jud. xviii. 25. 2 Sam. xvii. 8; the less concise חֵבֵרָה is used.

¹⁸ חֵבֵרָה as Is. xxxii. 4.

¹⁹ S. Jer.

Before CHRIST
cir. 626.

Or, from them shall proceed the judgment of these, and the captivity of these.
† Heb. sharp.

7 They are terrible and dreadful: || their judgement and their dignity shall proceed of themselves.

8 Their horses also are swifter than the leopards, and are more † fierce than the evening wolves: and their horsemen shall rather, the earth, lit. "to the breadths of the earth," reaching to its whole length and breadth, all its dimensions¹, as in the description of Gog and Magog, the number of whom is as the sand of the sea; and they went up on the breadth of the earth; unhindered, not pent up, but spreading abroad, where they will, over the whole earth. All before it, is one wide even plain which it overspreads and covers, like a flood, and yet is not spent nor exhausted. To possess the dwelling-places that are not theirs. As God's people had done, so should it be done to them. Spoiling and violence within² attract oppression from without. The overcharged atmosphere casts down the lightning upon them. They had expelled the weak from their dwelling⁴; others shall possess theirs. Yet this scourge too shall pass by, since, although the Chaldean did God's Will, he willed it not, but his own⁵. The words, not theirs, lit. not to him [lo-lo⁶] stand with a mysterious fulness of meaning. The dwelling places not being his by right, shall not remain his, although given to him, while God wills.

• Jer. 5. 6. Zeph. 3. 3.

7. They are terrible⁷ and dreadful. He describes them, first in themselves, then in act. They are terrible, and strike fear through their very being, their known character, before they put it forth in act. Their judgement and their dignity shall proceed of themselves. Judgement had gone forth in God's people wrested⁸; now shall it go forth against them at the mere will of their master, who shall own no other rule or Lord or source of his power. His own will shall be his only law for himself and others. His elevation⁹ too is, in his own thought, from himself. He is self-sufficing; he holds from no other, neither from God nor man. His dignity is self-sustained; his judgement irresponsible, as if there were none¹⁰ higher than he. He has, like all great world-powers, a real dignity and majesty. He infuses awe. The dignity is real but faulty, as being held independently of God. This is a character of Anti-christ¹¹, a lawless insolence, a lifting up of himself.

8. Their horses are swifter [lit. lighter, as we say, "light of foot"] than leopards. The wild beast intended is the panther, the lightest, swiftest, fiercest, most blood-thirsty of spread themselves, and their horsemen shall come from far; † they shall fly as the eagle that hasteth to eat.

9 They shall come all for violence: || † their faces shall sup up as the east wind, and they shall gather the captivity as the sand.

† Heb. the opposition of their faces toward the east.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

Jer. 4. 13.
Or,
the supping up of their faces, &c. or, their faces shall look toward the east.

beasts of prey. "¹² It runs most swiftly and rushes brave and straight. You would say, when you saw it, that it is borne through the air." "¹³ It bounds exceedingly and is very exceedingly light to spring down on whatever it pursues." More fierce¹⁴ than the evening wolves¹⁵, i.e. than they are when fiercest, going forth to prey when urged to rabidness by hunger the whole day through. Such had their own judges been¹⁶, and by such should they be punished. The horse partakes of the fierceness of his rider in trampling down the foe¹⁷. Their horsemen shall spread themselves [lit. widespread are their horsemen], and their horsemen from far shall come. Neither distance of march shall weary them, nor diffusion weaken them. So should Moses' prophecy be again fulfilled. The Lord shall raise against thee a nation from far, from the ends of the earth, as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand; a nation of fierce countenance, which shall not regard the person of the old, nor show favour to the young.

They shall fly as the eagle that hasteth [lit. *hasting*¹⁹] to eat, "²⁰ not to fight, for none shall withstand; but with a course like the eagle's, to whom all fowl are subdued, hasting but to eat." Behold, Jeremiah says of Nebuchadnezzar²¹, he shall fly as an eagle and spread his wings over Moab; and, he repeats the words, ²² over Bozrah. Our pursuers, Jeremiah says²³, are swifter than the eagles of the heavens. Ezekiel likens him to ²⁴ a great eagle with great wings full of feathers; in Daniel's vision he is ²⁵ a lion with eagle's wings.

9. They shall come all for violence. Violence had been the sin of Judah²⁶, and now shall be her punishment. It had been ever before the prophet; all were full of it. Now should violence be the very end, one by one, of all the savage horde poured out upon them; they all, each one of them²⁷, come for violence. Their faces shall sup up²⁸ as the east wind²⁹. "As at the breath of the burning wind all green things dry up, so at sight of these all shall be wasted." They shall sweep over every thing impetuously, like the east wind, scorching, blackening, blasting, swallowing up all, as they pass over, as the East wind, especially in the Holy Land, sucks up all moisture and freshness. And they shall gather the captivity [i. e. the captives] as the sand, countless, as the particles which the ¹ סְחָבִי (plur.) occurs here only. Isaiah has "the fulness of the breadth of Thy land, O Immanuel" viii. 8, and in the same sense v. 9. כָּל סְחָבֵי אֶרֶץ "all the far places of the earth." (also סְחָבֵי) ² Rev. xx. 8. 9. ³ i. 2-4.

⁴ Mic. ii. 9. ⁵ See Isa. x. 6, 7. ⁶ לֹא לוֹ

⁷ עֵלִיִּים occurs here only and Cant. vi. 4. 10. compared with the "bannered host," but the root is common in עָלָה. ⁸ i. 4.

⁹ עָלָה is not in itself, "self-elevation" (as Kim. "that he will exalt himself above the nations") but simply "elevation;" from God, Gen. iv. 7, or His Providence, Ib. xlix. 3, Ps. lxii. 5. It is used of the majesty of God, Job xiii. 23. ¹⁰ Eccl. v. 8.

¹¹ Dan. xi. 36. 2 Thess. ii. 4. ¹² S. Cyr. See more fully in Daniel the Prophet p. 77. n. 3.

¹³ lit. sharp "acer." חָרָר (except of the scales of the crocodile Job. xii. 22) is used elsewhere only of the sharpening of iron against iron (Hif.) Pr. xxvii. 17; (Hof.) of the sword Ezek. xxi. 14, 15, 16. חָרָר as an epithet of the sword (iv times). In Arabic حَرَر, conj. i. ii. iv. x is to "sharpen;" حَارَر, حَارَر "sharp," of a knife, sword; חָרַר met., "sharp of intellect" &c. also of sword. ¹⁴ Comp. Jer. v. 6. ¹⁵ Zeph. iii. 3. ¹⁶ The horse and his rider are regarded as one. Nahum had spoken of the cavalry in the armies against Nineveh (Nah. iii. 2); in Judith they are numbered in the proportion of one tenth to the footmen of Holofernes (Judith ii. 5, 15.). They were the more formidable to Judah which had footmen only. Under Persian rule Babylonia was a great breeding place for horses. Rawl. 5 Empires iii. 317. ¹⁷ Deut. xxviii. 49, 50. חָרַר occurs in both.

¹⁸ קָשׁ as partic. In the finite verb, it had been יָחַשׁ like יָחַשׁ ii. 11, יָחַשׁ Job. ix. 26. Del. ¹⁹ S. Jer.

²⁰ Jer. xlviii. 40. ²¹ Ib. xlix. 22. ²² Lam. iv. 19. ²³ Ezek. xvii. 3.

²⁴ Dan. vii. 4. ²⁵ v. 3. 4. ²⁶ Ps. xxix. 9. Is. i. 23, ix. 16, Jer. vi. 13, viii. 6. 10, xv. 10. כָּלָה Jer. xx. 7.

²⁷ כָּלָה, אֶעָ. The sense "swallowing" is given by Jos. Kimchi, A. E., Rashi, Ob. Sip., Menahem B. Saruk, taking כָּלָה as i. q. כָּלָה, quoting Job xxxix. 24 or Gen. xxiv. 17. Thence A. E. obtains the meaning "before, straight on," quoting Targ. Abulwalid, followed by Tanchum, compares the Arab. كَلَّ, "purposed," and thence derives the meaning "direction." The Arab. كَلَّ (appetitive, Fr.) signifies "approached" not "desired." Gesenius "the collection of their faces," i. e. all of them, involves the use of a كَلَّ. Symm. has κολέσθαι, and so Syr.

²⁸ קָרַח occurs else only in Ezek. xi. 1, and 16 times in c. xl-xlviii of the ideal city and temple as "Eastwards." But except in the far-fetched explanation of Abarb. (mentioned also by Tanchum) that they ravaged, not to settle, but to return home with their booty, "Eastwards" would have no meaning. Yet "forwards" is just as insulated a rendering as that adopted by J. and D. Kim., A. E., Rashi, Ob. Sip., Sal. B. Mel. Arab Tr. (following Jon.) "the East-wind;" קָרַח standing as a met. instead of a simile the קָרַח being regarded as paragogic, as in לֵילָה. So also Symm. ἀνεμος καύσων. S. Jer., "ventus urens."

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

10 And they shall scoff at the kings, and the princes shall be a scorn unto them: they shall deride every strong hold; for they shall heap dust, and take it.

East wind raises, sweeping over the sand-wastes, where it buries whole caravans in one death.

10. And they [lit. he, the word stands emphatically, he, alone against all the kings of the earth] shall scoff at the kings and all their might, taking them away or setting them up at his pleasure and caprice, subduing them as though in sport¹; and princes, (lit. grave and majestic) shall be a scorn unto them [him]². So Nebuchadnezzar bound Jehoiakim³ in fetters to carry him to Babylon; then, on his submission made him for three years a tributary king⁴, then on his rebellion sent bands of Chaldees and other tributaries against him⁵; and then, or when Nebuchadnezzar took Jehoiachin, Jeremiah's prophecy was fulfilled, that he should be buried with the burial of an ass, dragged and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem⁶, his dead body cast out in the day to the heat and in the night to the frost⁷, then Nebuchadnezzar took away Jehoiachin; then Zedekiah. He had also many kings captive with him in Babylon. For on his decease Evil-Merodach brought Jehoiachin out of his prison after 27 years of imprisonment, and set his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon⁸. Daniel says also to Nebuchadnezzar⁹, Thou, O king, art a king of kings: for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power and strength and glory. And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of heaven hath He given into thine hand and hath made thee ruler over all.

They [he] shall deride every strong hold, as, aforetime, when God helped her, Jerusalem laughed the Assyrian to scorn¹⁰; for they [he] shall heap dust, and take it, as Nebuchadnezzar did Tyre, whose very name (Rock) betokened its strength. "11 He shall come to Tyre, and, casting a mound in the sea, shall make an island a peninsula, and, amid the waves of the sea, land shall give an entrance to the city."

The mount, or heaped-up earth, by which the besiegers fought on a level with the besieged, or planted their engines at advantage, was an old and simple form of siege, especially adapted to the great masses of the Eastern armies. It was used in David's time¹²; and by the Assyrians¹³, Egyptians¹⁴, Babylonians¹⁵, and afterwards the Persians¹⁶. Here he describes the rapidity of the siege. To heap up dust and to capture were one.

It needed no great means; things slight as the dust sufficed in the hands of those employed by God. Portion by portion, 17 the King of Babylon took all that pertained to the king of Egypt, from the river of Egypt unto the river Euphrates.

11. Then shall his mind change, or, better, Then he

11 Then shall his mind change, and he shall pass over, and offend, imputing this his power unto his god. Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.
8 Dan. 5. 4.

12 ¶ Art thou not from everlasting, O

^h Ps. 90. 2. & 93. 2. Lam. 5. 19.

sweeps by¹⁸; a wind¹⁹, and passes²⁰, and is guilty; this his strength is his god. The victory was completed, all resistance ended. He sweeps by, as his own Euphrates, when over-filled by the swelling²¹ of all its tributary streams, riseth up over all its banks, and overwhelms all where it passes; as a wind which sweepeth²² over the desert: and passes over all bounds and laws; human and Divine, and is guilty and stands guilty before God, making himself as God, This his power is his god. God had said to Israel, ²³ I will be to thee God. The Chaldean virtually said, this my strength is to me my god. This Nebuchadnezzar's own words speak; ²⁴ Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty? And the statue which was to be worshipped, was, very probably, of himself²⁵, as the intoxication of pride has made other heathen kings or conquerors, Alexander or Darius²⁶. Belshazzar said, ²⁷ I will be like the Most High, and the prince of Tyre said, ²⁸ I am a god, and Anti-Christ shall ²⁹ exalt himself above all that is called god, and, as God, sit in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is god. Such is all pride. It sets itself in the place of God, it ceases to think itself His instrument, and so is a god to itself, as though its eminence and strength were its own, and its wisdom the source of its power³⁰, and its will the measure of its greatness. The words, with a Divine fulness, express severally, that the king shall sweep along, shall pass over all bounds and all hindrances, and shall pass away, shall be guilty and shall bear his guilt³¹: and so they comprise in one his sin and his punishment, his greatness and his fall. And so forty years afterwards Nebuchadnezzar, ³² whom he would, he slew; and whom he would, he kept alive; and whom he would, he set up; and whom he would, he put down; but when his heart was lifted up, and his mind hardened in pride, he was deposed from his kingly throne, and they took his glory from him; 33 there fell a voice from heaven, The kingdom is departed from thee; and Belshazzar, 34 in the same night that he lifted up himself against the Lord of heaven, was slain.

12. The prophet, having summed up the deeds of the enemy of God in this his end, sets forth his questions anew. He had appealed against the evil of the wicked of his people; he had been told of the vengeance by the Chaldeans. ³⁵ But the vengeance is executed by them who are far worse. How then? The answer is, "Wait to the end, and thou shalt see." What remains are the triumphs of faith; the second chapter closes with the entire prostration of the whole world before God, and the whole prophecy with joyous trust in God amid the entire failure of all outward

¹ Comp. Benhadad's drunken commands, 1 Kings xx. 18.

² Comp. Job xli. 29. ³ 2 Chr. xxxvi. 6. Dan. i. 2. ⁴ 2 Kings xxiv. 1. ⁵ Ib. 2.

⁶ Jer. xxii. 19. ⁷ Ib. xxxvi. 30. On the one hand, the expression "slept with his fathers" does not necessarily imply that Jehoiakim died a peaceful death, since it is used of Ahab (1 Kings xxii. 40) and Amaziah (2 Kings xiv. 20, 22.) On the other, Jeremiah's prophecy was equally fulfilled, if the insult to his corpse took place when Nebuchadnezzar took away Jehoiachin three months after his father's death. See Daniel the Prophet pp. 399, 402, 403. Josephus attributes both the death and disgrace to Nebuchadnezzar. Ant. x. 6. 3. ⁸ 2 Kgs. xxv. 27, 28. ⁹ Dan. ii. 37. 38. and iv. 22.

¹⁰ Is. xxxviii. 22.

¹¹ S. Jer.

¹² 2 Sam. xx. 15.

¹³ 2 Kgs. xix. 32.

¹⁴ Ez. xvii. 17.

¹⁵ Jer. vi. 6. xxxii. 24. xxxiii. 4. Ezek. iv. 2, xxi. 22 [27 Heb.], xxvi. 8.

¹⁶ Herod. i. 162.

¹⁷ 2 Kings xxiv. 7.

¹⁸ חֲלִי is used of the overflowing of a river, Is. viii. 8. of a wind chasing, Ib. xxi. 1, of the invisible presence of God passing by, Job ix. 11. or a spirit, Ib. iv. 15. of the swift passing of our days, like ship or eagle, Ib. ix. 26. of idols utterly passing away, Is. ii. 18. of rain past and gone, Cant. ii. 11. It is, together with עָבַר, used of transgressing God's law, Is. xxiv. 5. It is always intrans., except as piercing the temples of man Jud. v. 26. or himself Job xx. 24. ¹⁹ רָחַץ, i. q. רָחַץ, metaphor for simile, as Ps. xi. 1. xxii. 14. (13 Eng.) xc. 4. Job xxiv. 5. Is. li. 12. &c. רָחַץ can hardly be i. q. רָחַץ.

²⁰ עָבַר "pass over" (with חֲלִי, as here,) Is. viii. 8. Nah. i. 8. Hab. iii. 10; "transgress," passim; "pass away," Ps. xxxvii. 6, Job xxxiv. 29, Nah. i. 12.

²¹ Is. viii. 8.

²² Ib. xxi. 1.

²³ Ex. vi. 7.

²⁴ Dan. iv. 30.

²⁵ See Daniel the Prophet p. 443.

²⁶ See ib. p. 446.

²⁷ Is. xiv. 14.

²⁸ Ezek. xxviii. 2. ²⁹ 2 Thess. ii. 4.

³⁰ See Ezek. xxviii. 2-5. ³¹ רָחַץ includes both.

³² Dan. v. 19. 20.

³³ Ib. iv. 31.

³⁴ Ib. v. 23, 30.

³⁵ Heading of Chap. i.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

LORD my God, mine Holy One? we shall not die. O LORD, 'thou hast ordained them for judgement; and, O †mighty God, thou

¹ 2 Kin. 19. 25.
Ps. 17. 13.
Is. 10. 5, 6, 7. Ezek. 30. 25.

† Heb. rock, Deut. 32. 4.

signs of hope. Here, like the Psalmists¹ and Jeremiah², he sets down at the very beginning his entire trust in God, and so, in the name of all who at any time shall be perplexed about the order of God's judgements, asks how it shall be, teaching us that the only safe way of enquiring into God's ways is by setting out with a living conviction that they³ are mercy and truth. And so the address to God is full of awe and confidence and inward love. For "God placeth the oil of mercy in the vessel of trustfulness."

Art not Thou (the word has always an emphasis) Thou, and not whatsoever or whosoever it be that is opposed to Thee, (be it Nebuchadnezzar or Satan) *from everlasting lit. from before*⁴? Go back as far as man can in thought, God was still before; and so, much more before any of His creatures, such as those who rebel against Him. O Lord, it is the Proper Name of God, ⁵ Which is and Which was and Which is to come, I AM, the Unchangeable; my God, i. e., whereas his own might is (he had just said) the heathen's god, the Lord is his; mine Holy One:—one word, denoting that God is his God, sufficeth him not, but he adds (what does not elsewhere occur) mine Holy One, in every way, as hallowing him and hallowed by him: "Who hallowest my soul, Holy in Thine Essence, and Whom as incomparably Holy I worship in holiness." All-Holy in Himself, He becometh the Holy One of him to whom He imparteth Himself, and so, by His own gift, belongeth, as it were, to him. The one word in Hebrew wonderfully fits in with the truth, that God becomes one with man by taking him to Himself. It is full of inward trust too, that he saith, "my God, my Holy One," as S. Paul saith, ⁶ Who loved me, and gave Himself for me, i. e., as S. Augustine explains it, "O Thou God Omnipotent, Who so carest for every one of us, as if Thou caredst for him only; and so for all, as if they were but one." The title, my Holy One, includes his people with himself; for God was his God, primarily because he was one of the people of God; and his office was for and in behalf of his people. It involves then that other title which had been the great support of Isaiah¹⁰, by which he at once comforted his people, and impressed upon them the holiness of their God, the holiness which their relation to their God required, the Holy One of Israel. Thence, since Habakkuk lived, for his people with himself, on this relation to God, as my God, my Holy One, and that God, the Unchangeable; it follows, "We shall not die"¹¹. There hast † established them for correction.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

13^k Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look on || iniquity :

|| Or, grievance.

† Heb.
founded.
Ps. 5. 5.

is no need of any mark of inference, "therefore we shall not die." It is an inference, but it so lay in those titles of God, He Is, My God, My Holy One, that it was a more loving confidence to say directly, we shall not die. The one thought involved the other. God, the Unchangeable, had made Himself their God. It was impossible, then, that He should cast them off or that they should perish. We shall not die, is the lightning thought of faith, which flashes on the soul like all inspirations of God, founded on His truth and word, but borne in, as it were, instinctively without inference on the soul, with the same confidence as the Psalmist says¹², The Lord hath chastened me sore; but He hath not given me over unto death; and Malachi, ¹³ I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed. "Thou createdst us from the beginning; by Thy mercy we are in being hitherto." Thy gifts and calling are without repentance¹⁵. "Did we look to his might; none of us could withstand him. Look we to Thy mercy, Thine alone is it that we live, are not slain by him, nor led to deeds of death." O Lord, again he repeats the Name of God, whereby He had revealed Himself as their God, the Unchangeable; Thou, whose mercies fail not, hast ordained them for judgement, not for vengeance or to make a full end, or for his own ends and pleasure, but to correct Thine own¹⁶ in measure, which he, exceeding, sinned¹⁷.

And O mighty God [lit. Rock]. It is a bold title. My rock is a title much used by David¹⁸, perhaps suggested by the fastnesses amid which he passed his hunted life, to express, that not in them but in His God was his safety. Habakkuk purposely widens it. He appeals to God, not only as Israel's might and upholder, but as the sole Source of all strength, the Supporter of all which is upheld¹⁹, and so, for the time, of the Chaldaean too. Hence he continues the simple image: Thou hast founded him. "Thou hast made him to stand firm as the foundation of a building;" to reprove or set before those who have sinned against Thee, what they had done. Since then God was the Rock, Who had founded them, from Him Alone had they strength; when He should withdraw it, they must fall. How then did they yet abide, who abused the power given them and counted it their own? And this the more, since

13. Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil. The prophet repeats his complaint, (as troubling thoughts are wont to come back, after they have been repelled,) in order to mentions it, to reject it; Rashi quotes it as the writing of the prophet. Several of the 18 Tikkune Sopherim are childish; no one of value. The Chaldee follows the suggestion, paraphrasing, "Thy word abideth for ever;" the LXX, not. Ewald corrects as the Chaldee. The Tikk. Soph. are given in Buxtorf Lex. Chald. pp. 2631, sqq. A glance will shew that they are no real corrections.

¹² Ps. cxviii. 18. ¹³ Mal. iii. 6. ¹⁴ S. Jer. ¹⁵ Rom. xi. 29. ¹⁶ Jer. x. 24. xxx. 11. ¹⁷ See Isa. x. 5. xlvii. 6. Zech. i. 15. ¹⁸ Ps. xlviii. 2. 46. xix. 15. xxviii. 1. lxii. 6. 7. cxlvii. 1. else only in Deut. xxxii. 1. Ps. xcii. 15. anon. Else Moses speaks in his Song of "the Rock" "our Rock," "their Rock," "Rock of his salvation," "the Rock who begat thee," [Deut. xxxii. 4, 31, 30, 15, 18.] and in reference to Deut. Ps. lxxviii. 35, and Hannah, "there is no rock like our God," 1 Sam. ii. 2, and David asks, "Who is a rock beside Thee?" 2 Sam. xxii. 31, and calls Him "the Rock of Israel," 2 Sam. xxiii. 3, "the Rock of my strength" Ps. lxii. 8, and Ethan says that God entitled David to call Him "Rock of my salvation," Ps. lxxxix. 26, and Asaph calls Him, "the Rock of my heart," Ps. lxxiii. 26. Isaiah in his song entitles God "the Rock of ages," Isa. xvi. 4. also "the Rock of Israel," xxx. 29, "the rock of thy [Israel's] strength," xvii. 10. Else it occurs only in two anonymous Psalms, "the rock of my refuge," Ps. xciv. 22, "of our salvation," xcv. 1.

¹⁹ "Thou Who art the Rock of all ages hast founded him to reprove by him all the nations of the earth." Kim. ²⁰ Kim.

¹ Asaph, Ps. lxxiii. Ethan Ps. lxxvi.

² Jer. xii. 1.

³ Ps. xxv. 10.

⁴ S. Bern. de Annunt. Serm. 3. n. 3.

⁵ See on Micah v. 2.

⁶ Rev. i. 8.

⁷ Dion.

⁸ Gal. ii. 9.

⁹ Conf. iii. 11.

¹⁰ Isaiah uses it in his prophetic answer to Hezekiah (2 Kgs xix. 22. Is. xxxvii. 23,) also in the earlier chapters 12 times and "his holy One" (of Israel) x. 17; in the chapters xl-lxvi, 14 times, and "his holy One" your holy One of or to Israel xlix. 7. xliii. 35. Else it occurs only in Ps. lxxviii. 41 (Asaph's), lxxxix. 19 (Ethan's), lxxi. 22 [Anon., but in Book ii] and Jer. i. 29, ii. 5.

¹¹ The "tikkune sopherim" or so-called "corrections of the scribes" I think, appear to almost any one who examines them, not to imply any correction of the text of Holy Scripture, but as meant to suggest what would have come naturally into the mind of the writer, unless for some reason he had chosen what stands written. Thus here, the obvious contrast to "Thou art of old;" might be, (they would say) "Thou wilt continue to be;" "Thou wilt not die," לא ימות; but since it were unbecoming to speak of death in regard to God, even in denying it, the prophet said לא נמות, "we shall not die." But no thoughtful Jewish critic could ever have believed that Habakkuk could have said to God, Thou wilt not die. It would also, while irreverent to God, have omitted the whole consolation to his people. Of Jewish Commentators, Kim., A. E., Abarb. Tanch., do not think it worth while to allude to the correction; Sal. B. Melech

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

Jer. 12. 1.

¹ wherefore lookest thou upon them that deal treacherously, and holdest thy tongue when the wicked devoureth the man that is more righteous than he?

14 And makest men as the fishes of the sea, as the || creeping things, that have no ruler over them?

answer it more strongly. All sin is hateful in God's sight, and in His Holy Wisdom He cannot endure to look towards iniquity. As man turns away from sickening sights, so God's abhorrence of wrong is pictured by His not being able to look towards it. If He looked towards them, they must perish¹. Light cannot co-exist with darkness, fire with water, heat with cold, deformity with beauty, foulness with sweetness; nor is sin compatible with the Presence of God, except as its Judge and punisher. Thou canst not look. There is an entire contradiction between God and unholiness. And yet, wherefore lookest Thou upon, viewest, as in Thy full sight², yea, as it would seem, with favour³, bestowing on them the goods of this life, honour, glory, children, riches, as the Psalmist saith;⁴ Behold these are the ungodly, who prosper in the world, they increase in riches? Why lookest thou upon them that deal treacherously, holdest Thy tongue, puttest restraint⁵, as it were, upon Thyself and Thine own attribute of Justice, *when the wicked devoureth the man that is more righteous than he?*⁶ In God's sight no man living can be justified; and in one sense Sodom and Gomorrah were less unrighteous than Jerusalem, and ⁷ it shall be more tolerable for them in the day of Judgement, because they sinned against less light; yet the actual sins of the Chaldee were greater than those of Jerusalem, and Satan's evil is greater than that of those who are his prey. To say that Judah was more righteous than the Chaldaean does not imply any righteousness of the Chaldaean, as the saying that ⁸ God ransomed Jacob from the hand of one stronger than he, does not imply any strength remaining to Israel. Then, also, in all the general judgements of God, the righteous too suffer in this world, whence Abraham intercedes for Sodom, if there were but ten righteous in it; lest ⁹ the righteous be destroyed with the wicked. Hence God also spared Nineveh in part as having ¹⁰ more than sixscore thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand, i. e. good from evil. No times were fuller of sin than those before the destruction of Jerusalem, yet the fury of the Assassins fell upon the innocent. And so the words, like the voice of the souls under the Altar¹¹, become the cry of the Church at all times against the oppressing world, and of the blood of the Martyrs from Abel to the end, Lord, how long? And in that the word Righteous¹² signifies both "one righteous man," and the whole class or generation of the righteous, it speaks both of Christ the Head and of all His members in whom (as by Saul) He was persecuted. The wicked also includes all persecutors, both those who slew

15 They ^m take up all of them with the angle, they catch them in their net, and gather them in their || drag: therefore they ^m rejoice and are glad.

16 Therefore ⁿ they sacrifice unto their net, and burn incense unto their drag; ⁿ because by them their portion is fat,

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

Jer. 16. 16.
Amos 4. 2.
|| Or, flue net.

the Lord Christ, and those who brought His servants before judgement-seats, and blasphemed His Name¹³, and caused many to blaspheme, and slew whom they could not compel. And God, all the while, seemeth to look away and to regard not.

14. And makest men as the fishes of the sea, dumb, helpless, in a stormy, restless element, no cry heard, but themselves swept away in shoals, with no power to resist, as the creeping things, whether of the land (as it is mostly used), or the sea¹⁴. Either way it is a contemptuous name for the lowest of either. That have no ruler over them; none to guide, order, protect them, and so a picture of man deprived of the care and providence of God.

15. They take up all of them [lit. he taketh up all of it] the whole race as though it were one, with an angle; they catch them, [lit. he sweepeth it away] in their [his] net. One fisherman is singled out who partly by wiles [as by the bait of an angle], partly by violence, [the net or drag] sweeps away¹⁵ and gathers as his own the whole kind. Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldeans are herein a faint image of Satan, who casts out his baits and his nets in the stormy sea of this life, taking some by individual craft, sweeping others in whole masses, to do evil; and whoso hath no ruler, and will not have Christ to reign over him¹⁶, he allures, hurries, drags away as his prey. "¹⁷ Adam clave to his hook, and he drew him forth out of Paradise with his net; and covered him with his drags, his varied and manifold deceits and guiles. And by one many became sinners, and in Adam we all died, and all saints afterwards were with him alike cast out of Paradise. And because he deceived the first man, he ceaseth not daily to slay the whole human race."

16. Therefore they sacrifice unto their net, and burn incense unto their drag. [lit. he sacrifices unto his &c.] Whatever a man trusts in, is his god. If a man relies to compass his end by his strength, or his wisdom, or his forethought, or his wealth, his armies or navies, these his forces are his god. So the Assyrian said, ¹⁸ By the strength of my hand I did it; and by my wisdom, for I am prudent; and God answered, Shall the axe boast itself against him that heweth therewith? The coarse forms of idolatry only embody outwardly the deep inward idolatry of the corrupt human mind. The idol is ¹⁹ set up in the heart first. There have not indeed been wanting savage nations, who in very deed worshipped their arms²⁰; those of old worshipped spears as immortal gods²¹; Even now we are told of some North American Indians "²² who designate their bow and arrow as the only bene-

¹ Ps. civ. 32.

² The preposition ל is left out in this place, as if to make the contrast stronger. God cannot endure to look towards (ל) iniquity, and yet He does not only this, but beholdeth it, contemplateth it, and still is silent.

³ So the word means mostly; "regard favourably;" except Ps. x. 14. where it is said that God beheld ungodliness to avenge it.

⁴ וַיִּבְרָא translated "keep silent" Ps. xxxv. 22. l. 21. implies an acting on a person's self. ⁵ Ps. cxliii. 2. ⁶ S. Matt. x. 15. xi. 21. S. Mark vi. 11. S. Luke x. 12.

⁷ Jer. xxxi. 11. Del. ⁸ Gen. xviii. 23. ⁹ Jon. iv. 11. ¹⁰ Rev. vi. 10.

¹¹ Singular in Hebrew, yet so that it may be used of many. ¹² S. Jas. ii. 6, 7.

¹³ Ps. civ. 25.

¹⁴ The word רַב, garar, expresses by its sound the grating noise of the pebbles on the sea-shore. The word is singular, although it might be a collective.

¹⁵ S. Luke xix. 4. ¹⁶ S. Jer. ¹⁷ Is. x. 13. 15. ¹⁸ Ezek. xiv. 4.

¹⁹ The Scythians. Herod. iv. 62. Lucian Jov. Tragœd. 42. p. 275. Arnob. vi. § 11, Mela ii. 1. Clem. Al. Protr. iv. p. 40, ed. Pott., Amm. Marc. xxvi. 2. The Quadi did the same. Id. xvii. 12. fin. The chance discovery of one of these sacred swords of the Scythian kings made Attila think himself "made prince of the whole world." Jordanes de Get. orig. c. 35, from Priscus, a contemporary. ²¹ Justin L. 43. c. 3.

²² Waitz die Indianer Nord-Americas 1867 p. 127. quoted by Ewald.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

and their meat || † plenteous.
17 Shall they therefore empty their net,
and not spare continually to slay the nations?

|| Or, dainty.
† Heb. fat.

CHAPTER II.

1 Unto Habakkuk, waiting for an answer, is shewed that he must wait by faith. 5 The judgement upon the Chaldean for unsatiableness, 9 for covetousness, 12 for cruelty, 15 for drunkenness, 18 and for idolatry.

ficient deities whom they know." Among the civilised Romans, the worship of the eagles, their standards¹, to whom they did sacrifice², was no other nor better. The inward idolatry is only a more subtle form of the same sin, the evil spirit which shapes itself in the outward shew. Here the idolatry of self is meant, which did not join creatures with God as objects of worship; but, denying Him in practice or misbelief, became a god to itself³. So Habakkuk had said, this his strength is his god. His idol was himself.

Because by them their portion is fat, and their meat plenteous (lit. as in E. M., well-fed). All the choicest things of the world stood at his command, as Nebuchadnezzar boasted⁴, and all the kingdoms of the world and their glory, all the knowledge and wisdom and learning of the world, and the whole world itself, were Satan's lawful prey⁵. "Nebuchadnezzar, as by a hook and meshes and line, swept into his own land both Israel himself and other nations, encompassing them. Satan, as it were, by one line and net, that of sin, enclosed all, and Israel especially, on account of his impiety to Christ. His food was choice. For Israel was chosen above the rest, as from a holy root, that of the fathers, and having the law as a schoolmaster, and being called to the knowledge of the one true God. Yet he, having this glory and grace, was taken with the rest. They became his prey by error; but Israel, knowing Him Who is by nature God, slaying ungodlily Him Who was by nature His Begotten Son and Who came as Man, were taken in his nets."

17. Shall they therefore empty their net, and not spare continually to slay the nations? The prophet, like Isaiah⁷, stands at the very last point, before the fury and desire of the enemy was fulfilled. Men, like fish, were gathered together for a prey; he who had taken them was rejoicing and exulting beforehand in his booty; his portion and meat were the choice of the earth; the prophet looks on, as it were, and beholds the net full; there is but one step more; "Shall he empty it? Shall he then devour those whom he has caught? and so cast his emptied net again unceasingly, pitilessly, to slay the nations?" This question he answers in the next chapter; A Deliverer will come.

II. 1. I will stand [I would stand now], as a servant awaiting his master, upon my watch [or keep⁸], and set me [plant myself firmly] upon the tower [lit. fenced place, but

¹ See Tertull. Apol. c. 16 and note e. f. g. p. 33. Oxf. Tr. ² Joseph. de Bell. Jud. vi. 6. 1.

³ A heathen poet, wishing to express this irreverence, puts into a warrior's mouth this prayer: "Now may my right hand, to me god, and the weapon which I brandish, be my helper!" Virg. Æn. x. 773. add Stat. x. 545. iii. 645, sq. So the Times said at the beginning of the late war, "The French almost worshipped the mitrailleuse as a goddess." They idolised, it would say, their invention, as if it could do what God alone could. ⁴ Dan. iv. 30. comp. 22. ⁵ S. Luke iv. 6. S. John xii. 31. Isa. xlix. 24.

⁶ S. Cyr. ⁷ Isa. xviii. 4, 5. ⁸ Ib. xxi. 8. ⁹ In the same sense Jer. li. 12. ¹⁰ Hence נֹחַם "watchman," the "prophet" Isa. lii. 8. Jer. vi. 17. Ezek. iii. 17. xxxiii. 7. Kal; of the prophets, Pih. Mic. vii. 4; of looking up

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

I WILL^a stand upon my watch, and set me upon the † tower, ^b and will watch to see what he will say || unto me, and what I shall answer || † when I am reproved.

^a Is. 21. 8, 11.
^b Heb. fenced place.
^c Is. 85. 8.
^d Or, in me.
^e Or, when I am argued with.

2 And the Lord answered me, and said, Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it.

^f Heb. upon my reproof, or, arguing.

3 For ^d the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and also one straitened and narrowly hemmed in], and will watch (it is a title of the prophets⁹, as espying, by God's enabling, things beyond human ken); I will espy out, to see a long way off, to see with the inward eye, what He will say unto me [lit. ¹⁰in me]; first revealing Himself in the prophets "within to the inner man;" then, through them. And what I shall answer when I am reproved¹¹, or, upon my complaint, lit. upon my reproof or arguing; which might mean, either that others argued against him, or that he had argued, pleaded in the name of others, and now listened to hear what God would answer in him¹², and so he, as taught by God, should answer to his own plea. But he had so pleaded with God, repeatedly, Why is this? He has given no hint, that any complained of or reproved him.

^e Isai. 8. 1 & 30. 8.
^f Dan. 10. 14. & 11. 27, 35.

"¹³ By an image from those who, in war and siege, have the ward of the wall distributed to them, he says, I will stand upon my watch." "¹⁴ It was the wont of the Saints, when they wished to learn the things of God, and to receive the knowledge of things to come through His voice in their mind and heart, to raise it on high above distractions and anxieties and all worldly care, holding and keeping it unoccupied and peaceful, rising as to an eminence to look around and contemplate what the God of all knowledge should make clear to them. For He hateth the earth-bound and abject mind, and seeks hearts which can soar aloft, raised above earthly things and temporal desires." The prophet takes his stand, apart from men and the thoughts and cares of this world, on his lonely watch, as Moses on the rock, keeping himself and kept by God, and planted firm, so that nothing should move him, fenced around though straitened in¹⁵, as in a besieged camp committed to his ward, looking out from his lofty place what answer God would give as to times long distant, and what answer he should give first to himself, and to those to whom his office lay, God's people.

2. The answer is, that it is indeed for a long time yet. Write the vision, that it may remain for those who come after and not be forgotten, and make it plain¹⁵ upon the tables, whereon he was wont to write¹⁶; and that, in large lasting characters, that he may run that readeth it, that it may be plain to any, however occupied or in haste. So Isaiah too was bidden to write the four words, haste-prey-speed-spoil.

3. For the vision is yet for an [the] appointed time. ¹⁷ Not to God, Ps. v. 4; with נֹחַ Mic. vii. 7. ¹⁰ S. Jer. ¹¹ The Rabb. Kim. A. E. Rashi, Tanch. Sal. B. Mel., Abarb. take it as the E. V., probably thinking the other to be too bold an expression towards God. ¹² See Num. xii. 6. and on Zech. i. 19.

¹³ Theod¹⁴. ¹⁴ Symm. Theod. Aq. agree in this sense of narrowness. ¹⁵ Etymologically, נָחַם means "engrave," lit. dig: like so many other words, which come to mean "write," as נָחַם with נָחַם Ges.; נָחַם נָחַם, engraben, graben, engrave, [Id.] but it only occurs as "make clear, explain," De. xxvii. 8. So Kim. &c.

¹⁶ מִן is a table or tablet, on which Isaiah too was bidden to write what was to last, though in parallelism with a "book." Isa. xxx. 8. "the tablets which boys write on." A. E. comp. Ezek. xvii. 14. Jer. xxx. 2.

¹⁷ Ewald ad loc.; but therewith the theory of a mere human foresight is abandoned.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

* Heb. 10. 37.

not lie: though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry.

for the present, but to develop itself in the course of time, down to a season which God only knows; as it is subsequently repeated, ¹for the end is yet for the appointed time; ²for it is for the appointed time of the end; and is explained, ³for the vision is yet for the days; ⁴for it is for many days; ⁵the house of Israel say, The vision that he seeth, is for many days and he prophesieth of the times far off; yet it should haste towards the end, towards its fulfilment, so that, if it is not at once fulfilled, it should be surely waited for. ⁶It shall certainly be; not in vain hath it been shewn, but as certainly to be. For whatever hath been shewn to come and to be, will come and be."

But at the end it shall speak⁷ [or it breatheth, hasteth to the end], not simply "to its own fulfilment," but to that time of the end which should close the period assigned to it, during which it should continually be putting itself forth, it should come true in part or in shadow, gleams of it should here and there part the clouds, which, until the end, should surround and envelope it. Being God's truth, he speaks of it as an animate living thing, not a dead letter, but running, lasting on its course, and accomplishing on its way that for which it was sent. The will and purpose of God hasteth on, though to man it seemeth to tarry; it can neither be hurried on, nor doth it linger; before the appointed time it cometh not; yet it hasteth towards it, and will not be behindhand when the time comes. It does not lie, either by failing to come, or failing, when come, of any jot or tittle. Though it tarry or linger⁸, continually appearing, giving signs of itself, yet continually delaying its coming, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not be behindhand⁹, when the time comes. ¹⁰He cometh quickly also, as He saith; because ¹¹though the delay of His Coming and of the fulfilment of the vision seem long, yet, in comparison with eternity, it is very short. In His First Coming, He taught why God permitteth these things; in the Second, He shall teach by experience, how good it is for the good to bear the persecution of the evil; whence S. Peter also has to say, ¹²The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some men count slackness." The words seem to belong, in the first instance, to the vision itself; but the vision had no other existence or fulfilment than in Him Who was the Object of it, and Who, in it, was foreshadowed to the mind. The coming of the vision was no other than His Coming. The waiting, to which he exhorts, expresses the religious act, so often spoken of, ¹³of waiting for God, or His counsel, or His promised time. The sense then is wholly the same, when S. Paul uses the words of the Coming of our Lord

4 Behold, his soul which is lifted up is not upright in him: but the just shall live by his faith. Before CHRIST cir. 626. * John 3. 36. Rom. 1. 17. Gal. 3. 11. Heb. 10. 38.

Himself, ¹⁴Yet a little while, and He that shall come, will come and will not tarry. S. Paul, as well as Habakkuk, is speaking of our Lord's Second Coming; S. Paul, of His Coming in Person, Habakkuk, of the effects of that Coming¹⁵; but both alike of the redressing of all the evil and wrong in the world's history, and the reward of the faithful oppressed. At His First Coming He said, ¹⁶Now is the judgement of this world; now shall the prince of this world be cast out. He came to ¹⁷put down the mighty from their seat, and to exalt the humble and meek; but much more in the Second, when ¹⁸He shall come to judge the world with righteousness and the people with His truth, and to ¹⁹reward every man according to his works. At all times He seemeth continually to linger, to give signs of His Coming, yet He cometh not; when the appointed season shall come, He shall be found not to be "later" than His word. Yea, all time shall shrink up into a little moment in the presence of a never-ending ever-present eternity.

²⁰Having named no one expressly, he says, wait for him, wait for him although delaying, and halt not in thy hope, but let it be rooted and firm, even if the interval be extended. For the God of all seemeth to suggest to the mind of the Prophet, that He who was foretold would surely come, yet to enjoin on him to wait for Him on account of the interval. He who believeth My word shall possess life, for this is the reward of those who honour God, and a good reward of His benevolence. He who admitteth faith and love to dwell in his heart hath as a requital, un-aging life and forgiveness of sins and sanctification by the Spirit." ²¹He shall live; for ²²God is not the God of the dead but of the living, ²³Whoso liveth and believeth in Me, shall never die."

It will not lie. God vouchsafes to speak of Himself, as we should be ashamed to speak of one whom we love, teaching us that all doubts question His truth. ²⁴God is not a man, that He should lie: hath He said and shall He not do it? ²⁵The strength of Israel shall neither lie nor repent. ²⁶God that cannot lie, promised before the world began. Therefore it follows, wait for Him, as Jacob says, ²⁷I have waited for Thy salvation, O Lord.

4. Behold, his soul which is lifted up [lit. swollen²⁸] is not upright in him. The construction is probably that of a condition expressed absolutely. Lo, swollen is it, not upright is his soul in him. We should say, 'His soul, if it be swollen²⁹, puffed up, is not upright in him.' The source of all sin was and is pride. It is especially the sin of all oppressors, of the Chaldee, of Anti-Christ, and shall be of the Anti-Christ. It is the parent of all heresy, and of all corruption and rejection of the Gospel. It stands therefore as the type of all opposed

¹ Dan. xi. 27. for it is for the appointed time, ib. 35.

² Ib. viii. 19.

³ Ib. x. 1, 14.

⁴ Ib. viii. 20.

⁵ Ezek. xii. 27.

⁶ Theod.

⁷ The E. V.

follows the Rabbins. [Kim. Comm., A. E., Tanch., Rashi, Abarb.] so far in rendering נִשְׁמָע, "speak." Yet in all the cases of both roots נִשְׁמָע, נִשְׁמָע, except Prov. xii. 17, נִשְׁמָע נִשְׁמָע, the root is used not of mere "speaking" but of "breathing out" like ἐμπνέων ἀπειλῆς (Acts xi. 1.) "breathing out threatening." In five cases it occurs in the one idiom, "breatheth out lies," נִשְׁמָע כוֹזֵבִים, Pr. vi. 19, xiv. 5, 25, xix. 5, 9. In other idioms נִשְׁמָע לוֹ Ps. x. 5, xii. 6, it is still used of puffing at "contemptuously." Else the Kal is used of the cool air of the evening Cant. ii. 17. iv. 6, and Hifl of "causing to blow," Ib. iv. 16. Else it is only used (metaph.) of blowing up, kindling, (as we say) stirring up a city to strife Pr. xxix. 8, and blowing up the fire of the wrath of God, Ez. xxi. 36. נִשְׁמָע is used of the deep sigh of agony Jer. iv. 31. and נִשְׁמָעָה Ps. xxvii. 12. "breathing forth violence" stands united with "false witness" as in the Prov. If understood then of speaking, it would be "breathing of the end" (ל) relating to the subject of the speech, as so often) which would be much the same as, breatheth panting towards the end, (like לִשְׁמָע, Eccl. i. 5.)

⁸ נִשְׁמָע (no kal.) seems to be compound of נִשְׁמָע, נִשְׁמָע, why, why? the answer of one procrastinating. It occurs thrice in the Pent., twice in Judges, else only in 2 Sam. xv. 19, in the prophets Is. xxix. 9, and in Ps. cxix. 60. of religious procrastinating. In Arab. are the like forms نَسَمَ and نَسَمَ.

⁹ לא תאחר

¹⁰ Rev. xxii. 7.

¹¹ from Dion.

¹² 2 S. Pet. iii. 9.

¹³ Ps. xxxiii. 20.

¹⁴ Isai. viii. 17. xxx. 18. lxiv. 3. Zeph. iii. 8. Dan. xii. 12. Ps. cvi. 13.

¹⁵ Heb. x. 37.

¹⁶ The vivid words, in themselves, rather express a personal agent; what would be figures as to the vision are simple words as to Him Who was foreshown. Whence the Lxx change the gender and interpret the clause of a person, "He who shall come."

¹⁷ S. John xii. 31.

¹⁸ S. Luke i. 52.

¹⁹ Ps. xlv. 13.

²⁰ S. Matt. xvi. 27.

²¹ S. Cyr.

²² S. Matt. xxii. 32.

²³ S. John xi. 26.

²⁴ Nu. xxiii. 19.

²⁵ 1 Sam. xv. 20.

²⁶ Tit. i. 2.

²⁷ Gen. xlix. 18.

²⁸ נִשְׁמָע See on Micah iv. 8. p. 326, note 22.

²⁹ In the Lxx ἐὰν ὑποστειληται. ὑπο is used thus absolutely, the condition being implied, Deut. xiii. 15, 16. In Ex. viii. 22. the future is used absolutely with ὑπο.

to it. Of it he says, it is in its very inmost core [in him] lacking in uprightness. It can have no good in it, because it denies God, and God denies it His grace. And having nothing upright in it, being corrupt in its very inmost being, it cannot stand or abide. God gives it no power to stand. The words stand in contrast with the following, the one speaking of the cause of death, the other of life. The soul, being swollen with pride, shuts out faith, and with it the Presence of God. It is all crooked in its very inner self or being. S. Paul gives the result, ¹*if any man draw back, my soul hath no pleasure in him*. The prophet's words describe the proud man who stands aloof from God, in himself; S. Paul, as he is in the Eyes of God. As that which is swollen in nature cannot be straight, it is clean contrary that the soul should be swollen with pride and yet upright. Its moral life being destroyed in its very inmost heart, it must perish.

²Plato saith, that properly is straight, which being applied to what is straight, touches and is touched every where. But God is upright, Whom the upright soul touches and is touched every where; but what is not upright is bent away from God. ³*God is good unto Israel, the upright in heart.* ⁴*The upright love thee.* ⁵*The way of the just is uprightness, Thou, most Upright, dost weigh the path of the just.*

But the just shall live by his faith. The accents emphasise the words ⁶*The just, by his faith he shall live*. They do not point to an union of the words, the just by his faith. Isaiah says that Christ should *justify many by the knowledge of Himself*⁷, but the expression, just by his faith, does not occur either in the O. or N. T. In fact, to speak of one really righteous⁸ as being "righteous by his faith" would imply that men could be righteous in some other way. Without faith, S. Paul says at the commencement of his Old Testament pictures of giant faith, ⁹*it is impossible to please God*. Faith, in the creature which does not yet see God, has one and the same principle, a trustful relying belief in its Creator. This was the characteristic of Abraham their father, unshaken, unswerving, belief in God Who called him, whether in leaving his own land and going whither he knew not, for an end which he was never to see; or in believing the promise of the son through whom that Seed was to be, in Whom all the nations of the world should be blessed; or in the crowning act of offering that son to God, knowing that he should receive him back, even from the dead. In all, it was one and the same principle. ¹⁰*His belief was counted to him for righteousness*, though the immediate instance of that faith was not directly spiritual. In this was the good and bad of Israel. ¹¹*The people believed.* ¹²*They believed the Lord and His servant Moses.* ¹³*Then believed they His word, they sang His praise.* This contrariwise was their blame. ¹⁴*In this ye did not believe the Lord.* ¹⁵*Ye rebelled against the commandment of the Lord your God, and believed Him not, nor hearkened to His voice.* ¹⁶*They forgot God their Saviour; they despised the pleasant land, they believed not His word.* And God asks, ¹⁷*How long will it be, ere this people believe Me, for all the signs which I have shown among them?* ¹⁸*Anger came upon Israel, because they believed not in God, and in His salvation trusted not.* ¹⁹*For all this they sinned still, and believed not His wondrous works.* Even of Moses and Aaron God assigns this as the ground, why they should not bring His people into the land which He gave them, ²⁰*Because* ye believed Me not, to sanctify Me in the eyes of the children of Israel (at Meribah). This was the watchword of Jehoshaphat's victory, ²¹*Believe in the Lord your God and ye shall be established; believe His prophets, so shall ye prosper*. This continued to be one central saying of Isaiah. It was his own commission to his people; ²²*Go and say to this people; hear ye on, and understand not; see ye on and perceive not*. In sight of the rejection of faith, he spake prominently of the loss upon unbelief; ²³*If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established*; and, ²⁴*Who hath believed our report?* he premises as the attitude of his people towards Him, the Centre of all faith, Jesus. Yet still, as to the blessings of faith, having spoken of Him, ²⁵*Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, he subjoins, he that believeth in Him shall not make haste*.

So it had been the key-note of Habakkuk to his people, Ye will not believe when it is declared unto you. Here he is bid to declare contrariwise the blessing on belief. The just shall live by his faith. The faith, then, of which Habakkuk speaks, is faith, in itself, but a real, true confiding faith. It is the one relation of the creature to the Creator, unshaken trust. The faith may vary in character, according as God reveals more or less of Himself, but itself is one, a loving trust in Him, just as He reveals Himself. ²⁶*By this faith in God, each righteous person begins to live piously, righteously, holily, peacefully and divinely, and advanceth therein, since in every tribulation and misery, by this faith and hope in God he sustains, strengthens, and increases this life of the soul*. He says then, the just lives by faith, i. e., the unbelieving and unrighteous displeases God, and consequently will not live by the true, right, peaceful and happy life of grace, present righteousness, and future glory, because God is displeased with him, and he places his hopes and fears, not in God, but in men and man's help and in created things. But the righteous who believeth in God shall live a right, sweet, quiet, happy, holy, untroubled life, because, fixed by faith and hope in God Who is the true Life, and in God's promises, he is dear to God, and the object of His care.

"This sentence, the just shall live by faith, is universal, belonging at once to Jews and Christians, to sinners who are first being justified, as also to those who are already justified. For the spiritual life of each of these begins, is maintained and grows through faith. When then it is said, the just shall live by his faith, this word, his, marks the cause, which both begins and preserves life. The just, believing and hoping in God, begins to live spiritually, to have a soul right within him, whereby he pleases God; and again, advancing and making progress in this his faith and hope in God, therewith advances and makes progress in the spiritual life, in rightness and righteousness of soul; in the grace and friendship of God, so as more and more to please God."

Most even of the Jewish interpreters have seen this to be the literal meaning of the words. It stands in contrast with, illustrates and is illustrated by the first words, his soul is swollen, is not upright in him. Pride and independence of God are the centre of the want of rightness; a steadfast cleaving to God, whereby the heart, as Abraham's, was stayed on God, is the centre and cause of the life of the righteous.

¹ Heb. x. 39. ² Alb. ³ Ps. lxxiii. 1. ⁴ Cant. i. 4. ⁵ Is. xxvi. 7. ⁶ See Delitzsch. ⁷ ברוך יצחק Is. liii. 11. ⁸ As אמת always is. ⁹ Heb. xi. 6. ¹⁰ Gen. xv. 6. ¹¹ Ex. iv. 31. ¹² Ib. xiv. 31. ¹³ Ps. cvi. 12.

¹⁴ Deut. i. 32. ¹⁵ Ib. ix. 23. ¹⁶ Ps. cvi. 21, 24. ¹⁷ Num. xiv. 11. ¹⁸ Ps. lxxviii. 21, 22. ¹⁹ Ib. 32. ²⁰ Num. xx. 20. ²¹ 2 Chron. xx. 20. ²² Isa. vi. 9. ²³ Ib. vii. 9. ²⁴ Ib. liii. 1. ²⁵ Ib. xxviii. 16. ²⁶ Lap. in Rom. i. 17.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

5 ¶ || Yea also, because he transgresseth

by wine, he is a proud man, neither keepeth

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

|| Or, How much more.

But since this stayedness of faith is in everything the source of the life of the righteous, then the pride, which issues in want of rightness of the inmost soul, must be a state of death. Pride estranges the soul from God, makes it self-sufficing, that it should not need God, so that he who is proud cannot come to God, to be by Him made righteous. So contrariwise, since by his faith doth the righteous live, this must be equally true whether he be just made righteous from unrighteous, or whether that righteousness is growing, maturing, being perfected in him.

This life begins in grace, lives on in glory. It is begun, in that God freely justifies the ungodly, accounting and making him righteous for and through the Blood of Christ; it is continued in faith which worketh by love; it is perfected, when faith and hope are swallowed up in love, beholding God. In the Epistles to the Romans¹ and the Galatians² St. Paul applies these words to the first beginning of life, when they who had before been dead in sin, began to live by faith in Christ Jesus Who gave them life and made them righteous. And in this sense he is called "just," although before he comes to the Faith he is unjust and unrighteous, being unjustified. For St. Paul uses the word not of what he was before the faith, but what he is, when he lives by faith. Before, not having faith, he had neither righteousness nor life; having faith, he at once has both; he is at once just and lives by his faith. These are inseparable. The faith by which he lives, is a living faith,³ faith which worketh by love. In the Epistle to the Hebrews⁴, St. Paul is speaking of their endurance in the faith, once received, whose faith is not shaken by the trial of their patience. They who look on beyond things present, and fix their minds steadfastly on the Coming of Christ, will not suffer shipwreck of their faith, through any troubles of this time. Faith is the foundation of all good, the beginning of the spiritual building, whereby it rests on The Foundation, Christ. Without faith it is impossible to please God, and so the proud cannot please Him. Through it, is union with Christ and thereby a divine life in the soul, even a life⁵ through faith in the Son of God, holy, peaceful, self-possessed⁶, enduring to the end, being kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.

5. This general rule the Prophet goes on to apply in words which belong in part to all oppressors and in the first instance to the Chaldean, in part yet more fully to the end and to Anti-Christ. Yea also, because he transgresseth by wine [or better, *Yea, how much more, since wine is a deceiver*⁸], as Solomon says,⁹ Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever erreth thereby shall not be wise, and,¹⁰ In the end it biteth like a serpent and pierceth like an adder; and Hosea, ¹¹ Whoredom and wine and new wine take away the heart. As wine at first gladdens, then deprives of all reason, and lays a man open to any deceit, so also pride. And whereas all pride deceives, how much more¹², when men are either heated and excited by the abuse of God's natural gifts, or drunken with prosperity and hurried away, as conquerors are, to all excess of cruelty or lust to fulfil their own will, and neglect the laws of God and man. Literal drunkenness was a sin of the Babylonians under the Persian rule, so that even a heathen says of Babylon, "¹³ Nothing can be more corrupt than the manners of that city, and more provided with all to rouse and entice immoderate pleasures;" and "the Babylonians give themselves wholly to wine, and the things which follow upon drunkenness." It was when flushed¹⁴ with wine, that Belshazzar, with his princes his wives and his concubines, desecrated the sacred vessels, insulted God in honour of his idols, and in the night of his excess "was slain." Pride blinded, deceived, destroyed him. It was the general drunkenness of the inhabitants, at that same feast, which enabled Cyrus, with a handful of men, to penetrate, by means of its river, the city which, with its provisions for many years¹⁵ and its impregnable walls, mocked at his siege. He calculated beforehand on its feast¹⁶ and the consequent dissolution of its inhabitants; but for this, in the language of the heathen historian, he would have been caught "¹⁷ as in a trap," his soldiery drowned.

*He is a proud man*¹⁸, neither keepeth at home. It is difficult to limit the force of the rare Hebrew word rendered, ¹⁹ keep at home; for one may cease to dwell or abide at home either with his will or without it; and, as in the case of invaders, the one may be the result of the other. He who would take away the home of others becomes, by God's Providence, himself homeless. The context implies that the primary meaning is the restlessness of ambition; which abides not at home, for his whole pleasure is to go forth to destroy. Yet there sounds, as it were, an undertone, "he would not abide in his home, and he shall not." We could scarcely avoid the further thought, could we translate by a word which does not determine the sense, "he will not home," "he will not continue at home." The words have seemed to different minds to mean either; as they may²⁰. Such fulness of meaning is the contrary of the ambiguity of Heathen oracles: they are not alternative meanings, which might be justified in either case, but cumulative, the one on the other. The ambitious part with present rest for future loss. Nebuchadnezzar lost his kingdom and his reason through pride, received them back when he humbled himself; Belshazzar, being proud and impenitent, lost both his kingdom and life.

Arab. only supplies ²¹ "perseverance in litigation;" the meaning "prominence, swelling" is assumed only. The Arab. ²² (in Ges. Hitz.) is from ²³ (med. v) and signifies "a sand-heap," not as heaped up, but as sinking asunder, "corruens," (the central meaning of ²⁴.)

²⁵ נָחָה, נָחָה, seems to be of the same root as ²⁶ נָחָה, whence נָחָה "dweller in the house," Ps. lxxviii. 13; נָחָה, נָחָה, abode: נָחָה Pr. N. probably the same, and נָחָה also. The derived sense "becoming" (lit. "sit well on" "bene sedet alicui," Ges.) exists in נָחָה Pa. xciii. 5; "beautiful," Cant. i. 10. Is. lii. 7; and in נָחָה Jer. vi. 2. It is the basis of ²⁷ נָחָה "will praise Him." Either gives a good sense. The Vulg. takes the derived sense "decorabitur."

²⁸ A. E. Abarb. Tanch. Rashi, following Jon. take it of his privation of home. Kim. either of the shortness of Nebuchadnezzar's empire, or his own being driven forth with the wild animals Dan. iv. 31-33. Del. illustrates the sense of forced "non-abiding" by ²⁹ נָחָה Ps. xlix. 13, "abideth not;" ³⁰ נָחָה Pr. x. 30, "shall not inhabit the earth;" ³¹ נָחָה Pr. ii. 21.

¹ Rom. i. 17.

² Gal. iii. 11.

³ Ib. v. 6.

⁴ Heb. x. 38.

⁵ Gal. ii. 20.

⁶ S. Luke xxi. 19.

⁷ 1 S. Pet. i. 5.

⁸ Jon. agrees

"as one erring through wine." Kim. A. E. Rashi, Abarb. Tanch. (in one explanation) take it personally; Kim. supplying ⁹ "drinker of wine;" A. E. and Tanch. regarding ¹⁰ as ¹¹ נָחָה, quoting ¹² עַל צִדְּהוֹ Pa. cix. 4. which they explain in the same way.

¹³ Prov. xx. 1.

¹⁴ Ib. xxiii. 32.

¹⁵ Hosea iv. 11.

¹⁶ נָחָה as in

1 Sam. xxiii. 3. Ezek. xxiii. 40. It adds to the previous sentence; whether we should express it by how much more, if an affirmative had preceded; or how much less, if a negative. The more or less lies in the relation of the sentences, not in the ¹⁷ נָחָה.

¹⁸ Q. Curt. v. 1.

¹⁹ See Daniel the Prophet p. 450.

²⁰ Xen. Cyrop. vii. v. 15.

²¹ "When then he [Cyrus] heard that there was a feast in Babylon, in which all the Babylonians drink and revel all the night, on this &c." Ib. 11. on the drunkenness see Ib. 9. 10.

²² Herod. i. 191.

²³ נָחָה, in the only other place, Pr. xxi. 24, stands in connection with נָחָה and נָחָה; in Chald. it is "arrogant," (see instances in Levy Chald. Wört.) as in Nator. (ap. Ges.) The

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

7 Shall they not rise up suddenly that shall bite thee, and awake that shall vex thee, and thou shalt be for booties unto them?

¹ Isai. 33. 1.

8ⁱ Because thou hast spoiled many na-character of these proverbs to say much in few words, sometimes in one, and more than appears. So the word translated thick-clay, as if it were two words, in another way means in an intensive sense, "a strong deep pledge." At best gold and silver are, as they have been called, red and white earth. "¹ What are gold and silver but red and white earth, which the error of man alone maketh, or accounteth precious? What are gems, but stones of the earth? What silk, but webs of worms?" These he "maketh heavy upon" or "against himself" [so the words strictly mean]. "For he weigheth himself down with thick clay, who, by avarice multiplying earthly things, hems himself in by the oppressiveness of his own sin, imprisons and, as it were, buries the soul, and heaps up sin as he heaps up wealth." With toil they gather what is not worthless only, but is a burden upon the soul, weighing it down that it should not rise Heavenwards, but should be bowed down to Hell. And so in that other sense while, as a hard usurer, he heaps up the pledges of those whom he oppresses and impoverishes, and seems to increase his wealth, he does in truth increase against himself a strong pledge, whereby not others are debtors to him, but he is a debtor to Almighty God Who careth for the oppressed. ² He that gathereth riches and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days and at his end shall be a fool.

7. Shall not they rise up suddenly that shall bite thee, and awake that shall vex thee? The destruction of the wicked is ever sudden at last. Such was the flood³, the destruction of Sodom, of Pharaoh, of the enemies of God's people through the Judges, of Sennacherib, Nineveh, Babylon by the Medes and Persians. Such shall the end be⁴. As he by his oppressions had pierced others (it is the word used of the oppression of usury⁵), so should it be done to him. "⁶ The Medes and Persians who were before subject to the Babylonian empire, and whose kings were subject to Nebuchadnezzar and his successors, rose up and awaked, i. e., stirred themselves up in the days of Belshazzar to rebel against the successors of Nebuchadnezzar which sat on his throne, like a man who awaketh from sleep." The words awake, arise, are used also of the resurrection, when the worm of the wicked gnaweth and dieth not⁷.

And thou shalt be for booties unto them? The common phrase is modified to explain the manifoldness of the plunder⁸ which he should yield. So Jeremiah, ⁹ Chaldaea shall be a spoil; all that spoil her shall be satisfied, saith the Lord. "¹⁰ We may hear Him Who saith, ¹¹ How can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house. For, as soon as He was born of the holy Virgin, He began to tions, all the remnant of the people shall spoil thee; ^k because of men's [†] blood, and for the violence of the land, of the city, and ^k ver. 17. [†] Heb. bloods. of all that dwell therein.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

spoil his goods. For the Magi came from the East—and worshipped Him and honoured Him with gifts and became a first-fruits of the Church of the Gentiles. And being vessels of Satan, and the most honoured of all his members, they hastened to Christ."

8. Because, [or For]. The Prophet assigns the reason of the woes he had just pronounced. *Thou*¹² [emph.], thou hast spoiled many nations, all the remnant of the people shall spoil thee. So Isaiah, ¹³ When thou shalt cease to spoil, thou shalt be spoiled; when thou shalt make an end to deal treacherously, they shall deal treacherously with thee. Boundless as his conquests were, each remaining people, tribe, or family shall be his foe. "¹⁴ Having subdued very many, thou shalt be destroyed by few, and they who long endured thy tyranny, arising as from sleep, shall compass thy destruction; and thou shalt pay the penalty of thy countless slaughters and thy great ungodliness and thy lawless violence to cities which thou madest desolate of inhabitants." Nothing was too great or too little to escape this violence.

All the remnant. "¹⁵ As thou, invading, didst take away the things of others, in like way shall what appertaineth to thee be taken away by those who are left for vengeance." Jeremiah foretold of Elam in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah¹⁶, (in expansion of the prophecy in the reign of Jehoia-kim¹⁶); Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Behold, I will break the bow of Elam, the chief of their might. And upon Elam I will bring the four winds from the four quarters of the heavens, and will scatter them towards all these winds, and there shall be no nation whither the outcasts of Elam shall not come. For I will cause Elam to be dismayed before her enemies; but it shall come to pass in the latter days, that I will bring again the captivity of Elam, saith the Lord. Elam is also counted by Ezekiel¹⁷ among those who, together with Pharaoh, should be brought down to the grave, with Asshur, Meshech, Tubal, Edom and all the Zidonians, by the king of Babylon. They were then all which remained¹⁸ of the nations which he had conquered, who should be gathered against his house. Because of men's blood and of the violence of i. e. to the land, as the violence of, i. e. to¹⁹, Lebanon, and men's blood is their blood which was shed. To land, city, and all dwellers therein. Land or earth, city, are left purposely undefined, so that while that in which the offence culminated should be, by the singular, specially suggested, the violence to Judah and Jerusalem, the cruelty condemned should not be limited to these. The violence was dealt out to the whole land or earth, and in it, to cities, and in each, one by one, to all its inhabitants. Babylon is called,²⁰ the hammer of the whole earth; ²¹ a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunken; ²² a destroying mountain, which destroyeth the whole earth; the whole

¹ S. Bern. Serm. 4. in Adv. ² Jer. xvii. 11. ³ S. Luke xvii. 26. 27. ⁴ S. Matt. xxiv. 43. 44. xxv. 13. S. Luke xvii. 26—30, xxi. 34. 35. 1 Thess. v. 3. 2 Pet. iii. 10. Rev. xvi. 15.

⁵ לִיט. "every thing which shall bite." De. xxiii. 20. הַשֵּׁךְ (De. xxiii. 20. 21 bis) is properly a denom. from שָׁקַע, explained to be "what bites the giver and takes something of his from him." Mezia 60. b. in Del. The דְּבִירָה, v. 6. suggested חֲרִיבָה, and this, favoured by the conception of the Chaldeans as a pitiless creditor, concentrated in עֲבָרִים, suggested שָׁקַע, (which is often united with חֲרִיבָה); and this suggested the remarkable designation of those who were to execute the Divine retribution on the Chaldeans by the word, שֹׁשְׁבִים. ⁶ Abarb. quoted by Del.

⁷ See Isaiah xiv. 11. lxvi. 24. ⁸ הָיְתָה לְשָׁבָה. Elsewhere sing. לְשָׁבָה. ⁹ Jer. 1. 10.

¹⁰ See S. Cyr. ¹¹ S. Matt. xii. 20 ¹² כִּי אַתָּה ¹³ Isaiah xxxiii. 1. ¹⁴ Theod. ¹⁵ Jer. xlix. 34—39. ¹⁶ The prophecies against the heathen nations Jer. xlii—li. were in the same order in the main as in Jer. xxv. 19—26, beginning with Egypt and ending in Babylon, and containing between these, the Philistines (with Tyre and Zidon incidentally), Moab, Ammon, Edom, Kedar, Hazor, Elam; Elam being in both cases the last before Babylon itself. ¹⁷ Ezek. xxxii. 17—32.

¹⁸ As יִשְׂרָאֵל הָיָה יִשְׂרָאֵל Josh. x. 12. ¹⁹ אֶת יִשְׂרָאֵל הָיָה יִשְׂרָאֵל Ex. x. 5; ²⁰ אֶת יִשְׂרָאֵל הָיָה יִשְׂרָאֵל 2 Kings xxv. 11; ²¹ אֶת יִשְׂרָאֵל הָיָה יִשְׂרָאֵל Jer. xxxix. 9.

²² Hab. ii. 17. חֲמָסָה is united with the gen. of the object, Gen. xvi. 5. Jud. ix. 24. Jo. iv. 19. Ob. 10. Jer. li. 35; with that of the subject, Ps. vii. 17, lviii. 3. Ezek. xii. 19. [all.] ²⁰ Jer. 1. 23. ²¹ lb. li. 7. ²² lb. 25.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

9 ¶ Woe to him that ¹ coveteth an evil covetousness to his house, that he may ^m set his nest on high, that he may be delivered from the [†] power of evil!

10 Thou hast consulted shame to thy earth is at rest and is quiet¹, after Babylon, which made it to tremble², is overthrown.

So Satan had by violence and deceit subdued the whole earth, yet Christ made him a spoil to those whom he had spoiled, and the strong man was bound and his goods spoiled and himself trampled underfoot. Yet here as throughout the prophets, it is a "remnant" only which is saved. "3 Satan too was spoiled by the remnant of the people, i. e. by those justified by Christ and sanctified in the Spirit. For the remnant of Israel was saved."

9. Woe to him that coveteth an evil covetousness to his house [or, with accents, that coveteth covetousness or unjust gain, an evil to his house.] What man coveteth seems gain, but is evil to his house after him, destroying both himself and his whole family or race with him⁴. That he may set his nest on high, as an eagle, to which he had likened the Chaldee⁵. A heathen called "strongholds, the nests of tyrants." The nest was placed "on high" which means also "heaven," as it is said, ⁶ though thou set thy nest among the stars; and the tower of Babel was to ⁷ reach unto heaven; and the Anti-Christ, whose symbol the King of Babylon is, says, ⁸ I will exalt my throne above the stars of God. Babylon lying in a large plain, on the sides of the Euphrates, the image of its eagle's-nest on high must be taken, not from any natural eminence, but wholly from the works of man. Its walls, and its hanging gardens were among "the seven wonders of the world." Eye witnesses speak of its walls, encompassing at the least 100 square miles⁹, "10 and as large as the laud-graviat of Hesse-Homburg;" those walls, 335, or 330 feet high, and 85 feet broad¹¹; a fortified palace, near 7 miles in circumference; gardens, 400 Greek feet square, supporting at an artificial height arch upon arch, of "at least 75 feet," forest trees; a temple to its god, said to have been at least 600 feet high. Had we, creatures of a day, no one above us, Nebuchadnezzar's boast had been true¹², Is not this great Babylon that I have builded for the house of the Kingdom by the might of my power and for the honour of my majesty? He had built an eagle's nest, which no human arm could reach, encircled by walls which laughed its invaders to scorn, which no then skill could scale or shatter or mine. Even as one sees in a picture the vast mounds which yet remain¹³, one can hardly imagine that they were, brick upon brick, wholly the work of man.

To be delivered from the hand [grasp] of evil; that it should not be able to reach him. Evil is spoken of as a living power¹⁴, which would seize him, whose grasp he would

¹ Is. xiv. 7. ² Ib. 16. ³ S. Cyr. ⁴ לִּבְנֵי בָּנִים elsewhere stand, without an epithet, it being itself evil, Prov. i. 19. xv. 27. Jer. vi. 13. viii. 10. and Ezek. xxii. 27. [all] house by cutting off many people, and hast sinned against thy soul.

⁵ 1. 8. Comp. Jer. xx. 16. ⁶ Obad. 4. ⁷ Gen. xi. 4. ⁸ Is. xiv. 13. ⁹ Herodotus, giving probably the extent of the outer wall, makes it a square 120 stades each way, and so 56 miles in circuit [i. 178]. Ctesias, giving probably the dimensions of the inner-wall, makes the circumference 360 stades, 41-42 miles, and so enclosing 100 square miles [Diod. Sic. ii. 7. sqq.].

¹⁰ Rawl. 5 Empires iii. 340. ¹¹ It is remarkable that the larger dimensions are the oldest, given by eye-witnesses. Rawlinson has pointed out one case in which the later reduced the dimensions artificially, "softening down the cubits of Herodotus into feet." 5 Empires iii. 348 note. See the whole vivid description, Ib. pp. 338-361.

¹² Dan. iv. 30. ¹³ See in Smith's Bible Dict. i. 152. Rawl. 5 Empires iii. 353. ¹⁴ כֹּחַ occurs in 19 other places with verbs signifying deliverance, [see Fürst Conc. p. 568.] and in all of living agents. ¹⁵ Ex. xx. 5. ¹⁶ Prov. xv. 27. ¹⁷ Jer. vii. 19.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

11 For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it.

Or, piece, or, fastening.
Or, witness against it.

defy. It was indeed a living power, since it was the Will of Almighty God, Whose servant and instrument Cyrus was, to chasten Babylon, when its sins were full. Such was the counsel, what the result? The evil covetousness which he wrought, brought on him the evil, from which, in that nest built by the hard toil of his captives, he thought to deliver himself.

10. Thou hast consulted shame to thy house, the cutting off many people, and sinning against thy soul. The wicked, whether out of passion or with his whole mind and deliberate choice and will, takes that counsel, which certainly brings shame to himself and his house, according to the law of God, whereby He ¹⁵ visits the iniquities of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate Him, i. e. until by righteousness and restitution the curse is cut off. ¹⁶ He that is greedy of gain troubleth his own house. So Jeremiah says, ¹⁷ Thus saith the Lord, Is it Me they are vexing? is it not themselves, for ¹⁸ the confusion of their faces? i. e. with that end and object. Holy Scripture overlooks the means, and places us at the end of all. Whatever the wicked had in view, to satisfy ambition, avarice, passion, love of pleasure, or the rest of man's immediate ends, all he was doing was leading on to a further end, shame and death. He was bringing about, not only these short-lived, but the lasting ends beyond, and these far more than the others, since that is the real end of a thing which abides, in which it at last ends. He consulted to cut off many people and was thereby (though he knew it not) by one and the same act, guilty of and forfeiting his own soul¹⁹.

11. For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it. All things have a voice, in that they are²⁰. God's works speak that, for which He made them. ²¹ The heavens declare the glory of God. ²² The valleys are clad with corn, they laugh, yea, they sing; their very look speaks gladness. "3 For the creation itself proclaims the glory of the Maker, in that it is admired as well made. Wherefore there are voices in things, although there are not words." Man's works speak of that in him, out of which and for which he made them. Works of mercy go up for a memorial before God, and plead there; great works, wrought amid wrong and cruelty and for man's ambition and pride, have a voice too, and cry out to God, calling down His vengeance on the oppressor. Here the stones of the wall, whereby the building is raised, and the beam, the tie-beam, out of the timber-work²³ wherewith it is finished, and which, as it were, crowns the work, join, as in a chorus, answer-

¹⁸ לִּבְנֵי בָּנִים ¹⁹ לִּבְנֵי בָּנִים Prov. xx. 2. comp. לִּבְנֵי בָּנִים Ib. viii. 36. The contemporaneity of the act is expressed by the participle; the pronoun is omitted as in i. 5.

²⁰ The Arabs have an expression for it, لِسَانُ الْمَوْضِعِ, lit. "The tongue of the situation,"

²¹ Ps. xix. 1.

²² Ib. lxx. 13.

²³ So the word is best understood, since the "beam" bears the same relation to the "wood-work" as the "stone" to the "wall," i. e. is a part of it, בֵּן in Ch. signifying "to bind," like בֵּן Dan. iii. 20, 21, 23, 24. So Kim. The other sense given, that it is a half-brick, such as is worked into the mode of building, called by us "bricknogging," which R. Tanchum of Jerusalem also knew in the East, seems unsuited here; 1) because it is speaking of magnificent building; the interlacing of brick with wood is for economy, since the wood, interlacing the bricks, holds them together, though the wall be thin; 2) the half-bricks naturally enter into this mode of building, but are neither the chief nor a prominent part of it. 3) Neither is the woodwork apparently in such way one, that it

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

Jer. 22. 13.
Ezek. 24. 9.
Mic. 3. 10.
Nah. 3. 1.
† Heb. bloods.
Jer. 51. 58.

12 ¶ Woe to him that buildeth a town with ⁿ† blood, and stablisheth a city by iniquity!

13 Behold, is it not of the Lord of hosts ° that the people shall labour in the very ing one another, and in a deep solemn wailing, before God and the whole world, together chant "Woe, Woe." Did not the blood and groans of men cry out to God, speechless things have a voice to appeal to Him¹. Against Belshazzar the wall had, to the letter, words to speak.

Each three verses forming one stanza, as it were, of the dirge, the following words are probably not directly connected with the former, as if the woe, which follows, were, so to speak, the chant of these inanimate witnesses against the Chaldeans; yet they stand connected with it. The dirge began with woe on the wrongful accumulation of wealth from the conquered and oppressed people: it continues with the selfish use of the wealth so won.

12. Woe to him that buildeth a town with blood, and establisheth a city by iniquity! Nebuchadnezzar ² encircled the inner city with three walls and the outer city also with three, all of burnt brick. And having fortified the city with wondrous works, and adorned the gates like temples, he built another palace near the palace of his fathers, surpassing it in height and its great magnificence.³ He seemed to strengthen the city, and to stablish it by outward defences. But it was built through cruelty to conquered nations, and especially God's people, and by oppression, against His holy Will. So there was an inward rottenness and decay in what seemed strong and majestic, and which imposed on the outward eye; it would not stand, but fell. Babylon, which had stood since the flood, being enlarged contrary to the eternal laws of God, fell in the reign of his son. Such is all empire and greatness, raised on the neglect of God's laws, by unlawful conquests, and by the toil and sweat and hard service of the poor. Its aggrandisement and seeming strength is its fall. Daniel's exhortation to Nebuchadnezzar, ³ Redeem thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by shewing mercy on the poor, implies that oppressiveness had been one of his chief sins.

13. Behold, is it not of the Lord of hosts that [the] people [nations] shall labour⁴ in [for] the very fire [lit. to suffice the fire]? By God's appointment, the end of all their labour is for the fire, what may suffice it to consume. This is the whole result of their labour; and so it is as if they had toiled for this; they built ceiled palaces and gorgeous buildings, only for the fire to consume them.

And peoples shall weary themselves for very vanity. They wearied themselves, and what was their reward? What had they to suffice and fill them? Emptiness. This is from the Lord of hosts, Whom all the armies of heaven obey and all creatures stand at His command against the ungodly, and in Whose Hand are all the hosts of earth, and so the oppressor's also, to turn as He wills.

Near upon the first stage of the fulfilment, Jeremiah reinforces the words with the name of Babylon; ⁵ Thus saith can stand as a whole. Tanchum and Parchon adopt this rendering, and Rashi on Taanit 11 a (ap. Del.) not in his Comm.; Symm. Theod. Syr. ε have σύνδεσμος, S. Jer. in the same sense, μάντωσις, and LXX. κάνθαρος. The other sense given does not account for the word "out of the timber," since it would rather be "out of the stone-work." S. Cyril says, "the other versions have ένδεσμος ξύλου, so that they named the crown of the house and the complexity of the wood, i. e., the band, κάνθαρος, because they as with many feet supported the roof which lay upon it."

fire, and the people shall weary themselves || for very vanity?

14 For the earth shall be filled || with the ^p knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

Or, in vain?
Or, by knowing the glory of the Lord.
Isai. 11. 9.

the Lord of hosts! The broad walls of Babylon shall be utterly destroyed, and her high gates shall be burned with fire; and the people shall labour in vain [for vanity], and the folk in [for] the fire, and they shall be weary.

14. For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord. Habakkuk modifies in a degree the words of Isaiah which he embodies, marking that the destruction of Babylon was a stage only towards the coming of those good things which God taught His people to long for, not their very coming. All the world should be then full of the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, not, as yet, wholly of Himself. ⁶ "When Babylon shall be overthrown, then shall the power of the might of the Lord be known unto all. So shall the whole earth be filled with the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the bottom of the sea. This as to the letter. But it is plain, that the Devil also and Anti-Christ, and the perverse teaching of heretics, build a city in blood; i. e., their own Church, with the destruction of those whom they deceive. . . . But when they fall in the fire, (either this fire which is felt, or consumed in the fire of the devil their prince, or burned up with the fire whereof the Lord says, I came to send a fire upon the earth, and so brought back from their former course, and doing penitence), the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord, when, at the preaching of the Apostles, their sound shall go out into all the world, as waters covering the sea, i. e., all the saltness and bitterness of the world which Satan had rained down and the earth had drunk, the waters of the Lord shall cover, and cause the place of their ancient bitterness not to appear." ⁷ For the Spirit of the Lord filled the earth, and when He filled it, the earth was filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, so that unlearned and ignorant men became wise and eloquent, and earthly became heavenly, yea, they who were earth became heaven, knowing the Glory of the Lord, declaring the Glory of God, not any how, but as waters cover the sea. Great as must be waters, which would cover the sea, or compared to which the sea were nothing, far greater is the miracle, when the abundance of heavenly wisdom, given to the simple, surpassed the sea, i. e., the wisdom of all mankind." This verse being already a received image of the spread of the Gospel⁸, it would of itself be understood to include this also; but more generally, it declares how upon all the judgements of God, a larger knowledge of Him would follow. ⁹ "All things are full of Christ, Who is the Glory of the Father; wherefore also He said, ¹⁰ I have glorified Thee on earth, I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do."

15. From cruelty the Prophet goes on to denounce the woe on insolence. Woe unto him that giveth his neighbour (to whom he owes love) drink [lit. that maketh him drink];

¹ See S. Luke xix. 40.
Antiq. x. 11. 1. and c. Ap. i. 20.

² Berosus Hist. Chald. L. iii. ap. Joseph.

³ Dan. iv. 27.
⁴ עבד with ב "labour upon" Josh. xxiv. 13, Isa. lxii. 8. and boldly, of God, Ib. xliii. 22. and Hif. "cause to labour with" Isa. xliii. 23.

⁵ Jer. li. 58.
⁶ S. Jer.
⁷ S. Cyr.

⁸ S. Cyr.
⁹ S. John xvii. 4.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

¹ Hos. 7. 5.

² Gen. 9. 22.

|| Or, more with shame than with glory.

³ Jer. 25. 26,
27. & 51. 57.

15 ¶ Woe unto him that giveth his neighbour drink, that putteth thy ¹ bottle to him, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest ² look on their nakedness!

16 Thou art filled || with shame for glory: ³ drink thou also, and let thy foreskin be uncovered: the cup of the Lord's right hand shall be turned unto thee, and that putteth ¹ thy bottle ² to him, and makest him drunken also, ³ that thou mayest look [gaze with devilish pleasure] on their nakedness. This may either be of actual insults (as in the history of Noah), in keeping certainly with the character of the later Babylonians, the last wantonness of unbridled power, making vile sport of those like himself (his neighbour), or it may be drunkenness through misery ⁴ wherein they are bared of all their glory and brought to the lowest shame. The woe falls too on all, who in any way intoxicate others with flattering words or feigned affection, mixing poison under things pleasant, to bring them to shame.

16. Thou art filled with shame for glory. Oppressors think to make themselves great by bringing others down, to fill themselves with riches, by spoiling others. They loved shame ⁵, because they loved that, which brought shame; they were filled with shame, in that they sated themselves with shamefulness, which was their shame within, before, in the just judgement of God, shame came on them from without. ⁶ Their glory was in their shame. They shall be filled, yea, he says, they are already filled ⁷; they would satisfy, gorge themselves, with all their hearts' desires; they are filled to the full, but with shame instead of glory which they sought, or which they already had. From and for ⁸ a state of glory, they were filled with contempt.

Drink thou also, and let thy foreskin be uncovered: thy shame like those whom thou putteth to shame, only the greater in being uncircumcised. The cup of the Lord's Right Hand shall be turned [round] unto thee [or against thee]. It had gone round the circuit of the nations whom God had employed him to chasten, and now, the circle completed, it should be brought round to himself, ⁹ With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured unto you again. So Jeremiah says, ¹⁰ And the king of Sheshach shall drink after them; and of Edom, ¹¹ To thee also shall the cup be brought round. Thou, a man, madest man to drink of the cup of thine anger: the cup shall be brought round to thee, but not by man; to thee it shall be given by the Right Hand of the Lord, which thou canst not escape; it shall be ¹² the cup of the wine of the fierceness of the wrath of Almighty God; as Asaph had said, ¹ נקט is rendered "approaching to" "joining" by Tanch., A. E., Rashi Kim. Sal. B. Mel. Abarb.; "pouring" Ch. Symm. Both senses exist in the verb; and the efforts of Ges. and Papenheim (ap. Del.) to reduce all the usages under either, force some.

² The E. V. has taken נקט as irregular from נקט "flask," with Kim., A. E., Sal. ben Mel.; "poison," Ch. Abulw.; "wrath," Rashi, Abarb.; "flask" or "wrath," Tanch. נקט The inf. abs. continuing the previous action of the finite verb, as in Gen. xli. 43. Is. ix. 20. Jer. xiv. 5, or after the inf. constr. 1 Sam. xxii. 13. xxv. 26. 33. Jer. vii. 18. &c. See in Ewald Lehrb. p. 839. ed. 7. ⁴ Isaiah xxix. 9.

⁵ Hos. iv. 8. ⁶ Phil. iii. 19. ⁷ נקט has nowhere the reflective meaning, "satiated himself with" (as Del.); it simply expresses a state.

⁸ Includes both. ⁹ S. Matt. vii. 2. ¹⁰ Jer. xxv. 26. ¹¹ Lam. iv. 21.

¹² Rev. xvi. 19. ¹³ Ps. lxxvi. 8. ¹⁴ נקט might be simply an intensive, modified from נקט, as נקט from נקט, נקט, נקט, &c. Ew. Lehrb. p. 408. It was regarded as a compound word by S. Jerome's Hebrew instructor, "vomitus ignominiae," the Midrash Ester Rabb. 121. c. (in Del.) Kim. Sal. B. Mel. as suggested by the mention of the drinking, (as in Jer. xxv. 27.). Ibn Ezra, Tanchum, Abarb. give both. In any case, as in עבט, the word was probably framed to suggest the two words, into which it is naturally resolved, נקט, נקט, like נקט Is. xxviii. 8. and the image Is. xix.

shameful spewing shall be on thy glory.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

17 For the violence of Lebanon shall cover thee, and the spoil of beasts, which made them afraid, ¹ because of men's blood, ² ver. 8. and for the violence of the land, of the city, and of all that dwell therein.

18 ¶ What profiteth the graven image ³ Is. 44. 9, 10. & 46. 2. that the maker thereof hath graven it; the ¹³ There is a cup in the Lord's hand; it is full of mixture, and He poureth out therefrom; but the dregs thereof all the ungodly of the earth shall suck them out, shall drink them.

And shameful spewing ¹⁴ shall be on thy glory. ¹⁵ With the shame of thy spewing shalt thou bring up all thou hast swallowed down, and from the height of glory shalt thou be brought to the utmost ills." The shame of the ungodly cometh forth from himself; the shame he put others to is doubled upon himself; and the very means which he had used to fill himself with glory and greatness, cover the glory which by nature he had, with the deeper disgrace, so that he should be a loathsome and revolting sight to all. Man veils foul deeds under fair words; God, in His word, unveils the foulness.

17. For the violence of Lebanon i. e., done to Lebanon, whether the land of Israel of which it was the entrance and the beauty ¹⁶, or the temple ¹⁷, both of which Nebuchadnezzar laid waste; or, more widely, it may be a symbol of all the majesty of the world and its empires, which he subdues, as Isaiah uses it, when speaking of the judgement on the world ¹⁸. It shall cover thee, and the spoil [i. e., spoiling, destruction] of beasts [the inhabitants of Lebanon] which made them afraid, or more simply, the wasting of wild beasts ¹⁹ shall crush ²⁰ them[selves], i. e., as it is in irrational nature, that "the frequency of the incursions of very mischievous animals becomes the cause that men assemble against them and kill them, so their [the Chaldeans'] frequent injustice is the cause that they haste to be avenged on thee ²¹." Having become beasts, they shared their history. They spoiled, scared, laid waste, were destroyed. "Whoso seeketh to hurt another, hurteth himself." The Chaldeans laid waste Judæa, scared and wasted its inhabitants; the end of its plunder should be, not to adorn, but to cover them, overwhelm them as in ruins, so that they should not lift up their heads again. Violence returns on the head of him who did it; they seem to raise a lofty fabric, but are buried under it. He sums up their past experience, what God had warned them beforehand, what they had found.

18. What profiteth [hath profited ²² the graven image, that קלל Nu. xxi. 5. ¹⁵ S. Jer. ¹⁶ See Is. xxxvii. 24. and, as a symbol, Jer. xxii. 6, 23. Ez. xvii. 3; but it is used as a symbol of Sennacherib's army, Is. x. 34, and the king of Asshur is not indeed spoken of under the name as a symbol (in Ezek. xxi. 3.) but is compared to it. ¹⁷ See on Zech. xii. 1. ¹⁸ Is. ii. 13.

¹⁹ נקט is used of beasts of prey, Deut. xxvii. 24. ²⁰ As in Is. vii. 8. and Ps. lxxxix. 40, Pr. x. 14, xiii. 3, xiv. 14, xviii. 7.

²¹ R. Tanchum. He had after Abulwalid, which Kimchi quotes and approves, explained the first part of the verse; "This is a likeness framed as to him, that he was like a beast of prey which attacketh the animals in their lairs; and Lebanon is mentioned on account of the multitude of animals in it. He says then, thy wrong to the inhabitants of Lebanon shall overwhelm thee." He gives also the rendering, followed in the E. V., but prefers his own. He gives the two ways of deriving נקט from נקט and נקט. Rashi follows the same construction. "The wasting of thy beasts and forces, because they have wasted My people Israel, it shall crush them [selves]."

²² נקט Samuel warned them, "Serve the Lord with all your heart, and turn ye not aside; for [it would be] after vanities, which will not profit, nor deliver, for they are vain: " and Jeremiah tells their past; "their prophets prophesied by Baal; and after things נקט which profit not, have they gone." Elsewhere the idol is spoken of as a thing, "which

14. The form is enlarged by Hab. from the previous נקט, but the doubling occurs in

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

* Jer. 10. 8, 14.
Zech. 10. 2.
† Heb. the fashion-er of his fashion.
* Ps. 115. 5.
1 Cor. 12. 2.

molten image, and a * teacher of lies, that † the maker of his work trusteth therein, to make † dumb idols?

19 Woe unto him that saith to the wood, Awake; to the dumb stone, Arise, it shall the maker thereof hath graven it? What did Baal and Ash-taroath profit you? What availed it ever but to draw down the wrath of God? Even so neither shall it profit the Chal-dæan. As their idols availed them not, so neither need they fear them. Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar were propagandists of their own belief and would destroy, if they could, all other worship, false or true¹: Nebuchadnezzar is thought to have set up his own image². Anti-Christ will set himself up as God³. We may take warning at least by our own sins. If we had no profit at all from them, nei-ther will the like profit others. This the Jews did, in the main, learn in their captivity.

The molten image and teacher of lies. It is all one whe-ther by teacher of lies we understand the idol⁴, or its priest⁵. For its priest gave it its voice, as its maker created its form. It could only seem to teach through the idol-priest. Isaiah used the title teacher of lies, of the false prophet⁶. It is all one. Zechariah combines them; ⁷ The teraphim have spoken vanity, and the diviners have seen a lie, and have had false dreams.

That the maker of his work trusteth therein. This was the special folly of idolatry. The thing made must needs be inferior to its maker. It was one of the corruptions of idolatry that the maker of his own work should trust in what was wholly his own creation, what, not God, but himself created, what had nothing but what it had from himself⁸. He uses the very words which express the relation of man to God, "the Framer" and "the thing framed." ⁹ O your perverseness! Shall the framer be accounted as clay, that the thing made should say of its Maker, He made me not, and the thing framed say of its Framer, He hath no hands? The idol-maker is "the creator of his creature," of his god whom he worships. Again the idol-maker makes dumb idols [lit. dumb nothings] in themselves nothings, and having no power out of themselves; and what is uttered in their name, are but lies. And what else are man's idols of wealth, honour, fame, which he makes to himself, the creatures of his own hands or mind, their greatness existing chiefly in his own imagination, before which he bows down himself, who is the image of God?

19. But then the greater is the Woe to him who deceiv-eth by them. The prophet passes away from the idols as "nothings" and pronounces "woe" on those who deceive by them. He ¹⁰ first expostulates with them on their folly, and would awaken them. What hath it profited¹¹? Then on the obstinate he denounces "woe." Woe unto him that saith to the wood, Awake; to the dumb stone, Arise. Self-made blind-ness alone could, in the light of truth, so speak; but yet more lies in the emphatic word, It. The personal pronoun will not profit" (fut.) "My people hath changed its glory יָעַל לְבָאָהּ for that which pro-fitheth not," Jer. ii. 8. 11. So Isaiah, "Who hath formed a god, לִבְנוֹתָהּ, not to profit," Is. xlv. 9. 10. "The makers of a graven image are all of them vanity, and their desirable things יָעַל לְבָאָהּ will not profit."

¹ 2 Kgs. xviii. 33-35, xix. 12-18, xxv. 9, Is. x. 10, 11. See also Lectures on Daniel pp. 447-449 ed. 2. ² Dan. iii. See Lectures on Dan. pp. 442. ³ 2 Thess. ii. 4, Rev. xiii. 15-17. ⁴ Abarb. Kim. ⁵ A.E. Tanch. ⁶ Is. ix. 14. ⁷ Zech. x. 2.

⁸ In Hebrew this is made stronger by the sameness of the words, יָצַר יָצַר yetser yitsro E. M. "fashioner of his fashion." Again "dumb idols" are elhim illemim, the second teach! Behold, it is laid over with gold and silver, *and there is no breath at all in the midst of it.

20 But * the Lord is in his holy temple: † let all the earth keep silence before him.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

* Ps. 135. 17.
* Ps. 11. 4.
† Heb. be silent all the earth before him.
* Zeph. 1. 7. Zech. 2. 13.

stands emphatically in Hebrew; He shall teach, lo, He (this same of whom he speaks) this is It which shall teach: It, and not the living God. And yet this same It (the word is again emphatic) he points, as with the finger, to it, behold, *It is laid over with, held fast by*¹², gold and silver, so that no voice could escape, if it had any. And there is no breath at all in the midst of it¹³, lit. All breath, all which is breath, there is none within it; he first suggests the thought, breath of every sort, and then energetically denies it all¹⁴; no life of any sort, of man, or bird, or beast, or creeping thing; ¹⁵ none, good or bad; from God or from Satan; none whereby it can do good or do evil; for which it should be loved or feared. Evil spirits may have made use of idols: they could not give them life, nor dwell in them.

The words addressed to it are the language of the soul in the seeming absence or silence of God¹⁶, but mockery as spoken to the senseless stone, as Elijah had mocked the Baal-priests¹⁷, peradventure he sleepeth and must be awaked.

20. And now having declared the nothingness of all which is not God, the power of man or his gods, he answers again his own question, by summoning all before the Presence of the Majesty of God.

And the Lord. He had, in condemning them, pictured the tumult of the world, the oppressions, the violence, blood-sheddings, covetousness, insolence, self-aggrandisement of the then world-empire, and had denounced woe upon it; we see man framing his idols, praying to the lifeless stones; and God, of Whom none thought, where was He? These were men's ways. "And the Lord," he joins it on, as the complement and corrective of all this confusion, The Lord is in His holy temple, awaiting, in His long-suffering, to judge. The temple of God is where God enshrines Himself, or allows Himself to be seen and adored. "God is wholly every where, the whole of Him no where." There is no con-trast between His temple on earth, and His temple in hea-ven. He is not more locally present in heaven than in earth. It were as anthropomorphic but less pious to think of God, as confined, localised, in heaven as on earth; because it would be simply removing God away from man. Solomon knew, when he built the temple, that the heaven and heaven of heavens could not contain¹⁸ God. The holy temple, which could be destroyed¹⁹, towards which men were to pray²⁰, was the visible temple²¹, where were the symbols of God's Pre-sence, and of the atoning Sacrifice; but lest His presence should be localised, Solomon's repeated prayer is, ²² hear Thou in heaven Thy dwelling place; ²³ hear Thou in heaven. There is then no difference, as though in earlier books the "holy temple" meant that at Jerusalem, in the later, "the heavens." In the confession at the offering of the third year's tithes, the word only slightly varying from the first.

⁹ Is. xxix. 16.

¹⁰ Rnp.

¹¹ As in Ps. cxv. 5. 1 Cor. xii. 2. ¹² The meaning of חָזַק elsewhere. "Here it means 'surrounds,' for that which encircles a thing, is as if it held it on every side." Tanch.

¹³ Comp. Jer. x. 14 repeated li. 17.

¹⁴ As in the Hebraism of the N. T. οὐ δικαιωθήσεται πᾶσα σὰρξ Rom. iii. 20.

¹⁵ Is. xli. 23. Jer. x. 5.

¹⁶ Ps. vii. 7, xxxv. 23, xlv. 24. lix. 6, Is. li. 9. Del.

¹⁷ 1 Kgs. xviii. 26, 27.

¹⁸ 1 Kgs. viii. 27.

¹⁹ Ps. lxxix. 1.

²⁰ Ps. v. 7. cxxxviii. 2. Jon. ii. 4.

²¹ 1 Kgs. viii. 29, 30, 35, 38, 42, 44, 48. ²² Ib. 30, 39, 43, 49. ²³ Ib. 32, 34, 36, 45.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

CHAPTER III.

1 Habakkuk in his prayer trembleth at God's majesty. 17 The confidence of his faith.

^a Ps. 7, title.
|| Or, according

A PRAYER of Habakkuk the prophet
^a || upon Shigionoth.

to variable songs, or, tunes, called in Hebrew, Shigionoth.

prayer is, ¹ look down from Thy holy habitation, from heaven; and David says, ² the Lord is in His holy temple, the Lord's throne is in heaven; and, ³ He heard my voice out of His temple—He bowed the heavens also and came down; and, ⁴ In His temple doth every one say, Glory. The simple words are identical though not in the same order as those, in which David, in the same contrast with the oppression of man, ushers in the judgement and final retribution to good and bad, by declaring the unseen presence of God on His Throne in heaven, beholding and trying the sons of men.

In His Presence, all the mysteries of our being are solved. The Lord is in His holy Temple, not, as the idols in temples made with hands, but revealing Himself in the visible temple, “dwelling in the Son, by Nature and Union, as He saith, ⁶ The Father Who dwelleth in Me doeth the works; in each one of the bodies and souls of the Saints by His Spirit⁷, in the Blessed, in glory; in the Heavens, by the more evident appearance of His Majesty and the workings of His Power; “⁸ every where by Essence, Presence, and Power, for in Him we live, and move, and have our being; no where as confined or inclosed.” Since then God is in Heaven, beholding the deeds of men, Himself Unchangeable, Almighty, All-holy, let all the earth keep silence before Him, lit. hush before Him all the earth, waiting from Him in hushed stillness the issue of this tangled state of being. And to the hushed soul, hushed to itself and its own thoughts, hushed in awe of His Majesty and His Presence, before His face, God speaks⁹.

III. 1. *A prayer*¹⁰ of Habakkuk. The prayer of the prophet, in the strictest sense of the word, is contained in the words of verse 2. The rest is, in its form, praise and thanksgiving, chiefly for God's past mercies in the deliverance from Egypt and the entering into the promised land. But thanksgiving is an essential part of prayer, and Hannah is said to have prayed, whereas the hymn which followed is throughout one thanksgiving¹¹. In that also these former deliverances were images of things to come, of every deliverance afterwards, and, especially, of that complete Divine deliverance which our Lord Jesus Christ wrought for us from the power of Satan¹², the whole is one prayer. “Do, O Lord, as Thou hast done of old; forsake not Thine own works. Such were Thy deeds once; fulfil them now, all which they shadowed forth.” It is then a prayer for the manifestation of God's power, and therewith the destruction of His enemies, thenceforth to the Day of Judgement. “¹³ Having completed the discourse about Babylon,

2 O LORD, I have heard † thy speech, and was afraid: O LORD, || ^b revive thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

† Heb. thy report, or, thy hearing.
|| Or, preserve alive.
^b Ps. 85, 6.

and having fore-announced most clearly, that those who destroyed the holy city and carried Israel captive shall be severely punished, he passes suitably to the mystery of Christ, and from the redemption which took place partially in one nation, he carries on the discourse to that universal redemption, whereby the remnant of Israel, and no less the whole world has been saved.”

Upon Shigionoth. The title, Shiggaion, occurs but once besides¹⁴. Upon, in the titles of the Psalms, is used with the instrument¹⁵, the melody¹⁶, or the first words of the hymn, whose melody has been adopted¹⁷. The two first are mentioned by a Jewish Commentator¹⁸ with others, “in his delight,” or “his errors,” in the sense, that God will forgive them. This, which the versions and Jewish commentators mostly adopt, would be a good sense, but is hardly consistent with the Hebrew usage. Shiggaion of David, as a title of a Psalm, must necessarily describe the Psalm itself, as Midsmor of David, Michtam of David, Tephillah of David, Maschil of David. But Shiggaion, as a “great error,” is not a title: nor does it suit the character of the Psalm, which relates to calumny not to error. It probably, then, means a psalm with music expressive of strong emotion, “erratic” or “dithyrambic.” Habakkuk's title, on Shigionoth [plur.] then would mean upon, or (as we should say,) “set to” music of psalms of this sort¹⁹. The number “three” remarkably predominates in this psalm²⁰, yet so that long measures are succeeded by very short.

2. O Lord, I have heard i. e. with the inward ear of the heart, Thy speech, (rather as E. M. Thy report, i. e. the report of Thee²¹) i. e. what may be heard and known of God, or, what he had himself heard²². The word contains in one both that which God had lately declared to the Prophet, the judgements of God upon the wicked of the people, and upon those who, with their own injustice, wrought on them the righteous judgements of God, and that the work of the Lord would be wrought in His time for those who in patience wait for it; and also still more largely, what might be heard of God, although, as it were, but a little whisper of His greatness and of the Majesty of His workings.

And was afraid, not “fearful” but afraid in awe, as a creature, and amazed at the surpassing wonderfulness of the work of God. Well may man stand in awe “²³ at the Incarnation of the Only Begotten Son, how earth should contain Him uncontained by space, how a Body was prepared for Him of the Virgin by the Holy Ghost, and all the works

¹ De. xxvii. 15. ² Ps. xi. 4. ³ Ib. xviii. 6. 9. ⁴ Ib. xxix. 9. ⁵ S. Jer. ⁶ S. John xiv. 10. ⁷ 1 Cor. vi. 19. ⁸ Dion. ⁹ See S. Augustine's words to his mother before her death, Conf. ix. 10.

¹⁰ Tephilloth is a title of the collection of David's Psalms ending with Ps. lxxii. (Ib. ver. 20.) Three of David's Psalms are entitled Tephillah, Ps. xvii. lxxxvi. cxlii. Moses' Psalm xc., and anonymous cii. ¹¹ מְהִלָּה 1 Sam. ii. 1. ¹² 1 Cor. x. 11.

¹³ S. Cyr. ¹⁴ Ps. vii. ¹⁵ on Neginoth, Ps. iv. vi. lv. Nehiloth, Ps. v. Gittith, Ps. viii. Shoshannim, Ps. xlv. Mahalath, Ps. liii. ¹⁶ on Sheminith, Ps. vi. Alamoth Ps. xlv. ¹⁷ Perhaps “upon Muthlabben,” Ps. ix. “on Alicloth Shabar,” Ps. xxii. “on Yonath-clem-rekokim,” Ps. lvi. ¹⁸ R. Tanchum.

¹⁹ Since שָׁגָה “erred” is common to Hebrew and Aramaic, it is improbable that שִׁגְיוֹן should be i. q. Syr. שִׁיחָא a “hymn of praise,” from שָׁחַ, besides that the Heb. שִׁגְיוֹן does not interchange with Syr. שִׁיחָא. ²⁰ Ver. 6 has 15 words, in five combinations of three words; vv. 3 and 10 have 12 words, in four 3s: vv. 4, 9, 19. have 9 words in three 3s: vv. 5, 12, 15 and 18 have 6 words in two 3s: ver. 17 is divided into 433133; ver. 8 is 33332; ver. 11 is 433; ver. 16 is 3332223. This forces itself on every reader. Del. quotes the Meor Enaim, i. 60, “The prayer of Habakkuk goeth on threes.”

²¹ Except in the one phrase שָׁמַע אָזְנוֹ “hearing of ear” (Job xlii. 5. Ps. xviii. 45.) the personal gen. after שָׁמַע is that of the object, “the report of Jacob,” Gen. xxix. 13. “of Solomon,” 1 Kgs. x. 1. 2 Chron. ix. 1. “of Tyre,” Is. xxiii. 5. with the affix שָׁמַעְתָּ the report of thee, Nu. xiv. 15. De. ii. 25. Nah. iii. 19. שָׁמַעְתָּ the report of her [wisdom] Job xxviii. 22. שָׁמַעְתָּ the report of Me [God], Is. lxvi. 19. שָׁמַעְתָּ the report of them, Jer. xxxvii. 5. l. 43. ²² as שָׁמַעְתָּ Ob. 1, and thence Jer. xlix. 14. See on Hosea vii. 12.

²³ Theoph. from S. Cyr.

whereby He shall work the salvation of mankind, the Cross, the Death, Resurrection and Ascension, uniting things opposite, a Body with One incorporeal, Death with Life, Resurrection with Death, a Body in Heaven. All is full of wonder and awe." "This is not a servile fear, but a holy fear which endureth for ever, not one which love casteth out, but which it bringeth in, wherein angels praise, dominions adore, powers stand in awe at the Majesty of the Eternal God."

O Lord, revive Thy work. God's Word seems, often, as it were, dead and *come utterly to an end for evermore*², while it is holding on its own course, as all nature seems dead for a while, but all is laid up in store, and ready to shoot forth, as by a sort of resurrection. "The Prophet prophesying prayeth, that it should come quickly, and praying prophesieth that it shall so come." All God's dealings with His people, His Church, each single soul, are part of one great work, perfect in itself³; glory and majesty⁴; all which the godly meditateth on⁵; which those busied with their own plans, do not look to⁶; it is manifested in great doings for them or with them, as in the Exodus the Psalmist says, 1 We have heard with our ears, yea, our fathers have told us what work Thou didst in their days, in the times of old; 8 They proved Me and saw My work; with it He makes His own glad⁹; after it has been withdrawn for a while, *He sheweth it to His servants*¹⁰; it issues in judgements on the ungodly, which men consider and declare¹¹.

The great work of God on earth, which includes all His works and is the end of all, is the salvation of man through Jesus Christ. This great work seemed, as it were, asleep, or dead, as trees in winter, all through those 4000 years, which gave no token of His Coming. Included in this great work is the special work of the Hand of God, of which alone it is said, *God said, Let Us make man in Our Image after Our Likeness*¹²; and, *we are the clay and Thou our Potter, and we are all the work of Thy Hands*¹³; and *Thy Hands have made me and fashioned me together round about*¹⁴,—man; whom, being dead as to the life of the soul through the malice of Satan, Christ revived by dying and rising again. He was dead in trespasses and sins, and like a carcase putrefying in them, and this whole world one great charnel-house, through man's manifold corruptions, when Christ came to awaken the dead, and they who heard lived¹⁵.

Again, the Centre of this work, the special Work of God, that wherein He made all things new, is the Human Body of our Lord, the Temple which was destroyed by Death, and within three days raised up.

The answer to Habakkuk's enquiry, How long? had two sides. It had given assurance as to the end. The trial-time would not be prolonged for one moment longer than the counsel of God had foredetermined. The relief would come, come; it would not be behindhand. But meantime? There was no comfort to be given. For God knew that deepening sin was drawing on deepening chastisement. But in that He was silent as to the intervening time and pointed to patient expectation of a lingering future, as their only comfort, He implies that the immediate future was heavy. Habakkuk then renews his prayer for the years which had to intervene and to pass away. In the midst of the years, before that *time appointed*¹⁶, when His promise should have its full fulfilment, before those years should come to their close, he prays; revive Thy work. The years include all the long period of waiting for our Lord's first Coming before He came in the Flesh; and now for His second Coming and the restitution of all things. In this long period, at times God seems to be absent, as when our Lord was asleep in the boat, while the tempest was raging; at times He bids the storm to cease and there is a great calm. This, in those long intervals, when God seems to be absent, and to leave all things to time and chance, and love waxes cold, and graces seem rare, is the prayer of Habakkuk, of Prophets and Psalmists, of the Church, 17 Return, we beseech Thee, O God of hosts, look down from heaven, behold and visit this vine. 18 O God, why hast Thou cast us off for ever? Why withdrawest Thou Thy hand, Thy right hand? For God is my king of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth. 19 Awake, awake, put on strength, Thou Arm of the Lord; awake, as in the ancient days, in the generations of old. Art thou not It which did smite Rahab, didst wound the dragon? Art thou not It which didst dry the sea, the waters of the great deep, which didst make the depths of the sea a way for the ransomed to pass over? 20 Stir up Thy might and come, save us. 21 Renew our days, as of old. So our Lord taught His Church to pray continually, whenever she prayed, Thy kingdom come, longing not for His final Coming only, but for the increase of His glory, and the greater dominion of His grace, and His enthronement in the hearts of men, even before its complete and final Coming. In the midst of the years revive Thy work, is the Church's continual cry.

In the midst of the years make known, lit. Thou wilt make known: in wrath Thou wilt remember mercy; and so (as we use the word wilt) the Prophet, at once, foretelleth, expresseth his faith, prayeth. God had made known His work and His power in the days of old. In times of trouble He seems like a God who hideth Himself. Now, he prays Him to shine forth and help; make known Thy work, before Thou fulfil it, to revive the drooping hopes of man, and that all may see that Thy word is truth. Make Thyself known in Thy work, that, when the time cometh to 22 make an end of sin by the Death of Thy Son, Thy Aweful Holiness, and the love wherewith Thou hast 23 so loved the world, may be the more known and adored.

In wrath Thou wilt remember mercy. So David prayed, 24 Remember Thy tender mercies and Thy loving-kindnesses; for they are from old. Thou wilt remember that counsel for man's redemption which has been from the foundation of the world: for we seem in our own minds to be forgotten of God, when He delayeth to help us. God remembereth mercy²⁵ in anger, in that in this life He never chastens without purposes of mercy, and His Mercy ever softeneth His judgements. His Promise of mercy, that the Seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head, went before the sentence of displeasure, 26 Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return. 27 He reveals His wrath that He may scare us from sin and so may not inflict it; and when at last He inflicteth it, He hath mercy on the remnant who flee to His Mercy, that we be not like Sodom and Gomorrah. 28 While we were yet sinners, and God was wroth, Christ died for us, and 29 He saved us, not for works which we had done, but out of His great Mercy, and took away sin, and restored us to life and incorruption.

¹ Rup. ² Ps. lxxviii. 8. ³ De. xxxii. 4. ⁴ Ps. cxl. 3. ⁵ Ib. lxxvii. 3. cxliii. 35. ⁶ Is. v. 12. ⁷ Ps. xlv. 2. חַסְדֵּךְ בְּיָדְךָ ⁸ Ps. xcv. 9. ⁹ Ib. xcii. 3. ¹⁰ Ib. xc. 6. ¹¹ Ib. lxiv. 10. In all these cases sing. חַסְדֵּךְ. ¹² Gen. i. 26. ¹³ Is. lxiv. 8. ¹⁴ Job x. 8.

¹⁵ S. John v. 25. ¹⁶ חַסְדֵּךְ ¹⁷ Ps. lxxx. 14. ¹⁸ Ib. lxxiv. 1, 11, 12. ¹⁹ Is. li. 9, 10. ²⁰ Ps. lxxx. 3. ²¹ Lam. v. 21. ²² Dan. ix. 24. ²³ S. John iii. 16. ²⁴ Ps. xxv. 6. ²⁵ S. Luke i. 54, 72. ²⁶ Gen. iii. 19. ²⁷ S. Jer. ²⁸ Rom. v. 8. ²⁹ Tit. iii. 5.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626. 3 God came from || Teman, ° and the
|| Or, the south. ° Deut. 33. 2. Judg. 5. 4. Ps. 68. 7.

Holy One from mount Paran. Selah. His
Before CHRIST
cir. 626.

God had already promised by Micah, ¹ According to the days of thy coming out of the land of Egypt, I will show him marvellous things. Isaiah had often used the great events of that deliverance as the symbols of the future. So now Habakkuk, in one vast panorama, as it were, without distinction of time or series of events, exhibits the future in pictures of the past. In the description itself which follows, he now speaks in the past, now in the future; of which times the future might be a vivid present; and the past a prophetic past. As a key to the whole, he says, God shall come, indicating that all which follows, however spoken, was a part of that future. In no other way was it an answer to that prayer, Revive Thy work. To foretell future deliverances in plain words, had been a comfort; it would have promised a continuance of that work. The unity and revival of the work is expressed, in that the past is made, as it was, the image of the future. That future was to be wondrous, superhuman; else the past miracles had been no image of it. It was to be no mere repetition of the future; and to mark this, the images are exhibited out of their historical order.

3. God came (lit. shall come) from Teman. God shall come, as He came of old, clothed with majesty and power; but it was not mere power. The centre of the whole picture is, as Micah and Isaiah had prophesied that it was to be, a new revelation; ² The law shall go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. ³ I will give Thee for a covenant to the people [Israel], for a light of the Gentiles. So now, speaking of the new work in store, Habakkuk renews the imagery in the Song of Moses⁴, in Deborah's Song⁵, and in David⁶; but there the manifestation of His glory is spoken of wholly in time past, and Mount Sinai is named. Habakkuk speaks of that coming as yet to be, and omits the express mention of Mount Sinai, which was the emblem of the law⁷. And so he directs us to another Lawgiver, Whom God should raise up like unto Moses, yet with a law of life, and tells how He Who spake the law, God, shall come in likeness of our flesh.

And the Holy One from Mount Paran. In the earliest passage three places are mentioned, in which or from which the glory of God was manifested; with this difference however, that it is said, ⁸ The Lord came from Sinai, but His glory arose, as we should say *dawned*⁹ unto them from Seir, and *flashed forth*¹⁰ from Mount Paran¹¹. Seir and Mount Paran are joined together by the symbol of the light which dawned or shone forth from them. In the second passage, the Song of Deborah, Seir and the field of Edom are the place whence God came forth; *Sinai melted*¹² at His presence. In the 68th Psalm the mention of Edom is dropped; and the march through the wilderness under the leading of God, is alone mentioned, together with the shaking of Sinai. In Habakkuk, the contrast is the same as in Moses; only Teman stands in place of *Seir*¹³. Teman and Mount Paran are named probably, as the two opposed boundaries of the journeyings of Israel through the desert. They came to Mount Sinai through the valley, now called Wady Feiran¹⁴ or Paran; Edom was the bound of their wanderings to their promised land¹⁵. God Who guided, fed, protected them from the beginning, led them to the end. Between Paran also and Edom or Teman was the gift of the Spirit to the seventy, which was the shadow of the day of Pentecost; there, was the brazen serpent lifted up, the picture of the healing of the Cross¹⁶. If Mount Paran be near Kadesh, then Moses in the opening of his song describes the glory of God as manifested from that first revelation of His law on Mount Sinai; then in that long period of Israel's waiting there to its final departure for the promised land, when Mount Hor was consecrated and God's awful Holiness declared in the death of Aaron.

He Who shall come, is God¹⁷, the Holy One (a proper Name of God¹⁸). Perfect in Holiness, as God, the Son of God, and as Man also all-holy, with a human will, always exactly accompanying the Divine Will, which was

“the passion of His Heart
Those Three-and-thirty years.”

¹ Mic. vii. 15. ² Is. ii. 3. Mic. iv. 2. ³ Is. xlii. 5.
⁴ Deut. xxxiii. 2. ⁵ Jud. v. 5. ⁶ Ps. lxxviii. 7.
⁷ S. Cyr. ⁸ Deut. xxxiii. 2. ⁹ מן is used in prose too, of the rising sun (with Gen. xxxiii. 32, Ex. xxxii. 3, Jud. ix. 33, 2 Sam. xxiii. 4, 2 Kgs. iii. 22, Jon. iv. 8).
¹⁰ מן is used of the light of the sun Job iii. 4, x. 22; of the manifestation of God apart from any physical emblem Ps. i. 2, lxxx. 2, xciv. 1; and of God, favouring the counsel of the wicked, Job x. 3. ¹¹ Mount Paran is only mentioned in Deuteronomy and Habakkuk, and was probably taken by Habakkuk from Moses, who himself knew it. The wilderness of Paran must have lain W. or S. of the wilderness of Zin, which formed the Southern border of Judah (Nu. xiii. 21. Josh. xv. 1.). The history of Ishmael implies that part of it lay towards Egypt (Gen. xii. 21.); that of Hadad the Edomite, shews that it lay between Midian and Egypt (1 Kgs. xi. 18); but there being, (as far as it is ascertained), no natural boundary between it and the wilderness of Zin, the name Paran is apparently used in a wider sense as comprehending the desert of Zin, whence Kadesh is placed both in Paran (Nu. xiii. 26.) and more commonly in Zin (Nu. xx. 1, xxvii. 14, xxxiii. 36, 37, xxxiv. 4, Josh. xv. 3.), and the wilderness near it is also called the wilderness of Kadesh (Ps. xxix. 8.). The name of the wilderness of Zin does not occur after Joshua; and that of Paran may have extended over the whole desert cretaceous plateau up to the borders of Edom, now called Badiet-et-Tih, the “wilderness of the wanderings,” whose Western extremity lies North of the crescent-shaped Jebel-et-Tih, which separates it from the lower part of the peninsula. (See Map in Sinaitic survey.) Hence Nabal is related to have fed his flocks in Paran (1 Sam. xxv. 5.) and Eil-paran “the terebinth of Paran,” (Gen. xiv. 6.) by the wilderness, the bound of the inroad of Chedorlaomer, may have had its name from the wilderness. Mount Paran might be anywhere connected with this wilderness on the West. “Mount Serbal is perhaps the most striking mountain in the peninsula; it rises abruptly to a height of more than 4000 feet above the valleys at its base, and its summit, a sharp ridge about three miles long, is broken into a series of peaks varying little in altitude, but rivalling each other in the beauty and grandeur of their outline. It is three miles from Wady Feiran;” “in one or two points from which its highest peak is visible.” Ordnance Survey of Peninsula of Sinai pp. 143, 144. “When seen from a distance Serbal presents a boldness of outline and an appearance of massive isolation which entitled it to rank as one of the grandest and most distinctive features of the peninsula.” (Palmer's desert of the Exodus p. 169.) What is now called Jebel Feiran is too low to be taken into account. It is but an eminence, rising on one side 810 feet above the Wady Feiran; on the other side, 795 feet, and above the sea 2800; so that in the same neighbourhood Mount Serbal is above twice its height, 6443 feet above the sea at its highest peak. (Sinaitic Survey, Mount Serbal, sections.) This mountain has this advantage, that it is connected with Wady Feiran or Paran, through which Moses led Israel to Mount Sinai. The name is remarkable, as having been given by Israel, since it has a Hebrew etymology, “the beautiful” or “the leafy,” and all travellers praise the richness of the valley, even amid the decay of fertility consequent on neglect. It has no Arabic etymology. (See Palmer, l. c. p. 20.) S. Jerome says, from his Hebrew teacher apparently, “Paran is a place near to Mount Sinai.” ad loc.

The striking mountain of Edom had its own name Hor, which in the eleven places in which it is named in the Pentateuch is always called הר הור “Hor, the mountain.” Nu. xx. 22, 23, 25, 27, xxi. 4, xxxii. 37, 38, 41, xxxiv. 7, 8. De. xxxii. 19. Prof. Palmer having shewn Ain Gadis to be Kadesh (l. c. c. iv. p. 373. sqq.) says, “To one encamped in the wilderness of Kadesh, i. e. in the open plain into which Wady Gadis debouches, Jebel Magrah would be always the most conspicuous object in the scene.” (Ib. p. 510.) This is a plateau, 70 miles long and 40–50 miles broad, “projecting into the Tih, much as the Tih projects into Sinai.” Ib. p. 288, 9.

¹² Jud. v. 4, 5. ¹³ As it stands connected with Edom, Ob. 9. Jer. lix. 7, 20, 21. with Dedan also, Jer. xlix. 8, Ezek. xxv. 13. ¹⁴ Sinaitic Survey c. 5. 149–155.

¹⁵ Nu. xx. 14–20. Deut. ii. ¹⁶ Rib. ¹⁷ The sing. מן occurs 41 times in the book of Job; else only 16 times in all the O. T., and 8 times only of the true God, (twice in Moses' song Deut. xxxii. 15, 17; in a Psalm of David, Ps. cxxxix. 19, of Asaph, l. 22, Anan. Ps. cxiv. 7; in Proverbs xxx. 5, here, and in Nehemiah's prayer, (in which there are so many reminiscences from the Pentateuch. See in “Daniel the Prophet” pp. 356, 357.) Else it is used of the Godhead (Who is God except &c. in David Ps. xviii. 32, is there any God besides Me? Is. xlii. 8); “any God” including the true God Dan. xi. 3. And five times it is used of a false god; in Hab. i. 11; three times in Dan. xi. 38, 39; and by Sennacherib 2 Chr. xxxii. 15. There is then no basis of induction as to its occurring in later Hebrew and poetic books; since its use is mostly a peculiarity of the book of Job, the other 16 cases are sporadic and in no one sense.

¹⁸ Whence in the Hebrew, though the subject, it has no article, as in Is. xl. 25, and Job vi. 11.

Before
CHRIST glory covered the heavens, and the earth
cir. 626. was full of his praise.

On this there follows a pause denoted by *Selah*¹, (which occurs thrice according to the mystery of that number,) that the soul may dwell on the greatness of the majesty and mercy of God.

Selah. There is no doubt as to the general purport of the word, that it is a musical direction, that there should be a pause, the music probably continuing alone, while the mind rested on the thought, which had just been presented to it; our "interlude²." It is always placed at some pause of thought, even when not at the end of a strophe, or, as twice in this hymn³, at the end of the verse. S. Gregory of Nyssa modifies this thought, supposing "Selah" to express a pause made by the writer, that "⁴while the psalmody, with which David's prophesying was accompanied, went on in its course, another illumining of the Holy Spirit, and an addition to the gift according to knowledge, came for the benefit of those who received the prophecy, he, holding in his verse, gave time for his mind to receive the knowledge of the thought, which took place in him from the Divine illumining." He defines it to be "a sudden silence in the midst of the Psalmody for the reception of the illumining."

His Glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of His praise. This is plainly no created glory, but anticipates the Angelic Hymn, ⁵*Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will toward men*, or, as the Seraphim sing first, glory to God in Heaven, ⁶*Holy Holy Holy is the Lord God of Sabaoth*, and then, the whole earth is full of His glory; and Uncreated Wisdom saith, ⁷*I alone compassed the circuit of Heaven, and walked in the bottom of the deep*. Nor are they our material heavens, much less this lowest heaven over our earth, nor is His glory any lightning at Mount Sinai, but the boundless Majesty⁸ of God, which rules, encompasses, fills, penetrates the orbs of heaven and all its inhabitants, and yet is not enclosed nor bounded thereby. Those who are made as the heavens by the indwelling of God He spiritually covers, filling⁹ them with the light of glory and splendour of grace and brightness of wisdom, as it saith, *Is there any number of His armies, and upon whom doth not His light arise*¹⁰? and so the earth was full of His praise, i. e. the Church militant spread throughout the world, as in the Psalm, ¹¹*The Lord's name is praised from the rising up of the sun unto the going down of the same*, and, ¹²*O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is Thy name in all the earth, Who hast set Thy glory above the heavens*.

4. And His Brightness, that wherein God dwelleth, ¹³ the

¹ It occurs here only besides the Psalms. It occurs thrice in Ps. iii. xxxii. lxxi. lxviii.

² διδυχαλμα in Lxx. Theod. Symm. Syr. ³ In Ps. lv. 20. lvii. 4. Hab. iii. 3, 9, alone, it is not at the end of the verse. Eight Psalms only, out of 39 Psalms which have it, have not the title "For the chief musician," Ps. 32, 48, 56, 82, 83, 87, 89, 143. 5 of these are כְּסֹפֶר; 2, כְּסִידִי (32 and 89), one without any inscription (48). The most probable etymology seems to be סֶלָה, = סָלַל and so our "alto;" whether the ה be added to לָל or it be an imperative with paragogic ה like אֶשְׁרָה Ps. cxix. 117, נִשְׁחָקָה Is. xli. 23, although there is no extant instance of this imperative. There is equally no instance of the form from סָלַל (as Ewald Ps. i. 179, Lehrb. §. 216. c. p. 544) since הָיָה 1 Kgs. ii. 40, is only a Var. Read. for the received הָיָה which is borne out by הָיָה Jos. xix. 13. ⁴ Tract 2 in Ps. Inscr. &c. T. i. p. 329.

⁵ S. Luke ii. 14. ⁶ Is. vi. 3. ⁷ Ecclus. xxiv. 5. ⁸ הָאֵל is used of the Divine Majesty Job xxxvii. 22. Ps. viii. 2. xx. 30. with הָאֵל Ps. xcvi. 6, (1 Chr. xvi. 27,) civ. 1, cxi. 3, cxlv. 5, cxlviii. 11; ironically to man, as impossible for him, Job xl. 10. It is used as imparted to the Messiah Ps. xxi. 6, or being in Him, Ps. xlv. 4. ⁹ Dion. ¹⁰ Job xxv. 3. ¹¹ Ps. cxii. 3. ¹² Ib. viii. 1. ¹³ Ezek. x. 4. ¹⁴ Ps. xviii. 12. ¹⁵ Ex. xix. 9, 16. xx. 21. ¹⁶ Ib. xxiv. 10. ¹⁷ S. John i. 14. ¹⁸ Is. ix. 2. ¹⁹ Theoph. ²⁰ Rup. ²¹ Heb. i. 3. ²² Wisd. vii. 25. ²³ Nicene Creed. ²⁴ S. John i. 9. ²⁵ Ib. xvii. 5. ²⁶ S. Jer. Dion. ²⁷ Ex. xxxiv. 20. 30. 35. which is compared by Kim. Rashi, A. E. Abulw. Abarb.

4 And his brightness was as the light; Before he had || horns coming out of his hand: CHRIST
cir. 626.
|| Or, bright beams out of his side.

brightness of the Lord's glory, before which darkness fleeth¹⁴, was as the light, or as the sun. Out of the midst of the darkness, wherewith God, as it were, ¹⁵hid Himself, the Brightness of the inapproachable Light wherein He dwelleth, gleams forth¹⁶, bright as the brightest light gathered into one, which man knows of and whereon he cannot gaze. So amid the darkness of the humiliation of His Presence in the flesh, ¹⁷*we beheld His Glory, the Glory as of the Only-Begotten of the Father*; and ¹⁸*the people that walked in darkness see a great light*, "not dim¹⁹ nor weak, nor shadowed, like that of Moses, but pure unimaginable light of the knowledge of God." The Brightness too of His Flesh was like the light of the Godhead on Mount Tabor; for the Godhead flashed through. ²⁰As often as He did His marvellous works, He put forth His Brightness (tempered for His creatures, since they could not approach the depth of His light, yet) as light to enlighten men to know Him. Yet the Brightness issues from the Light, co-existing with it, and in it, while issuing from it. And so the words aptly express, how He Who is the ²¹*Brightness of the Father's Glory and the express Image of His Person*, the ²²*Brightness of the Eternal Light, the unspotted mirror of the Power of God, and the Image of His Goodness*, is as the Light from Whom He is, ²³*Light of Light*, Equal to the Father by Whom He was Begotten; as S. John says, ²⁴*That was the true Light, which lighteneth every man that cometh into the world*. As He prayeth, ²⁵*Glorify Thou Me with Thine Own Self with the Glory Which I had with Thee before the world was*.

He had horns coming out of His Hand. ²⁶Horns are everywhere in Holy Scripture the emblem of strength." It may be, that here "rays" are likened to horns, as the face of Moses is said, with the same image, to have "sent forth rays²⁷" after he had long been in the presence of God. So it may be a mingled image of the Glory and might; Light, which was also might. But "horns," though they may be a symbol of "light," are not of "lightning;" and the Hand of God is used as an emblem of His Power, His protection, His bounty, His constraining force on His prophets. It is nowhere used of the side or sides²⁸. We have two images combined here; "horns," which in every other place in which they are used as a metaphor, is an emblem of power; and "from the hand of" which, wherever it is used of a person, means that the thing spoken of had been in his hand or power really or virtually²⁹. Both then combine in the meaning that the might came forth from the directing agency of God Who wielded it.

Tanch. Abendana. This is illustrated further by the use of "horns" as a hieroglyphic for the sun, Champollion Grammar p. 359. in Ges. and קֶרְנוֹת "horns" of the sun, Buxt. (not in Levy). The title of Ps. xxii. עַל אֵלֶּיךָ הִשְׁתַּחֲוִי "according to the hind of the morning," may bear upon it, since אֵלֶּיךָ הִשְׁתַּחֲוִי in the Jerus. Talm. (originally quoted by Lightfoot, Horæ Hebr. on S. Mark xvi. 2) is used of the first rays of light, which usher in the dawn, the rays appearing solid like horns. In Arab. قֶרְנוֹת is a name of the sun, though Arab. authorities differ about its use, and עֹשֶׂת אֵלֶּיךָ is the "sun at the time called אֵלֶּיךָ," some part of the clear day. And Hariri uses "the horn of the gazelle." קֶרְנוֹת אֵלֶּיךָ (as explained by De Sacy) of those same first rays. But Kim. gives as the meanings of הַשֶּׁם hind (literally) or day-star, or sunrise.

²⁸ As even Del. and Keil. יָד is used of the side of the river Ex. ii. 5, and with the prepositions אֶל, לָ, בֵּין, עַד, (See Ges.) but with כֵּן, once only from the side of the country Nu. xxiv. 4; on which, see note 29. end.

²⁹ כֵּן occurs in the O. T. with the gen. of the noun or pronoun, 197 times; in the plural 5 times. Of these, the greatest number are with verbs of delivering, הִצִּיל, 71; רִשַׁע, 18; re-deem, פִּדָה, 3; נָצַל, 3; brought forth, הוֹצִיא, 1; rescued, שָׁפַט, 1; guard, שָׁמַר, 2; escape, בָּלַם, 3; פָּלַם, 1; flee, בָּרוּחַ, 1; לקח, took by force, 11; took, received, 22; took unawares from, נָוַל, 2; receive and offer, הִקְרִיב, 1; consecrate from, הִקְדִּישׁ, 1; sprinkled (blood), הִזָּק, 2; bought, קָנָה, 7;

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

and there was the hiding of his power.

5^d Before him went the pestilence, and ^d Nah. 1. 3.

When then did light or might, which lay, as it were, before in the Hand of God, go forth from it? For the Hund of God is always symbolic of His might, whether put forth, or for the time laid up in it. The form of the words remarkably corresponds to those of Moses, in the preface to the blessing on the tribes, which Habakkuk had in mind, ¹ From His right hand was a fiery law for them, and S. Paul says that the glory of Moses' face which he received from the Presence of God, was a symbol of the glory of the law: ² The ministration of death written and engraven on stone was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance. The law, being given by God, had a majesty of its own. The Psalms bear witness to its power in converting, enwisening, rejoicing, enlightening the soul³. They in whose heart it was, none of their steps slid⁴. The whole 119th Psalm is one varied testimony of its greatness and its power. It was a guide on the way; it was a schoolmaster unto Christ⁵, by Whom it was fulfilled. But itself bare witness of the greater glory which should come forth from the Hand of God. ⁶ If that which is done away were glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious. ⁷ The horn signifieth power, when it is spoken of God the Father exhibiting to us God the Son: ⁸ He hath raised up a horn of salvation for us, and again, ⁹ His horn shall be exalted in honour. For all things which were marvellously done were glorious. The Only-Begotten came then in our form, and, in regard to the Flesh and the Manhood, enduring the appearance of our weakness, but, as God, invisible in might and easily subduing whom He willed.

And what has been the weapon of His warfare, whereby He has subdued the might of Satan and the hearts of men, but the horns of His Cross, whereto His Sacred Hands were once fastened by the sharp nails, where was the hiding of His Power, when His Almightyness lay hid in His Passion¹⁰, and He was ¹¹ a worm and no man; a reproach of men and the despised of the people? Now it is the Sceptre laid upon His Shoulder¹², the ensign and trophy of His rule, the Rod of His Strength¹³, terrible to devils, salvation to man. In it lay His might, although concealed, as He said, ¹⁴ I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me. His Might was lodged there, although hidden. It was the hiding-place of His power. The Cross was ¹⁵ to the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ Crucified was the Power of God and the Wisdom of God. Through the Cross was ¹⁶ all power given to Him both in Heaven and earth. ¹⁷ There was given Him dominion and glory and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve Him. From Him shall go forth all power in earth; by His accept, רצה, 2; give, נתן, 1; collect, אסף, 1; eat from, אכל, 1; ברה, 2; drank, שחח, 1; seek, בקש, 7; require of, דרש, 5; judged and avenged, שפט, 3; avenged, נקם, 1; rend, קרע, 3; cause to fall from, דפיל, 2; strike from, הכה, 2; cut off from, הכריח, 1; בנור, 1; cast, שלך, 1; reproach from, חרפה, 1; by writing from, בכתיב, 1; letters from, אותה, 1; officers appointed by, פקידים, 1. strengthened from the hands of God, 1. The verb was, היה, is expressed once; it lies in the sentence thrice; once only it means from the side of a country, Nu. xxiv. 4. in which there can be no ambiguity.

¹ Deut. xxxiii. 2. ² 2 Cor. iii. 7. ³ Ps. xix. 8. ⁴ Ib. xxxvii. 31. ⁵ Gal. iii. 24. ⁶ 2 Cor. iii. 11. ⁷ S. Cyr. ⁸ S. Luke ii. 69. ⁹ Ps. cxi. 9. ¹⁰ Is. liii. 3. ¹¹ Ps. xxii. 6. ¹² Is. ix. 6. ¹³ S. John xii. 32. ¹⁴ Ps. cx. 2. "The words, Horns are in His Hands, shew the insignia of His kingdom, by which horns, pushing and thrusting the invisible and opposing powers, He drove them away." Euseb. Dem. Evang. vi. 15. Add S. Cyprian Test. ad Quirin. ii. 21. p. 57. Oxf. Tr. "The horns in His Hands, what are they, but the trophy of the Cross?" S. Aug. de Civ. Dei xviii. 32. ¹⁵ 1 Cor. i. 23, 24. ¹⁶ S. Matt. xxviii. 18. ¹⁷ Dan. vii. 14.

|| burning coals went forth at his feet.

6 He stood and measured the earth: he

|| Or, burning diseases, Deut. 32. 24.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

• Ps. 18. 8.

Hands shall be given the vacant thrones in Heaven, as He saith, ¹⁸ To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with My Father in His Throne. There too was the hiding of His Power, in that there, in His Cross, is our shelter¹⁹, and in His pierced Side our hiding-place, where we may take refuge from Satan and our sins; for therein is Power. ²⁰ Neither shall any pluck them out of My Hand. Light and darkness ever meet in God. His inapproachable light is darkness to eyes which would gaze on it. ²¹ He covereth Himself with Light as with a garment. His light is the very veil which hideth Him. His Light is darkness to those who pry into Him and His Nature; His darkness is light to those who by faith behold Him. He emptied Himself²² and hid Himself; He hid the power of His Godhead in the weakness of the Manhood, and so ²³ He Who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the Face of Jesus Christ. ²⁴ In the Cross was for a while His might hidden, when He said to His Father, ²⁵ My soul is exceeding sorrowful even unto death, and, Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me, and on the Cross itself, ²⁶ Father, into Thy Hands I commend My Spirit.

5. Before Him went [goeth] the pestilence; then to consume His enemies. ²⁷ I will send My fear before thee, and will destroy all the people, to whom thou shalt come, and the lightnings are a token that ²⁸ they which hate Him, flee before Him, and the wicked perish at the Presence of God. So, on His Ascension, Herod and Pilate were smitten by Him, and Elymas and Simon Magus before His Apostles, and whatsoever hath lifted itself up against Him hath perished, and Antichrist shall perish ²⁹ at the breath of His mouth, and all the ungodly in the Day of Judgement.

And burning coals (rather, as E. M., burning fever³⁰) went forth at His Feet, i.e., followed Him. Messengers of death went as it were before Him, as the front of His army, and the rear thereof was other forms of death³¹. Death and destruction of all sorts are a great army at His command, going before Him as heralds of His Coming, (such as are judgements in this world) or attendants upon Him, at the Judgement when He appeareth³² in His Kingdom, when ³³ they shall gather out of His Kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity, and shall cast them into a furnace of fire.

6. He stood³⁴, and measured³⁵ the earth. Joshua, after he had conquered the land, meted it out and divided it among the people. He Who should come, should measure out the earth in its length and breadth, that earth which His glory filleth. He stood, as S. Stephen saw Him, ³⁶ standing at the ¹⁸ Rev. iii. 21. ¹⁹ As in the proper names, Ezr. ii. 61. Habaiah "whom God hideth i. e., protecteth;" Yehubbah "hidden, protected." 1 Chron. vii. 34. Comp. Is. xxvi. 20. ²⁰ S. John x. 28. ²¹ Ps. civ. 3. ²² Phil. ii. 8.

²³ 2 Cor. iv. 6. ²⁴ S. Jer. ²⁵ S. Matt. xxvi. 38, 39. ²⁶ S. Luke xxiii. 13. ²⁷ Ex. xxiii. 27. ²⁸ Ps. lxxviii. 1. 2. ²⁹ 1b. xi. 4. ³⁰ De. xxxii. 2. (where also it is sing., as only besides in רָחַק Job v. 7.) So A. E. "Burning coals" is from Kim. Tanch. gives as different opinions "sparks" or "arrows" or "pestilence;" but the meanings "sparks, arrows," are ascribed only to the plur. Ps. lxxvi. 4. lxxxviii. 48. Cant. viii. 6. The central meaning is probably "burning heat." ³¹ "Before Him is sent the angel of death and His word goeth forth, a flame of fire." Jon. ³² 2 Tim. vi. 1.

³³ S. Matt. xiii. 41, 42. ³⁴ It is "a metaphor of his giving victory to Israel." Tanch. ³⁵ So Kim. A. E. Rashi. Tanch. Vulg. It is borne out by Hithpo. "extended himself," 1 Kgs xvii. 21. By an interchange of dentals מָד might be = מָד, and so Ch. LXX. but in no other case do the two forms coexist in Hebrew. ³⁶ Acts vii. 56.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.
beheld, and drove asunder the nations;
and the everlasting mountains were scattered, the perpetual hills did bow: his ways are everlasting.

¹ Nah. 1. 5.

² Gen. 49. 26.

Right Hand of God; and Isaiah saith, ¹ The Lord standeth up to plead, and standeth to judge the people. He had not need to go forth, but, in the abode of His glory, He stood and beheld and with His Eye measured the earth, as His own, whereas, before the Cross, it lay under ² the Prince of this world, and he had said, ³ it is delivered unto me, and unto whomsoever I will, I give it. He measureth it, and gave it to His Apostles, ⁴ All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth. Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature, and, ⁵ their sound is gone out into all lands, and their words into the ends of the world. He measureth it also, surveying and weighing all who dwell therein, their persons, qualities, deeds, good or bad, to requite them, as Judge of quick and dead; as David cast down Moab and measured them with a line, ⁶ to put to death and to keep alive.

*He beheld, and drove asunder the nations, or, made the nations to tremble*⁷. When Israel came out of Egypt and God divided the Red sea before them, they sang, ⁸ The people shall hear and be afraid; terror shall take hold of the inhabitants of Palestina; the mighty men of Moab, trembling shall take hold of them; all the inhabitants of Canaan shall melt away; fear and dread shall fall on them; by the greatness of Thy power they shall be still as a stone. Fear and awe were to be renewed. All nearness of God brings terror to sinful man. When the news came through the wise men, that they had ⁹ seen in the East the star of Him Who was born, King of the Jews, not Herod the King only was troubled, but all Jerusalem with him. Pilate ¹⁰ was afraid when he condemned Him: the High Priests wondered whereunto this should grow, and expostulated, ¹¹ ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and intend to bring this Man's blood upon us. Heathendom was as a beleaguered city, mastered by an ubiquitous Presence, which they knew not how to meet. ¹² The state is beset: the Christians are in their fields, in their forts, in their islands. Every sex, age condition, and now even rank is going over to this sect. The fierceness of the persecutions was the measure of their fear. They put forth all human might to stamp out the spark, lest their gods, and the greatness of the empire which they ascribed to their gods, should fall before this unknown power.

And the everlasting mountains were scattered; the perpetual hills did bow; all power, great or small, gave way before Him. All which withstood was scattered asunder, all which in pride lifted itself up was brought low, although before the coming of the Saviour it had ever gone with neck erect, and none could humble its pride. There is something so marvellous about those ancient mountains. There they stood before man was on the earth; they are so solid, man so slight; they have survived so many generations of man; they will long survive us; they seem as if they would stand for ever; the apter symbol how nothing should stand before the might of God. To the greater pride the heavier lot is assigned; the mountains lifted on high above the earth and, as it were, looking down upon it, are scattered or dispersed, as when a stone flieth in pieces under the stroke of the hammer. The "hills" are bowed down only; and this may be the pride of man humbled under the yoke of Christ.

His Ways are Everlasting. "Everlasting" is set over against "everlasting." The "everlasting" of the creature, that which had been as long as creation had been, co-existing with its whole duration, its most enduring parts, are as things past and gone; the everlasting mountains, the hills of eternity, have been scattered in pieces and bowed, and are no more. Over against these stands the ever-present eternity of God. His ways are everlasting, ordered everlastingly, existing everlastingly in the Divine Mind, and, when in act among us, without change in Him. The prophet blends in these great words, things seemingly contrary, ways which imply progress, eternity which is unchangeable. ¹³ God ever worketh, and ever resteth; unchangeable, yet changing all; He changeth His works, His purpose unchanged. ¹⁴ For Thou art Most High, and art not changed, neither in Thee doth to-day come to a close; yet in Thee it doth come to a close; because all such things also are in Thee. For they had no way to pass away, unless Thou heldest them together. And since Thy years fail not, Thy years are one To-day. How many of our's and our fathers' years have flowed away through Thy to-day; and from it received the measure and the mould of such being as they had; and still others shall flow away, and so receive the mould of their degree of being. But Thou art still the Same; and all things of to-morrow, and all beyond, and all of yesterday, and all behind it, Thou wilt do in this to-day, Thou hast done in this to-day."

To these His goings, a highway is made by the breaking down of all which exalted itself, as Isaiah had said, ¹⁵ The loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low, and the Lord Alone shall be exalted in that day; and, The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God. Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low.

¹⁷ The Everlasting ways of the Everlasting God are Mercy and Truth,—by these Ways are the hills of the world and the proud demons, the princes of the darkness of this world, bowed down, who knew not the way of mercy and truth nor remembered Its paths. What hath he to do with truth, who is a liar and the father of it, and of whom it is written, he abode not in the Truth? But how far he is from Mercy, our misery witnesseth, inflicted on us by him. When was he ever merciful, who was a murderer from the beginning?—So then those swelling hills were bowed down from the Everlasting Ways, when through their own crookedness they sunk away from the straight ways of the Lord, and became not so much ways as precipices. How much more prudently and wisely are other hills bowed down and humbled by these ways to salvation! For they were not bowed from them, as parting from their straightness, but the Everlasting Ways themselves bowed down. May we not now see the hills of the world bowed down, when those who are high and mighty with devoted submission bow ward dispersion. ⁸ Ex. xv. 15, 16. ⁹ S. Matt. ii. 1-3. ¹⁰ S. John xix. 8. ¹¹ Acts v. 24, 28. ¹² Tertull. Apol. init. p. 2. Oxf. Tr. ¹³ S. Aug. Conf. i. 4 p. 3. Oxf. Tr. ¹⁴ Ib. 10. p. 6. ¹⁵ Is. ii. 17. ¹⁶ Ib. xl. 3. ¹⁷ S. Bern. in Ps. Qui habitat. Serm. xi. 8.

¹ Is. iii. 13. ² 1 Cor. ii. 5. ³ S. Luke iv. 6. ⁴ S. Matt. xxviii. 18. S. Mark xvi. 16. ⁵ Ps. xix. 4. ⁶ 2 Sam. viii. 2. ⁷ נָחַר being used of outward leaping of the locust, Lev. xi. 12, נָחַר, of the inward leaping of the heart, Job xxxvii. 1. either seems admissible. The inward terror was the forerunner and often the instrument of the out-

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

Before CHRIST
cir. 626.

Or, Ethiopia.
Or, under affliction,
or, vanity.

7 I saw the tents of || Cushan || in affliction : and the curtains of the land of Midian did tremble.

8 Was the LORD displeased against the themselves before the Lord, and worship at His Feet? Are they not bowed down, when from their own destructive loftiness of vanity and cruelty, they are turned to the humble way of mercy and truth? "

7 I saw (in prophetic vision¹), the tents of Cushan in (lit. under) affliction. On the Coming of the Lord there follows the visitation of those alien from Him². Cushan-Rishathaim was the first, whose ambition God overruled to chasten His people³. It has been remarked⁴, that as king of Aram-Naharaim or North Mesopotamia, he was probably sovereign of the Aram, from which Balak king of Moab, allied with Midian, sent for Balaam to curse Israel. Midian was the last enemy who, at the very entrance of the promised land, seduced God's people into idolatry and foul sin and lusts. Midian became then the object of the wrath of God⁵. They were also among the early oppressors of Israel, leaving "no sustenance for Israel, neither sheep nor ox nor ass, driving them for refuge to dwell in the dens and the mountains, caves and fastnesses, consuming the produce of their land like locusts, so that he whom God raised up as their subduer, was threshing even in a wine-press to hide it from them. Both the kingdom of Aram-Naharaim and Midian disappear from history after those great defeats. Midian, besides its princes, "lost, by mutual slaughter, one hundred and twenty thousand men who drew sword. It left its name as a proverb for the utter destruction of those who sought to exterminate the people of God. "Do unto them as unto the Midianites;—make them and their princes like Oreb and Zeeb; all their princes as Zebah and as Zalmunnah, who said, let us take to ourselves the houses of God in possession. It was an exterminating warfare, which rolled back on those who waged it. So Isaiah sums up an utter breaking-off of the yoke and the rod of the oppressor, as being "as in the day of Midian. The same word, aven, is nothingness, iniquity, and the fruit of iniquity, trouble¹⁰, (since iniquity is emptiness and opposed to that which is, God and His Goodness, and ends in sorrow); so then Cushan is seen as lying as all sinners do, weighed down by and under what is very "emptiness." Tents and curtains are emblems of what shall pass away, under which the wicked shelter themselves from the troubles of this present life, as from heat and rain, "but which¹¹ in themselves decay, and are consumed by fire." The curtains of Midian tremble. The prophet uses the present to shew that he was not speaking of any mere past terror, but of that terror, which should still seize those opposed to God. The word "wrath" "rogez" echoes through the hymn¹²; here the wicked tremble, "yirgezu," under it, to perish; afterwards the Prophet¹³, to live.

8 Was the Lord displeased against the rivers? The rivers? was thine anger against the rivers? was thy wrath against the sea, ^b that thou didst ride upon thine horses and || thy chariots of salvation?

|| Or, thy chariots were salvation?

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

^b Deut. 33.
26, 27.
Ps. 68. 4.
& 104. 3.
ver. 15.

Prophet asks the question thrice, as to the two miracles of the dividing of the Red Sea and the river Jordan, thereby the more earnestly declaring, that God meant somewhat by these acts and beyond them. He asks, as Daniel¹⁴ and Zechariah¹⁵ asked, what was the truth of the things which they saw. God's dealings with His former people were as much ensamples of what should be with us¹⁶, as the visions shewn to the prophets. Hereafter too, there shall be "signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring; there shall be deepening plagues upon the sea and the rivers and fountains of waters; and every living soul in the sea shall die¹⁸. But God's purpose therein aforetime was not as to the sea or the rivers, but for the salvation of His elect; so shall it be to the end. Mighty as may be the mighty waves of the sea which lift themselves up against the Lord, mightier on high is the Lord¹⁹. "20 As Thou didst dry up the Jordan and the Red sea, fighting for us; for Thou wert not wroth with the rivers or the sea, nor could things without sense offend Thee; so now mounting Thy chariots, and taking Thy bow, Thou wilt give salvation to Thy people; and the oaths which Thou swarest to our fathers and the tribes, Thou wilt fulfil for ever."

Thou didst ride upon Thy horses, as though God set His army, "the Hosts which do His pleasure, against the armies of earth, as the Prophet's servant had his eyes opened to see, "the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha. "20 Yet amidst so many thousands of horses and chariots, there was no rider; He was the Rider and Ruler of those horses, of Whom the Psalmist says, "Thou that sittest above the Cherubim, shew Thyself. With such horses and such chariots was Elijah also taken up into Heaven."

And Thy chariots of salvation, lit. Thy chariots are salvation. Not, as in human armies, except as far as they are the armies of God, to destruction. The end of God's armies, His visitations and judgements, is the salvation of His elect, even while they who are inwardly dead, perish outwardly also. Nor, again, do they prepare for the deliverance for which He intends them. With God, to will is to do. His chariots are salvation. His help is present help. His chariots are the tokens and channels of His Presence to aid. And so, they who bore His Name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel, chosen vessels to bear it, are, in a yet fuller sense, His chariots, which are salvation. They "20 are holy souls, upon which the word of God cometh, to save them and others by them. "24 I have compared thee, saith the Spouse, to a company of horses in Pharaoh's chariots. However holy the soul, yet compared to God, it is like the chariot of Pharaoh; and a beast, yet still a beast, before Thee²⁵". Yet identifying the two clauses, says "Cushan is one of the names of Midian or one of its tribes, and it is also called Cush," Zipporah being identified with Moses' Cushite wife. Nu. xii. 1. Even Ewald says, "The people, כוש, which can neither according to language nor context stand for כוש;" though he guesses it to be a little people near Midian. ad loc.

¹ 1 Kgs xxii. 17. ² As in Joel ii. iii. Mic. iv. 1—10 and iv. 11. v. 1. v. 2. &c. v. 15. ³ Jud. iii. 8—10. ⁴ R. S. Poole in Smith's Bible Dict., Art. Cushan. Often as Cush or Ethiopia is mentioned in the Old Testament, and in twelve of the sacred writers, Historians, Psalmists, Prophets; from Genesis to Esther (Moses, Job, Chronicles, Esther, David (Ps. lxxviii.), sons of Corah (Ps. lxxxvii.), Amos, Nahum, Zephaniah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Ethiopians by Daniel, it is uniformly Cush not Cushan. Cush also is retained in Ch. and Syr. and was the name in use in the time of Josephus (Ant. i. 6. 2.) One cannot then doubt, that Jon. and the Talmud (Sanh. 105 in Delitzsch) were right in regarding Cushan as designating him who is so called in the Holy Scriptures, not Ethiopia, which is never so called. Kim., Rashi, A. E., Abarb. follow the Targum. Only Tanchum, ⁵ Nu. xxv. 17. ⁶ Jud. vi. 4. 11. ⁷ 1b. viii. 10. ⁸ Ps. lxxxiii. 9, 11, 12. ⁹ Is. ix. 4. ¹⁰ Job v. 6. xxvi. 14; Jer. iv. 15. Hos. ix. 4. not in Ps. lv. 4. nor (as Ges.) in Joh iv. 8. Ps. xxii. 8. Is. lix. 4. ¹¹ S. Greg. Mor. viii. 9. ¹² ver. 2. ¹³ v. 16. ¹⁴ vii. 16. ¹⁵ c. 1. ¹⁶ 1 Cor. x. 11. ¹⁷ S. Luke xxi. 25. Rev. viii. 6. ¹⁸ Rev. xvi. 3. ¹⁹ Ps. xciii. 4. ²⁰ S. Jer. ²¹ Ps. ciii. 12. ²² 2 Kgs vi. 15. ²³ Ps. lxxx. 1. ²⁴ Cant. i. 4. ²⁵ Ps. lxxxiii. 23.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

Or, Thou
didst cleave
the rivers of the earth.

¹ Ps. 78. 15, 16. & 105. 41.

9 Thy bow was made quite naked, according to the oaths of the tribes, even thy word. Selah. ¹Thou didst cleave the earth with rivers.

such an one, as endowed with might and ready obedience, and swiftness and nobleness to bear the word of God, and through His might Whom they bore, not their own, nor making it their own, bearing down every thing which opposed itself. ¹"The object of the Prophet, is to shew that the second dispensation is better and more glorious, and of incomparably better things than the old. For of old He led Israel forth, through the bodily service of Moses, changing into blood the rivers of Egypt, and doing signs and wonders; then dividing the Red Sea, and carrying over the redeemed, and choking in the waters the most warlike of the Egyptians. But when the Only-Begotten Word of God became Man, He withdrew the whole human race under heaven from the tyranny of Satan, not changing rivers into blood, nor pouring forth His anger upon waters, nor dividing waves of the sea, nor bringing destruction upon men, but rather destroying the murderous Serpent himself, and taking away the sin which had been invented by him and for him, and loosing the unconquered might of death, and calling all to the knowledge of God, through the holy Apostles, who, running forth their course under the whole Heaven and bearing about the Name of Christ, were very rightly had in admiration. He saith then, O Lord, most worthy to be heard are those things, of which Thou hast Thyself been the Doer, and what Thou hast anew wrought is far better than what Thou didst through Moses. For Thou wilt not inflict wrath on rivers, nor shew Thy might on the sea; not in these things will Thy Divine and marvellous power gleam forth, but Thou wilt ride upon Thy horses, and Thy chariots are Salvation. What may these horses be? The Blessed Disciples, Apostles and Evangelists, they who took on them wholly the yoke of all His Divine will, they, the noble, the obedient, ready for all things, whatsoever should please Him; who had Christ to sit upon them, whereof one is the Blessed Paul, of whom Himself saith, ²*He is a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My Name before the Gentiles.* Of fiery speed were these Horses, encompassing the whole earth; so then the chariots of God are said to be *ten thousand times ten thousand*³. For countless, each in their times, and after them, became leaders of the people, and subjected the neck of the understanding to the yoke of the Saviour, and bare about His Glory throughout the whole earth, and rightly divided the word of truth, and subdued the whole earth, as with the speed of horsemen."

His chariots are salvation; ⁴"for they ran not in vain, but to save cities and countries and nations together, Christ overthrowing the empires of devils, who, so to speak, divided among themselves the whole earth, subduing its dwellers to their own will."

9 Thy bow was made quite naked. The word is repeated

¹ S. Cyr.

² Acts ix. 15.

³ Ps. lxxviii. 17.

⁴ קָרָה, acc. abs. as קָרָה בָּשָׂר Mic. i. 11., for the inf. abs.

⁵ Is. xxii. 6.

⁶ S. Greg. Mor. xix. 9. n. 54, Comp. S. Aug. in Ps. lix. n. 6.

⁷ Ps. lxiv. 7.

⁸ S. Luke i. 73. The E. V. takes the common words שָׁמַעְתִּי and וְעָשָׂה in their common senses, and אָמַר (which is a poetic word) agreeably to them. שָׁמַעְתִּי, "oath" occurs 27 times: the plur. שָׁמַעְתִּי here and Ezek. xxi. 28. The other meaning, weeks, which occurs 9 times (chiefly of the "feast of weeks," four times in De. xvi.), is plainly irrelevant here. וְעָשָׂה occurs 24 times besides of the tribes of Israel; twice only of the "rods" set against that of Aaron (Ex. vii. 12, Nu. xvii. 21.). אָמַר "speech" is used of the "promise of God," certainly Ps. lxxvii. 9. The construction is likewise easy, שָׁמַע is the gen. of the obj. after שָׁמַעְתִּי, and both in apposition with the preceding clause, and אָמַר with them. This construction and meaning of שָׁמַעְתִּי, and meaning of אָמַר, and the construction with וְעָשָׂה

10 ^kThe mountains saw thee, and they trembled: the overflowing of the water passed by: the deep uttered his voice, and ^llifted up his hands on high.

¹ Ex. 14. 22. Josh. 3. 16.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

^k Ex. 19. 16, 18.
Judg. 5. 4, 5.
Ps. 68. 8.
& 77. 18.
& 114. 4.

for emphasis. Lit. (In) *nakedness*⁴ it was laid naked; the sheath being laid aside and cast away, as Isaiah says, ⁵*Kir laid bare the shield.* The ⁶*bow* represents the threat of the vengeance of Almighty God, from which it is at length discharged, if not turned aside; the longer the string is drawn, the sharper issueth the arrow. So then the more the coming of the day of judgement is delayed, the stricter is the severity of the judgement then issuing. So long as judgement is delayed, the bow seems laid up in its sheath. God's judgements mostly strike suddenly ⁷*as with a swift arrow*, because men regard them not, coming from a bow at a distance which they see not. His more signal judgements He makes bare in sight of all.

According to the oath of [to] the tribes; ⁸*the oath which He swore unto our father Abraham*, which oath He often renewed to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and again to David⁹. This oath, the word and promise of God, was the pledge of the deliverance of His people, that they should be saved from their enemies, and from the hand of all that hate them. It lay, as it were, covered and hid, so long as God completed it not. Selah. A pause followeth, wherein to meditate on all which is contained in the word or promise of God, which is all time and eternity.

Thou didst cleave the earth with [i. e., into] rivers. Sea and river had become dry land for the passing through of God's people; again, the rock, struck by Moses' rod, was split, so that rivers ran in the dry places. Until that Rock, Which was Christ, was stricken, and ¹⁰*out of His Side came Blood and water*, the whole world was desert and barren; then it was turned into streams of water, and ¹¹*now not four but twelve streams went forth from the Paradise of Scriptures.* For from the One Fountain which is Christ, there issue many streams, even as many as convey the waters of His teaching, to water the earth.

10 The mountains saw Thee, and they trembled, lit. they tremble. While man is insensate, inanimate nature feels and attests the presence of its Maker. It saw, it trembles. To see, feel, tremble, were one. The Prophet does not follow a bare order of events, or bind himself to miracles which actually took place. The mountains tremble with earthquakes, or seem to be shaken by the thunders which they re-echo. And so they are signs, how what is firmest and closes up the way to man, trembles at the Presence of God. Whatever is lifted up shall be bowed down before Him¹². But the word trembled, is that used especially of travail pangs¹³, and so it may spiritually denote that ¹⁴*they who conceive the fear of God shall bring forth unto salvation.* The overflowing i. e., the impetuous, sweeping, flow, of the water¹⁵ (or of waters), such as in themselves would bear all is that of Jon. followed by Kim. Rashi Abarb. Tanch. So also S. Jer. Only A. E. taking קָרָה as spears, explains, that "His spears were sworn to establish the word of God."

⁹ See Mic. end (ab. p. 354.) Ps. lxxxix. 3. cxxxii. 11.

¹⁰ S. John xix. 21.

¹¹ S. Jer. ¹² See Zech. iv. 7.

¹³ The LXX. so translate, "shall be in birth-pangs."

¹⁴ Theoph. ¹⁵ רוּחַ is used apparently both of the "flow of waters and their strong current," as Tanch. explains it here; or of a violent storm breaking upon a thing. Its union with rain, Is. iv. 6, hail, Is. xxviii. 2. xxx. 30, the mountains, Job xxiv. 8, fits in with or requires the meaning "storm;" its union with mighty overflowing (שֶׁפָּרַח) waters Is. xxviii. implies "a current;" "a storm against a wall" רוּחַ קִיר, Is. xxv. 4, might suit either; the verb רוּחַ, "hast swept them away," Ps. xc. 5, implies "a flood;" the mention of the clouds Ps. lxxvii. 18, "a storm." Kim. Rashi, Abarb. explain it here of water on the earth; A. E. of waters descending.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

11 ^m The sun and moon stood still in their habitation: || at the light of thine arrows they went, and at the shining of thy glittering spear.
ⁿ Or, thine arrows walked in the light, &c. ⁿ Josh. 10. 11. Ps. 18. 14. & 77. 17, 18.

before them, pass by harmless. The more they swell, the more they expend themselves, and pass away. "The whole force of persecution, wherewith they vexed Thy people, at sight of Thee passed away," like a torrent which rages and disappears, and, by raging, the sooner wastes itself.

The deep uttered his voice, and lifted up his hands ¹ on high. The noise of the waves, when God brought the strong East wind over it and ² rebuked it, was as a cry to God; the waves, as they swelled, were like hands lifted up to Him, and stricken one against the other. There is no distinct ground against a slightly different rendering, ³ the deep uttered his voice, the height lifted up his hands i. e., to One yet higher, Whom height and depth owned as their Lord and worshipped.

11 Sun and moon stood still in [as one act ⁴, retiring into] their habitation. They withdrew, as it were, in the midst of the great tempest, wherein ⁵ God cast down great stones from heaven upon His enemies and they died; and the sun stood still, and the moon stayed. The sun too withdrew itself in the great darkness at the Crucifixion, as not bearing to look upon the Death of its Maker, when the majesty of the Sun of Righteousness was darkened o'er; and signs in the sun and in the moon there shall be to the end.

At the light of Thine arrows they went. "There was no need of the sun by day, nor of the moon by night; for by the light of Thine arrows can the sons of men hold their way." "This is a mystical interpretation, as you see; this is like the promise of the Most High; ⁶ the sun shall be no more for thy light by day, neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee, and the Lord shall be to thee an everlasting light." The judgements of God are a light to His people, while they are the destruction of His enemies; in them they ⁹ learn righteousness. The arrows are God's judgements, as they threaten and wound from afar; the shining of Thy glittering [lit. of the lightning of Thy] spear, when close at hand. When all other light is withdrawn, and the Sun, our Lord, is hardly beheld in the darkness of the last days, and the moon, the Church, shall not give her light, Christ not shining upon her as before, because iniquity shall abound, and the love of many shall wax cold, and sturs, many who seem to shine with the light of grace, shall fall from heaven, His own shall walk on and advance in holiness, "from strength to strength ¹¹, from good to better, from the way to their home," by the bright light of the lightning of God's Judgements, wherein His glory ¹² shall be manifested. Arrows and spears are part of the spiritual armoury of God, wherewith the people are subdued unto Him; ¹³ armoury, not wherewith He is girt but which He giveth to those who are meet; bright and as it were full of lightning. For most transparent is virtue." They went then at the light of Thine arrows; ¹⁴ because to those 12 Thou didst march through the land in indignation, ° thou didst thresh the heathen in anger.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

° Jer. 51. 33.
Amos 1. 3.
Mic. 4. 13.

13 Thou wentest forth for the salvation who love sin virtue has no beauty, nor, as yet, any brightness. But to those who know her she is nothing less than lightning, bright and transparent, so that whoso hath her is easily known to all around. The disciples then, first having the lightning of Thine arms, shall lead others also to its Light. Admiring and conceiving in themselves those virtues which are the arms of Christ, they shine forth to others, a gleam, as it were, of the bright flash of light inherent in those graces." "They were enlightened and began, by preaching, to send forth shining words of truth. But those words are Thine arrows, shining arrows, shewing by their light the way of life, and by their sharp point pricking the hearts of people unto repentance."

12 Thou didst tread the earth in indignation. The word tread ¹⁵ is used of very solemn manifestations of God ¹⁶, of His going to give to His own victory over their enemies ¹⁷. Not the land only, as of old, but the earth is the scene of His judgements; the earth which was full of His praise, which He meted out ¹⁸, which contained the nations whom He chastened, the whole earth. Thou dost thresh the heathen in anger. Not then only, but at all times unto the end, distress of nations and perplexity are among the shoots of the fig-tree, which betoken that the everlasting ¹⁹ summer is nigh at hand. Jerusalem, when it had slain the Prince of Life, was given over to desolation and counted like the heathen. It became the synagogue, not the Church; and so in the destruction of Jerusalem (as it is an image of the destruction of the world) was that again fulfilled, Thou dost march through the earth in indignation, Thou dost thresh the heathen in anger.

13 Thou wentest forth. Even a Jew says of this place, "The past is here used for the future; and this is frequent in the language of prophecy; for prophecy, although it be future, yet since it is, as it were, firmly fixed, they use the past concerning it." The Prophet speaks again in the past, perhaps to fix the mind on that signal going-forth, when God destroyed Pharaoh, the first enemy who essayed to destroy the chosen line. This stands at the head of all those dispensations, in which God put or shall put forth His might to save His people or destroy their enemies. All is with Him one everlasting purpose; the last were, as it were, embodied in the first: were it not for the last, the first would not have been. Prophecy, in speaking of the first, has in mind all the rest, and chiefly the chiefest and the end of all, the full salvation of His people through Jesus Christ our Lord. Thou wentest forth ²¹, i. e., "Thou, the Unseen God, gavest signs which may be seen of Thy Presence or coming to men." Thou wentest forth, not by change of place, for Thou art not bounded; Thou art without change; but by shewing Thy power, and doing something anew openly for the salvation of Thy people, even for salvation with ²² Thine

¹ רם which stands as the acc. of direction with lifted up the eyes Is. xxxvii. 23. xl. 26. ² Ps. cvi. 9. ³ So S. Jer., Rashi, A. E.; רם being a ש. לעי., one cannot say that it might not mean this. The metaphor would be dropped.

⁴ עשר sing. with the asyndeton עשר; "Every word which needs ל (to) at the beginning has ה at the end, i. e. the ה replaces it," Rashi. Tanchum says the ה is for grandeur; Kim. Sal. b. Mel. say it is like ה in לילה. The "habitation" they explain to be heaven, like בית. ⁵ Jos. x. 11-13.

⁶ A. E. ⁷ Tanch. ⁸ Is. lx. 19. ⁹ Ib. xxvi. 9. ¹⁰ Dion. ¹¹ Ps. lxxxiv. 7. ¹² The word "shining" is the same as "brightness," v. 4. ¹³ S. Cyr. ¹⁴ Rup. ¹⁵ תצ ¹⁶ Jud. v. 4. Ps. lxxviii. 8; of the procession of the ark 2 Sam. vi. 13. It is denied as to the idols, Jer. x. 5. ¹⁷ "The voice of a treading" קול עטרה 2 Sam. v. 24. 1 Chr. xiv. 15. ¹⁸ iii. 3, 6. ¹⁹ S. Luke xxi. 25-31. ²⁰ Kimchi. ²¹ Comp. בארץ Jud. v. 4. Ps. lxxviii. 8 of the great manifestation of God at Sinai; so of the judgement of the world, קול עטרה Is. xxvi. 21. ²² The E. V. is doubtless right. So Aquila, although a Jew, rendered, and the 5th Version. The 6th, a Christian, translated, "Thou wentest forth to save Thy people through Jesus, Thy Christ." So also the Vulgate and other old Jewish authorities. Rachmon (in Martini Pug. Fid. f. 534.) notes "that the word eth means with, as in Gen. xxxvii. 2. xxxix. 2." For although it might be used to mark the object only after a verbal noun, it is not likely that the construction would have been changed, unless the meaning were dif-

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

v Josh. 10. 24.
& 11. 8, 12.
Ps. 68. 21.

of thy people, even for salvation with thine anointed; ^Pthou woudest the head out of the house of the wicked, [†]by discover-

[†] Heb. making naked.

Anointed. God, from the first, helped His people through single persons, Moses, Joshua, each of the Judges, accustoming them to receive deliverance by one, and to gather together all their hopes in One. To Moses He said, ¹*I will be with thee*, and to Joshua, ²*As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee*, and to Cyrus, ³*I will go before thee*, preparing His people to receive that nearer Presence with His Christ, of which our Lord says: ⁴*Believest thou not, that I am in the Father, and the Father in Me? The Father that dwelleth in Me, He doeth the works.* ⁵*The Son of God, God Invisible, became Man, visible; and with Him, so going forth, the Holy Spirit went forth to the salvation of His people*, so as to give a visible sign of His Coming. For upon His Christ Himself, Him Who was anointed with the Holy Ghost⁶, He descended in a bodily Shape, as a Dove. So He went forth to the Salvation of His people, i. e., to save His people with His Christ, our Saviour; and again, on the Day of Pentecost, when that other Comforter came, Whom, He said, I will send unto you from the Father, and in Whose Presence His own promise was fulfilled, Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. His Presence was manifested both in the remission of sins, and the parting of graces among all, and in the ⁷*signs and wonders, and divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost*, wherewith God bare witness to the Apostles, when ⁸*they went forth, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following*. A going forth to judgement, at the end of the world, is foretold in the like image of warfare⁹.

Thou woundedst [crushedst] the head out of the house of the wicked. One wicked stands over against One anointed, as in Isaiah, ¹⁰*He shall smite the earth with the rod of His mouth, and with the breath of His lips shall He slay the wicked*; and David speaks of one, ¹¹*He shall smite the head over a great land*; and S. Paul speaks of ¹²*that Wicked, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of His Coming*. Him He shall destroy at once from above and below; overthrowing his kingdom from the foundation. From above, his head was crushed in pieces; from below, the house was razed from its very foundations. So Amos said, ¹³*The Lord said, Smite the capital, and the lintel [threshold¹⁴] strike, and wound them in the head, all of them; and with a different image, ¹⁵I destroyed his fruit from above, and his roots from beneath*. First, the head is struck off, crushed; then the house from the foundations to its neck; then as it were the headless walls. The image of the neck may be the rather used to recall, that ferent. Had eth been only the sign of the object, there was no occasion for inserting it at all, and it would probably have been avoided, as only making the sentence ambiguous, in that it may more obviously be taken in the sense adopted by Aq. and the Vulgate and the E. V. The LXX and two early heretics who disbelieved the Divinity of our Lord (Theodot. and Symm.) render "to save Thy Christ." The LXX is wrong moreover, in that the Anointed is never used of the people, but of single persons only, who were shadows of the Christ. "Thine anointed" is understood of one individual, "the king of Judah," by A. E. "Saul and David," by Rashi; "Moses" by Abarb.; "Hezekiah" by Tanch.; but "Messiah Ben David" by Kim. Sal. b. Mel.

¹ Ex. iii. 12.

² Josh. i. 5.

³ Is. xlv. 2.

⁴ S. John xiv. 10.

⁵ Rup.

⁶ Acts x. 38.

⁷ Heb. ii. 4.

⁸ S. Mark xvi. 20.

⁹ Rev. xvii. 14.

¹⁰ Is. xi. 4.

¹¹ Ps. cx. 6.

¹² 1 Thess. iv. 8.

¹³ Am. ix. 1.

¹⁴ The same word is used Zeph. ii. 14. Ps. cxxxvii. 7.

¹⁵ Am. ii. 9.

¹⁶ Dion.

¹⁷ 2 Cor. ii. 11. 1 Cor. xii. 10.

¹⁸ The meaning "leaders, prefects of soldiers" has been obtained for פָּרָשׁ by Ges. &c. by a misapplication of the Arab. فَرَس "distinguished" which in conj. ii. signifies "defined for a person," but only in the idiom פָּרָשׁ מִי פָּרָשׁ "defined for me by his own counsel," which gains its meaning only from the על. That of the E. V. is furnished, in most places, by the passages ing the foundation unto the neck. Selah.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

14 Thou didst strike through with his staves the head of his villages: they [†]came [†] Heb. were tempestuous.

as the house of God is built of living stones, so the kingdom of the evil one is made of living dead, who shall never cease to exist in an undying death. The bruising of Satan, the head or prince of this evil world, is the deliverance of the world. His head was bruised, when, by the Death of our Lord, the Prince of this world was cast out; he is crushed out of the house of the wicked, whenever he, the strong man, is bound and cast out, and "the soul of the sinner which had been his abode, becomes the house of God, and righteousness dwelleth there and walketh in her."

¹⁶ Thou didst not leave any error or vice in the world unshaken, either what was concealed, like the foundation of a house; or that which was open, as the neck of the body is open; to the neck, where the destruction from above ceased, so that nothing remained unsmitten. ¹⁷ For they being, by the fiery tongues which Thou shewedst without, made fervent and strong, wise and eloquent, ceased not, until they made known to all, what folly was this world's wisdom, what sacrilege its sacred worship. ¹⁸ His secret counsels He laid bare, as the Apostle says, ¹⁹*We are not ignorant of his devices; and, to another is given the discerning of spirits.*"

14 Thou didst strike through with his staves the head of his villages¹⁸. The destruction comes not upon himself only, but upon the whole multitude of his subjects; and this not by any mere act of Divine might, but with his own staves, turning upon him the destruction which he prepared for others. So it often was of old. When the Midianites and Amalekites and the children of the east¹⁹ wasted Israel in the days of Gideon, ²⁰*the Lord set every man's sword against his fellow, even throughout all the host; and when God delivered the Philistines into the hand of Jonathan²¹; so was it with Ammon Moab and the inhabitants of Mount Seir*, at the prayer of Jehoshaphat and his army²². And so it shall be, God says, at the end, of the army of Gog; every man's sword shall be against his brother²³, and Isaiah says, ²⁴*every man shall eat the flesh of his own arm*, and Zechariah, ²⁵*a great tumult from the Lord shall be among them; and they shall lay every man hold on the hand of his neighbour, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbour*. So Pharaoh drove Israel to the shore of the sea, in which he himself perished; Daniel's accusers perished in the den of lions, from which Daniel was delivered unharmed²⁶; and so Haman was hanged on the gallows which he prepared for Mordecai²⁷. So it became a saying of Psalmists, ²⁸*He made a pit and digged it, and is fallen into the ditch which he* themselves. As in Ezek. xxxviii. 11, where "a land of פְּרָשׁ" is expanded into "where they all dwell without wall; and bar and double gates they have not;" and Deut. iii. 5, "all these were fenced cities, with high wall, double gates and bar, besides cities of פְּרָשׁ," and 1 Sam. vi. 18, "from the fenced city to the village of פְּרָשׁ" and Zech. ii. 8, "Jerusalem shall dwell as פְּרָשׁ for the multitude of men and cattle therein; and I, saith the Lord, will be a wall of fire around." In Esther ix. 19, cities פְּרָשׁ are contrasted with Shushan v. 18, and "the Perizzite," very possibly, was originally "paganus" "one who dwelt in villages." This rendering is adopted by chief Jewish interpreters; Kim. "cities of the plain, which have no fort nor wall." So Abulw. Tanch. "land;" Rashi, Abarb. "his cities and villages;" A. E. keeps the word, but implies the meaning, on Zech. ii. 8. Kim. Sal. b. Mel. obtained the sense of "forces" here, that they "shall come in great numbers, and so dwell in Jerusalem, as פְּרָשׁ, who dwell in פְּרָשׁ, who spread in the whole place, who have no wall to enclose them." This explains Jon. "the forces of Pharaoh," as hordes too large to be enclosed in walls, and perhaps the LXX. δυνάμεις.

¹⁹ Jud. vi. 3, 4.

²⁰ 1b. vii. 22.

²¹ 1 Sam. xiv. 12, 16, 20.

²² 2 Chron. xx. 22, 23.

²³ Ezek. xxxviii. 21.

²⁴ Is. ix. 20.

²⁵ Zech. xiv. 13.

²⁶ Dan. vi. 24.

²⁷ Esth. vii. 10.

²⁸ Ps. vii. 5.

add ix. 15, x. 2, xxxv. 8, lvii. 6, xciv. 23.

exli. 10. Prov. v. 22. xxvi. 27. Eccl. x. 8.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

Ps. 77. 19.
ver. 8.

out as a whirlwind to scatter me: their rejoicing was as to devour the poor secretly.

15 ^aThou didst walk through the sea with thine horses, through the || heap of great waters.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

16 When I heard, ^bmy belly trembled; ^c|| Or, mud.
Ps. 119. 120.
Jer. 23. 9.

made; his mischief shall return upon his own head, and his violent dealing shall come down upon his own pate; and this from above, sent down by God. The heathen too observed that there was "no juster law than that artificers of death by their own art should perish." This too befell him, when he seemed to have all but gained his end. They came [out] as a whirlwind to scatter me, with whirlwind force, to drive them asunder to all the quarters of the heavens, as the wind scatters the particles of ¹cloud, or ²as the stubble which passeth away by the wind of the wilderness. Pharaoh at the Red Sea or Sennacherib, sweep all before them. Pharaoh said, ³*I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil; my lust shall be satisfied upon them; I will draw my sword, my hand shall destroy them.*

Their rejoicing. It is no longer one enemy. The malice of the members was concentrated in the head; the hatred concentrated in him was diffused in them. The readiness of instruments of evil to fulfil evil is an incentive to those who conceive it; those who seem to ride the wave are but carried on upon the crest of the surge which they first roused. They cannot check themselves or it. So the ambitious conceiver of mischief has his own guilt; the willing instruments of evil have theirs. Neither could be fully evil without the other. Sennacherib had been nothing without those fierce warriors who are pictured on the monuments, with individual fierceness fulfilling his will, nor the Huns without Attila, or Attila without his hordes whose tempers he embodied. Satan would be powerless but for the willing instruments whom he uses. So then Holy Scripture sometimes passes from the mention of the evil multitude to that of the one head, on earth or in hell, who impels them; or from the one evil head who has his own special responsibility in originating it, to the evil multitude, whose responsibility and guilt lies in fomenting the evil which they execute.

Their rejoicing. He does not say simply "they rejoice to," but herein is their exceeding, exulting joy. The wise of this earth glories in his wisdom, the mighty man in his might, the rich in his riches: the truly wise, that he understandeth and knoweth God. But as for these, their exultation is concentrated in this,—savagery; in this is their jubilation; this is their passion. Psalmists and pious men use the word to express their exulting joy in God: men must have an object for their impassioned souls; and these, in cruelty.

As it were to devour the poor secretly. From the general he descends again to the individual, but so as now to set forth the guilt of each individual in that stormy multitude which is, as it were, one in its evil unity, when each merges his responsibility, as it were, in that of the body, the horde or the mob, in which he acts. Their exultation, he says, is that of the individual robber and murderer, who lies wait secretly in his ambush, to spring on the defenceless wanderer, to slay him and devour his substance. Premeditation, passion, lust of cruelty, cowardice, murderousness, habitual individual savagery and treachery, and that to the innocent and defenceless, are all concentrated in the words, their exultation is, as it were, to devour the poor secretly, i. e. in their secret haunt.

Pharaoh had triumphed over Israel. ⁴*They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.* He rejoiced in having them wholly in his power, as a lion has his prey in his lair, in secret, unknown to the Eyes of God Whom he regarded not, with none to behold, none to deliver. ⁵*They gloried in oppressing the people of Israel, even as the cruel man glories in secretly rending and afflicting the needy, when without fear they do this cruelty, nor heed God beholding all as Judge.* The invisible enemies too rejoice very greatly in the ruin of our souls. ⁶*Lest mine enemy say, I have prevailed against him: for if I be cast down, they that trouble me will rejoice at it.* ⁷*O Lord and governor of all my life, leave me not to their counsels and let me not fall by them.* Yet God left them not in his hands; but even brake the head of Leviathan in pieces.

15 Thou didst walk through the sea with Thine horses. God Himself is pictured as leading them on the way, Himself at the head of their multitude, having, as Asaph said of old, ⁸*His path in the sea.* So Isaiah, ⁹*Who leddest them in the depths;* and Zechariah, ¹⁰*And he shall pass through the sea.* God was literally there; for ¹¹*in Him we live and move and have our being.* He Who "is wholly everywhere but the whole of Him nowhere" manifested His Presence there. Such anthropomorphisms have a truth, which men's favourite abstractions have not.

Through the heap ¹²of great waters, as of old, ¹³*the waters stood as a heap, and He made the waters to stand as a heap.* The very hindrances to deliverance are in God's Hands a way for His ends. The waves of the Red sea rose in heaps, yet this was but a readier way for the salvation of His people and the destruction of their enemies. ¹⁴*God prepareth ever a way for His elect in this present evil world, and leadeth them along the narrow way which leadeth unto life.*

16 When I heard, better, I heard and &c. The prophet sums up, resuming that same declaration with which he had begun, I heard, I was afraid. Only now he expresses far more strongly both his awe at God's judgements and his hopes. He had just beheld the image of the destruction of Pharaoh, the end of the brief triumphing of the wicked and of the trials of God's people. But awful as are all the judgements of God upon the enemies of His people, it was not this alone which was the object of his terror. This was deliverance. It was the whole course of God's dispensations, which he had heard; God's punishment of His people for their sins, and the excision of their oppressors, who, in His Providence, fulfilling their own evil end, executed His chastisements upon them. The deliverances, which shadowed out the future, had their dark side, in that they were deliverances. The whole course of this world is one series of man's unfaithfulnesses or sins, God's chastisements of them through their fellow-sinners, and His ultimate overthrow of the aggressors. Those first three (mentioning the opinion of others that it is "mud" but choosing the other.) A. E. chooses the sense, "mud." Rashi paraphrases, "as the sand of the sea." For that of Ges., "the boiling of the waters," there is absolutely no authority.

¹³ Ex. xv. 8. Ps. lxxviii. 13.

¹ Job xxxvii. 11. ² Jer. xlii. 24. add xviii. 17. Is. xli. 16. Del. ³ Ex. xv. 9.
⁴ Ib. xiv. 3. ⁵ Dion. ⁶ Ps. xlii. 4. ⁷ Eccles. xxiii. 1. ⁸ אֵין כֶּסֶם as Ps. lxxvii. 20. גִּם רִיכָה. ⁹ Is. lxxiii. 13. ¹⁰ Zech. x. 11. ¹¹ Acts xvii. 28.
¹² So Jon. Kim. (comparing Ex. xv. 8 and חֲסִים Ex. viii. 10.) Sal. b. Mel. Tanch.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

my lips quivered at the voice: rottenness entered into my bones, and I trembled in myself, that I might rest in the day of trouble: when he cometh up unto the peocenturies of glorious martyrdoms were, on the one side, the malice and hatred of Satan and the world against the truth; on the other side, the prophets of those days told their people that they were the chastisements of their sins. Future deliverance implies previous chastisement of those delivered. The prophet then, at the close, in view of all, for himself and all whose perplexities he represented and pleaded before God, chooses his and their portion. "Suffer here and rest for ever!" "Endure here any terror, any failure of hopes, yet trust wholly in God, have rest in the day of trouble and sing the endless song!" Again he casts himself back amid all the troubles of this life.

I heard [i. e. that speech of God uttering judgements to come] *and my belly*¹, the whole inward self, bodily and mental, all his hidden powers, *trembled*², "vibrated" as it were, "³in every fibre of his frame," at the wrath of God; *my lips quivered*⁴ at the voice of God, so that they almost refused their office and could hardly fulfil the prophetic duty and utter the terrors which he had heard; his very strongest parts, the bones, which keep the whole frame of man together, that he be not a shapeless mass, and which remain unconsumed long after the rest has wasted away in the grave, rottenness entered into them, corruption and mouldering eating into them⁵; and I trembled in myself [lit. *under me*⁶] so that he was a burden to himself and sank unable to support himself, that I might rest in the day of trouble. All up to this time was weariness and terror, and now at once all is repose; the prophet is carried, as it were, over the troubles of this life and the decay of the grave to the sweetness of everlasting rest⁷. I, the same, suffer these things, terror, quivering, rottenness in the very bones themselves. I [lit.] *who shall rest*⁸ in the day of trouble. I who had not rest until then, shall enter into rest then in the very day of trouble to all who found their rest in the world not in God, the day of judgement. ⁹*Blessed is the man whom Thou chastenest, O Lord, and teachest him in Thy law, that Thou mayest give him pati-*

¹ בֶּטֶן is used of the inward part of man, which "prepareth mischief," Job xv. 35; the spirit whereof constrains one, Ib. xxxii. 18; the chambers of which are searched out by the spirit of man, as the lamp of God, Prov. xx. 27; as cleansed by stripes Ib. 30; where the words of the wise are guarded, Ib. xxii. 18; which should not be filled with the East wind, Job xv. 2. In the like way in the N. T. "from his belly, κοιλία, shall flow living waters," S. John vii. 38. In Arab. بطن is the "inner meaning;" رَجَزٌ "he knew the inner, the intrinsic, state of the case;" with בָּ, "became intimate with;" conj. x. with acc., "penetrated a thing." So also אֶל־בָּטֶן "that which is within," of facts, thoughts, mind. See Lane. All are derivative senses. בָּטֶן has nothing in common with אֶרֶץ, as Ges.

² "ragaz," twice repeated in this verse, takes up, as it were, "rogez" wrath v. 2. ³ Del. ⁴ רָגַז occurs of the tingling of the ear, 1 Sam. iii. 11. 2 Kgs xxi. 12. Jer. xix. 3. "From the fear at the meaning of this sound which he has heard his lips trembled in speaking, and he uttered their words with a trembling sound." Tanch.

⁵ רָקַב (the root) is used of the decay of wood and of the bones, and Pr. x. 7, of "the name of the wicked." ⁶ As 2 Sam. ii. 23. "he died" as we say, "on the spot," sinking down dead.

⁷ The very softness of the original word רָגַז stands in contrast with the rigidity in the words tirgaz, rakab, ragaz, tsarah. ⁸ מָנוּחַ is uniformly "rest." It is used of rest from labour, from calamities, [Is. xxiv. 7 Job iii. 26.] rest in a place, with בָּ, or on (עַל) it; of the Holy Spirit resting on a person (with עַל). But its meaning is uniformly of rest, not of silence as to a thing [as Ges.] nor does רָגַז furnish any analogy, since this in itself signifies "kept silence." Nor can it mean "wait patiently for," for מָנוּחַ "rest" is the very opposite of "waiting for," תָּחַב, which necessarily involves a degree, even if of subdued unrest. Then, too, תָּחַב, קָוָה, מָנוּחַ, are used of waiting, looking for good, not for evil.

⁹ Ps. xciv. 12, 13.

¹⁰ Man. ap. App. S. Aug. T. vi. c. 21.

¹¹ This is the simplest construction, and is that adopted by Kim. Abarb. In the rendering "in the coming up of a people," the ל would, as Tanchum observes, be super-ple, he will || invade them with his troops.

17 ¶ Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labour of the olive shall † fail, and the †

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

Or, cut them in pieces.
† Heb. lie.

ence in time of adversity, until the pit be digged up for the ungodly.

¹⁰ O my soul; had we daily to bear tortures, had we for a long time to endure hell itself, that we might see Christ in His glory and be the companion of His Saints, were it not worth enduring all sorrow, that we might be partakers of so exceeding a good, such exceeding glory?"

When he cometh up unto the people, he shall invade them with his troops, or, which is probably meant, *when he cometh up who shall invade them*¹¹. It is a filling out of *the day of trouble*¹². However near the trouble came, he, under the protection of God and in firm trust in Him, would be at rest in Him. The troubles of God's prophets are not the outward troubles, but the sins of their people which bring those troubles, the offence against the majesty of God, the loss of souls. Jeremiah was more at rest in the court of the prison, than when all the people did curse him¹³ for telling them God's Truth. He who fears God and His judgements betimes, shall rest in perfect tranquillity when those judgements come. The immediate trouble was the fierce assault of the Chaldees whose terror he had described; and this, picturing, as through the prophecy, all other judgements of God even to the last, when devils shall contend about the souls of men, as Satan did about the body of Moses.

17 Although [lit. *For*¹⁴] the figtree shall not blossom. The Prophet repeats his confidence in God, premising his knowledge that all human hopes should fail. I know, he says, all stay and support shall fail; he numbers from the least to the greatest, the fruits of trees, the fig, vine and olive, for sweetness, gladness, cheerfulness¹⁵, whereof the well-being of the vine and figtree furnishes the proverbial picture of peace and rest. These shall either not shoot forth, or shall at time of fruit-gathering have no *produce*¹⁶, or having, as it were, laboured to bring forth fruit shall *lie*¹⁷, and fail: yet further "the staff of life" itself shall fail; the fields shall yield no meat; all the fields, as though they were but one¹⁸, shall fluous, and אשר would be more natural than יָעַר. But the prophet would not needlessly make his language ambiguous. Had he meant, "in the coming up of a or the people," he would have used the common לָעֹלָם רָעָם or לָעֹלָם רָעָם. The construction of לָעֹלָם with ל instead of עַל, "to" for "against," is exceptional. But עַל occurs with the equivalent ל of the person, and in one case with ל (as we say "go up to") Gen. xlv. 24, 31. xlv. 9. Ex. xix. 3, 24. xxxiii. 1, 12. xxxii. 30. Deut. x. 1. Josh. x. 4, 6. Jud. iv. 5. xii. 3. xvi. 5. (לֵא) 18. 1 Sam. vi. 20. x. 3, xiv. 9, 12. xxxiii. 19. 2 Kgs. i. 11. xxii. 4, and this, in a hostile sense Jud. xx. 23, 2 Sam. v. 19, Jer. xlix. 28, 31. עַל also, is used without the art. (as a sort of proper name) of the Jewish people, Is. xxvi. 11. xlv. 6. נֹר occurs Gen. xlix. 19. There also with acc.; יָעַר, our, "troop" (verb) Jer. x. 7. See also Mic. v. 14. p. 338. ¹² עַל צָרָה is a general term which occurs also Is. xxxvii. 3, more commonly with בָּ, בְּיוֹם צָרָה, Ps. xxi. 2, 1. 15, Pr. xxiv. 10, xxv. 19, Jer. xvi. 19, Ob. 12, 14, Nah. i. 7. Zeph. i. 15. as צָרָה occurs Jer. xxx. 7. Dan. xii. 1. בָּעַר צָרָה, Is. xxxiii. 2. Jer. xiv. 8. xv. 11; בְּיוֹם צָרָה Gen. xxxv. 3, Ps. lxxvii. 3, lxxxv. 7; בָּעַר צָרָה Jud. x. 14. בָּעַר צָרָה Neh. ix. 27. There is no ground then to limit it to the Chaldean or Assyrian period. ¹³ Jer. xv. 10.

¹⁴ The adversative or exceptional force attributed to כִּי, always lies in the relation of the two sentences, not in the כִּי itself, which is always causative, "for" or "because."

¹⁵ Ps. civ. 15. ¹⁶ פֵּרוֹת יִבְרָל occurs here only of the produce of trees; 10 times of the earth itself directly; in Ps. lxxvii. 1, its produce, as the result of human culture, יִבְרָל, יִבְרָל, and Job xx. 28 יִבְרָל יִבְרָל occurs here only of the fruit, being an application of the common idiom פֵּרוֹת פֵּרוֹת.

¹⁷ עָלָה as Hos. ix. 2. ¹⁸ עֶשְׂרֵיבָרָה (an old word Deut. xxxii. 32) with no known etymology, is used, in three out of the four places in which it certainly occurs, in relation to place: "fields of Gomorrah" Deut. l. c. "f. of Kidron 2 Kgs. xxii. 4." "f. of Heshbon" Is. xvi. 8. It occurs in a fifth, (if, as is probable, the Kri is right,) "all the fields unto the brook Kidron" i. e. reaching to it, Jer. xxxi. 40. As a collective, it is joined with a sing. verb here, and Is. xvi. 8.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

* Job 13. 15.
* Isai. 41. 16.
& 61. 10.

fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls:

18 * Yet I will 'rejoice in the LORD, I will joy in the God of my salvation.

have one common lot, barrenness. Yet more; the flocks shall be cut off¹ from the fold; not those only, feeding abroad in fields and open plains, shall be driven away, but they shall be carried away by the enemy from the folds, where they seemed penned securely; and not these only, but *there shall be no herd in the stalls*², even the stronger animals shall utterly fail; every help for labour, or for clothing, or for food shall cease; he speaks not of privation, partial failure, but of the entire loss of all things, no meat from the fields, no herd in the stalls; and what then? And I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation. The words are very impressive, as they stand in the Hebrew. "For," he says, "the fig-tree shall not blossom, and there is no fruit in the vines, the labour of the olive hath failed;" (the Prophet does not look on, only to these things, but in his mind stands in the midst of them³, they are done, and he amid them, feeling their effects) "and the field hath yielded no food; the flock hath been cut off from the fold, and there is no herd in the stall; and I"—He relates it as the result of all which had gone before; such and such was the state of fruit-trees, vintage, harvest, flocks and herds; such was the aspect of all nature, living or inanimate; all was barren, disappointing; all had failed and was gone; and then at last he comes to himself, and I; what is he doing, when all nature and every seeming hope is dead? thus and thus it is with them; and I—will rejoice. He almost uses the expression as to the exultation of the enemy, adopting the same word only in a softer form. "Their exulting joy was" concentrated in this, "as to devour the poor secretly;" he too had "exulting joy." There is a joy against joy: a joy of theirs in the possession of all which their rapacity covets, in the possession of all things: a joy of his amid the privation of all things. He contrasts the two joys, as David had of old; "the men of the world, whose portion is in this life, whose belly Thou fillest with Thy hid treasure; they are sated of children and leave their substance to their babes: I, he adds, I shall behold Thy Presence in righteousness, I shall be sated, in the awakening, with Thine image. So Habakkuk, *I will not rejoice only, but shout for joy*⁴; and not so only, but I will bound for joy; and this not for a time only; both words express a drawing, yearning⁵ of the soul, and this yet more and more, I will shout for joy and would shout on; I will bound for joy and would bound on. But whence the source of this measureless unutterable joy? In the Lord, the Unchangeable God, Who is and was and is to come, I AM, (it is the incommunicable Name); in the God of my salvation: it is almost the Name of Jesus⁷; for JESUS is salvation, and the Name means "the Lord is Salvation;" whence

¹ נור occurs intrans. here only. In Arah. also it is commonly used, but intrans. of "water which sunk" or retired. See Lane. ² רפח, here only, but clear from the context. In Buxtorf's instance, כנאה ברפח "found it in a stall," the word is very probably used in the sense ascribed it to here by tradition as "well known in the language of the ancient (doctors) who say in the sing. רפח בקר." Tanch. "House of oxen." Kim. "Sec Mishnah Bava Bathra ii. 3. vi. 4." Munk on Tanch. The Arab. رفس "chopped straw" could hardly furnish a name for a stall.

³ The first future רפח, "shall not flourish" determines that all which follows is future in act, though present to the prophet's mind. ⁴ Ps. xvii. 13, 15.

⁵ רפח, like ἀλαλᾶω. It is used of exultation in the holiness of God, Ps. lx. 8. cviii. 8.

19 The LORD God is 'my strength, and he will make my feet like 'hinds' feet, and he will make me to 'walk upon mine high places. To the chief singer on my † stringed instruments.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 626.

* Ps. 27. 1.
* 2 Sam. 22.
* 34. Ps. 18.
33.
* Deut. 32. 13.
& 33. 29.

† Heb. Neginoth, Ps. 4, title.

the words are here rendered even by a Jew⁸, "in God the Author of my redemption," and yet more sweetly by a father⁹, "in God my Jesus." In Him his joy begins, to Him and in Him it flows back and on; before he ventures, amid all the desolation, to speak of joy, he names the Name of God, and, as it were, stays himself in God, is enveloped and wrapped round in God; and I (the words stand in this order) and I in the Lord would shout for joy. He comes, as it were, and places himself quite close to God, so that nothing, not even his joy should be between himself and God; "and I in the Lord." All creation, as it had failed, ceases to be; all out of God: he speaks of nothing but himself and God, or rather himself in God; and as He, God, comes before his joy, as its source, so in Him does he lose himself, with joy which cannot be contained, nor expressed, nor rest, but utters itself in the glad motions of untiring love. I would bound for joy in my Saving God. Truly all our joy is, to be in Him in Whom is all Good, Who is all Goodness and all Love.

The Lord God is my strength. The prophet does not inwardly only exult and triumph in God, but he confesses also in words of praise, that in Him he hath all things, that He is All things in him. And as he had confessed the Father, under the Name whereby He revealed Himself to Moses, and the Son, "the Lord God of my salvation," so he confesses¹⁰ God the Holy Ghost, Who, in us, is our strength. He is our strength, so that through Him, we can do all things; He is our strength, so that without Him, we can do nothing; He is our strength, so that when we put forth strength, we put forth nothing of our own, we add nothing of our own, we use not our own strength, of which we have none, but we do use His; and we have It ever ready to use, as if it were our own. For it is not our own and it is our own; not our own, i. e., not from or of ourselves; but our own, since It is in us, yea He the Lord our God is our strength, not without us, for He is our strength, but in us. And so he says further, how we can use it as our own. He will make my feet like hinds, which bound upward through His imparted strength, and, when scared by alarms here below, flee fearless to their native rocks, spring from height to height, and at last shew themselves on some high peak, and standing on the Rock, look down on the whole world below their feet and upward on high. Even so, ¹¹when at the end of the world all shall fail, and the love of many shall wax cold, and the Church, which is likened to the fig tree the vine and the ¹²olive, shall yield no fruits, and sweetness shall be corrupted by vanities, and the oil of mercy shall be dried up, and lamps go out, and its promises shall fail and it shall lie, having a show of goodness, but denying the power before God, Ps. lxxviii. 5, God being the implied Object, Zeph. iii. 14. Ps. xxviii. 7. xvi. 12. cxlix. 5. of the evil in evil Jer. xi. 15. l. 11, li. 39. Ps. xciv. 3.

⁶ This is the force of the optative אֶעֱלֶה, אֶעֱלֶה, which recurs in Ps. lx. 8. cviii. 8.

⁷ Jesus in Heb. יֵשׁוּעַ, here יֵשׁוּעַ. ⁸ Chald. The Syr. "God my Redeemer." LXX. "God my Saviour."

⁹ S. Aug. de Civ. D. xviii. 32. "To me what some MSS. have; 'I will rejoice in God my Jesus,' seems better than what they have, who have not set the Name itself, (but saving) which to us it is more loving and sweeter to name."

¹⁰ Rup. ¹¹ Chiefly from Dion. Comp. S. Jer.

¹² S. Luke xiii. 6. Is. v. 1. xxi. 33. &c. Rom. xi. 17.

of it; in words confessing God, and in works denying Him; and through their own negligences, or the carelessness of pastors, the sheep of Christ shall perish from His very fold, and they who should be strong to labour¹ shall cease, God's elect shall joy in Him, "beholding His goodness, and loving Him in all things, and He will give them free affections, and fervid longings of holy love, whereby they shall not walk only, but run the way of His commandments and prevail over the enemies of their salvation."

Yet though this strength is inward, and used by man, still God Who gives it, Himself guides it. Not man shall direct his own ways, but He will make me to walk (as on a plain way) upon my high places. Steep and slippery places and crags of the rocks are but ways to the safe height above, to those whom God makes to walk on them; and since he has passed all things earthly, what are his high places, but the heavenly places, even his home, even while a pilgrim here, but now at the end, much more his home, when not in hope only, but in truth, he is raised up together, and *made to sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus*²?

And now what remains then, but that this song of praise should be for ever? And so it is not without meaning, nor was of old thought to be so³, that there stand here, at the end, words which elsewhere in the Psalms always stand at the beginning. Nor is it any where else, "upon my stringed instruments." To the chief singer on my stringed instruments. To Him to Whom all praise is due, through Whom we praise Himself, His Spirit pleading in us, for us, upon my stringed instruments. He Himself, providing, as it were, and teaching the prelude of the endless song, and by His Spirit, breathing upon the instrument which He has attuned, and it giving back faithfully, in union with the heavenly Choir with whom it is now blended, the Angelic Hymn, "Glory to God in the Highest."

¹ 1 Cor. ix. 9, 10.

² Eph. ii. 6.

³ It is commented upon as part of the text by S. Cyril and S. Jerome.

SITE OF BABYLON.

"CAST HER UP AS HEAPS, DESTROY HER UTTERLY; LET NOTHING OF HER BE LEFT."—JER. l. 26.

"THE VISION IS YET FOR THE APPOINTED TIME; THOUGH IT TARRY, WAIT FOR IT;"

"BECAUSE IT WILL SURELY COME, IT WILL NOT BE BEHINDHAND."—HAB. ii. 3.

INTRODUCTION

TO

THE PROPHEET

ZEPHANIAH.

ZEPHANIAH was called to his office, at all events not long after Habakkuk. As his time was near to that of Habakkuk, so his subject also was kindred. Both lived when, for the sins of the reign of Manassch, God had pronounced upon Jerusalem an irreversible sentence of destruction. The mission of both was not to the whole people whose sentence was fixed, but to the individuals who would flee from the wrath to come. The form of Habakkuk's prophecy was (as we might say) more subjective; that of Zephaniah, more objective. Habakkuk exhibits the victory of faith in the oppressed faithful; how it would hold to God amid the domestic oppressions, amid the oppressions of the Chaldees by whom those oppressions were to be punished, and, when all shall seem to fail, should, in the certainty of its unseen life, joy in its God. The characteristic of Zephaniah is the declaration of the tenderness of the love of God for that remnant of Israel, the afflicted and poor people, whom God would leave in the midst of them.

Zephaniah has, like Habakkuk, to declare the judgement on the world. He renews the language of Joel as to "the day of the Lord," and points it to nations and individuals. He opens with the prophecy of one wide destruction of the land and all the sinners in it, its idolaters and its oppressors, its princes, its royal family, its merchants, its petty plunderers, who used rapine under colour of their masters' name, and brought guilt on themselves and them. Nothing is either too high or too low to escape the judgements of God. But the visitation on Judah was part only of a more comprehensive judgement. Zephaniah foretells the wider destruction of enemies of God's people on all sides; of Philistia, Moab, Ammon, on each side of them, and the distant nations on either side, Ethiopia (which then included Egypt) and Assyria. All these particular judgements contain principles of God's judgements at all times. But in Zephaniah they seem all to converge in the love of God for the remnant of His people. The nation he calls a nation not desired. Individuals he calls to God; it may be, ye shall be hid in the Day of the Lord's anger. He foretells a sifting time, wherein God would take away the proud among her^d; yet there follows a largeness of Gospel promise and of love^e, the grounds of which are explained in the Gospel, but whose tenderness of language is hardly surpassed even by the overwhelming tenderness of the love of Christ which passeth knowledge.

The prophet's own name "the Lord hath hid" corresponds with this. The Psalmist had said, using this same word, "He shall hide me in His tabernacle in the day of evil: in the secret of His tabernacle He shall hide me;" and, "O how great is Thy goodness, which Thou hast laid up^h for them that fear Thee. Thou shalt hide them in the secret of Thy presence from the pride of man. Thou shalt *keep them secretly*ⁱ in a pavilion from the strife of tongues." "They take counsel against Thy hidden ones."

The date which Zephaniah prefixed to his prophecy, has not been disputed; for no one felt any interest in denying it. Those who disbelieve definite prophecy invented for themselves a solution, whereby they thought that Zephaniah's prophecy need not be definite, even though uttered in the time of Josiah; so the fact remained unquestioned.

The unwonted fulness with which his descent is given implies so much of that personal knowledge which soon fades away, that those who speak of other titles, as having been prefixed to the books, or portions of books of the prophets, by later hands, have not questioned this. The only question is, whether he lived before or in the middle of the reformation by Josiah. Josiah, who came to the throne when eight years old B. C. 641, began the reformation in the twelfth year of his reign^l, when almost twenty; B. C. 630. The extirpation of idolatry could not, it appears, be accomplished at once. The finding of the ancient copy of the law, during the repairs of the temple in the eighteenth year of his reign^m, B. C. 624, gave a fresh impulse to the king's efforts. He then united the people with himself, bound all the people present to the covenantⁿ to keep the law, and made a further destruction of idols^o before the solemn passover in that year. Even after that passover some abominations had to be removed^p. It has been thought that the words, I will cut off the remnant of Baal from this place, imply that the worship of Baal had already in some degree been removed, and that God said, that He would complete what had been begun. But the emphasis seems to be rather on the completeness of the destruction, as we should say, that He would efface every remnant of Baal, than to refer to any effort which had been made by human authority to destroy it.

The prophet joins together, I will cut off the remnant of Baal, the name of the Chemarim. The cutting off the name of the Chemarim, or idolatrous priests, is like that of Hosea^r, I will take away the names of Baalim out of her mouth, and they shall no more be remembered by their name. As the

^a Zeph. iii. 12.

^b ii. 1.

^c ii. 3.

^d iii. 11, 12.

^e iii. 12-17.

^f Eph. iii. 19.

^g Ps. xxvii. 5. מִסֵּת

^h מִסֵּת.

ⁱ Ps. xxxi. 19, 20. מִסֵּת.

^k Ps. lxxxiii. 4. מִסֵּת.

^l 2 Chr. xxxiv. 3-7.

^m 2 Kgs xxii. 2 Chr. xxxiv. 8-23.

ⁿ 2 Kgs xxiii. 3. 2 Chr. xxxv. 31.

^o 2 Kgs xxiii. 4-20. 2 Chr. xxxiv. 33.

^p 2 Kgs xxiii. 24.

^q Zeph. i. 4.

^r Hos. ii. 17.

cutting off of the name of the Chemarim means their being utterly obliterated, so, probably, does the cutting off the remnant of Baal. The worship of Baal was cut off, not through Josiah, but (as Zephaniah prophesied) through the captivity. Jeremiah asserts its continuance during his long prophetic office*.

In the absence of any direct authority to the contrary, the description of idolatry by Zephaniah would seem to belong to the period, before the measures to abolish it were begun. He speaks as if everything were full of idolatry†, the worship of Baal, the worship of the host of heaven upon the housetops, swearing by Maleham, and probably the clothing with strange apparel.

The state also was as corrupt‡ as the worship. Princes and judges, priests and prophets were all alike in sin; the judges distorted the law between man and man, as the priests profaned all which related to God. The princes were roaring lions; the judges, evening wolves, ever famished, hungering for new prey. This too would scarcely have been, when Josiah was old enough to govern in his own person. Both idolatry and perversion of justice were continued on from the reign of his father Amon. Both, when old enough, he removed. God Himself gives him the praise, that he did judgement and justice, then it was well with him; he judged the cause of the poor and needy, then it was well with him; was not this to know Me? saith the Lord. His conversion was in the eighth year of his reign. Then, while he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of David his father.

The mention of the king's children§, whom, God says, He would punish in the great day of His visitation, does not involve any later date. They might, any how have been brothers or uncles of the king Josiah. But, more probably, God declares that no rank should be exempt from the judgments of that day. He knew too that the sons of Josiah would, for their great sins, be then punished. The sun of the temporal rule of the house of David set in unmitigated wickedness and sorrow. Of all its kings after Josiah, it is said, they did evil in the sight of the Lord; some were distinguished by guilt; all had miserable ends; some of them aggravated misery!

Zephaniah then probably finished his course before that 12th year of Josiah, (for this prophecy is one whole) and so just before Jeremiah was, in Josiah's 13th year, called to his office, which he fulfilled for half a century, perhaps for the whole age of man.

The foreground of the prophecy of Zephaniah remarkably coincides with that of Habakkuk. Zephaniah presupposes that prophecy and fills it up. Habakkuk had prophesied the great wasting and destruction through the Chaldeans, and then their destruction. That invasion was to extend beyond Judah (for it was said he shall scoff at kings¶), but was to include it. The instrument of God having been named by Habakkuk, Zephaniah does not even allude to him. Rather he brings before Judah the other side, the agency of God Himself. God would not have them forget Himself in His instruments. Hence all is attributed to God. I will utterly consume all things from off the land, saith the Lord. I will consume man and beast; I will consume the fowls of the heaven, and the fishes of the sea, and the stumblingblocks with the wicked, and I will cut off man from the land, saith the Lord. I will also stretch out Mine hand upon Judah; and I will cut off the remnant of Baal. In the day of the Lord's sacrifice, I will punish the princes, &c. In the same day also I will punish all those &c. I will search Jerusalem with candles. The great day of the Lord is near, and I will bring distress upon &c. O Canaan, land of the Philistines, I will even destroy thee. The Lord will be terrible upon them. Ye Ethiopians also, ye shall be slain by My sword. And He will destroy Nineveh. The wicked of the people had said in their heart, The Lord will not do good, neither will He do evil. Zephaniah inculcates, throughout his brief prophecy, that there is nothing, good or evil, of which He is not the Doer or Overruler.

But the extent of that visitation is co-extensive with that prophesied by Habakkuk. Zephaniah indeed speaks rather of the effects, the desolation. But the countries, whose desolation or defeat he foretells, are the lands of those, whom the Chaldeans invaded, worsted, in part desolated. Besides Judah, Zephaniah's subjects are Philistia, Moab, Ammon, Ethiopia (which included Egypt), Nineveh. And here he makes a remarkable distinction corresponding with the events. Of the Ethiopians or Egyptians, he says only, ye shall be slain by My sword. Of Assyria he foretells^b the entire and lasting desolation; the capitals of her palaces in the dust; her cedar-work bare; flocks, wild-beasts, pelican and hedgehog, taking up their abode in her. Moab and Ammon and Philistia have at first sight the two-fold, apparently contradictory, lot; the remnant of My people, God says, shall possess them; the coast shall be for the remnant of the house of Judah; and, that they should be a perpetual desolation. This also was to take place, after God had brought back His people out of captivity. Now all these countries were conquered by the Chaldeans, of which at the time there was no human likelihood. But they were not swept away by one torrent of conquest. Moab and Ammon were, at first, allies of Nebuchadnezzar, and rejoiced at the miseries of the people, whose prophets had foretold their destruction. But, beyond this, Nineveh was at that time more powerful than Egypt. Human knowledge could not have discerned, that Egypt should suffer defeat only, Nineveh should be utterly destroyed. It was the wont of the great conquerors of the East, not to destroy capitals, but to re-people them with subjects obedient to themselves. Nineveh had held Babylon by viceroys; in part she had held it under her own immediate rule. Why should not Babylon, if she conquered Nineveh, use the same policy? Humanly speaking, it was a mistake that she did not. It would have been a strong place against the inroads of the Medo-Persian empire. The Persians saw its value so far for military purposes, as to build some fort there^d; and the Emperor Claudius, when he made it a colony, felt the importance of the well-chosen situation^e. It is replaced by Mosul, a city of some "20000 to 40000" inhabitants. Even after its destruction, it was easier to rebuild it than to build a city on the opposite bank of the Tigris. God declared that it should be desolate. The prediction implied destruction the most absolute. It and its palaces were to be the abode of animals which flee the presence of man; and it perished^f.

site of the old Ninos, on the other side of the Tigris. Tac. Ann. xii. 13.

^c The existence of the Nineve Claudopolis is attested by coins. See Vaux in Smith's Dict. of Greek and Roman Geogr. v. Ninos.

^d See Keith Johnstone, Dict. of Geography ed. 1864, and ed. 1867.

^e See on Nahum, ab. pp. 363-370.

* Jer. ii. 8. vii. 9. xi. 13. xix. 5. xxxii. 29.

† Jer. xxii. 15, 16.

‡ Zeph. i. 2, 4, 8, 9, 13, 14, 17. ii. 5, 11, 12, 13.

§ ii. 13-15.

^a Amm. Marcell. xxiii. 22. The Ninos taken by Meherdates A.D. 59. was on the ⁱ i. 4. 5.

^w See bel. on Zeph. i. 8.

^x i. 12.

^c ii. 9.

^u iii. 3, 4.

^x Hab. i. 10.

^a ii. 12.

Again, what less likely than that Philistia, which had had the rule over Israel, strong in its almost impregnable towns, three of whose five cities were named for their strength, Gaza, strong; Ashdod, mighty; Ekron, deep-rooting; one of which, Ashdod, about this very time, resisted for 29 years the whole power of Egypt, and endured the longest siege of any city of ancient or modern times—what, to human foresight, less likely, than that Philistia should come under the power of the remnant of the house of Judah, when returned from their captivity? Yet it is absolutely foretold^b. The sea-coast shall be for the remnant of the house of Judah; they shall feed thereupon: in the houses of Ashkelon they shall lie down in the evening. For the Lord their God shall visit them, and restore their captivity. As unlikely as it, that Moab and Ammon, who now had entered upon the territory of the two and a half tribes beyond Jordan, should themselves become the possession of the remnant of Judah. Yet so it was.

It is then lost labour, even for their own ends, when moderns, who believe not definite prophecy, would find out some enemyⁱ whom Zephaniah may have had in mind in foretelling this wide destruction. It still remains that all that Zephaniah says beforehand was fulfilled. It is allowed that he could not foretell this through any human foresight. The avowed object in looking out for some power, formidable in Zephaniah's time, is, that he could not, by any human knowledge, be speaking of the Chaldeans. But the words stand there. They were written by Zephaniah, at a time when confessedly no human knowledge could have enabled man to predict this of the Chaldeans; nay, no human knowledge would have enabled any one to predict so absolutely a desolation so wide and so circumstantially delineated.

That school however has not been willing to acquiesce in this, that Zephaniah does not speak of the instrument, through whom this desolation was effected. They will have it, that they know, that Zephaniah had in his mind one, who was not the enemy of the Jews or of Nineveh or of Moab and Ammon, and through whom no even transient desolation of these countries was effected. The whole argument is a simple begging of the question. "^kThe Egyptians cannot be meant; for the Cushites, who are threatened^l, themselves belong to the Egyptian army^m, and Psammetichus only besieged Ashdod which he also took, without emblazoning ought greater on his shieldⁿ. The Chaldeans come still less into account, because they did not found an independent kingdom until B. C. 625, nor threaten Judæa until after Josiah's death. On the other hand an unsuspecting and well-accredited account has been preserved to us, that somewhere about this time the Scythians overflowed Palestine too with their hosts. Herodotus relates^o, that the Scythians, after they had disturbed Cyaxares at the siege of Nineveh, turned towards Egypt; and when they had already arrived in Palestine, were persuaded by Psammetichus to return, and in their return plundered a temple in Ascalon."

It is true that Herodotus says that "a large Scythian army did, under their king Madyes, burst into Asia in pursuit of the Cimmerians and entered Media,—keeping Mount Caucasus on the right," and that "the Medes opposed and fought them and, being defeated, lost their rule^p."

It is true also that Herodotus relates, that "^qthey went thence towards Egypt, and when they were in Palestine-Syria, Psammetichus king of Egypt, meeting them, turned them by gifts and entreaties from going further; that when in their return they were in Ascalon, a city of Syria, whereas most of the Scythians passed by without harming ought, some few of them, being left behind, plundered the temple of Venus Ourania." In this place also, it is true, Herodotus uses a vague expression, that "^rfor 28 years the Scythians ruled over Asia, and that all things were turned upside down by their violence and contempt. For besides the tributes, they exacted from each what they laid upon each, and beside the tribute, they drove together and took what each had. And most of them Cyaxares and the Medes entertaining as guests, intoxicated and slew. And then the Medes recovered their empire and became masters of what they held before."

But, apart from the inconsistency of the period here assigned to their power, with other history, it appears from the account itself, that by "all Asia" Herodotus means "all upper Asia," as he expresses himself more accurately, when relating the expedition of Darius against them. "^sDarius wished to take revenge on the Scythians, because they first, making an inroad into Media and defeating in battle those who went against them, began the wrong. For the Scythians, as I have before said, ruled upper Asia for 28 years. For, pursuing the Cimmerians, they made an inroad into Asia, putting down the Medes from their rule; for these, before the Scythians came, ruled Asia." The Asia then, which Herodotus supposes the Scythians to have ruled, is coextensive with the Asia which he supposes the Medes to have ruled previously. But this was all in the North; for having said that "^tPhraortes subdued Asia, going from one nation to another," he adds that, having brought Persia under his yoke, "he led an army against those Assyrians who had Nineveh, and there lost most of his army and his own life." Apart then from the fabulousness of this supposed empire, established by Phraortes^u, (Cyaxares having been the real founder of the Median empire,) it is plain that, according to Herodotus himself, the Asia, in which the Scythians plundered and received tribute, were the lands North of Assyria. The expedition against Egypt stands as an insulated predatory excursion, the object of which having been mere plunder, they were bought off by Psammetichus and returned (he tells us) doing no mischief^v in their way, except that a few lingerers plundered a temple at Ascalon. It was to Media that they first came; the Medes, whom they defeated; the Median empire to which they succeeded; Cyaxares and the Medes, who treacherously destroyed most of them; the Medes, whose empire was restored by the destruction of some, and the return of the rest to their own land. With this agrees the more detailed account of the Scythians by Strabo, who impeaches the accuracy of the accounts of Herodotus^w. Having spoken of the migrations of leaders, and by name, of "^xMadyes the Scythian" (under whom Herodotus states the irruption to have taken place), he says, ^b ii. 7. ⁱ The Père Paul Pezron (Essai d'un Comm. lit. et hist. sur les prophètes 1697) assumed three irruptions of the Scythians: the first prophesied by Amos and Joel; the second, in the reign of Josiah about 631 B.C.; the third, prophesied (he thinks) by Ezek. xxxviii. xxxix. Baseless as all this is, the characteristic of the late writers is not the selection of the Scythians as the object of the prophecy (which were a thing indifferent) but the grounds alleged for that selection.

^k Hitzig.

^l Ib. i. 105.

^m Jer. xlv. 9.

ⁿ Jer. xlv. 9.

^o Herod. ii. 157.

^p Ib. 105.

^q i. 106. He uses the same wide expression as to Cyrus, after the defeat of Croesus. "Having subdued him, he thus ruled over all Asia," (i. 130); whereas he had not yet conquered Babylon.

^r Ib. i. 106.

^s iv. 4.

^t i. 102. See above p. 306. and Rawlinson Herod. quoted ib.

^u ἀσινέων. Her. l. c.

^v "More readily might we believe Homer and Hesiod in their tales of heroes, and the tragic poets, than Ctesias and Herodotus and Hellicus and others of the same sort." xi. 6. 3.

^w i. 3. 21.

"the Sacæ made the like inroad as the Cimmerians and the Trerians, some longer, some nigh at hand; for they took possession of Bactriana, and acquired the best land of Armenia, which they also left, named after them Sacasene, and advanced as far as to the Cappadocians and especially those on the Euxine, whom they now call of Pontus (Pontians). But the generals of the Persians who were at the time there, attacking them by night, while they were making a feast upon the spoils, utterly extirpated them." The direction which he says they took, is the same as that of the Cimmerians, whom Herodotus says that they followed. "The Cimmerians, whom they also call Trerians, or some tribe of them, often overrun the right side of the Pontus, sometimes making inroads on the Paphlagonians, at others, on the Phrygians. Often also the Cimmerians and Trerians made the like attacks, and they say that the Trerians and Cobus [their king] were, at last expelled by Madyes king of the [Scythians]." Strabo also explains, what is meant by the tributes, of which Herodotus speaks. He is speaking of the Nomadic tribes of the Scythians generally: "A tribute was, to allow them at certain stated times, to overrun the country [for pasturage] and carry off booty. But when they roamed beyond the agreement, there arose war, and again reconciliations and renewed war. Such was the life of the nomads, always setting on their neighbours and then being reconciled again."

The Scythians then were no object of fear to the Jews, whom they passed wholly unnoticed and probably unconscious of their existence in their mountain country, while they once and once only swept unharming along the fertile tracts on the sea-shore, then occupied by the old enemies and masters of the Jews, the Philistines. But Herodotus must also have been misinformed as to the length of time, during which they settled in Media, or at least as to the period during which their presence had any sensible effects. For Cyaxares, whom he represents as having raised the siege of Nineveh, in consequence of the inroad of the Scythians into Media, came to the throne, according to the numbers of Herodotus, B. C. 633. For the reign of Cyaxares having lasted according to him 40 years^b, that of Astyages 35^c, and that of Cyrus 29^d, these 104 years, counted back from the known date of the death of Cyrus, B.C. 529 or 530, bring us to B.C. 633 or 636 as the beginning of the reign of Cyaxares. But the invasion of the Scythians could not have taken place at the first accession of Cyaxares, since, according to Herodotus, he had already defeated the Assyrians, and was besieging Nineveh, when the Scythians burst into Media. According to Herodotus, moreover, Cyaxares "first distributed Asiatics into troops, and first ordered that each should be apart, spearmen, and archers and cavalry; for before, all were mixed pele-mele together." Yet it would not be in a very short time, that those who had been wont to fight in a confused mass, could be formed into an orderly and disciplined army. We could not then, any how, date the Scythian inroad, earlier than the second or third year of Cyaxares. On the other hand the date of the capture of Nineveh is fixed by the commencement of the Babylonian Empire, Babylon falling to Nabopolassar. The duration of that empire is measured by the reigns of its kings^e, of whom, according to Ptolemy's Canon, Nabopolassar reigned 21 years; Nebuchadnezzar, (there called Nabocollassar) 43;

Evil-Merodach (Iluaroadam) 2; Neriglissar (Niricassolassar) 4; Nabunahit (Nabonadius with whom his son Belshazzar was co-regent) 17; in all 87 years; and it ends in an event of known date, the capture of Babylon by Cyrus, B. C. 538. The addition of the 87 years of the duration of the empire to that date carries us back to the date assigned to the capture of Nineveh by Nabopolassar in conjunction with Cyaxares, B.C. 625. The capture then of Nineveh was removed by 8 or 9 years only from that, which Herodotus gives as the time of the accession of Cyaxares, and since the attack upon Nineveh can hardly have been in his first year, and the last siege probably occupied two, the 28 years of Scythian dominion would dwindle down into something too inconsiderable for history. Probably they represent some period from their first incursion into Media, to the final return of the survivors, during which they marauded in Media and Upper Asia. The mode, by which "the greater part" (Herodotus tells us) were destroyed, intoxication and subsequent murder at a banquet, implies that their numbers were no longer considerable.

History, with the exception of that one marauding expedition towards Egypt, is entirely silent as to any excursions of the Scythians, except in the North. No extant document hints at any approach of theirs to any country mentioned by Zephaniah. There was no reason to expect any inroad from them. With the exception of Bactriana, which lies some 18 degrees East of Media and itself extended over some 7 degrees of longitude, the countries mentioned by Strabo lie, to what the kings of Assyria mention as the far North, Armenia, and thence they stretched out to the West, yet keeping mostly to the neighbourhood of the Euxine. Considering the occasion of the mention of the invasion of the Scythians, the relief which their invasion of Media gave to Nineveh, it is even remarkable that there is no mention of any ravages of theirs throughout Mesopotamia or Babylonia. Zephaniah speaks, not of marauding, but of permanent desolation of Assyria, Philistia, Moab, Ammon, and of destructive war also on Ethiopia. There is no reason to think that the Scythians approached any of these lands, except Philistia, which they passed through unharming. The sacred writers mention even smaller nations, by whom God chastised Judah in their times, bands of the Syrians, of Moab, of the children of Ammon, as well as Assyria and Babylon. Ezekiel^f, when he prophesies of the inroad of Northern nations, Meshech and Tubal, Gomer and Togarmah, speaks of it as far removed in the future, prophesies not their destroying but their own destruction.

It does not affect the argument from prophecy, whether Zephaniah did or did not know, through whom the events, which he predicted, should be brought to pass. But, setting aside the question whether he had from the prophecies of Habakkuk and Isaiah, a human knowledge of the Chaldees, or whether God instructed him, how what he foretold should be accomplished, or whether God spread out before his mind that which was to be, apart from time, in prophetic vision, Zephaniah did picture what came to pass. But it is an intense paradox, when men, 2500 years after his date, assert, not only that Zephaniah's prophecies had no relation to the Chaldees, in whom his words were fulfilled, and who are the objects of the prophecies of Habakkuk and Jeremiah, but that they know, what must have been, and

^a xi. 8. 4. ^b Prol. i. 3. 21. ^c xi. 8. 3. ^d Herod. i. 106.

^e Ib. 130. ^f Ib. 214. ^g Ib. 103.

^h Berosus, in his Chaldaean history, agrees as to these dates, only adding 9 months for the son of Neriglissar, Laborosoarchod, in Jos. Ant. x. 11. 1. combined with cont. Apion. i. 20, and Eus. Præp. Evang. ix. 40.

ⁱ Ezek. xxxviii. xxxix.

(as they assert) what was in the prophet's mind; and that he had in his mind, not those in whom his words were fulfilled, but others in whom they were not fulfilled, to whom he does not allude in one single trait, who left no trace behind them, and whose march along an enemy's tract on the sea-coast was of so little account, that no contemporary historian, nor Josephus, even alludes to it^b.

It has been already observed, that each prophet connects himself with one or more of those before them. They use the language of their predecessors in some one or more sentences, apparently with this precise object. They had overflowing fulness of words; yet they chose some saying of the former prophet, as a link to those before them. We have seen this in Amosⁱ, then in Obadiah^k, who uses the language of Balaam, David, Joel, Amos; of Jeremiah^l, in regard to Obadiah¹; of Micah to his great predecessor, Micah^m, and Amos^m; of Jeremiah, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Ezekiel to Micahⁿ; of Nahum to Jonah^o; and of Isaiah (I think), to Nahum^p; of Habakkuk, to Isaiah and Micah^q. It is in conformity with this, that Zephaniah, even more than those before him, uses language of earlier prophets. It arises, not (as people have been pleased to say) from any declension in the originality of prophets at his date, but from his subject. It has been said, "If any one desire to see the utterances of the prophets in brief space, let him read through this brief Zephaniah." The office of Zephaniah was not to forewarn of any instrument of God's judgements. The destruction is prophesied, not the destroyer. His prophecy is, more than those of most other prophets, apart from time, to the end of time. He prophesies of what shall be, not when it shall be, nor by whom. He does not "expect" or "anticipate" or "forebode!" He absolutely declares the future condition of certain nations; but not the how of its coming to pass. If Nineveh, Edom and Ammon had not been desolated, his prophecy would have been falsified; each fulfilment became the earnest of a larger fulfilment; but all shall not be completed until the earth and all that is therein shall be burned up.

It belongs to this character of Zephaniah, that he gathers from other prophets before him, especially Isaiah, Joel, Amos, Habakkuk, expressions relating to, or bearing on, judgement to come, or again to that his other great subject, God's love for the remnant of His people; yet mostly in fragments only and allusively. They were key-notes for those who knew the prophets. Thus, in calling on man to hushed submission before God, because a day of judgement was coming, he blends into one verse^r Habakkuk's call, hush before the Lord, and the warning words of Isaiah, Joel, Obadiah, nigh is the day of the Lord; the image of the sacrifice, which God had commanded, and the remarkable word, consecrated, of God's instruments. The allusion is contained in single words, sacrifice, consecrated; the context in which they are embodied is different. The idea only is the same, that Almighty God maketh, as it were, a sacrifice to Himself of those who incorrigibly rebel against Him. Else Isaiah draws out the image at much length; "A sword of the Lord is full of bloods; it is smeared with fat, with the blood of lambs and of goats; with the fat of kidneys of rams: for the Lord hath a sacrifice in Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Edom. Jeremiah uses the image in equal fulness of the overthrow of Pharaoh-Necho at the Euphrates; 'This is a day of the Lord God of hosts, a day of vengeance, that He may avenge Him of His adversaries: and the sword shall devour, and it shall be satiate and made drunk with blood; for the Lord God hath a sacrifice in the North country by the river Euphrates. Ezekiel expands it yet more boldly^w. Zephaniah drops everything local, and condenses the image into the words, 'The Lord hath prepared a sacrifice; He hath consecrated His guests, adding the new bold image, that they whom God employed were, as it were, His invited guests^x, whom He consecrated^y thereto.

In like way, as to the day of the Lord itself, he accumulates all words of terror from different prophets; from Joel the words, "a day of darkness and of gloominess; a day of clouds and of thick darkness: to these he adds 'of shouting and the sound of the trumpet, used by Amos in relation to the destruction of Moab; the two combinations, which precede, occur, the one in a different sense, the other with a slightly different grammatical inflexion, in Job^b.

From Isaiah, Zephaniah adopts that characteristic picture of self-idolising, which brings down God's judgements on its pride; (the city) "that dwelleth securely, that said in her heart, I and no I besides.

Even where Isaiah says, *"For a consumption and that decreed, the Lord God of hosts makes in the midst of all the earth and, slightly varying it, 'For a consumption and that decreed, I have heard from the Lord God of hosts upon all the earth, Zephaniah, retaining the two first words, which occur in both places, says more concisely, 'For a consumption, nought but terror, will He make all the inhabitants of the earth. Yet simple as the words are, he pronounced, that God would not only bring a desolation upon the earth, or in the midst of the earth, but would make its inhabitants one consumption. Nahum had said of Nineveh, *"with an overflowing flood He will make the place thereof an utter consumption. The most forceful words are the simplest.

He uses the exact words of Isaiah, "From beyond the rivers of Cush, than which none can be simpler, and employs the word of festive procession, though in a different formⁱ, and having thus connected his prophecy with Isaiah's, all the rest, upon which the prophecy turns, is varied.

In like way he adopts from Micah the three words^k, her-that-halteth, and-will-gather her-that-is-driven-out. The context in which he resets them is quite different.

It has been thought, that the words, "I have heard the reproach of Moab, may have been suggested by those of Isaiah, who begins his lament over Moab, "We have heard of the pride of Moab; but the force and bearing of the ^b The name Σουθπολις, which Josephus says the Greeks gave to Bethshan, (Ant. 12. 8. 6) and which they alone can have given, is manifestly, as being Greek, too late to contain any tradition as to the presence of the Scythians in Palestine, three centuries before the Greeks, under Alexander, became acquainted with Palestine. S. Jerome regarded it as a corruption of Succoth. He says on Gen. xxxiii. 17, "In the Hebrew is read Succoth (בִּנְתַּן). But there is to this day a city beyond Jordan into which this name enters in part, Scythopolis." Quæst. Hebr. ad Gen. [Opp. iii. 358. ed. Vall.] quoted by Reland, p. 992.

ⁱ See ab. Intro. to Joel p. 94. ^k See Intro. to Obadiah ab. pp. 230, 231. ^l Ib. pp. 223-231. ^m See Intro. to Micah ab. p. 294. ⁿ Ib. ^o See Intro. to Nahum ab. p. 356. ^p Ib. 370. ^q Ib. 399. ^r i. 7. ^s Hab. ii. 20. ^t Is. xiii. 6. Jo. i. 15. iv. 15. Ob. 15. The words ^u are used of a day of God's judgements, Is. xiii. 9, Jo. ii. 1, 11, Am. v. 18, 20. Ezek.

xiii. 5. Mal. iii. 23, not with קָרָב. In Is. ii. 12, it is לֵי יוֹם or in Jo. ii. 1. subordnately. ^v Is. xxxiv. 6. ^w Jer. xlvii. 10. ^x Ezek. xxxix. 17. ^y Zephaniah's word, קָדַשׁ occurs besides only in 1 Sam. ix. 13. ^z Isaiah's word (xiii. 3.) is קָדַשׁ; Zephaniah's קָדַשׁ. ^a Job ii. 2. Zeph. i. 16. ^b Job xxxiv. 27. ^c Is. xlvii. 8. ^d Is. x. 23. ^e Ib. xxviii. 22. ^f Ib. 22. ^g He retains the simplest words, but substitutes the word (a word formed by himself) for the תְּהוֹמָה of Isaiah. ^h Nah. i. 8. ⁱ Zeph. iii. 10. ^j Is. xlviii. 1. ^k Zeph. iii. 19. ^l Is. xlviii. 7. ^m Zeph. ii. 8. ⁿ Is. xvi. 6.

words is altogether different, since it is God Who says, I have heard, and so He will punish.

The combination ^m, the exulters of pride, is common to him with Isaiah: its meaning is uncertain; but it is manifestly different in the two places, since the one relates to God, the other to man.

The words, ⁿ They shall build houses and shall not dwell therein; they shall plant vineyards and not drink the wine thereof, are from the original threat in Deuteronomy, from which also the two words, ^o They shall walk as the blind, may be a reminiscence, but with a conciseness of its own and without the characteristic expressions of Deuteronomy, adopted by other sacred writers: ^p They shall grope at noonday, as the blind gropeth in darkness.

Altogether these passages are evidence that Zephaniah is of later date than the prophecies in which the like language occurs; and the fact that he does employ so much language of his predecessors furnishes a strong presumption in any single case, that he in that case also adopted from the other sacred writer the language which they have in common.

It is chiefly on this ground, that a train of modern critics ^q have spoken disparagingly of the outward form and style of Zephaniah. It has however a remarkable combination of fullness with conciseness and force. Thus, he begins the enumeration of those upon whom the destruction should fall, with the words, ^r consuming I will consume all: to an enumeration co-extensive with the creation, he adds unexpectedly, ^s and the stumblingblocks with the wicked, anticipating our Lord's words of the Day of Judgement, ^t they shall gather the stumblingblocks and them that do iniquity: to the different idolatries he adds those of a divided faith, ^u swearers to the Lord and swearers by Malcham; to those who turned away from God he adds those who were unearnest in seeking Him ^v.

Again, after the full announcement of the destruction in the Day of the Lord, the burst, in those five words, ^w sift yourselves and sift (on) nation unlonged for, is, in suddenness and condensation, like Hosea; and so again, in five words, after the picture of the future desolation of Nineveh, the abrupt turn to Jerusalem, ^x Wo rebellious and-defiled (thou) oppressive city, and then follow the several counts of her indictment, in brief disjointed sentences, first negatively, as a whole; each in three or four words ^y, she-listened not to voice; she-received not correction; in-the-Lord she-trusted not; to-her-God she-approached not; then, in equally broken words, each class is characterised by its sins; ^z her-princes in-her-midst are roaring lions; her-judges evening wolves; not gnawed-they-bones on-the-morrow; her-prophets empty-babblers, men of-deceits; her-priests profaned holiness, violated law. Then in sudden contrast to all this contumacy, neglect, despite of God, He Himself is exhibited as in the midst of her; the witness and judge of all; there, where they sinned. ^a The-Lord righteous in-her-midst; He-doeth not iniquity; by-morning by-morning His-judgement He-giveth to-light; He-faileth not; and then in contrast to the holiness and the judgements of God, follows in four words, the perseverance of man in his shamelessness, and—the fruit of all this presence and doings of the Holy and Righteous God and Judge is, and-not knoweth the wrong-doer shame. Zephaniah uses the same disjoining of the clauses in the description of God's future manifestation of His love towards them. Again it is the same thought ^b, The-Lord thy-God (is) in-thy-midst; but now in love; mighty, shall-save; He-shall-rejoice over-thee with-joy; He-shall-keep-silence in-His-love; He-shall-rejoice over-thee with-jubilee. The single expressions are alike condensed; ^c she-hearkened not to-voice, stands for what Jeremiah says at such much greater length, how God had sent all His servants ^d the prophets, daily rising up early and sending them, but they hearkened not unto Me nor inclined their ear, but hardened their neck. The words ^e shall-be-silent in-His-love, in their primary meaning, express the deepest human love, but without the wonted image of betrothal.

^f The whole people of Canaan reminds one of Hosea; ^g the-men-coagulated on-their-lees is much expanded by Jeremiah ^h, his word occurs before him in Job only and the song of Moses ⁱ. Single poetic expressions are, that Moab should become ^k the possession of briars, the word itself being framed by Zephaniah; in the description of the desolation of Nineveh, ^l a voice singeth in the window; desolation is on the threshold, the imagery is so bold, that modern criticism has thought that the word voice which occurs in the O. T. 328 times and with pronouns 157 times more, must signify "an owl," and desolation must stand for "a crow ^m." Very characteristic is the word, ⁿ He shall famish all the gods of the earth, expressing with wonderful irony, the privation of their sacrifices, which was the occasion of the first Heathen persecutions of the Christians.

When then a writer, at times so concise and poetic as Zephaniah is in these places, is, at others, so full in his descriptions, this is not prolixity, but rather vivid picturing; at one time going through all the orders of creation ^o; at another, different classes of the ungodly ^p; at yet another, the different parts of the scared woe-stricken city ^q, to set before our eyes the universality of the desolation. Those who are familiar with our own great Northern poet of nature, will remember how the accumulation of names adds to the vividness of his descriptions. Yet here too there is great force in the individual descriptions, as when he pictures the petty plunderers for their master, and fill their masters' houses—not with wealth but—with violence and fraud^r, all which remains of wealth gained by fraud and extortion being the sins themselves, which dwell in the house of the fraudulent to his destruction.

In the strictly prophetic part of his office, Jerusalem having been marked out by Micah and Isaiah before him, as the place where God would make the new revelation of Himself, Zephaniah adds, what our Lord revealed to the Samaritan woman, ^s that Jerusalem should no longer be the abiding centre of worship. ^t They shall worship Him, every man from his place, all the isles of the nations, is a prophecy which, to this day, is receiving an increasing accomplishment. It is a prophecy, not of the spread of Monotheism, but of the worship of Him, to Whose worship at that time a handful of Jews could with difficulty be brought to adhere, the deser-

^m Is. xlii. 3. Zeph. i. 13. Deut. xxviii. 30, 39. The words are more exact than in Micah vi. 14. Am. v. 11.

^o Zeph. i. 17.

^p Deut. xxviii. 29.

^q Eichhorn, De Wette, Stähelin, and their followers. De Wette however does own, "In employing what is not his own, he is, at least, original in its expansion." Einl. 245. note b.

^r i. 2.

^s i. 3.

^t S. Matt. xiii. 41.

^u Zeph. i. 5.

^v i. 6.

^w ii. 1.

^x ii. 1.

^y iii. 2.

^z iii. 2.

^a Jer. vii. 24—28.

^b Ib. 5.

^c Ib. 17.

^d iii. 2.

^e Jer. vii. 24—28.

^f Jer. vii. 24—28.

Ewald alters, with the LXX, into יְהוָה which does not occur elsewhere. But the LXX renders "shall renew thee;" Ewald, "(God) becomes young (sich verjünget) in His love!"

^g Zeph. i. 11. Comp. Hos. xii. 7. ^h i. 12. ⁱ Jer. xlviii. 11. ^j Job x. 10. Ex. xv. 8.

^k ii. 9. ^l ii. 14. ^m "ל" must answer to the Ethiopian አገልግሎት and our eule (owl); and עֵיט seems equal עֵיט. Ewald Proph. ii. 25. ⁿ See below on ii. 11.

^o i. 3. ^p Ib. 4—9. ^q Ib. 10, 11. ^r Ib. 9. Amos has the like idea (iii. 10) but no word is the same except חָסֵד. ^s S. John iv. 21. ^t ii. 11.

^u iii. 17. Some modern commentators take umbrage at the beautiful expression.

tion or corruption or association of Whose worship with idolatry Zephaniah had to denounce and to foretell its punishment. The love which God should then shew to His own is expressed in words, unequalled for tenderness; and in conformity to that love is the increasing growth of holiness, and the stricter requirements of God's holy justice. Again, Zephaniah has a prelude to our Blessed Lord's words, "to whom much is given, of him shall much be required, or His Apostle's, of the great awe in working out our salvation". Progress is a characteristic and condition of the Christian life; "We beseech you, that as ye have received of us, how ye ought to walk and to please God, ye would abound more and more". Even so Zephaniah bids "all the meek of the earth, who have wrought His judgements or law to seek diligently that meekness, which had already characterised them, and that, not in view of great things, but, if so be they might be saved; it may be that ye may be hid in the day of the Lord's anger, as S. Peter saith, 'If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?' It is again remarkable, how he selects meekness, as the characteristic of the new state of things, which he promises. He anticipates the contrast in the Magnificat, in which the lowest lowliness was rewarded by the highest exaltation. As it is said there, 'He hath put down the mighty from their seat and hath exalted the humble and meek, so the removal of the proud from within thee, and the 'leaving of an afflicted and poor people within thee', is the special promise by Zephaniah.

Little is said of the captivity. It is a future variously assumed^b. Judah in the furthest lands, beyond the rivers of Ethiopia, is the daughter of My dispersed^c; the whole earth is the scene of their shame^d; their praises should be commensurate with their shame, when I turn back your captivity before your eyes^e. But this turning away of their captivity is the only notice, that their punishment should be the going into captivity. The captivity itself is pre-supposed, as certain and as known. So neither are there any images from temporal exaltation. All pride should be removed, as utterly unbecfitting God's holy presence: thou shalt no more be haughty in My holy mountain^f. The words expressive of the abasement of those within her are proportionably strong, "My afflicted and poor". Some are wont, in these days, to talk of God's prophets as patriots. They were such truly, since they loved the land of the Lord with a Divine love. But what mere "patriot" would limit his promises to the presence of "a poor people in a low estate," with an unseen presence of God? The description belongs to His kingdom, which was not of this world^g: the only king whom Zephaniah speaks of, the king of Israel^h, is Almighty God. The blessing which he promises, is the corresponding blessing of peace, "Fear thou not; thou shalt not see evil any more, none shall make them afraid". But the words "Let not thy hands be slack", imply that they shall be aggressive on the world; that they were not to relax from the work which God assigned to them, the conversion of the world.

An allusion to the prophet Joelⁱ makes it uncertain whether words of Zephaniah relate to the first Coming of our Lord, or the times which should usher in the Second, or to both in one; and so, whether, in accordance with his general character of gathering into one all God's judgements to His end, he is speaking of the first restoration of the one purified language of faith and hope, when "the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul", or whether he had his mind fixed rather on the end, when "the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in". The words also (since they may be taken either way^o) leave it uncertain whether the Gentiles are spoken of as bringing in the people of God, (as they shall at the end) or whether the first conversion of the Jews, even in the most distant countries, is his subject.

In any case, Zephaniah had a remarkable office, to declare the mercy and judgement of God, judgements both temporal and final, mercies, not of this world, promised to a temper not of this world, "the wisdom which is from above, pure, peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy".

^a S. Luke xii. 48.
^g 1 S. Pet. iv. 18.
^o Ib. 10.

^v Phil. ii. 12.
^s S. Luke ii. 52.
^d Ib. 19.

^w 1 Thess. iv. 1.
^a Zeph. iii. 12.
^e Ib. 20. add. ii. 7.

^x ii. 3.
^b Ib. 13.
^f Ib. 11.

^g Ib. 12.
^h iii. 16.
ⁿ Rom. xi. 25.

^h S. John xviii. 36.
ⁱ iii. 2. [iv. 2 Heb.]
^o See on Zeph. iii. 10.

^l Zeph. iii. 15.
^m Acts iv. 32.
^p S. James iii. 7.

"I WILL MAKE RABBAH A STABLE FOR CAMELS, AND THE AMMONITES A COUCHING PLACE FOR FLOCKS."—EZEK. xxv. 4, 5.
See bel. p. 468.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

CHAPTER I.

God's severe judgement against Judah for divers sins.

THE word of the LORD which came unto Zephaniah the son of Cushi, the son of Gedaliah, the son of Amariah, the son of Hizkiah, in the days of Josiah the son of Amon, king of Judah.

CHAP. I., VER. 1. The word of the Lord which came unto Zephaniah the son of Cushi, the son of Gedaliah, the son of Amariah, the son of Hezekiah. It seems likely that more forefathers of the Prophet are named than is the wont of Holy Scripture, because the last so named was some one remarkable. Nor is it impossible that Zephaniah should have been the great grandson of the king Hezekiah; for although Holy Scripture commonly names the one son only who is in the sacred line, and although there is one generation more than to Josiah, yet if each had a son early, Zephaniah might have been contemporary with Josiah. The names seem also mentioned for the sake of their meaning; at least it is remarkable how the name of God appears in most. Zephaniah, "whom the Lord hid;" Gedaliah, "whom the Lord made great;" Amariah, "whom the Lord promised;" Hezekiah, "whom the Lord strengthened."

2 I will utterly consume all things; better *all*¹. The word is not limited to "things" "animate" or "inanimate" or "men;" it is used severally of each, according to the context; here, without limitation, of "all." God and all stand over against one another; God and all which is not of God or in God. God, he says, will utterly consume all from off the land [earth.] The prophet sums up in few words the subject of the whole chapter, the judgements of God from his own times to the day of Judgement itself. And this Day Itself he brings the more strongly before the mind, in that, with wonderful briefness, in two words which he conforms, in sound also, the one to the other, ² he expresses the utter final consumption of all things. He expresses at once the intensity of action and blends their separate meanings, Taking away I will make an end of all; and with this he unites the words used of the flood, *from off the face of the earth*³. Then he goes through the whole creation as it was made, pairing man and beast, which Moses speaks of as created on the sixth day, and the creation of the fifth day, the fowls of the heaven and the fishes of the sea; and before each he sets the solemn word of God, I will end, as the act of God Himself. The words can have no complete fulfilment, until ⁴ the earth and the works that are therein shall be burned up, as the Psalmist too, having gone through the creation, sums up, ⁵ Thou takest away their breath, they die and return to their dust; and then speaks of the re-creation, ⁶ Thou sendest forth Thy Spirit, they are

¹ כל is used absolutely in a title of God, "Who maketh all," עֹשֶׂה כָּל, Is. xlv. 24; "Thou canst do all," i. e. art Almighty, Job xlii. 2; "Thou hast put all under his feet," Ps. viii. 7; and of man, "mine eye hath seen all," Job xlii. 1; and personally, gathering in one all which he had said of God's doings, with לא אֶקְרָא "want not any thing," De. viii. 9. וְקָרָא "want of every thing," Jer. xlv. 18. De. xxviii. 48. 57; "all were [lit. was] ashamed" (with sing. verb) כָּל הָאָדָם Is. xxx. 5.

² So also Jeremiah viii. 13, in the same words, אֶסְתֵּף אֶסְתֵּף. Rashi makes them one word, supposing אֶסְתֵּף to be for אֶסְתֵּף. A. E. mentions those who thought that א in אֶסְתֵּף was prefixed, as in אֶסְתֵּף Is. xxviii. 28; but it is unnatural to assume a rare and irregular form, when the word אֶסְתֵּף is the regular form from the common word אֶסְתֵּף.

³ הָאָרֶץ signifies "earth," almost always in the phrase הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת, always in the phrase הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת, unless they be limited by some addition, as "which the Lord sware that He would give thee." הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת is thus used Gen. vi. 1, vii. 23, Ex. xxxiii.

2 I will utterly consume all things from off the land, saith the LORD.

3 ^a I will consume man and beast; I will consume the fowls of the heaven, and the fishes of the sea, and ^b the || stumbling blocks with the wicked; and I will cut off man from off the land, saith the LORD.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 603.

† Heb. By taking away I will make an end.

† Heb. the face of the land.

Hos. 4. 3.

Ezek. 7. 19.

& 14. 3, 4, 7.

Matt. 13. 41.

|| Or, idols.

created; and Thou renewest the face of the earth, and, ⁷ of old Thou hast laid the foundations of the earth, and the heavens are the work of Thy hands; they shall perish, but Thou shalt endure, yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt Thou change them, and they shall be changed. Local fulfilments there may, in their degree, be. S. Jerome speaks as if he knew this to have been. ⁸ "Even the brute animals feel the wrath of the Lord, and when cities have been wasted and men slain, there cometh a desolation and scarceness of beasts also and birds and fishes; witness Illyricum, witness Thrace, witness my native soil," [Stridon, a city on the confines of Dalmatia and Pannonia] "where, besides sky and earth and rampant brambles and deep thickets, all has perished." But although this fact, which he alleges, is borne out by natural history, it is distinct from the words of the prophet, who speaks of the fish, not of rivers (as S. Jerome) but of the sea, which can in no way be influenced by the absence of man, who is only their destroyer. The use of the language of the histories of the creation and of the deluge implies that the prophet has in mind a destruction commensurate with that creation. Then he foretells the final removal of offences, in the same words which our Lord uses of the general Judgement. ⁹ The Son of Man shall send forth His Angels and they shall gather out of His kingdom all things that offend, and them that do iniquity.

3 *The stumbling-blocks*¹⁰ with the wicked. Not only shall the wicked be utterly brought to an end, or, in the other meaning of the word, gathered into bundles to be taken away, but all causes of stumbling too; everything, through which others can fall, which will not be until the end of all things. Then, he repeats, yet more emphatically, *I will cut off the whole race of man*¹¹ from the face of the earth, and then he closes the verse, like the foregoing, with the solemn words, saith the Lord. All this shall be fulfilled in the Day of Judgement, and all other fulfilments are earnest of the final Judgement. They are witnesses of the ever-living presence of the Judge of all, that God does take account of man's deeds. They speak to men's conscience, they attest the existence of a Divine law, and therewith of the future complete manifestation of that law, of which they are individual sentences. Not until the prophet has brought this circle of judgements to their close, does he pass on to the particular judgements on Judah and Jerusalem.

16, Nu. xii. 3, De. vii. 6, xiv. 2, 2 Sam. xiv. 7, Is. xxxiii. 17, Jer. xxv. 26, Ezek. xxxviii. 20. מִלְּפָנֵי הָאָרֶץ "from the face of the earth" occurs, unlimited by the context. Gen. iv. 14, vi. 7, vii. 4, viii. 8, Ex. xxxii. 12, De. vi. 15. 1 Sam. xx. 15. 1 Kgs xiii. 34. Jer. xxviii. 16. Am. ix. 8. אֶרֶץ is used of cultivable land, and so הָאָרֶץ is used in connection with rain falling on the ground, 1 Kgs xvii. 14; but הָאָרֶץ suffers no exception, unless it be restrained by an addition.

⁴ 2 S. Pet. iii. 10.

⁵ 1 Ib. cii. 25.

⁶ S. Jer.

⁷ S. Matt. xiii. 41.

⁸ S. Jer.

⁹ S. Matt. xiii. 41.

¹⁰ מִלְּפָנֵי הָאָרֶץ i. q. מִלְּפָנֵי הָאָרֶץ Jer. vi. 21, Ezek. xxi. 20. So Kim., Rashi, who limits it to idolatry (as Ges.) without reason. They are the wicked generally, not one class of them. In Is. iii. 6. (where alone the word occurs besides) it is used metaphorically of the state, "this ruin."

¹¹ הָאָדָם, as in the history of the creation, Gen. i. 27, or the flood, Ib. vi. 7. vii. 21.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

c Fulfilled,
cir. 624.
2 Kin. 23. 4, 5.

4 I will also stretch out mine hand upon Judah, and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and I will cut off the remnant of Baal from this place, and the name of the Chemarims with the priests;

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

5 And them that worship the host of

Hos. 10. 5.
2 Kin. 23. 12.
Jer. 19. 13.

4 I will also stretch out Mine Hand, as before on Egypt¹. Judah had gone in the ways of Egypt and learned her sins, and sinned worse than Egypt². The mighty Hand and stretched-out Arm, with which she had been delivered, shall be again stretched out, yet not for her but upon her, upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem. In this threatened destruction of all, Judah and Jerusalem are singled out, because judgement shall begin at the house of God. They who have sinned against the greater grace shall be most signally punished. Yet the punishment of those whom God had so chosen and loved is an earnest of the general judgement. This too is not a partial but a general judgement "upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem."

And I will cut off the remnant of Baal, i. e. to the very last vestige of it. Isaiah unites ⁴name and residue, as equivalents, together with the proverbial, posterity and descendant⁵. Zephaniah distributes them in parallel clauses, "the residue⁶ of Baal and the name of the Chemarim." Good and evil have each a root, which remains in the ground, when the trunk has been hewn down. There is a remnant according to the election of grace, when the rest have been blinded; and this is a holy seed to carry on the line of God. Evil too has its remnant, which, unless diligently kept down, shoots up again, after the conversion of peoples or individuals. The mind of the flesh remains in the regenerate also. The prophet foretells the complete excision of the whole remnant of Baal, which was fulfilled in it after the captivity, and shall be fulfilled as to all which it shadows forth, in the Day of Judgement. From this place; for in their phrenzy, they dared to bring the worship of Baal into the very temple of the Lord¹⁰. "Who would ever believe that in Jerusalem, the holy city, and in the very temple idols should be consecrated? Whoso seeth the ways of our times will readily believe it. For among Christians and in the very temple of God, the abominations of the heathen are worshipped. Riches, pleasures, honours, are they not idols which Christians prefer to God Himself?"

And the name of the Chemarim with the priests. Of the idolatrous priests¹² the very name shall be cut off, as God promises by Hosea, that He will take away the names of Baalim, and by Zechariah, that He will cut off the names of the idols out of the land. Yet this is more. Not the name only of the Chemarim, but themselves with their name, their posterity, shall be blotted out; still more, it is God Who cuts off all memory of them, blotting them out of the book of the living and out of His own. They had but a name before, that they were living, but were dead. "The Lord shall take away names of vain glory, wrongly admired, out of the Church; yea, the very names of the priests with the priests who vainly flatter themselves with the name of Bishops and the dignity of Presbyters without their deeds. Whence he markedly says, not, and the deeds of priests with the priests, but the names; who only bear the false name of dignities, and with evil works destroy their own names." The priests are priests of the Lord, who live not like priests, corrupt in life and doctrine and corrupters of God's people¹⁷. The judgement is pronounced alike on what was intrinsically evil, and on good which had corrupted itself into evil. The title of priest is no where given to the priest of a false God, without some mention in the context, implying that they were idolatrous priests; as the priests of Dagon¹⁸, of the high-places as ordained by Jeroboam¹⁹, of Baal²⁰, of Bethel²¹, of Ahab²², of those who were not gods²³, of On, where the sun was worshipped²⁴. The priests then were God's priests, who in the evil days of Manassch had manifoldly corrupted their life or their faith, and who were still evil. The priests of Judah, with its kings its princes and the people of the land, were in Jeremiah's inaugural vision enumerated as those, who shall, God says, fight against thee, but shall not prevail against thee. The priests said not, Where is the Lord? and they that handle the law knew Me not. In the general corruption, A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land, the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule at their hands²⁸; the children of Israel and the children of Judah, their kings, their princes, their priests, and their prophets, and the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, have turned unto Me the back, and not the face. Jeremiah speaks specifically of heavy moral sins. From the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely; both prophet and priest are profane; for the sins of her prophets, the iniquities of her priests, that have shed the blood of the just in the midst of her. And Isaiah says of their sensuality; the priests and the prophets have erred through strong drink; they are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink.

5 And them that worship the host of heaven upon the [flat] housetops. This was fulfilled by Josiah who destroyed the altars that were on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz. Jeremiah speaks as if this worship was almost universal, as though well-nigh every roof had been profaned by this idolatry. The houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of Judah, shall be defiled as the place of Tophet, because of all the houses upon whose roofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven, and have poured out drink-offerings unto other gods. The Chaldeans that fight against this city, shall come and

¹ Ex. vi. 6, De. iv. 34, v. 15, vii. 19, xi. 2, xxvi. 8, and thence Jer. xxxii. 21, Ps. cxxxvi. 12. Isaiah had, in the same phrase, prophesied God's judgements against Israel in the burden v. 25, ix. 11, 16, x. 4. ² Jer. ii. 10, 11. ³ 1 S. Pet. iv. 17, Jer. xxv. 29.

⁴ Is. xiv. 22. ⁵ חֵרֶם, which occur only together, Gen. xxi. 23, Job xviii. 19, Is. xiv. 22.

⁶ חֵרֶם is not limited, like חֵרֶם, to that which remains over when a former or larger part has ceased or is gone. It is mostly "the rest," after others who had been named, yet still it may be the larger number; as, "the rest of those chosen," 1 Chr. xvi. 41; "the rest of their brethren, the priests and the Levites," Ezr. iii. 9 (8. Eng.); "the rest of the chief of the fathers," Ib. iv. 3; "the rest of their companions," Ib. 7; "the rest of the people," Neh. x. 29, xi. 1, "the rest of Israel," Ib. 20; "the rest of the Jews," Esth. ix. 16. So in Isaiah, "the rest of Syria" besides Damascus. Is. xvi. 3, and "the rest of the Spirit" Mal. ii. 15. (See Ib.) ⁷ Rom. xi. 5, 7.

⁸ Is. vi. 13. ⁹ φρόνημα σαρκός. ¹⁰ 2 Kgs xxiii. 4. ¹¹ Rib.

¹² The chemarim is the name of idolatrous priests generally, (it occurs also 2 Kgs xxiii. 5. Hos. x. 5). In 2 Kings, where is the account of the first fulfilment of this prophecy, they appear as priests of the idolatrous high-places, distinct from the priests of Baal and of the host of heaven. The name is probably the Syriac name of "priest," used in Holy Scripture of idolatrous priests, because the Syrians were idolaters. See Gesenius Gesch. d. Hebr. Sprache p. 53. In Chald. חֵרֶם is limited to idolatrous priests. See Buxt. and Levy. ¹³ Hos. ii. 17. ¹⁴ Zech. xiii. 2.

¹⁵ Rev. iii. 1. ¹⁶ S. Jer. ¹⁷ See Jer. ii. 8, v. 31.

¹⁸ 1 Sam. v. 5. ¹⁹ 1 Kgs xiii. 2, 33, 2 Kgs xxiii. 20. ²⁰ 2 Chr. xi. 15.

²¹ 2 Kgs x. 19, xi. 18, 2 Chr. xxiii. 17. ²² Am. vii. 10. ²³ 2 Kgs x. 11.

²⁴ 2 Chr. xiii. 9. ²⁵ Gen. xli. 45-50. &c. The name "Potiphar," probably belonging to "Phre," implies this. ²⁶ Jer. i. 18, 19. ²⁷ Jer. v. 30, 31. ²⁸ Jer. xxxii. 32, 33. ²⁹ Jer. xxxii. 32, 33. ³⁰ Ib. vi. 13, viii. 10.

³¹ Jer. xxiii. 11. ³² Lam. iv. 13. ³³ Is. xxviii. 7. ³⁴ 2 Kgs xxiii. 12.

³⁵ Jer. xix. 13. ³⁶ Ib. xxxii. 29.

Before CHRIST
cir. 630. heaven upon the housetops; ¹and them that worship ²and ³that swear || by the set fire on this city, and burn it with the houses, upon whose roofs they have offered incense unto Baal, and poured out drink-offerings to other gods, to provoke Me to anger. They worshipped on the house-tops, probably to have a clearer view of that magnificent expanse of sky, ¹the moon and stars which God had ordained; the queen of heaven, which they worshipped instead of Himself. There is something so mysterious in that calm face of the moon, as it ²walketh in beauty; God seems to have invested it with such delegated influence over the seasons and the produce of the earth, that they stopped short in it, and worshipped the creature rather than the Creator. Much as men now talk of "Nature," admire "Nature," speak of its "laws," not as laws imposed upon it, but inherent in it, laws affecting us and our well-being; only not in their ever-varying vicissitudes, ³doing whatsoever God commandeth them upon the face of the world in the earth, whether for correction, or for His land or for mercy! The idolaters ⁴worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, Who is blessed for ever; moderns equally make this world their object, only they idolise themselves and their discoveries, and worship their own intellect.
¹1 Kin. 18. 21. 2 Kin. 17. 33, 41. ²Isai. 48. 1. Hos. 4. 15. || Or, to the Lord.

This worship on the house-tops individualised the public idolatry; it was a rebellion against God, family by family; a sort of family-prayer of idolatry. ⁵Did we, say the mingled multitude to Jeremiah, make our cakes to worship her, and pour out our drink-offerings unto her, without our men? Its family character is described in Jeremiah. ⁶The children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead the dough to make cakes to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto other gods. The idolatry spread to other cities. ⁷We will certainly do, they say, as we have done, we and our fathers, our kings and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem. The incense went up continually as a memorial to God from the Altar of incense in the temple: the roofs of the houses were so many altars, from which, street by street and house by house, the incense went up to her, for whom they dethroned God, the queen of heaven. It was an idolatry, with which Judah was especially besotted, believing that they received all goods of this world from them and not from God. When punished for their sin, they repented of their partial repentance and maintained to Jeremiah that they were punished for ⁸leaving off to burn incense to the queen of heaven.

And them that worship the Lord, but with a divided heart and service; that swear by [rather ⁹to] the Lord, swear fealty and loyal allegiance to Him, while they do acts which deny it, in that they swear by Malcham, better [it is no appellation although allied to one] their king¹⁰, most probably, I think, "Moloch."

This idolatry had been their enduring idolatry in the wilderness, after the calves had been annihilated; it is the worship, against which Israel is warned by name in the law¹¹; then, throughout the history of the Judges, we hear of the

Lorn, and that swear ^hby Malcham; Before CHRIST cir. 630. 6 And ⁱthem that are turned back from ^hJosh. 23. 7. 1 Kin. 11. 33. ⁱIsai. 1. 4. Jer. 2. 13, 17. & 15. 6.

kindred idolatry of Baal¹², the Lord (who was called also "eternal king" and from whom individuals named themselves "son of [the] king," "servant of [the] king"¹³), or the manifold Baals¹⁵ and Ashtarothe or Astarte. But after these had been removed on the preaching of Samuel¹⁶, this idolatry does not reappear in Judah until the intermarriage of Jehoram with the house of Ahab¹⁷. The kindred and equally horrible worship of ¹⁸Molech, the abomination of the children of Ammon, was brought in by Solomon in his decay, and endured until his high-place was defiled by Josiah¹⁹. It is probable then that this was their king²⁰, of whom Zephaniah speaks, whom Amos²¹ and after him Jeremiah, called their king; but speaking of Ammon. Him, the king of Ammon, Judah adopted as their king. They owned God as their king in words; Molech they owned by their deeds; they worshipped and swore fealty to the Lord and they swore by their king; his name was familiarly in their mouths; to him they appealed as the Judge and witness of the truth of their words, his displeasure they invoked on themselves, if they swore falsely. ²²Those in error were wont to swear by heaven, and, as matter of reverence to call out, 'By the king and lord Sun.' Those who do so must of set purpose and wilfully depart from the love of God, since the law expressly says, ²³Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and serve Him alone, and swear by His Name."

The former class who worshipped on the roofs were mere idolaters. These worshipped, as they thought, the Lord, bound themselves solemnly by oath to Him, but with a reserve, joining a hateful idol to Him, in that they, by a religious act, owned it too as god. The act which they did was in direct words, or by implication, forbidden by God. The command to swear by the Lord implied that they were to swear by none else. It was followed by the prohibition to go after other gods²⁴. Contrariwise to swear by other gods was forbidden as a part of their service. ²⁵Be very courageous to keep and to do all that is written in the book of the Law of Moses, neither make mention of the name of their gods, nor cause to swear by them, neither serve them, but cleave unto the Lord your God. ²⁶How shall I pardon thee for this? Thy children have forsaken Me, and have sworn by those who are no gods. ²⁷They taught My people to swear by Baal. They thought perhaps that in that they professed to serve God, did the greater homage to Him, professed and bound themselves to be His, (such is the meaning of swear to the Lord) they might, without renouncing His service, do certain things, swear by their king, although in effect they thereby owned him also as god. To such Elijah said, ²⁸How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow Him; but if Baal, then follow him; and God by Jeremiah rejects with abhorrence such divided service. ²⁹Ye trust in lying words, which will not profit. Will ye steal, murder, commit adultery, swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods, and come and stand before Me in this house, which is

¹ Ps. viii. 3. ² Job xxxi. 26. ³ Ib. xxxvii. 12, 13. ⁴ Rom. i. 25.
⁵ Jer. xlv. 19. ⁶ Ib. vii. 18. ⁷ Ib. xlv. 17. ⁸ Ib. 2, 15, 18.
⁹ As in the E. M., comp. 2 Chr. xv. 14. Is. xix. 18. xlv. 23. It can only mean this.
¹⁰ כְּמֶלֶךְ as כְּמֶלֶךְ Am. v. 26. and כְּמֶלֶךְ Jer. xlix. 1, 3. where the E.V. too renders, their king. On his worship see ab. p. 200. ¹¹ Lev. xviii. 21, xx. 2-4.
¹² Always used with the article expressed or understood, מֶלֶךְ, מֶלֶכֶת, unless the specific name (Bael-berith, Bael-zebub, Bael-peor) is mentioned.
¹³ Numid. 1, 2, 3 in Ges. Thes. p. 795. ¹⁴ עֲבָדָה, עֲבָדָה, עֲבָדָה, ap. Ges. l. c.
¹⁵ מֶלֶכֶת in Judges, 1 Sam., 2 Kgs, 2 Chron., Jeremiah, Hosea.

¹⁶ 1 Sam. vii. 6. xii. 10. ¹⁷ 2 Kgs viii. 16-18. 26, 27. 2 Chr. xxi. 6, 12, 13. xxii. 2-4.
¹⁸ 1 Kgs xi. 7. ¹⁹ 2 Kgs xxiii. 13, 14.
²⁰ Molech is always an appellation, except 1 Kgs xi. 7. Else (by a pronunciation belonging probably to Ammon) it is מֶלֶךְ Lev. xx. 5, or מֶלֶכֶת Lev. xviii. 21, xx. 2, 4, 2 Kgs xxiii. 10, Jer. xxxii. 35. As a proper name, it is Milcom, 1 Kgs xi. 5, 33, 2 Kgs xxiii. 13. ²¹ See ab. on Amos i. 15. p. 169. ²² S. Cyr. ²³ Deut. vi. 13.
²⁴ Ib. vi. 13, 14, x. 30. comp. Is. lxi. 16. Jer. iv. 2. ²⁵ Josh. xxiii. 6-8. comp. Amos vii. 14. ²⁶ Jer. v. 7. ²⁷ Ib. xii. 16.
²⁸ 1 Kgs xviii. 21. ²⁹ Jer. vii. 8-10.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

the LORD; and those that ^k have not sought the LORD, nor enquired for him.

^k Hos. 7. 7.
^l Hab. 2. 20.
Zech. 2. 13.

7 ¹ Hold thy peace at the presence of the called by My name, saying, We are delivered to do all these abominations. And Hosea, ¹ Neither go ye to Beth-aven, and swear there, The Lord liveth.

Such are Christians, “² who think that they can serve together the world and the Lord, and please two masters, God and Mammon; who, being soldiers of Jesus Christ and having sworn fealty to Him, ³ entangle themselves with the affairs of this life and offer the same image to God and to Cæsar.” To such, God, Whom with their lips they own, is not their God; their idol is, as the very name says, their king, whom alone they please, displeasing and dishonouring God. We must not only fear, love, honour God, but love, fear, honour all besides for Him Alone.

6 And them that are turned back from [lit. *have turned themselves back from following after*⁴] the Lord. From this half-service, the prophet goes on to the avowed neglect of God, by such as wholly fall away from Him, not setting His Will or law before them, but turning away from Him. It is their misery that they were set in the right way once, but themselves turned themselves back, now no longer following God, but ⁵ their own lusts, drawn away and enticed by them. How much more Christians, before whose eyes Christ Jesus is set forth, not as a Redeemer only but as an Example that they should ⁶ follow His steps!

And those that have not sought the Lord, nor enquired for Him. This is marked to be a distinct class. And those who. These did not openly break with God, or turn away overtly from Him; they kept (as men think) on good terms with Him, but, like the slothful servant, rendered Him a listless heartless service. Both words express diligent search⁷. God is not found then in a careless way. They who seek Him not *diligently*⁸, do not find Him. Strive, our Lord says, ⁹ to enter in at the strait gate; for many, I say unto you, shall seek to enter in, and shall not be able. She who had lost the one piece of silver, *sought diligently*¹⁰, till she had found it.

Thus he has gone through the whole cycle. First, that most horrible and cruel worship of Baal, the idolatrous priests and those who had the name of priests only, mingled with them, yet not openly apostatising; then the milder form of idolatry, the star-worshippers; then those who would unite the worship of God with idols, who held themselves to be worshippers of God, but whose real king was their idol; then those who openly abandoned God; and lastly those who held with Him, just to satisfy their conscience-qualms, but with no heart-service. And so, in words of Habakkuk and in reminiscence of his awful summons of the whole world before God, he sums up;

7 Hold thy peace at the presence of the Lord God. [lit. Hush, in awe from the Face of God.] In the Presence of God, even the righteous say from their inmost heart, ¹¹ I am vile, what shall I answer Thee? I will lay mine hand upon my mouth. ¹² Now mine eye seeth Thee, wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes. ¹³ Enter not into judge-

LORD GOD: ^m for the day of the LORD is at hand: for ⁿ the LORD hath prepared a sacrifice, he hath [†] bid his guests.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.
^m Isai. 13. 6.

ⁿ Isai. 31. 6. Jer. 46. 10. Ezek. 39. 17. Rev. 19. 17.
[†] Heb. sanctified, or prepared.

ment with Thy servant, O Lord; for in Thy sight shall no man living be justified. How much more must the ¹⁴ man without the wedding garment be speechless, and every false plea, with which he deceived himself, melt away before the Face of God! The voice of God's Judgement echoes in every heart, ¹⁵ we indeed justly.

For the Day of the Lord is at hand. Zephaniah, as is his wont, grounds this summons, which he had renewed from Habakkuk, to hushed silence before God, on Joel's prophetic warning¹⁶, to shew that it was not yet exhausted. A day of the Lord, of which Joel warned, had come and was gone; but it was only the herald of many such days; judgements in time, heralds and earnest, and, in their degree, pictures of the last which shall end time.

¹⁷ All time is God's, since He Alone is the Lord of time; yet that is specially said to be His time when He doth anything special. Whence He saith, ¹⁸ My time is not yet come; whereas all time is His. The Day of the Lord is, in the first instance, “¹⁹ the day of captivity and vengeance on the sinful people,” as a forerunner of the Day of Judgement, or the day of death to each, for this too is near, since, compared to eternity, all the time of this world is brief.

For the Lord hath prepared a sacrifice. God had rejected sacrifices, offered amid unrepented sin; they were ¹⁹ an abomination to Him. When man will not repent and offer himself as ²⁰ a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God, God, at last, rejects all other outward oblations, and the sinner himself is the sacrifice and victim of his own sins. The image was probably suggested by Isaiah's words, ²¹ The Lord hath a sacrifice in Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea; and Jeremiah subsequently uses it of the overthrow of Pharaoh at the Euphrates, ²² This is the day of the Lord of Hosts; that He may avenge Him of His adversaries; for the Lord God hath a sacrifice in the north country by the river Euphrates. ²³ The Lord hath made all things for Himself, yea even the wicked for the day of evil. All must honour God, either fulfilling the will of God and the end of their own being and of His love for them, by obeying that loving Will with their own free-will, or, if they repudiate it to the end, by suffering it.

He hath bid [lit. *sanctified*²⁴] His guests. God had before, by Isaiah, called the heathen whom He employed to punish Babylon, ²⁵ My sanctified ones. Zephaniah, by giving the title to God's instruments against Judah, declares that themselves, having become in deeds like the heathen, were as heathen to Him. The instruments of His displeasure, not they, were so far His chosen, His called²⁶. Jeremiah repeats the saying, ²⁷ Thus saith the Lord against the house of the king of Judah;—I have sanctified against thee destroyers, a man and his weapons. That is, so far, a holy war in the purpose of God, which fulfils His will; whence Nebuchadnezzar was ²⁸ His servant, avenging His wrongs²⁹. “³⁰ To be sanctified, here denotes not the laying aside of iniquity, nor the participation of the Holy Ghost, but, as it were, to be fore-

¹ Hos. iv. 15. See ab. p. 31. ² S. Jer. ³ 2 Tim. ii. 3, 4.
⁴ Such is the uniform use of לִפְנֵי. Its common construction is with אִשָּׁר; with אִשָּׁר, as here, Is. lix. 13; Kal. with כִּי of pers., Ps. lxxx. 19; Nif. with כִּי of thing, 2 Sam i. 22.
⁵ S. Jas. i. 14. ⁶ 1 S. Pet. ii. 21. ⁷ שָׁקַף, intensive; שָׁקַף of search below the surface.
⁸ S. Matt. ii. 8. ⁹ S. Luke xiii. 24. ¹⁰ Ib. xv. 8. ¹¹ Job xl. 4. ¹² Ib. xlii. 5, 6.

¹³ Ps. cxlii. 2. ¹⁴ S. Matt. xxii. 11, 12. ¹⁵ S. Luke xxiii. 41. ¹⁶ Joel i. 15. See ab. p. 109. and ii. 1. p. 111. ¹⁷ Dion. ¹⁸ S. John vii. 6. ¹⁹ Is. i. 11-15.
²⁰ Rom. xii. 1. ²¹ Is. xxxiv. 6. ²² Jer. xvi. 10. ²³ Prov. xvi. 4. ²⁴ See E. M. ²⁵ Is. xlii. 3. ²⁶ קָדְשִׁים. ²⁷ Jer. xxii. 6, 7. ²⁸ Ib. xxv. 9.
²⁹ See on Joel iii. 9. ab. p. 187 and Micah iii. 5. ab. p. 312. ³⁰ S. Cyr.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

† Heb. visit
upon
Jer. 39. 6.

8 And it shall come to pass in the day of the LORD's sacrifice, that I will †punish the princes, and the king's children, and all ordained and chosen to the fulfilment of this end." That is in a manner hallowed, which is employed by God for a holy end, though the instrument, its purposes, its aims, its passions, be in themselves unholy. There is an awe about "the scourges of God." As with the lightning and the tornado, there is a certain presence of God with them, in that through them His Righteousness is seen; although they themselves have as little of God as the wind and storm which fulfil His word. Those who were once admitted to make offerings to God make themselves sacrifices to His wrath; these, still heathen and ungodly and in all besides reprobate, are His Priests, because in this, although without their will, they do His Will.

8 I will punish [lit. visit upon]. God seems oftentimes to be away from His own world. Men plot, design, say, in word or in deed, who is Lord over us? God is, as it were, a stranger in it, or as a man, who hath taken a journey into a far country. God uses our own language to us. I will visit, inspecting, (so to say), examining, sifting, reviewing, and when man's sins require it, allowing the weight of His displeasure to fall upon them.

The princes. The prophet again, in vivid detail (as his characteristic is), sets forth together sin and punishment. Amid the general chastisement of all, when all should become one sacrifice, they who sinned most should be punished most. The evil priests had received their doom. Here he begins anew with the mighty of the people and so goes down, first to special spots of the city, then to the whole, man by man. Josiah being a godly king, no mention is made of him. Thirteen years before his death¹, he received the promise of God, because thine heart was tender, and thou hast humbled thyself before the Lord—I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered unto thy grave in peace, and thou shalt not see all the evil which I will bring upon this place. In remarkable contrast to Jeremiah, who had to be, in detail and continual pleading with his people, a prophet of judgement to come, until those judgements broke upon them, and so was the reprove of the evil sovereigns who succeeded Josiah, Zephaniah has to pronounce God's judgements only on the princes and the king's children. Jeremiah, in his inaugural vision, was forewarned, that ²*the kings of Judah, its princes, priests, and the people of the land* should war against him, because he should speak unto them all which God should command him. And thenceforth Jeremiah impleads or threatens kings and the princes together³. Zephaniah contrariwise, his office lying wholly within the reign of Josiah, describes the princes again as ⁴*roaring lions*, but says nothing of the king, as neither does Micah⁵, in the reign, it may be, of Jotham or Hezekiah. Isaiah speaks of princes, as ⁶*rebellious and companions of thieves*. Jeremiah speaks of them as idolaters⁷. They appear to have had considerable influence, which on one occasion they employed in defence of Jeremiah⁸, but mostly for evil⁹. Zedekiah enquired of Jeremiah secretly for fear of them¹⁰. They brought destruction upon themselves by what men such as are clothed with strange apparel.

9 In the same day also will I punish all those that leap on the threshold, which fill

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

praise, their resistance to Nebuchadnezzar, but against the declared mind of God. Nebuchadnezzar unwittingly fulfilled the prophet's word, when he ¹¹*slew all the nobles of Judah, the eunuch who was over the war, and seven men of them that were near the king's person, and the principal scribe of the host.*

And the king's children. Holy Scripture mentions chief persons only by name. Isaiah had prophesied the isolated lonely loveless lot of descendants of Hezekiah who should be *eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon*¹², associated only with those intriguing pests of Eastern courts¹³, a lot in itself worse than the sword (although to Daniel God overruled it to good) and Zedekiah's sons were slain before his eyes and his race extinct. Jehoiakim died a disgraced death, and Jehoiachin was imprisoned more than half the life of man.

And all such as are clothed with strange apparel. Israel was reminded by its dress, that it belonged to God. It was no great thing in itself; a *band of dark blue*¹⁴ upon the fringes at the four corners of their garments. But the band of dark blue was upon the high-priest's mitre, with the plate engraved, ¹⁵*Holiness to the Lord*, fastened upon it; with a band of dark blue also was the breastplate¹⁶ bound to the ephod of the high-priest. So then, simple as it was, it seems to have designated the whole nation, as ¹⁷*a kingdom of priests, an holy nation*. It was appointed to them, ¹⁸*that ye may look upon it, and remember all the commandments of the Lord and do them, and that ye seek not after your own heart and your own eyes, after which ye use to go a whoring; that ye may remember and do all My commandments, and be holy unto your God.* They might say, "it is but a band of blue;" but the band of blue was the soldier's badge, which marked them as devoted to the service of their God; indifference to or shame of it involved indifference to or shame of the charge given them therewith, and to their calling as a peculiar people. The choice of the strange apparel involved the choice to be as the nations of the world; ¹⁹*we will be as the heathen, as the families of the countries.*

All luxurious times copy foreign dress, and with it, foreign manners and luxuries; whence even the heathen Romans were zealous against its use. It is very probable that with the foreign dress foreign idolatry was imported²⁰. The Babylonian dress was very gorgeous, such as was the admiration of the simpler Jews. ²¹*Her captains and rulers clothed in perfection, girded with girdles upon their loins, with flowing dyed attire upon their heads.* Ezekiel had to frame words to express the Hebrew idea of their beauty. Jehoiakim is reproved among other things for his luxury²². Outward dress always betokens the inward mind, and in its turn acts upon it. An estranged dress betokened an estranged heart, whence it is used as an image of the whole spiritual mind²³. ²⁴*The garment of the sons of the king and the apparel of princes which we receive in Baptism, is Christ, according to that, Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and Put ye on bowels of mercy, goodness, humility, patience, and the rest. Wherein we are commanded to be clothed with the new man from* ¹ 2 Kgs xxii. 19, 20. ² Jer. i. 18. ³ Ib. ii. 26, iv. 9, viii. 1, xxiv. 8, xxxii. 37, xxxiv. 21. ⁴ Zeph. iii. 3. ⁵ Mic. iii. 1, 9. ⁶ Is. i. 23. ⁷ Jer. xxxi. 32-34, xlv. 21. ⁸ Ib. xxvi. 16. ⁹ Ib. xxxvii. 15, xxxviii. 4, 16. ¹⁰ Ib. xxxvii. 17, xxxviii. 14-27. ¹¹ Ib. xxxix. 6, lii. 25-27. ¹² Is. xxxix. 7. See Daniel the prophet p. 16.

¹³ See Ib. p. 21, 22. ¹⁴ Nu. xv. 38. De. xxii. 12. ¹⁵ Ex. xxviii. 36. ¹⁶ Ib. xxxix. 21. ¹⁷ Ib. xix. 6. ¹⁸ Nu. xv. 39, 40. ¹⁹ Ezek. xx. 33. ²⁰ Jon. Rashi and S. Jer. connect it with idolatry. ²¹ Ezek. xxiii. 12, 15. ²² Jer. xxii. 14, 15. ²³ Rom. xiii. 14, Col. iii. 12, Eph. iv. 24. ²⁴ S. Jer.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630. their masters' houses with violence and deceit.

10 And it shall come to pass in that day, Before
CHRIST
cir. 630. saith the Lord, that there shall be the noise heaven according to our Creator, and to ¹lay aside the clothing of the old man with his deeds. Whereas then we ought to be clothed in such raiment, for mercy we put on cruelty, for patience, impatience, for righteousness, iniquity; in a word, for virtues, vices; for Christ, Antichrist. Whence it is said of such an one, ²*He is clothed with cursing as with a garment.* These the Lord will visit most manifestly at His Coming. ³"Thinkest thou that hypocrisy is strange apparel? Of a truth. For what stranger apparel than sheeps' clothing to ravening wolves? What stranger than for him who ⁴*within is full of iniquity*, to appear outwardly righteous before men?"

9 I will punish all those that leap on the threshold. Neither language nor history nor context allow this to be understood of the idolatrous custom of Ashdod, not to tread on the threshold⁵ of the temple of Dagon. It had indeed been a strange infatuation of idolatry, that God's people should adopt an act of superstitious reverence for an idol in the very instance in which its nothingness and the power of the true God had been shewn. Nothing is indeed too brutish for one who chooses an idol for the true God, preferring Satan to the good God. Yet the superstition belonged apparently to Ashdod alone; the worship of Dagon, although another form of untrue worship, does not appear, like that of Baal, to have fascinated the Jews; nor would Zephaniah, to express a rare superstition, have chosen an idiom, which might more readily express the contrary, that they "leapt on the threshold," not over it⁶. They are also the same persons, who leap on the threshold, and who fill their masters' houses with violence and deceit. Yet this relates, not to superstition, but to plunder and goods unjustly gotten. As then, before, he had declared God's judgements upon idolatry, so does he here upon sins against the second table, whether by open violence, or secret fraud, as do also Habakkuk⁷, and Jeremiah⁸. All, whether open or hidden from man, every wrongful dealing, (for every sin as to a neighbour's goods falls under these two, violence or fraud) shall be avenged in that day. Here again all which remains is the sin. They enriched, as they thought, their masters, by art or by force; they schemed, plotted, robbed; they succeeded to their heart's wish; but, "ill-gotten, ill-spent!" They filled their masters' houses quite full; but wherewith? with violence and deceit, which witnessed against them, and brought down the judgements of God upon them.

10 A cry from the fish-gate. The fish-gate was probably in the North of the wall of the second city. For in Nehemiah's rebuilding, the restoration began at the sheep-gate⁹, (so called doubtless, because the sheep for the sacrifices were brought in by it) which, as being near the temple, was repaired by the priests; then it ascended Northward, by two towers, the towers of Meah and Hananeel; then two companies repaired some undescribed part of the wall¹⁰, and then another company *built the fish-gate*¹¹. Four companies are then mentioned, who repaired, in order, to the old gate, which was repaired by another company¹². Three more companies repaired beyond these; and they left Jerusalem unto the broad wall¹³. After three more sections repaired by individuals, two others repaired a *second measured portion, and the tower of the furnaces*¹⁴. This order is reversed in the account of the dedication of the walls. The people being divided¹⁵ into two great companies of them that give thanks, some place near the tower of the furnaces was the central point, from which both parted to encompass the city in opposite directions. In this account, we have two additional gates mentioned, the gate of Ephraim¹⁶, between the broad wall and the old gate, and the prison-gate, beyond the sheep-gate, from which the repairs had begun. The gate of Ephraim had obviously not been repaired, because, for some reason, it had not been destroyed. Else Nehemiah, who describes the rebuilding of the wall so minutely, must have mentioned its rebuilding. It was obviously to the North, as leading to Ephraim. But the tower of Hananeel must have been a very marked tower. In Zechariah Jerusalem is measured from North to South, ¹⁷*from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's winepresses*. It was then itself at the North-East corner of Jerusalem, where towers were of most importance to strengthen the wall, and to command the approach to the wall either way. The fish-gate then, lying between it and the gate of Ephraim, must have been on the North side of the city, and so on the side where the Chaldean invasions came; yet it must have been much inside the present city, because the city itself was enlarged by Herod Agrippa on the North, as it was unaccountably contracted on the South¹⁸. The then limits of Jerusalem are defined. For Josephus thus describes the second wall. ¹⁹"It took its beginning from that gate which they called Gennath, which belonged to the first wall; it only encompassed the northern quarter of the city and reached as far as the tower of Antonia." The tower of Antonia was situated at the North-West angle of the corner of the temple. The other end of the wall, the Gennath or garden gate, must have opened on cultivated land; and Josephus speaks of the gardens on the N. and N. W. of the city which were destroyed by Titus in levelling the ground²⁰. But near the tower of Hippicus, the North-Western extremity of the first wall, no ancient remains have been discovered by excavation²¹; but they have been traced North, from "an ancient Jewish semi-circular arch, resting on piers 18 feet high, now buried in rubbish." These old foundations have been traced at three places²² in a line on the East of the Holy Sepulchre (which lay consequently outside the city) up to the judgement gate, but cavating and removing the rubbish accumulated over the place during so many centuries, in retracing the walls, in examining the monuments and ancient remains, and in penetrating and traversing the conduits and vaults."—"I have," he says, "made excavations and watched those made by others, have formed intimacies with the inhabitants of the country, have sought for information on the spot, regardless of personal risk, have worked with my own hands underground, and so have obtained much knowledge of that which lies below the surface of the soil in Jerusalem." Jerusalem explored Pref. p. viii.

²² 1) At the meat-bazaar near the convent of S. Mary the Great. "In digging down to the rock to lay the new foundations, 10 feet below the surface, I came upon large stones, boldly rusticated and arranged in a manner that reminded me of the Phœnician work of the time of Solomon." 2) on the East of the Church of the Resurrection. 3) "close to the West of the present judgement gate." "In digging down for the rock, I found, 18 feet below the surface, a fragment of a wall, resembling, in all respects, that first described." Ib. p. 33.

¹ Eph. iv. 22. ² Ps. cix. 17. ³ Rup. ⁴ S. Matt. xxiii. 28. ⁵ כַּפֵּץ is used 1 Sam. v. 4, 5, Ezek. ix. 3, x. 4, 18, xlvii. 2, xlvii. 1; elsewhere כָּפֶץ. There is a trace of this explanation in the Chald., "who walk in the laws of the Philistines," and in S. Jerome, doubtless from his Jewish teachers. Isaiah's reproof that they have soothsayers like the Philistines, ii. 6, is altogether different.

⁶ כָּפֶץ is, in the only other place, Cant. ii. 8, "bounding on the mountains;" "bounding over" (like our "leapt a wall") happens to be expressed by an acc., 2 Sam. xviii. 30, Ps. xviii. 30; "passing over" had been expressed more clearly by עָלָה, as in Ez. xii. 23, 27. ⁷ Hab. i. 2, 3. ⁸ Jer. v. 27. ⁹ Neh. iii. 1. ¹⁰ Ib. 2.

¹¹ Ib. 3. ¹² Ib. 4-6. ¹³ Ib. 7, 8. ¹⁴ Ib. 9-11. ¹⁵ Ib. xii. 31-38. ¹⁶ Ib. 39.

¹⁷ Zech. xiv. 10. ¹⁸ See ab. p. 318. ¹⁹ B. J. v. 4, 2. ²⁰ Ib. v. 3, 2. ²¹ Pierotti, "Jerusalem explored" p. 32, from whom this account is taken. Signor Pierotti's work is "the fruit of eight years of continual labour devoted to a study of the topography of Jerusalem upon the spot, in which I have been constantly occupied in ex-

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.
2 Chr. 33. 14.

of a cry from the fish gate, and an howling from the second, and a great crashing from the hills.

not North of it¹. The line from West to East, i. e., to the tower of Antonia, is marked generally by "very large stones, evidently of Jewish work, in the walls of houses, especially in the lower parts²." They are chiefly in the line of the Via Dolorosa.

The fish-gate had its name probably from a fish-market (markets being in the open places near the gates³) the fish being brought either from the lake of Tiberias or from Joppa. Near it, the wall ended, which Manasseh, after his restoration from Babylon⁴, built without the city of David, on the West side of Gihon, in the valley. This, being unprotected by its situation, was the weakest part of the city. "The most ancient of the three walls could be considered as impregnable, as much on account of its extreme thickness, as of the height of the mountain on which it was built, and the depth of the valleys at its base, and David, Solomon and the other kings neglected nothing to place it in this state." Where they had made themselves strong, there God's judgement should find them.

And a howling from the second city, as it is supplied in Nehemiah, who mentions the prefect set over it⁶. It was here that Huldah the prophetess lived⁷, who prophesied the evils to come upon Jerusalem, after Josiah should be gathered to his grave in peace. It was probably the lower city, which was enclosed by the second wall. It was a second or new city, as compared to the original city of David, on Mount Moriah. On this the enemy who had penetrated by the fish-gate would first enter; then take the strongest part of the city itself. Gareb⁸ and Bezetha were outside of the then town; they would then be already occupied by the enemy before entering the city.

A great crashing from the hills. These are probably Zion, and Mount Moriah on which the temple stood, and so the capture is described as complete. Here should be not a cry or howling only, but an utter destruction⁹. Mount Moriah was the seat of the worship of God; on Mount Zion was the state, and the abode of the wealthy. In human sight they were impregnable. The Jebusites mocked at David's siege, as thinking their city impregnable¹⁰; but God was with David and he took it. He and his successors fortified it yet more, but its true defence was that the Lord was round about His people¹¹, and when He withdrew His protection, then this natural strength was but their destruction, tempting them to resist first the Chaldeans, then the Romans. Human strength is but a great crash, falling by its own weight and burying its owner. "This threefold cry¹², from three parts of the city, had a fulfilment before the destruction by the Romans. In the lower part of the city Simon tyrannised, and in the middle John raged, and there was a great crashing from the hills, i. e., from the

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.
1 Jam. 5. 1.

11 Howl, ye inhabitants of Maktesh, for all the merchant people are cut down; all they that bear silver are cut off.

temple and citadel where was Eleazar, who stained the very altar of the temple with blood, and in the courts of the Lord made a pool of blood of divers corpses." "In the assaults of an enemy the inhabitants are ever wont to flee to the tops of the hills, thinking that the difficulty of access will be a hindrance to him, and will cut off the assaults of the pursuers. But when God smiteth, and requireth of the despisers the penalties of their sin, not the most towered city nor impregnable circuits of walls, not height of hills, or rough rocks, or pathless difficulty of ground, will avail to the sufferers. Repentance alone saves, softening the Judge and allaying His wrath, and readily inviting the Creator in His inherent goodness to His appropriate gentleness. Better is it, with all our might to implore that we may not offend Him. But since human nature is prone to evil, and in many things we all offend, let us at least by repentance invite to His wonted clemency the Lord of all, Who is by nature kind."

11 Howl, ye inhabitants of Maktesh, lit. Mortar¹⁵, "in which," S. Jerome says, "corn is pounded; a hollow vessel, and fit for the use of medical men, in which properly ptisans are wont to be beaten (or made). Striking is it, that Scripture saith not, 'who dwell in the valley or in the alley,' but who dwell in the mortar, because as corn, when the pestle striketh, is bruised, so the army of the enemy shall rush down upon you¹⁶." The place intended is probably so much of the valley of the Tyropæon which intersected Jerusalem from North to South, as was enclosed by the second wall, on the North, and the first wall on the South. The valley "extended as far as the fountain of Siloam," and united with the valley of Jehoshaphat a little below Ophel. It was "full of houses," and, from its name as well as from its situation, it was probably the scene of petty merchandise, where the occasions in which men could and did break the law and offend God, were the more continual, because they entered into their daily life, and were a part of it. The sound of the pestle was continually heard there; another sound should thereafter be heard, when they should not bruise, but be themselves bruised. The name Maktesh was probably chosen to express how their false hopes, grounded on the presence of God's temple among them while by their sins they profaned it, should be turned into true fears. They had been and thought themselves Mikdash, "a holy place, sanctuary;" they should be Maktesh¹⁹, wherein all should be utterly bruised in pieces.

"Whoso considereth the calamities of that siege, and how the city was pressed and hemmed in, will feel how aptly he calls them the inhabitants of a mortar; for, as grains of corn are brought together into a mortar, to the end that, when the pestle descendeth, being unable to fly

¹ This appeared from excavations made in repairing the then Russian consulate, and from "enquiries of all who in former years had built in this neighbourhood." Ib.

² "These were found when the Effendi Kadduti repaired and partly rebuilt the house in the Via Dolorosa at the Station of Veronica. A similar discovery was made by the Mufti in strengthening his house at the Station of Simon of Cyrene, and by the Effendi Soliman Giari, opposite to the Mufti's house on the North. The Armenian Catholic monks requested me to examine and level a piece of land, at the Station of the first fall of Christ; which, as representative of his nation, he had just bought. In the lower part of the wall enclosing it on the north, very large stones and an ancient gate were found. In the foundations of the Austrian hospice, laid in 1857, to the north of the Armenian property, large stones were discovered, and also further to the East, in the new convent of the Daughters of Zion." Pierotti pp. 33, 34.

³ See 2 Kgs vii. 1. Neh. xiii. 16, 19. ⁴ 2 Chr. xxxiii. 14. ⁵ Jos. de B. J. v. 4. 2.

⁶ Neh. xi. 9, E. V. "was second over the city" on account of the absence of the article, על העיר שניה. I prefer taking it, as in a sort of apposition, as Ewald does, Lehrs. n. 287, l. p. 734. ed. 8. ⁷ 2 Kings xxii. 14. 2 Chr. xxxiv. 22. It is called by Josephus ἡ ἄλλη, "another" city, Ant. xv. 11, 5. ⁸ Jer. xxxi. 39. ⁹ Not, as some, "a cry of destruction," as in Is. xv. 5. Isaiah has indeed the words וקץ שבר וקץ שבר "cry of destruction," but here שבר, לילה, are plainly parallel to one another. ¹⁰ 2 Sam. v. 6. ¹¹ Ps. cxxv. 2.

¹² From Rup. ¹³ S. Cyr. ¹⁴ S. James iii. 2. ¹⁵ Prov. xxvii. 22. It is also a proper name in Jud. xv. 19, since Lehi in which it was situate (לחי בלוי), was a proper name, Ib. and 9, and 14. ¹⁶ S. Jer. ¹⁷ See Signor Pierotti's map. ¹⁸ Jos. B. J. v. 4. 1. ¹⁹ The two words do so occur in an epistle of the Samaritans (Cellar. Epist. Sichemit. p. 25) Ges.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

12 And it shall come to pass at that time, that I will search Jerusalem with candles, and punish the men that are † settled on their lees: † that say in their heart, The Lord will not do good, neither will he do evil.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

† Heb. curded, or, thickened.

† Jer. 48. 11. Amos 6. 1.

• Ps. 94. 7.

off, they may be bruised, so the people flowing together, out of all the countries of Judæa, was narrowed in by a sudden siege, and through the savage cruelty of the above leaders of the sedition, was unutterably tortured from within; more than by the enemy without."

For all the merchant people [lit. the people of Canaan] are cut down; i. e., "they who in deeds are like the people of Canaan," according to that, ² Thou art of Canaan and not of Judah, and, ³ Thy father is an Amorite and thy mother a Hittite. So our Lord says to the reprobate Jews, ⁴ Ye are of your father the devil.

All they that bear [lit. ⁵ all laden with] silver are cut off. The silver, wherewith they lade themselves, being gotten amiss, is a load upon them, weighing them down until they are destroyed.

12 I will search [lit. diligently]. The word is always used of a minute diligent search, whereby places, persons, things, are searched and sifted one by one in every corner, until it be found whether a thing be there or no⁶. Hence also of the searching out of every thought of the heart, either by God⁷, or in repentance by the light of God⁸.

Jerusalem with candles: so that there should be no corner, no lurking-place so dark, but that the guilty should be brought to light. The same diligence, which Eternal Wisdom used, to seek and to save that which was lost, ⁹ lighting a candle and searching diligently, till It find each lost piece of silver, the same shall Almighty God use that no hardened sinner shall escape. "What the enemy would do, using unmingled phrenzy against the conquered, that God fitteth to His own Person, not as being Himself the Doer of things so foreign, but rather permitting that what comes from anger should proceed in judgement against the ungodly." It was an image of this, when, at the taking of Jerusalem by the Romans, they "dragged out of common sewers and holes and caves and tombs, princes and great men and priests, who for fear of death had hid themselves." How much more in that Day when the secrets of all hearts shall be revealed by Him Who ¹³ searcheth the hearts and reins, and to Whose Eyes ¹³ which are like flaming Fire, all things are naked and open! The candles wherewith God searcheth the heart, are men's own consciences¹⁴, His Own revealed word¹⁵, the lives of true Christians¹⁶. These, through the Holy Ghost in each, may enlighten the heart of man, or, if he takes not heed, will rise in judgement against him, and shew the falsehood of all vain excuses. "One way of escape only there is. If we judge ourselves, we shall not be judged. I will search out my own ways and my desires, that He Who shall search out Jerusalem with candles, may find nothing in me, unsought and unsifted. For He will not twice judge the same thing. Would that I might so follow and track out all my offences, that in none I need fear His piercing Eyes, in none be ashamed at the light of His candles! Now I am seen, but I see not. At hand is that Eye, to Whom all things are open, although Itself is not open. Once ¹⁸ I shall know, even as I am known. Now I know in part, but I am not known in part, but wholly."

The men that are settled on their lees, stiffened and contracted¹⁹. The image is from wine which becomes harsh, if allowed to remain upon the lees, unremoved. It is drawn out by Jeremiah²⁰, Moab hath been at ease ²¹ from his youth, and he hath settled on his lees, and hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, neither hath he gone into captivity; therefore his taste remained in him, and his scent is not changed. So they upon whom no changes come, fear not God²². The lees are the refuse of the wine, yet stored up (so the word²³ means) with it, and the wine rests, as it were, upon them. So do men of ease rest in things defiled and defiling, their riches or their pleasure, which they hoard up, on which they are bent, so that they "lift not their mind to things above, but, darkened with foulest desires, are hardened and stiffened in sin."

That say in their heart, not openly scoffing, perhaps thinking that they believe; but people do believe as they love. Their most inward belief, the belief of their heart and affections, what they wish, and the hidden spring of their actions, is, The Lord will not do good, neither will He do evil. They act as believing so, and by acting inure themselves to believe it. They think of God as far away, ²⁵ Is not God in the height of heaven? And behold the height of the stars, how high they are! And thou sayest, How doth God know? Can He judge through the dark cloud? Thick clouds are a covering to Him, that He seeth not; and He walketh in the circuit of heaven. ²⁶ The ungodly in the pride of his heart (thinketh); He will not enquire; all his devices (speak), There is no God. Strong are his ways at all times; on high are Thy judgements out of his sight. ²⁷ They slay the widow and the stranger, and murder the fatherless, and they say, The Lord shall not see, neither shall the God of Jacob regard it. ²⁸ Such things they did imagine and were deceived; for their own wickedness blinded them. As for the mysteries of God, they knew them not. ²⁹ Faith without works is dead. Faith which acts not dies out, and there comes in its stead this other persuasion, that God will not repay. There are more Atheists than believe themselves to be such. These act as if there were no Judge of their deeds, and at last come, themselves to believe that God will not punish³⁰. What else is the thought of all worldlings, of all who make idols to themselves of any pleasure or gain or ambition, but, "God will not punish?" "God cannot punish the [wrongful, selfish,] indulgence of the nature which He has made." "God will not be so precise." "God will not punish with everlasting severance from Him, the sins of this short life." And they

¹ Ch. ² Hist. of Susannah 56. ³ Ezek. xvi. 3. See also on Hosea xii. 7, ab. p. 78. ⁴ S. John viii. 44. ⁵ A passive adj. (קטל from קטל). As an act. adj. (קטל from קטל) it would rather imply that they cast it on others.

⁶ Nif., of Esau by enemies Ob. 6, Pih., for Laban's idols, Gen. xxxi. 35; for Joseph's cup, Ib. xli. 12; for David in hiding places, 1 Sam. xxiii. 23; Ahab's house, 1 Kgs xx. 6; for worshippers of God in Baal's temple, 2 Kgs x. 23; in caves of Carmel, Am. ix. 3, (See ab. pp. 219, 220); Divine wisdom Pr. ii. 4, God's ways, Ps. lxxvii. 7. The form is intensive here. ⁷ Pr. xx. 27. ⁸ Lam. iii. 40. ⁹ S. Luke xv. 8. ¹⁰ S. Cyr. ¹¹ S. Jer. See Jos. de B. J. vi. 9. 4. vii. 2 fin. ¹² Ps. vii. 9, xxvi. 2, Jer. xi. 20, xvii. 10, xx. 12, Rev. ii. 23. ¹³ Ib. i. 14. ¹⁴ Prov. xx. 27. ¹⁵ Ps. cxix. 104. Pr. vi. 23.

2 Pet. i. 19. ¹⁶ Phil. ii. 15. ¹⁷ S. Bern. Serm. 55 in Cant. ¹⁸ 1 Cor. xiii. 12.

¹⁹ קטל is used in two cases of the (as it were) congealing of the waves when they stood on an heap Ex. xv. 8; of the curdling into cheese Job x. 10. Jon. paraphrases "who are tranquil in their possessions." The Arabic authorities, Abulw. Tanch. David B. Abr. agree in the sense 'congealed,' and do not call in the Arab. קטל which is primarily "dried," then is used of the wrinkling of a cloth in drying, or of the face of the old, not "contracted" as Ges. On Zech. xiv. 6, see ibid.

²⁰ Jer. xlviii. 11. ²¹ קטל. ²² See Ps. lv. 19. ²³ נכר. ²⁴ Dion. ²⁵ Job xxii. 12-14. ²⁶ Ps. x. 4, 5. ²⁷ Ib. xciv. 5, 6. ²⁸ Wisd. ii. 21-22. ²⁹ S. Jas. ii. 20. ³⁰ Is. v. 19, Mal. ii. 17.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

¹ Deut. 28.
30, 39.
Amos 5. 11.

13 Therefore their goods shall become a booty, and their houses a desolation: they shall also build houses, but ¹not inhabit see not that they ascribe to God, what He attributes to idols i. e., not-gods. ¹ Do good or do evil, that we may be dismayed and behold it together. ² Be not afraid of them; for they cannot do evil, neither also is it in them to do good. These think not that God does good; for they ascribe their success to their own diligence, wisdom, strength, and thank not God for it. They think not that He sends them evil. For they defy Him and His laws, and think that they shall go unpunished. What remains but that He should be as dumb an idol as those of the heathen?

13 Therefore their goods, lit. And their strength. It is the simple sequel in God's Providence. It is a continued narrative. God will visit those who say, that God does not interfere in man's affairs, and, it shall be seen ³ whose words shall stand, God's or their's. All which God had threatened in the law shall be fulfilled. God, in the fulfilment of the punishment, which He had foretold in the law ⁴, would vindicate not only His present Providence, but His continual government of His own world. All which is strength to man, shall the rather fail, because it is strength, and they presume on it and it deceives them. Its one end is to become a prey of devils. Riches, learning, rule, influence, power, bodily strength, genius, eloquence, popular favour, shall all fail a man, and he, when stripped of them, shall be the more bared because he gathered them around him. ⁵ Wealth is ever a runaway and has no stability, but rather intoxicates and inclines to revolt and has unsteady feet. Exceeding folly is it to think much of it. For it will not rescue those lying under the Divine displeasure, nor will it free any from guilt, when God decreeth punishment, and bringeth the judgement befitting on the transgressors. How utterly useless this eagerness after wealth is to the ungodly, he teacheth, saying, that their strength shall be a prey to the Chaldean.

And their houses a desolation. ⁶ For they are, of whom it may be said very truly, This is the man that took not God for his strength, but trusted unto the multitude of his riches, and strengthened himself in his wickedness. But if indeed their houses are adorned costlily, they shall not be theirs, for they shall be burned, and themselves go into captivity, leaving all in their house, and deprived of all which would gladden. And this God said clearly to the king of Judah by Jeremiah, ⁷ Thou hast builded thyself a large house and wide chambers, cieled with cedar, and painted with vermilion. Shalt thou reign because thou closest thyself with cedar? ⁸ As the house of the body is the bodily dwelling, so to each mind its house is that, wherein through desire it is wont to dwell, and desolate shall they be, being severed for ever from the things they desired, and for ever deserted by God. They shall also build houses but not inhabit them, as the rich man said to his soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years.—Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided? Before the siege by the Romans, Jerusalem and the temple had been greatly beautified, only to be destroyed. And they shall plant vineyards, but not drink them; and they shall plant vineyards, but ⁹not drink the wine thereof.

14 ¹⁰The great day of the Lord is near, ¹¹it

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

¹² Mic. 6. 15.
¹³ Joel 2. 1, 11.

the wine thereof. This is the woe, first pronounced in the law ¹⁰, often repeated and ever found true. Wickedness makes joy its end, yet never finds it, seeking it where it is not, out of God.

14 The great Day of the Lord is near. The Prophet again expands the words of Joel, accumulating words expressive of the terrors of that Day, shewing that though ¹¹ the great and very terrible Day of the Lord, a day (Joel had said ¹²) of darkness and gloominess, of clouds and of thick darkness, which was then coming and nigh at hand ¹³, had come and was gone, it was only a forerunner of others; none of them final; but each, because it was a judgement and an instance of the justice of God, an earnest and forerunner of other judgements to the end. Again, a great Day of the Lord was near. This Day had itself, so to speak, many hours and divisions of the day. But each hour tolleth the same knell of approaching doom. Each calamity in the miserable reigns of the sons of Josiah was one stroke in the passing-bell, until the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, for the time closed it. The judgement was complete. The completeness of that excision made it the more an image of every other like day until the final destruction of all which, although around or near to Christ, shall in the Great Day be found not to be His, but to have rejected Him. ¹⁴ Truly was vengeance required, from the blood of righteous Abel to the blood of Zechariah, whom they slew between the temple and the Altar, and at last when they said of the Son of God, His blood be upon us and upon our children, they experienced a bitter day, because they had provoked the Lord to bitterness; a Day, appointed by the Lord, in which not the weak only but the mighty shall be bowed down, and wrath shall come upon them to the end. For often before they endured the wrath of the Lord, but that wrath was not to the uttermost. What need now to describe how great calamities they endured in both captivities, and how they who rejected the light of the Lord, walked in darkness and thick darkness, and they who would not hear the trumpet of the solemn feast-days, heard the shout of the enemy. But of the fenced cities and lofty corner-towers of Judæa, which are till now destroyed even to the ground, the eyes, I deem, can judge better than the ears. We especially, now living in that province, can see, can prove what is written. We scarcely discern slight traces of ruins of what once were great cities. At Shiloh, where was the tabernacle and ark of the testament of the Lord, scarcely the foundations of the altar are shewn. Rama and Bethoron and the other noble cities built by Solomon, are shewn to be little villages. Let us read Josephus and the prophecy of Zephaniah; we shall see his history before our eyes. And this must be said not only of the captivity, but even to the present day. The treacherous husbandmen, having slain the servants, and, at last, the Son of God, are prevented from entering Jerusalem, except to wail, and they purchase at a price leave to weep the ruin of their city, so that they who once bought the Blood of Christ, buy their tears; not even their tears are costless. You may see

¹ Is. xli. 23. Perhaps Zeph. meant to suggest this by using words which God by Isaiah had used of idols.

² Jer. x. 5.

³ Ib. xlii. 28.

⁴ Lev. xxvi. 32, 33. Deut. xxviii.

⁵ S. Cyr.

⁶ Ps. lii. 7.

⁷ Jer. xxii. 14, 15.

⁸ S. Greg. Mor. viii. 14.

⁹ S. Luke xii. 19, 20.

¹⁰ Deut. xxviii. 39.

¹¹ Joel ii. 31.

¹² Ib. 2.

¹³ Ib. 1.

¹⁴ S. Jer.

¹⁵ S. Matt. xxiii. 35.

¹⁶ Ib. xxvii. 25.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

is near, and hasteth greatly, even the voice of the day of the LORD: the mighty man shall cry there bitterly.

Isai. 22. 5.
Jer. 30. 7.
Joel 2. 2, 11.
Amos 5. 18.
ver. 18.

15 That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of wasteness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloomi-on the day that Jerusalem was taken and destroyed by the Romans, a people in mourning come, decrepit old women and old men, in aged and ragged wretchedness, shewing in their bodies and in their guise the wrath of the Lord. The hapless crowd is gathered, and amid the gleaming of the Cross of Christ, and the radiant glory of His Resurrection, the standard also of the Cross shining from Mount Olivet, you may see the people, piteous but unpitied, bewail the ruins of their temple, tears still on their cheeks, their arms livid and their hair dishevelled, and the soldier asketh a guerdon, that they may be allowed to weep longer. And doth any, when he seeth this, doubt of the day of trouble and distress, the day of darkness and gloominess, the day of clouds and thick darkness, the day of the trumpet and alarm? For they have also trumpets in their sorrow, and, according to the prophecy, the voice of the solemn feast-day is turned into mourning. They wail over the ashes of the Sanctuary and the altar destroyed, and over cities once fenced, and over the high towers of the temple, from which they once cast headlong James the brother of the Lord."

But referring the Day of the Lord to the end of the world or the close of the life of each, it too is near; near, the prophet adds to impress the more its nearness; for it is at hand to each; and when eternity shall come, all time shall seem like a moment, 1 A thousand years, when past, are like a watch in the night; one fourth part of one night.

And hasteth greatly. For time whirls on more rapidly to each, year by year, and when God's judgements draw near, the tokens of them thicken, and troubles sweep one over the other, events jostle against each other. The voice of the day of the Lord. That Day, when it cometh, shall leave no one in doubt what it meaneth; it shall give no uncertain sound, but shall, trumpet-tongued, proclaim the holiness and justice of Almighty God; its voice shall be the Voice of Christ, which 2 all that are in the graves shall hear and come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation.

The mighty men shall cry there bitterly; for 3 bitter is the remembrance of death to a man that liveth at rest in his possessions, unto the man that hath nothing to vex him, and that hath prosperity in all things; and 4, There is no mighty man that hath power over the spirit to retain the spirit; neither hath he power in the day of death; and there is no discharge in that war; neither shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it. Rather, wrath shall come upon 5 the kings of the earth, and the great men and the rich men and the mighty men, and they shall will to hide themselves from the Face of Him that sitteth on the Throne and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great Day of His wrath is come: and who shall be able to stand?

ness, a day of clouds and thick darkness, 16 A day of 2 the trumpet and alarm against the fenced cities, and against the 3 Jer. 4. 19. high towers.

17 And I will bring distress upon men, that they shall 4 walk like blind men, be- Deut. 28. 29. Isai. 59. 10.

The mighty men shall cry there bitterly. The prophet has spoken of time, the day of the Lord. He points out the more vividly the unseen sight and place, there; so David says, 6 There they feared a fear. He sees the place; he hears the bitter cry. So nigh is it in fact; so close the connection of cause and effect, of sin and punishment. There shall be a great and bitter cry, when there shall be no place for repentance. It shall be a 7 mighty cry, but mighty in the bitterness of its distress. 8 Mighty men shall be mightily tormented, i. e., those who have been mighty against God, weak against Satan, and shall have used their might in his service.

15. A day of wrath, in which all the wrath of Almighty God, which evil angels and evil men have treasured to them for that day, shall be poured out: the day of wrath, because then they shall be brought face to face before the Presence of God, but thenceforth they shall be cast out of it for ever.

A day of trouble and distress. Both words express, how anguish shall narrow and hem them in; so that there shall be no escape; above them, God displeased; below, the flames of Hell; around, devils to drag them away, and Angels casting them forth in bundles to burn them; without, the books which shall be opened; and within, conscience leaving them no escape.

A day of wasteness and desolation, in which all things shall return to their primeval void, before the Spirit of God brooded upon the face of the waters, His Presence being altogether withdrawn.

A day of darkness and gloominess; for sun and moon shall lose their brightness, and no brightness from the Lamb shall shine upon the wicked, but they shall be driven into outer darkness.

A day of clouds and thick darkness, hiding from them the Face of the Sun of Righteousness, and covering Him, so that their prayers should not pass through.

16. *A day of the trumpet and alarm*¹⁰, i. e., of the loud blast of the trumpet, which sounds alarm and causes it. The word¹¹ is especially the shrill loud noise of the trumpet (for sacred purposes in Israel itself, as ruling all the movements of the tabernacle and accompanying their feasts); then also of the "battle cry." They had not listened to the voice of the trumpet, as it called them to holy service; now they shall hear 12 the voice of the Archangel and the trump of God.

Against the high towers, lit. *corners*¹³, and so corner-towers. This peculiarity describes Jerusalem, whose walls 14 were made artificially standing in a line curved inwards, so that the flanks of assailants might be exposed." By this same name¹⁵ are called the mighty men and chiefs of the people, who, humanly speaking, hold it together and support it; on these chiefs in rebellion against God, whether devils or evil men, shall punishment greatly fall.

17. I will bring distress upon men. I will hem them in,

of a house, of a street, of a court, a city. Hence "the gate of the corner," 2 Kgs xiv. 13, 2 Chr. xxvi. 9, Jer. xxxi. 38. In 2 Chr. xxvi. 15, מִצְדּוֹת cannot be "battlements" (as Ges. &c.), since the engines were erected upon them. Neither then here is there any ground to invent a new meaning for the word. ¹⁴ Tac. Hist. v. 11. Jos. de B. J. v. 5. 3. ¹⁵ Jud. xx. 2. 1 Sam. xiv. 38, Is. xix. 13, Zech. x. 4.

¹ Ps. xc. 4. ² S. John v. 28, 29. ³ Eccles. xli. 1. ⁴ Eccl. viii. 8.
⁵ Rev. vi. 15-17. ⁶ Ps. xiv. 5. ⁷ The Arab. word, أص, is used of "a loud shrill cry." It occurs only here and (Hif.) in Is. xlii. 12. ⁸ Wisd. vi. 6.
⁹ Lam. iii. 44. ¹⁰ "Alarm" seems to be used in the sense of "sounding alarm," alarum. ¹¹ חֲרָרָה ¹² 1 Thess. iv. 16. ¹³ See E. M. on iii. 6. It is the corner

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630. cause they have sinned against the Lord :
and ^b their blood shall be poured out as ^c dust, and their flesh ^c as the dung.
Jer. 9. 22. & 16. 4.

in anguish on all sides. God Himself shall meet them with His terrors, wherever they turn. ¹ I will hem them in, that they may find it so.

That they shall walk like blind men, utterly bereft of counsel, seeing no more than the blind which way to turn, grasping blindly and frantically at anything, and going on headlong to their own destruction. So God forewarned them in the law; ² Thou shalt grope at noon day, as the blind gropeth in darkness; and Job, of the wicked generally, ³ They meet with the darkness in the day-time, and grope in the noon-day as in the night; and, ⁴ They grope in the dark without light, and He maketh them to stagger like a drunken man; and Isaiah foretelling of those times, ⁵ We grope for the wall, as the blind; and we grope, as if we had no eyes; we stumble in the noon-day as in the night. Because they have sinned against the Lord, and so He hath turned their wisdom into foolishness, and since they have despised Him, He hath made them objects of contempt. Their blood shall be poured out like dust, as abundant and as valueless; utterly disregarded by Him, as Asaph complains, ⁷ their blood have they shed like water; contemptible and disgusting as what is vilest; their flesh ⁸ as the dung, refuse, decayed, putrefied, offensive, enriching by its decay the land, which had been the scene of their luxuries and oppressions. Yet the most offensive disgusting physical corruption is but a faint image of the defilement of sin. This punishment, in which the carrion-remains should be entombed only in the bowels of vultures and dogs, was especially threatened to Jehoiakim; ⁹ He shall be buried with the burial of an ass, dragged and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

18. Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath. Gain unjustly gotten was the cause of their destruction. For, as Ezekiel closes the like description; ¹⁰ They shall cast their silver into the streets, and their gold shall be removed; their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord; they shall not satisfy their souls nor fill their bowels: because it is the stumbling block of their iniquity. Much less shall any possession, outward or inward, be of avail in the Great Day; since in death the rich man's ¹¹ pomp shall not follow him, and every gift which he has misused, whether of mind or spirit, even the knowledge of God without doing His Will, shall but increase damnation. "Sinners will then have nothing but their sins."

Here the prophet uses images belonging more to the immediate destruction; at the close the words again widen, and belong, in their fullest literal sense, to the Day of Judgement. The whole land, rather, as at the beginning, the whole earth shall be devoured by the fire of His jealousy; for He shall make even a speedy riddance of all them that dwell in the land: rather, He shall make an utter, yea altogether ¹² a terrific destruction ¹³ of all the dwellers of the earth. What Nahum had foretold of Nineveh ¹⁴, He shall make the place

18 ^d Neither their silver nor their gold ^{Before} shall be able to deliver them in the day of ^{CHRIST}
the Lord's wrath; but the whole land shall ^{cir. 630.}
^e Prov. 11. 4.
^f Ezek. 7. 19.

thereof an utter consumption, that Zephaniah fore-tells of all the inhabitants of the world. For what is this, the whole earth shall be devoured by the fire of His jealousy, but what S. Peter says, ¹⁵ the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up? And what is that he says, He shall make all the dwellers of the earth an utter, yea altogether a hasty destruction, but a general judgement of all, who belong to the world, whose home, citizenship, whose whole mind is in the world, not as true Christians, who are strangers and pilgrims here, and their ¹⁶ citizenship is in Heaven? These God shall make an utter, terrific, speedy destruction, a living death, so that they shall at once both be and not be; be, as continued in being; not be, as having no life of God, but only a continued death in misery. And this shall be through the jealousy of Almighty God, that Divine quality in Him, whereby He loves and wills to be loved, and endures not those who give to others the love for which He gave so much and which is so wholly due to Himself Alone. ¹⁷ Thou demandest my love, and if I give it not, art wroth with me, and threatenest me with grievous woes. Is it then a slight woe to love Thee not? What will be that anger, which is Infinite Love, but which becomes, through man's sin, Hate?

II. Having set forth the terrors of the Judgement Day, the prophet adds an earnest call to repentance; and then declares how judgements, forerunners of that Day, shall fall, one by one, on those nations around, who know not God, and shall rest upon Nineveh, the great beautiful ancient city of the world. ¹⁸ See the mercy of God. It had been enough to have set before the wise the vehemence of the coming evil. But because He willeth not to punish, but to alarm only, Himself calleth to repentance, that He may not do what He threatened. ¹⁹ Having set forth clearly the savageness of the war and the greatness of the suffering to come, he suitably turns his discourse to the duty of calling to repentance, when it was easy to persuade them, being terrified. For sometimes when the mind has been numbed, and exceedingly bent to evil, we do not readily admit even the will to repent, but fear often drives us to it, even against our will. He calls us then to friendship with Himself. For as they revolted, became aliens, serving idols and giving up their mind to their passions, so they would, as it were, retrace their steps, and lay hold of the friendship of God, choosing to serve Him, nay and Him Alone, and obey His commandments. Wherefore while we have time, while the Lord, in His forbearance as God, gives way, let us enact repentance, supplicate, say weeping, ²⁰ remember not the sins and offences of my youth; let us unite ourselves with Him by sanctification and sobriety. So shall we be sheltered in the day of wrath, and wash away the stain of our falls, before the Day of the Lord come upon us. For the Judge will come, He will come from heaven at the due season, and will reward each according to his work."

¹ Jer. x. 18. Moses had said this of His instruments, And He shall hem thee in, in all thy gates. Deut. xxviii. 52. ² Ib. 29. ³ Job v. 14.

⁴ Ib. xii. 25. ⁵ Is. lix. 10. ⁶ 1 Sam. ii. 30.

⁷ Ps. lxxix. 3. ⁸ is used of the pouring out both liquids and solids.
⁹ Insulated as the use is, חַסֵּד must have had the meaning of the Arab. كَلَس "flesh." So LXX Ch. Vulg. Syr. David B. Abr. Abulw. Tanch., Anon-Arab. Tr., retain the word in Arabic; Abulw. notices that "the Heb. is akin to the Arabic word." Tanch.

cites Job vi. 7. ⁹ Jer. xxii. 19. ¹⁰ Ezek. vii. 19. ¹¹ Ps. xlix. 17.
¹² אך "nothing but." ¹³ וְהָיָה unites here the senses of terror and destruction, as in Ps. civ. 29. Thou hidest Thy face, they are troubled, וְהָיָה and perish; Is. lxx. 23, they shall not bear וְהָיָה for destruction, וְהָיָה יָשָׁר.

¹⁴ See ab. on Nahum i. 8. p. 376. ¹⁵ 2 Pet. iii. 13.
¹⁶ Heb. xi. 13. Phil. iii. 20. ¹⁷ S. Aug. Conf. i. 5. p. 3. Oxf. Tr.
¹⁸ S. Jer. ¹⁹ S. Cyr. ²⁰ Ps. xxv. 7.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

ch. 3. 8.
ver. 2, 3.

be "devoured by the fire of his jealousy :
for 'he shall make even a speedy riddance of all them that dwell in the land.

CHAPTER II.

1 An exhortation to repentance. 4 The judgment of the Philistines, 8 of Moab and Ammon, 12 of Ethiopia and Assyria.

1. *Gather yourselves together, yea gather together*¹, rather, *Sift yourselves, yea sift*². The exact image is from gathering stubble or dry sticks, which are picked up one by one, with search and care. So must men deal with the dry and withered leaves of a past evil life. The English rendering however comes to the same meaning. We use, "collect one's self" for bringing one's self, all one's thoughts, together, and so, having full possession of one's self. Or gathering ourselves might stand in contrast with being "abroad," as it were, out of ourselves amid the manifoldness of things seen. "Thou who, taken up with the business of the world, hurriest to and fro amid divers things, return to the Church of the saints, and join thyself to their life and assembly, whom thou seest to please God, and bring together the dislocated members of thy soul, which now are not knit together, into one frame of wisdom, and cleave to its embrace." Gather yourselves into one, wherein ye have been scattered; to the One God, from Whom they had wandered, seeking pleasure from His many creatures; to His one fold and Church, from which they had severed themselves outwardly by joining the worship of Baal, inwardly, by serving him and his abominable rites; joining and joined to the assembly of the faithful, by oneness of faith and life.

In order to repent, a man must know himself thoroughly; and this can only be done by taking act by act, word by word, thought by thought, as far as he can, not in a confused heap or mass, as they lie in any man's conscience, but one by one, each picked up apart, and examined, and added to the scar unfruitful heap, plucking them as it were, and gathering them out of himself, that so they may, by the Spirit of burning, the fire of God's Spirit kindling repentance, be burned up, and not the sinner himself be fuel for fire with them. The word too is intensive, "Gather together all which is in you, thoroughly, piece by piece" (for the sinner's whole self becomes chaff, dry and empty). To use another image, "Sift yourselves thoroughly, so that nothing escape, as far as your diligence can reach, and then—And gather on, i. e., "glean on;" examine yourselves, "not lightly and after the manner of dissemblers before God," but repeatedly, gleaning again and again, to see if by any means any thing have escaped: continuing on the search and ceasing not. The first earnest search into the soul must be the beginning, not the end. Our search must be continued, until there be no more to be discovered, i. e. when sin is no more, and we see our-

¹ The Eng. Vers. follows the LXX Ch. Syr., S. Jer., which render "Gather yourselves together," as if, from the first meaning, "gather dry sticks or stubble" it came to signify "gather" generally, and thence, in the reflective form, "gather yourselves together."

² The word is first used of gathering dry stubble together (Ex. v. 7, 12.) then of "dry sticks" one by one (Nu. xv. 32, 33, 1 Kgs xvii. 10, 12.). A heathen speaks of "gathering out thorns" (ἐξάκαρθίζω) i. e., minutely examining and bringing out to light every fault. (Cic. ad Att. vi. 6. 2.) And another writes to his steward, "Shalt thou with stronger hand pull out thorns from my field, or I from my mind?" Hor. Ep. i. 14. 4.

³ S. Jer.

⁴ S. Bern. de Cons. c. 6.

⁵ Id. Serm. 58. in Cant. fin.

⁶ Lam. iii. 40. The two words, search and try, דַּק, דָּק, are both used of a deep search of a thing which lies deep and hidden. Both originally mean "dig." Both are used of a Divine knowledge of the inmost soul; the former of the mind as enlightened by God (Prov. xx. 27), the latter of God's searching it out Himself (Jer. xvii. 10. Ps. xlv. 22 (21)

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

Joel 2. 16.
Or, not desiring.
Job 21. 18.
Ps. 1. 4.
Isai. 17. 13.
Hos. 13. 3.
2 Kin. 23. 26.

GATHER yourselves together, yea, gather together, O nation || not desired;

2 Before the decree bring forth, before the day pass ^bas the chaff, before ^cthe fierce anger of the Lord come upon you, before the day of the Lord's anger come upon you.

selves in the full light of the Presence of our Judge. For a first search, however diligent, never thoroughly reaches the whole deep disease of the whole man; the most grievous sins hide other grievous sins, though lighter. Some sins flash on the conscience, at one time, some at another; so that few, even upon a diligent search, come at once to the knowledge of all their heaviest sins. When the mist is less thick, we see more clearly what was before one dark dull mass of imperfection and misery. "Spiritual sins are also with difficulty sifted, (as they are,) by one who is carnal. Whence it happens, that things in themselves heavier he perceives less or very little, and conscience is not grieved so much by the memory of pride or envy, as of impurities and crimes." So having said, "Sift yourselves through and through," he says, "sift on." A diligent sifting and search into himself must be the beginning of all true repentance and pardon. "What remains, but that we give ourselves wholly to this work, so holy, and needful? Let us search and try our ways and our doings, and let each think that he has made progress, not if he find not what to blame, but if he blame what he finds. Thou hast not sifted thyself in vain, if thou hast discovered that thou needest a fresh sifting; and so often has thy search not failed thee, as thou judgest that it must be renewed. But if thou ever dost this, when there is need, thou dost it ever. But ever remember that thou needest help from above and the mercy of Jesus Christ our Lord Who is over all, God blessed for ever." The whole course of self-examination then lies in two words of Divine Scripture. And withal he warns them, instead of gathering together riches which shall not be able to deliver them in the day of trouble, to gather themselves into themselves, and so *judge themselves thoroughly*⁷, *that they be not judged of the Lord*⁸.

*O nation not desired*⁹, i. e., having nothing in itself to be desired or loved, but rather, for its sin, hateful to God. God yearneth with pity and compassion over His creatures; He ¹⁰ hath a desire to the work of His Hands. Here Israel is spoken to, as what he had made himself, hateful to God by his sins, although still an object of His tender care, in what yet remained to him of nature or grace which was from Himself.

2. Before the decree bring forth. God's word is full (as it were) of the event which it foretelleth; it contains its own fulfilment in itself, and travaileth until it come to pass, giving signs of its coming, yet delaying until the full time. Time cxix. 1, Job xiii. 9, and of the Divine Wisdom, Job xxviii. 27.

⁷ διακρίνατε, which answers to the intensive form here, "judge yourselves through and through."

⁸ 1 Cor. xi. 31, 32.

⁹ The E. M. has "or not desirous," the word דָּבָר signifying to long, Gen. xxxi. 30. Ps. lxxxiv. 3. But in both places the object of desire is mentioned, "thy father's house," in Gen., "the courts of the Lord," in the Ps. Israel had strong but bad longings. "Not desirous" would not by itself convey, "having no desire to return to God," or as Ch., "who willeth not to return to the law." The same objection lies, over and above, to the rendering "unashamed," coll. Chald. דָּבָר "turned pale" from shame, disgrace, horror. Buxt. For there is nothing to limit the "turning pale" to "shame." The root דָּבָר in Heb. only means "longed," Ps. xvii. 12, Job xiv. 15, of which דָּבָר is here the passive. People turn pale from fear or horror, not from shame.

¹⁰ Job xiv. 15. The word is the same.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

⁴ Ps. 105. 4.
⁵ Amos 5. 6.
⁶ Ps. 76. 9.

3 ^d Seek ye the Lord, ^e all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment; seek righteousness, seek meekness:

is said to bring forth what is wrought in it. Thou knowest not, what a day shall bring forth.

Before the day pass as the chaff, or, parenthetically, like chaff the day passeth by. God's counsels lie wrapt up, as it were, in the womb of time, wherein He hides them, until the moment which He has appointed, and they break forth suddenly to those who look not for them. The mean season is given for repentance, i. e., the day of grace, the span of repentance still allowed, which is continually whirling more swiftly by; and woe, if it be fruitless as chaff! Those who profit not by it shall also be as chaff, carried away pitilessly by the whirlwind to destruction. Time, on which eternity hangs, is a slight, uncertain thing, as little to be counted upon, as the light dry particles which are the sport of the wind, driven uncertainly hither and thither. But when it is passed, then cometh, not to them, but upon them, from Heaven, overwhelming them, ¹*abiding upon* them, not to pass away, the heat of the anger of Almighty God. This warning he twice repeats, to impress the certainty and speed of its coming². It is the warning of our Lord, ³*Take heed, lest that day come upon you unawares*.

3. Seek ye the Lord. He had exhorted sinners to penitence; he now calls the righteous to persevere and increase more and more. He bids them *seek diligently*⁴, and that with a three-fold call, to seek Him from Whom they received daily the three-fold blessing⁵, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, as he had just before threatened God's impending judgement with the same use of the mysterious number, three. They, whom he calls, were already, by the grace of God, meek, and had wrought His judgement. ⁶*Submitting themselves to the word of God, they had done and were doing the judgement of God, judging themselves that they be not judged*; the beginning of which judgement is, as sinners and guilty of death, to give themselves to the Cross of the Lord, i. e., to be ⁷*baptised in His Death and be buried with Him by Baptism into death*; but the perfection of that judgement or righteousness is, to walk in newness of life, as He rose from the dead through the glory of the Father.⁸

⁹*Since the meek already have God through grace as the Possessor and Dweller in their heart, how shall they seek Him but that they may have Him more fully and more perfectly, knowing Him more clearly, loving Him more ardently, cleaving to Him more inseparably, that so they may be heard by Him, not for themselves only, but for others?* It is then the same Voice as at the close of the Revelation, ⁹*the righteous, let him be still more righteous; the holy, let him be still more holy*. They are the meek, who are exhorted diligently to seek meekness, and they who had wrought His judgement, who are diligently to seek Righteousness. And since our Lord saith, ¹⁰*Learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly of heart*, He bids ¹¹*those who imitated His meekness and did His judgement, to seek the Lord in their meekness*. Meekness and Righteousness may be His Attributes, Who is All-gentleness and All-Righteousness, the Fountain of all, wheresoever it is, in gentleness receiving penitents, and, as the Righteous Judge, giving the crown of righteousness to those who love Him and it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger,

¹ S. John iii. 36. ² Gen. xli. 32. ³ S. Luke xvi. 34. ⁴ The Hebrew form is intensive. ⁵ Nu. vi. 23-26. ⁶ Rup. ⁷ Rom. vi. 3, 4. ⁸ Dion. ⁹ Rev. xxii. 11. ¹⁰ S. Matth. xi. 29. ¹¹ S. Jer. ¹² S. Cyr. ¹³ Rom. xiii. 10.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

4 ¶ For ⁸ Gaza shall be forsaken, and

^f Joel 2. 14.
^g Amos 5. 15.
^h Jonah 3. 9.

⁸ Jer. 47. 4, 5. Ezek. 25. 15. Amos. 1. 6, 7, 8. Zech. 9. 5, 6.

keep His commandments, yea He joineth righteousness with meekness, since without His mercy no man living could be justified in His Sight. ¹²*God is sought by us, when, of our choice, laying aside all listlessness, we thirst after doing what pleases Him; and we shall do judgement too, when we fulfil His Divine law, working out what is good unshrinkingly; and we shall gain the prize of righteousness, when crowned with glory for well-doing and running the well-reported and blameless way of true piety to God and of love to the brethren; for* ¹³*love is the fulfilling of the law*.¹⁴

It may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger. ¹⁵*Shall these too then scarcely be hid in the day of the Lord's anger? Doth not the Apostle Peter say the very same? If it first begin at us, what shall be the end of them that obey not the Gospel of God? And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear? So then, although any be meek, although he have wrought the judgement of the Lord, let him ever suspect himself, nor think that he has already attained, since neither can any righteous be saved, if he be judged without mercy.* ¹⁶*He saith, it may be; not that there is any doubt that the meek and they who perseveringly seek God, shall then be saved, but to convey how difficult it is to be saved, and how fearful and rigorous is the judgement of God.* To be hid is to be sheltered from wrath under the protection of God; as David says, ¹⁵*In the time of trouble He shall hide me*; and, ¹⁶*Thou shalt hide them [that trust in Thee] in the secret of Thy presence from the pride of man; Thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues. And in Isaiah, A Man shall be as an hiding-place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; and, There shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the daytime from the heat, and for a place of refuge, and for a covert from storm and from rain.*

4. For. As a ground for repentance and perseverance, he goes through Heathen nations, upon whom God's wrath should come. ¹⁷*As Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, after visions concerning Judah, turn to other nations round about, and according to the character of each, announce what shall come upon them, and dwell at length upon it, so doth this prophet, though more briefly.* And thus under five nations, who lay West, East, South and North, he includes all mankind on all sides, and, again, according to their respective characters towards Israel, as they are alien from, or hostile to the Church; the Philistines¹⁸, as a near, malicious, infesting enemy; Moab and Ammon²⁰, people akin to her (as heretics) yet ever rejoicing at her troubles and sufferings; Ethiopians²¹, distant nations at peace with her, and which are, for the most part, spoken of as to be brought unto her; Assyria²², as the great oppressive power of the world, and so upon it the full desolation rests. In the first fulfilment, because Moab and Ammon aiding Nebuchadnezzar, (and all, in divers ways, wronging God's people²³), trampled on His sanctuary, overthrew His temple and blasphemed the Lord, the prophecy is turned against them. So then, before the captivity came, while Josiah was yet king, and Jerusalem and the temple were, as yet, not overthrown, the prophecy is directed against those who mocked at them. Gaza shall be forsaken. Out of the five cities of the Philistines, the Prophet pronounces woe upon the same four as Amos¹ before, Jeremiah² soon after, and Zechariah³ later. Gath, then, the fifth, had probably remained with Judah since Uziah⁴ and Hezekiah⁵. In the sentence of the rest, regard is had (as is so frequent in the Old Testament) to the names of the places themselves, that, henceforth, the name of the place might suggest the thought of the doom pronounced upon it. The names expressed boastfulness, and so, in the Divine judgement, carried their own sentence with them, and this sentence is pronounced by a slight change in the word. Thus 'Azzah (Gaza), strong shall be 'Azoobah, desolated; Ekron, *deep-rooting*⁶, shall Teaker, be uprooted; the Cherethites (cutters off) shall become (Chereth) diggings; Chebel, the band of the sea coast, shall be in another sense Chebel, an *inheritance*⁷, divided by line to the remnant of Judah; and Ashdod (*the waster*⁸) shall be taken in their might, not by craft, nor in the way of robbers, but driven forth violently and openly in the noon-day.

¹⁴ 1 S. Pet. iv. 17, 18. ¹⁵ Ps. xxvii. 5. ¹⁶ Ib. xxxi. 20. ¹⁷ Isai. xxxii. 2. ¹⁸ Ib. v. 6. ¹⁹ ii. 4-7. ²⁰ Ib. 8-10. ²¹ v. 12. ²² 13-15. ²³ Is. xvi. 4, Am. i. 13-15. ii. 1-3. Jer. xlviii. 27-30, 42. xlix. 1. Ezek. xx. 3, 6, 8.

For Gaza shall be forsaken. Some vicissitudes of these towns have been noted already⁹. The fulfilment of the prophecy is not tied down to time; the one marked contrast is, that the old heathen enemies of Judah should be destroyed, the house of Judah should be restored, and should re-enter upon the possession of the land, promised to them of old. The Philistine towns had, it seems, nothing to fear from Babylon or Persia, to whom they remained faithful subjects. The Ashdodites (who probably, as the most important, stand for the whole¹⁰) combined with Sanballat, the Ammonites and the *Arabians*¹¹, to hinder the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem. Even an army was gathered, headed by Samaria¹². They gave themselves out as loyal, Jerusalem as rebellious¹³. The old sin remaining, Zechariah renewed the sentence by Zephaniah against the four cities¹⁴; a prophecy, which an unbeliever also has recognised as picturing the march of Alexander¹⁵. "All the other cities of Palestine having submitted," Gaza alone resisted the conqueror for two or five months. It had come into the hands of the Persians in the expedition of Cambyses against Egypt¹⁷. The Gazæans having all perished fighting at their posts, Alexander sold the women and children, and repopled the city from the neighbourhood¹⁸. Palestine lay between the two rival successors of Alexander, the Ptolemies and Seleucidæ, and felt their wars¹⁹. Gaza fell through mischance into the hands of Ptolemy²⁰, 11 years after the death of Alexander²¹, and soon after, was destroyed by Antiochus¹⁶ (B.C. 198), "preserving its faith to Ptolemy" as before to the Persians, in a way admired by a heathen historian. In the Maccabæe wars, Judas Maccabæus chiefly destroyed the idols of Ashdod, but also spoiled their cities; Jonathan set it on fire, with its idol-temple, which was a sort of citadel to it²²; Ascalon submitted to him²⁴; Ekron with its borders were given to him by Alexander Balas²⁵; he burnt the suburbs of Gaza²⁶; Simon took it, expelled its inhabitants, filled it with believing Jews and fortified it more strongly than before²⁷; but, after a year's siege, it was betrayed to Alexander Jannæus, who slew its senate of 500 and razed the city to the ground²⁸. Gabinius restored it and Ashdod²⁹. After Herod's death, Ashdod was given to Salome³⁰; Gaza, as being a Greek city³¹, was detached from the realm of Archelaus and annexed to Syria. It was destroyed by the Jews in their revolt when Florus was "procurator," A.D. 55³². Ascalon and Gaza must still have been strong, and were probably a distinct population in the early times of Antipater, father of Herod, when Alexander and Alexandra set him over all Idumæa, since "he is said" then "to have made friendship with the Arabs, Gazites and Ascalonites, likeminded with himself, and to have attached them by many and large presents."

Yet though the inhabitants were changed, the hereditary hatred remained. Philo in his Embassy to Caius, A.D. 40, used the strong language, "The Ascalonites have an implacable and irreconcilable enmity to the Jews, their neighbours, who inhabit the holy land." This continued toward Christians. Some horrible atrocities, of almost inconceivable savagery, by those of Gaza and Ascalon A.D. 361, are related by Theodoret³³ and Sozomen³⁶. "Who is ignorant of the madness of the Gazæans?" asks S. Gregory of Nazianzus, of the times of Julian. This was previous to the conversion of the great Gazite temple of Marna into a Christian Church by Eudoxia³⁸. On occasion of Constantine's exemption of the Maiumas Gazæ from their control, it is alleged, that they were "extreme Heathen." In the time of the Crusades the Ascalonites are described by Christians as their "most savage enemies."

It may be, that a likeness of sin may have continued on a likeness of punishment. But the primary prediction was against the people, not against the walls. The sentence, Gaza shall be forsaken, would have been fulfilled by the removal or captivity of its inhabitants, even if they had not been replaced by others. A prediction against any ancient British town would have been fulfilled, if the Britons in it had been replaced or exterminated by Danes, and these by Saxons, and these subdued by the Normans, though their displacers became wealthy and powerful in their place. Even on the same site it would not be the same Gaza, when the Philistine Gaza became Edomite, and the Edomite Greek, and the Greek Arabian⁴¹. Ashdod (as well as Gaza) is spoken of as a city of the Greeks⁴²; New Gaza is spoken of as a mixture of Turks, Arabians, Fellahs, Bedouins out of Egypt, Syria, Petraea⁴³. Felix Faber says, "there is a wonderful commixture of divers nations in it, Ethiopians, Arabs,

¹ Am. i. 6-8.

³ Zech. ix. 5, 6.

⁴ 2 Chr. xxvi. 6.

² Jer. xxv. 20.

⁵ 2 Kgs xviii. 8.

⁶ It seems to me most probable that the origin of the meanings is preserved in the Ch. עץ, "root," (which itself is the source of other metaphoric meanings, as, "the root of a thing;" "the root" i. e., the foundation "of faith," its fundamental doctrines; "the root" in Lexicography, see Buxtorf) and that the Chald. עץ "pluck up, remove," and עץ, here and Eccl. iii. 2, is a denominative. The Proper Name is older probably than even Moses.

⁷ ii. 5, 7.

⁸ The root עץ has throughout, the meaning of "wasting," not of "strength." עץ "the Almighty," is probably from a kindred root, עז.

⁹ See on Amos i. 6-8, p. 161-163.

¹⁰ Their language alone is mentioned Neh. ix. 24, אשדודי, in contrast with Jewish יהודי; but neither is it mentioned that the Jews married any other Philistine women. If Gath was destroyed, Ashdod lay nearest to them.

¹¹ Neh. iv. 7.

¹² Ib. 2.

¹³ Ib. ii. 19. vi. 6.

¹⁴ Zech. ix.

¹⁵ Eichhorn Einl. iv. 605. See Daniel the Proph. p. 280, sqq.

¹⁶ Polyb. Reliq. xvi. 40.

¹⁷ Mela i. 11.

¹⁸ Arrian ii. 27.

¹⁹ Polyb. v. 68.

²⁰ 1 Macc. v. 68.

²¹ Ib. x. 84.

²² Ib. xi. 61.

²³ Ib. xiv. 5, 3.

²⁴ Jos. B. J. ii. 18. 1.

²⁵ Philo Leg. ad Caium T. ii. p. 576 Mang.

²⁶ τράλλακτος δυσμένεια.

²⁷ Soz. H. E. v. 10.

²⁸ "This too we see to be fulfilled in our times. The temple of Serapis at Alexandria, and of Marna at Gaza, rose to be temples of the Lord." S. Jerome on Is. xvii.

²⁹ ἡ γὰρ ἑλληνιστοῦσιν. Soz. v. 3.

³⁰ William of Tyre (pp. 917, 840, 865) calls them "hydra immanissima," "hostes immanissimi"—"like restless gnats persevering in the purpose of injuring." comp. pp. 781, 787, 797. "Ascalona was ever an adversary of Jerusalem." Robertus Monachus p. 77. in v. Raumer Palæst. p. 173, ed. 4. It was called "the spouse of Syria," as an impregnable fortress.

³¹ See on Amos i. 6. above p. 161.

³² Ps. Epiphanius de vitis Proph. p. 246.

³³ Theod. H. E. iii. 7.

³⁴ Orat. 4. in Julian. c. 36.

³⁵ "Ib. 8. 1.

³⁶ B. J. ii. 6. 3.

³⁷ Aut. xiv. 1. 3.

³⁸ Jos. Ant. xiii. 13. 3.

³⁹ κατέσκαπτον,

⁴⁰ See on Amos i. 6. above p. 161.

⁴¹ Ritter xvi. 49.

Egyptians, Syrians, Indians and eastern Christians; no Latins¹. Its Jewish inhabitants fled from it in the time of Napoleon: now, with few exceptions it is inhabited by Arabs².

But these, Ghüzzeh, Eskalon, Akir, Sedud, are at most successors of the Philistine cities, of which there is no trace above the surface of the earth. It is common to speak of "remnants of antiquity," as being or not being to be found in any of them; but this means, that, where these exist, there are remains of a Greek or Roman, not of a Philistine city.

Of the four cities, Akkaron, Ekron, ("the firm-rooting") has not left a vestige. It is mentioned by name only, after the times of the Bible, by some who passed by it³. There was "a large village of Jews" so called in the time of Eusebius and S. Jerome⁴, "between Azotus and Jamnia." Now a village of "about 50 mud houses without a single remnant of antiquity except 2 large finely built wells" bears the name of Akir. S. Jerome adds, "Some think that Accaron is the tower of Strato, afterwards called Cæsarea." This was perhaps derived from misunderstanding his Jewish instructor⁵. But it shews how entirely all knowledge of Ekron was then lost.

Ashdod or Azotus which, at the time when Zephaniah prophesied, held out a twenty-nine years' siege against Psammetichus, is replaced by "a moderate sized village of mud houses, situated on the Eastern declivity of a little flattish hill," "entirely modern, not containing a vestige of antiquity." "A beautiful sculptured sarcophagus with some fragments of small marble shafts," "near the Khan on the S. W." belong of course to later times. "The whole south side of the hill appears also, as if it had been once covered with buildings, the stones of which are now thrown together in the rude fences." Its Bishops are mentioned from the Council of Nice to A. D. 536⁶, and so probably continued till the Mohammedan devastation. It is not mentioned in the Talmud⁷. Benjamin of Tudela calls it Palmis, and says, "it is desolate, and there are no Jews in it"⁸. "Neither Ibn Haukal [Yacut], Edrisi, Abulfeda, nor William of Tyre mention it."

Ascalon and Gaza had each a port, Maiuma Gazæ, Maiuma Ascalon; lit. "a place on the sea" (an Egyptian name⁹) belonging to Ascalon or Gaza. The name involves that Ascalon and Gaza themselves, the old Philistine towns, were not on the sea. They were, like Athens, built inland, perhaps (as has been conjectured) from fear of the raids of pirates, or of inroads from those who (like the Philistines themselves probably, or some tribe of them) might come from the sea. The port probably of both was built in much later times; the Egyptian name implies that they were built by Egyptians, after the time when its kings Necos and Apries, (Pharaoh-Necho and Pharaoh-Hophra, who took Gaza¹⁰) made Egypt a naval power¹¹. This became a characteristic of these Philistine cities. They themselves lay more or less inland, and had a city connected with them, of the same name, on the shore. Thus there was an "Azotus by the sea," and an "Azotus Ispinus." There were "two Iamnia, one inland." But Ashdod lay further from the sea than Gaza; Yamnia, (the Yabneel of Joshua¹², in Uziah's time, Yabneh¹³) further than Ashdod. The port of Yamnia was burnt by Judas¹⁴.

The name, Maiumas, does not appear till Christian times, though "the port of Gaza" is mentioned by Strabo¹⁵: to it, Alexander brought from Tyre the machines, with which he took Gaza itself¹⁶. That port then must have been at some distance from Gaza. Each port became a town, large enough to have, in Christian times, a Bishop of its own. The Epistle of John of Jerusalem, inserted in the Acts of the Council of Constantinople, A. D. 536, written in the name of Palestine i., ii., and iii., is signed by a Bishop of Maiumen of Ascalon, as well as by a Bishop of Ascalon, as it is by a Bishop of Maiumas of Gaza as well as by a Bishop of Gaza¹⁷. Yabne, or Yamnia, was on a small eminence¹⁸, 6½ hours from the sea¹⁹. The Maiumas Gazæ became the more known. To it, as being Christian, Constantine gave the right of citizenship, and called it Constantia from his son, making it a city independent of Gaza. Julian the Apostate gave to Gaza (which, though it had Bishops and Martyrs, had a heathen temple at the beginning of the 5th century) its former jurisdiction over it, and though about 20 furlongs off, it was called "the maritime portion of Gaza"²⁰. It had thenceforth the same municipal officers; but, "as regards the Church alone," Sozomen adds, "they still appear to be two cities; each has its own Bishop and clergy, and festivals and martyrs, and commemorations of those who had been their Bishops, and boundaries of the fields around, whereby the altars which belong to each Episcopate are parted." The provincial Synod decided against the desire of a Bishop of Gaza, in Sozomen's time, who wished to bring the Clergy of the Maiumites under himself, ruling that "although deprived of their civil privileges by a heathen king, they should not be deprived of those of the Church."

In A. D. 400, then, the two cities were distinct, not joined or running into one another.

S. Jerome mentions it as "Maiumas, the emporium of Gaza, 7 miles from the desert on the way to Egypt by the sea;" Sozomen speaks of "Gaza by the sea, which they also call Maiumas;" Evagrius, "that which they also call Maiumas, which is over against the city Gaza," "a little city." Mark the deacon A. D. 421, says, "We sailed to the maritime portion of Gaza, which they call Maiumas," and Antoninus Martyr, about the close of the 6th century, "we came from Ascalon to Mazomates, and came thence, after a mile, to Gaza,—that magnificent and lovely city." This perhaps explains how an anonymous Geographer, enumerating the places from Egypt to Tyre, says so distinctly, "after Rinocorura lies the new Gaza, being itself also a city; then the desert Gaza," (writing, we must suppose, after some of

¹ Fabri Evagatorium T. ii. p. 379.

² Schwartz, d. Heil. Land p. 91. 1853.

³ "Passing through Azotus, between which and Jamnia, which is situate on the sea, [i. e. the maritime Jamnia] we left Accaron on one side." Fulcher. Carnot. A. D. 1100. Gesta Peregr. Franc. c. 23 p. 464 quoted Raumer s. verb.

⁴ de locis Hebr. T. iii. p. 146. Vall.

⁵ Porter Handb. p. 275.

⁶ "The verse, Ekron shall be uprooted, the Talmud says, relates to Cæsarea, the daughter of Edom, which is situate among the sands. It does not mean that Ekron is Cæsarea, which would be absurd, but only shews its hatred against that city, and foretells its destruction, resting on a Biblical text, as is the habit of the talmudists." Neubauer Geogr. du Talmud p. 92. See also Ib. p. 12. Estori in his Kafor uperach gives קס as another name of קס, but Zunz quotes the Succah f. 276. as distinguishing קס from קס Cæsarea (on the geogr. of Pal. App. to Benj. Tud. ii. 411.)

⁷ Porter Handb. pp. 272, 273.

⁸ Reland p. 609.

⁹ It does not appear in Neubauer, Geographie du Talmud.

¹⁰ "Palmis, which is Ashdod of the Philistines." 2d ed. Asher.

¹¹ Asher note Ib. T. ii. p. 99.

¹² "The name Maiuma seems to belong to the Egyptian language, and to offer the two words MA IOM "place by the sea." Quatremère, les sultans Mamlouks de Makrizi T. i. 2. App. p. 229.

¹³ Jer. xlvii. 1.

¹⁴ See Herod. ii. 159, 161. and Rawlinson on ii. 182.

Herod. T. ii. p. 277.

¹⁵ Ἀγῶτος παράλιος. Excerpta in Græca notitia Patriarch. in Reland p. 215. Schwarz (d. heil. Land p. 91.) places Ashdod at an hour from the "Mediterranean."

¹⁶ Plin. N. H. v. 12.

¹⁷ Josh. xv. 11.

¹⁸ 2 Chr. xxvi. 6.

¹⁹ 2 Macc. xii. 9.

²⁰ Strabo xvi. 2, 30. p. 750.

²¹ "The engines, with which he took Tyre, being sent for by him, arrive from the sea." Arr. ii. 27.

²² Conc. T. v. 1164. Col.

²³ Irby and Mangles p. 57.

²⁴ Michaud et Poujoulat Corresp. d'Orient v. p. 373, 374.

²⁵ Soz. v. 3.

²⁶ Vita S. Hilarion. n. 3. Opp. ii. 15. Vall.

²⁷ Soz. vii. 21.

²⁸ Ev. ii. 5.

²⁹ Ib. 8.

³⁰ Marcus Diac. A. D. 421, in vita S. Porphyrii, c. 8. ap. Bolland. Feb. 26.

³¹ Itin. B. Antonini, pp. 24, 25.

³² Hudson Geograph. Minors T. iv. p. 39.

the destructions of Gaza); and S. Jerome could say equally positively; "The site of the ancient city scarce yields the traces of foundations; but the city now seen was built in another place in lieu of that which fell."

Keith, who in 1844 explored the spot, found wide-spread traces of some extinct city.

"At seven furlongs from the sea the manifold but minute remains of an ancient city are yet in many places to be found—Innumerable fragments of broken pottery, pieces of glass, (some beautifully stained) and of polished marble, lie thickly spread in every level and hollow, at a considerable elevation and various distances, on a space of several square miles. In fifty different places they profusely lie, in a level space far firmer than the surrounding sands," "from small patches to more open spaces of twelve or twenty thousand square yards." "The oblong sand-hill, greatly varied in its elevation and of an undulated surface, throughout which they recur, extends to the W. and W. S. W. from the sea nearly to the environs of the modern Gaza." "In attempts to cultivate the sand (in 1832) hewn stones were found, near the old port. Remains of an old wall reached to the sea.—Ten large fragments of wall were embedded in the sand. About 2 miles off are fragments of another wall. Four intermediate fountains still exist, nearly entire in a line along the coast, doubtless pertaining to the ancient port of Gaza. For a short distance inland, the débris is less frequent, as if marking the space between it and the ancient city, but it again becomes plentiful in every hollow. About half a mile from the sea we saw three pedestals of beautiful marble. Holes are still to be seen from which hewn stones had been taken."

On the other hand, since the old Ashkelon had, like Gaza, Jamnia, Ashdod, a sea-port town belonging to it but distinct from itself, (the city itself lying distinct and inland), and since there is no space for two towns distinct from one another, within the circuit of the Ashkelon of the crusades, which is limited by the nature of the ground, there seems to be no choice but that the city of the crusades, and the present skeleton, should have been the Maiumas Ascalon, the sea-port. The change might the more readily take place, since the title "port" was often omitted. The new town obliterated the memory of the old, as Neapolis, Naples, on the shore, has taken place of the inland city (whatever its name was), or Utrecht, it is said, has displaced the old Roman town, the remains of which are three miles off at Vechten³, or Sicheim is called Neapolis, Nablous, which yet was 3 miles off⁴. Er-riha is, probably, at least the second representative of the ancient Jericho; the Jericho of the New Testament, built by Herod, not being the Jericho of the prophets. The Coreyra of Greek history gave its name to the island; it is replaced by a Corfu in a different but near locality, which equally gives its name to the island now. The name of Ve-netia migrated with the inhabitants of the province, who fled from Attila, some 23 miles, to a few of the islands on the coast, to become again the name of a great republic⁵. In our own country, "old Windsor" is said to have been the residence of the Saxon monarchs; the present Windsor, was originally "new Windsor:" old Sarum was the Cathedral city, until the reign of Henry iii: but, as the old towns decayed, the new towns came to be called Windsor, Sarum, though not the towns which first had the name. What is now called Shoreham, not many years ago, was called "new Shoreham," in distinction from the neighbouring village⁶.

William of Tyre describes Ashkelon as "situated on the sea-shore, in the form of a semi-circle, whose chord or diameter lies on the sea-shore; but its circumference or arc is on the land, looking East. The whole city lies as in a trench, all declining towards the sea, surrounded on all sides by raised mounds, on which are walls with numerous towers of solid masonry, the cement being harder than the stone, with walls of due thickness and of height proportionate: it is surmounted also with outer walls of the same solidity." He then describes its four gates, E. N. S. towards Jerusalem, Gaza, Joppa, and the W., called the sea-gate, because "by it the inhabitants have an egress to the sea."

A modern traveller, whose description of the ruins exactly agrees with this, says, "the walls are built on a ridge of rocks that winds round the town in a semicircular direction and terminates at each end in the sea: the ground falls within the walls in the same manner, that it does without, so that no part of it could be seen from the outside of the walls. There is no bay nor shelter for shipping, but a small harbour advancing a little way into the town towards its eastern extremity seems to have been formed for the accommodation of such small craft as were used in the better days of the city." The harbour, moreover, was larger during the crusades, and enabled Ascalon to receive supplies of corn from Egypt and thereby to protract its siege. Sultan Bibars filled up the port and cast stones into the sea, A.D. 1270, and destroyed the remains of the fortifications, for fear that the Franks, after their treaty with the king of Tunis, should bring back their forces against Islamism and establish themselves there⁹. Yet Abulfeda, who wrote a few years later, calls it "one of the Syrian ports of Islam"¹⁰.

This city, so placed on the sea, and in which too the sea enters, cannot be the Ashkelon, which had a port, which was a town distinct from it. The Ascalon of the Philistines, which existed down into Christian times, must have been inland.

Benjamin of Tudela in the 12th cent. who had been on the spot, and who is an accurate eyewitness¹¹, says, "From Ashdod are two parasangs to Ashkelonah¹²; this is new Ashkelon which Ezra the priest built on the sea-shore, and they at first called it Benibra¹³, and it is distant from the old Ashkelon, which is desolate, four parasangs." When the old names of the chief, "about 40 karaites, and about 300 Cuthmians" shews personal acquaintance. The former name of the "new Ascalon" and the supposed distance of the ruins of the old, he must have learned on the spot.

¹² Benj. Tud. pronounces the new city Ashkelonah, as the Latins did. When speaking himself, he says Ashkelon.

¹³ "Benibra" looks like a corruption of בית נבר, "a place of pure water," like "Bebaten, Bedora, Beestera, Begabar" &c. in Reland. 617. sqq. The Gadite town of that name becomes in Eus. Βηθναβόλις. S. Jerome has another Benamerium, N. of Zoar, now N'mairah. Tristram Land of Moab p. 67. A well in Ascalon is mentioned by Eusebius.

"There are many wells (named) in Scripture and are yet shewn in the country of Gerar, and at Ascalon." v. φρέαρ. William of Tyre says; "It has no fountains, either within the compass of the walls, or near it; but it abounds in wells, both within and without, which supply palatable water, fit for drinking. For greater caution the inhabitants had built some cisterns within, to receive rain-water." Benj. of T. also says, "There in the midst of the city is a well which they call Beer Ibrahim-al-khalil [the well of Abraham the friend (of God)] which he dug in the days of the Philistines." Keith mentions "20 fountains of excellent water opened up anew by Ibrahim Pasha." p. 274.

¹ T. iii. p. 218. ² Keith on prophecy, from personal examination. pp 378, 379.

³ Reland who lived at Utrecht, says that Roman antiquities were daily dug up at Vechten, where were the remains of a Roman fort. Pal. p. 105. ⁴ S. Jerome.

⁵ Gibbon c. 35.

⁶ In like way Alresford, Basford, Brentford, Goole, Isleworth, must have been at one time, New Alr. New Basford &c. but, as the more considerable, have appropriated the name which belonged to both the old and new places.

⁷ Willermus Tyr. Hist. xvii. 22. in Gesta Dei per Francos p. 924. The solidity of the walls and of the cement are described in the same way, in the latter part of the 17th. cent. by d'Arvieux and Padre Malone da Maleo Terra Santa p. 471.

⁸ Dr. Richardson, Travels along the Med.terr. ii. p. 201.

⁹ According to Ibn Férat in Reinaud Chroniques Arabes n. xcvi. Michaud, Biblioth. des Croisades iv. 525.

¹⁰ Ab. Tab. Syrie p. 78. Köhler. חַר, a gap, opening, access, or an enemy's frontier, (Freytag) "is in ordinary Arabic, used for a port, as חַר בֵּירוּת 'the port of Beyrout,' and חַר דַּמִּיטָה 'the port of Damietta.'" Prof. Cheney.

¹¹ p. 2. ed. Asher. The enumeration of "about 200 Rabbanite Jews," with the

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

Ashkelon a desolation: they shall drive out Ashdod^h at the noon day, and Ekron shall be rooted up.

^h Jer. G. 4, & 15. 8. ⁱ Ezek. 25. 16.

5 Woe unto the inhabitants ofⁱ the sea coast, the nation of the Cherethites! the Ashkelon perished, is unknown. If, as seems probable from some of the antiquities dug up, the Ashkelon, at which Herod was born and which he beautified, was the seaport town, commerce probably attracted to it gradually the inhabitants of the neighbouring town of Ascalon, as the population of the Piræus now exceeds that of Athens.

The present Ashkelon is a ghastly skeleton; all the framework of a city, but none there. "The soil is good," but the "peasants who cultivate it" prefer living outside in a small village of mud-huts, exposed to winds and sand-storms, because they think that God has abandoned it, and that evil spirits (the Jân and the Ghûl) dwell there¹.

Even the remains of antiquity, where they exist, belong to later times. A hundred men excavated in Ashkelon for 14 days in hopes of finding treasure there. They dug 18 feet below the surface, and found marble shafts, a Corinthian capital, a colossal statue with a Medusa's head on its chest, a marble pavement and white-marble pedestal². The excavation reached no Philistine Ashkelon.

"Broken pottery," "pieces of glass," "fragments of polished marble" "of ancient columns, cornices &c."³ were the relics of a Greek Gaza.

Though then it is a superfluity of fulfilment, and what can be found belongs to a later city, still what can be seen has an impressive correspondence with the words Gaza is forsaken; for there are miles of fragments of some city connected with Gaza. The present Gaza occupies the southern half of a hill built with stone for the Moslem conquerors of Palestine. "Even the traces of its former existence, its vestiges of antiquity, are very rare; occasional columns of marble or gray granite, scattered in the streets and gardens, or used as thresholds at the gates and doors of houses, or laid upon the front of watering-troughs. One fine Corinthian capital of white marble lies inverted in the middle of the street." These belong then to times later than Alexander, since whose days the very site of Gaza must have changed its aspect.

Ashkelon shall be a desolation. The site of the port of Ascalon was well chosen, strong, overhanging the sea, fenced from the land, stretching forth its arms towards the Mediterranean, as if to receive in its bosom the wealth of the sea, yet shunned by the poor hinds around it. It lies in such a living death, that it is "one of the most mournful scenes of utter desolation" which a traveller "even in this land of ruins ever beheld." But this too cannot be the Philistine city. The sands which are pressing hard upon the solid walls of the city, held back by them for the time, yet threatening to overwhelm "the spouse of Syria," and which accumulated in the plain below, must have buried the old Ashkelon, since in this land, where the old names so cling to the spot, there is no trace of it.

Ekron shall be uprooted; and at Akîr and Esdûd "cele-

¹ Mr. Cyril Graham in Keith p. 376. iii. 169-169.

² Travels of Lady H. Stanhope, Keith p. 378.

³ Robinson Travels ii. 38.

⁴ Smith Ib. p. 66 note.

⁵ Volney Voyage en Syrie c. 31. p. 311. Keith p. 370.

⁶ S. Jer.

⁷ 1 Cor. iv. 5.

⁸ 2 Sam. xii. 12.

⁹ S. Luke xii. 3.

¹⁰ See on Am. ix. 7. p. 221.

¹¹ 1 Sam. xxx. 14.

¹² Ib. 16.

¹³ Ezek. xxv. 16. It may be that they were so called as coming from word of the LORD is against you; O^k Canaan, the land of the Philistines, I will even destroy thee, that there shall be no inhabitant.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

^k Jos. 13. 3.

6 And the sea coast shall be dwellings brated at present, for its scorpions," the few stones, which remain, even of a later town, are but as gravestones to mark the burial place of departed greatness.

"⁷ In like way, all who glory in bodily strength and worldly power and say, By the strength of my hand I have done it, shall be left desolate and brought to nothing in the day of the Lord's anger." And "the waster," they who by evil words and deeds injure or destroy others and are an offence unto them, these shall be cast out shamefully, into outer darkness "⁸ when the saints shall receive the fullest brightness" in the mid-day of the Sun of Righteousness. The judgement shall not be in darkness, save to them, but in mid-day, so that the justice of God shall be clearly seen, and darkness itself shall be turned into light, as was said to David, ⁹ Thou didst this thing secretly, but I will do it before all Israel and before the sun; and our Lord, ¹⁰ Whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the housetops; and St. Paul, ¹¹ the Lord shall come, Who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the heart. And "they who by seducing words in life or in doctrine uprooted others, shall be themselves rooted up ¹²."

5. The woe having been pronounced on the five cities apart, now falls upon the whole nation of the Cherethites or Philistines. The Cherethites are only named as equivalent to the Philistines, probably as originally a distinct immigration of the same people¹³. The name is used by the Egyptian slave of the Amalekite¹⁴ for those whom the author of the first book of Samuel calls Philistines¹⁵. Ezekiel uses the name parallel with that of Philistines, with reference to the destruction which God would bring upon them¹⁶.

The word of the Lord comes not to them, but upon them, overwhelming them. To them He speaketh not in good, but in evil; not in grace, but in anger; not in mercy, but in vengeance. Philistia was the first enemy of the Church. It shewed its enmity to Abraham and Isaac and would fain that they should not sojourn among them¹⁷. They were the hindrance that Israel should not go straight to the promised land¹⁸. When Israel passed the Red Sea, ¹⁹ sorrow took hold of them. They were close to salvation in body, but far in mind. They are called Canaan, as being a chief nation of it²⁰, and in that name lay the original source of their destruction. They inherited the sins of Canaan and with them his curse, preferring the restless beating of the barren, bitter sea on which they dwelt, "the waves of this troublesome world," to being a part of the true Canaan. They would absorb the Church into the world, and master it, subduing it to the heathen Canaan, not subdue themselves to it, and become part of the heavenly Canaan.

6. *The sea-coast*²¹ shall be dwellings and cottages, lit.

Crete as the LXX supposed, rendering "Cretans" in Ezek., and here (as also the Syr.) "sojourners of the Cretans." Hence perhaps also Tacitus' statement (Hist. v. 2.) that the Jews had been expelled from Crete. The other versions render the word as appellative, "destroying" or "destroyed." Aq. and ε, εθνος ἀλεθριον, Theod. εθνος ἀλεθριος Symm. εθνος ἀλεθριου. S. Jer. gives perditorem.

¹⁷ Gen. xxi. 34. xxvi. 14, 15, 28.

¹⁸ Ex. xiii. 17.

¹⁹ Ib. xv. 14.

²⁰ Gen. xv. 21.

²¹ The words "hand of the sea" are repeated with emphasis, vers. 5, 6, and the first words v. 7.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

and cottages for shepherds, ¹ and folds for flocks.

See Is. 17. 2.
ver. 14.
Isai. 11. 11.
Mic. 4. 7.
& 5. 7, 8.
Hag. 1. 12.
& 2. 2.
ver. 9.

Or,
when, &c.

7 And the coast shall be for ^m the remnant of the house of Judah; they shall feed thereupon; in the houses of Ashkelon shall they lie down in the evening: || for the cuttings or diggings¹. This is the central meaning of the word; the place of the Cherethites (the cutters off) shall be cheroth of shepherds, places which they dug up that their flocks might be enclosed therein. The tracts once full of fighting men, the scourge of Judah, should be so desolate of its former people, as to become a sheep-walk. Men of peace should take the place of its warriors.

So the shepherds of the Gospel with their flocks have entered into possession of warlike nations, turning them to the Gospel. They are shepherds, the chief of whom is that Good Shepherd, Who laid down His Life for the sheep. And these are the sheep of whom He speaks, ² Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear My Voice; and there shall be one fold and One Shepherd.

7. And the coast shall be. Or probably³, It shall be a portion for the remnant of the house of Judah. He uses the word, employed in the first assignment of the land to Israel⁴; and of the whole people as belonging to God, ⁵ Jacob is the lot of His inheritance. The tract of the sea, which, with the rest, was assigned to Israel, which, for its unfaithfulness, was seldom, even in part, possessed, and at this time, was wholly forfeited, should be a portion for the mere remnant which should be brought back. David used the word in his psalm of thanksgiving, when he had brought the ark to the city of David, how God had ⁶ confirmed the covenant to Israel, saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance; and Asaph,⁷ He cast out the heathen before them and divided to them an inheritance by line. It is the reversal of the doom threatened by Micah, ⁸ Thou shalt have none, that shall cast a cord by lot in the congregation of the Lord. The word is revived by Ezekiel in his ideal division of the land to the restored people⁹. ¹⁰ The gifts and culling of God are without repentance. The promise, which had slumbered during Israel's faithlessness, should be renewed to its old extent. ¹¹ There is no prescription against the Church. The boat threatens to sink; it is tossed, half-submerged, by the waves; but its Lord rebukes the wind and the sea; wind and sea obey Him, and there is a great calm¹².

For the remnant of the house of Judah. Yet, who save He in Whose hand are human wills, could now foresee that Judah should, like the ten tribes, rebel, be carried captive, and yet, though like and worse than Israel in its sin¹³, should, unlike Israel, be restored? The re-building of Jerusalem was, their enemies pleaded, contrary to sound policy¹⁴: the plea

Lord their God shall visit them, and turn away their captivity.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

8 ¶ I have heard the reproach of Moab, and the revilings of the children of Ammon, whereby they have reproached my people, and magnified themselves against their border.

Ex. 4. 31.
Luke 1. 68.
Ps. 126. 1.
Jer. 29. 14.
ch. 3. 20.
Jer. 48. 27.
Ezek. 25. 8.
Ezek. 25.
3, 6.
Jer. 49. 1.

was for the time accepted; for the rebellions of Jerusalem were recorded in the chronicles of Babylon¹⁵. Yet the falling short of the complete restoration depended on their own wills. God turned again their captivity; but they only, whose spirit God stirred, willed to return. The temporal restoration was the picture of the spiritual. They who returned had to give up lands and possessions in Babylonia, and a remnant only chose the land of promise at such cost. Babylonia was as attractive as Egypt formerly.

In the houses of Ashkelon shall they lie down in the evening. One city is named for all. They shall lie down, he says, continuing the image from their flocks, as Isaiah, in a like passage¹⁶, The first-born of the poor shall feed, and the needy shall lie down in safety.

The true Judah shall overspread the world; but it too shall only be a remnant; these shall, in safety, ¹⁷ go in and out and find pasture. In the evening of the world they shall find their rest; for then also in the time of Anti-Christ, the Church shall be but a remnant still. For the Lord their God shall visit them, for He is the Good Shepherd, Who came to seek the one sheep which was lost and Who says of Himself, ¹⁸ I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick; and Who in the end will more completely turn away their captivity, bring His banished to their everlasting home, the Paradise from which they have been exiled, and separate for ever the sheep from the goats who now oppress and scatter them abroad¹⁹.

8. I, ²⁰ God, Who know all things, I heard i. e., have known within Me, in My mind, not anew but from eternity, and now I shew in effect that I know it; wherefore I say that I hear, because I act after the manner of one who perceiveth something anew." I, the just Judge, heard²¹. He was present and heard, even when, because He avenged not, He seemed not to hear, but laid it up in store with Him to avenge in the due time²².

The reproach of Moab and the reviling of the children of Ammon, whereby they have reproached My people. Both words, reproached, reviled, mean, primarily, cutting speeches; both are intensive, and are used of blaspheming God as unable to help His people, or reviling His people as forsaken by Him. If directed against man, they are directed against God through man. So David interpreted the taunt of Goliath, ²³ reviled the armies of the living God, and the Philistine mention of the sea having preceded, "the goings forth thereof were to the sea, מִן הַיָּם לְמִזְפֶּה." Yet there is no emphasis in the repetition of the word from the preceding verse. The LXX renders מִן הַיָּם as the subject, the Ch. Vulg. as the predicate.

⁴ "The ten portions of Manasseh;" Josh. xvii. 5. "Why hast thou given me one lot and one portion?" Ib. 14. "out of the portion of the children of Judah was the inheritance of the children of Simeon." Ib. xix. 9. ⁵ Deut. xxxii. 9.

⁶ 1 Chr. xvi. 18. Ps. cv. 11. ⁷ Ps. lxxviii. 55. ⁸ Mic. ii. 5. ⁹ Ezek. xlvii. 13. ¹⁰ Rom. xi. 29. ¹¹ "Nullum tempus ecclesiarum," though said of its property. ¹² S. Matt. viii. 26, 27. ¹³ Jer. iii. 8-11. Ezek. xvi. 40-52. xxiii. 11. ¹⁴ Ezra ix. 12-16. ¹⁵ Ib. 19-22.

¹⁶ Is. iv. 30. ¹⁷ S. John x. 9. ¹⁸ Ezek. xxxiv. 16. ¹⁹ Ib. 17-19. ²⁰ Dion. ²¹ See Is. xvi. 6. Jer. xlviii. 39. Ezek. xxxv. 12, 13. ²² Deut. xxxii. 34, 35. ²³ 1 Sam. xvii. 26, 36, 45. coll. 10, 25.

¹ So Kim. Ibn Denan has, "caves which shepherds inhabit;" Arab. transl. "domicles which shepherds dig." Abulw., and Tanchum derive it from מִן הַיָּם 2 Kgs. vi. 23. "a feast." Abulw. thinks this not improbable, as an irregular plural. Tanchum, "stations of shepherds where they turn their flocks to feed and sit down to eat, or places in which they dig for watering the flocks." The climate of Judæa, however, does not admit of underground habitations, like Nineveh, and in the country of the Philistines flocks would be supplied by wells with trenches. No Arabic authority suggests a derivation from מִן הַיָּם "nest" (as Ewald). The allusion to Cherethim would be lost by this invented root. Rashi has "a place where the shepherds eat." A. E. explains מִן הַיָּם, as if it were from מִן הַיָּם, "which the shepherds turn for themselves." The Moabite stone has מִן הַיָּם l. 25, apparently, of "a ditch" "or moat."

² S. John x. 16. ³ Grammatically, מִן הַיָּם may be either the subject or predicate. For even in prose (Josh. xix. 29.) it is used without the article, of the sea-coast, the cursed David by his gods¹. In a Psalm David complains, ²*the reproaches of them that reproached Thee are fallen upon me*; and a Psalm which cannot be later than David, since it declares the national innocency from idolatry, connects with their defeats, the voice of him ³*that reproacheth and blasphemeth* (joining the two words used here). The sons of Corah say, ⁴*with a sword in my bones, mine enemies reproach me, while they say daily unto me, where is thy God?* So Asaph, ⁵*The enemy hath reproached, the foolish people hath blasphemed Thy Name*; and, ⁶*we are become a reproach to our neighbours. Wherefore should the heathen say, where is their God? render unto our neighbours—the reproach wherewith they have reproached Thee, O Lord.* And Ethan, ⁷*Remember, Lord, the reproach of Thy servants—wherewith Thine enemies have reproached, O Lord, wherewith they have reproached the footsteps of Thine Anointed.*

In history the repeated blasphemies of Sennacherib and his messengers are expressed by the same words. In earlier times the remarkable concession of Jephthah, ⁸*Wilt not thou possess what Chemosh thy god giveth thee to possess?* so whomsoever the Lord our God shall drive out before us, them will we possess, implies that the Ammonites claimed their land as the gift of their god Chemosh, and that that war was, as that later by Sennacherib, waged in the name of the false god against the True.

The relations of Israel to Moab and Ammon have been so habitually misrepresented, that a review of those relations throughout their whole history may correct some wrong impressions. The first relations of Israel towards them were even tender. God reminded His people of their common relationship and forbade him even to take the straight road to his own future possessions, across their land against their will. ⁹*Distress them not, nor contend with them*, it is said of each, for I will not give thee of their land for a possession; for I have given it unto the children of Lot for a possession. Idolaters and hostile as they were, yet, for their father's sake, their title to their land had the same sacred sanction, as Israel's to his. I, God says, have given it to them as a possession. Israel, to their own manifest inconvenience, ¹⁰*went along through the wilderness, and compassed the land of Edom, and the land of Moab, but came not within the border of Moab*. By destroying Sihon king of the Amorites and Og king of Bashan, Israel removed formidable enemies, who had driven Moab and Ammon out of a portion of the land which they had conquered from the Zamzummim and Anakim¹¹, and who threatened the remainder. ¹²*Israel dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites*.

Heshbon, Dibon, Jahaz, Medeba, Nophah were cities in the land of the Amorites, in which Israel dwelt. The exclusion of Moab and Ammon from the congregation of the Lord to the tenth generation¹³ was not, of course, from any national antipathy, but intended to prevent a debasing intercourse; a necessary precaution against the sensuousness of their idolatries. Moab was the first¹⁴ in adopting the satanic policy of Balaam, to seduce Israel by sensuality to their idolatries; but the punishment was appointed to the partners of their guilt, the Midianites¹⁵, not to Moab. Yet Moab was the second nation, whose ambition God overruled to chasten His people's idolatries. Eglon, king of Moab, united with himself Ammon and Amalek against Israel. The object of the invasion was, not the recovery of the country which Moab had lost to the Amorites but, Palestine proper. The strength of Moab was apparently not sufficient to occupy the territory of Reuben. They took possession only of *the city of palm trees*¹⁶; either the ruins of Jericho or a spot close by it; with the view apparently of receiving reinforcements or of securing their own retreat by the ford. This garrison enabled them to carry their forays over Israel, and to hold it enslaved for 18 years. The oppressiveness of this slavery is implied by the cry and conversion of Israel to the Lord, which was always in great distress. The memory of Eglon, as one of the oppressors of Israel, lived in the minds of the people in the days of Samuel¹⁷. In the end, this precaution of Moab turned to its own destruction; for, after Eglon was slain, Ephraim, under Ehud, took the fords, and the whole garrison, 10,000 of Moab's warriors, ¹⁸*every strong man and every man of might*, were intercepted in their retreat and perished. For a long time after this, we hear of no fresh invasion by Moab. The trans-Jordanic tribes remained in unquestioned possession of their land for 300 years¹⁹, when Ammon, not Moab, raised the claim, ²⁰*Israel took away my land*, although claiming the land down to the Arnon, and already being in possession of the Southernmost portion of that land, Aroer, since Israel smote him *from Aroer unto Minith*²¹. The land then, according to a law recognised by nations, belonged by a twofold right to Israel; 1) that it had been won, not from Moab, but from the conquerors of Moab, the right of Moab having passed to its conquerors²²; 2) that undisputed and unbroken possession "for time immemorial" as we say, 300 years, ought not to be disputed²³. The defeat by Jephthah stilled them for near 50 years till the beginning of Saul's reign, when they refused the offer of the men of Jabesh-Gilead to serve them, and, with a mixture of insolence and savagery, annexed as a condition of accepting that entire submission, ²⁴*that I may thrust out all your right eyes; to lay it as a reproach to Israel*. The signal victory of Saul²⁵ still did not prevent Ammon, as well as Moab, from being among the enemies whom Saul worsted²⁶. The term enemies implies that they were the assailants. The history of Naomi shews their prosperous condition, that the famine, which desolated Judah²⁷, did not reach them, and that they were a prosperous land, at peace, at that time, with Israel. If all the links of the genealogy are preserved²⁸, Jesse, David's father, was grandson of a Moabitess, Ruth, and perhaps on this ground David entrusted his parents to the care of the king of Moab²⁹. Sacred history gives no hint, what was the cause of his terrible execution upon Moab. But a Psalm of David speaks to God of some blow, under which Israel had reeled. ³⁰*O God, Thou hast abhorred us, and broken us in pieces; Thou hast been wroth: Thou hast made the land to tremble and cloven it asunder; heal its breaches, for it shaketh; Thou hast shewed Thy people a hard thing, Thou hast made it drink wine of reeling*; and thereon David expresses his confidence that God would humble Moab, Edom, Philistia. While David then was engaged in the war with the Syrians of Mesopotamia and Zobah³¹, Moab must have combined with Edom in an aggressive war against Israel. *The valley of salt*³², where Joab returned and defeated them, was probably ¹ 1 Sam. xvii. 43. ² Ps. lxxix. 10 (9). ³ Ib. xlv. 16 (17).

⁴ Ib. xlii. 10. ⁵ Ib. lxxiv. 10, 18. ⁶ Ib. lxxix. 4, 10, 12.
⁷ Ib. lxxxix. 50, 51. ⁸ Jud. xi. 24. ⁹ Deut. ii. 9, 19. ¹⁰ Jud. xi. 18. ¹¹ Deut. ii. 10, 20, 21.
¹² Nu. xxi. 25, 31. ¹³ Deut. xxiii. 3. ¹⁴ Nu. xxv. 1, 3. The rank of the Midianitish lady who gave herself as a partner of the sin of the Simeonite chief (Ib. 6, 14, 15, 18.) shews how much store the Midianites set on that seduction.
¹⁵ Ib. 17. and xxxi. ¹⁶ Jud. iii. 13. ¹⁷ 1 Sam. xii. 9. ¹⁸ Jud. iii. 29.
¹⁹ Ib. xi. 26. ²⁰ Ib. 13. ²¹ Ib. 33. ²² Grotius de jure belli et pacis, iii. c. vi. n. vii. and notes. ²³ Id. lb. ii. c. iv. n. ii. and ix. and notes.
²⁴ 1 Sam. xi. 1, 2. ²⁵ Ib. 11. ²⁶ וַיִּשָּׁע, not, "vexed." Ib. xiv. 47. ²⁷ Ruth i. 1.
²⁸ Ib. iv. 21, 22. ²⁹ 1 Sam. xxii. 3, 4. ³⁰ Ps. lx. 3-5. ³¹ Ib. tit.
³² It was probably the narrow valley some three miles long between the Northern end of that remarkable salt mountain, the Jebel or Khams Udsum and the dead sea. See.

within Judah, since *the city of salt*¹ was one of the six cities of the wilderness. Since they had defeated Judah, they must have been overtaken there on their return².

Yet this too was a religious war. "Thou," David says³, "hast given a banner to them that fear Thee, to be raised aloft because of the truth."

There is no tradition, that the kindred Psalm of the sons of Corah, Psalm xlv, belongs to the same time. Yet the protestations to God of the entire absence of idolatry could not have been made at any time later than the early years of Solomon. Even were there Maccabee Psalms, the Maccabees were but a handful among apostates. They could not have pleaded the national freedom from unfaithfulness to God, nor, except in two subordinate and self-willed expeditions⁴, were they defeated. Under the Persian rule, there were no armies nor wars; no immunity from idolatry in the later history of Judah. Judah did not in Hezekiah's time go out against Assyria; the one battle, in which Josiah was slain, ended the resistance to Egypt. Defeat was, at the date of this Psalm, new and surprising, in contrast with God's deliverances of old⁵; yet the inroad, by which they had suffered, was one of spoiling⁶, not of subdual. Yet this too was a religious war, from their neighbours. They were slain for the sake of God⁷, they were covered with shame on account of the reproaches and blasphemies⁸ of those who triumphed over God, as powerless to help; they were a scorn and derision to the petty nations around them. It is a Psalm of unshaken faith amid great prostration: it describes in detail what the lxth Psalm sums up in single heavy words of imagery; but both alike complain to God of what His people had to suffer for His sake.

The insolence of Ammon in answer to David's message of kindness to their new king, like that to the men of Jabesh Gilead, seems like a deliberate purpose to create hostilities. The relations of the previous king of Ammon to David, had been kind⁹, perhaps, because David being a fugitive from Israel, they supposed him to be Saul's enemy. The enmity originated, not with the new king, but with *the princes of the children of Ammon*¹⁰. David's treatment of these nations¹¹ is so unlike his treatment of any others whom he defeated, that it implies an internecine warfare, in which the safety of Israel could only be secured by the destruction of its assailants.

Mesha king of Moab records one war, and alludes to others, not mentioned in Holy Scripture. He says, that before his own time, "Omri, king of Israel, afflicted Moab many days;" that "his son [Ahab] succeeded him, and he too said, 'I will afflict Moab.'" This affliction he explains to be that "13 Omri the description in Tristram's Land of Isr., p. 326 sqq. At its N. extremity at the mouth of Wady Zuweirah there are considerable traces of (perhaps Roman) buildings. A tower placed here would command the entrance of the valley of salt, and this may well have been the site of the city of salt.¹ Jos. xv. 62.

² Seetzen guessed (Reisen ii. 356) and Robinson considered it certain (ii. 109) that "the valley of salt" was the lower part of the 'Arabah, close to the Dead Sea, between Edom and Judaea. But i. This is spoken of as a "great plain" (Seetzen p. 355) and although the word בְּרִיחַ is twice used of as large valley; (1) the valley over against Baal Peor, where all Israel was encamped Deut. iii. 29, iv. 46; 2) that of Zephathah, where Asa, with an army of 580,000 men, defeated Zerah the Ethiopian with 1000,000 (2 Chr. xiv. 10) this is the exception. In eleven other places it is used of a narrow valley. ii. The depression, South of the dead Sea down to the Red Sea, had, in the time of Moses, the same title as now, the "Arabah," Deut. i. 1. ii. 8. iii. The space, near the Dead Sea, which is salt, "the Sebkhah, or desolate sand-swamp" (Tristram Moab, p. 41.) is impracticable for men; much more for an army. "The Sebkhah or salt-flat is a large flat, of at least 6 by 10 miles from N. to S. Taught by the experience of M. de Saulcy, we made no attempt to cross it to the northwards, as the mud would have been far too deep and treacherous for us to pass in safety" (Id. Land of Israel, p. 336.). "The land South of the Sebkhah is not salt, but rich and fertile" (Id. p. 338). See de Saulcy Voyage en Syrie &c. p. 218-256.

³ Ps. lx. 4.

⁶ Ib. 10, 12.

¹⁰ Ib. 3.

⁴ 1 Macc. v. 56-60. 67.

⁷ Ib. 22.

¹¹ Ib. viii. 2. xii. 31.

⁸ Ib. 13, 14.

⁹ 2 Sam. x. 2. 3.

¹ Ps. xlv. 1-3.

² Ps. xlv. 1-3.

³ Ps. xlv. 1-3.

¹³ This lies in the word וירש.

possessed himself of the land of Medeba" [expelling¹³, it is implied, its former occupiers] "and that" (apparently, Israel¹⁴) "dwelt therein," "[in his days and in] the days of his son forty years." He was also in possession of Nebo, and "the king of Israel" (apparently Omri), "buil[t] Jahaz and dwelt in it, when he made war with me."¹⁵ Jahaz was near Dibon. In the time of Eusebius, it was still "pointed out between Dibon and Medeba¹⁶." Mesha says, "And I took it to annex it to Dibon." It could not, according to Mesha also, have been S. of the Arnon, since Aroer lay between Dibon and the Arnon, and Mesha would not have annexed to Dibon a town beyond the deep and difficult ravine of the Arnon, with Aroer lying between them. It was certainly N. of the Arnon, since Israel was not permitted to come within the border of Moab, but it was at Jahaz that Sihon met them and fought the battle in which Israel defeated him and gained possession of his land, *from the Arnon to the Jabbok*¹⁷. It is said also that ¹⁸ *Israel dwelt in the land of the Amorites from Aroer which is on the edge of the river Arnon*¹⁹, and the city which is in the river²⁰ unto Gilead. ²¹ Aroer on the edge of the river Arnon, and the city which is in the river Arnon, again occur in describing the southern border of Reuben, among whose towns Jahaz is mentioned, with Beth-Baal-Meon and Kiria-thaim, which have been identified.

The afflicting then of Moab by Omri, according to Mesha, consisted in this, that he recovered to Israel a portion of the allotment of Reuben, between 9 and 10 hours in length²² from N. to S., of which, in the time of Israel's weakness through the civil wars which followed on Jeroboam's revolt, Moab must have dispossessed Reuben. Reuben had remained in undisturbed possession of it, from the first expulsion of the Amorites to the time at least of Rehoboam, about five hundred years²³. "The men of Gad" still "dwelt in Ataroth," Mesha says, "from time immemorial."

The picture, which Mesha gives, is of a desolation of the southern portion of Reuben. For, "I rebuilt," he says, "Baal-Meon, Kiriathaim, Aroer, Beth-bamoth, Bezer, Beth-Dibla-thaim, Beth-baal-Meon." Of Beth-Bamoth, and probably of Bezer, Mesha says, that they had previously been destroyed²⁴. But Reuben would not, of course, destroy his own cities. They must then have been destroyed either by Mesha's father, who reigned before him, when invading Reuben, or by Omri, when driving back Moab into his own land, and expelling him from these cities. Possibly they were dismantled only, since Mesha speaks only of Omri's occupying Medeba, Ataroth, and Jahaz. He held these three cities only, leaving the rest dismantled, or dismantling them, unable to place defenders in them, and unwilling to leave them as places of ag-

¹⁴ A gap in the broken stone probably contained the subject. I see that Schlottman also supplied, "Israel"; Dr. Ginsburg conjectured, less probably, "the enemy."

¹⁵ In this place only Mesha speaks of the king of Israel's war with him in the past. Elsewhere he speaks of himself only as being on the offensive. "I fought against the city" [Ataroth]; "I fought against it" [Nebo]; "go down, fight against Horonaim." The king of Israel is apparently the same throughout, Omri.

¹⁶ S. Jerome de situ loc. Hebr. Opp. iii. 230, v. 1. עֲרֹר, "Jassa, where Sihon king of the Amorites is defeated."

¹⁷ Nu. xxi. 23-25.

¹⁸ "The ruins of Araayr (עֲרֹר) the Aroer of the Scriptures, standing on the edge of the precipice." Burckhardt, travels in Syria p. 372.

¹⁹ "Near the confluence of the Ledjoun and the Mojeh" [Arnon] "about 1 mile E. of the bridge across the Mojeh, there seems to be a fine verdant pasture ground, in the midst of which stands a hill with some ruins upon it." Burckhardt Ib. 373, 4.

²⁰ Josh. xiii. 16, 18.

²¹ The distance is taken from Porter's Hand-book pp. 299-301.

²² The beginning of Rehoboam's reign is, in the received Chronology, 477. B.C.

²³ "I built Beth-Bamoth, for it was destroyed; I built Bezer, for" [the rest is conjecture. There are only two letters, which may be ע or ו, perhaps נ "forsaken"] נָבָה probably, in such simple Hebrew, signifies, in regard to all the towns, built. It is the one word used of the king of Israel and of Mesha, "he built"; "I built," although it is rarely used of building on to existing towns and fortifying them.

(1 Kgs xv. 17. 2 Chr. xi. 7) It is probably here used of re-building; since the cause of the building was the previous destruction.

gression for Moab. But whether they ever were fortified towns at all, or how they were desolated, is mere conjecture. Only they were desolated in these wars.

But it appears from Mesha's own statement, that neither Omri nor Ahab invaded Moab proper. For in speaking of his successful war and its results, he mentions no town S. of the Arnon. He must have been a tributary king, but not a foot of his land was taken. The subsequent war was not a mere revolt, nor was it a mere refusal to pay tribute, of which Mesha makes no complaint. Nor could the tribute have been oppressive to him, since the spoils, left in the encampment of Moab and his allies shortly after his revolt, is evidence of such great wealth. The refusal to pay tribute would have involved nothing further, unless Ahaziah had attempted to enforce it, as Hezekiah refused the tribute to Assyria, but remained in his own borders. But Ahaziah, unlike his brother Jehoram who succeeded him, seems to have undertaken nothing, except the building of some ships for trade¹. Mesha's war was a renewal of the aggression on Reuben.

Heshbon is not mentioned, and therefore must, even after the war, have remained with Reuben.

Mesha's own war was an exterminating war, as far as he records it. "I fought against the city," [Ataroth], he says, "and took it, and killed all the mighty of the city for the well-pleasing of Chemosh and of Moab;" "I fought against it [Nebo] from break of day till noon and took it, and slew all of it, 7000 men; the ladies and maidens I devoted to Ashtar Chemosh;" to be desecrated to the degradations of that sensual idolatry. The words too "Israel perished with an everlasting destruction" stand clear, whether they express Mesha's conviction of the past or his hope of the future.

The war also, on the part of Moab, was a war of his idol Chemosh against God. Chemosh, from first to last, is the agent. "Chemosh was angry with his land;" "Chemosh [was pleased] with it in my days;" "I killed the mighty for the well-pleasing of Chemosh;" "I took captive thence all [] and dragged it along before Chemosh at Kiriath;" "Chemosh said to me, Go and take Nebo against Israel;" "I devoted the ladies and maidens to Ashtar-Chemosh;" "I took thence the vessels of IHVH and dragged² them before Chemosh;" "Chemosh drove him [the king of Israel] out before [my face];" "Chemosh said to me, Go down against Horonaim;" "Chemosh [] it in my days."

Contemporary with this aggressive war against Israel must have been the invasion by the children of Moab and the children of Ammon, the great multitude from beyond the sea, from Syria, in the reign of Jehoshaphat, which brought such terror upon Judah. It preceded the invasion of Moab by Jehoshaphat in union with Jehoram and the king of Edom. For the invasion of Judah by Moab and Ammon took place, while Ahab's son, Ahaziah, was still living. For it was after this, that Jehoshaphat joined with Ahaziah in making ships to go to Tarshish³. But the expedition against Moab was in union with Jehoram who succeeded Ahaziah. The abundance of wealth which the invaders of Judah brought with them, and the precious jewels with which they had adorned themselves, shew that this was no mere marauding expedition, to spoil; but that its object was, to take possession of the land or at least of some portion of it. They came by entire surprise on Jehoshaphat, who heard of them first when they were at Hazazon-Tamar or Engedi, some 36½ miles from Jerusalem⁴. He felt himself entirely unequal to meet them, and cast himself upon God. There was a day of public humiliation of Judah at Jerusalem. Out of all the cities of Judah they came to seek the Lord. Jehoshaphat, in his public prayer, owned, we have no might against this great company which cometh against us; neither know we what to do; but our eyes are upon Thee. He appeals to God, that He had forbidden Israel to invade Ammon, Moab, and Mount Seir, so that they turned away from them and destroyed them not; and now these rewarded them by "coming to cast us out of Thy possession which Thou hast given us to inherit." One of the sons of Asaph foretold to the congregation, that they might go out fearlessly; for they should not have occasion to fight. A Psalm, ascribed to Asaph, records a great invasion, the object of which was the extermination of Israel. They have said; Come and let us cut them off from being a nation, that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance. It had been a secret confederacy. They have taken crafty counsel against Thy people. It was directed against God Himself, i. e. His worship and worshippers. For they have taken counsel in heart together; against Thee do they make a covenant. It was a combination of the surrounding petty nations; Tyre on the N., the Philistines on the W.; on the South the Amalekites, Ishmaelites, Hagarenes; Eastwards, Edom, Gebal, Moab, Ammon. But its most characteristic feature was, that Assur (this corresponds with no period after Jehoshaphat) occupies a subordinate place to Edom and Moab, putting them forward and helping them. Assur also, Asaph says⁵, is joined with them; they have become an arm to the children of Lot. This agrees with the description, there is come against thee a great multitude from beyond the sea, from Syria.

Scripture does not record, on what ground the invasion of Moab by Jehoram and Jehoshaphat, with the tributary king of Edom, was directed against Moab proper; but it was the result doubtless of the double war of Moab against Reuben and against Judah. It was a war, in which the strength of Israel and Moab was put forth to the utmost. Jehoram had mustered all Israel⁶; Moab had gathered all who had reached the age of manhood and upwards, every one who girded on a girdle and upwards. The three armies, which had made a seven days' circuit in the wilderness, were on the point of perishing by thirst and falling into the hands of Moab, when Elisha in God's name promised them the supply of their want, and complete victory over Moab. The eager cupidity of Moab, as of many other armies, became the occasion of his complete overthrow. The counsel with which Elisha accompanied his prediction, ye shall smite every fenced city and every choice city, and every good tree ye shall fell, and all springs of water ye shall stop up, and every good piece of land ye shall waste with stones, was directed, apparently, to dislodge an enemy so inveterate. For water was essential to the fertility of their land and their dwelling there. We hear of no special infliction of death, like what Mesha records of himself. The war was ended by the king of Moab's sacrificing the heir-apparent of the king of Edom⁷, which naturally created great displeasure

¹ 2 Chr. xx. 35, 36.

² A break in the stone leaves the subject uncertain, "In my day said [], and I will look upon him and upon his house, and Israel perished with an everlasting destruction." Schlottman conjectures, probably, "Chemosh." Ganneau renders as if it were past, אָכַר, so Haug, Geiger, Neubauer, Wright; Schlottman, Nöldeke, and Ginsburg, as future, אֶכְרֶה, though Ginsburg alone renders, "And Israel said, I shall destroy it for ever," which is impossible. ³ The word in Hebrew is used of contumelious dragging along the ground.

⁴ Ib. 35, 36. "And after this did Jehoshaphat king of Judah join himself with Ahaziah."

⁵ 300 stadia. Jos. Ant. ix. 1. 2.

⁶ 2 Chr. xx. 4. ⁷ Ib. 13. ⁸ Ib. 10. ⁹ Ps. lxxxiii. 4.

¹⁰ Ib. 3. ¹¹ Ib. 5. ¹² Ib. 8. ¹³ 2 Kgs. iii. 6.

¹⁴ Ib. 21. ¹⁵ Ib. 19. ¹⁶ See ab. on Am. ii. 12. p. 170.

against Israel, in whose cause Edom thus suffered, so that they departed to their own land and finally revolted.

Their departure apparently broke up the siege of Ar and the expedition. Israel apparently was not strong enough to carry on the war without Edom, or feared to remain with their armies away from their own land, as in the time of David, of which Edom might take the advantage. We know only the result.

Moab probably even extended her border to the South by the conquest of Horonaim¹.

After this, Moab is mentioned only on occasion of the miracle of the dead man, to whom God gave life, when cast into Elisha's sepulchre, as he came in contact with his bones. Like the Bedaween now, or the Amalekites of old, ² the bands of Moab came into the land, as the year came. Plunder, year by year, was the lot of Israel at the hands of Moab.

On the East of Jordan, Israel must have remained in part (as Mesha says of the Gadites of Aroer) in their old border. For after this, Hazael, in Jehu's reign, smote Israel ³ from Aroer which is by the river Arnon; and at that time probably Ammon joined with him in the exterminating war in Gilead, destroying life before it had come into the world, *that they might enlarge their border*⁴. Jeroboam ii, B. C. 825, restored Israel *to the sea of the plain*⁵, i. e., the dead sea, and, (as seems probable from the limitation of that term in Deuteronomy⁶, under Ashdod-Pisgah Eastwards) to its Northern extremity, lower in latitude than Heshbon, yet above Nebo and Medeba, leaving accordingly to Moab all which it had gained by Mesha. Uzziah, a few years later, made the Ammonites tributaries⁷ B. C. 810. But 40 years later B. C. 771, Pul, and, after yet another 30 years, 740, Tiglath-pileser having carried away the trans-jordanic tribes⁸, Moab again possessed itself of the whole territory of Reuben. Probably before. For B. C. 726, when Isaiah foretold that ⁹ the glory of Moab should be contemned with all that great multitude, he hears the wailing of Moab throughout all his towns, and names all those which had once been Reuben's and of whose conquest or possession Moab had boasted¹⁰, Nebo, Medeba, Dibon, Jahaz, Baiith; as also those not conquered then, ¹¹ Heshbon, Elealeh; and those of Moab proper, Luhith, Horonaim, and its capitals, Ar-Moab and Kir-Moab. He hears their sorrow, sees their desolation and bewails with their weeping¹². He had prophesied this before¹³, and now, three years ¹⁴ before its fulfilment by Tiglath-Pileser, he renews it. This tender sorrow for Moab has more the character of an elegy than of a denunciation; so that he could scarcely lament more tenderly the ruin of his own people. He mentions also distinctly no sin there except pride. The pride of Moab seems something of common notoriety and speech. *We have heard*¹⁵. Isaiah accumulates words, to express the haughtiness of Moab; *the pride of Moab; exceeding proud; his pride and his haughtiness and his wrath*¹⁶, pride overpassing bounds, upon others. His words seem to be formed so as to keep this one bared thought before us, as if we were to say "pride, prideful, proudness, pridefulness;" and withal the unsubstantialness of it all, *the unsubstantiality of his lies*¹⁷. Pride is the source of all ambition; so Moab is pictured as retiring within her old bounds, the fords of Arnon, and thence asking for aid; her petition is met by the counter-petition, that, if she would be protected in the day of trouble, the out-casts of Israel might lodge with her now: *be thou a covert to her from the face of the spoiler*¹⁸. The prophecy seems to mark itself out as belonging to a time, after the two and a half tribes had been desolated, as stragglers sought refuge in Moab, and when a severe infliction was to come on Moab: *the*¹⁹ remnant shall be small, small not great.

Yet Moab recovered this too. It was a weakening of the nation, not its destruction. Some 126 years after the prophecy of Isaiah, 30 years after the prophecy of Zephaniah, Moab, in the time of Jeremiah, was in entire prosperity, as if no visitation had ever come upon her. What Zephaniah says of the luxuriousness of his people, Jeremiah says of Moab; ²⁰ Moab is one at ease from his youth; he is resting on his lees; and he hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, neither hath he gone into captivity. ²¹ They say, We are mighty and strong men for the war. Moab was ²² a strong staff, a beautiful rod; ²³ he magnified himself against the Lord; ²⁴ Israel was a derision to him; he skipped for joy at his distress. Jeremiah repeats and even strengthens Isaiah's description of his pride; ²⁵ his pride, proud, he repeats, exceedingly; his loftiness, again his pride, his arrogancy, and the haughtiness of his heart. Its strong holds²⁶ were unharmed; all its cities, far and near, are counted one by one, in their prosperity²⁷; its summer-fruits and vintage were plenteous; its vines, luxuriant; all was joy and shouting. Whence should this evil come? Yet so it was with Sodom and Gomorrah just before its overthrow. It was, for beauty, ²⁸ a paradise of God; well-watered everywhere; as the garden of the Lord, like the land of Egypt. In the morning²⁹ the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of the furnace. The destruction foretold by Jeremiah is far other than the affliction spoken of by Isaiah. Isaiah prophesies only a visitation, which should reduce her people: Jeremiah foretells, as did Zephaniah, captivity and the utter destruction of her cities. The destruction foretold is complete. Not of individual cities only, but of the whole he saith, ³⁰ Moab is destroyed. ³¹ The spoiler shall come upon every city, and no city shall escape, and the valley shall perish and the high places shall be destroyed, as the Lord hath spoken. Moab himself was to leave his land. ³² Flee, save your lives, and ye shall be like the heath in the wilderness. Chemosh shall go forth into captivity; his priests and his princes together. Give pinions unto Moab, that it may flee and get away, and her cities shall be a desolation; for there is none to dwell therein. It was not only to go into captivity, but its home was to be destroyed. ³³ I will send to her those who shall upheave her, and they shall upheave her, and her vessels they shall empty, all her flagons (all that aforesaid contained her) they shall break in pieces. ³⁴ Moab is destroyed and her cities; ³⁵ the spoiler of Moab is come upon her; he hath destroyed the strongholds. The subsequent history of the Moabites is in the words, ³⁶ Leave the cities and dwell in the rock, dwellers of Moab, and be like a dove which nesteth in the sides of the mouth of the pit. The purpose of Moab and Ammon against Israel which Asaph complains of, and which Mesha probably speaks of, is retorted upon her. ³⁷ In Heshbon they have devised evil against it; come and let us cut it off from being a nation. Moab shall be destroyed from being a people, because he hath magnified himself against the Lord.

¹ This is marked on the Moabite stone, as a subsequent and distinct expedition.

² 2 Kgs. xiii. 20.

³ Ib. x. 33.

⁴ See on Amos i. 13. p. 168.

⁵ 2 Kgs. xvi. 25.

⁶ Deut. iii. 17.

⁷ 2 Chr. xxvi. 8.

⁸ 1 Chr. v. 26.

⁹ Is. xvi. 14.

¹⁰ Ib. xv. 1, 2, 4.

¹¹ Ib. 4, 5, 1.

¹² Ib. xvi. 9.

¹³ "That the prophecy must be from any other older prophet, is an inference from grounds of nought." Del.

¹⁴ Is. xvi. 13, 14.

¹⁵ Ib. 6.

¹⁶ נאמן כבודו נאמן כבודו נאמן כבודו

¹⁷ Is. xvi. 4, 5.

¹⁸ Ib. 14.

¹⁹ Jer. xlviii. 11.

²⁰ Ib. 14.

²¹ Ib. 27.

²² Ib. 17.

²³ Ib. 26.

²⁴ Gen. xiii. 10.

²⁵ Ib. 29.

²⁶ Ib. 18.

²⁷ Jer. xlviii. 10.

²⁸ Jer. xlviii. 4.

²⁹ Ib. 1, 3, 5, 21-24.

³⁰ Ib. xlviii. 12.

³¹ Ib. 15.

³² Ib. 8.

³³ Ib. xlviii. 12.

³⁴ Ib. 15.

³⁵ Ib. 18.

³⁶ Ib. 28.

³⁷ Ib. 2, 42.

Whence should this evil come? They had, with the Ammonites, been faithful servants of Nebuchadnezzar against Judah¹. Their concerted conspiracy with Edom, Tyre, Zidon, to which they invited Zedekiah², was dissolved. Nebuchadnezzar's march against Judæa did not touch them; for they³ skipped with joy at Israel's distresses. The connection of Baalis, king of the Ammonites, with Ishmael⁴ the assassin of Gedaliah, whom the king of Babylon made governor over the land⁵ out of their own people, probably brought down the vengeance of Nebuchadnezzar. For Chaldeans too were included in the slaughter⁶. The blow seems to have been aimed at the existence of the people; for the murder of Gedaliah followed upon the rallying of the Jews⁷ out of all the places whither they had been driven. It returned on Ammon itself, and on Moab who probably on this, as on former occasions, was associated with it. The two nations, who had escaped at the destruction of Jerusalem, were warred upon and subdued by Nebuchadnezzar in the 23rd year of his reign⁸, the 5th after the destruction of Jerusalem.

And then probably followed that complete destruction and disgraced end, in which Isaiah, in a distinct prophecy, sees Moab trodden down by God as the heap of straw is trodden down in the waters⁹ of the dunghill, and he (Moab) stretcheth forth his hands in the midst thereof, as the swimmer stretcheth forth his hands to swim, and He, God, shall bring down his pride with the treacheries of his hands. It speaks much of the continued hostility of Moab, that, in prophesying the complete deliverance for which Israel waited, the one enemy whose destruction is foretold, is Moab and those pictured by Moab. We have waited for Him and He will save us—For in this mountain (Zion) shall the hand of the Lord rest, and Moab shall be trodden down under Him.

After this, Moab, as a nation, disappears from history. Israel, on its return from the captivity, was again enticed into idolatry by Moabite and Ammonite wives, as well as by those of Ashdod and others¹², Canaanites, Hittites, Perizzites, Jebusites, Egyptians, Amorites¹³. Sanballat also, who headed the opposition to the rebuilding of Jerusalem, was a Moabite¹⁴; Tobiah, an Ammonite¹⁵. Yet it went no further than intrigue and the threat of war. They were but individuals, who cherished the old hostility. In the time of the Maccabees, the Ammonites, not Moab, with a mighty power and much people were in possession of the Reubenite cities to Jazar¹⁶. It was again an exterminating war, in which the Jews were to be destroyed¹⁷. After repeated defeats by Judas Maccabæus, the Ammonites hired the Arabians¹⁸ (not the Moabites) to help them, and Judas, although victorious, was obliged to remove the whole Israelite population¹⁹, all that were in the land of Gilead, from the least unto the greatest, even their wives, and their children, and their stuff; a very great host, to the end they might come into the land of Judæa. The whole population was removed, obviously lest, on the withdrawal of Judas' army, they should be again imperilled. As it was a defensive war against Ammon, there is no mention of any city, south of the Arnon, in Moab's own territory. It was probably with the view to magnify descendants of Lot, that Josephus speaks of the Moabites as being "even yet a very great nation²⁰." S. Justin's account, that there is "even now a great multitude of Ammonites," does not seem to me to imply a national existence. A later writer says, "Now not only the Edomites but the Ammonites and Moabites too are included in the one name of Arabians."

Some chief towns of Moab became Roman towns, connected by the Roman road from Damascus to Elath. Ar and Kir-Moab in Moab proper became Arcopolis and Charac-Moab, and, as well as Medeba and Heshbon in the country which had been Reuben's, preserve traces of Roman occupancy. As such, they became Christian Sees. The towns, which were not thus revived as Roman, probably perished at once, since they bear no traces of any later building.

The present condition of Moab and Ammon is remarkable in two ways; 1) for the testimony which it gives of its former extensive population; 2) for the extent of its present desolation. "How fearfully," says an accurate and minute observer²³, "is this residence of old kings and their land wasted!" It gives a vivid idea of the desolation, that distances are marked, not by villages which he passes but by ruins²⁴. "From these ruined places, which lay on our way, one sees how thickly inhabited the district formerly was." Yet the ground remained fruitful. It was partly abandoned to wild plants, the wormwood and other shrubs²⁵; partly, the artificial irrigation, essential to cultivation in this land, was destroyed²⁷; here and there a patch was cultivated; the rest remained barren, because the crops might become the prey of the spoiler²⁸, or the thin population had had no heart to cultivate it. A list of 33 destroyed places, which still retained their names, was given to Seetzen²⁹, "of which many were cities in times of old, and besides these, a great number of other wasted villages. One sees from this, that, in the days of old, this land was extremely peopled and flourishing, and that destructive wars alone could produce the present desolation." And thereon he adds the names of 40 more ruined places. Others say:

²⁷ See Mr. Tristram's picture of "a ruin-covered ridge by an immense tank of solid masonry, 140 yards by 110 yards, at Ziza. From the surface of the water to the edge of the tank was 17 feet 6 inches. The masonry was simply magnificent. The whole system and artificial sluices were precisely similar to ancient works for irrigation in India and Ceylon.—Such works easily explain to us the enormous population, of which the ruined cities give evidence. Every where is some artificial means of retaining the occasional supplies of rain water. So long as these precious structures remained in order, cultivation was continuous and famines remained unknown.—The Islamic invasion left the miserable remnants of a dense and thriving nation entirely dependent on the neighbouring countries for their supply of corn: a dependence which must continue till these border lands are secure from the inroad of the predatory bands of the East." Land of Moab pp. 183-186. At Kustul is "a massive wall in the plain, about 600 yards in length across the valley, and 18 feet thick, built to dam up the water in the gentle depression, the head of the wady." Ib. c. 12. p. 220. "Gôr el Mesraâ, as far as the soil can be watered, evinces a luxuriant fertility." By far the greater part of it is a waste." Seetz. ii. 352. "Gôr el Zâphia owes its fruitfulness entirely to the water of the Wady el Hôssa, which is guided to the fields in many canals. But only a very small portion of this exceedingly rich soil is cultivated, the rest is overgrown with bushes and shrubs, wherein very many wild boars, hyenas and other wild animals live." Ib. 355. "This water too [of the Nimméry] is said formerly to have been used for watering some fields, of which there is now no trace." Ib. 354.

²⁸ "True, the land is not our's, but our people are many, and who shall dare to prevent them from going where they please? You will find them everywhere, if the land is good for them." Answer of Beni Sakkr Sheikh, Tristram Moab. c. 15. p. 28.

²⁹ Ib. 416.

¹ 2 Kgs xxiv. 2.

⁴ Ib. xl. 14. xli. 10.

⁶ Jer. xli. 3.

⁹ Is. xxv. 10-12.

¹² Neh. xiii. 23-26.

¹⁵ 1 Macc. v. 6, 8.

²⁰ Ant. i. 11. 5.

²⁴ Anon. in Job ap. Origen i. 852.

²⁵ e. g. "½ of an hour further, we reached the ruins of el-Eale; 1½ hour further we came to Hûsbân; besides some overthrown pillars, nothing important is found here. On the E., about 1½ hour, are the ruins of Shelûl: after an hour on this plain we came to 3 wasted places, close together; ½ an hour further, we reached the ruins of what formerly was Mâdabâ; ½ an hour further lay the ruined village of Tuême; above an hour to the W. the important ruins of Ma'in." Ib. 407, 8. ²³ Ib. 411.

²⁶ "A little N. of el-Eale we came on good soil, which however lay wholly uncultivated and was mostly overgrown with the prickly little Bullân, which gave the country the look of moor-ground." Seetzen Travels, i. 406. "The soil here (Heshbon) is in this district excellent, but it lies wholly uncultivated and serves only for pasture to the little herds of sheep, goats, kine and camels of the Arabs." Ib. p. 407. "The Arabs cultivate a little ground near Madaba." p. 409. "The land (the other side the Mujeb [Arnon] and so in Moab proper) had little grass, but there was an extraordinary quantity of wormwood on it. Yet the soil seems excellent for wheat, although no spot was cultivated. Large spots had the look of our moors from the quantity of wormwood and other little shrubs." p. 410. "Here and there, there were tokens of cultivation, wheatfields; the wheat was good." p. 412.

² Jer. xxvii. 2 sqq.

⁵ 2 Kgs. xxv. 22-26. Jer. xl. 6. xli. 1.

⁷ Ib. xl. 12.

¹⁰ 77 Chethib.

¹³ Neh. ii. 10. iv. 1-S.

¹⁶ Ib. 9, 10, 27.

¹⁸ Dial. n. 119, p. 218. Oxf. Tr.

²¹ Seetzen Reisen i. 412.

³ Ib. xlviii. 27.

⁸ Jos. Ant. x. 9, 7.

¹¹ Is. xxv. 9, 10.

¹⁴ Neh. iv. 1-S.

¹⁷ Ib. 39.

¹⁹ Ib. 45.

"¹The whole of the fine plains in this quarter" [the S. of Moab] "are covered with sites of towns, on every eminence or spot convenient for the construction of one; and as all the land is capable of rich cultivation, there can be no doubt that this country, now so deserted, once presented a continued picture of plenty and fertility." "²Every knoll" [in the highlands of Moab] "is covered with shapeless ruins.—The ruins consist merely of heaps of squared and well-fitting stones, which apparently were erected without mortar." "³One description might serve for all these Moabite ruins. The town seems to have been a system of concentric circles, built round a central fort, and outside the buildings the rings continue as terrace-walks, the gardens of the old city. The terraces are continuous between the twin hillocks and intersect each other at the foot." "⁴Ruined villages and towns, broken walls that once enclosed gardens and vineyards, remains of ancient roads; every thing in Moab tells of the immense wealth and population, which that country must have once enjoyed."

The like is observed of Ammon⁵. His was direct hatred of the true religion. It was not mere exultation at the desolation of an envied people. It was hatred of the worship of God. "⁶Thus saith the Lord God; Because thou saidst, Aha, against My sanctuary, because it was profaned; and against the land of Israel, because it was desolated; and against the house of Judah, because they went into captivity." The like temper is shewn in the boast, "⁷*Because that Moab and Seir do say; Behold the house of Judah is like unto the heathen,*" i. e., on a level with them.

Forbearing and long-suffering as Almighty God is, in His infinite mercy, He does not, for that mercy's sake, bear the direct defiance of Himself. He allows His creatures to forget Him, not to despise or defy Him. And on this ground, perhaps, He gives to His prophecies a fulfilment beyond what the letter requires, that they may be a continued witness to Him. The Ammonites, some 1600 years ago, ceased to "be remembered among the nations." But as Nineveh and Babylon, and the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, by being what they are, are witnesses to His dealings, so the way in which Moab and Ammon are still kept desolate is a continued picture of that first desolation. Both remain rich, fertile; but the very abundance of their fertility is the cause of their desolation. God said to Ammon, as the retribution on his contumely: "⁸therefore, behold, I give thee to the children of the East for a possession, and they shall set their encampments in thee, and place their dwellings in thee; they shall eat thy fruit and they shall drink thy milk; and I will make Rabbah a dwelling-place of camels, and the children of Ammon a couching-place for flocks." Of Moab He says also, "⁹I will open the side of Moab from the cities, which are on his frontiers, the glory of the country, unto the men of the East with the Ammonites." And this is an exact description of the condition of the land at this day. All travellers describe the richness of the soil. We have seen this as to Moab. But the history is one and the same. One of the most fertile regions of the world, full of ruined towns, destitute of villages or fixed habitations, or security of property, its inhabitants ground down by those, who have succeeded the Midianites and the Amalekites, the children of the East. "Thou canst not find a country like the Belka," says the Arabic proverb¹⁰, but "the inhabitants cultivate patches only of the best soil in that territory when they have a prospect of being able to secure the harvest against the invasion of enemies." "We passed many ruined cities," said Lord Lindsay¹¹, "and the country has once been very populous, but, in 35 miles at least, we did not see a single village; the whole country is one vast pasturage, overspread by the flocks and herds of the Aneze and Beni Hassan Bedouins."

The site of Rabbath Amman was well chosen for strength. Lying "¹²in a long valley" through which a stream passed, "the city of waters" could not easily be taken, nor its inhabitants compelled to surrender from hunger or thirst. Its site, as the eastern bound of Peræa¹³, "¹⁴the last place where water could be obtained and a frontier fortress against the wild tribes beyond," marked it for preservation. In Greek times, the disputes for its possession attest the sense of its importance. In Roman, it was one of the chief cities of the Decapolis, though its population was said to be a mixture of Egyptians, Arabians, Phœnicians¹⁵. The coins of Roman Emperors to the end of the second century contain symbols of plenty, where now reigns utter desolation¹⁶. In the 4th century, it and two other now ruined places, Bostra and Gerasa, are named as "most carefully and strongly walled." It was on a line of rich commerce filled with strong places, in sites well selected for repelling the invasions of the neighbouring nations¹⁷. Centuries advanced. It was greatly beautified by its Roman masters. The extent and wealth of the Roman city are attested both by the remains of noble edifices on both sides of the stream, and¹⁸ by pieces of pottery, which are the traces of ancient civilised dwelling, strewed on the earth two miles from the city. "¹⁹At this place, Ammân, as well as Gerasa and Gamala, three colonial settlements within the compass of a day's journey from one another, there were five magnificent theatres and one ampitheatre, besides temples, baths, aqueducts, naumachia, triumphal arches." "²⁰Its theatre was the largest in Syria; its colonnade had at least 50 columns." The difference of the architecture shews that its aggrandisement must have been the work of different centuries: its "castle walls are thick, and denote a remote antiquity; large blocks of stone are piled up without cement and still hold together as well as if recently placed." It is very probably the same which Joab called David to take, after the city of waters had been taken; within it are traces of a temple with Corinthian columns, the largest seen there, yet "not of the best Roman times."

¹ Irby and Mangles (May 14) p. 113.

² Tristram, Land of Moab, pp. 100, 101.

³ Ib. 99.

⁴ Palmer, desert of the Exodus ii. 473, 474.

⁵ "East of Assalt, including Ammon, are thirty ruined or deserted places of which names are given in Dr. Smith's Arabic lists." Keith Prophecy p. 274. "All this country, formerly so populous and flourishing, is now changed into a vast desert." Seetzen Brief account &c. p. 34. Ib. p. 263. "The far greater part of this country is uninhabited, being abandoned to the wandering Arabs, and the towns and villages are in a state of total ruin." Id. p. 37. Ib. "Two hours from Szalt we came upon some peasants, who were ploughing some little fields near what was a little fountain." Seetzen i. 405. "The soil was excellent; but only here and there we saw a little spot cultivated, and this by the Aduân Arabs." p. 406. "The country that lay in our route [near Daboa] though now bare of wood, presented a great extent of fertile soil, lying entirely waste, though equal to any of the very best portions of Galilee and Samaria, and capable of producing sustenance for a large population. Around us, in every direction, were remains of more than 50 towns or villages, once maintained by the productive soil, over which they were so thickly studded." Buckingham Travels among the Arab tribes p. 66. "At Maha-naish we had arrived at a very elevated part of the plain, which had continued fertile throughout the whole distance from Ammon." p. 81. "S. S. E. of Yedoody we pushed our way over a continuous tract of fertile soil, capable of the highest cultivation. Throughout the whole extent of the plain were seen ruined towns in every direction, before, behind, on each side, generally seated on small eminences, all at a short distance from each other, and all, as far as we had yet seen, bearing evident marks of former opulence. There was not a tree in sight; but my guide assured me, that the whole of the plain was covered with the finest soil, and capable of being made the most productive corn-land in the world." Ib. p. 85. ⁶ Ezek. xxv. 3. ⁷ Ib. 8.

⁸ Ib. 4, 5. ⁹ Ib. 8. 10. ¹⁰ Burckhardt Syria p. 369. "On both sides of the road" (near Naour) "were the vestiges of ancient field-enclosures." Ib. 865.

¹¹ Travels p. 279. ¹² Irby and Mangles June 14. c. 8. p. 146. ¹³ Jos. B. J. iii. 3. 3.

¹⁴ Grote in Smith Bibl. Dict. v. Rabbah.

¹⁵ Strabo xvi. 2. 33. p. 760. Cas.

¹⁶ Ritter, West-Asien viii. 1157.

¹⁷ Amm. Marc. xiv. 8. 13.

¹⁸ Buckingham Arab Tribes p. 67, 73.

¹⁹ Ib. 77.

²⁰ See Burckhardt's description of its ruins. Travels in Syria pp. 357-360.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

9 Therefore as I live, saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Surely Moab

¹ Isai. 15. Jer. 48. Ezek. 25. 9. Amos 2. 1.

Yet Amman, the growth of centuries, at the end of our 6th century was destroyed. For "it was desolate before Islam, a great ruin." "No where else had we seen the vestiges of public magnificence and wealth in such marked contrast with the relapse into savage desolation." But the site of the old city, so well adapted either for a secure refuge for its inhabitants or for a secure depository for their plunder, was, on that very ground, when desolated of its inhabitants, suited for what God, by Ezekiel, said it would become, a place, where the men of the East should stable their flocks and herds, secure from straying. What a change, that its temples, the centre of the worship of its successive idols, or its theatres, its places of luxury or of pomp, should be stables for that drudge of man, the camel, and the stream which gave it the proud title of "city of waters" their drinking trough! And yet of the cities whose destruction is prophesied, this is foretold of Rabbah alone, as in it alone is it fulfilled! "Ammon," says Lord Lindsay³, "was situated on both sides of the stream; the dreariness of its present aspect is quite indescribable. It looks like the abode of death; the valley stinks with dead camels; one of them was rotting in the stream; and though we saw none among the ruins, they were absolutely covered in every direction with their dung." "Bones and skulls of camels were mouldering there [in the area of the ruined theatre] and in the vaulted galleries of this immense structure." "It is now quite deserted, except by the Bedouins, who water their flocks at its little river, descending to it by a wady, nearly opposite to a theatre (in which Dr. Mac Lennan saw great herds and flocks) and by the akiba. Re-ascending it, we met sheep and goats by thousands, and camels by hundreds." Another says⁴, "The space intervening between the river and the western hills is entirely covered with the remains of buildings, now only used for shelter for camels and sheep." Buckingham mentions incidentally, that he was prevented from sleeping at night "by the bleating of flocks and the neighing of horses, barking of dogs &c." Another speaks of "a small stone building in the Acropolis now used as a shelter for flocks." While he was "traversing the ruins of the city, the number of goats and sheep, which were driven in among them, was exceedingly annoying, however remarkable, as fulfilling the prophecies." "Before six tents fed sheep and camels." "Ezekiel points just to these, (xx. 5.) which passage Seetzen cites¹⁰. And in fact the ruins are still used for such stalls."

The prophecy is the very opposite to that upon Babylon, though both alike are prophecies of desolation. Of Babylon Isaiah prophesies, "It shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation; neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there, neither shall the shepherds make fold there, but wild beasts of the desert shall lie there, and their houses shall be full of doleful creatures; and the shall be as Sodom, and the children of Ammon as Gomorrah, even the breeding

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

¹ Amos 1. 13. ² Gen. 19. 25. Dent. 29. 23. Isai. 13. 19. & 34. 13. Jer. 49. 18. & 50. 40.

ostriches shall dwell there, and the jackals shall cry in their desolate houses, and howling creatures in their pleasant palaces." And the ruins are full of wild beasts¹². Of Rabbah Ezekiel prophesied that it should be "a possession for the men of the East, and I," God says, "will make Rabbah a stable for camels, and the Ammonites a couching-place for flocks;" and man's lawlessness fulfils the will and word of God.

9. Therefore as I live, saith the Lord of hosts. Life specially belongs to God, since He Alone is Underived Life. ¹⁴He hath life in Himself. He is entitled "the living God," as here, in tacit contrast with the dead idols of the Philistines¹⁵, with idols generally¹⁶; or against the blasphemies of Sennacherib¹⁷, the mockeries of scoffers¹⁸; of the awe of His presence¹⁹, His might for His people²⁰; as the object of the soul's longings²¹, the nearness in the Gospel, children of the living God²². Since He can swear by no greater, He swears by Himself²³. Since mankind are ready mostly to believe that God means well with them, but are slow to think that He is in earnest in His threats, God employs this sanction of what He says, twice only in regard to His promises or His mercy²⁴; everywhere else to give solemnity to His threats²⁵. The appeal to the truth of His own being²⁶ in support of the truth of His words is part of the grandeur of the prophet Ezekiel in whom it chiefly occurs. God says in the same meaning, by Myself have I sworn, of promises which required strong faith²⁷.

Saith the Lord of Hosts. Their blasphemies had denied the very being of God, as God, to Whom they preferred or likened their idols; they had denied His power or that He could avenge, so He names His Name of power, the Lord of the hosts of heaven against their array against His border, I, the Lord of hosts Who can fulfil what I threaten, and the God of Israel Who Myself am wronged in My people, will make Moab as Sodom, and the children of Ammon as Gomorrah. Sodom and Gomorrah had once been flourishing cities, on the borders of that land, which Israel had won from the Amorite, and of which Moab and Ammon at different times possessed themselves, and to secure which Ammon carried on that exterminating war. For they were to the East of the plain between Bethel and Ai, where Lot made his choice, in the plain or circle of Jordan²⁸, the well known title of the tract, through which the Jordan flowed into the Dead Sea. Near this, lay Zoar, (Ziara²⁹) beneath the caves whither Lot, at whose prayer it had been spared, escaped from its wickedness. Moab and Ammon had settled and in time spread from the spot, wherein their forefathers had received their birth. Sodom, at least, must have been in that part of the plain, which is to the East of the Jordan, since Lot was bidden to flee to the mountains, with his wife and daughters, and there is no mention of the river, which would have been a hin-

¹ Abulf. Tab. Syr. p. 91. ² Tristram Land of Israel p. 551.
³ The Holy Land pp. 279, 281, 283. ⁴ G. Robinson's travels in Palestine and Syria ii. 175. ⁵ Travels among the Arab tribes, Ruins of Ammon p. 73.
⁶ Lord C. Hamilton in Keith p. 271. ⁷ Id. lb. p. 269. ⁸ Seetzen Reisen i. 394.
⁹ Prof. Kruse Anmerkung. Ib. T. iv. p. 216. ¹⁰ Id. 31. ¹¹ Is. xiii. 20.
¹² See Rich Mem. p. 27, 30. Buckingham ii. 307. Sir R. K. Porter Travels ii. 342.
¹³ 387. Kenneir Memoirs p. 279. Keppel's Narr. i. 179, 180. Layard Nin. and Bab., quoted by Keith on Prophecy pp. 466, 467. ¹⁴ Ezek. xxv. 4, 5.
¹⁵ S. John v. 26. ¹⁶ 1 Sam xvii. 26, 36. ¹⁷ Jer. x. 10. ¹⁸ 2 Kgs. xix. 4. 16.
¹⁹ Jer. xxiii. 36. ²⁰ Jer. v. 25 (26 Heb.) ²¹ Josh. iii. 10.
²² Ps. of sons of Korah. xlii. 2. lxxxiv. 2. ²³ Hos. i. 10 [iii. 1. Heb.]

²⁴ Heb. vi. 13. ²⁵ Is. xlix. 18. Ezek. xxxiii. 10.
²⁶ Num. xiv. 21, [of the glory which God should have in all the world from his chastisement of Israel] 28. Dent. xxxii. 40, [adding blyy] Jer. xxii. 24. Ez. v. 11. xiv. 16, 18, 20. xvi. 48. [as Judge] xvii. 16, 19. xviii. 3. [in rebuke] xx. 3, 31, 33. xxxiii. 27. xxxiv. 8. xxxv. 11. In the same sense, I swear by Myself Jer. xxii. 5. xlix. 13. hath sworn by Himself Am. vi. 8. by the excellency of Jacob, viii. 7.
²⁷ Ges. Manrer &c. [with a strange conception of God] render "ita vivam." Ewald rightly, "as true as I live." ²⁸ Gen. xxii. 16. (so often referred to) Is. xlv. 23. or by Thy Right Hand, i. e. the might which He would put forth.
²⁹ Gen. xiii. 1, 3, 11. ³⁰ See the description of Ziara "once a place of considerable importance" in Tristram, land of Moab pp. 328, 330.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

* ver. 7.

* Isai. 16. 6.
Jer. 48. 29.

of nettles, and saltpits, and a perpetual desolation: * the residue of my people shall spoil them, and the remnant of my people shall possess them.

10 This shall they have * for their pride, drance¹. Then it lay probably in that "broad belt of desolation" in the plain of Shittim, as Gomorrah and others of the Pentapolis may have lain in "the sulphur-sprinkled expanse" between El Riha [on the site of Jericho] and the dead sea, "covered with layers of salt and gypsum which overlies the loamy subsoil, literally fulfilling the descriptions of Holy Writ (says an eye witness), Brimstone and salt and burning; that it is not sown nor beareth, nor any grass groweth therein: a fruitful land turned into saltiness. ⁵ No man shall abide there, neither shall a son of man dwell in it." An elaborate system of artificial irrigation was carried through that cis-Jordanic tract, which decayed when it was desolated of man, and that desolation prevents its restoration.

The doom of Moab and Ammon is rather of entire destruction beyond all recovery, than of universal barrenness. For the imagery, that it should be the breeding [lit. possession] of nettles would not be literally compatible, except in different localities, with that of saltpits, which exclude all vegetation. Yet both are united in Moab. The soil continues, as of old, of exuberant fertility; yet in part, from the utter neglect and insecurity of agriculture it is abandoned to a rank and encumbering vegetation; elsewhere, from the neglect of the former artificial system of irrigation, it is wholly barren. The plant named is one of rank growth, since outcasts could lie concealed under it⁶. The preponderating authority seems to be for *mollach*⁷, the Bedawin name of the "mallow," Prof. E. H. Palmer says⁸, "which," he adds, "I have seen growing in rank luxuriance in Moab, especially in the sides of deserted Arab camps."

The residue of My people shall spoil them, and the remnant of My people shall possess them. Again, a remnant only, but even these shall prevail against them, as was first fulfilled in Judas Maccabæus⁹.

10. This shall they have for their pride. lit. This to them instead of their pride. Contempt and shame shall be the residue of the proud man; the exaltation shall be gone, and all which they shall gain to themselves shall be shame. Moab and Ammon are the types of heretics¹⁰. As they were akin to the people of God, but hating it; akin to Abraham through a lawless birth, but ever molesting the children of Abraham, so heretics profess to believe in Christ, to be children of Christ, and yet ever seek to overthrow the faith of Christians. As the Church says, My mother's children are angry with me. They seem to have escaped the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah (heathen sins), and to have found a place of refuge (Zoar); and yet they are in darkness and cannot see the light of faith; and in an unlawful manner they mingle, against all right, the falsehood of Satan with the truth of God; so that their doctrines become, in part, doctrines of devils, in part have some stamp of the original truth. To because they have reproached and magnified themselves against the people of the Lord of hosts.

11 The Lord will be terrible unto them:

for he will †famish all the gods of the †

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

Heb.
make lean.

them, as to the Jews, our Lord says, Ye are of your father the devil. While they profess to be children of God, they claim by their names to have God for their Father (Moab) and to be of His people (Ammon), while in hatred to His true children they forfeit both. As Moab seduced Israel, so they the children of the Church. They too enlarge themselves against the borders of the Church, rending off its children and making themselves the Church. They too utter reproaches and revilings against it. "Take away their revilings," says an early father¹², "against the law of Moses, and the Prophets, and God the Creator, and they have not a word to utter." They too¹³ remove the old landmarks which the fathers (the Prophets and Apostles) have set. And so, barrenness is their portion; as, after a time, heretics ever divide, and do not multiply; they are a desert, being out of the Church of God: and at last the remnant of Judah, the Church, possesses them, and absorbs them into herself.

11. The Lord will be terrible unto [upon] them, i. e. upon Moab and Ammon, and yet not in themselves only, but as instances of His just judgement. Whence it follows, For He will famish all the gods of the earth. "Miserable indeed, to whom the Lord is terrible! Whence is this? Is not God by Nature sweet and pleasurable and serene, and an Object of longing? For the Angels ever desire to look into Him, and, in a wonderful and unspeakable way, ever look and ever long to look. For miserable they, whose conscience makes them shrink from the face of Love. Even in this life they feel this shrinking, and, as if it were some lessening of their grief, they deny it, as though this could destroy the truth, which they hold down in iniquitousness¹⁵."

For He will famish¹⁶ all the gods of the earth, taking away¹⁷ the fat of their sacrifices, and the wine of their drink-offerings. Within 80 years from the death of our Lord¹⁸, the governor of Pontus and Bithynia wrote officially to the Roman Emperor, that "the temples had been almost left desolate, the sacred rites had been for a long time intermitted, and that the victims had very seldom found a purchaser," before the persecution of the Christians, and consulted him as to the amount of its continuance. Towards the close of the century, it was one of the Heathen complaints, which the Christian Apologist had to answer, "they are daily melting away the revenues of our temples." The Prophet began to speak of the subdual of Moab and Ammon; he is borne on to the triumphs of Christ over all the gods of the Heathen, when the worship of God should not be at Jerusalem only, but they shall worship Him, every one from his place.

Even all the isles of the heathen. For this is the very note of the Gospel, that "each who through faith in Christ was brought to the knowledge of the truth, by Him, and with

¹ Gen. xix. 17-23.

² Tristram, Land of Israel, p. 367.

³ Deut. xxix. 23.

⁴ Ps. cvii. 34.

⁵ Jer. xlix. 18.

⁶ Job xxx. 7.

⁷ Jon. has כִּלְכִּיל: the Peschito, כִּלְכִּיל, and, remarkably, does not use a name coincident with the Heb. כִּלְכִּיל sc. חֲכִיל, a sort of vetch. Ahulwalid prefers the כִּלְכִּיל, but mentions the כִּלְכִּיל "artichoke" (Höst Nachrichten von Maroko n. Fez p. 538) as an "opinion;" R. Tanchum adopts it, but gives חֲכִיל as an "opinion" and says that "altogether it belongs to the prickly plants;" Kimchi says, that "some count it a nettle; others, a thistle." On כִּלְכִּיל see Bochart Hieroz. ii. 223-228, ed. Leipz.

⁸ Ms. letter.

⁹ 1 Macc. v. 6-8.

¹⁰ S. Jer. and Rup.

¹¹ Cant. i. 5.

¹² Tert. de Præscr. Hæc. c. 42, p. 493. Oxf. Tr.

¹³ Ib. c. 37, p. 488.

¹⁴ Rup.

¹⁵ Rom. i. 18.

¹⁶ There is no reason to abate the irony by rendering "destroy." נָחַם is contrasted with שָׂמַח Is. xvii. 4, as is נָחַם Is. x. 16; נָחַם, of the land, with נָחַם Nu. xiii. 20; of the sheep, with נָחַם Ez. xxxiv. 20. In Ps. cvi. 15. נָחַם is used met. for a wasting, emaciating sickness: in Mic. vi. 10, of "an ephah of emaciation" i. e. scant; in Is. xxiv. 6, נָחַם is sickness; (see Ew. Lebrh. 149. g.) [all]

¹⁷ Deut. xxxii. 38.

¹⁸ Between A. D. 103-105.

¹⁹ Pliny Epist. x. 32, p. 581. ed. Steph.

²⁰ Tert. Apol. c. 42. sec p. 90.

note o. Oxf. Tr.

²¹ S. Cyr.

Before CHRIST
cir. 630.

earth; ² and men shall worship him, every one from his place, even all ^a the isles of ^a Mal. 1. 11. John 4. 21.

^a Gen. 10. 5.

Him, worshippeth from his place God the Father; and God is no longer known in Judæa only, but the countries and cities of the Heathen, though they be separated by the intervening sea from Judæa, no less draw nigh to Christ, pray, glorify, thank Him unceasingly. For formerly ¹ His Name was great in Israel, but now He is well known to all every where; earth and sea are full of His glory, and so every one worshippeth Him from his place; and this is what is said, ² As I live, saith the Lord, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord. The isles are any distant lands on the sea-shore³, especially the very distant⁴; but also Asia Minor⁵ and the whole coast of Europe, and even the Indian Archipelago⁶, since the ivory and ebony came from its many isles. Zephaniah revives the term, by which Moses had spoken of the dispersion of the sons of Japhet; ⁷ By these were the isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands, every one after his tongue." He adds the word, all; all, wherever they had been dispersed, every one from his place, shall worship God. One universal worship shall ascend to God from all everywhere. So Malachi prophesied afterwards; ⁸ From the rising up of the sun even to the going down of the same My Name shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incense shall be offered unto God and a pure offering; for My Name shall be great among the heathen, saith the Lord of hosts." Even a Jew⁹ says here: "This, without doubt, refers to the time to come, when all the inhabitants of the world shall know that the Lord is God, and that His is the greatness and power and glory, and He shall be called the God of the whole earth." The isles or coasts of the sea are the more the emblem of the Church, in that, ¹⁰ lying, as it were, in the sea of this world and encompassed by the evil events in it, as with bitter waters, and lashed by the most vehement waves of persecutions, the Churches are yet founded, so that they cannot fall, and rear themselves aloft, and are not overwhelmed by afflictions. For, for Christ's sake, the Churches cannot be shaken, and ¹¹ the gates of hell shall not prevail against them."

12. Ye Ethiopians also, ye shall be slain by My sword. lit. Ye Ethiopians also, the slain of My sword are they. Having summoned them to His throne, God speaks of them, not to them any more; perhaps in compassion, as elsewhere in indignation¹². The Ethiopians were not in any direct antagonism to God and His people, but allied only to their old oppressor, Egypt. They may have been in Pharaoh Necho's army, in resisting which, as a subject of Assyria, Josiah was slain: they are mentioned¹³ in that army which Nebuchadnezzar smote at Carchemish in the 4th year of Jehoiakim. The prophecy of Ezekiel implies rather, that Ethiopia should be involved in the calamities of Egypt, than that it should be itself invaded. ¹⁴ Great terror shall be in Ethiopia, when the slain shall fall in Egypt." ¹⁵ Ethiopia and Lybia and Lydia &c. and all the men of the land that is in league, shall the heathen.

12 ¶ ^b Ye Ethiopians also, ye shall be

^b Isai. 18. 1. & 20. 4. Jer. 46. 9. Ezek. 30. 9.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

fall with these, by the sword." ¹⁶ They also that uphold Egypt shall fall." Syene¹⁶, the frontier-fortress over against Ethiopia, is especially mentioned as the boundary also of the destruction. "Messengers," God says¹⁷, "shall go forth from Me to make the careless Ethiopians afraid," while the storm was bursting in its full desolating force upon Egypt. All the other cities, whose destruction is foretold, are cities of lower or upper Egypt¹⁸.

But such a blow as that foretold by Jeremiah and Ezekiel must have fallen heavily upon the allies of Egypt. We have no details; for the Egyptians would not, and did not tell of the calamities and disgraces of their country. No one does. Josephus, however, briefly but distinctly says¹⁹, that after Nebuchadnezzar had in the 23rd year of his reign, the 5th after the destruction of Jerusalem, "reduced into subjection Moab and Ammon, he invaded Egypt, with a view to subdue it," "killed its then king, and having set up another, captured for the second time the Jews in it and carried them to Babylon." The memory of the devastation by Nebuchadnezzar lived on apparently in Egypt, and is a recognised fact among the Mohammedan historians, who had no interest in the fulfilment of Jewish prophecy, of which it does not appear that they even knew. Boklit-nasar [Nebuchadnezzar], they say, ²⁰ made war on the son of Nechas [Necho], slew him and ruined the city of Memphis and many other cities of Egypt: he carried the inhabitants captive, without leaving one, so that Egypt remained waste forty years without one inhabitant." Another says, ²¹ The refuge which the king of Egypt granted to the Jews who fled from Nebuchadnezzar brought this war upon it: for he took them under his protection and would not give them up to their enemy. Nebuchadnezzar, in revenge, marched against the king of Egypt and destroyed the country." "One may be certain," says a good authority²², "that the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar was a tradition generally spread in Egypt and questioned by no one." Ethiopia was then involved, as an ally, and as far as its contingent was concerned, in the war, in which Nebuchadnezzar desolated Egypt for those 40 years. But, although this fulfilled the prophecy of Ezekiel, Isaiah, some sixty years before Zephaniah, prophesied a direct conquest of Ethiopia. I have given, God says²³, Egypt as thy ransom, Ethiopia and Seba for thee. It lay in God's purpose, that Cyrus should restore His own people, and that his ambition should find its vent and compensation in the lands beyond. It may be that, contrary to all known human policy, Cyrus restored the Jews to their own land, willing to bind them to himself, and to make them a frontier territory towards Egypt, not subject only but loyal to himself. This is quite consistent with the reason which he assigns; ²⁴ The Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth; and He hath charged me to build Him an house at Jerusalem which is in Judah; and with the statement of Josephus, that he was

¹ Ps. lxxvi. 1.

² Nu. xiv. 21.

³ Jer. xxv. 22. sqq. Ez. xxvi. 15. sqq. Ps. lxxii. 10.

⁴ Is. lxvi. 19.

⁵ Dan. xi. 1. 8.

⁶ Ez. xxvii. 15. Ges. Thes. sub v.

⁷ Gen. x. 5. The phrase, וְהָיָה, occurs only in these two places.

⁸ Mal. i. 11.

⁹ Abarbanel.

¹⁰ S. Cyr.

¹¹ S. Matt. xvi. 18.

¹² Is. xxii. 16, "What hast thou here, and whom hast thou here, that thou hast hewed thee here a sepulchre? Hewing him out on high his sepulchre, graving in the rock a dwelling for him." Mic. i. 2, "Hear, ye people, all of them." Deut. xxxii. 15, "Thou art waxen fat, art grown thick, art covered with fatness; and he forsook God Who made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation."

¹³ Jer. xli. 9.

¹⁴ Ezek. xxx. 4.

¹⁵ Ib. 5.

¹⁶ Ib. 6.

¹⁷ Ib. 9.

¹⁸ Zoan, Aven, Pi-beseth, Tehaphneh, Sin, on the Eastern boundary; Noph [Memphis] the capital of Lower Egypt; Pathros, probably a district of Upper Egypt; No [Thebes] its capital; Syene, its last town to the South.

¹⁹ Ant. x. 9. 7. See further Sir G. Wilkinson, Manners and customs of the Ancient Egyptians, i. 173-179, Pusey's Daniel the Prophet pp. 275-277.

²⁰ Makrizi in De Sacy, Abdallatif Relation de l'Égypte p. 247.

²¹ Abdallatif l. c. p. 184.

²² De Sacy l. c. who quotes Abulfeda [see his hist. ante-Islam. p. 102. he could not find the names of Egyptian kings between Shishak and the Pharaoh who was the contemporary of Nebuch.] Masudi, Nosairi, also.

²³ Is. xliii. 3.

²⁴ Ezr. i. 2, 3.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

slain by ^cmy sword.

13 And he will stretch out his hand against the north, and ^ddestroy Assyria; and will make Nineveh a desolation, and moved thereto by "¹reading the prophecy which Isaiah left, 210 years before." It is, alas! nothing new to Christians to have mixed motives for their actions: the exception is to have a single motive, "for the glory of God." The advantage to himself would doubtless flash at once on the founder of a great empire, though it did not suggest the restoration of the Jews. Egypt and Assyria had always, on either side, wished to possess themselves of Palestine, which lay between them. Any how, one Persian monarch did restore the Jews; his successor possessed himself of "Egypt, and part, at least, of Ethiopia." Cyrus wished, it is related ², "to war in person against Babylon, the Bactrians, the Sacæ, and Egypt." He perished, as is known, before he had completed ³the third of his purposed conquests. Cambyses, although after the conquest of Egypt he planned ill his two more distant expeditions, reduced "⁴the Ethiopians bordering upon Egypt" ["⁵lower Ethiopia and Nubia"], and these "brought gifts" permanently to the Persian Sovereign. Even in the time of Xerxes, the Ethiopians had to furnish their contingent of troops against the Greeks. Herodotus describes their dress and weapons, as they were reviewed at Doriscus ⁶. Cambyses, then, did not lose his hold over Ethiopia and Egypt, when forced by the rebellion of Pseudo-Smerdis to quit Egypt.

13. Zephaniah began by singling out Judah amid the general destruction, ⁷*I will also stretch out My Hand upon Judah*; he sums up the judgement of the world in the same way; He will stretch out, or, Stretch He forth⁸, His Hand against the North and destroy Asshur, and make Nineveh a desolation. Judah had, in Zephaniah's time, nothing to fear from Assyria. Isaiah ⁹ and Micah ¹⁰ had already foretold, that the captivity would be to Babylon. Yet of Assyria alone the prophet, in his own person, expresses his own conformity with the mind of God. Of others he had said, the word of the Lord is against you, O Canaan, and I will destroy thee; As I live, saith the Lord, Moab shall be as Sodom. Ye also, O Ethiopians, the slain of My sword are they. Of Assyria alone, by a slight inflection of the word, he expresses that he goes along with this, which he announces. He does not say as an imprecation, "May He stretch forth His hand;" but gently, as continuing his prophecies, and, joining on Asshur with the rest; only instead of saying "He will stretch forth," by a form almost insulated in Hebrew, he says, And stretch He forth His Hand. In a way not unlike, David having de-dry like a wilderness.

14 And ^cflocks shall lie down in the midst of her, all ^fthe beasts of the nations: both the ^gcormorant and the bittern shall lodge

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

^c ver. 6.
^f Is. 13. 21, 22.
^g Or, pelican.
^h Is. 34. 11, 14.

clared God's judgements, The Lord trieth the righteous; and the wicked and the lover of violence doth His soul abhor, subjoineth, On the wicked rain He snares, signifying that he (as all must be in the Day of judgement), is at one with the judgement of God. This is the last sentence upon Nineveh, enforcing that of Jonah and Nahum, yet without place of repentance now. He accumulates words expressive of desolation. It should not only be a *desolation*¹¹, as he had said of Ashkelon, Moab and Ammon, but a dry, parched¹², unfruitful¹³ land. As Isaiah, under the same words, prophesies that the dry and desolate land¹⁴ should, by the Gospel, be glad, so the gladness of the world should become dryness and desolation. Asshur is named, as though one individual¹⁵, implying the entirety of the destruction; all shall perish, as one man; or as gathered into one and dependent upon one, its evil King. The North is not only Assyria, in that its armies came upon Judah from the North, but it stands for the whole power of evil¹⁶, as Nineveh for the whole beautiful, evil, world. The world with "the princes of this world" shall perish together.

14. And flocks shall lie down in the midst of her. No desolation is like that of decayed luxury. It preaches the nothingness of man, the fruitlessness of his toils, the fleetingness of his hopes and enjoyments, and their baffling when at their height. Grass in a court or on a once beaten road, much more, in a town, speaks of the passing away of what has been, that man was wont to be there, and is not, or is there less than he was. It leaves the feeling of void and forsakenness. But in Nineveh not a few tufts of grass here and there shall betoken desolation, it shall be one wild rank pasture, where flocks shall not feed only, but lie down as in their fold and continual resting-place, not in the outskirts only or suburbs, but in the very centre of her life and throng and busy activity, in the midst of her, and none shall fray them away. So Isaiah had said of the cities of Aroer, ¹⁷*they shall be for flocks, which shall lie down and none shall make them afraid*, and of Judah till its restoration by Christ, that it should be ¹⁸*a joy of wild asses, a pasture of flocks*. And not only those which are wont to be found in some connection with man, but *all the beasts of a nation*¹⁹, the troops of wild and savage and unclean beasts which shun the dwellings of man or are his enemies, these in troops have their lair there.

Both the pelican²⁰ and the [hedgehog²¹] shall lodge in the upper lintels thereof. The chapters [E. M.] or capitals of the pillars of the temples and palaces shall lie broken and so fine, that the Verss. and Rabbins pass over it, rendering simply future, as do modern commentators, except Keil, and Ewald who corrects נאמר נאמר arbitrarily and against history.

¹¹ Zeph. ii. 4. 9. ¹² of absence of water, Job xxx. 3. ¹³ Is. xlii. 2. ¹⁴ Is. xlii. 3. ¹⁵ Is. xlii. 3. ¹⁶ Is. xlii. 3. ¹⁷ Is. xlii. 3. ¹⁸ Is. xlii. 3. ¹⁹ Is. xlii. 3. ²⁰ Is. xlii. 3. ²¹ Is. xlii. 3.

¹ Ant. xi. 1. 2. ² Herod. i. 153. ³ Ib. 214 and Rawl. notes p. 350. ⁴ Herod. iii. 97. ⁵ Sir G. Wilkinson in Rawl. Herod. ii. 487. n. 10. ⁶ Her. vii. 69. ⁷ i. 4. ⁸ The ordinary force of the abridged form of the future with ¹ is consecutive, viz., that the action so joined on is the result of the preceding: "intercede with the Lord that He may take away," lit. "and He may take away." Ex. x. 17. Gesenius' instances are all of this sort. In Hif. of the regular verb, Jud. xiv. 15, 1 Sam. vii. 3, Job xi. 6, xii. 7. Jer. xlii. 3. (Lehr. p. 321.) verbs ע, Kal. Nu. xxv. 4, Jud. vi. 30, Is. i. 2, 1 Kgs xxi. 10, 2 Kgs v. 10, 2 Chr. xxix. 10, xxx. 6, 8. (Ib. p. 403.) Hif. Ex. vii. 4, x. 17, Nu. xxi. 7. (Ib. p. 405) verb נ, Ez. x. 12, Is. ii. 20, Is. xxxviii. 21, 1 Kgs xx. 20, Jer. xxiii. 18. (Ib. p. 423.) Such are also Hos. xiv. 6, 7, 9. Sometimes a prayer seems to be thus interwoven with prediction as, Nu. xxiv. 7, "her seed shall be in many waters, and exalted be (יִשְׂרָאֵל) his king above Amalek, and exalted shall be his kingdom" and Ib. 9, "And Israel doeth valiantly; and rule one (יִשְׂרָאֵל) from Jacob." Is. xxxv. 1, 2, "Wilderness and dry-place shall be glad for them; and let the desert rejoice (יִשְׂרָאֵל) and it shall blossom as the Autumn-crocus. It shall blossom abundantly; and joy it, (יִשְׂרָאֵל) yea with joy and jubilee: the glory of Lebanon is given to it; they shall see the glory of the Lord, the excellency of our God." The peculiarity here is, that it stands so apart and independent of the preceding, with which it connects it. The shade of meaning is

¹⁷ Ib. xvii. 2. ¹⁸ Ib. xxxii. 14. Comp. Jer. vi. 2. ¹⁹ "nation," of gregarious creatures, locusts, Jo. i. 6, ii. 2; עֲרָב, "ants," Pr. xxx. 25. "conies," Ib. 26. Comp. ἄνθρωποι &c. "apium populi," "equorum gentes," Virg. Georg. iv. 430. Arab. نمل Boet. Hieroz. ii. 463. Leipzig.

²⁰ The most probable rendering, as explaining the etymology. The ^δ render "pelican" Ps. cii. 7. Lev. xi. 18; Aq. Symm. Th., Is. xxxiv. 11; Aq. here. The ^q of the Talmudists (קנה Jerus. Targ. ap. Levy Lex.) is probably the same. The pelican retires inland to consume its food. Tristram, Houghton, in Smith Bibl. Dict. v. Pelican. note.

²¹ There seems a consent that the ^q is the hedgehog or porcupine (as in Aram. and Arab.) d. S. Jer. R. Nathan, Rashi, although the Arab. etym. "rolled himself round" seems uncertain.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

in the || upper lintels of it; their voice shall sing in the windows; desolation shall be in the thresholds: || for he shall uncover the ^h cedar work.

15 This is the rejoicing cityⁱ that dwelt ^h Jer. 22. 14. ⁱ Isai. 47. 8.

strewn upon the ground, and among those desolate fragments of her pride shall unclean animals haunt. The pelican has its Hebrew name from vomiting. It vomits up the shells which it had swallowed whole, after they had been opened by the heat of the stomach, and so picks out the animal contained in them¹, the very image of greediness and uncleanness. It dwells also not in deserts only but near marshes, so that Nineveh is doubly waste.

A voice shall sing in the windows. In the midst of the desolation, the muteness of the hedgehog and the pensive loneliness of the solitary pelican, the musing spectator is even startled by the gladness of a bird, joyous in the existence which God has given it. Instead of the harmony of music² and men-singers and women-singers in their palaces shall be the sweet music of some lonely bird, unconscious that it is sitting in the windows of those, at whose name the world grew pale, portions of the outer walls being all which remain of her palaces. Desolation shall be in the thresholds, sitting, as it were, in them; every where to be seen in them; the more, because unseen. Desolation is something oppressive; we feel its presence. There, as the warder watch and ward at the empty portals, where once was the fullest throng, shall desolation sit, that no one enter. For He shall uncover [hath uncovered E. M.] the cedar-work: in the roofless palaces, the carved cedar-work shall be laid open to wind and rain. Any one must have noticed, how pitious and dreary the decay of any house in a town looks, with the torn paper hanging uselessly on its walls. A poet of our own said of the beautiful ruins of a wasted monastery:

"For the gay beams of lightsome day Gild, but to flout the ruins gray."

But at Nineveh it is one of the mightiest cities of the world which thus lies waste, and the bared cedar-work had, in the days of its greatness, been carried off from the despoiled Lebanon³ or Hermon⁴.

15. This utter desolation is the rejoicing city (so unlike is it, that there is need to point out that it is the same); this is she, who was full of joy, exulting exceedingly⁵, but in herself, not in God; that dwelt carelessly, lit. securely, and so carelessly; saying *Peace and safety*⁶, as though no evil would come upon her, and so perishing more certainly and miserably⁷. That said in her heart, this was her inmost feeling, the moving cause of all her deeds; I am and there is none beside me; literally,⁸ and there is no I besides, claiming the very attribute of God (as the world does) of self-existence, as if it alone were I, and others, in respect of her, were as no-carelessly,^k that said in her heart, I am, and there is none beside me: how is she become a desolation, a place for beasts to lie down in! every one that passeth by her ^l shall hiss, and ^m wag his hand.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

^k Rev. 18. 7.
^l Job 27. 23.
^m Lam. 2. 15.
Ezek. 27. 36.
Nah. 3. 19.

thing. Pantheism, which denies the being of God, as Author of the world, and claims the life in the material world to be God, and each living being to be a part of God, is only this self-idolatry, reflected upon and carried out in words. All the pride of the world, all self-indulgence which says, Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die, all covetousness which ends in this world, speaks this by its acts, I and no I beside.

How is she become a desolation, has passed wholly into it, exists only as a desolation, a place for beasts to lie down in, a mere den for the wild beasts. Every one that passeth by her shall hiss in derision, and wag [or wave] his hand in detestation, as though putting the hand between them and it, so as not to look at it, or, as it were, motioning it away. The action is different from that of ⁹clapping the hands in exultation.

"It is not difficult," S. Jerome says, "to explain this of the world, that when the Lord hath stretched forth His Hand over the North and destroyed the Assyrian, the Prince of this world, the world also perishes together with its Princes, and is brought to utter desolation, and is pitied by none, but all hiss and shake their hands at its ruin. But of the Church it seems, at first sight, blasphemous to say that it shall be a pathless desert, and wild beasts shall dwell in her, and that afterwards it shall be said insultingly over her; 'This is the city given up to ill, which dwelt carelessly and said in her heart, I and none besides.' But whoso should consider that of the Apostle, wherein he says, ¹⁰in the last days perilous times shall come, and what is written in the Gospel, that ¹¹because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold, so that then shall that be fulfilled, When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find the faith on the earth? he will not marvel at the extreme desolation of the Church, that, in the reign of Antichrist, it shall be reduced to a desolation and given over to beasts, and shall suffer whatever the Prophet now describes. For if for unbelief God spared not the natural branches, but brake them off, and turned rivers into a wilderness and the water-springs into a dry ground, and a fruitful land into barrenness, for the iniquity of them that dwell therein, why not as to those of whom He had said, ¹²He turneth the wilderness into a standing water, and dry ground into water-springs, and there He maketh the hungry to dwell; and as to those whom out of the wild olive He hath grafted into the good olive tree, why, if forgetful of this benefit, they depart from their Maker and worship the Assyrian, should He not undo them and bring them to the same thirst wherein they were before? Which, whereas it may be understood generally of the coming built the edifice. After a lapse of nearly 3000 years, it had retained its original fragrance." Ib. p. 357.

¹ Aristot. Anim. ix. 10.
² אֶרֶץ collective, like אֶרֶץ Jer. vi. 6.
³ Is. xiv. 8. xxxvii. 24. Ezek. xxxi. 16.
"In the fragment of another epigraph, we have mention of some objects also of wood, 'brought from Mt. Lebanon, (and taken up to the mound) from the Tigris.'" Layard, Nineveh and Babylon. p. 118. "At that time the countries that are upon Lebanon, I took possession of, to the great sea of the country of Akkari," (the Mediterranean,) from Inscription. Ib. p. 355, 356. "The conqueror from the upper passage of the Tigris to Lebanon and the Great Sea." Ib. p. 361. "Standing one day on a distant part of the mound, I smelt the sweet smell of burning cedar; the Arab workmen excavating in the small temple had dug out a beam, and the weather being cold, had at once made a fire to warm themselves. The wood was cedar, probably one of the very beams mentioned in the inscription, as brought from the forests of Lebanon, by the King who ⁴ Rawl. 5. Emp. i. 385.

⁵ רָצָה, (verb, perhaps i. q. ἀλαλδω,) is exulting joy, the exultation being good or bad, according to its object, in God or in self and the world; in God, Ps. xxviii. 7, lxxviii. 5, xcvi. 11, cxlix. 5, Hab. iii. 18, Zeph. iii. 14; in good, Pr. xxiii. 16; in God's gifts, Ps. lx. 8, cviii. 8; in evil, Ps. xciv. 3, Jer. xi. 15, xv. 17, l. 11, li. 39; over an enemy 2 Sam. i. 20. רָצָה (intens.) Is. xxii. 2, xxiii. 7, xxiv. 8, xxxii. 13, is used, as here, of a city, full of its tumultuous, self-confident, excitement, as is the verb Is. xxiii. 12. and רָצָה of an individual, Jer. v. 14. [all]
⁶ 1 Thess. v. 3.
⁷ See Jud. xviii. 27.
⁸ As we might say "no second I." This gives an adequate explanation of the 'I' in 'I am', as no other rendering docs.
⁹ Nah. iii. 19.
¹⁰ 2 Tim. iii. 1-5.
¹¹ S. Matt. xxiv. 12.
¹² Ps. cvii. 33-36.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

CHAPTER III.

1 A sharp reproof of Jerusalem for divers sins.
8 An exhortation to wait for the restoration of Israel, 14 and to rejoice for their salvation by God.

|| Or,
gluttonous.
† Heb. craw.

WOE to || † her that is filthy and polluted, to the oppressing city!

of Anti-christ or of the end of the world, yet it may, day by day, be understood of those who feign to be of the Church of God, and in works deny it, are hearers of the word not doers, who in vain boast in an outward show, whereas herds i. e. troops of vices dwell in them, and brute animals serving the body, and all the beasts of the field which devour their hearts [and pelicans, i. e. gluttons¹, whose god is their belly] and hedgehogs, a prickly animal full of spikes which pricketh whatever it toucheth. After which it is subjoined, that the Church shall therefore suffer this, or hath suffered it, because it lifted itself up proudly and raised its head like a cedar, given up to evil works, and yet promising itself future blessedness, and despising others in its heart, nor thinking that there is any other besides itself, and saying, I am, and there is no other beside me, how is it become a solitude, a lair of beasts! For where before dwelt the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost, and Angels presided over its ministries, there shall beasts dwell. And if we understand that, every one that passeth by shall hiss, we shall explain it thus; when Angels shall pass through her, and not remain in her, as was their wont, they shall be amazed and marvel, and shall not support and bear her up with their hand, when falling, but shall lift up the hands and shall pass by. Or they shall make a sound as those who mourn. But if we understand this of the devil and his angels, who destroyed the vine also that was brought out of Egypt, we shall say, that through the soul, which before was the temple of God and hath ceased so to be, the serpent passeth, and hisseth and spitteth forth the venom of his malice in her, and not this only, but setteth in motion his works which figuratively are called hands."

"²The earlier and partial fulfilment of prophecy does not destroy, it rather confirms, the entire fulfilment to come. For whoso heareth of the destruction of mighty cities, is constrained to believe the truth of the Gospel, that the fashion of this world passeth away, and that, after the likeness of Nineveh and Babylon, the Lord will in the end judge the whole world also."

C. III. 1. The "woe," having gone round the heathen nations, again circles round where it began, the ³*Jerusalem that killed the prophets and stoned those that were sent unto her*. Woe upon her, and joy to the holy Jerusalem, the *new Jerusalem*⁴, the Jerusalem which is from above, the mother of us all, close this prophecy; both in figure; destruction of her and the whole earth, in time, the emblem of the eternal death; and the love of God, the foretaste of endless joy in Him.

*Wo*⁵ *rebellious and polluted*⁶; *thou oppressive city*⁷! The address is the more abrupt, and bursts more upon her, since the prophet does not name her. He uses as her proper

2 She ^aobeyed not the voice; she ^breceived not || correction; she trusted not in the LORD; she drew not near to her God.

3 ^cHer princes within her are roaring lions; her judges are ^devening wolves; they gnaw not the bones till the morrow.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

^a Jer. 22. 21.
^b Jer. 5. 3.
^c Or, instruction.
^d Ezek. 22. 27.
Mic. 3. 9,
10, 11.
^e Hab. 1. 8.

name, not her own name, "city of peace," but "rebellious," "polluted;" then he sums up in one, thou oppressive city.

Jerusalem's sin is threefold, actively rebelling against God; then, inwardly defiled by sin; then cruel to man. So then, towards God, in herself, towards man, she is wholly turned to evil, not in passing acts, but in her abiding state, 1) rebellious, 2) defiled, 3) oppressive. She is known only by what she has become, and what has been done for her in vain. She is rebellious, and so had had the law; defiled, and so had been cleansed; and therefore her state is the more hopeless.

2. She obeyed not the Voice, of God, by the law or the prophets, teaching her His ways; and when, disobeying, He chastened her, she received not correction, and when He increased His chastisements, she, in the declining age of the state and deepening evil, turned not unto Him, as in the time of the judges, nor ceased to do evil.

In the Lord she trusted not, but in Assyria or Egypt or her idols. Our practical relation to God is summed up in the four words, "Mistrust self; trust God." Man reverses this, and when "self-trust" has of course failed him, then he "mistrusts God." "⁸Such rarely ask of God, what they hope they may obtain from man. They strain every nerve of their soul to obtain what they want; canvass, flatter, fawn, bribe, court favour; and betake themselves to God when all human help fails. They would be indebted, not to God, but to their own diligence. For the more they receive of God, the less, they see, can they exalt their own diligence, the more they are bound to thank God, and obey Him the more strictly."

To her God she drew not nigh, even in trouble, when all draw nigh unto Him, who are not wholly alien from Him; she drew not near by repentance, by faith, hope or love, or by works meet for repentance, but in heart remained far from Him. And yet He was her own God, as He had shewn Himself in times past, Who changes not, while we change; is faithful to us, while we fail Him; is still our God, while we forget Him; waits, to have mercy upon us; shines on us while we interpose our earth-born clouds between us and Him. "⁹Not in body nor in place, but spiritually and inwardly do we approach to the uncircumscribed God," owning Him as our Father, to Whom we daily say "Our Father."

3. The prophet having declared the wickedness of the whole city, rehearses how each in Church and state, the ministers of God in either, who should have corrected the evil, themselves aggravated it. Not enemies, without, destroy her, but

Her princes within her, in the very midst of the flock, whom they should in God's stead feed with a true heart, destroy her as they will, having no protection against them. *Her judges are evening wolves*¹⁰; those who should in the Name of God redress all grievances and wrongs, are themselves like wild beasts, when most driven by famine. They gnaw not the

(as from אָר which is expressed by Nif. אָרָה) or Drus. "made a spectacle;" παράδειγμα-τιζομένη, cf. אָרָה; but this is not used elsewhere, though the verb is so common.

⁷ הָעִיר as a separate vocative, as Nu. xv. 15. Cant. vi. 1. Is. lii. 18. Mi. ii. 7. &c., and in the N.T. ὁ βασιλεὺς, S. Matt. xxvii. 29. ὁ υἱὸς, S. Mark x. 47. ὁ πατήρ Ib. xiv. 36. &c.
⁸ Rib. on Hos. vii. n. 39.
⁹ Dion.
¹⁰ See Hab. i. 8.

¹ Rib.
² Rup.
³ S. Matt. xxiii. 37.
⁴ Rev. iii. 12. xxi. 10.
⁵ וָאֵל with the partic., as a vocative, as in Am. v. 18. Is. xlv. 9, 10. Mic. i. 1. Hab. ii. 6, 9, 12, 15, 19, &c.
⁶ מְרִיבָה from מָרָה = מָרָה. This seems more probable than E. V. (from a meaning given to מָרָה Nah. iii. 6. and from מָרָה crop of bird Lev. i. 16.) or LXX ἐπιφανής (as if מָרָה, as a few Mss. de R.) or S. Jer. "embittering," provocatrix (as if מָרָה = מָרָה), or Arab. "terrible"

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

4 Her ^eprophets are light and treacherous persons; her priests have polluted the sanctuary, they have done ^fviolence to the law.

^e Jer. 23. 11, 32.
Lam. 2. 14. Hos. 9. 7.

^f Ezek. 22. 26.

bones ¹till the morrow or on the morrow [lit. in the morning]. They reserve nothing till the morning light, but do in darkness the works of darkness, shrinking from the light, and, in extreme rapacity, devouring at once the whole substance of the poor. As Isaiah says, ²*Thy princes are rebellious and companions of thieves, and ³The Lord will enter into judgement with the ancients of His people and the princes thereof: for ye have eaten up the vineyard: the spoil of the poor is in your houses.* And Ezekiel, ⁴*Her princes in the midst thereof are like wolves, ravaging the prey to shed blood, to destroy souls, to get dishonest gain.*

4. Her prophets are light, boiling and bubbling up, like water boiling over ⁵, empty boasters claiming the gift of prophecy, which they have not; "boldly and rashly pouring out what they willed as they willed;" promising good things which shall not be. So they are her prophets, to whom they prophesy smooth things, ⁶"the prophets of this people" not the prophets of God; treacherous persons [lit. men of treacheries] wholly given to manifold treacheries against God in Whose Name they spake and to the people whom they deceived. ⁷"They spake as if from the mouth of the Lord and uttered every thing against the Lord." The leaders of the people, those who profess to lead it aright, Isaiah says ⁸, are its misleaders. Thy prophets, Jeremiah says ⁹, have seen vain and foolish things for thee; they have seen for thee false visions and causes of banishment.

Her priests have polluted her sanctuary, lit. holiness, and so holy rites, persons ¹⁰, things, places (as the sanctuary), sacrifices. All these they polluted, being themselves polluted; they polluted first themselves, then the holy things which they handled, handling them as they ought not; carelessly and irreverently, not as ordained by God; turning them to their own use and self-indulgence, instead of the glory of God; then they polluted them in the eyes of the people, ¹¹*making them to abhor the offering of the Lord*, since, living scandalously, they themselves regarded the Ministry entrusted to them by God so lightly. Their office was to ¹²*put difference between holy and unholy and between clean and unclean, and to teach the children all the statutes which the Lord hath spoken unto them by Moses*; that they ¹³*should sanctify themselves and be holy, for I the Lord your God am holy.* But they on the contrary, God says by Ezekiel, ¹⁴*have done violence to My law and have profaned My holy things; they have made no difference between holy and profane, and have taught none between clean and unclean.* Holy and unholy being the contradictory of each other, these changed what God had hallowed into its exact contrary. It was not a mere shortcoming, but an annihilation (so to speak), of God's purposes.

¹⁵ The Priests of the Church then must keep strict watch, not to profane holy things. There is not one mode only of profaning them, but many and divers. For Priests ought to ¹ The meaning of Piel, in Num. xxiv. 8, and met. Ez. xxiii. 34. as denom. from poetic בָּנָה "bone." The Verss. gave the meaning, dropping the metaphor, the Lxx. and Vulg. rendering "left;" Ch. "deferring to;" Syr. "waiting for." In Arab. بَنَى signifies "cut off;" spec. wool of sheep, fruit of palm-trees, and with ب. "gaining for himself or his family." In Syr. it is 1) "cut off;" 2) "decreed;" not, "reserved." Abulw. Kim. Menach. render "break" as denom.

² Is. i. 23.

³ Ib. iii. 14.

⁴ Ez. xxii. 27.

⁵ פְּזוּזָה being used by Jeremiah (xxiii. 32.) of the false prophets who prophesy false dreams and do tell them and cause My people to err by their lies and by their lightness, it probably has the same meaning here; though פָּזוּז is used of the boiling over of sensuality (Gen. xlix. 4.) and of empty wanton men, Jud. ix. 4. In Arabic, فَوَز as well as فَوَز is used of lence to the law.

5 ⁵The just LORD ^his in the midst thereof; he will not do iniquity: [†]every morn-

^h ver. 15, 17. See Micah 3. 11.

[†] Heb. morning by morning.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

⁵ Deut. 32. 4.

be purified both in soul and body, and to cast aside every form of abominable pleasure. Rather should they be resplendent with zeal in well-doing, remembering what S. Paul saith, ¹⁶*walk in the Spirit and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.*

They have oppressed, done violence, to the law, openly violating it ¹⁷; or straining it, or secretly wresting and using its forms to wrong and violence, as in the case of Naboth and of Him, of Whom Naboth thus far bore the Image. ¹⁸*We have a law, and by our law He ought to die.* Law exists to restrain human violence; these reversed God's ordinances; violence and law changed places: first, they did violence to the majesty of the law, which was the very voice of God, and then, through profaning it, did violence to man. Forerunners herein of those, who, when Christ came, ¹⁹*transgressed the commandment of God, and made it of none effect by their traditions*; ²⁰*omitting also the weightier matters of the law, judgement and mercy and faith; full of extortion and excess!*

5. But, besides these evening wolves in the midst of her, there standeth Another in the midst of her, Whom they knew not, and so, very near ²¹ to them although they would not draw near to Him. But He was near, to behold all the iniquities which they did in the very city and place called by His Name and in His very Presence; He was in her to protect, foster her with a father's love, but she, presuming on His mercy, had cast it off. And so He was near to punish, not to deliver; as a Judge, not as a Saviour. ²²*God is everywhere, Who says by Jeremiah, ²³I fill heaven and earth.* But since, as Solomon attesteth, ²⁴*The Lord is far from the wicked*, how is He said here to be in the midst of these most wicked men? Because the Lord is far from the wicked, as regards the presence of love and grace; still in His Essence He is everywhere, and in this way He is equally present to all."

The Lord is in the midst thereof; He will not do iniquity. ²⁵ Since He is the primal rule and measure of all righteousness; therefore from the very fact that He doeth anything, it is just; for He cannot do amiss, being essentially holy. Therefore He will give to every man what he deserves. Therefore we chant, ²⁶*The Lord is upright, and there is no unrighteousness in Him.* Justice and injustice, purity and impurity, cannot be together. God's Presence then must destroy the sinners, if not the sin. He was in the midst of them, to sanctify them, giving them His judgements as a pattern of theirs; He will not do iniquity: but if they heeded it not, the judgement would fall upon themselves. It were for God to become ²⁷*such an one as themselves*, and to connive at wickedness, were He to spare at last the impenitent.

Every morning [lit. in the morning, in the morning] one after the other, quickly, openly, daily, continually, bringing all secret things, all works of darkness, to light, as He said to David, ²⁸*Thou didst it secretly, but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the sun.* Doth He bring His judge-vain-glory; in Syr. of "impurity."

⁶ See Mic. ii. 11.

⁷ S. Jer.

⁸ Is. ix. 15. [16. Eng.]

⁹ Lam. ii. 14.

¹⁰ Ezra viii. 28.

¹¹ 1 Sam. ii. 17.

¹² Lev. x. 10, 11.

¹³ Ib. xi. 44. xix. 2. &c.

¹⁴ Ezek. xxii. 26.

¹⁵ S. Cyr.

¹⁶ Gal. v. 16.

¹⁷ The construction with the

acc. of person occurs Ezek. xxii. 26, Prov. viii. 36, Jer. xxii. 3.

¹⁸ S. John xix. 7.

¹⁹ S. Matt. xv. 6.

²⁰ Ib. xxiii. 23. 25.

²¹ The words in Hebrew correspond with each other, being from the same root, קָרַב, "draw near;" בקִּרְבָּה, "in the midst of her." ver. 2, 3, 5.

²² Jer. xxiii. 24.

²³ Pr. xv. 29.

²⁴ Ps. xcii. 15.

²⁵ Ib. i. 21.

²⁶ 2 Sam. xii. 12.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

ing doth he bring his judgment to light, he faileth not; but ¹ the unjust knoweth no shame.

¹ Jer. 3. 3. & 6. 15. & 8. 12.

|| Or, corners.

6 I have cut off the nations: their towers are desolate; I made their streets waste, ments to light, so that no sin should be hid in the brightness of His Light, as He said by Hosea, Thy judgements are a light which goeth forth. “¹ Morning by morning, He shall execute His judgements, i.e., in bright day and visibly, not restraining His anger, but bringing it forth in the midst, and making it conspicuous, and, as it were, setting in open vision what He had foreannounced.” Day by day God gives some warning of His judgements. By chastisements which are felt to be His on this side or on that or all around, He gives examples which speak to the sinner’s heart. He faileth not. As God said by Habakkuk, that His promises, although they seem to linger, were not *behind*² the real time, which lay in the Divine mind, so, contrariwise, neither are His judgements. His hand is never missing³ at the appointed time. *But the unjust*⁴, he, whose very being and character, iniquity, is the exact contrary to what he had said of the perfection of God, ⁵ Who doth not iniquity, or, as Moses had taught them in his song⁶, *all His ways are judgement, a God of truth and without iniquity*⁷, just and right is He. Knoweth no shame, as God saith by Jeremiah, ⁸ Thou refusedst to be ashamed. ⁹ They were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush. Even thus they would not be ashamed of their sins, ¹⁰ that they might be converted and God might heal them.

6. I have cut off [the] nations. God appeals to His judgements on heathen nations, not on any particular nation, as far as we know; but to past history, whether of those, of whose destruction Israel itself had been the instrument, or others. The judgements upon the nations before them were set forth to them, when they were about to enter on their inheritance, as a warning to themselves¹¹. Defile not ye yourselves in any of these things; for in all these have the nations defiled themselves, which I cast out before you: and the land is defiled; therefore I do visit the iniquity thereof upon it, and the land vomiteth out her inhabitants. And ye, ye shall keep My statutes and My judgements and shall not commit any of these abominations—And the land shall not spue you out when ye defile it, as it spued out the nations which were before you. The very possession then of the land was a warning to them; the ruins, which crowned so many of its hill-tops¹², were silent preachers to them; they lived among the memories of God’s visitations; if neglected, they were an earnest of future judgements on themselves. Yet God’s judgements are not at one time only. Sennacherib appealed to their own knowledge, ¹³ Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands by destroying them utterly. Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed? Hezekiah owned it as a fact which he knew: ¹⁴ Of a truth, Lord, the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations and their land. And God owns him as His instrument: ¹⁵ Now I have brought it to pass, that thou shouldest be to lay waste

¹ S. Cyr.

² Hab. ii. 3.

³ נָקַד is used of one missing when a muster is made (1 Sam. xxx. 19, 2 Sam. xvii. 22, met. Is. xxxiv. 16, xl. 26, lix. 15); here only of God, that He does not fail to visit at the time when He ought to be looked for.

⁴ Jer. iii. 3. ⁵ Ib. vi. 15, viii. 12. ⁶ Is. vi. 10. ⁷ Deut. xxxii. 4. ⁸ Jer. xlviii. 24, 25, 26, 28, add Ib. xx. 23. ⁹ This will be brought out by the “Ordnance survey” of Palestine, when completed. ¹⁰ Isaiah alludes to them, xvii. 9.

¹¹ Is. xxxvii. 11, 13. ¹² Ib. 18. ¹³ Ib. 26. ¹⁴ Ib. x. 6, 7, and the that none passeth by: their cities are destroyed, so that there is no man, that there is none inhabitant.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

7 ^k I said, Surely thou wilt fear me, thou wilt receive instruction; so their dwelling

So Jer. 8. 6.

defenced cities into ruinous heaps: and, ¹⁶ I will send him against an ungodly nation, and against the people of My wrath will I give him a charge, to take the spoil and to take the prey, and to tread them down as the mire of the streets, and says of him, It is in his heart to destroy and to cut off nations not a few. The king of Babylon too he describes as ¹⁷ the man that made the earth to tremble, that did shake kingdoms, that made the world as a wilderness, and destroyed the cities thereof. Habakkuk recently described the wide wasting by the Babylonians, and the helplessness of nations before him¹⁸.

*Their towers, corner towers*¹⁹, the most carefully fortified parts of their fortified cities, are desolate; I made their streets waste. The desolation is complete, within as well as without; ruin itself is hardly so desolate as the empty habitations and forsaken streets, once full of life, where

“The echoes and the empty tread Would sound like voices from the dead.”

7. I said, surely thou wilt fear Me. God speaks of things here, as they are in their own nature. It could not but be, that in the very presence of the Hand of God, destroying others but as yet sparing them, they must learn to fear Him; they must stand in awe of Him for His judgements on others; they must be in filial fear of Him for His loving longsuffering towards themselves. “Thou wilt receive instruction,” corrected and taught through God’s correction of others and the lighter judgements on themselves, as Solomon says, ²⁰ I looked, I set my heart: I saw, I received instruction. He saith, receive, making it man’s free act. God brings it near, commends it to him, exhorts, entreats, but leaves him the awful power to receive or to refuse. God speaks with a wonderful tenderness. “Surely thou wilt stand in awe of Me; thou wilt receive instruction; thou wilt now do what hitherto thou hast refused to do.” There was (so to speak) nothing else left for them²¹, in sight of those judgements. He pleads their own interests. The lightning was ready to fall. The prophet had, in vision, seen the enemy within the city. Yet even now God lingers, as it were, ²² If thou hadst known in this thy day, the things which are for thy peace.

So their [her] dwelling should not be cut off. His own holy land which He had given them. A Jew paraphrases²³, “And He will not cut off their dwellings from the land of the house of My Shechinah” (God’s visible Presence in glory). Judah, who was before addressed thou, is now spoken of in the third person, her; and this also had wonderful tenderness. It is as though God were musing over her and the blessed fruits of her return to Him; “it shall not be needed to correct her further.” Howsoever I punished them: lit. all (i.e., all the offences) which I visited upon her, as God saith of Himself, ²⁴ visiting the sins of the fathers upon the children,” graphic picture ib. 13, 14.

¹⁷ Ib. xiv. 16, 17.

¹⁸ Hab. i. 14—16.

¹⁹ See on i. 16. Since also the subjects spoken of in this verse are places, the metaph. meaning of צִיָּה “princes” i. e. corner-stones, is not probable here, although צִיָּה is, in four places, used of men.

²⁰ Prov. xxiv. 32. ²¹ אֲנִי, exclusively of all besides. All the meanings ascribed to אֲנִי are but different ways of expressing in other languages the primary meaning, “nothing but.”

²² S. Luke xix. 42.

²³ Ex. xx. 5, xxxiv. 7. Nu. xiv. 18.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

¹ Gen. 6. 12.

^m Ps. 27. 14.

& 37. 31.

Prov. 20. 22.

should not be cut off, howsoever I punished them; but they rose early, ^{and} ¹ corrupted all their doings.

8 ¶ Therefore ^m wait ye upon me, saith the Lorn, until the day that I rise up to the

and this is mostly the meaning of the words ¹ visit upon. Amid and notwithstanding all the offences which God had already chastised, He, in His love and compassion, still longeth, not utterly to remove them from His Presence, if they would but receive instruction now; but they would not. How often, our Lord says ², would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. But indeed, probably, Of a truth ³ (it is a word strongly affirming what follows) they rose early, they corrupted all their doings; God gave them His warnings, awaited the result; they lost no time, they began with morning light; they hasted to rise, burthened ⁴ themselves, made sure of having the whole day before them, to—seek God as He had sent His Prophets, ⁵ rising early and sending them? No, nor even simply to do ill, but of set purpose to do, not this or that corruptly, but to corrupt all their doings. “⁶They with diligence and eagerness rose early, that, with the same haste wherewith they ought to have returned to Me, they might shew forth in deed what they had conceived amiss in their mind.” There are as many aggravations of their sin as there are words. The four Hebrew words bespeak eagerness, wilfulness, completeness, enormity, in sin. They rose early, themselves deliberately corrupted, of their own mind made offensive, all their doings, not slight acts, but deeds, great works done with a high hand ⁷.

8. Therefore wait ye upon [for] Me. God so willeth not to punish, but that all should lay hold of His mercy, that He doth not here even name punishment. Judah had slighted His mercies; He was ready to forgive all they had sinned, if they would now receive instruction; they in return set themselves to corrupt all their doings. They had wholly forsaken Him. Therefore—we should have expected, as elsewhere, “Therefore I will visit all your iniquities upon you.” But not so. The chastisement is all veiled; the prophet points only to the mercy beyond. Therefore wait ye for Me. All the interval of chastisement is summed up in these words; i.e., since neither My mercies towards you, nor My chastisement of others, lead you to obey Me, therefore the time shall be, when My Providence shall not seem to be over you, nor My Presence among you ⁸; but then, wait ye for Me ⁹ earnestly, intently, perseveringly, until the day, that I rise up to the prey. The day is probably in the first instance, the deliverance from Babylon. But the words seem to be purposely enlarged, that they may embrace other judgements of God also. For the words to gather the nations, assemble the kingdoms, de- prey: for my determination is to ⁿ gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, ^{Before} ^{CHRIST} ^{cir. 630.} to pour upon them mine indignation, even ^a Joel 3. 2. all my fierce anger; for all the earth ^o shall ^o ch. 1. 18. be devoured with the fire of my jealousy.

scribe some array of nations against God and His people; gathering themselves for their own end at that time, but, in His purpose, gathering themselves for their own destruction, rather than the mere tranquil reunion of those of different nations in the city of Babylon, when the Medes and Persians came against them. Nor again are they altogether fulfilled in the destruction of Jerusalem, or any other event until now. For although then a vast number of the dispersed Jews were collected together, and were at that time “¹⁰broken off” and out of covenant with God, they could hardly be called nations, (which are here and before ¹¹ spoken of in contrast with Judah), much less kingdoms. In its fullest sense the prophecy seems to belong to the same events in the last struggle of Anti-Christ, as at the close of Joel ¹² and Zechariah ¹³. With this agrees the largeness of the destruction; to pour out upon them, in full measure, emptying out so as to overwhelm them ¹⁴, Mine indignation, even all My fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy. The outpouring of all God’s wrath, the devouring of the whole earth, in the fullest sense of the words, belongs to the end of the world, when He shall say to the wicked, “Depart from Me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire.” In lesser degrees, and less fully, the substance of the prophecy has again and again been fulfilled to the Jewish Church before Christ, at Babylon and under the Maccabees; and to the Christian, as when the Mohammedans hemmed in Christendom on all sides, and the waves of their conquests on the East and West threatened to meet, overwhelming Christendom. The Church, having sinned, had to wait for a while for God Who by His Providence withdrew Himself, yet at last delivered it.

And since the whole history of the Church lies wrapt up in the Person of the Redeemer, the day that I rise up to the prey, is especially the Day in which the foundation of His Church was laid, or that in which it shall be completed; the Day whereon He rose again, as the first-fruits, or that Day in which He shall ¹⁵ stand again on the earth, to judge it; ¹⁶ so coming even as He went up into Heaven. Then, the prey ¹⁷ must be, what God vouchsafes to account as His gain, the prey which is taken from the mighty ¹⁸, and the lawful captivity, the prey of the terrible one, which shall be delivered; even that spoil which the Father bestowed on Him Who made His soul an offering for sin ¹⁹, the goods of the strong man ²⁰ whom He bound, and spoiled us, His lawful goods and captives, since we had sold ²¹ ourselves under sin to him. “²²Christ lived again having spoiled hell, because ²³ it was not possible (as it is ¹ Ex. xxxii. 34, Is. xiii. 11, Jer. xxiii. 2, Hos. i. 4, ii. 13, iv. 9, Amos iii. 2, 14; besides the separate cases of a) visiting upon, or b) visiting the sin. See Ges.

² S. Matt. xxiii. 37.

³ ^{נָסָה} probably (as Ges.)=^{נָסָה} Jos. iii. 17. iv. 5. The adversative force, which Gesenius (Thes. p. 670) and Ewald (Lehrb. n. 105. d. p. 274. ed. 8.) think to belong to a later style, lies (as so often in other Heb. particles) in the tacit contrast of the sentences. Gesenius’ instances of this “later usage” are Ps. xxxi. 23. (David’s) lxvi. 19. lxxii. 7. Job xxxii. 8. Is. xlix. 4. liii. 4. Jer. iii. 20, and this place.

⁴ The word means originally “placed on the back;” then is used of a traveller, who taking his baggage upon him, or setting it on his camels, sets out in very early dawn, or before it, as is the practice in hot countries.

⁵ Jer. vii. 13, 25, xi. 7, xxvi. 5, xxix. 19.

⁶ S. Jer.

⁷ ^{עֲלֵמֹת} are the “mighty works” of God, or deeds of man’s might, and, as such, mostly great crimes in the sight of God. So even the heathen have formed from “^{facio},” “^{facinus},” of deeds which they too held to involve great guilt.

⁸ See Hos. iii. 3-5.

⁹ ^{נָסָה} is mostly a longing persevering expectation for a thing or person which as yet comes not, when the delay requires patience; for God, with ⁵, Ps. xxxiii. 20, Is. viii. 7, lxiv. 3; His promise, Hab. ii. 3, and (part. Kal in sense of Pl.) Is. xxx. 18; with negative Ps. cvi. 13; for death, Job iii. 20; of endurance, Dan. xii. 12. The only other cases are ‘lying in wait,’ Hos. vi. 9. waiting for the end of Job’s words, Job xxxii. 4; for the issue of the message to Jehu, 2 Kgs ix. 3; till dawn, 1b. vii. 9; and of God, waiting for us, till He can shew us mercy. Is. xxx. 18. ¹⁰ Rom. xi. 20. ¹¹ v. 6.

¹² Joel iii. 2, 9-16.

¹³ Zech. xiv.

¹⁴ See Ps. lxxix. 24, lxxix. 6, Jer. vi. 11, x. 25, xiv. 16, Ezek. xxi. 31, Rev. xvi. 1.

¹⁵ Job xix. 25. It is the same word.

¹⁶ Acta i. 11.

¹⁷ ^{נָסָה} commonly signifies “eternity,” ^{נָסָה} or ^{נָסָה}; also Gen. xlix. 27, Is. xxxiii. 23. (as Ch. עַד &c.) “prey;” nowhere, as Ew., “attack.”

¹⁸ Is. xlix. 24, 25.

¹⁹ 1b. liii. 10, 12.

²⁰ S. Matt. xii. 29.

²¹ Rom. vii. 14.

coll. Is. i. 1, lii. 3.

²² S. Cyr.

²³ Acts ii. 21.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

⁴ Isai. 19. 18.
† Heb. lip.

9 For then will I turn to the people ^a pure † language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve him written] that He, being by nature Life, should be holden of death.

Here, where spoken of with relation to the Church, the jealousy of Almighty God is that love for His people¹, which will not endure their ill-treatment by those who (as all Anti-Christian power doth) make themselves His rivals in the government of the world.

9. For then, in the order of God's mercies. The deliverance from Babylon was the forerunner of that of the Gospel, which was its object. The spread of the Gospel then is spoken of in the connection of God's Providence and plan, and time is overlooked. Its blessings are spoken of, as then given when the earnest was given, and the people, from whom according to the flesh Christ was to be born, were placed anew in the land where He was to be born. ² The prophet springs, as is his wont, to Christ and the time of the new law." And in Christ, the End of the law, the prophet ends.

I will turn, contrary to what they had before, to the people, lit. peoples, the nations of the earth, a pure language, lit. a purified lip. It is a real conversion, as was said of Saul at the beginning; ³ God [lit.] turned to him another heart. Before the dispersion of Babel the world was ⁴ of one lip, but that, impure, for it was in rebellion against God. Now it shall be again of one lip; and that, purified. The purity is of faith and of life, that they may call upon the Name of the Lord, not as heretofore on idols, but that every tongue should confess the one true God, Father Son and Holy Ghost, in Whose Name they are baptised. This is purity of faith. To ⁵ call upon the Name of the Lord Jesus is the very title of Christian worship; all that called upon the Name of Jesus, the very title of Christians⁶. To serve Him with one consent, lit. with one shoulder, evenly, steadfastly, not unequally yoked, but all with united strength, bearing Christ's easy yoke and one another's burdens, fulfilling the law of Christ. This is purity of life. The fruit of the lips is the sacrifice of praise⁷. God gave back one pure language, when, on the Day of Pentecost, the Holy Spirit, the Author of purity, came down in fiery tongues upon the Apostles, teaching them and guiding them into the whole truth⁸, and to ⁹ speak to every one in his own tongue, wherein he was born, the wonderful works of God. Thenceforth there was to be a higher unity than that of outward language. For speech is not the outward sound, but the thoughts which it conveys and embodies. The inward thought is the soul of the words. The outward confusion of Babel was to hinder oneness in evil and a worse confusion. At Pentecost, the unity restored was oneness of soul and heart, wrought by One Spirit, Whose gift is the one Faith and the ³ 1 Sam. x. 9. רָאָה לִי לֵב אִמִּי, as here רָאָה לֵב בְּרָחָה.

¹ See on Nah. i. 2.

² Lap.

⁴ Gen. xi. 1, 6, 7, 9. The Jews also saw that this was a reversal of the confusion of Babel. "God, blessed for ever, saith, 'in this world, on account of evil concupiscence (for man's natural corruption) men were divided into 70 languages; but in the world to come, all shall agree with one mind to call upon My Name;" alleging this place. Tanchuma f. 5. 1. ap. Schoettg. ad loc. "R. Chisa said, 'thou hearest from holy Scripture, that all hangeth from the word of the mouth; for after the tongues were confounded, it is added, 'and God dispersed them thence.' But in the time to come, what is written? 'Then will I turn &c.'" Sohar, Gen. f. 68. col. 217. (Schoettg. loc. gen. n. 37). Again it is said, "when the days of the Messiah shall come, boys shall know the hidden things of wisdom; for then shall all things be revealed, as is said, Then will I turn &c." 1b. f. 74. col. 291. 1b. ad loc. And of its fulfilment in the conversion of the world, "Who would have expected that God would raise up the tabernacle of David, which was fallen? and yet it is read, In that day I will raise &c. (Am. ix. 11). And who would have hoped that the whole world would be one band? as in, Then will I turn &c." Bereshith rabba n. 88 fin. Schoettg. loci gen. n. 18, and on Gen. xli. 44; "Why is,

with one † consent.

10 ^a From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my ⁴ Ps. 68. 31. Isai. 18. 1, 7. & 60. 4, &c. Mal. 1. 11. Acts 8. 27.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

[†] Heb.
shoulder.

one Hope of our calling, in the One Lord, in Whom we are one, grafted into the one body, by our Baptism¹⁰. The Church, then created, is the One Holy Catholic Church diffused throughout all the world, everywhere with one rule of Faith, the Faith once for all delivered unto the saints, confessing one God, the Trinity in Unity, and serving Him in the one law of the Gospel with one consent. Christians, as Christians, speak the same language of Faith, and from all quarters of the world, one language of praise goes up to the One God and Father of all. ¹¹ God divided the tongues at Babel, lest, understanding one another, they should form a destructive unity. Through proud men tongues were divided; through humble Apostles tongues were gathered in one. The spirit of pride dispersed tongues; the Holy Spirit gathered tongues in one. For when the Holy Spirit came upon the disciples, they spake with the tongues of all, were understood by all; the dispersed tongues were gathered into one. So then, if they are yet angry and Gentiles, it is better for them to have their tongues divided. If they wish for one tongue, let them come to the Church; for in diversity of the tongues of the flesh, there is one tongue in the Faith of the heart." In whatever degree the oneness is impaired within the Church, while there is yet one Faith of the Creeds, He Alone can restore it and turn to her a purified language, Who first gave it to those who waited for Him. Both praise and service are perfected above, where the Blessed, with one loud voice, ¹² shall cry, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the Throne and unto the Lamb; blessing and glory and wisdom and thanksgiving and honour and power and might be unto our God for ever and ever. And they who have come out of great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the Blood of the Lamb, shall be before the Throne of God and serve Him day and night in His Temple¹³.

10. From beyond the rivers¹⁴ of Ethiopia. The furthest Southern people, with whom the Jews had intercourse, stand as the type of the whole world beyond. The utmost bound of the known inhabited land should not be the bound of the Gospel. The conversion of Abyssinia is one, but the narrowest fulfilment of the prophecy. The whole new world, though not in the mind of the prophet, was in the mind of Him Who spake by the prophet.

My suppliants. He names them as what they shall be when they shall come to Him. They shall come, as needy, to the Fountain of all good, asking for mercy of the unfailing Source of all mercy. He describes the very character of all who come to God through Christ. *The daughter of My dispersed*¹⁵. God is, in the way of Providence, the Father of all,

'they shall praise Thee' repeated four times in Ps. lxxvii. 4? He means, 'They shall praise Thee with their heart; they shall praise Thee with their mouth; they shall praise Thee with their good deeds, and they shall praise Thee with all these, as it is said, For then will I turn &c.' and the Name of the Lord is no other than the King Messiah, according to, 'and the Name of the Lord cometh from far.'" in Mart. Pug. Fid. f. 327. It is also quoted with other places, as to be fulfilled in the time of the Messiah, Tikkune Sohar p. 60 (Schoettg. Loc. gen. n. 80), R. Moseh in Ibn Ezra, and Ibn Ezra himself, of the second temple. Kimchi "after the wars of Gog."

⁵ Acts xxiii. 16. Rom. x. 13.

⁶ Acts ix. 14, 21, 1 Cor. i. 2.

⁷ Heb. xiii. 15.

⁸ S. John xvi. 13.

⁹ Acts ii. 8, 11.

¹⁰ Eph. iv. 3-6.

¹¹ S. Aug. in Ps. liv. 6.

¹² Rev. vii. 10, 12.

¹³ 1b. vii. 14, 15.

¹⁴ See Isaiah xlviii. 1:

¹⁵ Ewald conjectures נחם because Nahum speaks of Cush, Phut and Lubim among the allies of No-Ammon or Thebes, and renders נחם "my incenses;" first rendering נחם (Ez. viii. 11) "the smoke of the cloud of incense." But this sense is not itself proved (in both Syr. and Arab. incense is נחם not נחם) nor is incense plural; nor is there any parallelism of Cush and Phut in Nahum, but Phut and Lubim are historically named as allies of No.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

dispersed, shall bring mine offering.

11 In that day shalt thou not be ashamed for all thy doings, wherein thou hast transgressed against me: for then I will take although, by sin, alienated from Him; whence S. Paul says, *we are the offspring of God*¹. They were dispersed, severed from the oneness in Him and from His house and family; yet still, looking on them as already belonging to Him, He calls them, My dispersed, as by Caiaphas, being high-priest, He prophesied that *Jesus should die for that nation; and not for that nation only, but that also He should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad*².

Shall bring Mine offering³. The offering is the same as that which Malachi prophesies shall continue under the New Testament, which offering was to be offered to the Name of God, not in Jerusalem, but in every place from the rising of the sun unto the going down of the same. The dark skin of the Ethiopian is the image of ingrained sin, which man could not efface or change⁴: their conversion then declares how those steeped in sin shall be cleansed from all their darkness of mind, and washed white from their sins in Baptism and beautified by the grace of God. "The word of prophecy endeth in truth. For not only through the Roman empire is the Gospel preached, but it circles round the barbarous nations. And there are Churches everywhere, shepherds and teachers, guides and instructors in mysteries, and sacred altars, and the Lamb is invisibly sacrificed by holy priests among Indians too and Ethiopians. And this was said plainly by another prophet also⁵, For I am a great King, saith the Lord, and My Name is great among the heathen, and in every place incense is offered to My Name and a pure sacrifice."

11. In that day shalt thou not be ashamed for all thy doings, because God, forgiving them, will blot them out and no more remember them. This was first fulfilled in the Gospel. "No one can doubt that when Christ came in the flesh, there was an amnesty and remission to all who believed. For we are justified not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His great mercy. But we have been released from shame. For He hath restored us to freedom of access to God, Who for our sakes arose from the dead, and for us ascended to heaven in the presence of the Father. For Christ, our Forerunner, hath ascended for us now to appear in the presence of God. So then He took away the guilt of all and freed believers from failures and shame." St. Peter, even in heaven, must remember his denial of our Lord, yet not so as to be ashamed or pained any more, since the exceeding love of God will remove all shame or pain. "Mighty promise, mighty consolation. Now, before that Day comes, the Day of My Resurrection, thou wilt be ashamed and not without reason, since thou ownest by a true confession, all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags. But at that Day it will not be so, especially when that shall be which I promise thee in the Prophets and the Psalms, There shall

¹ Acts xvii. 28.

² S. John xi. 51, 52.

³ It is possible also to render, "from beyond the rivers of Ethiopia, My suppliants the daughter of My dispersed shall they bring as Mine offering;" and this some have preferred on account of the like place in Isaiah lxvi. 20, "And they shall bring all your brethren for an offering unto the Lord out of all nations &c." But the word alone is common to the two passages, and the words קטרת ליהוה which occur in Is. xviii. 1, and יכל ליהוה Ib. 7, make me think that this place rather was in the prophet's mind.

⁴ Mal. i. 11.

⁵ Jer. xiii. 23.

⁶ S. Cyr.

⁷ Rup.

⁸ Ps. li. 7.

⁹ Ps. lxxxix. 1.

¹⁰ Is. lxiv. 6.

¹¹ Ib. xxxiv. 5.

¹² It cannot be "those that exult in thy highness;"

for גאון, as used of man, always has a bad sense, "self-exaltation."

away out of the midst of thee them that rejoice in thy pride, and thou shalt no more be haughty † because of my holy mountain.

12 I will also leave in the midst of thee

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

Jer. 7. 4.
Mic. 3. 11.
Matt. 3. 9.
Heb. in my holy.

be a Fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness; whence David also, exulting in good hope of the Holy Spirit, saith, "Thou shalt wash me and I shall be whiter than snow. For though he elsewhere saith, they looked unto Him and were lightened, and their faces were not ashamed, yet in this mortal life, when the day of My Resurrection doth not fully shine upon thee, thou art after some sort ashamed; as it is written, What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? but that shame will bring glory, and, when that glory cometh in its place, will wholly pass away. But when the fulness of that day shall come, the fulness of My Resurrection, when the members shall rise, as the Head hath risen, will the memory of past foulness bring any confusion? Yea the very memory of the miseries will be the richest subject of singing, according to that, My song shall be alway of the loving-kindness of the Lord." For how shall the redeemed forget the mercies of their redemption, or yet how feel a painful shame even of the very miseries, out of which they were redeemed by the fulness of the over-streaming Love of God?

For then will I take away out of the midst of thee them that rejoice in thy pride. [those of thee who exult in pride¹⁴.] All confusion shall cease, because all pride shall cease, the parent of sin and confusion. The very gift of God becomes to the carnal a source of pride. Pride was to the Jew also the great hindrance to the reception of the Gospel. He made his boast of the law, yea, in God Himself, that he knew His will, and was a guide of others¹⁵, and so was the more indignant, that the heathen was made equal to him, and that he too was called to repentance and faith in Christ. So, going about to establish his own righteousness, he did not submit himself to the righteousness of God, but shut himself out from the faith and grace and salvation of Christ, and rejected Himself. So, thy pride may be the pride in being the people of God, and having Abraham for their father. And thou shalt no more be haughty¹⁶ in My holy mountain, "but thou shalt stand in the great and everlasting abiding-place of humility, knowing perfectly, that thou now 'knowest in part' only, and confessest truly that no one ever could or can by his own works be justified in the sight of God. For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Pride which is ever offensive to God, is yet more hideous in a holy place or a holy office, in Mount Sion where the temple was or in the Christian priesthood.

12. And I will also leave (over, as a remnant, it is still the same heavy prophecy, that a remnant only shall be saved¹⁸) an afflicted and poor people. Priests, (except that great company who were obedient to the faith¹⁹) scribes, lawyers, Pharisees, Sadducees were taken away; and there remained "the people of the land," the unlearned and ig-

¹⁵ Rom. ii. 17, 18-20, 23.

¹⁶ As in E. M., not, because of. הבט, as a mental quality, mostly occurs with לב and is used in a bad sense of high-mindedness = pride; Ps. cxxxi. 1, (David's), Pr. xviii. 12, Ez. xxviii. 2, 5, 17, 2 Chr. xxvii. 16, xxxii. 25; absol. in a bad sense, Is. iii. 16, Jer. xiii. 15, Ez. xvi. 50. It is used of eminence given by God, Job xxxvi. 7, and of the Messiah as exalted by Him, Is. lii. 13. Once only, 2 Chr. xvii. 6, נבט is used in a good sense of Jehoshaphat, that, being exalted by God, "his heart was elevated in the ways of the law." The form נבט is like the inf. in Ex. xxix. 29, xxx. 18, xxxvi. 12, Lev. xv. 32, &c.

¹⁷ Rom. iii. 23. ¹⁸ Ib. ix. 27. See ab. on Mic. ii. 12. p. 309. ¹⁹ Acts vi. 7. ²⁰ האנשים the uneducated, this people that knoweth not the law (S. John vii. 49), "one in whom there are moral not intellectual excellences." Rambam in Buxt. Lex. Talm. col. 1626.

²¹ Acts iv. 13.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630. ^a an afflicted and poor people, and they shall trust in the name of the Lord.

^a Isai. 14. 32. ¹³ ^t The remnant of Israel ^u shall not do Zech. 11. 11. ¹ ¹ Cor. 1. 27, 28. Jam. 2. 5. ^t Mic. 4. 7. ch. 2. 7. ^u Isai. 60. 21.
Matt. 5. 3. 1

norant, ¹ the weak things of the world and the things despised who bore the very title of their Master ², the poor and needy; poor in spirit ³; poor also in outward things, since they who had lands, sold them and they had all things common ⁴. They were afflicted above measure outwardly in the ⁵ persecutions, reproaches, spoiling of their goods, stripes, deaths, which they endured for Christ's sake. They knew too their own poverty; ⁶ knowing themselves to be sinners, and that they were justified only by faith in Jesus Christ. When the rest were cast out of the midst of her, these should be left in the midst of her (the words stand in contrast with one another) in the bosom of the Church. And they shall trust in the name of the Lord. "As they looked to be justified only in the Name of Christ," and ⁷ trusted in the grace and power of God alone, not in any power or wisdom or eloquence or riches of this world, they converted the world to a faith above nature." ⁸ Conformed in this too to Christ, Who for our sakes became poor and almost neglected both His divine glory and the supereminence of His nature, to subject Himself to the condition of a servant. So then those instructed in His laws after His example, think humbly of themselves. They became most exceedingly loved of God, and chiefly the divine disciples, who were set as lights of the world."

13. The remnant of Israel, the same poor people, the true Israel of whom God said, I leave over (the word is the same) a poor people, few, compared with the rest who were blinded; of whom the Lord said, I know whom I have chosen ⁹. These shall not do iniquity nor speak lies. ⁸ This is a spiritual adorning, a most beautiful coronet of glorious virtues. For where meekness and humility are and the desire of righteousness, and the tongue unlearns vain words and sinful speech, and is the instrument of strict truth, there dawns a bright and most perfect virtue. And this besseems those who are in Christ. For the beauty of piety is not seen in the Law, but gleams forth in the power of Evangelic teaching."

Our Lord said of Nathanael, ¹⁰ Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile, and to the Apostles, ¹¹ I send you forth as sheep among wolves; be ye therefore wise as serpents and harmless as doves; and of the first Christians it is said, ¹² they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God and having favour with all the people. This is the character of Christians, as such, and it was at first fulfilled; ¹³ whosoever is born of God, doth not commit sin; ¹⁴ whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not. An Apologist, at the close of the second century, could appeal to the Roman Emperor ¹⁵, that no Christian was found among their criminals, "unless it be only as a Christian, or, if he be any thing else, he is forthwith no longer a Christian. We alone then are innocent! What wonder if this iniquity, ^a nor speak lies; neither shall a deceitful tongue be found in their mouth: ^{Before} for ^y they shall feed and lie down, and none ^{CHRIST} cir. 630. ^a Isai. 63. 8. Rev. 14. 5.

^y Ezek. 34. 28. Mic. 4. 4. & 7. 14.

be so, of necessity? And truly of necessity it is so. Taught innocence by God, we both know it perfectly, as being revealed by a perfect Master; and we keep it faithfully, as being committed to us by an Observer, Who may not be despised." ¹⁶ Being so vast a multitude of men, almost the greater portion of every state, we live silently and modestly, known perhaps more as individuals than as a body, and to be known by no other sign than the reformation of our former sins." Now in the Church, which "our earth dimm'd eyes behold," we can but say, as in regard to the cessation of war ¹⁷ under the Gospel, that God's promises are sure on His part, that still ¹⁸ they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts, that the Gospel is ¹⁹ a power of God unto salvation, that the ²⁰ preaching of the Cross is, unto us which are saved, the power of God; ²¹ unto them that are called, Christ is the power of God and the wisdom of God; that those who will, ²² are kept by God through faith unto salvation; but that now too ²³ they are not all Israel, which are of Israel, and that ²⁴ the faithlessness of man does not make the faith of God of none effect. ²⁵ The Church of God is universally holy in respect of all, by institutions and administrations of sanctity; the same Church is really holy in this world, in relation to all godly persons contained in it, by a real infused sanctity; the same is farther yet at the same time perfectly holy in reference to the saints departed and admitted to the presence of God; and the same Church shall hereafter be most completely holy in the world to come, when all the members, actually belonging to it, shall be at once perfected in holiness and completed in happiness." Most fully shall this be fulfilled in the Resurrection. ²⁶ O blessed day of the Resurrection, in whose fulness no one will sin in word or deed! O great and blessed reward to every soul, which, although it hath now done iniquity and spoken falsehood, yet willeth not to do it further! Great and blessed reward, that he shall now receive such immovableness, as no longer to be able to do iniquity or speak falsehood, since the blessed soul, through the Spirit of everlasting love inseparably united with God its Creator, shall now no more be capable of an evil will!"

For they shall feed; on the hidden manna, ²⁷ nourished most delicately by the Holy Spirit with inward delights, and spiritual food, the bread of life." In the things of the body too was ²⁸ distribution made unto every man according as he had need. And they shall lie down in the green pastures where He foldeth them; and none shall make them afraid, ²⁹ for they were ready to suffer and to die for the Name of the Lord Jesus. ³⁰ They departed from the presence of the council rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for His Name. Before the Resurrection and the sending of the Holy Ghost, how great was the fearfulness, unsteadfastness, weakness of the disciples; how great, after the infusion of the Holy Spirit, was their constancy and imperturbableness, it

⁹ S. John xiii. 18. ¹⁰ Ib. i. 47. ¹¹ S. Mat. x. 16. ¹² Acts ii. 46, 47.

¹³ 1 S. John iii. 9. ¹⁴ Ib. v. 18.

¹⁵ Tert. Apol. c. 44, 45. See also Justin M. i. n. 34. S. Athenagoras, n. 2, Minutius Felix p. 333. Theodoret de cur. Græc. aff. Disp. xii. circ. med. p. 1021 sqq. ed Schultz; Lactant. v. 9, quoted Ib. ¹⁶ Id. ad Scap. n. 2, p. 145. Oxf. Tr.

¹⁷ See ab. on Mic. iv. 3 pp. 323, 324. ¹⁸ Gal. v. 24. See Dr Pusey's Sermon, "The Gospel, the power of God." Lenten Sermons, pp. 300-321.

¹⁹ Rom. i. 16. ²⁰ 1 Cor. i. 18. ²¹ Ib. 24. ²² 1 S. Pet. i. 5.

²³ Rom. ix. 6. ²⁴ Ib. iii. 3. ²⁵ Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ix.

²⁶ Acts iv. 35. ²⁷ Ib. xxi. 13. ²⁸ Ib. v. 41.

¹ 1 Cor. i. 27, 28. ² Ps. xli. 1. ³ $\psi\psi$ is not simply "poor," nor $\psi\psi$ simply "meek." $\psi\psi$ is one "afflicted," in whom affliction has produced its fruits; $\psi\psi$, one "meek" but in whom patience has been tried and perfected; as the same class are meant by the $\pi\tau\omega\chi\omicron\iota$, S. Luke vi. 20, and the $\pi\tau\omega\chi\omicron\iota \tau\omicron\psi \pi\upsilon\epsilon\upsilon\mu\alpha\tau\iota$, S. Matt. v. 3; and, "no humility without humiliation," is become a Christian proverb. ⁴ Acts ii. 44, 45, iv. 32, 35.

⁵ Acts viii. 1, ix. 2, 13, 14. xii. 1, 2, xiii. 50, xiv. 5, 22. xxii. &c. Rom. viii. 17, 35, 36. xii. 14, 1 Cor. ix. 19, 2 Cor. i. 8, 9, xii. 10, 2 Thess. i. 4, 2 Tim. iii. 11, 12, Heb. x. 32-34. S. James ii. 6, 7. 1 S. Pet. i. 6, 7. iv. 13. Rev. i. 9, vi. 9 &c.

⁶ Rup. ⁷ Dion. ⁸ S. Cyr.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

shall make them afraid.

* Isai. 12. 6.
& 54. 1.
Zech. 2. 10.
& 9. 9.

14 ¶ ^z Sing, O daughter of Zion; shout, O Israel; be glad and rejoice with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem.

15 The LORD hath taken away thy judgis delightful to estimate in their Acts," when they ¹ bare His Name before the Gentiles and kings, and the children of Israel, and he who had been afraid of a little maid, said to the High Priest, ² We ought to obey God rather than men. "³ When Christ the Good Shepherd Who laid down His life for His sheep, shone upon us, we are fed in gardens and pastured among lilies, and lie down in folds; for we are folded in Churches and holy shrines, no one scaring or spoiling us, no wolf assailing nor lion trampling on us, no robber breaking through, no one invading us, to steal and kill and destroy; but we abide in safety and participation of every good, being in charge of Christ the Saviour of all."

14. Sing, O daughter of Zion; shout, O Israel; be glad and rejoice with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem. Very remarkable throughout all these verses is the use of the sacred number three, secretly conveying to the thoughtful soul the thought of Him, Father Son and Holy Ghost, the Holy and Undivided Trinity by Whose operation these things shall be. Threefold is the description of their being freed from sins; 1) they shall not do iniquity, 2) nor speak lies, 3) neither shall a deceitful tongue be found in their mouth. Threefold their blessedness; They shall 1) feed, 2) lie down, 3) none make them afraid. Threefold the exhortation to joy here; "⁴ Sing to God the Father; shout to God the Son; be glad and rejoice in God the Holy Ghost, which Holy Trinity is One God, from Whom thou hast received it that thou art 1) the daughter of Zion, 2) Israel, 3) the daughter of Jerusalem; the daughter of Zion by faith, Israel by hope, Jerusalem by charity." And this hidden teaching of that holy mystery is continued; ⁵ The Lord, God the Father, hath taken away thy judgements; He God the Son, hath cast out (cleared quite away) thine enemy; the king of Israel, the Lord, the Holy Ghost, is in the midst of thee! The promise is threefold, 1) thou shalt not see evil any more; 2) fear thou not; 3) let not thine hands be slack. The love of God is threefold. 1) He will rejoice over thee with joy; 2) He will rest in His love; 3) He will joy over thee with singing. Again the words in these four verses are so framed as to be ful-filled in the end. All in this life are but shadows of that fulness. First, whether the Church or the faithful soul, she is summoned by all her names, daughter of Zion ("the thirsty" athirst for God) Israel ("Prince with God") Jerusalem ("City of peace"). By all she is called to the fullest joy in God with every expression and every feeling. Sing; it is the inarticulate, thrilling, trembling burst of joy; shout; again the inarticulate yet louder swell of joy, a trumpet-blast; and then too, deep within, be glad, the calm even joy of the inward soul; exult, the triumph of the soul which cannot contain itself for joy; and this, with the whole heart, no corner of it not pervaded with joy. The ground of this is the complete removal of every evil, and the full Presence of God.

15. The Lord hath taken away thy judgements; her own, because brought upon her by her sins. But when God takes ments, he hath cast out thine enemy: ^a the king of Israel, even the Lord, ^b is in the midst of thee: thou shalt not see evil any more.

16 In that day ^c it shall be said to Jerusa-

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

* John 1. 49.
ver. 5, 17.
Ezek. 43. 35.
Rev. 7. 15.
& 21. 3, 4.
Is. 35. 3, 4.

away the chastisements in mercy, He removes and forgives the sin too. Else, to remove the judgements only, would be to abandon the sinner. He hath cast out, lit. *cleared quite away*⁶, as a man clears away all hindrances, all which stands in the way, so that there should be none whatever left—thine enemy; the one enemy, from whom every hindrance to our salvation comes, as He saith, ⁷ Now shall the prince of this world be cast out. The King of Israel, even the Lord, Christ the Lord, is in the midst of thee, of Whom it is said, ⁸ He that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them, and Who Himself saith, ⁹ Lo I am with you always unto the end of the world. ¹⁰ Where two or three are gathered together in My Name, there am I in the midst of you. He Who had removed from the midst of her the proud, Who had left in the midst of her those with whom He dwelleth, shall Himself dwell in the midst of her in mercy, as He had before in judgement¹¹. He cleanseth the soul for His indwelling, and so dwelleth in the mansion which He had prepared for Himself. Thou shalt not see evil any more. For even the remains of evil, while we are yet in the flesh, are overruled, and ¹² work together to good to those who love God. They cannot separate between the soul and Christ. Rather, He is nearer to her in them. We are bidden to ¹³ count it all joy when we fall into divers temptations, for all sorrows are but medicine from a father's hand. "¹⁴ And truly our way to eternal joy is to suffer here with Christ, and our door to enter into eternal life is gladly to die with Christ, that we may rise again from death and dwell with Him in everlasting life." So in the Revelation, it is first said that God should dwell with His people, and then that all pain shall cease. ¹⁵ Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them and be their God. And God shall wipe all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. "³ In the inmost meaning of the words, he could not but bid her rejoice and be exceeding glad and rejoice with her whole heart, her sins being done away through Christ. For the holy and spiritual Zion, the Church, the multitude of believers, is justified in Christ Alone, and we are saved by Him and from Him, escaping the harms of our invisible enemies, and having in the midst of us the King and God of all, Who appeared in our likeness, the Word from God the Father, through Whom we see not evil, i. e. are freed from all who could do us evil. For He is the worker of our acceptableness, our peace, our wall, the bestower of incorruption, the dispenser of crowns, Who lighteneth the assaults of devils, Who giveth us to ¹⁶ tread on serpents and scorpions and all the power of the enemy—through Whom we are in good hope of immortality and life, adoption and glory, through Whom we shall not see evil any more."

16. In that day it shall be said to Jerusalem, Fear thou not; for ¹⁷ perfect love casteth out fear; whence He saith, ¹⁸ Fear not, little flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you

¹ Acts ix. 15.

² Ib. v. 29.

³ S. Cyril

⁴ Rup.

⁵ v. 15.

⁶ Besides this place, the word is used of "the clearing of a house," Gen. xxiv. 31, Lev. xiv. 36; "a way," Is. xl. 3, lvii. 14, lxii. 10; Mal. iii. 1; "clearing ground," Ps. lxxx. 10.

⁷ S. John xii. 31.

⁸ Rev. vii. 15.

⁹ S. Matt. xxviii. 20.

¹⁰ Ib. xviii. 20.

¹¹ Verses 11, 12, 15, 5.

¹² S. James i. 2.

¹³ Exhort. in Visit. of the sick.

¹⁴ Rev. xxi. 3, 4.

¹⁵ S. Luke x. 19.

¹⁷ 1 S. John iv. 18.

¹⁸ S. Luke xii. 32.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

^b Ezek. 34. 16.
^c Mic. 4. 6, 7.
^d Heb. I will set them for a praise.
^e Heb. of their shame.

19 Behold, at that time I will undo all that afflict thee: and I will save her that halteth, and gather her that was driven out; and † I will get them praise and fame in every land † where they have been put to shame.

19. Behold, at that time I will undo [lit. *I deal with*¹]. While God punisheth not, He seemeth to sit still², be silent³, asleep⁴. Then He shall act, He shall deal according to their deserts with all, evil men or devils, that afflict thee, His Church. The prophecy looked for a larger fulfilment than the destruction of Jerusalem, since the Romans who, in God's Hands, avenged the blood of His Saints, themselves were among those who afflicted her. And will save her, the flock or sheep that halteth⁵, "imperfect in virtue and with trembling faith," and gather, like a good and tender shepherd⁷, her that was driven out; scattered and dispersed through persecutions. All infirmities within shall be healed; all troubles without, removed.

And I will get them praise and fame [lit. I will make them a praise and a name] in every land where they have been put to shame⁸. Throughout the whole world have they been⁹ the offscourings of all things; throughout the whole world should their praise be, as it is said, ¹⁰ Thou shalt make them princes in all lands. One of themselves saith¹¹, Ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called. But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of this world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are. ¹² These He maketh a praise and a name there, where they were without name and dispraised, confounding by them and bringing to nought those wise and strong and mighty, in whose sight they were contemptible."

20. At that time will I bring you in i. e. into the one fold, the one Church, the one Household of God, even in the time that I gather you. "That time" is the whole time of ¹ as Ru. ii. 19. in a good sense; Ez. vii. 27. xviii. 17, xxiii. 25, in a bad; אָמַר, אמר, אמר being probably for אָמַר &c. ² Is. xviii. 4. ³ Hab. i. 13. ⁴ Ps. xlv. 23. ⁵ See Micah iv. 6, 7. ⁶ Dion. ⁷ See Is. xl. 11. ⁸ The article is inserted in a way very unusual and probably emphatic. Without it the words would mean, as in the E. V. "in every land of their shame." But it makes the meaning of the first words, בְּכָל אֶרֶץ, complete in itself; and they mean, in the whole earth.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 630.

¹ Isai. 11. 12.
& 27. 12. &
56. 8.
Ezek. 28. 25.
& 34. 13. &
37. 21.
Amos 9. 14.

20 At that timeⁱ will I bring you again, even in the time that I gather you: for I will make you a name and a praise among all people of the earth, when I turn back your captivity before your eyes, saith the Lord.

the Gospel; the one day of salvation, in which all who shall ever be gathered, shall be brought into the new Jerusalem. These words were fulfilled, when, at our Lord's first Coming, the remnant, the true Israel, those ordained to eternal life were brought in. It shall be fulfilled again, when "the fulness of the Gentiles shall be come in, and so all Israel shall be saved¹³." It shall most perfectly be fulfilled at the end, when there shall be no going out of those once brought in, and those who have gathered others into the Church, shall be a name and a praise among all people of the earth, those whom God hath¹⁴ redeemed out of every tribe and tongue and people and nation, shining like stars for ever and ever.

When I turn back your captivity: ¹² that conversion, then begun, now perfected, when the dead shall rise and they shall be placed on the right hand, soon to receive the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world. O mighty spectacle of the reversed captivity of those once captives; mighty wonder at their present blessedness, as they review the misery of their past captivity! ¹³ Before your eyes, so that we shall see what we now believe and hope for, the end of all our sufferings, chastisements, losses, achings of the heart, the fulness of our Redemption. That which our eyes have looked for, our eyes shall behold and not another, the everliving God as HE IS, face to face; saith the Lord, Who is the Truth Itself, all Whose words will be fulfilled. ¹⁵ Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My Words shall not pass away, saith He Who is God blessed for ever. And so the Prophet closes in the thought of Him, Whose Name is I AM, the Unchangeable, the everlasting Rest and Centre of those who, having been once captives and halting and scattered among the vanities of the world, turn to Him, to Whom be glory and thanksgiving for ever and ever. Amen.

אָרֶץ then is probably in apposition, in the whole earth, their shame, i. e. the scene of their shame; comp. the construction אֶרֶץ הַיַּרְדֵּית Jos. iii. 14. 17 and those Deut. viii. 15. ¹ Kgs iv. 13; and "Daniel the Prophet" p. 476. In the next verse, אָרֶץ is undoubtedly "the earth." ⁹ 1 Cor. iv. 13. ¹⁰ Ps. xlv. 16. ¹¹ 1 Cor. i. 26-28. ¹² Rup. ¹³ Rom. xi. 25, 26. ¹⁴ Rev. v. 9. ¹⁵ S. Mark xiii. 31.

THE MOABITE STONE. See pp. 463, 464.

I MESITA, son of Chemosh-gad, king of Moab the Dibonite. My father reigned over Moab thirty years, and I reigned after my father; and I made this shrine to Chemosh in Korchoh, a shr[ine of deli]verance, because he saved me from all [] and because he let me look upon all who hate me, Om[r]i king of Israel; and he afflicted Moab many days, for Chemosh was wroth with his la[n]d; and his son succeeded him, and he too said, I will afflict Moab. In my days said [Chemosh²], and I will look upon him and upon his house, and Israel perisheth with an everlasting destruction. And Omri took possession of the land of Mob-deba and there dwelt in it [Israel in his days and in] the days of his son, forty years; [and looked] on it Chemosh in my days, and I built Baal-Meon and I made in it the ditch [?] and I [built] Kiriathan. And the men of Gad dwelt in the land of [Atar]oth from time immemorial, and the kin[g of I]srael built for him A[ta]roth and I warred against the city; and I took it and I slew all the mi[ghty men] of the city, for the well-pleasing of Chemosh and Moab; and I took captive thence the [] and [dr]agg[ed] it [or them] before Chemosh in Kiriath and I made to dwell in it the men of Siran, and the men of Macharath. And Chemosh said to me, Go take Nebo against Israel [and I] went by night and I fought against it from the break of the morning to midday and I took it, and I slew

¹ The stone has מֶסִּיתָ, whose meaning is conjectural. Nöldeke conjectures מֶסִּיתָ "the kings." ² Schlotzman's conjecture. Likely conjectures I have put in []; more

the whole of it, seven thousand; [] the honourable women [and mai]dens, for to Ashtar Chemosh [I] dedicated [them] and I took thence [ves]sels of Yhvh and I dragged them before Chemosh. And the king of Israel buil[t] Yahats, and dwelt in it when he warred with me; and Chemosh drove him from [my] f[ace] and I took of Moab 200 men, all its chiefs and I took them against Yahats and took it to add to Dibon. I built Korchoh the wall of the forest, and the wall of Ophel³ and I built the gates thereof, and I built the towers thereof, and I built the king's house, and I made prisons for the gui[lt]y in the mi[dst] of the city; and there was no cistern within the city, in Korchoh, and I said to all the people, make yourselves every man a cistern in his house, and I cut the cutting for Korchoh by m[en] of Israel. I built [A]roer and I made the high road⁴ at the Arnon. I built Beth-Bamoth, for it was destroyed. I built Bezer, for [it was] forsaken me[n] of Dibon fifty; for all Dibon was obedience, and I reig[ned] from Bikran which I added to the land and I buil[t]—and Beth Diblathan and Beth-Baal-Meon and I took there the — of the land and Horonan dwelt in it — — — [and] Chemosh said to me, Go fight against Horonan and I it—Chemosh in my days and on [I] made guess-work I have omitted. ³ מִצְדָּה occurs of Jerusalem, Neh. iii. 27. ⁴ הַמִּצְדָּה lit. "the way cast up" cannot possibly be a way over the river.

TO

It has been the wont of critics, in whose eyes the Prophets were but poetsⁱ, to speak of the style of Haggai as "tame, destitute of life and power," shewing "a marked decline in what they call "prophetic inspiration." The style of the sacred writers is, of course, conformed to their mission. Prophetic descriptions of the future are but incidental to the mission of Haggai. Preachers do not speak in poetry, but set before the people their faults or their duties in vivid earnest language. Haggai sets before the people vividly their negligence and its consequences; he arrests their attention by his concise questions; at one time retorting their excuses^k; at another asking them abruptly, in God's name, to say why their troubles came^l. Or he puts a matter of the law to the priests, that they may draw the inference, before he does it

Of distant prophecies there are but two*, so that the portion to be compared with the former prophets consists but of at most 7 verses. In these the language used is of the utmost simplicity. Haggai had but one message as to the future to convey, and he enforced it by the repeated use of the same word², that temporal things should be shaken, the eternal should remain, as S. Paul sums it up³. He, the long-looked for, the chosen of God, the signet on His Hand, should come; God would fill that house, so poor in their eyes, with glory, and there would He give peace. Haggai had an all-containing but very simple message to give from God. Any ornament of diction would but have impaired and obscured its meaning. The two or three slight idioms, noticed by one after another, are, though slight, forcible⁴.

The office of Haggai was mainly to bring about one definite end, which God, Who raised him up and inspired him, ac-

^d The prophecies of Haggai and Zechariah are thus intertwined. Haggai prophesies in the 6th and 7th months of the 2nd year of Darius Hystaspis, B. C. 520. (Hagg. i. 1.

¹ Eichhorn, De Wette, Bertholdt, Gesenius (Gesh. d. Hebr. Spr. p. 26.), Herzfeldt, (Gesch. d. Volkes Israel ii. 21) Stähelin. ² Dr. Davidson iii. 314. ³ i. 4.

† See on ii. 5, 9. † ii. 6-9, 21-23. † תהיה, ii. 6, 21. תהיה ii. 7.
 † Heb. xii. 26. † See on ii. 3, 5, 17. The junction of תהיה אמת ii. 6, is a mistake of the critics.

complished by him. It is in the light of this great accomplishment of the work entrusted to him at the verge of man's earthly course, that his power and energy are to be estimated. The words which are preserved in his book are doubtless (as indeed was the case as to most of the prophets) the representatives and embodiment of many like words, by which, during his short office, he roused the people from their dejection indifference and irreligious apathy, to the restoration of the public worship of God in the essentials of the preparatory dispensation.

Great lukewarmness had been shewn in the return. The few looked mournfully to the religious centre of Israel, the ruined temple, the cessation of the daily sacrifice, and, like Daniel, confessed their sin and the sin of their people Israel, and presented their supplication before the Lord their God for the holy mountain of their God. The most part appear, as now, to have been taken up with their material prosperity, and, at best, to have become inured to the cessation of their symbolical worship, connected, as it was, with the declaration of the forgiveness of their sins. Then too, God connected His declaration of pardon with certain outward acts: they became indifferent to the cessation of those acts. For few returned. The indifference was even remarkable among those, most connected with the altar. Of the 24^b orders of priests, $\frac{1}{2}$ only, 4 orders^c returned; of the Levites only 74 individuals^d; while of those assigned to help them, the Nethinim and the children of Solomon's servants, there were 392^e. This coldness continued at the return of Ezra. The edict of Artaxerxes^f, as suggested by Ezra, was more pious than those appointed to the service of God. In the first instance no Levite answered to the invitation^g; on the special urgency and message of Ezra, by the good hand of God upon us they brought us a man of understanding, of the sons of Levi; some 3 or 4 chief Levites; their sons and brethren; in all, 38; but of the Nethinim, nearly six times as many, 220^h. Those who thought more of temporal prosperity than of their high spiritual nobility and destination, had flourished doubtless in that exile as they have in their present homelessness, as wanderers among the nations. Haman calculated apparently on being able to pay out of their spoils ten thousand talents of silver^k, some £300,000,000, two-thirds of the annual revenue of the Persian Empire^l into the king's treasuries.

The numbers who had returned with Zerubbabel had been (as had been foretold of all restorations) a remnant only. There were 42,360 free men, with 7337 male or female slaves^m. The whole population which returned was not above 212,000, free-men and women and children. The proportion of slaves is about $\frac{1}{5}$, since in their case adults of both sexes were counted. The enumeration is minute, giving the number of their horses, mules, camels, assesⁿ. The chief of the fathers however were not poor, since (though unspeakably short of the wealth, won by David and consecrated to the future temple) they offered freely for the house of God, to set it up in its place, a sum about £117,100^p of our money. They had, beside, a grant from Cyrus, which he intended to cover the expenses of the building, the height and breadth whereof were determined by royal edict^q.

The monarch, however, of an Eastern empire had, in proportion to its size, little power over his subordinates or the governors of the provinces, except by their recall or execution, when their oppressions or peculations notably exceeded bounds. The returned colony, from the first, were in fear of the nations, the peoples of those countries^r, their old enemies probably; and the first service, the altar to offer burnt-offerings thereon, was probably a service of fear rather than of love, as it is said, they set up the altar upon its bases; for it was in fear upon them from the peoples of the lands, and they offered burnt-offerings thereon unto the Lord. They hoped apparently to win the favour of God, that He might, as of old, protect them against their enemies. However, the work was carried on according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia; and the foundations of the temple were laid amidst mixed joy at the carrying on of the work thus far, and sorrow at its poverty, compared to the first temple^s. The hostility of the Samaritans discouraged them. Mixed as the religion of the Samaritans was,—its better element being the corrupt religion of the ten tribes, its worse the idolatries of the various nations, brought thither in the reign of Esarhaddon,—the returned Jews could not accept their offer to join in their worship, without the certainty of admitting, with them, the idolatries, for which they had been punished so severely. For the Samaritans pleaded the identity of the two religions. Let us build with you, for we serve your God, as ye do; and we do sacrifice unto Him since the days of Esarhaddon which brought us up hither. But in fact this mixed worship, in which they feared the Lord and served their own gods, came to this, that they feared not the Lord, neither did they after the law and commandment which the Lord commanded the children of Jacob. For God claims the undivided allegiance of His creatures; these feared the Lord and served their graven images, both their children and their children's children: as did their fathers, so do they to this day. But this worship included some of the most cruel abominations of heathendom, the sacrifice of their children to their gods^t.

The Samaritans, thus rejected, first themselves harassed the Jews in building, apparently by petty violence, as they did afterwards in the rebuilding of the walls by Nehemiah. The people of the land weakened the hands of the people of Judah, and wore them out^u in building. This failing, they hired counsellors (doubtless at the Persian court), to frustrate their purpose, all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, until the reign of Darius king of Persia. The object of the intrigues was probably to intercept the supplies, which Cyrus had engaged to bestow, which could readily be effected in an Eastern Court without any change of purpose or any cognizance of Cyrus.

In the next reign of Ahashverosh (i. e. Khshvershe, a title of honour of Cambyses) they wrote accusations against the Jews, seemingly without any further effect, since none is mentioned. Perhaps Cambyses, in his expedition to Egypt, knew more of the Jews, than the Samaritans thought, or he

^a Dan. ix. 20.

^b 1 Chr. xxiv. 3—19.

^c Ezr. ii. 36-39.

^d Ib. 40.

^e Ib. 58.

^f Ib. vii. 13-14.

^g Ib. viii. 15.

^h Ib. 18, 19.

ⁱ Ib. 20.

^j See on Hos. ix. 17. pp. 61, 62.

^k Esther iii. 9. Ahasuerus apparently, in according to Haman's proposal, made over to him the lives and property of the Jews. The silver is given unto thee, the people also, to do with them as it seemeth good to thee. (Ib. 11.) The Jews' property was confiscated with their lives. On the contrary, it was noticed, that the Jews, when permitted to defend their lives, did not lay their hands on the prey, which, by the king's decree, was granted to them, with authority to take the lives of those who should assault them. Esth. viii. 11. ix. 10, 15, 16.

^l 14,560 silver talents. Herod. iii. 95.

^m Ezra ii. 64, 65, Neh. vii. 66, 67. In the time of Augustus, it was no uncommon thing for a person to have 200 slaves (Hor. Sat. i. 3. 11) it is said that very many Romans possessed 10000, or 20000 slaves. Athenæus vi. p. 272.

ⁿ 736 horses, 245 mules, 435 camels, 6720 asses. Ezra ii. 66, 67, Neh. vii. 68, 69. ^o Ezr. ii. 68, 69. ^p The golden daric being estimated at £1 2s., the 61,000 darics would be £67,100; the "maneh" being 100 shekels, and the shekel about 2s., the 5000 maneh of silver would be about £50,000. ^q Ezr. iv. 3. ^r Ib. iii. 3.

^s Ezr. iii. 7.

^t Ib. 11-13.

^u Ib. iv. 2.

^v 2 Kgs xvü. 33.

^w Ib. 34.

^x Ib. 41.

^y Ib. 31.

^z 1b. 6.

^{aa} Cheth.

^{ab} Ezr. iv. 4.

^{ac} 1b. 5.

may have shrunk from changing his father's decree, contrary to the fundamental principles of Persism, not to alter any decree, which the sovereign (acting, as he was assumed to do, under the influence of Ormuzd) had written^a. Pseudo-Smerdis (who doubtless took the title of honour, Artachshatr) may, as an impostor, have well been ignorant of Cyrus' decree, to which no allusion is made^b. From him the Samaritans, through Rehum the chancellor, obtained a decree prohibiting, until further notice, the rebuilding of the city. The accusers had overreached themselves; for the ground of their accusation was, the former rebellions of the city^c; the prohibition accordingly extended only to the city^d, not to the temple. However, having obtained the decree, they were not scrupulous about its application, and made the Jews to cease^e by arm and power, the governor of the Jews being apparently unable, the governor of the cis-Euphratensian provinces being unwilling, to help. As this, however, was, in fact, a perversion of the decree, the Jews were left free to build, and in the second year of Darius Hystaspis, Haggai, and then Zechariah, prophesied in the name of the God of Israel to Zerubbabel, the native Governor, and Joshua the high-priest, and the Jews in Judah and Jerusalem; and they began to build the house of God in Jerusalem. Force was no longer used. Those engaged in building appealed to the edict of Cyrus; the edict was found at Ecbatana^f, and the supplies which Cyrus had promised, were again ordered. The difficulty was at the commencement. The people had been cowed perhaps at first by the violence of Rehum and his companions; but they had acquiesced readily in the illegal prohibition, and had run each to his own house, some of them to their ceiled houses. All, employers or employed, were busy on their husbandry. But nothing flourished. The labourers' wages disappeared, as soon as gained^g. East and West wind alike brought disease to their corn; both, as threatened upon disobedience in the law^h. The East wind scorched and dried it upⁱ; the warm West wind turned the ears yellow^m and barren; the hail smote the vines, so that when the unfilled and mutilated clusters were pressed out, two-fifths only of the hoped-for produce was yielded; of the corn, only one halfⁿ.

In the midst of this, God raised up an earnest preacher of repentance. Haggai was taught, not to promise anything at the first, but to set before them, what they had been doing, what was its result. ^oHe sets it before them in detail; tells them that God had so ordered it for their neglect of His service, and bids them amend. He bids them quit their wonted ways; go up into the mountain; bring wood; build the house. Conceive in Christian England, after some potatoe-disease, or foot-and-mouth-disease (in Scripture language "a murrain among the cattle"), a preacher arising and bidding them, consider your ways, and as the remedy, not to look to any human means, but to do something, which should please Almighty God; and not preaching only but effecting what he preached. Yet such was Haggai. He stood among his people, his existence a witness of the truth of what he said; himself one, who had lived among the outward splendours of the former temple; a contemporary of those, who said the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord are these; who had held it to be impossible that Judah should be carried captive; who had prophesied the restoration of the vessels of God^q, which had been carried away, not, as God foretold, after the captivity, but as an earnest that the fuller captivity should not be^r; yet who had himself, according to the prophecies of the prophets of those days, been carried into captivity, and was now a part of that restoration which God had promised. He stood among them "in gray-haired might," bade them do, what he bade them, in the name of God, to do; and they did it. When they had set about the work, he assured them of the presence of God with them^s. A month later, when they were seemingly discouraged at its poorness, he promised them in God's name, that its glory should be greater than that of Solomon's^t. Three days after, in contrast with the visitations up to that time, while there was as yet no token of any change, he promised them in the name of God, From this day will I bless you.

He himself apparently saw only the commencement of the work; for his prophecies lay within the second year of Darius and the temple was not completed till the sixth^v. Even the favourable rescript of Darius must have arrived after his last prophecy, since it was elicited by the enquiry of the governor, consequent upon the commenced re-building^w, three months only before his office closed^x.

While this restoration of the public worship of God in its integrity was his main office, yet he also taught by parable^y that the presence of what was outwardly holy did not, in itself, hallow those, among whom it was; but was itself unhallowed by inward unholiness.

Standing too amid the small handful of returned exiles, not, altogether, more than the inhabitants of Sheffield, he foretold, in simple all-comprehending words, that central gift of the Gospel, In this place will I give peace, saith the Lord. So had David, the sons of Korah, Micah, Isaiah, Ezekiel prophesied^z; but the peace was to come, not then, but in the days of the Messiah. Other times had come, in which the false prophets had said^{aa}, Peace, peace, when there was no peace; when God had taken away His peace from this people. And now, when the chastisements were fulfilled, when the land lay desolate, when every house of Jerusalem lay burned with fire^{ab}, and the "blackness of ashes" alone "marked where they stood;" when the walls were broken down so that, even when leave was given to rebuild them, it seemed to their enemies a vain labour to revive the stones out of the heaps of rubbish which were burned; when the place of their fathers' sepulchres lay waste, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire; when, for their sakes, Zion was ploughed as a field and Jerusalem was become heaps—let any one picture to himself the silver-haired prophet standing, at first, alone, rebuking the people, first through their governor and the high-priest, then the collected multitude, in words, forceful from their simplicity, and obeyed! And then let them think whether anything of human or even Divine eloquence was lacking, when the words flew straight like arrows to the heart, and roused the people to do at once,

^a See Daniel the prophet pp. 445-447. ^b Ezr. iv. 7, sqq. ^c Ib. 12, 13, 15, 16.

^d Ib. 19, 21. ^e Ib. 23. ^f Ib. v. 1, 2.

^g Ib. vi. 2. ^h Hagg. i. 9. ⁱ Ib. 4. ^j Ib. 6. ^k Deut. xxviii. 22.

^l ^m ⁿ comp. מִן הַשָּׂדֶה Gen. xli. 6, 23, 27.

^o מִן הַשָּׂדֶה Forskäl (in Niebuhr, Beschreibung v. Arabien, Pref. p. xlv), took down from the mouth of "Muri, a Jew of Mecca, that, in the month Marchesvan, a warm wind sometimes blew, which turned the ears yellow and they yielded no grain; it was an unsteady wind, but spoils all it touches." "M. Forskäl remarks that the fields, near the canal of Alexandria, are sown in October and reaped in Feb." Id. In Arabic the disease is called מִן הַשָּׂדֶה. Ges. Thes.

^p Jer. vii. 4.

^q Hagg. i. 13.

^r Ezr. vi. 15.

^s Hagg. i. 15. ii. 10, 20.

^t Ps. lxxii. 3-7, lxxxv. 8, 10. Mic. v. 5. Is. ix. 6, 7. xxvi. 12. xxxii. 17. lii. 7. liii. 5. liv. 10, 13. lvii. 19. lx. 17. lxvi. 12. Ezek. xxxiv. 25. xxxvii. 26.

^u Jer. vi. 14. viii. 11. xiv. 13.

^v Neh. iv. 2.

^w Ib. ii. 3.

^x Mic. iii. 12.

^y Hagg. ii. 16.

^z Ib. xxvii. 16, xxviii. 3.

^{aa} Ib. ii. 3-9.

^{ab} Ib. v. 3. sqq.

^{ac} ii. 10-15.

^{ad} ii. 9.

^{ae} 2 Chr. xxxvi. 19.

^{af} Ib. ii. 3.

^{ag} Mic. iii. 12.

amid every obstacle, amid every downheartedness or outward poverty, that for which God sent them. The outward ornament of words would have been misplaced, when the object was to bid a downhearted people, in the Name of God, to do a definite work. Haggai sets before his people cause and effect; that they denied to God what was His, and that God denied to them what was His to give or to withhold. His sermon was, in His words Whom he foretold; Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. He spake in the name of God, and was obeyed.

“*The Holy Ghost, Who spake by the mouth of the prophets, willed that he by a foreboding name should be called Haggai, i. e. ‘festive,’ according to the subject whereof He should speak by his mouth. Yet was there not another festiveness in the prophet’s heart, than the joy which he had or could have with the people, from the rebuilding of that temple made with hands, again to be defiled and burned with fire irrecoverably? Be it that the rebuilding of that temple, which he saw before him, was a matter of great festive joy; yet not in or for itself, but for Him, the festive joy of saints and angels and men, Christ; because when the temple should be rebuilt, the walls also of the city should be rebuilt and the city again inhabited and the people be united in one, of whom Christ should be born, fulfilling the truth of the promise made to Abraham and David and confirmed by an oath. So then we, by aid of the Holy Spirit, so enter upon what Haggai here speaketh, as not doubting that he altogether aimeth at Christ. And so may we in some sort be called or be Haggais, i. e. ‘festive,’ by contemplating that same, which because he should contemplate, he was, by a Divine foreboding, called Haggai.”

• Rup.

“THE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS SHALL COME.”—HAGG. ii. 7.

“I, IF I BE LIFTED UP FROM THE EARTH, WILL DRAW ALL UNTO ME.”—S. JOHN xii. 32.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

CHAPTER I.

1 Haggai reproveth the people for neglecting the building of the house. 7 He inciteth them to the building. 12 He promiseth God's assistance to them being forward.

* Ezra 4. 24.
& 5. 1.
Zech. 1. 1.

IN ^a the second year of Darius the king, in the sixth month, in the first day of CHAP. I. 1. In the second year of Darius, i. e. Hystaspis. The very first word of prophecy after the Captivity betokens that they were restored, not yet as before, yet so, as to be hereafter, more than before. The earthly type, by God's appointment, was fading away, that the Heavenly truth might dawn. The earthly king was withdrawn, to make way for the Heavenly. God had said of Jeconiah, ¹ No man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Israel: and so now prophecy begins to be dated by the years of a foreign earthly ruler, as in the Baptism of the Lord Himself². Yet God gives back in mercy more than He withdraws in chastisement. The earthly rule is suspended, that men might look out more longingly for the Heavenly.

In the sixth month. They counted by their own months, beginning with Nisan, the first of the ecclesiastical year, (which was still used for holy purposes and in sacred history) although, having no more any kings, they dated their years by those of the empire, to which they were subject³. In the sixth month, part of our July and August, their harvest was past, and the dearth, which they doubtless ascribed (as we do) to the seasons, and which Haggai pointed out to be a judgement from God, had set in for this year also. The months being lunar, the first day of the month was the festival of the new moon, a popular feast⁴ which their forefathers had kept⁵, while they neglected the weightier matters of the law, and which the religious in Israel had kept, even while separated from the worship at Jerusalem⁶. In its very first day, when the grief for the barren year was yet fresh, Haggai was stirred to exhort them to consider their ways; a pattern for Christian preachers, to bring home to people's souls the meaning of God's judgements. God directs the very day to be noted, in which He called the people anew to build His temple, both to shew the readiness of their obedience, and a precedent to us to keep in memory days and seasons, in which He stirs our souls to build more diligently His spiritual temple in our souls⁷.

By the hand of Haggai. God doth well-nigh all things which He doeth for man through the hands of men. He committeth His words and works for men into the hands of men as His stewards, to dispense faithfully to His household⁸. Hence He speaks so often of the law, which He commanded ⁹ by the hand of Moses; but also as to other prophets, Nathan¹⁰, Ahijah¹¹, Jehu¹², Jonah¹³, Isaiah¹⁴, Jeremiah¹⁵, and the

the month, came the word of the LORD
† by Haggai the prophet unto ^b Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, || governor of Judah, and to ^c Joshua the son of ^d Josedech, the high priest, saying,

^e Ezra 3. 2. & 5. 2.

^d 1 Chr. 6. 15.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

† Heb.
by the hand
of Haggai.
^b 1 Chron. 3.
17, 19.
Ezra 3. 2.
Matt. 1. 12.
Luke 3. 27.
|| Or, captain.

prophets generally¹⁶. The very Prophets of God, although gifted with a Divine Spirit, still were willing and conscious instruments in speaking His words.

Unto Zerubbabel (so called from being born in Babylon) the son of Shealtiel. By this genealogy Zerubbabel is known in the history of the return from the captivity in Ezra and Nehemiah¹⁷. God does not say by Jeremiah, that Jeconiah should have no children, but that he should in his life-time be childless, as it is said of those married to the uncle's or brother's widow, ¹⁸ they shall die childless. Jeremiah rather implies that he should have children, but that they should die untimely before him. For he calls Jeconiah, ¹⁹ a man who shall not prosper in his days; for there shall not prosper a man of his seed, sitting on the throne of David, and ruling any more in Israel. He should die (as the word means) *barred*²⁰ of all, alone and desolate. The own father of Shealtiel appears to have been Neri²¹, of the line of Nathan son of David; not, of the line of the kings of Judah. Neri married, one must suppose, a daughter of Assir, son of ²² Jeconiah whose grandson Shealtiel was; and Zerubbabel was the own son of Pedaiiah, the brother of Shealtiel, as whose son he was in the legal genealogy inscribed, according to the law as to those who die childless²³; or as having been adopted by Shealtiel being himself childless, as Moses was called the son of the daughter of Pharaoh²⁴. So broken was the line of the unhappy Jehoiachin, two thirds of whose own life was passed in the prison²⁵, into which Nebuchadnezzar cast him.

Governor of Judah. The foreign name²⁶ betokens that the civil rule was now held from a foreign power, although Cyrus shewed the Jews the kindness of placing one of themselves, of royal extraction also, as his deputy over them. The lineage of David is still in authority, connecting the present with the past, but the earthly kingdom had faded away. Under the name Sheshbazzar Zerubbabel is spoken of both as *the prince*²⁷ and the *governor*²⁸ of Judah. With him is joined Josuah the son of Josedech, the high priest, whose father went into captivity²⁹, when his grand-father Seraiah was slain by Nebuchadnezzar³⁰. The priestly line also is preserved. Haggai addresses these two, the one of the royal, the other of the priestly, line, as jointly responsible for the negligence of the people; he addresses the people only through them. Together, they are types of Him, the true King and true Priest, Christ Jesus, Who by the Resurrection raised again the true temple, His Body, after it had been destroyed³¹.

pavão could hardly become pagvão, and even this would still be considerably different from Pechah. The insertion of a g before a v in Zend is totally anomalous. It rests entirely on the uncertain identification of dregvant, "bad," with drvant, for in the second instance, huova is much more likely a corruption of huogva, than vice versa. Pavdo in Zend would mean, protector, but like the Sanskrit pāvan, it occurs only at the end of compounds. The one passage, quoted in support of its occurring as a separate noun, seems to me to contain an etymological play, where pavdo is used as an independent noun in order to explain the two compounds, pagga-pavdo and parā-pavdo, i. e., protecting behind and protecting in front, as if we were to say, "he is a tector, both as a pro-tector and sub-tector."

²⁷ Ezr. i. 8. In relation to Cyrus, he is called by his Persian name Sheshbazzar, by which name he is mentioned in Tatnai's letter to Darius, as having been commissioned by Cyrus to rebuild the temple and as having done so (Ezr. vi. 14—16), while, in the history of the restoration, he is related to have done it under his domestic name Zerubbabel. On these changes of names by their masters, see Daniel the Prophet p. 16.

²⁸ Ezr. v. 14.

²⁹ 1 Chr. vi. 15.

³⁰ 2 Kgs xxv. 18—21.

³¹ S. Jer.

¹ Jer. xxii. 30.

² S. Luke iii. 1.

³ See Zech. i. 7, vii. 1.

⁴ Pr. vii. 20.

⁵ Is. i. 13, 14.

⁶ 2 Kgs iv. 23. add Am. viii. 5. Hos. ii. 11.

⁷ Castro.

⁸ S. Luke xii. 42.

⁹ 12 times in the Pent.; 5 times in Joshua; in Judges once; in 1 Kgs viii; 2 Chron. twice; Neh. ix. 14. Ps. lxxvii. 20.

¹⁰ 2 Sam. xii. 25.

¹¹ 1 Kgs xii. 15, xiv. 18.

¹² 2 Chr. x. 15.

¹³ 1b. xvi. 7.

¹⁴ 2 Kgs xiv. 25.

¹⁵ Is. xx. 2.

¹⁶ Jer. xxxvii. 2.

¹⁷ Hos. vii. 20. 2 Chr. xxix. 25.

¹⁸ Lev. xx. 20, 21.

¹⁹ Jer. xxii. 30.

²⁰ Ezr. iii. 2. 8. v. 2. Neh. xii. 1.

²¹ Jer. xxii. 30.

²² ²³ ²⁴ ²⁵ ²⁶ ²⁷ ²⁸ ²⁹ ³⁰ ³¹ ³² ³³ ³⁴ ³⁵ ³⁶ ³⁷ ³⁸ ³⁹ ⁴⁰ ⁴¹ ⁴² ⁴³ ⁴⁴ ⁴⁵ ⁴⁶ ⁴⁷ ⁴⁸ ⁴⁹ ⁵⁰ ⁵¹ ⁵² ⁵³ ⁵⁴ ⁵⁵ ⁵⁶ ⁵⁷ ⁵⁸ ⁵⁹ ⁶⁰ ⁶¹ ⁶² ⁶³ ⁶⁴ ⁶⁵ ⁶⁶ ⁶⁷ ⁶⁸ ⁶⁹ ⁷⁰ ⁷¹ ⁷² ⁷³ ⁷⁴ ⁷⁵ ⁷⁶ ⁷⁷ ⁷⁸ ⁷⁹ ⁸⁰ ⁸¹ ⁸² ⁸³ ⁸⁴ ⁸⁵ ⁸⁶ ⁸⁷ ⁸⁸ ⁸⁹ ⁹⁰ ⁹¹ ⁹² ⁹³ ⁹⁴ ⁹⁵ ⁹⁶ ⁹⁷ ⁹⁸ ⁹⁹ ¹⁰⁰ ¹⁰¹ ¹⁰² ¹⁰³ ¹⁰⁴ ¹⁰⁵ ¹⁰⁶ ¹⁰⁷ ¹⁰⁸ ¹⁰⁹ ¹¹⁰ ¹¹¹ ¹¹² ¹¹³ ¹¹⁴ ¹¹⁵ ¹¹⁶ ¹¹⁷ ¹¹⁸ ¹¹⁹ ¹²⁰ ¹²¹ ¹²² ¹²³ ¹²⁴ ¹²⁵ ¹²⁶ ¹²⁷ ¹²⁸ ¹²⁹ ¹³⁰ ¹³¹ ¹³² ¹³³ ¹³⁴ ¹³⁵ ¹³⁶ ¹³⁷ ¹³⁸ ¹³⁹ ¹⁴⁰ ¹⁴¹ ¹⁴² ¹⁴³ ¹⁴⁴ ¹⁴⁵ ¹⁴⁶ ¹⁴⁷ ¹⁴⁸ ¹⁴⁹ ¹⁵⁰ ¹⁵¹ ¹⁵² ¹⁵³ ¹⁵⁴ ¹⁵⁵ ¹⁵⁶ ¹⁵⁷ ¹⁵⁸ ¹⁵⁹ ¹⁶⁰ ¹⁶¹ ¹⁶² ¹⁶³ ¹⁶⁴ ¹⁶⁵ ¹⁶⁶ ¹⁶⁷ ¹⁶⁸ ¹⁶⁹ ¹⁷⁰ ¹⁷¹ ¹⁷² ¹⁷³ ¹⁷⁴ ¹⁷⁵ ¹⁷⁶ ¹⁷⁷ ¹⁷⁸ ¹⁷⁹ ¹⁸⁰ ¹⁸¹ ¹⁸² ¹⁸³ ¹⁸⁴ ¹⁸⁵ ¹⁸⁶ ¹⁸⁷ ¹⁸⁸ ¹⁸⁹ ¹⁹⁰ ¹⁹¹ ¹⁹² ¹⁹³ ¹⁹⁴ ¹⁹⁵ ¹⁹⁶ ¹⁹⁷ ¹⁹⁸ ¹⁹⁹ ²⁰⁰ ²⁰¹ ²⁰² ²⁰³ ²⁰⁴ ²⁰⁵ ²⁰⁶ ²⁰⁷ ²⁰⁸ ²⁰⁹ ²¹⁰ ²¹¹ ²¹² ²¹³ ²¹⁴ ²¹⁵ ²¹⁶ ²¹⁷ ²¹⁸ ²¹⁹ ²²⁰ ²²¹ ²²² ²²³ ²²⁴ ²²⁵ ²²⁶ ²²⁷ ²²⁸ ²²⁹ ²³⁰ ²³¹ ²³² ²³³ ²³⁴ ²³⁵ ²³⁶ ²³⁷ ²³⁸ ²³⁹ ²⁴⁰ ²⁴¹ ²⁴² ²⁴³ ²⁴⁴ ²⁴⁵ ²⁴⁶ ²⁴⁷ ²⁴⁸ ²⁴⁹ ²⁵⁰ ²⁵¹ ²⁵² ²⁵³ ²⁵⁴ ²⁵⁵ ²⁵⁶ ²⁵⁷ ²⁵⁸ ²⁵⁹ ²⁶⁰ ²⁶¹ ²⁶² ²⁶³ ²⁶⁴ ²⁶⁵ ²⁶⁶ ²⁶⁷ ²⁶⁸ ²⁶⁹ ²⁷⁰ ²⁷¹ ²⁷² ²⁷³ ²⁷⁴ ²⁷⁵ ²⁷⁶ ²⁷⁷ ²⁷⁸ ²⁷⁹ ²⁸⁰ ²⁸¹ ²⁸² ²⁸³ ²⁸⁴ ²⁸⁵ ²⁸⁶ ²⁸⁷ ²⁸⁸ ²⁸⁹ ²⁹⁰ ²⁹¹ ²⁹² ²⁹³ ²⁹⁴ ²⁹⁵ ²⁹⁶ ²⁹⁷ ²⁹⁸ ²⁹⁹ ³⁰⁰ ³⁰¹ ³⁰² ³⁰³ ³⁰⁴ ³⁰⁵ ³⁰⁶ ³⁰⁷ ³⁰⁸ ³⁰⁹ ³¹⁰ ³¹¹ ³¹² ³¹³ ³¹⁴ ³¹⁵ ³¹⁶ ³¹⁷ ³¹⁸ ³¹⁹ ³²⁰ ³²¹ ³²² ³²³ ³²⁴ ³²⁵ ³²⁶ ³²⁷ ³²⁸ ³²⁹ ³³⁰ ³³¹ ³³² ³³³ ³³⁴ ³³⁵ ³³⁶ ³³⁷ ³³⁸ ³³⁹ ³⁴⁰ ³⁴¹ ³⁴² ³⁴³ ³⁴⁴ ³⁴⁵ ³⁴⁶ ³⁴⁷ ³⁴⁸ ³⁴⁹ ³⁵⁰ ³⁵¹ ³⁵² ³⁵³ ³⁵⁴ ³⁵⁵ ³⁵⁶ ³⁵⁷ ³⁵⁸ ³⁵⁹ ³⁶⁰ ³⁶¹ ³⁶² ³⁶³ ³⁶⁴ ³⁶⁵ ³⁶⁶ ³⁶⁷ ³⁶⁸ ³⁶⁹ ³⁷⁰ ³⁷¹ ³⁷² ³⁷³ ³⁷⁴ ³⁷⁵ ³⁷⁶ ³⁷⁷ ³⁷⁸ ³⁷⁹ ³⁸⁰ ³⁸¹ ³⁸² ³⁸³ ³⁸⁴ ³⁸⁵ ³⁸⁶ ³⁸⁷ ³⁸⁸ ³⁸⁹ ³⁹⁰ ³⁹¹ ³⁹² ³⁹³ ³⁹⁴ ³⁹⁵ ³⁹⁶ ³⁹⁷ ³⁹⁸ ³⁹⁹ ⁴⁰⁰ ⁴⁰¹ ⁴⁰² ⁴⁰³ ⁴⁰⁴ ⁴⁰⁵ ⁴⁰⁶ ⁴⁰⁷ ⁴⁰⁸ ⁴⁰⁹ ⁴¹⁰ ⁴¹¹ ⁴¹² ⁴¹³ ⁴¹⁴ ⁴¹⁵ ⁴¹⁶ ⁴¹⁷ ⁴¹⁸ ⁴¹⁹ ⁴²⁰ ⁴²¹ ⁴²² ⁴²³ ⁴²⁴ ⁴²⁵ ⁴²⁶ ⁴²⁷ ⁴²⁸ ⁴²⁹ ⁴³⁰ ⁴³¹ ⁴³² ⁴³³ ⁴³⁴ ⁴³⁵ ⁴³⁶ ⁴³⁷ ⁴³⁸ ⁴³⁹ ⁴⁴⁰ ⁴⁴¹ ⁴⁴² ⁴⁴³ ⁴⁴⁴ ⁴⁴⁵ ⁴⁴⁶ ⁴⁴⁷ ⁴⁴⁸ ⁴⁴⁹ ⁴⁵⁰ ⁴⁵¹ ⁴⁵² ⁴⁵³ ⁴⁵⁴ ⁴⁵⁵ ⁴⁵⁶ ⁴⁵⁷ ⁴⁵⁸ ⁴⁵⁹ ⁴⁶⁰ ⁴⁶¹ ⁴⁶² ⁴⁶³ ⁴⁶⁴ ⁴⁶⁵ ⁴⁶⁶ ⁴⁶⁷ ⁴⁶⁸ ⁴⁶⁹ ⁴⁷⁰ ⁴⁷¹ ⁴⁷² ⁴⁷³ ⁴⁷⁴ ⁴⁷⁵ ⁴⁷⁶ ⁴⁷⁷ ⁴⁷⁸ ⁴⁷⁹ ⁴⁸⁰ ⁴⁸¹ ⁴⁸² ⁴⁸³ ⁴⁸⁴ ⁴⁸⁵ ⁴⁸⁶ ⁴⁸⁷ ⁴⁸⁸ ⁴⁸⁹ ⁴⁹⁰ ⁴⁹¹ ⁴⁹² ⁴⁹³ ⁴⁹⁴ ⁴⁹⁵ ⁴⁹⁶ ⁴⁹⁷ ⁴⁹⁸ ⁴⁹⁹ ⁵⁰⁰ ⁵⁰¹ ⁵⁰² ⁵⁰³ ⁵⁰⁴ ⁵⁰⁵ ⁵⁰⁶ ⁵⁰⁷ ⁵⁰⁸ ⁵⁰⁹ ⁵¹⁰ ⁵¹¹ ⁵¹² ⁵¹³ ⁵¹⁴ ⁵¹⁵ ⁵¹⁶ ⁵¹⁷ ⁵¹⁸ ⁵¹⁹ ⁵²⁰ ⁵²¹ ⁵²² ⁵²³ ⁵²⁴ ⁵²⁵ ⁵²⁶ ⁵²⁷ ⁵²⁸ ⁵²⁹ ⁵³⁰ ⁵³¹ ⁵³² ⁵³³ ⁵³⁴ ⁵³⁵ ⁵³⁶ ⁵³⁷ ⁵³⁸ ⁵³⁹ ⁵⁴⁰ ⁵⁴¹ ⁵⁴² ⁵⁴³ ⁵⁴⁴ ⁵⁴⁵ ⁵⁴⁶ ⁵⁴⁷ ⁵⁴⁸ ⁵⁴⁹ ⁵⁵⁰ ⁵⁵¹ ⁵⁵² ⁵⁵³ ⁵⁵⁴ ⁵⁵⁵ ⁵⁵⁶ ⁵⁵⁷ ⁵⁵⁸ ⁵⁵⁹ ⁵⁶⁰ ⁵⁶¹ ⁵⁶² ⁵⁶³ ⁵⁶⁴ ⁵⁶⁵ ⁵⁶⁶ ⁵⁶⁷ ⁵⁶⁸ ⁵⁶⁹ ⁵⁷⁰ ⁵⁷¹ ⁵⁷² ⁵⁷³ ⁵⁷⁴ ⁵⁷⁵ ⁵⁷⁶ ⁵⁷⁷ ⁵⁷⁸ ⁵⁷⁹ ⁵⁸⁰ ⁵⁸¹ ⁵⁸² ⁵⁸³ ⁵⁸⁴ ⁵⁸⁵ ⁵⁸⁶ ⁵⁸⁷ ⁵⁸⁸ ⁵⁸⁹ ⁵⁹⁰ ⁵⁹¹ ⁵⁹² ⁵⁹³ ⁵⁹⁴ ⁵⁹⁵ ⁵⁹⁶ ⁵⁹⁷ ⁵⁹⁸ ⁵⁹⁹ ⁶⁰⁰ ⁶⁰¹ ⁶⁰² ⁶⁰³ ⁶⁰⁴ ⁶⁰⁵ ⁶⁰⁶ ⁶⁰⁷ ⁶⁰⁸ ⁶⁰⁹ ⁶¹⁰ ⁶¹¹ ⁶¹² ⁶¹³ ⁶¹⁴ ⁶¹⁵ ⁶¹⁶ ⁶¹⁷ ⁶¹⁸ ⁶¹⁹ ⁶²⁰ ⁶²¹ ⁶²² ⁶²³ ⁶²⁴ ⁶²⁵ ⁶²⁶ ⁶²⁷ ⁶²⁸ ⁶²⁹ ⁶³⁰ ⁶³¹ ⁶³² ⁶³³ ⁶³⁴ ⁶³⁵ ⁶³⁶ ⁶³⁷ ⁶³⁸ ⁶³⁹ ⁶⁴⁰ ⁶⁴¹ ⁶⁴² ⁶⁴³ ⁶⁴⁴ ⁶⁴⁵ ⁶⁴⁶ ⁶⁴⁷ ⁶⁴⁸ ⁶⁴⁹ ⁶⁵⁰ ⁶⁵¹ ⁶⁵² ⁶⁵³ ⁶⁵⁴ ⁶⁵⁵ ⁶⁵⁶ ⁶⁵⁷ ⁶⁵⁸ ⁶⁵⁹ ⁶⁶⁰ ⁶⁶¹ ⁶⁶² ⁶⁶³ ⁶⁶⁴ ⁶⁶⁵ ⁶⁶⁶ ⁶⁶⁷ ⁶⁶⁸ ⁶⁶⁹ ⁶⁷⁰ ⁶⁷¹ ⁶⁷² ⁶⁷³ ⁶⁷⁴ ⁶⁷⁵ ⁶⁷⁶ ⁶⁷⁷ ⁶⁷⁸ ⁶⁷⁹ ⁶⁸⁰ ⁶⁸¹ ⁶⁸² ⁶⁸³ ⁶⁸⁴ ⁶⁸⁵ ⁶⁸⁶ ⁶⁸⁷ ⁶⁸⁸ ⁶⁸⁹ ⁶⁹⁰ ⁶⁹¹ ⁶⁹² ⁶⁹³ ⁶⁹⁴ ⁶⁹⁵ ⁶⁹⁶ ⁶⁹⁷ ⁶⁹⁸ ⁶⁹⁹ ⁷⁰⁰ ⁷⁰¹ ⁷⁰² ⁷⁰³ ⁷⁰⁴ ⁷⁰⁵ ⁷⁰⁶ ⁷⁰⁷ ⁷⁰⁸ ⁷⁰⁹ ⁷¹⁰ ⁷¹¹ ⁷¹² ⁷¹³ ⁷¹⁴ ⁷¹⁵ ⁷¹⁶ ⁷¹⁷ ⁷¹⁸ ⁷¹⁹ ⁷²⁰ ⁷²¹ ⁷²² ⁷²³ ⁷²⁴ ⁷²⁵ ⁷²⁶ ⁷²⁷ ⁷²⁸ ⁷²⁹ ⁷³⁰ ⁷³¹ ⁷³² ⁷³³ ⁷³⁴ ⁷³⁵ ⁷³⁶ ⁷³⁷ ⁷³⁸ ⁷³⁹ ⁷⁴⁰ ⁷⁴¹ ⁷⁴² ⁷⁴³ ⁷⁴⁴ ⁷⁴⁵ ⁷⁴⁶ ⁷⁴⁷ ⁷⁴⁸ ⁷⁴⁹ ⁷⁵⁰ ⁷⁵¹ ⁷⁵² ⁷⁵³ ⁷⁵⁴ ⁷⁵⁵ ⁷⁵⁶ ⁷⁵⁷ ⁷⁵⁸ ⁷⁵⁹ ⁷⁶⁰ ⁷⁶¹ ⁷⁶² ⁷⁶³ ⁷⁶⁴ ⁷⁶⁵ ⁷⁶⁶ ⁷⁶⁷ ⁷⁶⁸ ⁷⁶⁹ ⁷⁷⁰ ⁷⁷¹ ⁷⁷² ⁷⁷³ ⁷⁷⁴ ⁷⁷⁵ ⁷⁷⁶ ⁷⁷⁷ ⁷⁷⁸ ⁷⁷⁹ ⁷⁸⁰ ⁷⁸¹ ⁷⁸² ⁷⁸³ ⁷⁸⁴ ⁷⁸⁵ ⁷⁸⁶ ⁷⁸⁷ ⁷⁸⁸ ⁷⁸⁹ ⁷⁹⁰ ⁷⁹¹ ⁷⁹² ⁷⁹³ ⁷⁹⁴ ⁷⁹⁵ ⁷⁹⁶ ⁷⁹⁷ ⁷⁹⁸ ⁷⁹⁹ ⁸⁰⁰ ⁸⁰¹ ⁸⁰² ⁸⁰³ ⁸⁰⁴ ⁸⁰⁵ ⁸⁰⁶ ⁸⁰⁷ ⁸⁰⁸ ⁸⁰⁹ ⁸¹⁰ ⁸¹¹ ⁸¹² ⁸¹³ ⁸¹⁴ ⁸¹⁵ ⁸¹⁶ ⁸¹⁷ ⁸¹⁸ ⁸¹⁹ ⁸²⁰ ⁸²¹ ⁸²² ⁸²³ ⁸²⁴ ⁸²⁵ ⁸²⁶ ⁸²⁷ ⁸²⁸ ⁸²⁹ ⁸³⁰ ⁸³¹ ⁸³² ⁸³³ ⁸³⁴ ⁸³⁵ ⁸³⁶ ⁸³⁷ ⁸³⁸ ⁸³⁹ ⁸⁴⁰ ⁸⁴¹ ⁸⁴² ⁸⁴³ ⁸⁴⁴ ⁸⁴⁵ ⁸⁴⁶ ⁸⁴⁷ ⁸⁴⁸ ⁸⁴⁹ ⁸⁵⁰ ⁸⁵¹ ⁸⁵² ⁸⁵³ ⁸⁵⁴ ⁸⁵⁵ ⁸⁵⁶ ⁸⁵⁷ ⁸⁵⁸ ⁸⁵⁹ ⁸⁶⁰ ⁸⁶¹ ⁸⁶² ⁸⁶³ ⁸⁶⁴ ⁸⁶⁵ ⁸⁶⁶ ⁸⁶⁷ ⁸⁶⁸ ⁸⁶⁹ ⁸⁷⁰ ⁸⁷¹ ⁸⁷² ⁸⁷³ ⁸⁷⁴ ⁸⁷⁵ ⁸⁷⁶ ⁸⁷⁷ ⁸⁷⁸ ⁸⁷⁹ ⁸⁸⁰ ⁸⁸¹ ⁸⁸² ⁸⁸³ ⁸⁸⁴ ⁸⁸⁵ ⁸⁸⁶ ⁸⁸⁷ ⁸⁸⁸ ⁸⁸⁹ ⁸⁹⁰ ⁸⁹¹ ⁸⁹² ⁸⁹³ ⁸⁹⁴ ⁸⁹⁵ ⁸⁹⁶ ⁸⁹⁷ ⁸⁹⁸ ⁸⁹⁹ ⁹⁰⁰ ⁹⁰¹ ⁹⁰² ⁹⁰³ ⁹⁰⁴ ⁹⁰⁵ ⁹⁰⁶ ⁹⁰⁷ ⁹⁰⁸ ⁹⁰⁹ ⁹¹⁰ ⁹¹¹ ⁹¹² ⁹¹³ ⁹¹⁴ ⁹¹⁵ ⁹¹⁶ ⁹¹⁷ ⁹¹⁸ ⁹¹⁹ ⁹²⁰ ⁹²¹ ⁹²² ⁹²³ ⁹²⁴ ⁹²⁵

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

2 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, This people say, The time is not come the time that the LORD's house should be built.

* Ezra 5. 1.

3 Then came the word of the LORD by

2. Thus speaketh the Lord of hosts, saying, This people say. Not Zerubbabel or Joshua, but this people. He says not, My people, but reproachfully this people, as, in acts, disowning Him, and so deserving to be disowned by Him. The time is not come, lit. *It is not time to come, time for the house of the Lord to be built*¹. They might yet sit still; the time for them to come was not yet; for not yet was the time for the house of the Lord to be built. Why it was not time, they did not say. The government did not help them; the original grant by Cyrus² was exhausted; the Samaritans hindered them, because they would not own them, (amid their mishmash of worship, worshipping, our Lord tells them, they ³*know not what*), as worshippers of the same God. It was a bold excuse, if they said, that the 70 years during which the temple was to lie waste, were not yet ended. The time had long since come, when, 16 years before, Cyrus had given command that the house of God should be built. The prohibition to build, under Artaxerxes or Pseudo-Smerdis, applied directly to the city and its walls, not to the temple, except so far as the temple itself, from its position, might be capable of being used as a fort, as it was in the last siege of Jerusalem. Yet in itself a building of the size of the temple, apart from outer buildings, could scarcely so be used. The prohibition did not hinder the building of stately private houses, as appears from Haggai's rebuke. The hindrances also, whatever they were, had not begun with that decree. Any how the death of Pseudo-Smerdis had now, for a year, set them free, had they had any zeal for the glory and service of God. Else Haggai had not blamed them. God, knowing that He should bend the heart of Darius, as He had that of Cyrus, requires the house to be built without the king's decree. It was built in faith, that God would bring through what He had enjoined, although outward things were as adverse now as before. And what He commanded He prospered⁴.

There was indeed a second-fulfilment of seventy years, from the destruction of the temple by Nebuchadnezzar B.C. 586, to its consecration in the 6th year of Darius B.C. 516. But this was through the wilfulness of man, prolonging the desolation decreed by God, and Jeremiah's prophecy relates to the people not to the temple.

"⁵The prophet addresses his discourse to the chiefs [in Church and state] and yet accuses directly, not their listlessness but that of the people, in order both to honour them before the people and to teach that their sins are to be blamed privately not publicly, lest their authority should be injured, and the people incited to rebel against them; and also to shew that this fault was directly that of the people, whom he reproves before their princes, that, being openly convicted before them, it might be ashamed, repent, and obey God; but that indirectly this fault touched the chiefs themselves, whose office it was to urge the people to this work of God."⁶ For seldom is the Prince free from the guilt of his subjects, as either assenting to, or winking at them, or not coercing them, though able."

¹ The first sentence being left incomplete, for, "It is not time to come to build the Lord's house."
² Ezr. iii. 7. ³ S. John iv. 22. ⁴ Ezr. v. vi.

⁵ Lap.

⁶ à Castro from Alb.

⁷ S. Jer.

⁸ S. Cyr.

Haggai the prophet saying,

4 'Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your cieled houses, and this house lie waste?

5 Now therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts; †⁸ Consider your ways.

* Lam. 3. 40. ver. 7.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

¹ 2 Sam. 7. 2.
Ps. 132. 3.
&c.
† Heb.
Set your heart on your ways.

Since also Christians are the temple of God, all this prophecy of Haggai is applicable to them. "⁷When thou seest one who has lapsed thinking and preparing to build through chastity the temple which he had before destroyed through passion, and yet delaying day by day, say to him, 'Truly thou also art of the people of the captivity, and sayest, The time is not yet come for building the house of the Lord.' Whoso has once settled to restore the temple of God, to him every time is suited for building, and the prince, Satan, cannot hinder, nor the enemies around. As soon as being thyself converted, thou callest upon the name of the Lord, He will say, Behold Me.'" "⁸To him who willet to do right, the time is always present; the good and right-minded have power to fulfil what is to the glory of God, in every time and place."

3. And the word of the Lord came. "⁵Before, he prophesied nothing, but only recited the saying of the people; now he refutes it in his prophecy, and repeats, again and again, that he says this not of himself, but from the mind and mouth of God." It is characteristic of Haggai to inculcate thus frequently, that his words are not his own, but the words of God. Yet "⁶the prophets, both in their threats and prophecies, repeat again and again, Thus saith the Lord, teaching us, how we should prize the word of God, hang upon it, have it ever in our mouth, reverence, ruminate on, utter, praise it, make it our continual delight."

4. Is it time for you, [you⁹], being what you are, the creatures of God, *to dwell in your cieled houses*¹⁰, more emphatically, in your houses, and those cieled, probably with costly woods, such as cedar¹¹. But where then was the excuse of want of means? They imitated, in their alleged poverty, what is spoken of as magnificent in their old kings, Solomon and Shallum, but not having, as Solomon first did, ¹²*covered the house of God with beams and rows of cedar*. "⁷Will ye dwell in houses artificially adorned, not so much for use as for delight, and shall My dwelling-place, wherein was the Holy of holies, and the Cherubim, and the table of shewbread, be bestreamed with rains, desolated in solitude, scorched by the sun?"

"¹³With these words carnal Christians are reproved, who have no glow of zeal for God, but are full of self-love, and so make no effort to repair, build, or strengthen the material temples of Christ, and houses assigned to His worship, when aged, ruinous, decaying or destroyed, but build for themselves curious, voluptuous, superfluous dwellings. In these the love of Christ gloweth not; these Isaiah threatneth, ¹⁴*Woe to you who join house to house and field to field, and regard not the work of the Lord!*"

To David and Solomon the building of God's temple was their heart's desire; to early Christian Emperors, to the ages of faith, the building of Churches; now mostly, owners of lands build houses for this world's profit, and leave it to the few to build in view of eternity, and for the glory of God.

5. And now, thus saith the Lord of Hosts; Consider, [lit.

⁹ לכם אתם, the pers. pron. repeated emphatically.

¹⁰ The force of פתלים in appos. to בתים.
Jer. xxii. 14.

¹² I Kgs vi. 9. רסן

¹³ Dion.

¹¹ 1 Kgs vii. 6, 7.
¹⁴ Is. v. 8, 12.

Before CHRIST
cir. 520.

6 Ye have ^b sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and ⁱ he that

^b Deut. 28, 38.
ⁱ Hos. 4. 10.
Mic. 6. 14,
15. ch. 2. 16.
ⁱ Zech. 8. 10.

set your heart upon] your ways, what they had been doing, what they were doing, and what those doings had led to, and would lead to. This is ever present to the mind of the prophets, as speaking God's words, that our acts are not only ways in which we go, each day of life being a continuance of the day before; but that they are ways which lead somewhat whither in God's Providence and His justice; to some end of the way, good or bad. So God says by Jeremiah, ¹ I set before you the way of life and the way of death; and David, ² Thou wilt shew me the path of life, where it follows, In Thy Presence is the fulness of joy and at Thy Right Hand there are pleasures for evermore; and Solomon, ³ Reproofs of instruction are the way of life; and, he is in ⁴ the way of life who keepeth instruction; and he who forsaketh rebuke, erreth; and, ⁵ The way of life is above to the wise, that he may depart from hell beneath; and of the adulterous woman, ⁶ Her house are the ways of hell, going down to the chambers of death; and ⁷ her feet go down unto death; her steps take hold on hell; lest thou shouldest ponder the path of life. Again, ⁸ There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, and the end thereof are the ways of death; and contrariwise, ⁹ The path of the righteous is a shining light, shining more and more until the midday. ¹⁰ The ways of darkness are the ways which end in darkness; and when Isaiah says, ¹¹ The way of peace hast thou not known, he adds, whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace. They who choose not peace for their way, shall not find peace in and for their end.

On these your ways, Haggai says, set your hearts, not thinking of them lightly, nor giving a passing thought to them, but fixing your minds upon them; as God says to Satan, ¹² Hast thou set thy heart on My servant Job? and God is said to set His eye or His face upon man for good ¹³ or for evil ¹⁴. He speaks also, not of setting the mind, applying the understanding, giving the thoughts, but of setting the heart, as the seat of the affections. It is not a dry weighing of the temporal results of their ways, but a loving dwelling upon them; for repentance without love is but the gnawing of remorse.

¹⁵ Set your heart on your ways; i.e., your affections, thoughts, works, so as to be circumspect in all things; as the Apostle says, ¹⁶ Do nothing without forethought, i.e., without previous judgement of reason; and Solomon, ¹⁷ Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee; and the son of Sirach, ¹⁸ Son, do nothing without counsel and when thou hast done it thou wilt not repent. For since, according to a probable proposition, nothing in human acts is indifferent, i.e., involving neither good nor ill deserts, they who do not thus set their hearts upon their ways, do they not daily incur well-nigh countless sins, in thought, word, desire, deed, yea and by omission of duties? Such are all fearless persons who heed not to fulfil what is written, ¹⁹ Keep your heart with all watchfulness.

²⁰ He sows much to his own heart, but brings in little, who by reading and hearing knows much of the heavenly commands, but by negligence in deeds bears little fruit. He

¹ Jer. xxi. 8. ² Ps. xvi. 11. ³ Pr. vi. 23. ⁴ Ib. x. 17.
⁵ Ib. xv. 24. ⁶ Ib. vii. 27. ⁷ Ib. v. 5, 6. ⁸ Ib. xiv. 12. xvi. 25.
⁹ Ib. iv. 18. ¹⁰ Ib. ii. 13. ¹¹ Is. lix. 8. ¹² Job i. 8.
¹³ Jer. xxiv. 6. ¹⁴ Ib. xxi. 10. ¹⁵ Dion.
¹⁶ 1 Tim. v. 21. ¹⁷ Pr. iv. 25. ¹⁸ Ecclus. xxxii. 19. Vulg.

earneth wages earneth wages to put it into a bag † with holes.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

7 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Consider your ways.

† Heb.
pierced through.

eats and is not satisfied, who, hearing the words of God, coveteth the gains or glory of the world. Well is he said not to be satisfied, who eateth one thing, hungereth after another. He drinks and is not inebriated, who inclineth his ear to the voice of preaching, but changeth not his mind. For through inebriation the mind of those who drink is changed. He then who is devoted to the knowledge of God's word, yet still desireth to gain the things of the world, drinks and is not inebriated. For were he inebriated, no doubt he would have changed his mind and no longer seek earthly things, or love the vain and passing things which he had loved. For the Psalmist says of the elect, ²¹ they shall be inebriated with the richness of Thy house, because they shall be filled with such love of Almighty God, that, their mind being changed, they seem to be strangers to themselves, fulfilling what is written, ²² If any will come after Me, let him deny himself.

6. Ye have sown much. The prophet expresses the habitualness of these visitations by a vivid present. He marks no time and so expresses the more vividly that it was at all times. It is one continually present evil. Ye have sown much and there is a bringing in little; there is eating and not to satisfy; there is drinking and not to exhilarate; there is clothing and not to be warm²³. It is not for the one or the other years, as, since the first year of Darius Hystaspis; it is one continued visitation, coordinate with one continued negligence. As long as the sin lasted, so long the punishment. The visitation itself was twofold; impoverished harvests, so as to supply less sustenance; and various indisposition of the frame, so that what would, by God's appointment in nature, satisfy, gladden, warm, failed of its effect. And he that laboureth for hire, gaineth himself hire into a bag full of holes [lit. perforated]. The labour pictured is not only fruitless, but wearisome and vexing. There is a seeming result of all the labour, something to allure hopes; but forthwith it is gone. The heathen assigned a like baffling of hope as one of the punishments of hell. ²⁴ Better and wiser to seek to be blessed by God, Who bestoweth on us all things. And this will readily come to those who choose to be of the same mind with Him and prefer what is for His glory to their own. For so saith the Saviour Himself to us, ²⁵ Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.

²⁶ He loses good deeds by evil acts, who takes account of his good works, which he has before his eyes, and forgets the faults which creep in between; or who, after what is good, returns to what is vain and evil." ²⁷ Money is seen in the pierced bag, when it is cast in, but when it is lost, it is not seen. They then who look how much they give, but do not weigh how much they gain wrongly, cast their rewards into a pierced bag. Looking to the Hope of their confidence they bring them together; not looking, they lose them."

¹⁵ They lose the fruit of their labour, by not persevering
¹⁹ Pr. iv. 23. ²⁰ S. Greg. in Ezek. Hom. i. 10. n. 7. Opp. i. 1266.
²¹ Ps. xxxvi. 8. ²² S. Matt. xvi. 24.
²³ ܠܚܝܬ. The ܠ is not pleonastic, but from the impersonal ܠ ܡܢ 1 Kgs i. 1, 2.
Eccl. iv. 11. (bis). ²⁴ S. Cyr. ²⁵ S. Matt. vi. 33.
²⁶ Lap. ²⁷ S. Greg. Reg. Past. iii. 21. fin. Opp. ii. 68.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

8 Go up to the mountain, and bring wood, and build the house; and I will take pleasure in it, and I will be glorified, saith the LORD.

^k ch. 2. 16.

9 ^k Ye looked for much, and, lo, it came to the end, or by seeking human praise, or by vainglory within, not keeping spiritual riches under the guardianship of humility. Such are vain and unprofitable men, of whom the Saviour saith, ¹ Verily I say unto you, they have their reward."

8. Go up into the mountain. Not Mount Lebanon, whence the cedars had been brought for the first temple; whence also Zerubbabel and Joshua had procured some out of Cyrus' grant², at the first return from the captivity. They were not required to buy, expend, but simply to give their own labour. They were themselves to go up to the mountain, i.e. the mountainous country where the trees grew, and bring them. So, in order to keep the feast of tabernacles, Ezra made a proclamation³ in all their cities and in Jerusalem, go ye up to the mountain and bring leafy branches of vines, olives, myrtles, palms. The palms, any how, were timber. God required not goodly stones, such as had been already used, and such as hereafter, in the temple which was built, were the admiration even of disciples of Jesus⁴, but which were, for the wickedness of those who rejected their Saviour, not to be left, one stone upon another. He required not costly gifts, but the heart. The neglect to build the temple was neglect of Himself, Who ought to be worshipped there. His worship sanctified the offering; offerings were acceptable, only if made with a free heart.

And I will have pleasure in it. God, Who has declared that He has no ⁵ pleasure in thousands of runs, or ten thousands of rivers of oil, had delight in ⁶ them that feared Him, that are *upright in their way*⁷, that *deal truly*⁸, in the prayer of the upright⁹; and so in the temple too, when it should be built to His glory.

*And will be glorified*¹⁰. God is glorified in man, when man serves Him; in Himself, when He manifests aught of His greatness; in His great doings to His people¹¹, as also in the chastisement of those who disobey Him¹². God allows that glory, which shines ineffably throughout His creation, to be obscured here through man's disobedience, to shine forth anew on his renewed obedience. The glory of God, as it is the end of the creation, so is it His creature's supreme bliss. When God is really glorified, then can He shew forth His glory, by His grace and acceptance. ¹³ The glory of God is our glory. The more sweetly God is glorified, the more it profits us: yet not our profit, but the glory of God is itself our end; so the prophet closes in that which is our end, God will be glorified.

¹⁴ Good then and well-pleasing to God is zeal in fulfilling whatever may appear necessary for the good condition of the Church and its building-up, collecting the most useful

¹ S. Matt. vi. 2. ² Ezr. iii. 7. ³ Neh. viii. 15. ⁴ S. Matt. xxiv. 1.
⁵ Mic. vi. 7. ⁶ Ps. cxlvii. 11.

⁷ Pr. xi. 20. ⁸ Ib. xii. 22. ⁹ Ib. xv. 8.

¹⁰ There is no ground for the Kri וְיִתְקַדֵּשׁ, and so should I be glorified or honoured. It is a positive promise that God would shew forth His glory, as in וְיִתְקַדֵּשׁ immediately before. God says, "do this, and I will do that." Comp. Zech. i. 3. Of 65 instances which Böttcher (Lehrb. n. 965. c.) gives of הָיָה, after the imperative, 61 relate to some wish of the human agent; 4 only relate to God. Deut. v. 31, "stand here by Me, וְהָיָה, that I may speak unto thee;" Is. xli. 22, 23. irony, including men, "that we may consider and know; that we may know;" Ps. l. 7. "hear Me and I would speak, and testify;" Mal. iii. 7. "Return to Me and I would return unto you;" the return of the creature being a condition that God could return to it. On the other hand the Ch. Lam. v. 21, to little; and when ye brought it home, I did || blow upon it. Why? saith the LORD of hosts. Because of mine house that is || waste, and ye run every man unto his own house.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

¹ ch. 2. 17.
|| Or, blow
it away.

materials, the spiritual principles in inspired Scripture, whereby he may secure and ground the conception of God, and may shew that the way of the Incarnation was well-ordered, and may collect what appertains to accurate knowledge of spiritual erudition and moral goodness. Nay, each of us may be thought of, as the temple and house of God. For Christ dwelleth in us by the Spirit, and we are temples of the living God, according to the Scripture¹⁵. Let each then build up his own heart by right faith, having the Saviour as the precious foundation. And let him add thereto other materials, obedience, readiness for anything, courage, endurance, continence. So being framed together by that which every joint supplieth, shall we become *a holy temple, a habitation of God through the Spirit*¹⁶. But those who are slow to faith, or who believe but are sluggish in shaking off passions and sins and worldly pleasure, thereby cry out in a manner, The time is not come to build the house of the Lord."

9. Ye looked, lit. a looking; as though he said, it has all been one looking, for much, for increase, the result of all sowing, in the way of nature: and behold it came to little, i.e. less than was sown; as Isaiah denounced to them of old by God's word, ¹⁷ the seed of a homer shall yield an ephah, i.e. one tenth of what was sown. And ye brought it home, and I blew upon it, so as to disperse it, as, not the wheat, but the chaff is blown before the wind. This, in whatever way it came to pass, was a further chastisement of God. The little seed which they brought in lessened through decay or waste. Why? saith the Lord of hosts. God asks by his prophet, what He asks in the awakened conscience. ¹⁸ God with rebukes chastens man for sin. Conscience, when alive, confesses for what sin; or it asks itself, if memory does not supply the special sin. Unawakened, it murmurs about the excess of rain, the drought, the blight, the mildew, and asks, not itself, why, in God's Providence, these inflictions came in these years? They felt doubtless the sterility in contrast with the exceeding prolificness of Babylonia¹⁹, as they contrasted the *light bread*²⁰, the manna, with ²¹ the plenteousness of Egypt. They ascribed probably their meagre crops (as we mostly do) to mere natural causes, perhaps to the long neglect of the land during the captivity. God forces the question upon their consciences, in that Haggai asks it in His Name, in Whose hands all powers stand, saith the Lord of hosts. They have not to talk it over among themselves, but to answer Almighty God, why? That why? strikes into the inmost depths of conscience!

Because of My house which is waste, and ye run lit. are running, all the while, *each to his own house*²². They were absorbed in their material interests, and had no time for those "Turn Thou us unto Thee, וְשׁוּבָה, and we will return" expresses the absolute will to return; Ruth iv. 4, "tell me, וְאָמַר, and I shall know," the certainty of the knowledge, upon which Boaz would act.

¹¹ Is. xxvi. 15, xliv. 23, lx. 21, lxi. 3. ¹² Ex. xiv. 4. Ezek. xxviii. 22.

¹³ S. Aug. Sermon. 380, n. 6.

¹⁴ S. Cyr. ¹⁵ 2 Cor. vi. 16. ¹⁶ Eph. iv. 16, ii. 21, 22.

¹⁷ Is. v. 10. ¹⁸ Ps. xxxix. 11. ¹⁹ Herod. i. 193. Theophr. Hist. Plant.

viii. 7. Berosus Fr. 1. Strabo xvi. 1. 14. Pliny Nat. Hist. xviii. 17. Amm. Marc. xxiv. 9.

²⁰ Nu. xxi. 5. ²¹ Ib. xi. 5.

²² מָרַח with ל is used of the direction whither a man goes; if used of an action, hasting to do it; as runneth to evil (Is. lix. 7, Pr. i. 16.) Here לִמְנוּחָיו cannot be "on account of his house," but to it, viz. for his business there.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

10 Therefore ^m the heaven over you is stayed from dew, and the earth is stayed from her fruit.

11 And I ⁿ called for a drought upon the land, and upon the mountains, and upon the corn, and upon the new wine, and upon the oil, and upon that which the ground bringeth forth, and upon men, and upon cattle, and ^o upon all the labour of the hands.

of God. When the question was of God's house, they stir not from the spot; when it is of their own concerns, they run. Our Lord says, ¹ Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. Man reverses this, seeks his own things first, and God withholds His blessing.

² This comes true of those who prefer their own conveniences to God's honour, who do not thoroughly uproot self-love, whose penitence and devotion are shewn to be unstable; for on a slight temptation they are overcome. Such are they who are bold, self-pleasing, wise and great in their own eyes, who do not ground their conversation on true and solid humility."

³ To those who are slow to fulfil what is for the glory of God, and the things whereby His house, the Church, is firmly stayed, neither the heavenly dew cometh, which enricheth hearts and minds, nor the fruitfulness of the earth; i. e. right action; not food nor wine nor use of oil. But they will be ever strengthless and joyless, unenriched by spiritual oil, and remain without taste or participation of the blessing through Christ."

10. Therefore, for you, on your account ⁴; for your sins ⁵, He points out the moral cause of the drought, whereas men think of this or that cause of the variations of the seasons, and we, e. g. take into our mouths Scripture-words, as murrain of cattle, and the like, and think of nothing less than why it was sent, or Who sent it. Haggai directs the mind to the higher Cause, that as they withheld their service from God, so, on their account and by His will, His creatures withheld ⁶ their service from them.

11. And I called for a drought upon the land: God called to the people and they would not hear. It is His ever-repeated complaint to them. I called unto you, and ye would not hear. He called to His inanimate creatures to punish them, and they obeyed. So Elisha tells the woman, whose son he had restored to life, ⁷ The Lord hath called to the famine, and it shall also come to the land seven years.

And upon men, in that the drought was oppressive to man. The Prophet may also allude to the other meaning of the word, "waste," "desolation." They had left the house of the Lord ⁸ waste, therefore God called for waste, desolation, upon them.

12. Then Zerubbabel, and all the remnant of the people,

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.
^p Ezra 5. 2.

12 ¶ ^p Then Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, with all the remnant of the people, obeyed the voice of the Lord their God, and the words of Haggai the prophet, as the Lord their God had sent him, and the people did fear before the Lord,

13 Then spake Haggai the Lord's messenger in the Lord's message unto the peonot, "the rest of people" but "the remnant ⁹," those who remained over from the captivity, the fragment of the two tribes, which returned to their own land, hearkened unto the voice of the Lord. This was the beginning of a conversion. In this one thing they began to do, what, all along, in their history, and most in their decay before the captivity they refused to do—obey God's word. So God sums up their history, by Jeremiah, ¹⁰ I spake unto thee in thy prosperity, thou saidst, I will not hear. This is thy way from thy youth, that thou hearkenedst not unto My voice. Zephaniah still more briefly, ¹¹ she hearkened not unto [any] voice. Now in reference, it seems, to that account of their disobedience, Haggai says, using the self-same formula, ¹² they hearkened unto the voice of the Lord, ¹³ according to the words of Haggai. They obeyed, not vaguely, or partly, but exactly, according to the words which the messenger of God spake.

And they feared the Lord. ¹⁴ "Certainly the presence of the Divine Majesty is to be feared with great reverence." ¹⁵ "The fear of punishment at times transports the mind to what is better, and the infliction of sorrows harmonises the mind to the fear of God; and that of the Proverbs comes true, ¹⁶ He that feareth the Lord shall be recompensed, and ¹⁷ the fear of the Lord tendeth to life; and Wisdom, ¹⁸ The fear of the Lord is honour and glory, and ¹⁹ the fear of the Lord shall rejoice the heart, and giveth joy and gladness and a long life. See how gently and beseechingly God smites us."

²⁰ See how the lovingkindness of God forthwith goes along with all changes for the better. For Almighty God changes along with those who will to repent, and promises that He will be with them; which what can equal? For when God is with us, all harm will depart from us, all good come in to us."

13. And Haggai, the Lord's messenger. Malachi, whose own name was framed to express that he was the Lord's messenger, and Haggai alone use the title, as the title of a prophet; perhaps as forerunners of the great prophet whom Malachi announced. Malachi also speaks of the priest, as ¹⁸ the messenger of the Lord of hosts, and prophecies of John Baptist as ¹⁹ the messenger of the Lord, who should go before His face. Haggai, as he throughout repeats that his words were God's words, frames a new word ²⁰, to express, in the language of the New Testament ²¹; that he had an embassy from God; in the Lord's message.

¹ S. Matt. vi. 33. ² Dion. ³ S. Cyr. ⁴ As in Ps. xlv. 43. ⁵ Jon. ⁶ כל being everywhere transitive, and in this V. also, is probably transitive here. ⁷ 2 Kgs viii. 1. ⁸ חרב, Hagg. i. 4, 9; חרב, i. 11. ⁹ This is the almost uniform usage of שְׁאֵרִית, "remnant which remains over," mostly after the rest have been destroyed or carried captive. See above on Am. i. 8; add, the remnant of Judah, Jer. xl. 11, xlii. 19, xliii. 5, xlv. 12, 14, of Israel, Zeph. iii. 13, Ez. xi. 13; whole remnant of the people, Jer. xli. 10, 16; of Ashdod, Jer. xxv. 20; of the coast of Caphtor, Ib. xlvii. 4; of their valley, Ib. 5; of the coast of the sea, Ez. xxv. 16; of the nations, Ib. xxxvi. 3, 4, 5; of the land, ארֶץ, Is. xv. 9; of My people, Zeph.

ii. 9; of His heritage, Mi. vii. 18; thy remnant, Is. xiv. 30, Ez. v. 10; its remnant, Is. xlv. 17; their remnant, Jer. xv. 9; and of those who had actually returned, Zech. viii. 6, 11, 12. In two places in which it signifies "the rest" (Jer. xxxix. 3, 1 Chr. xii. 33.) it is at least the rest of a whole, already mentioned. A third only, Neh. vii. 72, is uncertain. The word is used almost exclusively by the prophets. ¹⁰ Jer. xxii. 21. ¹¹ לֹא שָׁמְעָה בְּקוֹלִי See Introd. to Zeph. p. 442. ¹² רָשָׁע בְּקוֹלִי ¹³ This is the only place in which רָשָׁע is used. ¹⁴ Pr. xiii. 13. ¹⁵ Ib. xix. 23. ¹⁶ Ecclus. i. 11. ¹⁷ Ib. ii. 7. ¹⁸ Mal. ii. 7. ¹⁹ Ib. iii. 1. ²⁰ מְלָאכָה. ²¹ 2 Cor. v. 20.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

^a Matt. 28. 20.
Rom. 8. 31.
^r 2 Chr. 36. 22.
Ezra 1. 1.
^s ch. 2. 21.

^t Ezra 5. 2, 8.

ple, saying, ^a I am with you, saith the Lord. 14 And ^r the Lord stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, ^a governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; ^t and they came and did work in the house of the Lord of hosts, their God.

15 In the four and twentieth day of the sixth month, in the second year of Darius the king.

CHAPTER II.

1 He encourageth the people to the work, by promise

I am with you. All the needs and longings of the creature are summed up in those two words, I with-you. "Who art Thou and who am I? Thou, He Who Is; I, he who am not;" nothing, yea worse than nothing. Yet if ¹ God be for us, S. Paul asks, who can be against us? Our Blessed Lord's parting promise to the Apostles, and in them to the Church, was, ² Lo I am with you always, even to the end of the world. The all-containing assurance goes beyond any particular promise of aid, as, ³ I will help you, and will protect you, so that your building shall have its completion. This is one fruit of it; ⁴ since I am in the midst of you, no one shall be able to hinder your building. But, more widely, the words bespeak His presence in love, Who knows all our needs, and is Almighty to support and save us in all. So David says, ⁵ when I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me: and God says by another, ⁶ I will be with him in trouble, and by Isaiah, ⁷ When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee.

14. And the Lord stirred up the spirit. The words are used of any strong impulse from God to fulfil His will, whether in those who execute His will unknowingly as Pul⁸, to carry off the trans-Jordanic tribes, or the Philistines and Arabians against Jehoram⁹, or the Medes against Babylon¹⁰; or knowingly, as of Cyrus to restore God's people and rebuild the temple¹¹, or of the people themselves to return¹². ⁴ The spirit of Zerubbabel and the spirit of Joshua were stirred, that the government and priesthood may build the temple of God: the spirit of the people too, which before was asleep in them; not the body, not the soul, but the spirit, which knoweth best how to build the temple of God. ¹³ The Holy Spirit is stirred up in us, that we should enter the house of the Lord, and do the works of the Lord.

¹⁴ *Again, observe that they did not set themselves to choose to do what should please God, before He was with them and stirred up their spirit. We shall know hence also, that although one choose zealously to do good and be in earnest therein, yet he will accomplish nothing, unless God be with him, raising him up to dare, and sharpening him to endure, and removing all torpor. For so the wondrous Paul says of those entrusted with the divine preaching, ¹⁵ I laboured more abundantly than they all, yet added very wisely, yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me, and the Saviour Himself saith to the holy Apostles, ¹⁶ *Without Me of greater glory to the second temple than was in the first. 10 In the type of holy things and unclean he sheweth their sins hindered the work. 20 God's promise to Zerubbabel.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

IN the seventh month, in the one and twentieth day of the month, came the word of the Lord [†] by the prophet Haggai, [†] Heb. by the hand of, saying,

2 Speak now to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and to the residue of the people, saying,

3 ^a Who is left among you that saw this ^a Ezra 3. 12.

ye can do nothing. For He is our desire, He, our courage to any good work; He our strength, and, if He is with us, we shall do well, ¹⁷ building ourselves to a holy temple, a habitation of God in the Spirit; if He depart and withdraws, how should any doubt, that we should fail, overcome by sluggishness and want of courage?"

15. In the four and twentieth day of the month. The interval of twenty three days must have been spent in preparation, since the message came on the first of the month, and the obedience was immediate.

ii. 1. In the seventh month, in the one and twentieth day of the month. This was the seventh day of the feast of tabernacles¹⁸, and its close. The eighth day was to be a sabbath, with its ¹⁹ holy convocation, but the commemorative feast, the dwelling in booths, in memory of God's bringing them out of Egypt, was to last seven days. The close then of this feast could not but revive their sadness at the glories of their first deliverance by God's mighty hand and outstretched arm, and their present fewness and poverty. This depression could not but bring with it heavy thoughts about the work, in which they were, in obedience to God, engaged; and that, all the more, since Isaiah and Ezekiel had prophesied of the glories of the Christian Church under the symbol of the temple. This despondency Haggai is sent to relieve, owning plainly the reality of its present grounds, but renewing, on God's part, the pledge of the glories of this second temple, which should be thereafter.

3. Who is left among you? The question implies that there were those among them, who had seen the first house in its glory, yet but few. When the foundations of the first temple were laid, there were many. ²⁰ Many of the priests and Levites and chief of the fathers, ancient men, that had seen the first house, when the foundations of this house were laid before their eyes, wept with a loud voice. Fifty nine years had elapsed from the destruction of the temple in the eleventh year of Zedekiah to the first of Cyrus; so that old men of seventy years had seen the first temple, when themselves eleven years old. In this second of Darius seventy years had passed, so that those of 78 or 80 years might still well remember it. Ezra's father, Seraiah, was slain in the eleventh year of Zedekiah; so he must have been born at latest a few months later; yet he lived to the second of Artaxerxes.

¹ Rom. viii. 31.

² S. Matt. xxviii. 20.

³ Dion.

⁴ S. Jer.

⁵ Ps. xxiii. 4.

⁶ Ib. xci. 15.

⁷ Is. xliii. 2.

⁸ 1 Chr. v. 26.

⁹ 2 Chr. xxi. 16.

¹⁰ Jer. li. 11.

¹¹ Ezr. i. 1.

¹² Ib. 5.

¹³ ap. Lap.

¹⁷ Eph. ii. 21, 22.

¹⁴ S. Cyr.

¹⁵ 1 Cor. xv. 11.

¹⁶ Lev. xxiii. 34, 36, 40-42.

²⁰ Ezr. iii. 12.

¹⁸ S. John xv. 5.

¹⁹ Ib. 36, 39.

Before CHRIST
cir. 520.

^b Zech. 4. 10.

^c Zech. 8. 9.

house in her first glory? and how do ye see it now? ^b is it not in your eyes in comparison of it as nothing?

4 Yet now ^c be strong, O Zerubbabel, saith the LORD; and be strong, O Joshua, son of Josedeeh, the high priest; and be strong, all ye people of the land, saith the LORD, and work: for I am with you, saith the LORD of hosts:

5 ^d According to the word that I covenanted-^d Ex. 29. 45, 46. ed with you when ye came out of Egypt, so ^e my spirit remaineth among you: fear ye not. ^e Neh. 9. 20. Isai. 63. 11.

Is not such as it is¹, as nothing? Besides the richness of the sculptures in the former temple, everything, which admitted of it, was overlaid with gold; ² Solomon overlaid the whole house with gold, until he had finished all the house, the whole altar by the oracle, the two cherubim, the floor of the house, the doors of the holy of holies and the ornaments of it, the cherubims thereon and the palm trees he covered with gold fitted upon the carved work; ³ the altar of gold and the table of gold, whereupon the shewbread was, the ten candlesticks of pure gold, with the flowers and the lamps and the tongs of gold, the bowls, the snuffers and the basins and the spoons and the censers of pure gold, and hinges of pure gold for all the doors of the temple. ⁴ The porch that was in the front of the house, twenty cubits broad and 120 cubits high, was overlaid within with pure gold; the house glistened with precious stones; and the gold (it is added) was gold of Parvaïm, a land distant of course and unknown to us. Six hundred talents of gold (about £4,320,000⁵) were employed in overlaying the Holy of holies. The upper chambers were also of gold; the weight of the nails was fifty shekels of gold.

4. Yet now be strong—and work. They are the words with which David exhorted Solomon his son to be earnest and to persevere in the building of the first temple. ⁶ Take heed now, for the Lord hath chosen thee to build an house for the sanctuary: be strong and do. ⁷ Be strong and of good courage, and do. This combination of words occurs once only elsewhere⁸, in Jehoshaphat's exhortation to the ⁹ Levites and priests and chiefs of the fathers of Israel, whom he had set as judges in Jerusalem. Haggai seems then to have adopted the words, with the purpose of suggesting to the down-hearted people, that there was need of the like exhortation, in view of the building of the former temple, whose relative glory so depressed them. The word be strong (elsewhere rendered, be of good courage) occurs commonly in exhortations to persevere and hold fast, amid whatever obstacles¹⁰.

5. The word which I covenanted. The words stand more forcibly, because abruptly¹¹. It is an exclamation which cannot be forced into any grammatical relation with the preceding. The more exact idiom would have been "Remember," "take to heart." But the Prophet points to it the more energetically, because he casts it, as it were, into the midst, not bound up with any one verb. This would be the rather done in speaking to the people, as David to his followers¹², That which the Lord hath given us and hath preserved us and given the company against us into our hands! i. e. "Would you deal thus with it?" The abrupt form rejects it as shocking. So here, The word which I covenanted with you, i. e. this, I will be with you, was the central all-containing promise, to which God pledged Himself when He brought them out of Egypt. He speaks to them as being one with those who came up out of Egypt, as if they were the very persons. The Church, ever varying in the individuals of whom it is composed, is, throughout all ages, in God's sight, one; His promises to the fathers are made to the children in them. So the Psalmist says, There (at the dividing of the Red Sea and the Jordan) do we rejoice in Him, as if present there; and our Lord promises to the Apostles, ¹³ I am with you always even to the end of the world, by an ever-present Presence with them and His Church founded by them in Him.

My Spirit abideth among you, as the Psalmist says, ¹⁴ they [the heavens] perish and Thou abidest; ¹⁵ The counsel of the Lord standeth for ever; ¹⁶ His righteousness endureth for ever. The Spirit of God is God the Holy Ghost, with His manifold gifts. Where He is, is all good. As the soul is in the body, so God the Holy Ghost is in the Church, Himself its life, and bestowing on all and each every good gift, as each and all have need. As S. Paul says of the Church of Christ; ¹⁷ There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit; and there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God, Who worketh all in all. All these worketh one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as He will. But above and beyond all gifts He is present as the Spirit of holiness and love, making the Church and those in whom He individually dwells, acceptable to God. Special applications, such as the Spirit of wisdom and might; a spirit such as He gave to Moses to judge His people¹⁸; the spirit of prophecy¹⁹; or the spirit given to Bezaleel and Aholiab for the work of the sanctuary²⁰—these recognise in detail the one great truth, work;" b) Haggai is exhorting them to this one work of rebuilding the temple, not to obedience to the law generally; c) he speaks of what God had promised them, not of their duties to God. 2) To supply זכור "remember," or any like word, is arbitrary, unless it means that we should fill up the meaning by some such word. 3) To construe, "Remember the word which I covenanted with you, fear not" (Ew.); a) gives undue prominence to the absence of fear, which was one consequence of God's covenant that He would be their God, they His people, not the covenant itself; b) Fear not, is elsewhere the counterpart and supplement of the exhortation, "be strong," 2 Chr. xxv. 8, 1s. xxxv. 41. c) In Ex. xx. 20, (referred to by Ew.) "fear not" is only Moses' exhortation on occasion of the terrors of the manifestation of God on Mt. Sinai. 4) It is doubly improbable, that it, as well as דבר, should be the subject of the sing. זכור. The דבר and the דבר seem to be different constructions, in order to prevent this. Butcher terms it, "an acc. abs. of the object," and cites Deut. xi. 2, Ezek. xliii. 7, xlvii. 17-19, ("unless one correct דבר for דבר") Zech. viii. 17. (Lehrb. n. 516. e.)

¹² 1 Sam. xxx. 23, which Ewald compares, Lehrb. n. 329. a p. 811, ed. 8, and in his Die Proph. iii. 183. Only he, not very intelligibly, makes it a sort of oath, By the word, By that which the Lord hath given us. But he suggests the like broken sentence Zech. vii. 7.

¹³ S. Matt. xxviii. 20. ¹⁴ Ps. cii. 27. ¹⁵ Ib. xxxiii. 11. ¹⁶ Ib. cxi. 3. ¹⁷ 1 Cor. xii. 4, 6, 11.

¹⁸ Alb. quoting Num. xi. 25. ¹⁹ Jon. "My prophets shall teach you, fear not." ²⁰ Included by Lap.

¹ Such is probably the force of ככדו. Comp. ככד ככד [Gen. xlv. 18] "one such as thou is like Pharaoh," and perhaps ככדו, Ex. ix. 18, and ככדו, 2 Sam. ix. 8. דבר נא (which Ewald says older writers would have used) would have been weaker.

² 1 Kgs vi. 22, 28, 30, 32, 35.

³ Ib. vii. 48-50.

⁴ 2 Chr. iii. 4-9.

⁵ Reckoning the silver shekel at 2s., the talent of silver, = 3000 shekels, would be £300; reckoning the gold talent, as, in weight, double the silver talent, and the relation of gold to silver as 12 to 1, (H. W. Poole in Smith Bibl. Dict. p. 1734, 1735.) the gold talent would be £300 × 24, = £7,200; and 600 gold talents £4,320,000. This would not be so much as Solomon employed yearly, 666 talents = £4,795,200.

⁶ 1 Chr. xxviii. 10.

⁷ Ib. 20.

⁸ 2 Chr. xix. 11.

⁹ Ib. 8.

¹⁰ Gesenius (v. חזק) refers to the following: 2 Sam. x. 12, (Joab to Abishai in the war with the Syrians); 2 Chr. xxv. 8, (the prophet to Amaziah); 2 Sam. xiii. 28 (Absalom to his servants about the murder of Amnon); Ps. xxvii. 14, xxxi. 25, (with the corresponding promise that God would establish their hearts); Is. xli. 6, (in mockery of the laborious process of making an idol). It occurs also, supported by חזק Jos. i. 6, 7, 9, 18 (God's words to Joshua); Deut. xxxi. 7, (Moses to Joshua); 1b. 6, (to Israel); Josh. x. 25 (Joshua to the people); 2 Chr. xxxii. 7 (Hezekiah to the people); חזק itself is repeated Dan. x. 19. חזק חזק.

¹¹ Less probable seems to me, 1) To make דבר depend on עזב in v. 4, as Kim. A. E. a) on account of the idiom in 1 Chr., in which, as here, עזב stands absolutely, "do

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

6 For thus saith the Lord of hosts; 'Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake † ver. 21. Heb. 12. 26. ‡ Joel 3. 16.

that all good, all wisdom, from least to greatest, comes from God the Holy Ghost; though one by one they would exclude more truth than they each contain.

6. Yet once, it is a little while. This, the rendering of S. Paul to the Hebrews, is alone grammatical¹. Yet once. By the word yet he looks back to the first great shaking of the moral world, when God's revelation by Moses and to His people broke upon the darkness of the pagan world, to be a monument against heathen error till Christ should come; once looks on, and conveys that God would again shake the world, but once only, under the one dispensation of the Gospel, which should endure to the end.

It is a little while. "The 517 years, which were to elapse to the birth of Christ, are called a little time, because to the prophets, ascending in heart to God and the eternity of God, all times, like all things of this world, seem, as they are, only a little thing, yea a mere point;" which has neither length nor breadth. So S. John calls the time of the new law, the last hour; ³ Little children, it is the last hour. It was little also in respect to the time, which had elapsed from the fall of Adam, upon which God promised the Saviour Christ⁴; little also in respect to the Christian law, which has now lasted above 1800 years, and the time of the end does not seem yet nigh.

I will shake the heavens and the earth, and the sea and the dry land. It is one universal shaking of all this our world and the heavens over it, of which the Prophet speaks. He does not speak only of ⁵ signs in the sun and in the moon and in the stars, which might be, and yet the frame of the world itself might remain. It is a shaking, such as would involve the dissolution of this our system, as St. Paul draws out its meaning; ⁶ This word, once more, signifieth the removing of the things that are shaken, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain. Prophecy, in its long perspective, uses a continual foreshortening, speaking of things in relation to their eternal meaning and significance, as to that which shall survive, when heaven and earth and even time shall have passed away. It blends together the beginning and the earthly end; the preparation and the result; the commencement of redemption and its completion; our Lord's coming in humility and in His Majesty. Scarce any prophet but exhibits things in their intrinsic relation, of which time is but an accident. It is the rule, not the exception. The Seed of the woman, Who should bruise the serpent's head, was promised on the fall; to Abraham, the blessing through his seed; by Moses, the prophet like unto him; to David, an everlasting covenant⁷. Joel unites the outpouring of the Spirit of God on the Day of Pentecost, and the hatred of the world till the Day of Judgement⁸; Isaiah, God's judgements on the land and the Day of final judgement⁹; the deliverance from Babylon, and the first coming of Christ¹⁰; the glories of the Church, the new heavens and the new earth which shall remain for ever, and the unquenched fire and undying worm of the lost¹¹; Daniel, the the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, Before CHRIST

cir. 520.
and the dry land;

persecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes, of Anti-Christ, and the Resurrection¹²; Obadiah, the punishment of Edom and the everlasting kingdom of God¹³; Zephaniah, the punishment of Judah and the final judgement of the earth¹⁴; Malachi, our Lord's first and second Coming¹⁵.

Nay, our Lord Himself so blends together the destruction of Jerusalem and the days of Anti-Christ and the end of the world, that it is difficult to separate them, so as to say what belongs exclusively to either¹⁶. The prophecy is an answer to two distinct questions of the Apostles, 1) When shall these things (viz. the destruction of the temple) be? 2) and what shall be the sign of Thy coming and of the end of the world? Our Lord answers the two questions in one. Some things seem to belong to the first Coming, as ¹⁷ the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel, and the flight from ¹⁸ Judaea into the mountains. But the exceeding deceptiveness is authoritatively interpreted by St. Paul¹⁹ of a distant time; and our Lord Himself, having said that all these things, of which the Apostles had enquired, should take place in that generation²⁰, speaks of His absence as of a man taking a far journey²¹, and says that *not the angels in heaven knew that hour, neither the Son*²²; which precludes the idea, that He had just before declared that the whole would take place in that generation. For this would be to make out, that He declared that the Son knew not the hour of His Coming, which He had just (on this supposition) declared to be in that generation.

So then, here. There was a general shaking upon earth before our Lord came. Empires rose and fell. The Persian fell before Alexander's; Alexander's world-empire was ended by his sudden death in youth; of his four successors, two only continued, and they too fell before the Romans; then were the Roman civil wars, until, under Augustus, the temple of Janus was shut. "For it greatly beseeemed a work ordered by God, that many kingdoms should be confederated in one empire, and that the universal preaching might find the peoples easily accessible who were held under the rule of one state." In the Heavens was the star, which led the wise men, the manifestation of Angels to the shepherds; the preternatural darkness at the Passion; the Ascension into the highest Heaven, and the descent of the Holy Ghost with ²⁴ a sound from heaven as [of] a rushing mighty wind. "God had moved them [heaven and earth] before, when He delivered the people from Egypt, when there was in heaven a column of fire, dry ground amid the waves, a wall in the sea, a path in the waters, in the wilderness there was multiplied a daily harvest of heavenly food [the manna], the rock gushed into fountains of waters. But He moved it afterwards also in the Passion of the Lord Jesus, when the heaven was darkened, the sun shrank back, the rocks were rent, the graves opened, the dead were raised, the dragon, conquered in his waters, saw the fishers of men, not only sailing in the sea, but also walking without peril. The dry ground also was moved, when the unfruitful people of the nations began to ripen to a harvest of devotion and ¹ אמת 2 Kgs vi. 10, Ps. lxii. 12, Job xl. 5; אמת, as an adj., follows the noun. In the only exception alleged by Ges., Dan. viii. 13, it is used of one certain angel, as contrasted with another. כמעט is used of time, Job x. 20, xxiv. 21. עת אמתו is the like construction as עת כמעט Ex. xvii. 4, Ps. xxxvii. 10, Hos. i. 4.

³ 1 S. John ii. 18.

⁴ Gen. iii. 15.

⁵ S. Luke xxi. 25.

⁶ Joel ii. 28-32, iii.

⁷ Is. xxiv.

⁸ Heb. xii. 27.

⁹ 2 Sam. xxiii. 5.

¹⁰ Ib. xl.-lxvi.

¹¹ Ib. lxvi. 22-24.

¹² Dan. xi. xii.

¹³ Ob. 18-21.

¹⁴ See on Zeph. i. 2, 3, p. 441.

¹⁵ Mal. iii. 1-5, 17, 18. Iv.

¹⁶ The second question about the end of the world occurs only in S. Matthew (xxiv. 3); the first, When shall these things be? occurs in S. Mark also (xiii. 3) and S. Luke (xxi. 6). The words in S. Mark, This generation shall not pass till all these things be done (xiii. 30) seem to me to be cast in the form of their question, When shall these things be? viz. the things about which they had asked.

¹⁷ S. Matt. xxiv. 15, 16.

¹⁸ Ib. 24.

¹⁹ 2 Thess. v. 2-10.

²⁰ S. Mark xiii. 30.

²¹ Ib. 34.

²² Ib. 32.

²³ S. Leo Hom. 82 in Nat. Ap. Petri et Pauli. c. 2. col. 322. Ball.

²⁴ Acts ii. 2.

²⁵ S. Ambr. Ep. 30 ad Iren. n. 11, 12. Opp. ii. 913 Ben.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

7 And I will shake all nations,^a and the desire of all nations shall come: and I will

^a Gen. 49. 10. Mal. 3. 1.

faith,—so that more were the children of the forsaken, than of her which had a husband, and ¹ the desert flourished like a lily.” ² He moved earth in that great miracle of the birth from the Virgin: He moved the sea and dry land, when in the islands and in the whole world Christ is preached. So we see all nations moved to the faith.”

And yet, whatever preludes of fulfilment there were at our Lord's first Coming, they were as nothing to the fulfilment which we look for in the Second, when ³ the earth shall be utterly broken down; the earth, clean dissolved; the earth, moved exceedingly; the earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a hanging-cot in a vineyard⁴, and the transgression thereof is heavy upon it; and it shall fall and not rise again; whereon follows an announce-ment of the final judgement of men and angels, and the everlasting kingdom of the blessed in the presence of God.

Of that day of the Lord, St. Peter uses our Lord's image, ⁵ that it shall ⁶ come as a thief in the night, in which the heavens shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works therein shall be burned up.

7. And the desire of all nations shall come. The words can only mean this, the central longing of all nations⁷; He whom they longed for, either through the knowledge of Him spread by the Jews in their dispersion, or mutely by the aching craving of the human heart, longing for the restoration from its decay. The earnest expectation of the creature did not begin with the Coming of Christ, nor was it limited to those, who actually came to Him. ⁸ The whole creation, Saint Paul saith, groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. It was enslaved, and the better self longed to be free; every motion of grace in the multitudinous heart of man was a longing for its Deliverer; every weariness of what it was, every fleeting vision of what was better, every sigh from out of its manifold ills, were notes of the one varied cry, “Come and help us.” Man's heart, formed in the image of God, could not but ache to be re-formed by and for Him, though an unknown God, Who should reform it.

This longing increased as the time drew nigh, when Christ

¹ Is. xxxv. 1.

² S. Aug. de Civ. Dei xviii. 25.

³ Is. xxiv. 19, 20.

⁴ S. Matt. xxiv. 43.

⁵ S. Aug. de Civ. Dei xviii. 25.

⁶ 2 S. Pet. iii. 10.

⁷ תַּחַת is “coveted.” It is the passion forbidden in the tenth commandment, Ex. xx. 14, (bis) Deut. v. 18, vii. 25, Ex. xxxiv. 24, Jos. vii. 21, Pr. vi. 25, Mi. ii. 2. In Pr. xii. 12, it is a passionate desire which ends in choice. It is united with “loved” and “hated,” Ib. i. 22; of the passionate idolatry, Is. i. 29. It is used of God's passionless good-pleasure in that which He chooses, yet speaking after the manner of men, Ps. lxxviii. 17, and of man's not longing for Jesus, Is. liii. 2. The Piel is used once of intense longing, Cant. ii. 3. Men covet things for some real or seeming good; and so the passive form of the verb, וְנָחַד וְנָחַד, are things which are the object of coveting, and so things desirable; Job xx. 20, Ps. xxxix. 12, Is. xli. 9; נָחַד Gen. ii. 9, iii. 6, Ps. xix. 11. Pr. xxi. 20. נָחַד with the gen. is “the desire of the eye,” what it covets or desires, 1 Kgs xx. 6, Ex. xxiv. 16, 21, 25, Lam. ii. 4; or desirable things, belonging to one, Jo. iv. 5, Is. lxiv. 10, Lam. i. 10, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 19, or from it, נָחַד Hos. ix. 16. “the desires of the womb,” “the desired children that their womb had borne,” or with ל, “the desired things consisting in their silver,” נָחַד לְבָשֶׁת, Ib. ix. 6, or abs. Cant. v. 16. נָחַד occurs in the same sense, Lam. i. 7, 11; נָחַד אֵשׁ of Daniel, as the object of the love of God, Dan. ix. 23, x. 11, 19; and of desirable things, Gen. xxvii. 15, 2 Chr. xx. 25, Dan. x. 3, xi. 38, 43, Ezr. viii. 27.

As to נָחַד itself, two idioms have been confused; 1) that in which it is accessory to another word, as נָחַד “vessels of desire,” Hos. xiii. 15, Jer. xxv. 34, 2 Chr. xxxii. 27, Dan. xi. 8, Nah. ii. 10; נָחַד אֶרֶץ, “land of desire,” Ps. cvi. 24, Jer. iii. 19, Zech. vii. 14; נָחַד בְּחֵי הַחַיִּים “houses of thy desire,” or “thy houses of desire,” Ez. xxvi. 12; נָחַד הַחַיִּים “my portion of desire,” Jer. xii. 10. These we might paraphrase “pleasant vessels,” “pleasant land,” as we might say “desirables.” Not that the word נָחַד means, in itself, “pleasant things,” any more than the word “coveted” signifies pleasant, though those things only are “coveted,” which are thought to be pleasant. The original sense of the root, to “desire,” is obviously brought out the more, when the idea is not subsidiary, but the chief. There are four cases, in which Chemdah is so used. (1) “Jehoram died בְּלֹא נָחַד, unregretted,” we should say; “no one longing for him,” 2 Chr. xxi. 20;

fill this house with glory, saith the LORD of hosts.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

should come. The Roman biographer attests the existence of this expectation, not among the Jews only, but in the East⁹; this was quickened doubtless among the heathen by the Jewish Sibylline book, in that, amid the expectations of one sent from heaven, who should found a kingdom of righteousness, which the writer drew from the Hebrew prophets, he inserted denunciations of temporal vengeance upon the Romans, which Easterns would share. Still, although written 170 years before our Lord came¹⁰, it had not apparently much effect until the time, when, from the prophecies of Daniel it was clear, that He must shortly come¹¹. Yet the attempt of the Jewish¹² and heathen¹³ historian to wrest it to Vespasian, shews how great must have been the influence of the expectation, which they attempted to turn aside. The Jews, who rejected our Lord Whom Haggai predicted, still were convinced that the prediction must be fulfilled before the destruction of the second temple. The impulse did not cease even after its destruction. R. Akiba, whom they accounted ¹⁴ the first oracle of his time, the first and greatest guardian of the tradition and old law, of whom they said, that ¹⁵ God revealed to him things unknown to Moses, was induced by this prophecy to acknowledge the impostor Bar-cohab, to the destruction of himself and of the most eminent of his time; fulfilling our Lord's words, ¹⁶ I am come in My Father's name, and ye receive Me not; if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive. Akiba, following the traditional meaning of the great prophecy which rivetted his own eyes, paraphrased the words, ¹⁷ Yet a little, a little of the kingdom, will I give to Israel upon the destruction of the first house, and after the kingdom, lo! I will shake heaven, and after that will come the Messiah.”

Since the words can only mean “the Desire of all nations,” he or that which all nations long for, the construction of the words does not affect the meaning. Herod doubtless thought to advance his own claims on the Jewish people by his material adorning of the temple; yet, although mankind do covet gold and silver, few could seriously think that, while a heathen immoral but observant poet could speak of “gold un-

(2) “To whom is נָחַד הָאֵלֶּה, the whole longing of Israel?” 1 Sam. ix. 20; (3) The well-known words נָחַד נָשִׁים, Chemdah Nashim, “the desire of women,” Dan. xi. 37. If (as this is now generally understood) this means “the object of the longing of women,” so much the more must נָחַד כל גִּוִּים mean, “the object of the longing of all nations.” They cannot mean, “the most desirable of all nations,” “die liebsten aller Völker,” Ew. formerly; “die edelsten aller Völker,” Hitzig; “die auserlesensten derselben,” Umbreit. This must have been expressed by aid of the passive participle in any of the forms, by which a superlative is expressed. Nor can it mean “the costly things of all people;” (“die hohen Schätzen aller der völker,” Ewald, “die Kostbarkeiten aller Nationen,” Scholz). This, if expressed by the word at all, would have been, נָחַד נָשִׁים, נָחַד נָשִׁים, Rashi, A. E., Kimchi, explain as if נָשִׁים were omitted. R. Isaac (Chizzuk Emunah, in Wagens. Tela ignea p. 288) quotes 2 Kgs xii. 11, where נָשִׁים stands as the acc. of place; R. Tanchum omits the verse, Abulwalid the instance. It is not noticed by R. Parchon, Kimchi, Menahem ben Saruk, David b. Abraham, in their dictionaries. Abarbanel retains the meaning, “the desire of all nations,” interpreting it of the holy land. He paraphrases נָשִׁים לְנֶגֶד “that they shall come to the holy land and there shall He be avenged of them, and then at that time ‘I will fill this house with glory.’ v. p. נָחַד, The Anon. Arab. (Hunt. 206) renders “the most precious things of all nations shall come.”

⁹ Rom. viii. 19-22. ¹⁰ Suet. Vesp. c. 4. ¹¹ Sec Pusey's “Daniel the Prophet,” pp. 364-368. ¹² Ib. pp. 230-233. ¹³ Jos. B. J. vi. 5. 4. ¹⁴ Tac. Hist. v. 13.

¹⁵ “He was President of the academies of Lidda and Jafa, disciple and successor of Rabban Gamaliel, and a man of such learning and repute, that he was accounted among the Hebrews the first oracle &c.” De Rossi Diz. stor. d. Autori Ebr. sub v.

¹⁶ R. Bechai. See ab. p. 317. note 12. ¹⁷ S. John v. 43.

¹⁸ Sanhedrin. dist. chelek in Mart. Pug. fid. p. 305. R. Gedaliah B. Yechaiah quotes R. Akiba, rejecting his interpretation. “And not as Rabbi Akibah, who was interpreting this section; ‘Yet once, it is a little and I shake the heaven and the earth.’ He interprets, that when Israel went to the captivity of Babylon, Haggai the prophet spake this section, and its meaning is, that in this house there will be little glory, and after this I will bring the desire of the heathen to Jerusalem.” Shalsheth Hakkabbala extracted in the Carm. R. Lipmanni confut. p. 619. in Wagenseil Tela ignea satanae.

discovered and so better placed¹," or our own of the "pale and common drudge 'Tween man and man," a Hebrew prophet could recognise gold and silver as the desire of all nations. R. Akiba and S. Jerome's Jewish teachers, after our Lord came, felt no difficulty in understanding it of a person. We cannot in English express the delicacy of the phrase, whereby manifoldness is combined in unity, the Object of desire containing in itself many objects of desire. To render "the desire of all nations" or "the desires of all nations" alike fail to do this. A great heathen master of language said to his wife, "fare you well, my longings²;" i. e., I suppose, if he had analysed his feelings, he meant that she manifoldly met the longings of his heart; she had in herself manifold gifts to content them. So St. Paul sums up all the truths and gifts of the Gospel, all which God shadowed out in the law and had given us in Christ, under the name of "the good things to come." A pious modern writer⁴ speaks of "the unseen desirables of the spiritual world." A psalmist expresses at once the collective, "God's Word" and the "words" contained in it, by an idiom like Haggai's, joining the feminine singular as a collective with the plural verb; ⁵*How sweet are Thy word unto my taste* lit. palate. It is God's word, at once collectively and individually, which was to the Psalmist so sweet. What was true of the whole, was true, one by one, of each part; what was true of each part, was true of the whole. So here, the object of this longing was manifold, but met in one, was concentrated in One, ⁶*in Christ Jesus, Who of God is made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption*. That which the whole world sighed and mourned for, knowingly or unknowingly, light to disperse its darkness, liberty from its spiritual slavery, restoration from its degradation, could not come to us without some one, who should impart it to us.

But if Jesus was the longed-for of the nations before He came, by that mute longing of need for that which it wants (as the parched ground thirsteth for the rain⁷) how much more afterwards! So Micah and Isaiah describe many peoples inviting one another, ⁸*Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and He will teach us of His ways, and we will walk in His paths*. And in truth He became the desire of the nations, much more than of the Jews; as, St. Paul says⁹, God foretold of old; Moses saith, I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are not a people: by a foolish nation I will anger you. But Esaias is very bold and saith, I was found of them that sought Me not.

So till now and in eternity, ¹⁰Christ is the longing of all holy souls, who long for nothing else, than to please Him, daily to love Him more, to worship Him better. So S. John longed for Him; *Come, Lord Jesus*¹¹. So Isaiah; ¹²*The desire of our soul is to Thy Name and to the remembrance of Thee: with my soul have I desired Thee in the night; yea, with my spirit within me, will I seek Thee early*. So S. Ignatius, ¹³*Let fire, cross, troops of wild beasts, dissections, rendings, scattering of bones, mincing of limbs, grindings of the whole body, ill tortures of the devil come upon me, only may I gain Jesus Christ.—I seek Him Who for us died; I long for Him Who for us rose.*"

¹⁰Hungerest thou and desirest food? Long for Jesus! He is the bread and refreshment of Angels. He is manna, containing in Him all sweetness and pleasurable delight. Thirst-est thou? Long for Jesus! He is the well of living water, refreshing, so that thou shouldest thirst no more. Art thou sick? Go to Jesus. He is the Saviour, the physician, nay, salvation itself. Art thou dying? Sigh for Jesus! He is the resurrection and the life. Art thou perplexed? Come to Jesus! He is the Angel of great counsel. Art thou ignorant and erring? Ask Jesus; He is the way, the truth and the life. Art thou a sinner? Call on Jesus! For He shall save His people from their sins, To this end He came into the world: This is all His fruit, to take away sin. Art thou tempted by pride, gluttony, lust, sloth? Call on Jesus! He is humility, soberness, chastity, love, fervour: He bare our infirmities, and carried, yea still beareth and carrieth, our griefs. Seekest thou beauty? He is fairer than the children of men. Seekest thou wealth? In Him are all treasures, yea in Him the fulness of the Godhead dwelleth. Art thou ambitious of honours? Glory and riches are in His house. He is the King of glory. Seekest thou a friend? He hath the greatest love for thee, Who for love of thee came down from heaven, toiled, endured the Sweat of Blood, the Cross and Death; He prayed for thee by name in the garden, and poured forth tears of Blood! Seekest thou wisdom? He is the Eternal and Uncreated Wisdom of the Father! Wishest thou for consolation and joy? He is the sweetness of souls, the joy and jubilee of Angels. Wishest thou for righteousness and holiness? He is the Holy of holies; He is everlasting Righteousness, justifying and sanctifying all who believe and hope in Him. Wishest thou for a blissful life? He is life eternal, the bliss of the saints. Long then for Him, love Him, sigh for Him! In Him thou wilt find all good; out of Him, all evil, all misery. Say then with S. Francis, 'My Jesus, my love and my all!' O Good Jesus, burst the cataract of Thy love, that its streams, yea seas, may flow down upon us, yea, inebriate and overwhelm us."

And I will fill this house with glory. The glory then was not to be anything, which came from man, but directly from God. It was the received expression of God's manifestation of Himself in the tabernacle¹⁴, in Solomon's temple¹⁵, and of the ideal temple¹⁶ which Ezekiel saw, after the likeness of that of Solomon, that the glory of the Lord filled the house. When then of this second temple God uses the self-same words, that He will fill it with glory, with what other glory should He fill it than His own? In the history it is said, the glory of the Lord filled the temple; for there man relates what God did. Here it is God Himself Who speaks; so He says not, the glory of the Lord, but, I will fill the house with glory, glory which was His to give, which came from Himself. To interpret that glory of anything material, is to do violence to language, to force on words of Scripture an unworthy sense, which they refuse to bear.

The gold upon the walls, even had this second temple been adorned like the first, did not fill the temple of Solomon. However richly any building might be overlaid with gold, no one could say that it is filled with it. A building is filled with what it contains; a mint or treasure-house may be filled with gold: the temple of God was filled, we are told, with the glory of the Lord. His creatures bring Him such things as they can offer; they bring ¹⁷*gold and incense*; they ¹⁸*bring presents and offer gifts*; they do it, moved by His Spirit, as acceptable to Him. God is nowhere said, Himself to give these offerings to Himself.

¹ "Aurum irreperitum et sic melius situm." Hor. Od. iii. 3. 49.

² "Valete, mea desideria, valete." Cic. Ep. ad Famil. xiv. 2. fin.

³ Heb. x. 1. τῶν μελλόντων ἀγαθῶν.

⁴ Dr. Watts Vol. i. Serm. 4.

⁵ Ps. cxix. 103. כִּי נִפְלְאוּ לִבִּי מִדְּבָרֶיךָ

⁶ 1 Cor. i. 30.

⁷ Euripides so uses ἐπᾶν, of the ground longing for the rain.

⁸ Mi. iv. 2. Is. ii. 3.

⁹ Rom. x. 19, 20; quoting Deut. xxxii. 21. Is. lxxv. 2.

¹⁰ Lap.

¹¹ Rev. xxii. 20.

¹² Is. xxvi. 8, 9.

¹³ Ep. ad Rom. in Ruinart Acta Mart. p. 703.

¹⁴ Ex. xl. 34, 35.

¹⁵ 1 Kgs viii. 11. 2 Chr. v. 14. vii. 1-12.

¹⁶ Ezek. xliii. 5. xlv. 4.

¹⁷ Is. lx. 6.

¹⁸ Ps. lxxii. 10.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

8 The silver is mine and the gold is mine, saith the LORD of hosts.

8. The silver is Mine, and the gold is Mine. These words, which have occasioned some to think, that God, in speaking of the glory with which He should fill the house, meant our material riches, suggest the contrary. For silver was no ornament of the temple of Solomon. Everything was overlaid with gold. In the tabernacle there were bowls of silver¹. In Solomon's temple they and all were of gold². Silver, we are expressly told, *was nothing accounted of*³ *in the days of Solomon: he*⁴ made silver to be in Jerusalem as stones—for abundance. Rather, as God says by the Psalmist, Every beast of the forest is Mine, so are the cattle upon a thousand hills: I know all the fowls of the mountains, and the wild beasts of the field are Mine. If I were hungry, I would not tell thee: for the world is Mine and the fulness thereof: so here He tells them, that for the glory of His house He needed not gold or silver: for all the wealth of the world is His. They had no ground⁵ to grieve then, that they could not equal the magnificence of Solomon who had abundance of gold and silver.⁶ All was God's. He would fill it with divine glory. The Desire of all nations, Christ, should come, and be a glory, to which all created glory is nothing.

⁷ God says really and truly, that the silver and gold is His, which in utmost bounty He created, and in His most just government administers, so that, without His will and dominion, neither can the bad have gold and silver for the punishment of avarice, nor the good for the use of mercy. Its abundance does not inflate the good, nor its want crush them: but the bad, when bestowed, it blinds: when taken away, it tortures.⁸

⁹ It is as if He would say, Think not the temple inglorious, because, may be, it will have no portion of gold or silver, and their splendour. I need not such things. How should I? For Mine is the silver and Mine the gold, saith the Lord Almighty. I seek rather true worshippers: with their brightness will I gild this temple. Let him come who hath right faith, is adorned by graces, gleams with love for Me, is pure in heart, poor in spirit, compassionate and good.¹⁰ "These make the temple, i. e., the Church, glorious and renowned, being glorified by Christ. For they have learned to pray,¹¹ The glory of the Lord our God be upon us."

9. The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, or, perhaps, more probably, the later glory

¹ Nu. vii. 19, 25, 31. &c. The "charger" (קָדֵשׁ) which in the tabernacle was of silver (Nu. vii. 13. &c.) does not appear in the temple of Solomon.

² 1 Kgs vii. 50. ³ 2 Chr. iv. 8. ⁴ 1 Kgs. x. 21. ⁵ Ib. 27. ⁶ Ps. l. 10-12. ⁷ S. Aug. Serm. 50. (de Ag. 2.) n. 4, 5. ⁸ S. Cyr. ⁹ Pa. xc. 17.

¹⁰ ii. 3. So the LXX. "Wherefore great will be the last glory of this house above the first [glory]." In the other case, the order would have probably been, כבוד רבתי הארץ, as in Ex. iii. 3, De. ii. 7, iv. 6, 1 Sam. xii. 16, 1 Kgs iii. 9, xx. 13, 28, Jon. i. 12; but, as Köhler observes, this is not quite uniform, as in 2 Chr. i. 10.

¹¹ This interpretation involves a change in the wording of the argument from this prophecy, as to the time of our Lord's first coming. For thus interpreted, it does not speak of a second house, and so does not, in terms, speak of the material building which was destroyed. R. Isaac made use of this: "a difficulty need not be raised, that he said, 'this house' of the house which is to be built, since of the first house, which in their time was of old waste, he said 'this house' in the words, 'who is left among you, who hath seen this house in its first glory?' and as 'this house' is spoken of the house of the sanctuary which was then desolate, which was passed away, so he saith, 'this house,' of the house which shall be." Chizzuch Emunah, c. 34. Wagens. p. 292.

¹² In his oration to the Jews, "Our forefathers built this temple to the supreme God after the return from Babylon, yet in size it lacks 60 cubits in height; for so much did the first, which Solomon built, exceed.—But since, by the counsel of God, I now rule, and we have a long peace, and ample funds and large revenues; and chief of all, the Romans, who, so to speak, are lords of all, are our friends and kindly disposed," (Joseph. Ant. xv. 11. 1.) and a little later (n. 3) "exceeding the expenditure of those aforetime, in a way in which no other appears to have adorned the temple." See Hengst. Christ. iii. 257, 258. ed. 2. ¹³ Yoma 21. b.

9 ¹ The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the LORD

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.
¹ John 1. 14.

of this house shall be greater than the former; for he had already spoken of the present temple, as identical with that before the captivity; "¹⁰ Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory, and how do you see it now?" He had spoken of its first glory. Now he says, in contrast, its later glory should be greater than that of its most glorious times¹¹. In this case the question, whether the temple of Herod was a different material building from that of Zerubbabel, falls away. In either case, the contrast is between two things, either the temple in that its former estate, and this its latter estate after the captivity, or the two temples of Solomon and Zerubbabel. There is no room for a third temple. God holds out no vain hopes. To comfort those distressed by the poverty of the house of God which they were building, God promises a glory to this house greater than before. A temple, erected, after this had lain waste above 1800 years, even if Anti-Christ were to come now and to erect a temple at Jerusalem, could be no fulfilment of this prophecy.

In material magnificence the temple of Solomon, built and adorned with all the treasures accumulated by David and enlarged by Solomon, far surpassed all which Herod, amid his attempts to give a material meaning to the prophecy, could do. His attempt shews how the eyes of the Jews were fixed on this prophecy, then when it was about to be fulfilled. While taking pains, through the gradualness of his rebuilding, to preserve the identity of the fabric, he lavished his wealth, to draw off their thoughts from the king, whom the Jews looked for, to himself. The friendship of the Romans who were lords of all, was to replace the all nations, of whom Haggai spoke; he pointed also to the length of peace, the possession of wealth, the greatness of revenues, the surpassing expenditure beyond those before¹². A small section of Erastians admitted these claims of the murderer of his sons. The Jews generally were not diverted from looking on to Him Who should come. Those five things, the absence whereof they felt, were connected with their atoning worship or God's Presence among them; "¹³ the ark with the mercy-seat and the Cherubim, the Urim and Tummim, the fire from heaven, the Shechinah, the Holy Ghost." Material magnificence could not replace spiritual glory. The explanations of the great Jewish authorities¹⁴, ¹⁴ "Rab and Samuel disputed hereon, or, as others, R. Jochanan and R. Eliezer. The former said, 'it shall be more glorious in structure;' the latter, 'in years.' "Baba hathra c. l. f. 30. R. Asariah quotes also from the Shir hashshirim Rabba on Cant. ii. 12 and viii. 1, and adds, 'We have found that the best interpreters explained this prophecy literally as to the second house.' This is followed by Kimchi, Rashi, A. E., Lipmann (Nizz. n. 260), Manasseh ben Israel (de term. vitæ) iii. 4. (Hilpert de gloria Templi post., Thes. Theol.-Phil. p. 1086 sqq.) Tanchum. Of the magnificence of the building they allege only that the building was in size equal to that of Solomon, while even in material magnificence it was beyond measure inferior. The relative duration they underrate; "the first, 410 years; the second 420;" for from the xith of Solomon's reign, B. C. 1005, to the burning of the temple in the xith of Zedekiah, were 417 years; but from the vith of Darius when the 2nd temple was finished, B. C. 515, to the burning of the temple under Titus A.D. 70, were 585 years. But mere duration is not glory. R. Isaac says as Abarbanel; "But it is a difficulty in what they say, that Scripture says not, 'great shall be the building of the house,' or, 'the time of the house,' only 'great shall be the glory of the house;' for what that the 2nd house stood ten years more than the 1st, this was not such great glory, that for this the prophet should say what he said: and again though the days during which the 2nd house stood were 100 years more than the duration of the first house, and though in its building it were twofold greater than the first house, how saith Scripture of it on this account, that its glory was greater than the first, since the glory which dwelt in the first house did not dwell in it?" Chizz. Em. l. c. pp. 287, 288. "Wherefore it is rather the true glory which is the abiding of the glory of the Shechinah in this house for ever; which did not abide continually in the first house; but in the second house the glory did not dwell at all; for they had not the ark and the mercy seat and the cherubim, or the Urim and Tummim, nor the Holy Spirit, nor the heavenly fire, nor the anointing oil, as it was in the 1st

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

of hosts: and in this place will I give that the second temple was superior to the first in structure (which was untrue) or in duration, were laid aside by Jews who had any other solution wherewith to satisfy themselves. "The Shechinah and the five precious things," says one¹, "which, according to our wise of blessed memory, were in it, and not in the second house, raised and exalted it beyond compare." Another² says, "When Haggai saith, 'greater shall be the glory of this later house than the first,' how is it, that the house which Zerubbabel built through the income which the king of Persia gave them was more glorious than the house which Solomon built? And though it is said that the building which Herod made, was exceeding beautiful and rich, we should not think that it was in its beauty like to the house which Solomon built. For what the wise of blessed memory have said of the beauty of the house of Herod is in relation to the house which Zerubbabel built. How much more, since Scripture saith not, 'Great shall be the beauty or the wealth of this latter house above the first,' but the glory: and the glory is not the wealth or the beauty, or the largeness of the dimensions of the building, as they said in their interpretations; for the 'glory' is in truth spoken of the glory of God, which filled the tabernacle, after it was set up, and of the glory of God which filled the house of God, which Solomon built, when he brought the ark into the holy of holies, which is the Divine cloud and the Light supreme, which came down thither in the eyes of all the people, and it is said, 'And it was when the priests came out of the holy place, the cloud filled the house of God, and the priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud, for the glory of God filled the house of God.' And this glory was not in the second house. And how shall it be said, if so, 'great shall be the glory of this later house above the first?'" The poor unconverted Jew did not know the answer to his question: "Through the Presence of God, in the substance of our flesh; through the Son given to us, Whose name should be Mighty God." The glory of this temple was in Him Who³ was made Flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. "There Christ, the Son of God, was, as a Child, offered to God: there He sat in the midst of the Doctors; there He taught and revealed things, hidden from the foundation of the world. The glory of the temple of Solomon was, that in it the majesty of God appeared, veiling itself in a cloud: in this, that same Majesty shewed itself, in very deed united with the Flesh, visible to sight: so that Jesus Himself said, He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father. This it was which Malachi sang with joy: The Lord Whom ye seek shall suddenly come to His temple, even the Messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in." And in this place I will give peace. Temporal peace they had now, nor was there any prospect of its being disturbed. They were quiet subjects of the Persian empire, which included also all their former enemies, greater or less. Alex-house." Ib. p. 293. Others made the glory to consist in the absence of idolatry, quoted Ib. p. 296. R. Lipmann Nizz. p. 42, makes it to consist in the uninterruptedness of the worship of God there, whereas the temple was shut by Ahaz and Manasseh [as was the second at least desecrated by Antiochus Epiphanes for 3 years. 1 Macc. i. 54, iv. 59.]

¹ R. Asariah de Rossi Imre Binah, c. 51, in Hilpert l. c. n. 8. His own solution is that the glory was not in the temple itself, but in that kings brought presents to it. Ib. 10.
² Abarbanel Quæst. iv in Hagg. f. 10. He says that "the interpreters, all of them explained it of the second house." p. 2. Abarb. subjoins a criticism, which R. Asaria, Imre-Binah c. 54, saw to be mistaken, that ראשון and ראשון could not be said of two things (of which ראשון and ראשון are, he says, used) against which R. Asariah quotes Jer. l. 17. Gen. xxxiii. 2. Add Ex. iv. 8. Deut. xxiv. 3, 4. Ru. iii. 10, Is. viii. 23. [ix. 1. Eng.]

peace, saith the Lord of hosts. Before CHRIST
cir. 520.

¹ Ps. 85. 8, 9. Luke 2. 14. Eph. 2. 14.

ander subdued all the bordering countries which did not yield, but spared themselves. Temporal peace then was nothing to be then given them; for they had it. In later times they had it not. The temple itself was profaned by Antiochus Epiphanes. "Her sanctuary was laid waste like a wilderness. As had been her glory, so was her dishonour increased." Again by Pompey⁸, by Crassus⁹, the Parthians¹⁰, before it was destroyed by Titus and the Romans. Jews saw this and, knowing nothing of the peace in Jesus, argued from the absence of outward peace, that the prophecy was not fulfilled under the second temple. "What Scripture says, 'and in this place I will give peace,' is opposed to their interpretation. For all the days of the duration of the 2nd house were in strait of times and not in peace, as was written in Daniel, and threescore and two weeks: the street shall be built again and the fosse, and in strait of time, and, as I said, in the time of Herod there was no peace whatever, for the sword did not depart from his house to the day of his death; and after his death the hatred among the Jews increased, and the Gentiles straitened them, until they were destroyed from the face of the earth."

But spiritual peace is, throughout prophecy, part of the promise of the Gospel. Christ Himself was to be¹² the Prince of peace: of the increase of His government and of His peace there was to be no end; in His days¹³ the mountains were to bring peace to the people; there should be abundance of peace, so long as the moon endureth; the work of righteousness was to be peace¹⁴; the chastisement of our peace [that which obtained it] was upon Him¹⁵; great should be the peace of her children¹⁶; in the Gospel God would give peace, true peace, to the far off and the near¹⁷; He would extend¹⁸ peace to her like a river: the good things of the Gospel was the publishing of peace¹⁹. The Gospel is described as²⁰ a covenant of peace: the promised king²¹ shall speak peace to the Heathen; He Himself should be our peace²². And when He was born, the angels proclaimed²³ on earth peace, goodwill towards men: The Dayspring from on high visited us, to guide our feet into the way of peace. He Himself says, My peace I leave with you. He spake, that²⁴ in Me ye might have peace. S. Peter sums up the word which God sent unto the children of Israel, as²⁵ preaching peace by Jesus Christ: the kingdom of God is joy and peace; Christ is our peace; made peace; preaches peace. God calleth us to peace²⁶, in the Gospel: being justified by faith, we have peace with God through Jesus Christ our Lord; the fruit of the Spirit is love joy peace. Spiritual peace being thus prominent in the Gospel and in prophecy, as the gift of God, it were unnatural to explain the peace which God promised here to give, as other than He promised elsewhere; peace in Him Who is our peace, Jesus Christ.

"Peace and tranquillity of mind is above all glory of the house; because peace passeth all understanding. This is peace above peace, which shall be given after the third ³ S. John i. 14. ⁴ Lap. ⁶ S. John xiv. 9. ⁶ Mal. iii. 1.

⁷ 1 Macc. i. 39, 40. ⁸ Jos. Ant. xiv. 4. 4. B. J. i. 7. ⁹ Ant. xiv. 7. 1.
B. J. i. 8. 8. ¹⁰ Ant. xiv. 13. 3. 4. ¹¹ "Abraham B. Dior in his book of the Cabbala, p. 43" in R. Isaac Chizz. Em. l. c. p. 287. R. Isaac makes as if he had answered the explanation as to Jesus by quoting S. Matt. x. 34. l. c. p. 292, 293. ¹² Is. ix. 6, 7. ¹³ Ps. lxxii. 3, 7. ¹⁴ Is. xxxii. 17.
¹⁵ Ib. liii. 5. ¹⁶ Ib. liv. 13. ¹⁷ Ib. lvii. 19. ¹⁸ Ib. lxxvi. 12.
¹⁹ Ib. lii. 7. ²⁰ Ez. xxxiv. 25. ²¹ Zech. ix. 10. ²² Mi. v. 5.
²³ S. Luke ii. 14. ²⁴ Ib. i. 79. ²⁵ S. John xiv. 27. ²⁶ Ib. xvi. 33.
²⁷ Acts x. 36. ²⁸ Rom. xiv. 17. ²⁹ Eph. ii. 14, 15, 17. ³⁰ 1 Cor. vii. 15.
³¹ Rom. v. 1. ³² Gal. v. 22. ³³ S. Ambr. l. c. n. 14. Opp. ii. 913.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

10 ¶ In the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet saying,

11 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ¹Ask now the priests concerning the law saying,

12 If one bear holy flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt do touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any meat, shall it be holy? And the priest answered and said, No.

13 Then said Haggai, If one that is ^munclean by a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be unclean.

14 Then answered Haggai, and said, ^aSo is this people, and so is this nation before me, saith the LORD; and so is every work of their hands; and that which they offer there is unclean.

15 And now, I pray you, ^oconsider from this day and upward, from before a stone was laid upon a stone in the temple of the LORD:

16 Since those days were, ^pwhen one came to an heap of twenty measures, there were but ten: when one came to the press-fat for to draw out fifty vessels out of the press, there were but twenty.

17 ^qI smote you with blasting and mildew and with hail ^rin all the labours of your hands; ^syet ye turned not to me, saith the LORD.

18 Consider now from this day and upward, from the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, even from 'the day that' the foundation of the LORD's temple was laid, consider it.

shaking of heaven sea earth, dry land, when He shall destroy all powers and principalities [in the day of judgement].—And so shall there be peace throughout, that, no bodily passions or hindrances of unbelieving mind resisting, Christ shall be all in all, exhibiting the hearts of all subdued to the Father."

11-14. Ask now the priests concerning the law. The priests answer rightly, that, by the law, insulated unholiness spread further than insulated holiness. The flesh of the sacrifice hallowed whatever it should touch¹, but not further; but the human being, who was defiled by touching a dead body, defiled all he might touch². Haggai does not apply the first part; viz. that the worship on the altar which they reared, while they neglected the building of the temple, did not hallow. The possession of a holy thing does not counterbalance disobedience. Contrariwise, one defilement defiled the whole man and all which he touched, according to that, ³*whosoever shall keep the whole law and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all.*

In the application, the two melt into one; for the holy thing, viz. the altar which they raised out of fear on their return, so far from hallowing the land or people by the sacrifices offered thereon, was itself defiled. This people and this nation (not "My people") since they in act disowned Him. Whatever they offer there, i. e. on that altar, instead of the temple which God commanded, is unclean, offending Him Who gave all.

15. And now, I pray you. Observe his tenderness, in drawing their attention to it⁴. Consider from this day and up- wards. He bids them look backward, from before a stone was laid upon a stone, i. e. from the last moment of their neglect in building the house of God; from since those days were, or from the time backwards when those things were, (resuming, in the word, *from-their-being*⁵, the date which he had just given, viz. the beginning of their resuming the building backwards, during all those years of neglect) one came to a heap of twenty measures. The precise measure is not mentioned⁶: the force of the appeal lay in the proportion: the heap of corn which, usually, would yield twenty, (whether bushels⁷ or *seahs*⁸ or any other measure, for the heap itself being of no defined size, neither could the quantity expected from it be defined) there were ten only; one came to the press-vat to draw out fifty vessels out of the press, or perhaps fifty poorah, i. e. the ordinary quantity drawn out at one time from the press⁹, there were, or it had become, twenty, two fifths only of what they looked for and ordinarily obtained. The dried grapes yielded so little.

17. I smote you with blasting and mildew, two diseases of corn, which Moses had foretold¹⁰ as chastisements on disobedience and God's infliction, of which Amos had spoken in these self-same words¹¹. Haggai adds the hail, as destructive of the vines¹². Yet [And] ye turned you not to Me lit. there were none—you, (accusative¹³) i. e. who turned you unto Me. The words are elliptical, but express the entire absence of conversion, of any who turned to God.

18. From the day that the foundation of the Lord's house. Zechariah, in a passage corresponding to this, uses the same words¹⁴, the day that the foundation of the house of the Lord of

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.
^o ch. 1. 5.

^p ch. 1. 6. 9.
Zech. 8. 10.

^q Deut. 28. 22.
1 Kin. 8. 37.
ch. 1. 9.
Amos 4. 9.
ch. 1. 11.
Jer. 5. 3.
Amos 4. 6,
8, 9, 10, 11.

Zech. 8. 9.

¹ Lev. vi. 19 (27 Eng.)

² Nu. xix. 22.

³ S. James ii. 10.

⁴ As expressed by אֵל, here and 18.

⁵ מִיָּמֵינוּ

⁶ Ruth iii. 7. Neh. xiii. 15. 2 Chr. xxxi. 6—9.

⁷ Vulg.

⁸ LXX.

⁹ מִיָּמֵינוּ only occurs besides, Is. lxiii. 3; where it is the winefat itself. The LXX render it μετρηται; Jon. טַרְטִין (which they use for נֶלֶךְ 1 Sam. x. 3, xxv. 18, Jer. xiii. 12) Vulg. lagenas.

¹⁰ Dent. xxviii. 27.

¹¹ Am. iv. 9.

¹² Ps. lxxviii. 47.

¹³ אֵל marking the acc., אֵל אֵל is not for אֵל אֵל, which itself, according to the common Hebrew construction, would require a participle, to express action on their part. See instances in Fürst Conc. p. 45, v. אֵל, Ex. v. 10, De. i. 42, Is. i. 15, Jer. xiv. 12 (bis), xxxvii. 14; אֵל Gen. xx. 7, xliii. 5, Ex. viii. 17, Jud. xii. 3, 1 Sam. xix. 11, 2 Sam.

xix. 8, 1 Kgs. xxi. 5, Neh. ii. 2, Eccl. xi. 5, 6, Jer. vii. 17; אֵל, De. i. 32, iv. 12, 2 Kgs. xii. 8, Ez. xx. 39, Mal. ii. 2, 9; אֵל, De. xxi. 18, 20, Jud. iii. 25, 1 Sam. xi. 7, 2 Chr. xviii. 7, Esth. v. 13, Eccl. v. 11. viii. 7, 13, 16, ix. 2, Jer. xxxviii. 4, xlii. 16; אֵל, 2 Kgs. xvii. 26, 34 bis, Eccl. iv. 17, ix. 5, Neh. xiii. 24, Jer. xxxii. 33, Ezek. iii. 7. אֵל would have signified, "and ye were not [well disposed] towards Me," as in Hos. iii. 3, Jer. xv. 1, 2 Kgs. vi. 11 (Ewald's instances Lehrb. n. 217 c), Gen. xxxi. 5; not (as required here) "ye turned you not unto Me," as in Am. iv. 6, 8, 9, 10, 11. Böttcher (Lehrbuch n. 516. d.) compares bene te (which implies a verb), en illum (where en is as a verb.) These however are exclamations, not parts of sentences. He thinks that אֵל is joined, 1) with a nom., and then an acc. after 1, 1 Sam. xxvi. 16; that אֵל has an acc. Gen. xxiii. 8, 2 Kgs. x. 15, and אֵל Zech. vii. 7. ¹⁴ Zech. viii. 9.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

* Zech. 8. 12.

19 ^a Is the seed yet in the barn? yea, as yet the vine, and the fig tree, and the pomegranate, and the olive tree, hath not brought forth: from this day will I bless you.

20 ¶ And again the word of the Lord hosts was laid, that the temple might be built, not of the first foundation, but of the work as resumed in obedience to the words by the mouth of the prophets, Haggai and himself, which, Ezra also says, was ¹ in the second year of Darius. But that work was resumed, not now at the time of this prophecy, but three months before, on the 24th of the sixth month. Since then the word translated here, from ², is in no case used of the present time, Haggai gives two dates, the resumption of the work, as marked in these words, and the actual present. He would then say, that even in these last months, since they had begun the work, there were as yet no signs for the better. There was yet no seed in the barn, the harvest having been blighted and the fruit-trees stripped by the hail before the close of the sixth month, when they resumed the work. Yet though there were as yet no signs of change, no earnest that the promise should be fulfilled, God pledges His word, from this day I will bless you.

Thenceforth, from their obedience, God would give them those fruits of the earth, which in His Providence had been, during their negligence, withheld. God, said St. Paul and Barnabas, ³ left not Himself without witness, in that He did good, and gave us rain from heaven and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness.

All the Old and New Testament, the Law, the Prophets and the Psalms, the Apostles and our Lord Himself, bear witness to the Providence of God Who makes His natural laws serve to the moral discipline of His creature, man. The physical theory, which presupposes that God so fixed the laws of His creation, as to leave no room for Himself to vary them, would, if ever so true, only come to this, that Almighty God knowing absolutely (as He must know) the actions of His creatures (in what way soever this is reconcileable with our free-agency, of which we are conscious), framed the laws of His physical creation, so that plenty or famine, healthiness of our cattle or of the fruits of the earth or their sickness, should coincide with the good or evil conduct of man, with his prayers or his neglect of prayer. The reward or chastisement alike come to man, whether they be the result of God's Will, acting apart from any system which He has created, or in it and through it. It is alike His Providential agency, whether He have established any such system with all its minute variations, or whether those variations are the immediate result of His sovereign Will. If He has instituted any physical system, so that the rain, hail, and its proportions, size, destructiveness, should come in a regulated irregularity, as fixed in all eternity as the revolutions of the heavenly bodies or the courses of the comets, then we come only to a more intricate perfection of His creation; that in all eternity He framed those laws in an exact conformity to the perfectly foreseen actions of men good and evil, and to their prayers

¹ Ezr. iv. 24, v. 1.

² Such use of ^a would be inconsistent with any force of ^b. It is used of a terminus à quo, distant from the present, and is equivalent to "up to and from." So Jud. xix. 30, "No such deed was seen or done from the day that the children of Israel came up," i. e. looking back to that time and from it. So 2 Sam. vii. 6, "Since the time that I brought up the children of Israel out of Egypt," lit. "up to from the day." Add Ex. ix. 18, Deut. iv. 32, ix. 7, 2 Sam. vii. 11, xix. 25, 1s. vii. 17, Jer. vii. 7, 25, xxv. 5, xxxii. 31, 1 Chr. xvii. 10, Mal. iii. 7. But there is no ground for thinking that Haggai used the

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

ch. i. 14.

ver. 6. 7.
Heb. 12. 26.

came unto Haggai in the four and twentieth day of the month, saying,

21 Speak to Zerubbabel, ^a governor of Judah, saying, ^b I will shake the heavens and the earth;

also: that He, knowing certainly whether the creature, which He has framed to have its bliss in depending on Him, would or would not cry unto Him, framed those physical laws in conformity therewith; so that the supply of what is necessary for our wants or its withholding shall be in all time inworked into the system of our probation. Only, not to keep God out of His own world, we must remember that other truth, that, whether God act in any such system or no, He ^c uphieldeth all things by the word of His power by an ever-present working; so that it is He Who at each moment doth what is done, doth and maintains in existence all which He has created, in the exact order and variations of their being. ^d Fire and hail, snow and vapour, stormy wind fulfilling His word, are as immediate results of His Divine Agency, in whatever way it pleaseth Him to act, and are the expression of His Will.

21. I will shake. Haggai closes by resuming the words of a former prophecy to Zerubbabel and Joshua, which ended in the coming of Christ. Even thus it is plain, that the prophecy does not belong personally to Zerubbabel, but to him and his descendants, chiefly to Christ. There was in Zerubbabel's time no shaking of the heaven or of nations. Darius had indeed to put down an unusual number of rebellions in the first few years after his accession; but, although he magnified himself on occasion of their suppression, they were only so many distinct and unconcerted revolts, each under its own head. All were far away in the distant East, in Babylonia, Susiana, Media, Armenia, Assyria, Hyrcania, Parthia, Sagartia, Margiana, Arachosia^e. The Persian empire, spread ^f probably over 2,000,000 square miles, or more than half of modern Europe, was not threatened; no foreign enemy assailed it; one impostor only claimed the throne of Darius. This would, if successful, have been, like his own accession, a change of dynasty, affecting nothing externally. But neither were lasting, some were very trifling. Two decisive battles subdued Babylonia: of Media the brief summary is given; ^g "the Medes revolted from Darius, and having revolted were brought back into subjection, defeated in battle." The Susianians slew their own pretender, on the approach of the troops of Darius. We have indeed mostly the account only of the victor. But these are only self-glorying records of victories, accomplished in succession, within a few years. Sometimes the satrap of the province put the revolt down at once. At most two battles ended in the crucifixion of the rebel. The Jews, if they heard of them, knew them to be of no account. For the destroyer of the Persian empire was to come from the West^h; the fourth sovereign was to stir up all against the realm of Greciaⁱ, and Darius was but the third. In the same second year of Darius, in which Haggai gave this prophecy, the whole earth was exhibited to Zechariah as ^j sitting still and at rest.

word in any sense, in which it had not been used before him. The only construction consistent with the use of ^a elsewhere is, that the terminus ad quem, elsewhere expressed by ^b, having been expressed by the present ^c, the distant terminus à quo is, as elsewhere, expressed by ^d.

^e Heb. i. 3.

^f Rawlinson v. Empires iv. pp. 407-415. chiefly from Behistun Inscription.

^g Id. lb. p. 2.

^h Herod. i. 130.

ⁱ Ps. cxlviii. 8.

^j Dan. viii. 5.

^k Ib. xi. 2.

^l Zech. i. 11.

Before CHRIST
cir. 520.

22 And ^aI will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen; ^aI will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one

^a Dan. 2. 44.
Matt. 24. 7.
^a Mic. 5. 10.
Zech. 4. 6.
& 9. 10.

The overthrow prophesied is also universal. It is not one throne only, as of Persia, but the throne, i. e. the sovereigns, of kingdoms; not a change of dynasty, but a destruction of their strength; not of a few powers only, but the kingdoms of the heathen; and that, in detail; that, in which their chief strength lay, the chariots and horsemen and their riders, and this, man by man, every one by the sword of his brother. This mutual destruction is a feature of the judgements at the end of the world against Gog and Magog¹; and of the yet unfulfilled prophecies of Zechariah². Its stretching out so far does not hinder its partial fulfilment in earlier times. Zerubbabel stood, at the return from the captivity, as the representative of the house of David and heir of the promises to him, though in an inferior temporal condition; thereby the rather shewing that the main import of the prophecy was not temporal. As then Ezekiel prophesied,³ I will set up One Shepherd over them, and He shall feed them, My servant David; ⁴ And David My servant shall be king over them; and My servant David shall be their prince for ever; and Jeremiah,⁵ They shall serve the Lord their God and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them; and Hosea, that ⁶ after many days shall the children of Israel return and seek the Lord their God, and David their king, meaning by David, the great descendant of David, in whom the promises centered, so in his degree, the promise to Zerubbabel reaches on through his descendants to Christ; that, amid all the overthrow of empires, God would protect his sons' sons until Christ should come, the King of kings and Lord of lords, Whose ⁷ kingdom shall never be destroyed, but it shall break in pieces and consume all those kingdoms, and shall stand fast for ever.

23. I will make thee as a signet. God reverses to Zerubbabel the sentence on Jeconiah for his impiety. To Jeconiah He had said,⁸ though he were the signet upon My right hand, yet would I pluck thee thence; and I will give thee into the hand of them that seek thy life. The signet was very precious to its owner, never parted with, or only to those to whom authority was delegated (as by Pharaoh to Joseph⁹, or by Ahasuerus to Haman¹⁰ and then to Mordecai¹¹); through it his will was expressed. Hence the spouse in the Canticles says,¹² Set me, as a seal upon thy heart, as a seal upon thy arm. The signet also was an ornament to him who wore it. *God is glorified in His saints*¹³; by Zerubbabel in the building of His house. He gave him estimation with Cyrus, who entrusted him with the return of his people, and made him (who would have been the successor to the throne of Judah, had the throne been re-established) his governor over the restored people. God promises to him and his descendants protection amid all shaking of empires. ¹⁴ He was a type of Christ in bringing back the people from Babylon, as Christ delivered us from sin death and hell: he built the temple, as Christ built the Church; he protected his people against the Samaritans who would

¹ Ezek. xxxviii. 21. ² Zech. xiv. 17.
³ Ezek. xxxiv. 23. ⁴ Ib. xxxvii. 24, 25. ⁵ Jer. xxx. 9.
⁶ Hos. iii. 5. ⁷ Dan. ii. 44.
⁸ Jer. xxii. 24. ⁹ Gen. xli. 42. ¹⁰ Esther iii. 10. ¹¹ Ib. viii. 2.

by the sword of his brother.

23 In that day, saith the Lord of hosts, will I take thee, O Zerubbabel, my servant, the son of Shealtiel, saith the Lord, ^b and ^b will make thee as a signet: for ^c I have ^c chosen thee, saith the Lord of hosts.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

^b Cant. 8. 6,
Jer. 22. 24.
^c Isai. 42. 1.
& 43. 10.

hinder the building, as Christ protects His Church: he was dear and joined to God, as Christ was united to Him, and hypostatically united and joined His Humanity to the Word. The true Zerubbabel then, i. e. Christ, the son and antitype of Zerubbabel, is the signet in the hand of the Father, both passively and actively, whereby God impresses His own Majesty thoughts and words and His own Image on men angels and all creatures." ¹⁵ The Son is the Image of God the Father, having His entire and exact likeness, and in His own beauty beaming forth the nature of the Father. In Him too God seals us also to His own likeness, since, being conformed to Christ, we gain the image of God." ¹⁶ *Christ, as the Apostle says, is the Image of the invisible God, the brightness of His Glory and the express Image of His Person, Who, as the Word and Seal and express Image, seals it on others. Christ is here called a signet, as Man not as God. For it was His Manhood which He took of the flesh and race of Zerubbabel. He is then, in His Manhood, the signet of God; 1) as being hypostatically united with the Son of God; 2) because the Word impressed on His Humanity the likeness of Himself, His knowledge, virtue, holiness, thoughts, words, acts and conversation; 3) because the Man Christ was the seal, i. e. the most evident sign and witness of the attributes of God, His power, justice, wisdom, and especially His exceeding love for man. For, that God might shew this, He willed that His Son should be Incarnate. Christ thus Incarnate is as a seal, in which we see expressed and depicted the love power justice wisdom &c. of God; 4) because Christ as a seal, attested and certified to us the will of God, His doctrine law commands, i. e. those which He promulgated and taught in the Gospel. No one, St. John saith, ¹⁷ hath seen God at any time: the Only-Begotten Son Who is the Image of the Father, He hath declared Him. Hence God gave to Christ the power of working miracles, that He might confirm His words as by a seal, and demonstrate that they were revealed and enjoined to Him by God, as it is in St. John, ¹⁸ Him hath God the Father sealed." ¹⁹ *Christ is also the seal of God, because by His impress, i. e. the faith grace virtue and conversation from Him and by the impress in Baptism and the other Sacraments, He willed to conform us to the Image of His Son*²⁰, that, ²¹ as we have borne the image of the earthly Adam, we may also bear the image of the Heavenly. Then, Christ, like a seal, seals and guards His faithful against all temptations and enemies. The seal of Christ is the Cross, according to that of Ezekiel, ²² Seal a mark upon the foreheads of the men who sigh, and in the Revelation, ²³ I saw another Angel having the seal of the living God. For the Cross guardeth us against the temptations of the flesh, the world and the devil, and makes us followers, soldiers, and martyrs of Christ crucified. Whence the Apostle says, ²⁴ I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus."*

"This is said without doubt of the Messiah, the expected;"

¹² Cant. viii. 6. ¹³ 2 Thess. i. 10.
¹⁴ Lap. ¹⁵ S. Cyr. ¹⁶ Heb. i. 3.
¹⁷ S. John vi. 27. ¹⁸ Rom. viii. 29. ¹⁹ S. John i. 18.
²⁰ 1 Cor. xv. 49. ²¹ in Ezek. ix. 4. ²² Rev. vii. 2. ²³ Gal. vi. 17.

says even a Jewish controversialist¹, "who shall be of the seed of Zerubbabel; and therefore this promise was not fulfilled at all in himself: for at the time of this prophecy he had aforetime been governor of Judah, and afterwards he did not rise to any higher dignity than what he was up to that day: and in like way we find that God said to Abraham our father in the covenant between the pieces,² I am the Lord who brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees to give thee this land to inherit it, and beyond doubt this covenant was confirmed of God to the seed of Abraham, as He Himself explained it there afterwards, when He said, In that day God made a covenant with Abraham, saying, To thy seed have I given this land &c., and many like these."

Abarbanel had laid down the right principles, though of necessity misapplied. "³Zerubbabel did not reign in Jerusalem and did not rule in it, neither he nor any man of his seed; but forthwith after the building of the house, he returned to Babylon and died there in his captivity, and how saith he, 'In that day I will take thee?' For after the fall of the kingdom of Persia Zerubbabel is not known for any greatness, and his name is not mentioned in the world. Where then will be the meaning of 'And I will place thee as a signet, for thee have I chosen?' For the signet is as the seal-ring which a man putteth on his hand, it departeth not from it, night or day. And when was this fulfilled in Zerubbabel? But the true meaning, in my opinion, is, that God shewed Zerubbabel that this very second house would not abide; for after him should come another captivity, and of this he says, 'I shake the heaven &c.,' and afterwards, after a long time, will God take His vengeance of these nations 'which have devoured Jacob and laid waste his dwelling place;' and so He says 'I will overthrow the thrones &c.,' and He sheweth him further that the king who shall rule over Israel at the time of the redemption is the Messiah of the seed of Zerubbabel and of the house of David; and God saw good to shew him all this to comfort him and to speak to his heart; and it is as if he said to him, 'It is true that thou shalt not reign in the time of the second temple, nor any of thy seed, but in that day when God shall overthrow the throne of the kingdoms of the nations, when He gathereth His people Israel and redeemeth them, then shalt thou reign over My people; for of thy seed shall he be who ruleth from Israel at that time for ever, and therefore he saith, 'I will take thee, O Zerubbabel &c.,' for because the Messiah was to be of his seed he saith, that he will take him; and this is as he says, "⁴And David My servant shall be a prince to them for ever;' for the very Messiah, he shall be David, he shall be Zerubbabel, because he shall be a scion going forth out of their hewn trunk⁵."

For I have chosen thee. God's foregoing love is the ground of all the acceptableness of His creatures. "⁶*We love Him, because He first loved us.* Zerubbabel was a devoted servant of God. God acknowledges his faithfulness. Only, the beginning of all was with God. God speaks of the nearness to Himself which He had given him. But in two words⁷ He cuts off all possible boastfulness of His creature. Zerubbabel was all this, not of himself, but because God had chosen him. Even the Sacred Manhood of our Lord (it is acknowledged as a theological Truth) was not chosen for any foreseen merits, but for the great love, with which God the Father chose It, and God the Son willed to be in such wise incarnate, and God the Holy Ghost willed that that Holy Thing should be conceived of Him. So God says of Him, "⁸*Behold My Servant whom I uphold, Mine elect in whom My soul delighteth*; and God bare witness to Him, "⁹*This is My Beloved Son in Whom I am well pleased.*

¹ R. Isaac Chiz. Em. l. c. pp. 289, 290.

² Gen. xv. 7, 18.

³ רמב"ם.

⁴ Ezek. xxxvii. 24.

⁵ Is. xi. 1.

⁶ Is. xlii. 1.

⁷ 1 S. John iv. 19.

⁸ S. Mat. iii. 17. xvii. 5.

INTRODUCTION

TO

THE PROPHEET

ZECHARIAH.

ZECHARIAH entered on his prophetic office, two months after Haggai's first prophecy. He was still a youth, when God called him^a, and so, since in the second year of Darius Hystaspis 18 years had elapsed from the first of Cyrus, he must have been brought in infancy from Babylon. His father Berechiah probably died young, since, in Ezra, the prophet is called after his grandfather, Zechariah the son of Iddo^b. He succeeded his grandfather in the office of the priests, the chief of the fathers, (of which there were twelve) in the days of Joiakim the son of Joshua, the High priest^c. Since then, while he prophesied together with Haggai, Joshua was still high priest, and it is Joshua whom he sees in his vision in that same year^d, he must have entered on his prophetic office before he succeeded to that other dignity. Yet neither is there any reason to think that he ever laid it aside, since we hear not of any prophet, called by God, who did abandon it. Rather, like Jeremiah, he exercised both; called to the priesthood by the birth given to him by God, called to the prophetic office by Divine inspiration.

Like Jeremiah, Zechariah was called in early youth to the prophetic office. The same designation, by which Jeremiah at first excused himself as unfit for the office, is given to Zechariah, youth^e. The term does not indeed mark any definite age; for Joseph, when he was so designated^f by the chief butler, was 28^g; Benjamin and Absalom had sons of their own^h. They were probably so called as terms of affection, the one by his brother Judahⁱ, the other by David his father^k. But his grandfather Iddo was still in the discharge of his office. The length of his ministry is equally unknown. Two years after his first entrance upon it^l, when Haggai's office was closed, he was bidden to answer from God those who enquired whether, now that they were freed from the captivity, they should keep the national fasts which they had instituted on occasion of some of the mournful events which had ushered it in. His remaining prophecies bear no date. The belief, that he lived and prophesied to old age, may have a true foundation, though to us unknown. We only know that he survived the high priest, Joshua, since his own accession to his office of head of the priests, in his division, was in the days of Joiakim, the son of Joshua.

His book opens with a very simple touching call to those returned from the captivity, linking himself on to the former prophets, but contrasting the transitoriness of all human things, those who prophesied and those to whom they prophesied, with the abidingness of the word of God. It consists of four parts, differing in outward character, yet with a remarkable unity of purpose and end. All begin with a foreground subsequent to the captivity; all reach on to a further end; the two first to the coming of our Lord; the third from the deliverance of the house then built, during the invasion of Alexander, and from the victories of the Maccabees, to the rejection of the true Shepherd and the curse upon the false; the last, which is connected with the third by its title, reaches from a future repentance for the death of Christ to the final conversion of the Jews and Gentiles.

The outward difference, that the first prophecy is in visions; the second, a response to an enquiry made of him; the two last in free delivery, obviously did not depend upon the prophet. The occasion also of the two first bodies of prophecy involved that they were written in prose. For the imagery was borne on the prophet's mind in visions. The office of the prophet was only to record them and the explanations given to him of parts of them, which could only be done in prose. He was so far like the Apostles, who enquired of our Lord, when in the flesh, the meaning of His parables. There is, as in the later chapters, abundance of imagery; and it may have pleased God to adapt the form of His revelation to the imaginative mind of the young prophet who was to receive it. But the visions are, as the name implies, pictures which the prophet sees, and which he describes. Even a rationalist writer saw this. "Every vision must form a picture, and the description of a vision must have the appearance of being read from a picture. It follows from the na-

^a Zech. ii. 4.

^c Neh. xii. 10, 12, 16.

^e נער. Jer. i. 6, Zech. ii. 4.

^g Joseph was 30, when he stood before Pharaoh (Ib. 46), but the interpretation of the dreams of Pharaoh's servants was given two years before. (Ib. 1.)

^h Benjamin had 10 sons when Jacob went down into Egypt (Gen. xli. 21); Absalom's 3 sons (2 Sam. xiv. 27.) were dead (Ib. xviii. 18). Absalom was David's third son.

^b Ezr. v. 1. vi. 14.

^d Zech. iii. 1.

^f Gen. xli. 12.

(2 Sam. iii. 3.)

^k 2 Sam. xviii. 5, 12, 29, 32.

^m Eichhorn Einl. n. 603. iv. pp. 435, 436. "The style in these visions borders closely on prose: for they relate what the Seer saw; and prose is the natural vehicle of relation." Ib. n. 605. p. 442. Eichhorn also draws attention to what he calls "the hymns, songs of victory or consolation, with which the visions are sometimes closed, and which are a more elevated finale." Ib.

^l Gen. xliii. 8. xlv. 22, 30, 33.

^{vii. 1.}

ture of the description of a vision, that for the most part it cannot be composed in any elevated language. The simplest prose is the best vehicle for a relation (and such is the description of a vision), and elaborate ornament of language were foreign to it. The beauty, greatness, elevation of a vision, as described, must lie in the conception, or in the symmetry, or wondrous boldness in the grouping of the images. Is the whole groupe, piece by piece, in all its parts, to the most minute shading, faithful and described with the character of truth, the exhibition of the vision in words is perfect."

The four portions were probably of different dates, as they stand in order in the prophet's book, as indeed the second is dated two years later than the first^a. For in the first part God's people are exhorted to come from Babylon^b, which command, many in the time of Ezra, obeyed, and doubtless individuals subsequently, when a prosperous polity was restored; in the latter part, Babylon is mentioned no more; only in one place, in the imagery of earlier prophets, the future gathering of God's people is symbolised under the previous deliverance from West and East, Egypt and Assyria^c.

But they agree in this, that the foreground is no longer, as in the former prophets, deliverance from Babylon. In the first part, the reference to the vision of the four empires in Daniel removes the promise of the Deliverer to the fourth Empire. For the series of visions having closed with the vision of the four chariots, there follows at once the symbolic act of placing the crown or crowns on the head of the high priest and the promise of the Messiah, Who should be king and priest^d. In the later part the enemies spoken of are in one place the Greeks^e, subsequent to the protection of the temple under Alexander^f; in another the final gathering of all nations against Jerusalem^g, which Joel also places at the end of all things^h, after the outpouring of the Spirit, as it was outpoured on the day of Pentecost.

In both parts alike, there is no mention of any king or of any earthly ruler; in both, the ruler to come is the Messiah. In both, the division of the two kingdoms is gone. The house of Israel and house of Judah are united, not dividedⁱ; they had been distinct wholes, now they are in interests as one. Zechariah promises a future to both collectively, as did Jeremiah^k long after the captivity of Israel, and Ezekiel promised that they should both again be one in the hand of God^l. The brotherhood between Judah and Israel still existed, after they had weighed the thirty pieces of silver for the Good Shepherd. The captivity, in God's Providence, ended at once the kingdom of Israel and the religious schism, the object of which was to maintain the kingdom. Even before the captivity, divers of Asher and Manasseh and Zebulun humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem, to the passover of Hezekiah; nay, a great multitude of the people from Ephraim and Manasseh, Issachar and Zebulun, who had neglected or despised the first invitation^m, came subsequently. In the great passover of Josiah, we hear of all Judah and Israel that were present. The edict of Cyrus related to the people of the Lord, God of heaven, and was published throughout all his kingdom, which included the cities of the Medes, whither Israel had been removed. The sacred history is confined to Jerusalem, whence the Gospel was to go forth; yet even the sons of Bethel, the centre of the rival, idolatrous worship, which was among the mountains of Ephraim, were among those of the people of Israel who returned with Zerubbabel. It is inconceivable that, as the material prosperity of Palestine returned, even many of the ten tribes should not have returned to their country. But place was no condition of the unity of the Church. Those who returned recognised the religious oneness of all the twelve tribes, wherever dispersed. At the dedication of the house of God, they offered a sin-offering for all Israel, twelve he-goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel. At that passover were present, not only the children of Israel which had come again out of the captivity, but, all such as had separated themselves unto them from the defilements of the people of the land, to seek the Lord God of Israel, i. e., Israelites, who had been defiled by the heathen idolatries. The house of Davidⁿ is mentioned; for of his seed according to the flesh Messiah was to be born, but it is his house, not any earthly ruler in it.

In both parts alike, Zechariah connects his prophecies with the former prophets, the fulfilment of whose warnings he impressed upon his people in his opening exhortation to them^o, and in his answer to the question about keeping the fasts^p which related to the destruction of the city and temple. In the first part, the title "the Branch" is used as a proper name, recalling the title of the Messiah in Isaiah and Jeremiah, the Branch of the Lord^q, a righteous Branch^r, a Branch of righteousness^s, whom God would raise up to David. The prophecy of the mutual exhortation of peoples and cities to worship at Jerusalem^t is an echo of those of Isaiah and Micah, prolonging them. The prophecy of the four chariots^u, the symbol of those world-empires, would be unintelligible without the visions in Daniel which it presupposes. The union of the offices of priest and king in the Messiah is a renewal of the promise through David^v. In the last chapters, the continuousness of the prophet's diction admits still more of this interweaving of the former prophecies, and these alike from the earlier and later prophets. The censure of Tyre for its boast of its wisdom is a renewal of that of Ezekiel^w; the prophecy against the Philistine cities, of that of Zephaniah^x; the remarkable prediction that, when the king should come to Zion, chariots and horses, not of the enemy but of Judah should be cut off, is renewed from Micah^y; the extent of his peaceful kingdom is from a psalm of Solomon^z; the loosing of the exile from the pit, and God's rendering double unto them, are in Isaiah^{aa}. The description of the sifting, in which, two parts having been cut off, even the remaining third should be anew tried and cleansed, is condensed from Ezekiel, so that, shall be cut off, shall expire, correspond to the natural and violent deaths, by famine and by the sword, spoken of in Ezekiel^{ab}. The words, I have said, it is My people, and it will say, the Lord my God, are almost verbally from Hosea, I say to not-my-people, thou art My people, and it will say, my God; only omitting the allusion to the significant name of the pro-

^a Ib. 21. ^v Zech. xii. 7. The king's wine-presses (Zech. xiv. 10.) is but the name of a locality in Jerusalem, which retained its former name. Wine-presses were often hewn out in the rock. Bleek, who alleged this, afterwards (Einl. p. 563. note) laid no stress on it. ^w i. 4-6. ^x vii. 7-14. ^y iii. 8. vi. 12. ^z Is. iv. 2. ^{aa} Jer. xxiii. 5. ^{ab} Ib. xxxiii. 15. ^{ac} Zech. viii. 20-22. comp. Mic. iv. 1, 2. Is. ii. 3. ^{ad} Zech. vi. coll. Dan. ii. vii. See below on c. vi. and "Daniel the Prophet" pp. 359-361. ^{ae} Zech. vi. 13. coll. Ps. cx. ^{af} ix. 2. and Ezek. xxviii. 3. ^{ag} ix. 10. Mic. v. 10. ^{ah} Ib. Ps. lxxii. 8. ^{ai} Ib. 12. Is. li. 14. lxi. 7. ^{aj} xiii. 8, 9. Ezek. v. 12. Hengst. ^{ak} Hengst. Zech. xiii. 9, Hos. ii. 25.

^a "In the 2nd year of Darius." i. 1. "In the 4th year of Darius." vii. 1. ^b ii. 7. ^c Zech. x. 10. Comp. Is. xi. 11, 16. Hos. xi. 11. ^d vi. 10-13. ^e ix. 13. ^f Ib. 8. See Pusey's "Daniel the Prophet," pp. 279-282. ^g xii. 2, 3, 9. xiv. 2, 3, 14, 16. ^h Joel iii. 2. ⁱ "As ye were a curse among the heathen, O house of Judah and house of Israel" viii. 13; "these are the horns which scattered Judah, Israel, Jerusalem," i. 19. (ii. 2. Heb.) So in x. 6. "I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and I will bring them again to place them." ^k Jer. xxiii. 6. l. 20. ^l Ez. xxxvii. 16-19. ^m 2 Chr. xxx. 11. ⁿ Ib. 10. ^o Ib. 10. ^p Ib. xxxv. 18. ^q Ezr. i. 1, 2. ^r 2 Kgs xvii. 6. ^s Ezr. ii. 2, 28. ^t Ib. vi. 17.

phet's son. "The first part of xiv. 10, the whole land shall be turned as a plain from Gebah to Rimmon, and Jerusalem shall be exalted, reminds of Isaiah and Ezekiel; the latter part, it shall be inhabited in her place from the tower of Hanael to the king's vinepresses, and men shall dwell in it and there shall be no more utter desolation, but Jerusalem shall dwell securely, reminds of Jeremiah, The city shall be built to the Lord from the tower of Hanael unto the gate of the corner; it shall not be plucked up nor thrown down any more. The words, and every one that is left of all the nations shall go up to worship the king, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles, reminds of Isaiah, From new-moon to his new-moon, and from sabbath to his sabbath shall all flesh come to worship before Me, saith the Lord. v. 17-19 are an expansion of Isaiah lx. 12; v. 20 expresses the thought of Ez. xliii. 13: the prophecy, there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the Lord for ever, refers back to Ezekiel.¹ The symbolising of the Gospel by the life-giving waters which should flow forth from Jerusalem, originally in Joel iii. 18, is a miniature of the full picture in Ezekiel.² The promise, "I will cut off the names of the idols from the land and they shall be no more remembered," in part verbally agrees with that of Hosea, "And I will remove the names of the Baalim from her mouth, and they shall be no more remembered by their names;" only, since the Baal-worship was destroyed by the captivity, the more general name of idols is substituted.

Equally, in descriptions not prophetic, the symbolising of the wicked by the title of the goats, *I punished the goats*³, is renewed from Ezekiel; I judge between flock and flock, between the rams and the he-goats. The description of the shepherds who destroyed their flocks retains from Jeremiah the characteristic expression, and hold themselves not guilty. The minuteness of the enumeration of their neglects and cruelties is the same (amid differences of the words whereby it is expressed): "the perishing shall he not visit, those astray shall he not seek, and the broken shall he not heal; the sound shall he not nurture, and the flesh of the fat shall he eat and their claws he shall split." In Ezekiel, "Ye eat the fat and clothe you with the wool; the fat ye slay; the flock ye feed not; the diseased have ye not healed; and the broken have ye not bound, and the wandering have ye not sought." The imagery of Obadiah, that Israel should be a flame amidst corn to consume it, is retained; the name of Edom is dropped, for the prophecy relates to a larger gathering of enemies. Zechariah has, "In that day I will make the governors of Judah like a hearth of fire among wood and like a lamp of fire in a sheaf of corn, and they shall eat on the right hand and on the left all nations round about;" Obadiah; "The house of Jacob shall be fire and the house of Jacob a flame, and the house of Esau stubble, and it shall kindle on them and shall eat them." Even so slight an expression as *the pride of Jordan*⁴, as designating the cane-brake around it, is peculiar to Jeremiah⁵.

Zechariah is eminently an Evangelic prophet, as much as Isaiah, and equally in both portions.

The use of different words in unlike subjects is a necessary consequence of that unlikeness. In contrast with that pseudo-criticism, which counts up the unlike words in different chapters of a prophet, the different words used by the same modern poet have been counted⁶. A finer perception will see the correspondence of a style, when the rhythm, subject, words, are different. No one familiar with English poetry could doubt that "the Bard," and "the Elegy in a country Churchyard," however different in subject and style and words, were by the same hand, judging alone from the laboured selection of the epithets, however different. Yet there is not one characteristic word or idiom which occurs in both. But the recurrence of the same or like words or idiom, if unusual elsewhere, is a subordinate indication of sameness of authorship.

They are thus enumerated by the writers who have answered the attacks on the authorship of Zechariah.

"Common to both parts are the idioms, from him who goeth and from him who returneth, which do not occur elsewhere; the whole Jewish people are throughout designated as "the house of Israel and the house of Judah," or "the house of Judah and the house of Joseph," or "Judah Israel and Jerusalem," or "Ephraim and Jerusalem," or "Judah and Ephraim," or "Judah and Israel." There is in both parts the appeal to future knowledge of God's doings to be obtained by experience⁷; in both, internal discord is directly attributed to God, Whose Providence permits it⁸; in both the prophet promises God's gifts of the produce of the earth⁹; in both he bids Jerusalem burst out for joy; in the first, "for lo, God says, I come and will dwell in the midst of thee; in the second, behold thy King cometh unto thee.

The purity of language is alike in both parts of the book. No one Syriasm occurs in the earlier chapters¹⁰. The prophet, who returned as a child to Judæa, formed his language upon that of the older prophets.

In both there is a certain fulness of language, produced by dwelling on the same thought or word¹¹; in both, the whole and its parts are, for emphasis, mentioned together¹². In ^a Hengst. ^b Jer. xxxi. 38. 40. ^c Zech. xiv. 16. ^d Is. lxxvi. 23.

^e Zech. xiv. 21. ^f Ezek. xlv. 9. ^g Zech. xiv. 8, Ezek. xlvii. 1-13.
^h Zech. xiii. 2. Hos. ii. 17. ⁱ Zech. x. 3. Ezek. xxxiv. 17.
^k As in Zech. xi. 5. ^l Jer. i. 7. ^m Zech. xi. 16.
ⁿ Ezek. xxxiv. 3, 4. ^o Zech. xii. 6. Obad. 18. ^p Zech. xi. 3.
^q Jer. xii. 5. xlix. 19. l. 44.

^r Prof. Stanley Leathes, "The witness of the Old Testament to Christ. Note on the Authorship of Isaiah," (pp. 282, 283.) gives the following summary as to the occurrence of words in poems of Milton and Tennyson: "L'Allegro is a poem of 152 lines: it contains about 450 words; Il Penseroso is a poem of 176 lines, and contains about 578 words; Lycidas is a poem of 193 lines, which are longer than those of either of the other two, most of them being heroics: its words are about 725. It is plain, therefore, that Milton must have used for Il Penseroso 128 words not in L'Allegro, and for Lycidas 275 not in L'Allegro, and 147 not in Il Penseroso."

"But what is much more remarkable, is the fact that there are only about 125 words common to L'Allegro and Il Penseroso; only about 140 common to Lycidas and Il Penseroso; only about 61 common to all three. That is; Milton must have used for Il Penseroso 450 words not in L'Allegro, and for Lycidas 590 not in L'Allegro. He must have used for Lycidas some 535 words not in Il Penseroso, and more than 660 not occurring in both together. Also, there must be in L'Allegro some 325 words not in Il Penseroso, and 315 not in Lycidas; and there must be in Il Penseroso nearly 410 words not in Lycidas."

"Again, Tennyson's Lotos-Eaters contains about 590 words; Ænone has about 720. Thus the latter must contain 130 words not in the former: but a comparison shows that there are only about 230 words common to the two poems. That is, there must be 490 words in Ænone which are not in the Lotos-Eaters, and there must be in the Lotos-Eaters about 360 words not occurring in Ænone; that is,—the shorter poem has 360 words which the longer one does not contain."

^s עברו ושובו vii. 14, ix. 8. In Ez. xxxii. 27, the expression עברו ושובו, "pass through and return," is not proverbial; in Ezek. xxxv. 7, it is "I will cut off from you." עבר ושב viii. 13. ^t x. 6. ^u i. 19, [ii. 2. Heb.] ^v ix. 10. ^w ix. 13. ^x xi. 14. ^y ii. 13, 15. xi. 11. ^z viii. 10. xi. 6. ^{aa} viii. 12. x. 1. ^{ab} ii. 14. [10. Eng.] ^{ac} ix. 9.

^{ad} Job xxii. 29. xxxiii. 7, from נָתַתּוּ לָהֶם (Ew. Lchrh. n. 62. b); but which of these critics would argue from the points except in favour of what he wished to maintain? Böttcher (Lehrbuch n. 437, g. 498. 3. p. 304.) regards the as emphatic. ^{ae} "That בָּלִיִּים (iii. 7.) comes from a קָלָקָל is self-evident." Ew. ad loc. ^{af} עֵרָ ל' (i. 16.) is not "joined with acc. of object," but is simply our, "helped to evil."

^{ag} As in the repetition of יוֹשֵׁעַ בְּיָמֵינוּ ii. 14, 15; of וְנָתַתּוּ, in vi. 10; וְנָתַתּוּ, in vi. 12, 13; וְנָתַתּוּ, in vi. 14, 15; וְנָתַתּוּ, 3 times in viii. 4. 5; וְנָתַתּוּ, in xiv. 1b. 23; וְנָתַתּוּ, at the beginning and end of xi. 7; וְנָתַתּוּ, at the end, xiv. 10, 11. ^{ah} וְנָתַתּוּ, in xiv. 3. In xiv. 4, the sentence וְנָתַתּוּ &c., explains the same event in different words; וְנָתַתּוּ, in xiv. 5.

^{ai} v. 4. "the house, and its stones, and its timbers," x. 4. "out of him the corner; out of him the nail; out of him the battle bow; out of him every oppressor together." x. 11. "the land shall mourn, every family apart," and then follows the enumeration of the families. 12, 13.

both parts, as a consequence of this fulness, there occurs the division of the verse into five sections, contrary to the usual rule of Hebrew parallelism.

This rhythm will appear more vividly in instances ^a;

“^b And he shall build the temple of the Lord;
And he shall bear majesty;
And he shall sit and rule on his throne;
And he shall be a priest on his throne;
And a counsel of peace shall be between them both.

^c Ashkelon shall see, and shall fear;
Gaza, and shall tremble exceedingly;
And Ekron, and ashamed is her expectation;
And perished hath a king from Gaza,
And Ashkelon shall not be inhabited.

^d And I will take away his blood from his mouth,
And his abominations from between his teeth:
And he too shall be left to our God,
And he shall be as a governor in Judah,
And Ekron as a Jebusite.

“^e In that day, saith the Lord,
I will smite every horse with astonishment,
And his rider with madness;
And upon the house of Judah I will open my eyes,
And every horse of the nations I will smite with blindness.”

With one considerable exception^f, those who would sever the six last chapters from Zechariah, are now at one in placing them before the captivity. Yet Zechariah here too speaks of the captivity as past. Adopting the imagery of Isaiah, who foretells the delivery from the captivity as an opening of a prison, he says, in the name of God, “^g By the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water.” Again, “^h The Lord of hosts hath visited His flock, the house of Judah. I will have mercy upon them [Judah and Joseph] and they shall be as though I had not cast them off.” The mention of the mourning of all the families that remainⁱ implies a previous carrying away. Yet more; Zechariah took his imagery of the future restoration of Jerusalem, from its condition in his own time. “^k It shall be lifted up and inhabited in its place from Benjamin’s gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner-gate, and from the tower of Hananeel unto the king’s vinepresses.” “The gate of Benjamin” is doubtless “the gate of Ephraim,” since the road to Ephraim lay through Benjamin; but the gate of Ephraim existed in Nehemiah’s time^l, yet was not then repaired, as neither was the tower of Hananeel^m, having been left, doubtless, at the destruction of Jerusalem, being useless for defence, when the wall was broken down. So “at the second invasion the Romans left the three impregnable towers, of Hippicus, Phasaclus, and Mariamne, as monuments of the greatness of the city which they had destroyed. Benjamin’s gate, the corner gate, the tower of Hananeel, were still standing; “the king’s vinepresses” were naturally uninjured, since there was no use in injuring them: but the first gate was destroyed, since not itself, but the place of it is mentioned.

The prophecy of the victory over the Greeks fits in with times when Assyria or Chaldaea were no longer the instruments of God in the chastisement of His people. The notion that the prophet incited the few Hebrew slaves, sold into Greece, to rebel against their masters, is so absurd, that one wonders that any one could have ventured to forge it and put it upon a Hebrew prophetⁿ.

Since, moreover, all now, who sever the six last chapters from the preceding, also divide these six into two halves, the evidence that the six chapters are from one author is a separate ground against their theory. Yet not only are they connected by the imagery of the people as the flock of God^o, whom God committed to the hand of the Good Shepherd^p, and on their rejecting Him, gave them over to an evil shepherd^r; but the Good Shepherd is One with God^q. The poor of the flock, who would hold to the Shepherd, are designated by a corresponding word^s.

A writer has been at pains to shew that two different conditions of things are foretold in the two prophecies. Granted. The first, we believe, has its foreground in the deliverance during the conquests of Alexander, and under the Maccabees, and leads on to the rejection of the true Shepherd and God’s visitation on the false. The later relates to a later repentance and later visitation of God, in part yet future. By what law is a prophet bound down to speak of one future only?

For those who criticise the prophets, resolve all prophecy into mere “anticipation” of what might, or might not be, denying to them all certain knowledge of any future, it is but speaking plainly, when they imagine the author of the three last chapters to have “anticipated” that God would interpose miraculously to deliver Jerusalem, then, when it was destroyed. It would have been in direct contradiction to Jeremiah, who for 39 years in one unbroken dirge predicted the evil which should come upon Jerusalem. The prophecy, had it preceded the destruction of Jerusalem, could not have been earlier than the reign of the wretched Jehoiakim, since the mourning for the death of Josiah is spoken of as a proverbial sorrow of the past. This invented prophet then would have been one of the false prophets, who contradicted Jeremiah, prophesying good, while Jeremiah prophesied evil; who encouraged Zedekiah in his perjury, the punishment whereof Ezekiel solemnly denounced^t, prophesying his captivity in Babylon as its penalty; he would have been one of those, of whom Jeremiah said, that they spake lies^v in the name of the Lord. It was not “anticipation” on either side. It was the statement of those who spoke more certainly than we could say, “the sun will rise tomorrow.” They were the direct contradictories of one another. The false prophets said, “^w the Lord hath said, Ye shall have peace;” the true, “^x they have said, Peace, peace, when there is no peace:” the false said, “^y sword and famine shall not be in the land;” the true, “^z By sword and famine shall their prophets be consumed;” the false said, “^{aa} ye shall not serve the king of Babylon;” thus saith the Lord, even so will I break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, from the neck of all nations within the space of two full years;” the true, “^{ab} Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Now have I given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, My servant, and all nations shall serve him, and his son and his son’s son.” The false said, “^{ac} I will bring again to this place Jeconiah, with all the captives of Judah, that went into Babylon, for I will stirring up the Jews to war with the Greeks. Other evasions see in Pusey’s “Daniel the Prophet” pp. 231, 282, note.

^a This was observed by Köster, Meletemata crit. et excog. in Zech. part. post. c. ix-xiv. pp. 54-56.

^b vi. 13.

^c ix. 5.

^d Ib. 7.

^e xii. 4. Köster further refers to i. 4, 17. iii. 5, 9, and on the other hand to ix. 9, 10, 13, 15. x. 11. xi. 2, 7, 9, 17. xii. 10. xiv. 4, 8.

^f ix. 11.

^g x. 3-5.

^h xii. 14.

ⁱ xiv. 10.

^j Neh. viii. 16. xii. 39.

^k Ib. iii. 1.

^l Jos. B. J. vii. 1, 1.

^m Hitzig. Ewald avoids this; but would have it, that the prophet in Joel’s time was ⁿ Jer. xiv. 14, xxiii. 22, xxvii. 15, xxviii. 15, xxix. 8, 9.

^o Jer. viii. 11. xxiii. 17.

^p Ezek. xiii. 2-10.

^q Ib. xxvii. 9-14, xxviii. 11.

^r Ib. xxvii. 4, 6, 7.

^s Jer. xiv. 15.

^t Ib. xxviii. 4.

break the yoke of the king of Babylon;" the true, "I will cast thee out and the mother that bare thee, into another country, where ye were not born, and there ye shall die. But to the land, whereunto they desire to return, thither they shall not return." The false said; "The vessels of the Lord's house shall now shortly be brought again from Babylon;" the true, "the residue of the vessels that remain in this city, —they shall be carried to Babylon."

If the writer of the three last chapters had lived just before the destruction of Jerusalem in those last reigns, he would have been a political fanatic, one of those who, by encouraging rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar, brought on the destruction of the city, and, in the name of God, told lies against God. "That which is most peculiar in this prophet," says one^d, "is the uncommon high and pious hope of the deliverance of Jerusalem and Judah, notwithstanding all visible greatest dangers and threatenings. At a time when Jeremiah, in the walls of the capital, already despairs of any possibility of a successful resistance to the Chaldees and exhorts to tranquillity, this prophet still looks all these dangers straight in the face with swelling spirit and divine confidence, holds, with unbowed spirit, firm to the like promises of older prophets, as Is. c. 29, and anticipates that, from that very moment when the blind fury of the destroyers would discharge itself on the sanctuary, a wondrous might would crush them in pieces, and that this must be the beginning of the Messianic weal within and without."

Chapter 14 is to this writer a modification of those anticipations. In other words there was a greater human probability, that Jeremiah's prophecies, not his, would be fulfilled: yet he cannot give up his sanguineness, though his hopes had now become fanatic. This writer says on chap. 14, "This piece cannot have been written till somewhat later, when facts made it more and more improbable, that Jerusalem would not any how be conquered, and treated as a conquered city by coarse foes. Yet then too this prophet could not yet part with the anticipations of older prophets and those which he had himself at an earlier time expressed: so boldly, amid the most visible danger, he holds firm to the old anticipation, after that the great deliverance of Jerusalem in Sennacherib's time (Is. c. 37.) appeared to justify the most fanatic hopes for the future. (comp. Ps. 59) And so now the prospect moulds itself to him thus, as if Jerusalem must indeed actually endure the horrors of the conquest, but that then, when the work of the conquerors was half-completed, the great deliverance, already suggested in that former piece, would come, and so the Sanctuary would, notwithstanding, be wonderfully preserved, the better Messianic time would notwithstanding still so come."

It must be a marvellous fascination, which the old prophets exercise over the human mind, that one who can so write should trouble himself about them. It is such an intense paradox, that the writing of one convicted by the event of uttering falsehood in the name of God, incorrigible even by the thickening tokens of God's displeasure, should have been inserted among the Hebrew prophets, in times not far removed from those whose events convicted him, that one wonders that any one should have invented it, still more that any should have believed in it. Great indeed is "the credulity of the incredulous."

And yet this paradox is essential to the theories of the modern school which would place these chapters before the captivity. English writers, who thought themselves compelled to ascribe these chapters to Jeremiah, had an escape, because they did not bind down prophecy to immediate events. Newcome's criticism was the conjectural criticism of his day; i. e. bad, cutting knots instead of loosing them. But his faith, that God's word is true, was entire. Since the prophecy, placed at the time where he placed it, had no immediate fulfilment, he supposed it, in common with those who believe it to have been written by Zechariah, to relate to a later period. That German school, with whom it is an axiom, "that all definite prophecy relates to an immediate future," had no choice but to place it just before the destruction of the temple by the Chaldees, or its profanation by Antiochus Epiphanes; and those who placed it before the Captivity, had no choice, except to believe, that it related to events, by which it was falsified.

Nearly half a century has passed, since a leading writer of this school said, "One must own, that the division of opinions as to the real author of this section and his time, as also the attempts to appropriate single oracles of this portion to different periods, leave the result of criticism simply negative; whereas on the other hand, the view itself, since it is not yet carried through exegetically, lacks the completion of its proof. It is not till criticism becomes positive, and evidences its truth in the explanation of details, that it attains its completion; which is not, in truth, always possible." Hitzig did what he could, "to help to promote the attainment of this end according to his ability." But although the more popular theory has of late been that these chapters are to be placed before the captivity, the one portion somewhere in the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, or Hezekiah; the other, as marked in the chapters themselves, after the death of Josiah, there have not been wanting critics of equal repute, who place them in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes. Yet criticism which reels to and fro in a period of near 500 years, from the earliest of the prophets to a period, a century after Malachi, and this on historical and philological grounds, certainly has come to no definite basis, either as to history or philology. Rather, it has enslaved both to preconceived opinions; and at last, as late a result as any has been, after this weary round, to go back to where it started from, and to suppose these chapters to have been written by the prophet whose name they bear^e.

It is obvious that there must be some mistake either in the tests applied, or in their application, which admits of a variation of at least 450 years from somewhere in the reign of Uzziah (say B.C. 770) to "later than B. C. 330."

Philological and historical criticism, bearing on events (as it is assumed) of the day, which should, in its variations, oscillate between the reign of John or of Charles I, or (to bring it nearer to ourselves) the first half of the xivth century or the latter part of the xviiith, would not gain much attention. Indeed, it is instructive, that after the philological argument has figured so much in all questions about the date of books this portion evinces acquaintance with the latest prophets, he could not deny it to be Zechariah's." Stähelin p. 323. De Wette, Stähelin, Köster, Bürger, were of a different school from Hengstenberg, Havernick, Keil, or again from Jahn and Herbst. Stähelin says, "in the investigation I kept myself free from any influence from without, and first found the facts, which attest the post-exile origin of this section, given by Hengstenberg and de Wette, when I subsequently compared the labours of others, especially those two scholars." Messian. Weissag. p. 174. 1847.

^a Ib. xxii. 26, 27.

^b Ib. xxvii. 16.

^c Ib. 19-22.

^d Ewald Proph. ii. 52, 53. ed. 1863.

^e Ib. p. 59.

^f Hitzig, über d. abfassungszeit der Orakel Zach. ix-xiv, in the Theol. Studien u. Kritiken 1830. l. p. 25.

^g De Wette ed. 4 (after maintaining the contrary ed. 1-3) and Stähelin, Einl. 1862. "De Wette often assured me orally, that since he felt himself compelled to admit, that of Holy Scripture, it is virtually admitted to be absolutely worthless, except negatively. For, in regard to Zechariah, the argument is not used, except in proof that the same writer cannot have written prose and poetry, which would establish that Hosea did not write either his three first chapters or his nine last; or Ezekiel his inaugural vision, the visions of the ninth and tenth chapters, and the simple exhortations to repentance in his eighteenth and thirty-third. Only I know not on the same evidence, how, of modern writers, Scott and Southey could be supposed to have written their prose and their poetry. How easy it would be to prove that the author of Thalaba did not write the life of Wesley or the history of the peninsular war, nor Shakespeare Macbeth and any comedy which criticism may yet leave to him; still more that he cannot have written the deep tragic scenes of Hamlet and that of the grave-diggers.

Yet such negations have been practically considered as the domain of the philological neo-criticism. Style is to be evidence that the same prophet did not write certain prophecies; but, this being demonstrated, it is to yield no evidence, whether he wrote, when Hebrew was a dead language or in the time of its richest beauty. Individuals indeed have their opinions; but philological criticism, as a whole, or as relates to any acknowledged result, is altogether at fault. Having done its office of establishing, that, in the mind of the critic and his disciples, certain chapters are not Zechariah's, the witness is forthwith dismissed, as incompetent even to assist in proving anything besides. The rest is to be established by historical allusions, which are by some adapted to events in the reign of Uzziah, by others to those of the Maccabees: or rather, it being assumed that there is no prophecy, this latter class assumes that the book is to belong to the times of the Maccabees, because one part of it predicts their victories. Those who tell us^a of the unity of the results of this modern criticism, must have been thinking of the agreement of its negations. As to the positive results, a table will best shew their harmony. Yet the fault is not in the want of an ill-exercised acumen of the critics; their principle, that nothing in the prophets can relate to any distant future, even though that future exactly realized the words, is the mainspring of their confusions. Since the words of Zechariah do relate to, and find their fulfilment in, events widely separated from each other, and the theory of the critics requires that they should belong to some proximate event, either in the present or some near future, they have to wrest those words from the events to which they relate, some in this way, some in that; and the most natural interpretations are those which are least admitted. Certainly since the descriptions in c. ix. suit with the wars of Alexander and the Maccabees, no one, but for some strong antecedent exigency, would assume that they related to some expected expedition of an Assyrian monarch, "^b which may be conjectured as very probable, but which, for want of historical data, cannot be indicated more circumstantially," or to "^c a plan of the Assyrians which was not then carried out," or "^d Uzziah's war with the Philistines^e, and some imagined "^d attitude of Jeroboam II against Damascus and Hamath," or "^f a concealed denunciation against Persia," against which Zechariah did not wish to prophesy openly, or to have had no special meaning at all^g.

It is marvellous, on what slight data this modern school has satisfied itself that these chapters were written before the captivity. To take the statement of an epitomator^h of German pseudo-criticism: "Damascus, Tyre, and Sidon, Philistia, Javan (ix. 1, 6-12) Assyria and Egypt (x. 10.) are the enemies of Judah." "The historical stand-point is different from that of Zech. i-viii." Of all these, Javan, the Greeks, alone are spoken of as enemies of Judah, who before the captivity were known only as purchasers of Hebrew captives; the only known wars are those of the Maccabees.

"The two kingdoms of Judah and Israel still exist. Surely the language, 'that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel,' implies that both kingdoms existed as part of the covenant nation."

Zechariah speaks of Judah and Israel, but not as kingdoms. Before the captivity, except during the effects of the inter-marriage with Athaliah, there was not brotherhood but enmity. In the reigns of Amaziah and Ahaz there was war.

"The house of David is spoken of xiii. 1." The house, not the kingdom. The house existed after the captivity. Zerubbabel, whom the Persians made governor, was its representative.

"Idols and false prophets (x. 2. xiii. 2 &c.) harmonise only with a time prior to the exile."

Idolatry certainly was not the prevailing national sin, after God had taught the people through the captivity. It is commonly taken for granted, that there was none. But where is the proof? Malachi would hardly have laid the stress on "marrying the daughters of a strange god," had there been no danger that the marriage would lead to idolatry. Nehemiah speaks of the sin, into which Solomon was seduced by "outlandish women," as likely to recur through the heathen marriages; but idolatry was that sin. Half of the children could only speak the language of their mothersⁱ. It were strange, if they had not imbibed their mothers' idolatry too. In a battle in the Maccabee war, it is related "^m under the coats of every one that was slain they found things consecrated to the idols of the Jamnites, which is forbidden the Jews by their law."

The Teraphim were, moreover, an unlawful and forbidden means of attempting to know the future, not any coarse form of idolatryⁿ; much as people now, who more or less earnestly have their fortunes told, would be surprised at being called idolaters. But Zechariah was probably speaking of sins which had brought on the captivity, not of his own day. The prediction repeated from an older prophet, that in the true Judah, the Church, God would cut off even the names and the memory of idols, does not imply that they existed^o.

False prophets continued after the captivity. Shemaiah, who uttered a prophecy against Nehemiah, the prophetess Noadiah, and the rest of the prophets, are known to us from Nehemiah's relation^p. Such there were before our Lord came, of whom He said, that they ^q were thieves and robbers: He warned against them, ^r as coming in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves; He foretold that ^s many false prophets shall arise and deceive many; the Acts tell us of the false prophet^t, a Jew, Bar-jesus; and Theudas, and Judas of referred to certain events." Rosenmüller on Zech. ix. 13. ed. 1.

^b Dr. S. Davidson iii. 321, 322.

ⁱ Mal. ii. 11.

^k Neh. xiii. 26.

^l 1b. 23, 24.

^m 2 Macc. xii. 40.

ⁿ See below on x. 2.

^o See ab. p. 504, and bel. on xiii. 2.

^p Neh. vi. 12. 14.

^q S. John x. 8.

^r S. Matt. vii. 15.

^s 1b. xxiv. 11, 24. S. Mark xiii. 22.

^t Acts xiii. 6.

^a Essays and Reviews, p. 340. "Among German commentators there is, for the first time in the history of the world, an approach to agreement and certainty. For example the diversity among German writers on prophecy is far less than among English ones."

^c Knobel ii. 170.

^d Hitzig Vorbemerk. 2. ii. and iii. Zech. Kl. Pr. p. 354.

^e 2 Chr. xxvi. 6.

^f De Wette Einl. p. 337.

^g "The uncertain hopes of the future, here expressed by the prophet, are not to be Galilee^a. S. John says, ^bmany false prophets have gone out into the world. False prophets aggravated the resistance to the Romans and the final destruction of Jerusalem^c.

"The mention of a king or kingdom, in xi. 6, xiii. 7, does not suit the age of Zechariah."

Zechariah had already implied that they had no king then, for he had bidden Zion to rejoice that her king would come to her; accordingly she had none. In xi. 6, God says, "I will no more pity the land; I will deliver man, every one into the hand of his king." It is an event, not of the prophet's time, but of the future; in xiii. 7, there is no mention of any king at all.

Such being the entire absence of proof that these chapters were written before the captivity^d, the proof that c.xi. relates to the time of Menahem is even absurd. The process with those who maintained this, has been, assuming as proved, that it was written before the captivity, and that it contained no prophecy of the future, to ask, to what period before the captivity does it relate? One verse^e relates to civil confusion, such as is foretold also, with the same metaphor, by Isaiah and Jeremiah. The choice was large, since the kingdom of Israel had the curse of discord and irreligion entailed upon it, and no king ventured to cut off the entail by cutting off the central sin, the worship of the calves, which were to consolidate it by a worship, the rival of that at Jerusalem. Of the 18 kings between Jeroboam and Hosea, 9, including Tibni, died violent deaths. The choice was directed to Menahem, because of the words in Zechariah, three shepherds also I cut off in one month, and Shallum murdered Zachariah the son of Jeroboam; and he himself, after he had reigned a full month in Samaria, was murdered by Menahem. Here then were two kings cut off. But the third? Imagination is to supply it. One^f conjectures Menahem; but he reigned 10 years, and so, he invents a meaning for the word, that the prophet does not mean cut off, but denied them, leaving it open whether he meant "removed" or merely "did not acknowledge" them, as Menahem at first certainly found no recognition with the prophetic order (2 Kgs xv. 16, 19);^g another^h imagined "some third rival of Zachariah and Shallum, of whom there is no mention in the historical books;" but there is no room for a third king, since Shallum murdered Zachariah; and Menahem, Shallum; anotherⁱ found in Hebrew words^j which had crept into the LXX, an usurper Kobal-am, of whom he says truly, "we hear nothing;" another^k conceived of some usurper after the murder of Zachariah or of Shallum (this is left free), who about this time may have set himself at the head of the kingdom, but scarcely maintained himself some weeks; another^l says, "This refers probably to the Interregnum 784-773, in which many may have set themselves as kings, but none have maintained themselves." Another¹ "An anti-king may at this time have set himself up in other parts of the kingdom, whom Menahem overthrew as he did that murderer." Others^m say of the whole, "The symbolical representation, verss. 3 sqq., admits of no detailed explanation, but can be understood only as a whole. It describes the evil condition of Judah under Ahaz." Anotherⁿ, equally certain that it relates to Ahaz, says, "the three shepherds, who perished in one and the same month, were probably men who, in the long anarchy before Hosea ascended the throne, contended for the sceptre."

Yet another is so confident in this interpretation as to the three kings, Shallum Zechariah and Menahem, that, whereas the book of Kings says expressly that Shallum reigned "a full month" lit. "a month of days," the commentator says, "The month cannot have been full"; Zechariah xi. 8 evidently refers to the three Kings, Sachariah, Sallum and Menahem," while others^o will have it that Zechariah by one month means some indefinite space more than a month. This is indeed required (although not stated) by all these theories, since Shallum alone reigned "a full month," and, consequently, the other two kings (if intended at all by the term "shepherds") must have been cut off at some period, outside of that "one month."

Truly, theory is a very exacting taskmaster, though strangely fascinating. It is to be one of the triumphs of the neo-criticism to distinguish between the authorship of Zech. ix-xi and xii-xiv. The point alleged to prove that c. xi. belongs to the time of Menahem is one at variance with history. It is not that the whole is like, while in one point the likeness is imperfect. It is the point, alleged as the keystone of the whole, which fails. The words of God by the prophet are, "Three shepherds have I cut off in one month." It lies on the surface of the history, that Zachariah, son of Jeroboam, was murdered by Shallum, after reigning 6 months; and that Shallum, after reigning one full month, was himself murdered by Menahem^r. The succession of murders was not so rapid as when Zimri had murdered Elah, Baasha's son, and after reigning 7 days, committed suicide, lest he should fall into the hands of Omri^s. Elah and Zimri were cut off in one month; Zachariah and Shallum, in two. But in neither case was there any visible result, except a partial retribution of God's justice. The last executioner of God's justice slept with his fathers; his retribution was after death. He was not cut off. And this is the proof, which is to supplant the testimony to Jesus. The Apostle's words come true, as so often besides: They shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables.

^u Thou art wearied in the greatness of thy way, yet saidst from the place which it commonly occupies, occurs in 3 MSS., the Syro-Hex. Georg. Slav. Ostrog. Verss. and the Complut.; "and smote him" is also sing. in 3 MSS. and Compl. The word "Keblaam" was doubtless only the Hebrew words, written by one, who did not know how to translate them, and is variously written and placed as if the scribes did not know what to do with it. Four MSS. make it the name of a place, "in Ieblaam." They are retained in the place of the Hebrew words in the Vat. MS., but more commonly are added to "Shallum son of Jabis" in some MSS. and a note in the Syr. Hex., they are followed by "and Selem or Selem his father." They are written, "Kebdaam, Kebdiam, Kebdam, Kaddaam, Kaibdaam, Keblaam, Keddaam, Kebdaam, Ieblaam, Iebaan, Iebdaam, Bdaam, Beldaaam." See LXX ed. Parsons.

¹ Bleek Einl. p. 559.

² Bunsen Gott in d. Gesch. i. 450.

³ Maurer, followed by Bunsen Bibelwerk on Zech., Dr. Davidson Intr. ii. 330.

⁴ Ewald (Gesch. d. V. Israel iii. 644.), followed as elsewhere by Dr. Stanley, Jewish Church ii. 364.

⁵ The original text of the LXX seems to have corresponded with the Hebrew. The meaning of the two Hebrew words, קָבַל עַם, is very simple, "before people" i. e. publicly; קָבַל עַם would (as Büttcher observed, Jen. Lit. Zeit. 1847. p. 1144) have signified "before the people publicly assembled together." The Syro-Hexaplar version by Paul of Tela translates the words, and introduces "Kebdaam" with Origen's asterism, and so, as not belonging to the LXX. The Alexandrian and two other MSS. (one of Constantinople cent. x.) also retain the rendering. The singular "conspired," which excludes "Keblaam"

⁶ 2 Kgs xv. 13.

⁷ 2 Kgs xv. 8-14.

⁸ 2 Tim. iv. 4.

⁹ 2 Kgs xv. 15-18.

¹⁰ Is. lvii. 10.

¹¹ Is. lvii. 10.

¹² Is. lvii. 10.

¹³ Is. lvii. 10.

¹⁴ Is. lvii. 10.

¹⁵ Is. lvii. 10.

¹⁶ Is. lvii. 10.

¹⁷ Is. lvii. 10.

¹⁸ Is. lvii. 10.

¹⁹ Is. lvii. 10.

²⁰ Is. lvii. 10.

²¹ Is. lvii. 10.

²² Is. lvii. 10.

²³ Is. lvii. 10.

²⁴ Is. lvii. 10.

²⁵ Is. lvii. 10.

²⁶ Is. lvii. 10.

²⁷ Is. lvii. 10.

²⁸ Is. lvii. 10.

²⁹ Is. lvii. 10.

³⁰ Is. lvii. 10.

³¹ Is. lvii. 10.

³² Is. lvii. 10.

³³ Is. lvii. 10.

³⁴ Is. lvii. 10.

³⁵ Is. lvii. 10.

³⁶ Is. lvii. 10.

³⁷ Is. lvii. 10.

³⁸ Is. lvii. 10.

³⁹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁴⁰ Is. lvii. 10.

⁴¹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁴² Is. lvii. 10.

⁴³ Is. lvii. 10.

⁴⁴ Is. lvii. 10.

⁴⁵ Is. lvii. 10.

⁴⁶ Is. lvii. 10.

⁴⁷ Is. lvii. 10.

⁴⁸ Is. lvii. 10.

⁴⁹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁵⁰ Is. lvii. 10.

⁵¹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁵² Is. lvii. 10.

⁵³ Is. lvii. 10.

⁵⁴ Is. lvii. 10.

⁵⁵ Is. lvii. 10.

⁵⁶ Is. lvii. 10.

⁵⁷ Is. lvii. 10.

⁵⁸ Is. lvii. 10.

⁵⁹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁶⁰ Is. lvii. 10.

⁶¹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁶² Is. lvii. 10.

⁶³ Is. lvii. 10.

⁶⁴ Is. lvii. 10.

⁶⁵ Is. lvii. 10.

⁶⁶ Is. lvii. 10.

⁶⁷ Is. lvii. 10.

⁶⁸ Is. lvii. 10.

⁶⁹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁷⁰ Is. lvii. 10.

⁷¹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁷² Is. lvii. 10.

⁷³ Is. lvii. 10.

⁷⁴ Is. lvii. 10.

⁷⁵ Is. lvii. 10.

⁷⁶ Is. lvii. 10.

⁷⁷ Is. lvii. 10.

⁷⁸ Is. lvii. 10.

⁷⁹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁸⁰ Is. lvii. 10.

⁸¹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁸² Is. lvii. 10.

⁸³ Is. lvii. 10.

⁸⁴ Is. lvii. 10.

⁸⁵ Is. lvii. 10.

⁸⁶ Is. lvii. 10.

⁸⁷ Is. lvii. 10.

⁸⁸ Is. lvii. 10.

⁸⁹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁹⁰ Is. lvii. 10.

⁹¹ Is. lvii. 10.

⁹² Is. lvii. 10.

⁹³ Is. lvii. 10.

⁹⁴ Is. lvii. 10.

⁹⁵ Is. lvii. 10.

⁹⁶ Is. lvii. 10.

⁹⁷ Is. lvii. 10.

⁹⁸ Is. lvii. 10.

⁹⁹ Is. lvii. 10.

¹⁰⁰ Is. lvii. 10.

thou not, there is no hope. One should have thought that some must have, at times, thought of the old days, when the prophecy was interpreted of the Good Shepherd and of the 30 pieces of silver which were the price of His Blood, and which were cast into the house of the Lord*. But this would have been fatal to "historical criticism," whose province was to find out events of the prophet's own day to fill up the words of prophecy.

The human authorship of any books of Holy Scripture, and so of these chapters of Zechariah is, in itself, a matter which does not concern the soul. It is an untrue imputation, that the date of books of the Bible is converted into matter of faith. In this case Jesus has not set His seal upon it; God the Holy Ghost has not declared it. But, as in other cases, what lay as the foundation of the theory was the unbelief that God, in a way above nature, when it seemed good to Him, revealed a certain future to His creature man. It is the postulate, (or axiom, as appears to these critics), that there is no super-human prophecy, which gives rise to their eagerness, to place these and other prophetic books or portions of books where they can say to themselves that they do not involve such prophecy. To believers it has obviously no religious interest, at what time it pleased Almighty God to send any of His servants the prophets. Not the dates assigned by any of these self-devouring theories, but the grounds alleged in support of those dates, as implying unbelief in God's revelation of Himself, make the question one of religious interest, viz. to shew that these theories are as unsubstantial, as their assumed base is baseless.

It is an infelicity of the modern German mind, that it is acute in observing detailed differences, rather than comprehensive in grasping deeper resemblances. It has been more busied in discovering what is new, than in observing the grounds of what is true. It does not, somehow, acquire the power of balancing evidence, which is habitual to the practical minds of our own countrymen. To take an instance of criticism, apart from Theology, the genuineness of a work of Plato.

* S. Matt. xxvi. 14-16, xxvii. 3-10.

† Prof. Jowett, Translation of Plato's Dialogues. T. iv. p. 1.

‡ Philopon. de Ætern. mundi vi. 27. in Smith Gr. & Rom. Biogr. i. 317.

§ From B.C. 364. to Plato's death B.C. 347.

¶ Pall Mall Gaz. March 28, 1868.

† The style of the Laws differs in several important respects from the other dialogues of Plato: 1) in the want of character, power and lively illustration; 2) in the frequency of mannerisms; 3) in the form and rhythm of the sentences; 4) in the use of words. On the other hand, there are many passages 5) which are characterised by a sort of ethical grandeur; and 6) in which perhaps, a greater insight into human nature, and a greater reach of practical wisdom is shewn than in any other of Plato's writings.

"The Laws fall very short of the other Platonic dialogues in the refinements of courtesy. Partly the subject did not properly take the form of dialogue and partly the dramatic vigour of Plato had passed away.—Plato has given the Laws that form which was most suited to his own powers of writing in the decline of life.

"The fictions of the Laws have no longer that verisimilitude, which we find in the Phædrus, and the Timæus or even in the Politicus.—Nor is there any where in the Laws that lively ἐνθύμησις, that vivid mise en scène, which is as characteristic of Plato, as of some modern novelists.

"We no longer breathe the atmosphere of humour which pervades the earlier writings of Plato, and which makes the broadest Aristophanic joke as well as the subtlest refinement of wit possible; and hence the impression made upon us is bald and feeble.—The irony of the earlier dialogues, of which some traces occur in the 10th book, is replaced by a sort of severity which hardly condescends to regard human things.

"The figures of speech and illustrations are poor in themselves and are not assisted by the surrounding phraseology. In the Republic and in the earlier dialogues—notes are struck which are repeated from time to time, as in a strain of music. There is none of this subtle art in the Laws.—The citations from the poets have lost that fanciful character, which gave them their charm in the earlier dialogues.

2. "The clumsiness of the dialogue leads to frequent mannerisms.—This finish of style [in the dialogue] is no longer discernible in the Laws. Again and again the speaker is charged or charges himself with obscurity; he repeats again and again that he will explain his views more clearly.—A tendency to a paradoxical form of statement is also observable.—More than in other writings of Plato the tone is hortatory; the Laws are sermons as well as laws; they are supposed to have a religious sanction, and to rest upon a religious sentiment in the mind of the citizens.—Resumptions of subjects which have been half disposed of in a previous passage, constantly occur: the arrangement

"The genuineness of the Laws," says their recent translator^b, "is sufficiently proved by more than 20 citations of them in the writings of Aristotle [whom Plato designated "the intellect of the school," and who must have been intimate with him for some 17 years^d] who was residing at Athens during the last years of the life of Plato, and who returned to Athens at the time when he was himself writing his Politics and Constitutions; 2) by the allusion of Isocrates, writing B. C. 346, a year after the death of Plato, and not more than 2 or 3 years after the composition of the Laws— 3) by the reference of the comic poet Alexis, a younger contemporary of Plato (B.C. 356.); 4) by the unanimous voice of later antiquity, and the absence of any suspicion among ancient writers worth noticing."

Yet German acuteness has found out reasons, why the treatise should not be Plato's. Those reasons are plausible, as most untrue things are. As put together carefully by one who yet attaches no weight to them, they look like a parody of the arguments, produced by Germans to take to pieces books of Holy Scripture. Mutatis mutandis, they have such an absurdly ludicrous resemblance, that it provokes a smile. Some 50 years ago, there was a tradition at Göttingen, where Heyne had lived, that he attributed the non-reception of the theories as to Homer in England to the English Bishops, who "apprehended that the same principle would be applied to Holy Scripture." Now, for half a century more, both sets of critics have had full scope. The classical sceptics seem to me to have the advantage. Any one, who knew but a little of the uncritical criticism, applied to the sacred books, could imagine, what a jubilee of triumph it would have occasioned, could such differences as those pointed out between "the Laws" and other treatises of Plato, have been pointed out to detach any book of Holy Scripture from its traditional writer. Yet it is held inadequate by one, of whom an admirer said, that "his peculiar mode of criticism cut the very sinews of belief." I insert the criticisms^f, (omitting the details of illustration) because their failure may open the eyes of some to the utter valuelessness of this sort of has neither the clearness of art, nor the freedom of nature. Irrelevant remarks are made here and there, or illustrations used which are not properly filled in. The dialogue is generally weak and laboured; and is in the later books fairly given up; apparently, because unsuited to the subject of the work.

3. "From this [perfection of style in the Symposium and Phædrus] there are many fallings off in the Laws, first, in the structure of the sentences, which are rhythmical and monotonous;—second, they are often of enormous length, and the latter end frequently appears to forget the beginning of them; they seem never to have received the second thoughts of the author: either the emphasis is wrongly placed, or there is a want of point in the clause, or an absolute case occurs, which is not properly separated from the rest of the sentence; or words are aggregated in a manner, which fails to shew their relation to one another; or the connecting particles are omitted at the beginning of sentences; the use of the relative and the antecedent is more indistinct, the changes of number and person more frequent; examples of pleonasm, tautology and periphrasis, unmeaning antitheses of positive and negative, and other affectations, are more numerous than in the other writings of Plato; there is also a more common and sometimes unmeaning use of qualifying formulæ—and of double expressions—; again there is an over-curious adjustment of verb and participle, noun and epithet: many forms of affected variety; thirdly, the absence of metaphorical language is remarkable; the style is not devoid of ornament but the ornament is of a debased rhetorical kind, patched on it instead of growing out of the subject; there is a great command of words, and a laboured use of them; forced attempts at metaphor occur in several passages—(compare also the unmeaning extravagance of language in other passages); poor and insipid illustrations are also common: fourthly, we may observe an unmeaning use of climax and hyperbole—

4. "The peculiarities in the use of words, which occur in the Laws, have been collected by Zeller and Stallbaum: first, in the use of nouns, such as" [8 are given]; "secondly, in the use of adjectives, such as" [5 instances] "and of adverbs, such as" [3 instances] "thirdly in the use of verbs such as" [5 instances]—

"Zeller and Stallbaum have also collected forms of words in the Laws differing from the forms of the same words, which occur in other places [7 instances, "and the Ionic word—"]. Zeller has noticed a fondness for substantives ending in μα and σις, such as [9 instances "and others"]; also a use of substantives in the plural, which are commonly found only in the singular [five instances]. Also a peculiar use of prepositions in composition as in [five instances "and others"] also a frequent use of the Ionic datives plural in αἰσι and οἰσι.

"To these peculiarities he has added a list of peculiar expressions and constructions [9 are given]. He remarks also on the frequent use of the abstract for the concrete criticism. The accuracy of the criticisms is not questioned; the statements are not said to be exaggerated; yet they are held invalid. The question then comes with great force to the conscience; "Why, rejecting arguments so forcible as to a treatise of Plato, do I accept arguments very inferior, as to such or such a book of the Old or New Testament,—certain [11 instances]. He further notes some curious instances of the genitive case—and of the dative—and also some rather uncommon periphrases; also the pleonastic use of the enclitics τις and of γε, of ταυτων, of ως, and the periphrastic use of the preposition περι. Lastly he observes the tendency to hyperbata or transposition of words; and to rhythmical uniformity as well as grammatical irregularity in the structure of the sentences.

chapters of Isaiah, or Ecclesiastes, or these chapters of Zechariah, or the Epistle to the Hebrews, or the Revelation of S. John the Divine,—except on grounds of theology, not of criticism, and how am I true to myself in rejecting such arguments as to human books, and accepting them as to Divine books?"

"For nearly all the expressions, which are adduced by Zeller against the genuineness of the Laws, Stallbaum finds some sort of authority. There is no reason for suspecting their genuineness, because several words occur in them, which are not found in the other writings of Plato. An imitator will often preserve the usual phraseology of a writer, better than he would himself." From Prof. Jowett's Introduction to the Laws of Plato, T. iv. pp. 11-16.

TABLE OF DATES, WHICH IN THIS CENTURY HAVE BEEN ASSIGNED TO ZECHARIAH IX—XIV*.

AFTER THE DATE OF ZECHARIAH.			ZECHARIAH HIMSELF.
c. ix-xiv.	"At the earliest, in the first half and middle of the fifth century."	Vatke ¹ .	[Beckhaus ⁹ 1792] Jahn ¹⁰ , Koster ¹¹ , Henstenberg ¹² , Burger ¹³ , De Wette (edd. 4-6). A. Theiner ¹⁴ , Herbst ¹⁵ , Umbreit ¹⁴ , Hävernicks ¹⁵ , Keil ¹⁵ , Stähelin ¹⁵ , von Hoffmann ¹⁶ , Ebrard, Schegg, Baumgar- ten ¹⁴ , Neumann ¹¹ , Kliefoth ¹⁴ , Köhler ¹⁴ , Sandrock ¹⁷ .
	"The younger poet, whose visions were added to those of Zechariah."	Geiger ² .
	Last years of Darius Hystaspis, or first of Xerxes ³ .	Gramberg ⁴ .
	After the battle of Issus B.C. 333.	Eichhorn ⁵ .
	After 330.	Böttcher ⁶ .
c. xiv.	Antiochus Epiphanes.	"many interpreters ⁷ ."
c. ix.	On Hyrcanus i, as the Messiah.	Paulus ⁸ .

* J. D. Michaelis, 1786, was uncertain. The opinions or doubts in the last century were altogether vague. "I have as yet no certainty, but am seeking: am also not opposed, if any deny these chapters to be Zechariah's." Neue Orient. u. Exeg. Biblioth. i. 128.

Augusti stated attack and defence, but gave no opinion, Einl. 1806. G. L. Bauer (1793) said generally, "c. ix-xiv. seem not to be Zechariah's," but professed himself in utter uncertainty as to the dates. Scholia T. viii. On ix-xiv. he says, "which seems not to be Zechariah's," but whether Flügel was right who thought c. ix. belonged to the time of Jeroboam ii., or Eichhorn, who doubted whether it was not later than Zechariah, he says, "I decide nothing, leaving the whole question uncertain." p. 74. On xi. he says, "we find no indication when the desolation was inflicted," though he would rather understand the Assyrians, than Ant. Epiph. or the Romans. pp. 96, 97. Of xii-xiv. he leaves subject and time uncertain. pp. 109, 119, 121. Döderlein also seems uncertain, Auserl. theol. Biblioth. iv. 2. p. 81. (1787)

¹ Biblische Theologie wissenschaftlich dargestellt. i. 553. "It seems to have been occasioned by the Persian-Egyptian wars, and by the feuds of the Jews with the neighbouring people. Nehemiah found Jerusalem half destroyed [rather not rebuilt]. The want of historical accounts makes it impossible to explain to what details refer."

² (Rabbiner d. Synag. Gem. Breslau) Urchrift u. Uebersetz. d. Bibl. p. 55, 57. 1857.

³ "When the fame of the Greeks, even in Palestine, must have been great enough to suggest to the poet the thought, that so mighty and warlike a people could only be conquered by Jehovah and his Israelites; then would mere peace and prosperity prevail."

⁴ Religions-Ideen d. A. T. (with preface by Gesenius) ii. 520.

⁵ Einl. ins A. T. n. 605. iv. 445, 449, 450, 1824. "If it is true, that all prophecies start from the present, and prophets threaten with no people, and promise nothing of any, till the people itself is come on the scene and into relation with their people, the poet cannot have spoken of the relation of Alexander to the Jews, till after the battle of Issus." "Altogether, no explanation of the whole section (ix 1.-x. 17.) is possible, if it be not gained from the history of Alexander the Great. History relates expressly, how after the battle of Issus he took possession of all Syria and Zidon without great difficulties; how, with an employment of military contrivance unheard of elsewhere, he conquered and destroyed island-Tyre; how, of the maritime cities of Philistia, with indomitable perseverance he is specified to have besieged and taken Gaza, punished with death the opposition of its commander and its inhabitants, can any require more to justify this explanation?" "The portions xi. xii-xiii. 6. have no matter, from which their age could be determined; yet neither do they contain any thing to remove them to an early time; rather has the language much which is late; if then the contents of xiii. 7-end, set it late, they too may be accounted late. This last must either have been to comfort the people on the first tidings of the death of Judas Maccabi in the battle with Bacchides, or have no definite subject.—In that case it would belong to B.C. 161, yet one must own that there is not the same evidence for this, as that ix. 1.-x. 17. belongs to the time of Alexander.—These must be the proofs, that the 2nd half of Zechariah cannot have the same author as the first, or one must allow what tradition gives out, and since there are great doubts against it, one must regret that one can come to no clear result as to Zechariah. For the other proofs which could be brought are not decisive." pp. 450, 451.

Corrodi had on the same grounds assigned c. ix. to the time of Alexander; c. xiv. to that of Antiochus Epiphanes. Versuch e. Beleuchtung d. Gesch. d. Jud. u. Christl. Bibel-Canons i. 107.

⁶ Ausf. Lehrbuch d. Hebr. Sprache. n. 45. p. 23. 1868. "The way in which Greece is named as a chief enemy of Zion (quite different from that of Joel iv. 6. Is. lxvi. 19.), chiefly shews that the sections Zech. ix. sqq. which resist every assured collocation in the pre-exile or ante-Macedonian period, could only have been written after Alexander's march through Palestine. With this agree the later colouring, the Levitical spirit, the style full of compilation and of imitation, as also the phantastic messianic hopes. These last must have been revived among the Jews after the overthrow through Alexander. In comparison with the lifeless language of these chapters, as to which we cannot at all understand how any can have removed them into so early pre-exile times, the Psalms attributed to the times of the Maccabees are amazingly fresh. On this, as well as other grounds, we can admit of no Psalms of the Maccabee times." Neue Aehrenlese ii. 215-127. One ground, which has by others of this school been alleged for not ascribing them to Zechariah, had been that they were so much more poetic &c. "In regard to language also, the style in the second Part is wholly different. c. 9. and 10. are energetic, vivid, &c." Hitzig, Vorbermerk. z. d. ii. u. iii. Zech. n. 2. "Rosenmüller says truly:—How much the poetic, weighty, concise, fervid style of the six last chapters differs from the prosaic, languid, humble style of the eight first." Maurer on Zech. ix-xiv. p. 667. "These prophecies [Zech. ix-xiv.] cannot be from Zechariah, not on account of the un-symbolic style (comp. xi. 4-17.) but on account of the more forceful style" &c. De Wette Einl. § 250 ed. 2. ⁷ in Bertholdt Einl. iv. 1715.

⁸ Comm. z. N. T. iii. 130-139. Else he follows Eichhorn 1832.

⁹ ib. d. Integrität d. Proph. Schriften d. A. B. p. 337. sqq.

¹⁰ Einl. ii. 675. sqq.

¹¹ Meletemata crit. et exeg. in Zach. proph. part. post. 1818.

¹² Beiträge zur Einl. ins A. T. i. 361. sqq.

¹³ Etudes exégét. et critiques sur le proph. Zacharie. Strasburg 1841.

¹⁴ In their commentaries on Zechariah.

¹⁵ In their Introductions to the O. T.

¹⁶ Schriftbeweis ii. 2. p. 550.

¹⁷ Prioris et posterioris Zach. partis vaticin. ab uno eodemque auct. profecta. 1857.

TABLE OF DATES.

DATES BEFORE THE CAPTIVITY.
ix-xiv.	Uzziah B.C. 772.	Hitzig ¹ , Rosenmüller ² .	xi.	Beginning of reign of Menahem.	Hitz g ¹⁷ .
ix-xi.	Under Ahaz, during war with Pekah.	Bertholdt ³ .	xi.	Possibly contemporary with Hosea.	Bauer ¹⁸ .
ix-xi.	Beginning of Ahaz.	Credner ⁴ , Herzfeld ⁵ .	ix.	After capture of Damascus by Tiglath-Pileser.	Movers ¹⁹ .
ix-xi.	Later time of Hezekiah.	Baur ⁶ .	xii-xiv.	Manasseh, in view of a siege by Esarhaddon.	Hitzig ²⁰ .
ix-xi.	Between B.C. 771-740, i.e. between the invasion of Pul, (2 Kgs xv. 19.) and the capture of Damascus by Tiglath-Pileser (2 Kgs xvii. 9.) i.e. between the 40th of Uzziah and the 3rd of Ahaz.	Knobel ⁷ .		Between B.C. 607-604 (though falsified) Soon after Josiah's death, by Uriah, Jeremiah's contemporary, B.C. 607 or 606.	Knobel ²¹ . Bunsen ²² .
ix-xi. and xiii. 7-9.	In the first 10 years of Pekah before the war with Ahaz [i.e. between B.C. 759-749].	Ewald ⁸ .		Most probably, while the Chaldees were already before Jerusalem, shortly before Jerusalem was first conquered (599).	Schrader ²³ .
ix-xi.	"Very probably Uzziah's favourite prophet in his prosperous days."	Stanley ⁹ .	xii. 1-xiii. 6.	Under Joiakim or Jeconiah or Zedekiah in Nebuchadnezzar's last expedition (no objection that it was falsified).	Bertholdt ²⁴ .
xiii. 7-9.	Contemporary with Isaiah under Ahaz towards B.C. 736.	Bunsen ¹⁰ .	xiii. 7.-end.	Soon after Josiah's death.	Bertholdt ²⁵ .
ix-xi.	Perhaps contemporary with Zephaniah [in the time of Josiah].	De Wette ¹¹ .	xii. 1-xiii. 6.	The last years of Jehoiakim, or under Jehoiachin or Zedekiah.	Bleek ²⁶ .
ix. x.	Might be put in the time of Ahaz.	Id.	xiii.-7. end.	"Exceeding probably under Josiah or Jehoiakim."	Bleek ²⁷ .
xi.	Perhaps out of the time of Zephaniah.	Gesenius ¹² .	xii. 1-xiii. 6.	Fourth year of Jehoiakim.	Maurer ²⁸ .
ix.	Uzziah.	Bleek ¹³ .	xiii. 7.-end.	Fifth.
ix.		Forberg ¹⁴ .	xii. 1-xiii. 6.	The latter half of 600 B.C.	v. Ortenberg ²⁹ .
x.	Ahaz, soon after war with Pekah and Rezin.	Bleek.	xiv.	Later than xii. 1.-xiii. 6.
xi. 1-3.	Invasion of some Assyrian king.		xii-xiii. 6.	12 years after Habakkuk [about B.C. 607, Ewald] shortly before the destruction of Jerusalem.	Ewald ³⁰ .
xii 4-17.	Menahem, and end of Uzziah.	Maurer ¹⁵ .		Same date as ix. xi. (see above).
ix.	Between the carrying away of 2½ tribes and the fall of Damascus.		xiii. 7-9.	A little later than xii-xiii.
x.	Between 739-731, the 7 years' anarchy between Hosea's murder of Pekah and his own accession.		xiv.	or, In the first rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar "32 by Chananiah, or one of the many prophets who contradicted Jeremiah."	Ewald ³¹ .
xi.	In reign of Hosea.		xii-xiii. 6. xiv.	Zedekiah, "Beginning of revolt."	Stanley ³³ .
ix.	Under Uzziah and Jeroboam.	v. Ortenberg ¹⁶ .	xii. 1-xiii. 6.	"Prophecies of fanatic contents, which deny all historical explanation, but xiii. 7. must rather be conceived as future than 'past,' as Bertholdt."	De Wette cd. 2 ³⁴ .
x.	The Anarchy after death of Jeroboam ii. [B.C. 784-772].		xiii. 7. end.
xi. 1-3.	B. C. 716.
xi. 4-17. xiii. 7-9.	Shortly after the war of Pekah and Rezin.		xii. 1-xiii. 6. xiv.	After death of Josiah, yet relating to the repentance for the putting the Messias to death, and so independent of the times in which it is placed.	Kahnis ³⁵ .
ix-x.	Not before Jeroboam, nor before Uzziah's accession, but before the death of Zechariah son of Jeroboam.	Hitzig ¹⁷ .

¹ Theol. Studien u. Kritiken 1830. 1. p. 25. sqq. followed by v. Lengerke, d. Buch Daniel, Einl. p. lxxvii.

² Scholia in V. T. vii. 4. p. 254. sqq. ed. 2. In ed. 1. he had followed Jahn.

³ Einl. ins A. T. iv. n. 431. pp. 1712-1716. In p. 1722 he conjectures the prophet to have been Zechariah son of Jeberechiah (Is. viii. 2); a conjecture recommended by Gesenius, Jesaia i. 527 as "an acute combination." Ewald calls the theory of one or more Zechariahs, "an over-ingenious device (erklügelt) idle conjecture, a plea of those who will not look straight at the truth." Proph. i. 249.

⁴ Joel p. 67. ⁵ Gesch. d. Volkes Isr., Excurs. ii. n. 3. pp. 280-282.

⁶ d. Proph. Amos p. 34. ⁷ Prophetismus d. Hebräer ii. 163-170.

⁸ Kl. Proph. i. 248-251, followed mostly by E. Meier Gesch. d. poet. national. lit. d. Hebräer p. 308. ⁹ Jewish Church ii. 444, add 364, 366.

¹⁰ Gott in d. Geschichte i. 453. In p. 247, he placed ch. ix. at "a generation after Ahaz."

¹¹ Einl. ins A. T. n. 250. p. 338. edd. 1-3. ¹² On Is. xxiii. p. 713.

¹³ Einl. ins A. T. p. 555-560. ¹⁴ Comm. crit. et exeg. in part. post. Zach. P. i.

¹⁵ Maurer Comm. p. 669. ¹⁶ Die Bestandtheile d. Buchs

Sacharia pp. 68. 72. 75. 79. followed by Kahnis Lutherische Dogm. i. 354-357.

¹⁷ D. Kl. Proph. ii. und iii. Zacharia, Vorbemerk. n. 4. p. 351. ed. 2., followed by Schrader in his re-writing of De Wette's Einl. n. 308, only placing c. ix. definitely in the time of Jeroboam ii.

¹⁸ "What I think, or rather, conjecture." Schulzii Scholia continuata viii. 100.

¹⁹ Phœnicen ii. 1. p. 383, 384.

²⁰ Kl. Proph. ii und iii. Sach. n. 5. 6. ed. 2, 3.

²¹ Prophetismus ii. 289.

²² Gott in d. Geschichte i. 451, 452.

²³ De Wette's Einleitung, re-written from his Ed. vi. n. 303. a new § p. 382.

²⁴ Einl. iv. 1717.

²⁵ Einl. p. 560.

²⁶ Bestandtheile &c. p. 87.

²⁷ Ib. 563.

²⁸ Proph. Min. p. 670.

²⁹ Ib. 1719.

³⁰ Kl. Proph. ii. 52.

³¹ Ib. ii. 59. "At a time when the earnest and more threatening condition of the world softened the proud certainty of victory, and occasioned the anticipation of the fulfilment of a judgement on the holy city." xiv. 1-2.

³² Geschichte d. Volkes Isr. iii. 803. Ewald says that he often balanced between them, but always ended by coming back to the first, since xiv. 2. probably referred to the capture under Jehoiachin.

³³ Jewish Church. Sect. xi. "special authorities." p. 513. Passing him over in the history, he escapes the consequence which Ewald drew out, that he would have been a false prophet, although he says, that "in Hananiah," whose death Jeremiah prophesied for "telling lies in the name of the Lord," "passed away the last echo of the ancient invincible strain of the age of Isaiah." p. 545.

³⁴ Einl. n. 250. p. 338 ed. 1822.

³⁵ Lutherische Dogm. i. 359-361.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

CHAPTER I.

1 Zechariah exhorteth to repentance. 7 The vision of the horses. 12 At the prayer of the angel comfortable promises are made to Jerusalem. 18 The vision of the horns, and the four carpenters.

^a Ezra 4. 24.
Hagg. 1. 1.

IN the eighth month, ^a in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying,

^b Ezra 5. 1.
Matt. 23. 35.

CHAP. I. 1. *In the eighth month*¹. The date joins on Zechariah's prophecy to those of Haggai. Two months before, *in the sixth month*², had Haggai, conjointly with Zechariah³, exhorted Zerubbabel and the people to resume the intermitted building of the temple. These had used such diligence, notwithstanding the partial discouragement of the Persian Government⁴, that God gave them in the seventh month, the magnificent promise of the later glory of the temple through the Coming of Christ⁵. Still as Haggai too warned them, the conversion was not complete. So Zechariah in the eighth, as Haggai in the ninth⁶ month, urges upon them the necessity of thorough and inward repentance, as the condition of partaking of those promises.

"Thrice in the course of one saying, he mentions the most holy name of God; partly to instruct in the knowledge of Three Persons in one Nature, partly to confirm their minds more strongly in the hope of the salvation to come."

2. *lit. Wrath was the Lord against your fathers with wrath*⁸, i. e., a wrath which was indeed such, whose greatness he does not further express, but leaves to their memories to supply. "Seest thou how he scares them, and, setting before the young what befel those before them, drives them to amend, threatening them with the like or more grievous ills, unless they would wisely reject their fathers' ways, esteeming the pleasing of God worthy of all thought and care. He speaks of great wrath. For it indicates no slight displeasure that He allowed the Babylonians to waste all Judah and Samaria, burn the holy places and destroy Jerusalem, remove the elect Israel to a pitious slavery in a foreign land, severed from sacrifices, entering no more the holy court nor offering the thank-offering, or tithes, or first-fruits of the law, but precluded by necessity and fear even from the duty of celebrating his prescribed and dearest festivals. The like we might address to the Jewish people, if we would apply it to the mystery of Christ. For after they had killed the prophets and had crucified the Lord of glory Himself, they were captured and destroyed; their famed temple was levelled, and Hosea's words were fulfilled in them; ¹⁰ The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king and without a prince, without a sacrifice and without an image, without an ephod and without teraphim."

3. Therefore say thou. lit. And thou sayest, i. e., this having been so, it follows that thou sayest or must say¹¹, Turn

2 The LORD hath been † sore displeased with your fathers.

3 Therefore say thou unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Turn ^c ye unto me, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will turn unto you, saith the LORD of hosts.

4 Be ye not as your fathers, ^d unto whom the former prophets have cried, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^e Turn ye now

^c Isai. 31. 6. Jer. 3. 12. & 18. 11. Ezek. 18. 30. Hos. 14. 1.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 520.

† Heb. with displeasure.

^c Jer. 25. 5. & 35. 15.
^d Mic. 7. 19.
^e Mal. 3. 7.
Luke 15. 20.
James 4. 8.
^d 2 Chron. 36. 15, 16.

ye unto Me. In some degree they had turned to God, for Whose sake they had returned to their land; and again when, after some negligence¹², they renewed the building of the temple, and God had said, ¹³ I am with you. But there needed yet a more inward completer turning, whereon God promises a yet nearer presence, as Malachi repeats the words¹⁴, and S. James exhorts¹⁵, Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you. Those who have turned to God need ever to turn more into the centre of the narrow way. As the soul opens itself more to God, God, Whose communication of Himself is ever hindered only by our closing the door of our hearts against Him, enters more into it. ¹⁶ If a man love Me, he will keep My words, and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him.

"Men are said to be converted, when leaving behind them deceitful goods, they give their whole mind to God, bestowing no less pains and zeal on Divine things than before on the nothings of life."

"¹⁷ When it is said in Holy Scripture, Turn unto Me and I will turn unto you, we are admonished as to our own freedom; when we answer, Turn us, Lord, unto Thee, and we shall be turned, we confess that we are forecome by the grace of God."

4. Be ye not like your fathers. Strangely infectious is the precedent of ill. Tradition of good, of truth, of faith, is decried; only tradition of ill and error are adhered to. The sin of Jeroboam was held sacred by every king of Israel: ¹⁸ *The statutes of Omri were diligently kept, and all the works of the house of Ahab. They turned back and were treacherous like their forefathers; they turned themselves like a deceitful bow*¹⁹, is God's summary of the history of Israel. "Absurd are they who follow the ignorances of their fathers, and ever plead inherited custom as an irrefragable defence, though blamed for extremest ills. So idolaters especially, being called to the knowledge of the truth, ever bear in mind the error of their fathers and, embracing their ignorance as an hereditary lot, remain blind."

The former prophets. The prophets spake God's words, as well in their pastoral office as in predicting things to come, in enforcing God's law and in exhorting to repentance, as in announcing the judgements on disobedience. The predictive as well as the pastoral office were united in Nathan²⁰, Gad²¹, Shemaiah²², Azariah²³, Hanani²⁴, Elijah²⁵, Elisha²⁶, ¹ Not as Kim. in the 8th new-moon; for though $\pi\eta\eta$ is used of the new-moon, Num. xxviii. 14, 1 Sam. xx. 5, 18, 24; Am. viii. 5. (not Ex. xix. 1. or Hos. v. 7.) it is not so used in dates, in which it would be ambiguous.

² Hagg. i. 1.

³ Ezr. v. 1, 2.

⁴ Ib. 3-5.

⁵ Hagg. ii. 1-9.

⁶ Ib. 10-14.

⁷ Osor.

⁸ As we might express by the indefinite article "a blow" for "such a blow." The LXX fill up $\delta\rho\gamma\eta\nu\ \mu\epsilon\gamma\acute{\alpha}\lambda\eta\nu$. Ewald (Lehrb. n. 281. p. 702.) quotes $\chi\alpha\rho\acute{\alpha}\ \chi\alpha\lambda\mu\epsilon\iota$, S. John iii. 29.

⁹ S. Cyr.

¹⁰ Hos. iii. 4. See ab. p. 24.

¹¹ The force of $\epsilon\pi\epsilon\lambda\theta\epsilon$. The duty is implied in v. 2.

¹² Hagg. i. 2-11.

¹³ Ib. 13.

¹⁴ Mal. iii. 7.

¹⁵ S. James iv. 8.

¹⁶ S. John xiv. 23.

¹⁷ Conc. Trid. Sess. vi. c. 5.

¹⁸ Mic. vi. 16.

¹⁹ Ps. lxxviii. 57.

²⁰ 2 Sam. vii. 4-16, xii. 1-14.

²¹ 1 Sam. xxii. 5, xxiv. 11.

²² 2 Chr. xi. 2-4, xii. 5-8.

²³ Ib. xv.

²⁴ Ib. xvi. 7-9.

²⁵ 1 Kgs xvii. 1, 14, xviii. 1, 41, xxi. 19, 21, 23, 29, 2 Kgs i. 4, 16.

²⁶ 2 Kgs iii. 17, 18. iv. 16, v. 27, vii. 1, 2, viii. 10-13, xiii. 14-19.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.
1 ch. G. 2, —7.
|| Or, bay.

among the myrtle trees that were in the bottom; and behind him were there ¹red horses, || speckled, and white.

9 Then said I, O my lord, what are these? And the angel that talked with me said unto me, I will shew thee what these be.

of God, appearing in form of man, as Daniel says, "¹ The man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, touched me." He is doubtless the same who appeared to Joshua in form of man, preparing thereby for the revelation of God manifest in the flesh—He, before whom Joshua fell on his face and in him worshipped God, through whom also God required the same tokens of reverence as He had from Moses². Joshua lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold there stood a man over against him with a sword drawn in his hand, who said, as Captain of the Lord's host am I come. He rides here, as Leader of the host who follow Him; to Him the others report, and He instructs the Angel who instructs the prophet. Red, being the colour of blood, symbolises doubtless "³ the vengeance of God to be inflicted on the enemies of the Jews for their sins committed against the Jews," exceeding the measure of chastisement allowed by God. It probably was S. Michael⁴, who is entitled in Daniel, *your prince*⁵, the great prince which standeth up for the children of thy people⁶.

And he was standing, almost as we say, stationary, abiding in that one place. The description is repeated⁷, apparently as identifying this angel, and so he and the angel of the Lord⁸ are probably one.

The myrtle trees⁹, from their fragrance and lowness, probably symbolise the Church, as at once yielding a sweet odour, and in a low estate, or lowly. The natural habits of the myrtle make it the fitter symbol¹⁰.

And behind him. The relation of the Angel as their chief is represented by their following him. This is consistent with their appearing subsequently as giving report to him. The red and white horses are well-known symbols of war and glory, whence He Who sits on the white horse¹¹ in the Revelations, went forth conquering and to conquer. The remaining colour is somewhat uncertain. If it be ashen gray, it would correspond to the pale horse¹² of the Revelations, and the union of the two colours, black and white, is calculated to be a symbol of a chequered state of things, whereas a mingled colour like "chestnut" is not suggestive of any symbol.

9. What are these? He asks, not who, but *what*¹³ they import.

¹ Dan. ix. 21. ² Josh. v. 13-15. See on "the Angel of the Lord" in "Daniel the Prophet," pp. 519-526. ³ Dion. ⁴ Dan. x. 13. ⁵ Ib. 21. ⁶ Ib. xii. 1. S. Jerome observes, "The Jews suppose the man on the red horse to be the Angel Michael, who was to avenge the iniquities and sins against Israel."

⁷ ver. 10. ⁸ ver. 11. ⁹ The name of the plant, דרור, occurs in the Arabic of Yemen (Kam. p. 812 and Abulwalid) and is probably the basis of Esther's original name, אסתר, perhaps i. q. Αστρος. Ges.

¹⁰ כַּעֲנָה, אֶר. in form, is doubtless the same as כַּעֲנָה, אֶר being used of sinking in the water, Ex. xv. 10. "In profundo," S. Jer. (Virg. Georg. ii. 112, litora myrtetis latissima, and Ib. iv. 124, amantes litora myrti.) The LXX κατασκίων would rather have been כַּעֲנָה, and the myrtles make shade, but do not grow in a shady place. Hitz. Ew. Maur. correct כַּעֲנָה, "the tent," (as Arab. כַּעֲנָה) i. e. "of God," they say. But the tabernacle, while it existed, was not so called; nor did myrtles grow before it. Böttcher n. 641. כַּעֲנָה, "schatten-dach."

¹¹ Rev. vi. 2.

10 And the man that stood among the myrtle trees answered and said, ^k These ^{Before} ^{CHRIST} ^{cir. 519.} ¹ Heb. 1. 14. are they whom the Lord hath sent to walk to and fro through the earth.

11 ¹ And they answered the angel of the ¹ Ps. 103. 20, 21. Lord that stood among the myrtle trees, and said, We have walked to and fro

The angel that talked with me. lit. "spake in me." The very rare expression¹⁴ seems meant to convey the thought of an inward speaking, whereby the words should be borne directly into the soul, without the intervention of the ordinary outward organs. God says to Moses, ¹⁵ If there is a prophet among you, I, the Lord, will make Myself known unto him in a vision, I will speak [lit.] in him in a dream. My servant Moses is not so—In him will I speak mouth to mouth; and Habakkuk says of the like inward teaching, ¹⁶ I will watch to see, what He will speak in me. It is the characteristic title of one attendant-angel, who was God's expositor of the visions to Zechariah¹⁷. "³ By his ministry God shewed me things to come, in that that angel formed in the spirit and imaginative power of Zechariah phantasms or images of things which were foreshewn him, and gave him to understand what those images signified."

11. And the man answered to the question addressed to the attendant-angel. He himself took the word.

These are they whom the Lord sent to walk up and down. Satan says of himself that he came ¹⁸ from going to and fro in the earth and from walking up and down in it. As he for evil, so these for good. Their office was not a specific or passing duty, as when God sent His angels with some special commission, such as those recorded in Holy Scripture. It was a continuous conversation with the affairs of men, a minute course of visiting, inspecting our human deeds and ways, a part of the "¹⁹ wonderful order," in which God has "ordained and constituted the services of Angels and men." Nor is it said that the Angels were limited, each to his own peculiar province, as we learn through Daniel, that certain great Angels, Princes among them, had the charge of empires or nations, even of the heathen²⁰. These Angels had apparently only the office of inspecting and reporting to Angels of a higher order, themselves a subordinate order in the heavenly Hierarchy. Nor are they spoken of, as executing any judgements of God, or as pacifying the earth; they may have been so employed; but they are only said to have reported the state in which they found it.

These answered the unexpressed enquiry of the angel of the Lord, as he had answered the unuttered question of the angel, attendant on Zechariah.

¹² Rev. vi. 8, ψαπολ, δ; "varü," S. Jer., farbol. Aq. The קָקֶן of the Targum is itself uncertain. It is a conjecture only of Levy, that it may be i. q. καυνοχαλκός, "dark-maned." Rashi and Kim. own that they do not know. The Peshito קִיכָא corresponds to the Heb. כִּימָא in Gen. xxx. 32. (bis) 33, 35 (bis) 39. but its meaning, in itself, is equally unknown. The Hebrew root occurs besides, only of a choice vine, pl. Is. xvi. 8, כִּימָא. Is. v. 2. Jer. ii. 21, כִּימָא. Gen. xlix. 11; in Arab. كيم, Abulw. But although this vine, growing only in Syria, has small blue-black grapes (Kim.), it is mere guess that it is so called from its colour, or that כִּימָא signifies red or dark. It is equally a guess that כִּימָא is transposed from Arab. كشيم "chestnut," (as distinct from "bay" كبي). כִּימָא is used of the colour of fire. ¹³ כִּימָא, not כִּי. ¹⁴ כִּימָא.

¹⁵ Nu. xii. 6-9. ¹⁶ Hab. ii. 1. These are the only additional instances of the construction, unless Jer. xxxi. 20, be used of tender speaking, "in (elsewhere in the heart of) Ephraim."

¹⁷ i. 13, 14, 19 (ii. 2 Heb.) ii. 3. [7] iv. 1, 4, 5, v. 5. 10. vi. 4.

¹⁸ Job ii. 2.

¹⁹ Collect for S. Michael's day.

²⁰ See "Daniel the Prophet" pp. 525, 526.

Before CHRIST
cir. 519. through the earth, and, behold, all the earth sitteth still, and is at rest.

12 ¶ Then the angel of the LORD answered and said, ^m O LORD of hosts, how long wilt thou not have mercy on Jerusalem and on the cities of Judah, against which thou hast had indignation ⁿ these three-score and ten years?

Sitteth still and is at rest, at rest, as the word seems to express¹, from its wonted state of tumult and war. Wars, although soon to break out again, were in the second year of Darius for the time suspended. The rest, in which the world was, suggests the contrast of the yet continuing unrest allotted to the people of God. Such rest had been promised to Israel, on its return from the captivity², but had not yet been fulfilled. Through the hostility of the Samaritans the building of the temple had been hindered and was just recommenced; the wall of Jerusalem was yet broken down³; its fire-burned gates not restored; itself was a waste⁴; its houses unbuilt⁵. This gives occasion to the intercession of the Angel of the Lord.

12. And the Angel of the Lord answered the implied longing, by intercession with God. As the angel-interpreter in Job had "the office of no mere created angel, but one, anticipative of His, Who came at once to redeem and justify," so the Angel of the Lord, in whom God was, exercised at once a mediatorial office with God, typical of our Lord's High Priest's prayer⁷, and acted as God.

These seventy years. The seventy years of the captivity, prophesied by Jeremiah⁸, were on the eve of their conclusion at the time of Daniel's great prayer of intercession⁹; they ended with the capture of Babylon, and the edict of Cyrus, permitting the Jews to return¹⁰. Yet there seems to have been a secondary fulfilment, from the destruction of the temple and city, in Zedekiah's eleventh year¹¹, 588 B.C. to the second year of Darius, 519 B.C. Such double fulfilments of prophecy are not like alternative fulfilments. They are a more intricate and fuller, not an easier fulfilment of it. Yet these 70 years do not necessitate such a double fulfilment. It might express only a reverent wonder, that the 70 years being accomplished, the complete restoration was not yet brought to pass. "God having fixed the time of the captivity to the 70th year, it was necessary to be silent, so long as the time was not yet come to an end, that he might not seem to oppose the Lord's will. But, when the time was now come to a close and the fear of offending was removed, he, knowing that the Lord cannot lie, entreats and ventures to enquire whether His anger has come to an end, as had those who sinned; or whether, fresh sins having accrued, there shall be a further delay, and their forlorn estate shall be yet further extended. They then who worship God have a good and not uncertain hope, that, if they should offend from infirmity, yet have they those who should entreat for them, not men only, 13 And the LORD answered the angel that talked with me with ° good words and comfortable words.

14 So the angel that communed with me said unto me, Cry thou, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; I am ^p jealous ^q for Jerusalem and for Zion with a great jealousy.

but the holy angels themselves, who render God gracious and propitious, soothing His anger by their purity, and in a manner winning the grieved Judge. Then the Angel entreated for the synagogue to the Jews; but we, who believe and have been sanctified in the Spirit, ¹³ have an Advocate with the Father Jesus Christ the righteous, and He is the propitiation for our sins, and as the Divine Paul writes, ¹⁴ God hath set Him forth as a propitiation through faith, freeing from sin those who come to Him."

13. And the Lord answered the angel that talked with me. Either directly, at the intercession of the angel of the Lord, or mediately through an answer first given to him, and by him communicated to the subordinate angel. Neither is expressed.

Good words, as God had promised¹⁵, after seventy years shall be accomplished at Babylon, I will visit you and perform My good word unto you, causing you to return to this place; and Joshua says, ¹⁶ There failed not ought of any good word which the Lord spake unto the house of Israel.

Comfortable words, lit. *consolations*¹⁷. Perhaps the Angel who received the message had, from their tender compassion for us, whereby they ¹⁸ joy over one sinner that repenteth, a part in these consolations which he conveyed.

14. Cry thou. The vision was not for the prophet alone. What he saw and heard, that he was to proclaim to others. The vision, which he now saw alone, was to be the basis and substance of his subsequent preaching¹⁹, whereby he was to encourage his people to persevere.

I am jealous for Jerusalem, lit. I have been, not now only but in time past even when I did not shew it, and *am jealous*²⁰, with the tender love which allows not what it loves to be injured²¹. The love of God, until finally shut out, is unchangeable. He pursues the sinner with chastisements and scourges in His love, that he may yet be converted and live²². But for God's love to him and the solicitations of His grace, while yet impenitent and displeasing Him, he could not turn and please Him.

And for Zion, which especially He had chosen to put His Name there, and there to receive the worship of His people; ²³ the hill which God desired to dwell in, ²⁴ which He loved. "With great and special love have I loved the people of the Jews and what pertained to them, and out of that love have I so diligently and severely corrected her excesses, that she may be more careful for the time to come, as a husband corrects most sharply a wife most dear to him, if she be unfaith-

¹ עָנָה is the word used in the book of Judges of the rest given to the land under judges until its fresh departure from God, Jud. iii. 11, 30, v. 31, viii. 28.; of the undisturbed life of the people of Laish, Jud. xviii. 7, 27; "from war," עָנָה, is added, Jos. xi. 23, xiv. 15, of the rest after the war whereby Israel was put in possession of Canaan.

It is used of the rest in Asa's days, 2 Chr. xiii. 23, Heb. given him by God, xiv. 4, 5, of the rest of the city after the death of Athaliah, 2 Kgs xi. 20, 2 Chr. xxiii. 21; of the earth, after the destruction of Babylon, Is. xiv. 7.

² with the same word עָנָה Jer. xxx. 10, xlvii. 27.

⁴ Ib. ii. 3.

³ Neh. i. 3.

⁶ See "Daniel the Prophet" p. 523.

⁵ Ib. vii. 4.

⁷ S. John xvii.

⁸ Jer. xxv. 11, 12, xxix. 10.

¹⁰ 2 Chr. xxxvi. 22, 23. Ezr. i. 1.

¹² S. Cyr.

¹⁴ Rom. iii. 25. ¹⁵ Jer. xxix. 10.

¹⁷ as Is. lvii. 18.

¹⁹ קרא, ab. 4. Jon. i. 2. Is. xl. 2, 6.

²⁰ Ewald compares יָרֵחַ, אֶלֶס, novi; זָרַח, memini, Nu. xi. 5, חָסִיד, Ps. xxxviii. 16. &c. Lehrs. n. 135. b. p. 351 ed. 8.

²² S. Aug. Conf. iii. 1.

²⁴ Ib. lxxviii. 68, add Ps. cxxxii. 13, 14.

⁹ Dan. ix. 2.

¹¹ 2 Kgs xxv. 2, 8, 9.

¹³ 1 S. John ii. 1, 2.

¹⁶ Josh. xxi. 43 (45 Eng.) add xxiii. 14, 15.

¹⁸ S. Luke xv. 10.

²¹ See on Nah. i. 1, p. 373.

²³ Ps. lxxviii. 16.

²⁵ Dion.

Before CHRIST
cir. 519.
Isai. 47. 6.

15 And I am very sore displeased with the heathen that are at ease: for ^aI was but a little displeased, and they helped forward the affliction.

Isai. 12. 1.
& 54. 8.
ch. 2. 10.
& 8. 3.

16 Therefore thus saith the LORD; ^rI am returned to Jerusalem with mercies: my house shall be built in it, saith the LORD of hosts, and ^aa line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.
ch. 2. 1, 2.

17 Cry yet, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; My cities through [†]prosperity [†]Heb. good. shall yet be spread abroad; ^tand the LORD ^tIsai. 51. 3. shall yet comfort Zion, and ^ushall yet choose ^uIsai. 14. 1. Jerusalem. ^{ch. 2. 12.} ^{& 3. 2.}

ful. Whence in the book of Maccabees it is written, "¹ It is a token of His great goodness, when wicked doers are not suffered any long time, but are forthwith punished. For not as with other nations, whom the Lord patiently forbearth to punish, till they be come to the fulness of their sins, so dealeth He with us; lest, being come to the height of sin, afterwards He should take vengeance of us. And therefore He never withdraweth His mercy from us, and though He punisheth with adversity, yet doth He never forsake His people."

15. I am sore displeased, lit. with great anger am I angered against the nations which are at ease. The form of the words ² shews that the greatness of the displeasure of God against those who oppress His people, is proportionate to the great and tender love towards themselves. God had been angered indeed ³ with His people; with their enemies He was angered with a great anger; and that the more, because they were at ease ⁴, in unfeeling self-enjoyment amid the miseries of others.

I was a little displeased ⁵; little, in comparison with our deserts; little in comparison with the anger of the human instruments of His displeasure; little in comparison with their's who, in their anger, sought their own ends.

They helped forward the affliction ⁶. "⁷ He is wroth with the nations at ease, because He delivered His people to be corrected, but they used cruelty towards those delivered; He wills them to be amended as a son by a schoolmaster; they set themselves to slay and punish them, as an enemy. Like that in Isaiah, ⁸ I gave them into thy hands; thou didst shew them no mercy; upon the ancients hast thou very heavily laid thy yoke."

Or it may be, helped for evil, in order to bring about evil, as in Jeremiah ⁹, Behold I set My face against you for evil ¹⁰, and to destroy all Judah i. e., as we should say, they were the instruments of God, "¹¹ coöperated in the execution of My justice towards you, but cruelly and with perverse intention. For although the Assyrians and Chaldeans wasted the Jewish people, God so ordaining in as far as He willed through them to punish in the present the sins of His people, yet they did it, not in view of God and out of zeal for righteousness, but out of pride covetousness and with the worst ends. Hence God says by Isaiah ¹², Wo to Asshur, the rod of Mine anger, and the staff in his hand is Mine indignation. Howbeit he thinketh not so, but his heart is to destroy and cut off nations not a few.

16. Therefore. This being so, since God was so jealous for His people, so displeased with their persecutors, thus saith the Lord, "¹³ I Who in wrath remember mercy, am returned ¹⁴, not by change of place, Who am uncircumscribed, not existing in place, to the people of Judah and Jerusalem in mercies, manifoldly benefitting them by various effects of My love." The single benefits, the rebuilding of His House, and so the restoration of His public worship, and the rebuilding of Jerusalem, are but instances of that all-containing mercy, His restored presence in tender mercies ¹⁵. I am returned, God says, although the effects of His return were yet to come.

A line shall be stretched forth over Jerusalem, before, when it stood, this had been done to destroy ¹⁶; now, when destroyed, to rebuild ¹⁷.

"¹⁸ The temple was built then, when the foundations of the walls were not yet laid. In man's sight it would have seemed more provident that the walls should be first builded, that then the temple might be builded more securely. To God, in Whom Alone is the most firm stay of our life and salvation, it seemed otherwise. For it cannot be that he, to whom nothing is dearer than zeal for the most holy religion, should be forsaken of His help."

17. Cry yet, a further promise; not only should Jerusalem be rebuilt, but should, as we say, overflow with good ¹⁹; and God, Who had seemed to cast off His people, should yet comfort her, and should shew in act that He had chosen her ²⁰. Zechariah thrice ²¹ repeats the promise, given through Isaiah ²² to Jerusalem, before her wasting by the Chaldeans, reminding the people thereby, that the restoration, in the dawn whereof they lived, had been promised two centuries before. Yet, against all appearances. My cities shall overflow with good, as being God's; yet would the Lord comfort Zion; yet would He choose Jerusalem.

"²³ What is the highest of all goods? what the sweetest solace in life? what the subject of joys? what the oblivion of past sorrow? That which the Son of God brought upon earth, when He illumined Jerusalem with the brightness of His light and heavenly discipline. For to that end was the city restored, that in it, by the ordinance of Christ, for calamity should abound bliss; for desolation, fulness; for sorrow, joy; for want, affluence of heavenly goods."

¹² Is. x. 5, 7.

¹³ Hab. iii. 2.

¹⁴ יָשָׁב, although יָבֵנָה, יָבֵנָה.

¹⁵ occurs 27 times of the tender love of God; 12 times only, of the compassion of man, and in 6 of these, of compassion of man as given by God, יָרַח, 2ce with the word נִסְחָר.

¹⁶ 2 Kgs xxi. 13, Is. xxxiv. 11.
¹⁷ It is used of the creation of the earth, Job xxxviii. 5. The Chethib, probably נָקָה, occurs 1 Kgs vii. 23, Jer. xxxi. 19, and here.

¹⁸ Osor. ¹⁹ "affluent bonis," S. Jer.; "effluent bonis," Vulg. more exactly. The word בָּרַךְ is used of the "gushing forth of a fountain," Pr. v. 16; also of the dispersion of people; not of the spreading abroad of a people for good.

²⁰ Is. i. 29, iii. 31, Is. i. 29, the sense would be injured by rendering, "loved." ²¹ here, ii. 12, iii. 2.

²² Is. xiv. 1. בְּרִיחַ יִשְׂרָאֵל. Isaiah has the same cadence as Zechariah, though Zechariah only retains the characteristic words בְּרִיחַ.

¹ 2 Macc. vi. 13-16.

² קָצָה נִרְאָה ver. 15, as contrasted with קָצָה נִרְאָה ver. 14.
³ קָצָה קָצָה i. 2.
⁴ קָצָה, as applied to persons, is always used in a bad sense; the noun, 2 Kgs xix. 23, Is. xxxvii. 29; the adj. Is. xxxii. 9, 11, Job xii. 5, Am. vi. 1, Ps. cxliii. 4, and here.

⁵ קָצָה is obviously contrasted with קָצָה נִרְאָה: others "for a little while." But besides this contrast, קָצָה is seldom, comparatively, used of time, and that, as indicated by the context. Gen. xlvii. 9, "my days have been few;" Lev. xxv. 52, "if a little remains of the years;" Ru. ii. 7, "she sat a little in the house;" Job x. 20, "are not my days few?" xxiv. 24, "they are exalted a little, and are not." Add Ps. xxxvii. 10, Jer. li. 33, Hos. i. 4, "yet a little, and." Hagg. ii. 6; "yet once, it is a little, and;" [all, except the doubtful Ps. viii. 6.]

⁶ As 2 Chr. xx. 23, קָצָה לְשִׁמּוֹת, "aided the destruction." ⁷ S. Jer.
⁸ Is. xlvii. 6. ⁹ Jer. xlv. 11. ¹⁰ לְקָצָה וּלְהִיבִית. ¹¹ Dion.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

18 ¶ Then lifted I up mine eyes, and saw, and behold four horns.

19 And I said unto the angel that talked with me, What be these? And he answered me, ² These are the horns which have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem.

20 And the LORD shewed me four carpenters.

21 Then said I, What come these to do? And he spake, saying, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, so that no man did lift up his head: but these are come to

This first vision having predicted the entire restoration, the details of that restoration are given in subsequent visions.

18 ¹ And I lifted up mine eyes. “² Not those of the body (for such visions are invisible to the eyes of the flesh), but rather the inner eyes of the heart and mind.” It seems as though, at the close of each vision, Zechariah sank in meditation on what had been shewn him; from which he was again roused by the exhibition of another vision.

I saw four horns. The mention of the horns naturally suggests the thought of the creatures which wielded them; as in the first vision that of the horses following the chiefs, implies the presence of the riders upon them. And this the more, since the word “fray them away” implies living creatures, liable to fear. “³ The horn, in inspired Scripture, is always taken as an image of strength, and mostly of pride also, as David said to some, ⁴ I said unto the fools, Deal not so foolishly, and to the ungodly, Lift not up the horns. Lift not up your horns on high and speak not with a stiff neck. The prophet then sees four horns, i. e. four hard and warlike nations, who could easily uproot cities and countries.”

These are the horns which have scattered. “⁵ The four horns which scattered Judah Israel and Jerusalem, are four nations, Babylonians, Medes and Persians, Macedonians and Romans; as the Lord, on the prophet’s enquiry, explains here, and Daniel unfolds most fully⁶; who in the vision of the image with golden head, silver breast, belly and thighs of brass, feet of iron and clay, explained it of these four nations, and again in another vision of four beasts⁷, lion, bear, leopard and another unnamed dreadful beast, he pointed out the same nations under another figure. But that the Medes and Persians, after the victory of Cyrus, were one kingdom, no one will doubt, who reads secular and sacred literature.—When this vision was beheld, the kingdom of the Babylonians had now passed away, that of the Medes and Persians was instant; that of Greeks and Macedonians and of the Romans was yet to come. What the Babylonians, what the Medes and Persians, what the Greeks i. e. the Macedonians, did to Judah, Israel and Jerusalem, a learned man acknowledgeth, especially under Antiochus, surnamed Epiphanes, to which the history of the Maccabees belongs. After the Coming of our Lord and Saviour, when Jerusalem was encompassed, Josephus, a native writer, tells most fully, what the Israelites

¹ The Eng. Vers. follows the LXX and S. Jer. in adding the 2nd vision to the first chapter. ² S. Cyril on ii. 1. ³ S. Cyr. ⁴ Ps. lxxv. 4.

⁵ S. Jer. Kimchi and Abarbanel agree with him in the general line.

⁶ Dan. ii.

⁷ Ib. vii.

fray them, to cast out the horns of the Gentiles, which ² lifted up their horn over the land of Judah to scatter it.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.
Ps. 75. 4, 5.

CHAPTER II.

1 God, in the care of Jerusalem, sendeth to measure it. 6 The redemption of Zion. 10 The promise of God’s presence.

I LIFTED up mine eyes again, and looked, and behold ^a a man with a ^a measuring line in his hand. 519. Ezek. 40. 3.

endured, and the Gospel fore-announced. These horns dispersed Judah almost individually, so that, bowed down by the heavy weight of evils, no one of them raised his head.” Though these were successive in time, they are exhibited to Zechariah as one. One whole are the efforts against God’s Church; one whole are the instruments of God, whether angelic or human, in doing or suffering, to repel them. Zechariah then exhibits these hostile powers as past and gone⁸, as each would be at the end, having put forth his passing might, and perishing. They scattered, each in its day, and disappeared; for the next displaced it.

The long schism being ended, Judah and Israel are again one; and Jerusalem, the place of God’s worship, belongs to Israel as well as to Judah⁹.

The explanation of the number four, as symbolising contemporaneous attacks from the four quarters of the heavens, fails in matter of fact, that, in these later times, the Jews suffered always from one power at a time. There was no such fourfold attack. In Zechariah’s time all around was Persian.

“¹⁰ Those horns, broken by the angels’ ministry, portended that no guilt against the Church of Christ should be unpunished. Never will there be wanting fierce enemies from E. W. N. or S., whom God will strengthen, in order by them to teach His own. But when He shall see His work finished, i. e. when He shall have cleansed the stains of His own and brought back His Church to her former purity, He will punish those who so fiercely afflicted her.”

Spiritually, “¹¹ those who destroy vices, build up virtues, and all the saints who, possessing these remedies, ever build up the Church, may be called ‘builders.’ Whence the Apostle says, ¹² I, as a wise builder, laid the foundation; and the Lord, when wroth, said that He would ¹³ take away from Jerusalem artificer and wise man. And the Lord Himself, Son of the Almighty God and of the Creator of all, is called ¹⁴ the son of the carpenter.”

ii. 1. A man with a measuring line in his hand. Probably the Angel of the Lord, of whom Ezekiel has a like vision. “¹¹ He who before, when he lift up his eyes, had seen in the four horns things mournful, now again lifts up his eyes to see a man, of whom it is written, ¹⁵ Behold a man whose name is the Branch; of whom we read above, ¹⁶ Behold a man riding upon a red horse, and he stood among the myrtle trees, which ⁸ 77. ⁹ This is expressed by the use or omission of the nk. Its use coordinates Judah and Israel; its omission subordinates Jerusalem. ¹⁰ Osor.

¹¹ S. Jer.

¹² 1 Cor. iii. 10.

¹³ Is. iii. 3.

¹⁴ S. Matt. xiii. 55.

¹⁵ Zech. vi. 12.

¹⁶ Ib. i. 8.

Before CHRIST
cir. 519.

2 Then said I, Whither goest thou? And he said unto me, ^bTo measure Jerusalem, to see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof.

3 And, behold, the angel that talked with me went forth, and another angel went out to meet him, were in the bottom. Of whom too the Father saith; He builded My city, ¹whose builder and maker is God. He too is seen by Ezekiel in a description like this, ²a man whose appearance was like the appearance of brass, i. e. burnished ³and shining as fire, with a line of flax in his hand and a measuring reed." The office also seems to be one of authority, not to measure the actual length and breadth of Jerusalem, but to lay down what it should be, ⁴"to mark it out broad and very long."

3. The angel that talked with me went forth, probably to receive the explanation which was given him for Zechariah; and another angel, a higher angel, since he gives him a commission, went forth to meet him, being (it seems probable) instructed by the Angel of the Lord, who laid down the future dimensions of the city. The indefiniteness of the description, another angel, implies that he was neither the Angel of the Lord, nor (were they different) Michael, or the man with the measuring line, but an angel of intermediate rank, instructed by one higher, instructing the lower, who immediately instructed Zechariah.

And said unto him, Run, speak unto this young man, the prophet himself, who was to report to his people what he heard. Jeremiah says, ⁵I am a youth; and ⁶the young man, the young prophet, carried the prophetic message from Elisha to Jehu. "Youth," common as our English term in regard to man, is inapplicable and unapplied to angels, who have not our human variations of age, but exist, as they were created.

Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls, or as villages ⁷, viz. an unconfined, uncramped population, spreading itself freely, without restraint of walls, and (it follows) without need of them. Clearly then it is no earthly city. To be inhabited as villages would be weakness, not strength; a peril, not a blessing. The earthly Jerusalem, so long as she remained unvalled, was in continual fear and weakness. God put it into the heart of His servant to desire to restore her; her wall was built, and then she prospered. He Himself had promised to Daniel, that ⁸Her street shall be rebuilt, and her wall, even in strait of times. Nehemiah mourned 73 years after this, B.C. 443, when it was told him, ⁹The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem also is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire. He said to Artaxerxes, ¹⁰Why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire? When permitted by Artaxerxes to return, he addressed the rulers of the Jews, ¹¹Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire; come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproach; and they said, let us rise and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good work. When

4 And said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, ^cJerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein:

5 For I, saith the LORD, will be unto her ^da wall of fire round about, ^eand will be the glory in the midst of her.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.
^c Jer. 31. 27.
Ezek. 36. 10, 11.

^d Isai. 26. 1.
ch. 9. 8.
^e Isai. 60. 19.
Rev. 21. 23.

¹² the wall was finished and our enemies heard, and the heathen about us saw it, they were much cast down in their own eyes; for they perceived that this work was wrought of our God.

This prophecy then looks on directly to the time of Christ. Wonderfully does it picture the gradual expansion of the kingdom of Christ, without bound or limit, whose protection and glory God is, and the character of its defences. It should dwell as villages, peacefully and gently expanding itself to the right and the left, through its own inherent power of multiplying itself, as a city, to which no bounds were assigned, but which was to fill the earth. ¹³"For us God hath raised a Church, that truly holy and far-famed city, which Christ fortifieth, consuming opponents by invisible powers, and filling it with His own glory, and as it were, standing in the midst of those who dwell in it. For He promised; Lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world. This holy city Isaiah mentioned: ¹⁴thine eyes shall see Jerusalem, a quiet habitation; a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken; and to her he saith, ¹⁵enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitation; spare not; lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes. For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left. For the Church of Christ is widened and extended boundlessly, ever receiving countless souls who worship Him." ¹⁶"What king or emperor could make walls so ample as to include the whole world? Yet, without this, it could not encircle that Jerusalem, the Church which is diffused through the whole world. This Jerusalem, the pilgrim part of the heavenly Jerusalem, is, in this present world, inhabited without walls, not being contained in one place or one nation. But in that world, whither it is daily being removed hence, much more can there not, nor ought to be, nor is, any wall around, save the Lord, Who is also the glory in the midst of it."

5. And I, Myself ¹⁷in My own Being, will be to her a wall of fire, not protection only, an inner circle around her, however near an enemy might press in upon her, but destructive to her enemies. Isaiah says, ¹⁸No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper, and every tongue that shall rise in judgement against thee thou shalt condemn. Its defence, Isaiah says, shall be immaterial. ¹⁹We have a strong city; salvation shall God appoint for walls and bulwarks; ²⁰thou shalt cull thy walls salvation and thy gates praise. By a different figure it is said, ²¹I will encamp about mine house because of the army.

And glory will I be in the midst of her, as Isaiah says, ²²The Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory; and of Christ, ²³In that day shall the Branch of the Lord be Beauty and Glory—to the escaped of Israel.

¹ Heb. xi. 10.

² Ezek. xl. 3.

³ Ib. i. 7.

⁴ S. Cyr.

⁵ Jer. i. 6.

⁶ הנהר הנער הנביא 2 Kgs ix. 4.

⁷ See on IIab. iii. 14. p. 432.

⁸ Dan. ix. 25.

⁹ Neh. i. 3.

¹⁰ Ib. ii. 3.

¹¹ Ib. 17. 18.

¹² Ib. vi. 15, 16.

¹³ Is. xxxiii. 20.

¹⁴ Ib. liv. 2, 3.

¹⁵ Rup.

¹⁶ אמי emph.

¹⁷ Is. liv. 17.

¹⁸ Ib. xxvi. 1.

¹⁹ Ib. lx. 18.

²⁰ Zech. ix. 8.

²¹ Is. lx. 19.

²² Ib. iv. 2.

Before CHRIST
cir. 519.

6 ¶ Ho, ho, come forth, and flee 'from the land of the north, saith the LORD: for I have ^s spread you abroad as the four winds of the heaven, saith the LORD.

^s Deut. 28. 64. Ezek. 17. 21.

6. Ho! ho! and flee. Such being the safety and glory in store for God's people in Jerusalem, He Who had so provided it, the Angel of the Lord, bids His people everywhere to come to it, saving themselves also from the peril which was to come on Babylon. So Isaiah bade them, ¹*Go ye forth of Babylon; flee ye from the Chaldeans with a voice of singing; declare ye, tell this, utter it to the end of the earth; say ye, The Lord hath redeemed His servant Jacob.* ²*Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence; touch no unclean thing; go ye out of the midst of her; be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the Lord; and Jeremiah, ³Flee ye out of the midst of Babylon, and deliver every man his soul; be not cut off in her iniquity, for this is the time of the Lord's vengeance; He will render unto her a recompense.* ⁴*My people, go ye out of the midst of her, and deliver ye, every man his soul from the fierce anger of the Lord.*

The words, flee, deliver thyself, imply an imminent peril on Babylon, such as came upon her, two years after this prophecy, in the fourth year of Darius. But the earnestness of the command, its repetition by three prophets, the context in Isaiah and Jeremiah, imply something more than temporal peril, the peril of the infection of the manners of Babylon, which may have detained there many who did not return. Whence in the New Testament, the words are cited, as to the great evil city of the world; ⁵*Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you; and under the name of Babylon; ⁶I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.*

For I have spread you abroad as the four winds of heaven. The north country, although its capital and centre was Babylon, was the whole Babylonian empire, called 'the North' because its invasions always came upon Israel from the North. But the book of Esther shews that, sixty years after this, the Jews were dispersed over the 127 provinces of the Persian empire, from India (the Punjab) to Ethiopia, whether they were purposely placed by the policy of the conquerors in detached groupings, as the ten tribes were in the cities of the Medes, or whether, when more trusted, they migrated of their own accord. God, in calling them to return, reminds them of the greatness of their dispersion. He had dispersed them abroad as the four winds of heaven¹⁰: He, the Same, recalled them.

7. Dwellest with the daughter of Babylon. The unusual idiom¹¹ is perhaps chosen as expressive of God's tenderness, even to the people who were to be destroyed, from which Israel was to escape.

7 ^h Deliver thyself, O Zion, that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

8 For thus saith the LORD of hosts; After the glory hath he sent me unto the ^h Rev. 18. 4.

8. *After the glory*¹², "¹³ which it is promised to bring upon you." This being the usual construction, the words involve a great course of God's dealing, of first shewing favour to those who will receive favour, then abandoning or punishing the rest; as, when the eight souls had been received into the ark, the flood came; when Lot and his had escaped out of Sodom, the fire came down from heaven; when Israel had passed the Red Sea, Pharaoh's hosts were drowned; the election obtained what Israel sought for, the rest were blinded¹⁴. The glory then would be the glory, of which God says, I will be the glory in the midst of you.

But further He Who speaketh is Almighty God, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, He hath sent¹⁵ me; For lo I wave My hand against them—and ye shall know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me; Lo I come and dwell in the midst of thee, saith the Lord, and many nations shall cleave unto the Lord in that day, and they shall be to Me a people and I will dwell in the midst of thee, and thou shalt know, that the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto you. In all which series of promises, the I, of whom Israel were to know that the Lord of hosts had sent Him, is the I, Who affirms of Himself what belongs to Almighty God only, inflicting punishment on the enemies of Judah, indwelling the Church and people, receiving the Heathen as His own; and it is precisely by all these acts of power and love, that Israel shall know that the Lord of hosts had sent Him.

"¹⁶ In what follows, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, After glory, He hath sent Me &c., the Saviour is introduced speaking, Who, being Almighty God, saith that He was sent by the Father Almighty, not according to that whereby He was Almighty, but according to that, that, after glory, He was sent, ¹⁷*Who being in the Form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but emptied Himself, taking the form of a servant, and was made obedient unto the Father even unto death; and that, the death of the Cross.* Nor is it marvel that Christ is called Almighty, in Whose Person we read in the Apocalypse of John, ¹⁸*These things saith the faithful Witness, —I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which was and which is and which is to come, the Almighty,* ¹⁹*to Whom all power is given in heaven and in earth; and Who saith, ²⁰All things of the Father's are Mine.* But if all things, i. e. God from God, Lord from Lord, Light from Light, therefore also Almighty from Almighty; for it cannot be, that diverse should be the glory of those whose Nature is One."

For he who toucheth, so as to injure²¹, you, toucheth the apple of His eye, i. e. of Him Who sent Him, Almighty after a thing." So generally אחר is used with verbs of motion, חלך אחר, Gen. xxxvii. 17, 2 Kgs xxiii. 3; יבא אחר, Nu. xxv. 8; ירד אחר, 1 Sam. xii. 14; ירד אחר, 2 Kgs xxv. 5; יצא אחר, 1 Sam. xi. 7; or, spiritually, אחר כחשבותם, Is. lxxv. 2; אחר דומם, Ez. xiii. 3; אחר עיי חלך לך, Job xxxi. 7; but אחר is not used in our sense of seeking, "going after a thing," except in the one phrase ידעתי אחר לך ידעתי אחר, Job xxxix. 8, "searcheth after every green thing." It is the less probable here, because, apart from this, (besides the 5 duplicate passages in Isaiah and 2 Kings, 2 Sam. and 1 Chronicles) the construction of אחר with acc. of the person sent and אחר of the person to whom he is sent, occurs in 71 passages, (Ges. cites 23 of them) and in no one case is the object for which they were sent, added by any preposition. Four are in Zechariah himself ii. 12, 15, iv. 9, vi. 15. To "send for" is expressed by ל אחר Jer. xiv. 3, 1 Kgs xx. 7. ¹³ Jon. ¹⁴ Rom. xi. 7. ¹⁵ ver. 8-10. ¹⁶ S. Jer. ¹⁷ Phil. ii. 6. ¹⁸ Rev. i. 5, 8. ¹⁹ S. Matt. xxviii. 18. ²⁰ S. John xvi. 15. ²¹ נגע, as in Gen. xxvi. 11, Jos. ix. 19, 2 Sam. xiv. 10, Jer. xii. 14, Ezek. xvii. 10, Ps. cv. 15; with acc. Gen. xxvi. 20, Ru. ii. 9; of God, 1 Sam. vi. 9, Job i. 11, xix. 21.

¹ Is. xlviii. 20. ² Ib. lii. 11. ³ Jer. li. 6. add l. 8. ⁴ Ib. li. 45. ⁵ 2 Cor. vi. 17.

⁶ Rev. xviii. 4. ⁷ Jer. i. 13, 14, iii. 18, iv. 6, vi. 1. 22. xxiii. 8.

⁸ Esther i. 1, iii. 8, 12-14. viii. 5, 9. ⁹ 2 Kgs xvii. 6.

¹⁰ "As the four winds of heaven are distant one from the other." Sal. b. Mel. Kim. A.E. The LXX alone paraphrase, "For from the winds of heaven I will gather you." Others take the word of an intended diffusion of them, through the favour of God, the future being spoken of, as if past. But although פז is used of dispersion, besides, in Ps. lxxviii. 15, Nif. Ez. xvii. 21, it is no where used of diffusion, only of the spreading out of what remained coherent, as hands, wings, a garment, tent, veil, cloud, letter, light. See instances Ges. Thes. p. 1132.

¹¹ יושבת בת בבל dweller of the daughter of Babylon, as Jer. xlv. 19. יושבת בפרס, Ib. xlviii. 18, יושבת בת רבון. In Jeremiah however, it is the same people, Egypt or Dicon; here, Israel as settled in Babylon.

¹² אחר is used with acc. pers., and אחר also of persons, 2 Sam. iii. 26, 2 Kgs viii. 14, or with אחר of pers. alone, 2 Kgs xiv. 9. אחר אחר is not elsewhere used like our "sent

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

¹ Deut. 32. 10.
Ps. 17. 8.
² Thess. 1. 6.
³ Isai. 11. 15.
& 19. 16.

¹ ch. 4. 9.

nations which spoiled you: for he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye.

9 For, behold, I will ^k shake mine hand upon them, and they shall be a spoil to their servants: and ^l ye shall know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me.

God¹, as in the song of Moses, ² He led him about, He instructed him, He kept him as the apple of His eye; and David prays, ³ Keep me as the apple of the eye.

9. For behold I will shake My hand against them, as God promised of old against the enemies of His people⁴, and they shall be a spoil to those who served them habitually⁵.

And ye shall know that the Lord of hosts hath sent Me.

⁶ He was sent, not as God, but as Man. For as God He is equal to the Father. For He saith, ⁷ I am in the Father and the Father in Me, and, The Father Who dwelleth in Me He doeth the works, and, ⁸ I and My Father are one, and ⁹ He who hath seen Me hath seen the Father. But He is sent, as Man, fulfilling the dispensation for us, not lessening the Divine Nature. The Prophet then intimated not the duality only, but the equality of the Persons.¹⁰

10. Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion. It is a great jubilee of joy, to which Zion is invited. Thrice besides is she invited with this same word, and all for the restored or renewed Presence of God. ¹⁰ Cry aloud for joy, thou barren which bare not, as here, on the coming in of the Gentiles, ¹¹ Cry aloud for joy, O daughter of Zion; jubilate, O Israel; rejoice and exult with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem; the Lord, the King of Israel, is in the midst of thee. ¹² Shout and cry aloud for joy, O inhabitant of Zion; for great in the midst of thee is the Holy One of Israel. The source of joy is a fresh coming of God, a coming, whereby He should dwell abidingly among them: truly what is this, but the Incarnation? As S. John saith, ¹³ The Word was made Flesh and dwelt among us; and, ¹⁴ Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God Himself shall be with them and shall be their God. ¹⁵ Hence too you may learn how great a subject of contentment above is the Presence of the Saviour upon earth. He could not then but bid the spiritual Zion, ¹⁶ which is the Church of the Living God, the most sacred multitude of those saved by faith, to cry aloud for joy and rejoice. But it was announced that He should come and be in the midst of her. For S. John saith to us, The Word ¹⁷ was in the world, and, being God, was not severed from His creatures, but He was Himself the Source of life to all living, and holding all things together to well-being and life; but ¹⁷ the world knew Him not: for it worshipped the creature. But He came among us, when, taking our likeness, He was conceived by the holy Virgin, and ¹⁸ was seen upon earth and conversed with men, and the divine David witnesseth saying,

¹ So S. Jer. Theod. Others, as S. Cyr., of his own eye, turning to evil to himself; but the analogy of the other passages is against it. בְּעֵינַי [בְּעֵינַי] is doubtless the same as בְּעֵינַי with the same reduplication as in Arab. Syr. Ch. The reduplication is plain in the Arab. بَابَاوَاتٍ from باباوت, "papavit," not from a separate root, as Ges. Thes. p. 841.

² Deut. xxxii. 10.

³ Ps. xvii. 8.

⁴ The same idiom, Is. xi. 15. xix. 16.

⁵ The force of the part. עֲבָדֵיהֶם, instead of עֲבָדֵיהֶם. So זֶכְרִי, Is. xlii. 5, Is. xxx. 24; זֶכְרִי, Pr. xii. 11; זֶכְרִי, Mal. iii. 18; זֶכְרִי, Ib. 17. זֶכְרִי, 2 Kgs x. 19, 21, 22, 23, 24, Ps. xlvii. 7. זֶכְרִי, Ez. xlvi. 18. זֶכְרִי, Ib. 19. So זֶכְרִי, Nu. iv. 37, 41. זֶכְרִי, Ib. xviii. 21. זֶכְרִי, the labourer, Eccl. v. 11. In Gen. iv. 2, xlix. 15, Jos. xvi. 10, 1 Kgs v. 1, 2 Kgs xvii. 33, 41, it has this force from the 10 ¶ ^m Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion: for, lo, I come, and I ⁿ will dwell in the midst of thee, saith the LORD.

11 ° And many nations shall be joined to ^p the LORD ^p in that day, and shall be ^q my people: and I will dwell in the midst of thee, and ^r thou shalt know that the LORD

^p ch. 3. 10.

^q Ex. 12. 40.

^r Ezek. 33. 33. ver. 9.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

^m Isai. 12. 6.
& 54. 1.
Zeph. 3. 14.
Lev. 26. 12.
Ezek. 37. 27.
ch. 8. 3.
John 1. 14.
2 Cor. 6. 16.
ⁿ Isai. 2. 2, 3.
& 49. 22.
& 60. 3, &c.
ch. 8. 22, 23.

¹⁹ Our God shall come manifestly, and shall not keep silence. Then also was there a haven for the Gentiles. For now no longer was the race of Israel alone taught, but the whole earth was engoldened with the evangelical preachings, and in every nation and country great is His Name.²⁰

²⁰ This too is to be understood of the Person of the Lord, that He exhorts His people, being restored from the captivity to their former abode, to be glad and rejoice, because the Lord Himself cometh and dwelleth in the midst of her, and many nations shall believe in Him, of Whom it is said, ²¹ Ask of Me and I will give Thee nations for Thine inheritance, and the ends of the earth for Thy possession, and He shall dwell in the midst of them, as He saith to His disciples, ²² Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.

11. And many nations shall join themselves, cleaving to Him by a close union. Isaiah had so spoken of single proselytes²³; Jeremiah had used the word of Israel's self-exhortation after the return from Babylon; ²⁴ going and weeping, they shall go and seek the Lord their God, saying, Come and let us join ourselves unto the Lord, in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten. This Zechariah now predicts of many nations. The Jews were scarcely half-restored themselves, a mere handful. They had wrought no conversions among the heathen, yet prophecy continues its unbroken voice, many nations shall join themselves unto the Lord.

And shall be My people, lit. be to Me a people. This is exactly the history of the Christian Church, unity amid diversity; many nations still retaining their national existence, yet owned by God as one people and His own. The words are those in which God adopted Israel in Egypt; ²⁵ I will take you to Me for a people, and I will be your God. This was the covenant with them, ²⁶ that thou shouldest enter into covenant with the Lord thy God,—that He may establish thee to-day for a people unto Himself, and that He may be unto thee a God. The contrary was the title of the heathen, ²⁷ not a people; with whom God said, I will move Israel to jealousy. The closeness of union Jeremiah expresses; ²⁸ As the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I caused to cleave to Me the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah, saith the Lord; that they might be unto Me for a people and for a name and for a praise and for a glory. This was the object of the existence of Israel; to this it was to be restored²⁹ by conversion³⁰; to this special privilege of Israel many nations were to be admitted; yet not so as to be separate from Israel, for He adds, and I will dwell in the midst of thee, preceding היה.

¹⁹ Ib. x. 30.

¹¹ Zeph. iii. 14, 15.

¹⁴ Rev. xxi. 3.

¹⁷ S. John i. 10.

²¹ Ps. ii. 8.

²³ Is. lvi. 3-6.

²⁶ Deut. xxix. 12, 13, add Lev. xxvi. 12, Deut. xxvii. 9. 1 Sam. xii. 22, 2 Sam. vii.

23, 24, 2 Kgs xi. 17, 1 Chr. xvii. 22, 2 Chr. xxiii. 16, Jer. vii. 23, xi. 4.

²⁷ Deut. xxxii. 21. ²⁸ Jer. xiii. 11. ²⁹ Ib. xxiv. 7, xxx. 22, xxxi. 1, xxxii. 38.

³⁰ Ez. xi. 20, xiv. 11, xxxvi. 28, xxxvii. 23, 27, Zech. viii. 8.

3 x

Before CHRIST
cir. 519.

of hosts hath sent me unto thee.

* Deut. 32. 9.
† ch. 1. 17.
‡ Hab. 2. 20.
§ Zeph. 1. 7.
¶ Ps. 68. 5.
‡ Isai. 57. 15.
† Heb. the habitation of his holiness.
Deut. 26. 15.
Isai. 63. 15.

12 And the LORD shall ^ainherit Judah his portion in the holy land, and ^tshall choose Jerusalem again.

13 ^uBe silent, O all flesh, before the LORD: for he is raised up ^xout of [†]his holy habitation.

Judah. God would dwell in His Church, formed of Israel and the Gentiles, yet so that the Gentiles should be grafted into Israel, becoming one with them.

12. And the Lord shall inherit Judah His portion. The inheritance of the Lord is the title which God commonly gave to Israel¹. God is said to be the portion of Israel²; of the pious³; once only besides, is Israel said to be the portion of God⁴; once only is God said to inherit Israel, ⁵*Pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us for thine inheritance.* Zechariah unites the two rare idioms.

In the holy land. The land is again made holy by God, and sanctified by His Presence. So He calls the place where He revealed Himself to Moses, *holy ground*⁶. So it is said, ⁷*the holy place*, ⁸*the holy house*, ⁹*the holy ark*, ¹⁰*the holy city*, ¹¹*the holy mountain*, ¹²*the holy people*, ¹³*the holy chambers*, or, with reference to their relation to God Who consecrates them, ¹⁴*My holy mountain*, ¹⁵*Thy holy habitation*, ¹⁶*Thy holy dwelling-place*, ¹⁷*Thy holy temple*, ¹⁸*Thy holy mountain*, ¹⁹*Thy holy oracle*, ²⁰*Thy holy city*, ²¹*cities*, ²²*His holy place*, ²³*His holy border*. It is not one technical expression, as people now by a sort of effort speak of "the holy land." Every thing which has reference to God is holy. The land is holy, not for any merits of theirs, but because God was worshipped there, was specially present there. It was an anticipation and type of "Thy holy Church throughout all the world doth acknowledge Thee." This land their fathers had ²⁴*polluted with blood*; God says, ²⁵*they defiled My land*; Ezekiel called her eminently, ²⁶*the land that is not cleansed*. Now God said, ²⁷*I will remove the iniquity of the land*, and she was again a holy land, as hallowed by Him.

It is not a mere conversion of the heathen, but, as Isaiah²⁸ and Micah²⁹ foretold; a conversion, of which Jerusalem should be the centre, as our Lord explained to the Apostles after His Resurrection, ³⁰*that repentance and remission of sins should* ¹ Deut. iv. 20, ix. 26, 29, 1 Sam. xxvi. 19, 2 Sam. xiv. 16, xx. 19, xxi. 3, 1 Kgs viii. 51, Ps. xlviii. 9, xxxiii. 12, lxxviii. 10, lxxviii. 62, 71, lxxix. 1, cvi. 40, Joel ii. 17, iii. 2, [Heb.] Is. xix. 25, xlvii. 6, Jer. xii. 7-9, l. 11.

² Jer. x. 16, li. 19.

³ Ps. xvi. 5, lxxiii. 26, cxix. 57, cxlii. 6, Lam. iii. 24.

⁴ Deut. xxxii. 9.

⁵ Ex. xxxiv. 9.

⁶ אֶרֶץ קֹדֶשׁ, Ex. iii. 5.

⁷ מִקְדָּשׁ הָאֵלֹהִים, Lev. x. 17, xiv. 13.

⁸ בֵּית הָאֵלֹהִים, 1 Chr. xxix. 3.

⁹ אֹרֶן הָאֵלֹהִים, 2 Chr. xxxv. 3.

¹⁰ עֵינֵי הָאֵלֹהִים, Neh. xi. 1, 18, Is. xlviii. 2, lii. 1.

¹¹ הָרֹם, Is. xxvii. 13, Jer. xxxi. 23, Zech. viii. 3.

¹² עַם הָאֵלֹהִים, Is. lxii. 12.

¹³ לִשְׁכַּת הָאֵלֹהִים, Ez. xlii. 13, [all.].

¹⁴ אֶרֶץ הָאֵלֹהִים, Ps. ii. 6, Is. xi. 9, lvi. 7, lvii. 13, lxxv. 11, 25, lxxvi. 20, Ez. xx. 40.

¹⁵ יְהוָה, Jo. ii. 1, iv. 17, Ob. 16, Zeph. iii. 11.

¹⁶ אֶרֶץ הָאֵלֹהִים, Ex. xv. 13.

¹⁷ אֶרֶץ הָאֵלֹהִים, Deut. xxvi. 15. His holy hab. Ps. lxxviii. 6, Jer. xxv. 30, Zech. ii. 17.

¹⁸ הַיְכָל, Ps. v. 8, lxxix. 1, cxxxviii. 2, Jon. ii. 5, 8, His holy temple, Mi. i. 2. Hab. ii. 20.

¹⁹ הָרֹם, Ps. xv. 1, xliii. 3, Dan. ix. 16. His holy hill, Ps. iii. 5, xlviii. 2, xcix. 9.

²⁰ רֹבֵעַ, Ps. xxviii. 2.

²¹ עֵינֵי, Dan. ix. 24.

²² עֵינֵי, Is. lxiv. 9.

²³ כִּכְרוֹן, Ps. xxiv. 3.

²⁴ אֶרֶץ הָאֵלֹהִים, Ps. lxxviii. 54.

²⁵ Jer. ii. 7, iii. 9, xvi. 18.

²⁶ Ezek. xxii. 24.

²⁷ Zech. iii. 9.

²⁸ Is. ii. 3.

²⁹ Micah iv. 2.

³⁰ S. Luke xxiv. 47.

³¹ See on Hab. ii. 20, p. 422.

³² Gen. vi. 3, 2 Chr. xxxii. 8, Job x. 4, Ps. lvi. 4,

CHAPTER III.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

1 Under the type of Joshua, the restoration of the church, 8 Christ the Branch is promised.

AND he shewed me ^aJoshua the high priest standing before the angel of the LORD, and ^b||Satan standing at his right hand [†]to resist him.

[†] Heb. to be his adversary.

be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

13. Be silent, lit. *hush*³¹, all flesh, before the Lord; man in his weakness³², flesh and blood in the language of the New Testament³³, before God his Maker. All flesh, the whole human race³⁴, is to be hushed before God, because His judgments, as His mercies, are over all.

For God ariseth. God seemeth to be quiescent, as it were, when He bears with us; to arise, when He puts forth His power, either for us, when we pray, ³⁵*Lord, awake to help me*; or in displeasure. His holy habitation is alike the tabernacle³⁶, temple³⁷, heaven³⁸, since His presence is in all.

III. 1. And He, God, (for the office of the attendant angel was to explain, not to shew the visions) shewed me Joshua the High Priest, standing before the Angel of the Lord; probably to be judged by him³⁹; as in the New Testament, to stand before the Son of Man; for although standing before, whether in relation to man⁴⁰ or God⁴¹, expresses attendance upon, yet here it appears only as a condition, contemporaneous⁴² with that of Satan's, to accuse him. Although, moreover, the Angel speaks with authority, yet God's Presence in him is not spoken of so distinctly, that the High Priest would be exhibited as standing before him, as in his office before God.

And Satan, etymologically, the enemy, as, in the New Testament, ⁴³*your adversary the devil*, etymologically, the accuser. It is a proper name of the Evil one, yet its original meaning, *the enemy*⁴⁴, was not lost. Here, as in Job, his malice is shewn in accusation; ⁴⁵*the accuser of our brethren, who accused them before our God, day and night*. In Job⁴⁶, the accusations were calumnious; here, doubtless, true. For he accused Job of what would have been plain apostasy⁴⁷; Joshua and Zerubbabel had shared, or given way to, the remissness of the people, as to the rebuilding of the temple and lxxviii. 39, Is. xxxi. 3, Jer. xvii. 5.

³³ S. Matt. xvi. 17, 1 Cor. xv. 50, Gal. i. 16.

³⁴ Gen. vi. 12, Ps. lxx. 3, cxlv. 21, Is. xl. 5, 6, xlix. 26, lxxvi. 23, Jo. iii. 1, Ez. xxi. 4, 9, 10.

³⁵ Ps. lix. 4, add Ps. vii. 7, xlv. 24.

³⁶ 1 Sam. ii. 29, 32, Ps. xxvi. 9, lxxviii. 6.

³⁷ 2 Chr. xxxvi. 15.

³⁸ Deut. xxvi. 15, Jer. xxv. 30, 2 Chr. xxx. 27.

³⁹ "Stand before" is used judicially, Nu. xxxv. 12, Deut. xix. 17, Jos. xx. 6, and of plaintiffs, Nu. xxvii. 2, 1 Kgs iii. 16; stand before God, Rev. xx. 12; before the judgment-seat of Christ, Rom. xiv. 10; and be acquitted, S. Luke xxi. 36.

⁴⁰ Joseph before Pharaoh, Gen. xli. 46; Joshua before Moses, Deut. i. 38; David before Saul, 1 Sam. xvi. 21; the young virgin before David, 1 Kgs i. 2; Solomon's servants, Ib. x. 8; his councillors, 2 Chr. x. 6; Gedaliah, of serving the Chaldeans, Jer. xl. 10; Nebuzaradan, Jer. lii. 12; Daniel and his companions, of office before the king of Babylon, Dan. i. 5. But it is also used of presence with a commission to the person; Moses before Pharaoh, Ex. viii. 20, ix. 13; of an office towards others, to minister unto them, as the Levites before the congregation, Nu. xvi. 9; degraded priests, "to serve them," Ezek. xlv. 11.

⁴¹ The tribe of Levi, Deut. x. 8, 2 Chr. xix. 11; the High Priest, Jud. xx. 28, Ezek. xlv. 15; Elijah, 1 Kgs xvii. 1, xviii. 15; Elisha, 2 Kgs iii. 14, v. 16; Jonadab's descendants, Jer. xxxv. 19. It is used of standing to intercede with God, of Abraham, Gen. xviii. 22; Moses and Samuel, Jer. xv. 1; Jeremiah, Ib. 19. Also of worship, Jer. vii. 10.

⁴² The two עֵינֵי express a correlative condition.

⁴³ 1 S. Pet. v. 8.

⁴⁴ As in other appellatives, הָאֵלֹהִים (twice only), הָאֵלֹהִים, but in its contracted form, when the etymology was lost, אֵל, &c. as a Prop. Name, without the article, occurs 1 Chr. xxi. 1, Ps. cix. 6; with the article, eleven times here, and fourteen times in the first narrative chapters of Job.

⁴⁵ Rev. xii. 10.

⁴⁶ Job i. 8-11, ii. 3-5.

⁴⁷ Ib. i. 11. ii. 5.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

^c Jude 9.
^d ch. 1. 17.
^e Rom. 8. 33.
^f Amos 4. 11.
^g Rom. 11. 5.
^h Jude 23.
ⁱ Isai. 64. 6.

2. And the LORD said unto Satan, "The LORD rebuke thee, O Satan; even the LORD that ^d hath chosen Jerusalem rebuke thee: ^e is not this a brand plucked out of the fire?"
3 Now Joshua was clothed with ^f filthy garments, and stood before the angel.

4 And he answered and spake unto those that stood before him, saying, Take away the filthy garments from him: And unto him he said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, ^g and I will clothe thee with change of raiment.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

^h Isai. 61. 10.
ⁱ Luke 15. 22.
^j Rev. 19. 8.

the full restoration of the worship of God¹. For this, Haggai had reprov'd the people, through them². Satan had then a real charge, on which to implead them. Since also the whole series of visions relates to the restoration from the captivity, the guilt, for which Satan impleads him with Jerusalem and Jerusalem in him, includes the whole guilt, which had rested upon them, so that for a time God had seemed to have cast away His people³. Satan stands at his right hand, the place of a protector⁴, to shew that he had none to save him, and that himself was victorious.

2. And the Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee. "This they so explain, that the Father and the Son is Lord, as we read in the 110th Psalm, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit Thou on My right hand. The Lord speaketh of another Lord; not that He, the Lord Who speaketh, cannot rebuke, but that, from the unity of nature, when the Other rebuketh, He Himself Who speaketh rebuketh. For ⁶ he who seeth the Son, seeth the Father also." It may be that God, by such sayings⁷, also accustomed men, before Christ came, to believe in the Plurality of Persons in the One Godhead.

The rebuke of God must be with power. ⁸ Thou hast rebuked the nations, Thou hast destroyed the ungodly. ⁹ Thou hast rebuked the proud, accursed. ¹⁰ They perish at the rebuke of Thy Countenance. ¹¹ At Thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, both the chariot and horse are cast into a deep sleep. ¹² God shall rebuke him, and he fleeth far off, and shall be chased as the chaff of the mountains before the wind. ¹³ He rebuked the Red Sea and it dried up. ¹⁴ The foundations of the world were discovered at Thy rebuke, O Lord. He ¹⁵ rebuked the seed, and it perished; the devourer¹⁶, and it no longer devoured. The rebuke then of the blasted spirit involved a withering rejection of himself and his accusations, as when Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit and he departed out of his victim¹⁷.

The Lord hath chosen Jerusalem. Joshua then is acquitted, not because the accusation of Satan was false, but out of the free love of God for His people and for Joshua in it and as its representative. ¹⁸ Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? The high priest, being ¹⁹ himself also compassed with infirmity, needed daily to offer up sacrifices first for his own sins, and then for the people's. As Isaiah said, on the sight of God, ²⁰ I am undone, because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips, and, until cleansed by the typical coal, dared not offer himself for the prophetic office, so here Satan, in Joshua, aimed at the whole priestly office, and in it, at Israel's relation to God.

Is not this a brand plucked out of the fire? "As if he should say, Israel confessedly has sinned, and is liable to these charges. Yet it has suffered no slight punishment; it has endured sufferings, and has scarce been snatched out of them, as a half-burned brand out of the fire. For not yet had it shaken off the dust of the harms from the captivity: only just now and scarcely had it escaped the flame of that most intolerable calamity. Cease then imputing sin to them, on whom God has had mercy."

3. Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments; such, it is expressed, was his habitual condition²¹; he was one so clothed. The filthy garment, as defilement generally, is, in Scripture, the symbol of sin. ²³ We are all as the unclean, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags. ²⁴ He that is left in Zion and he that remaineth in Jerusalem shall be called holy—when the Lord shall have washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion. ²⁵ There is a generation, pure in its own eyes, and it is not washed from its filthiness. The same is expressed by different words, signifying pollution, defilement by sin; ²⁶ Wo unto her that is filthy and polluted; ²⁷ The land was defiled with blood; ²⁸ they were defiled with their own works. It is symbolised also by the ²⁹ divers washings of the law, representing restored purity; and the use of the word by Psalmists and Prophets; ³⁰ Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity; ³¹ wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before Mine eyes; ³² O Jerusalem, wash thy heart from wickedness. In later times at least, the accused were clothed in black³³, not in defiled³⁴ garments.

4. And He spake to those who stood before Him, the ministering Angels who had waited on the Angel of the Lord to do His bidding.

See, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee; the pardoning words of the Lord to David by Nathan, ³⁵ The Lord too hath put away thy sin. And clothe thee³⁶ with change of raiment³⁷, i. e. such as were taken off and reserved for great occasions. As the filthy garments were not necessarily other than the High Priest's vesture, symbolically defiled through the sins of the people, so neither need these be other than the priestly garments in their purity and freshness. The words imply the condition, not the nature of the vestment. "The high-priest having been thus taken to represent the whole people, the filthy garments would be no unclear symbol of the wickedness of the people. For clad, as it were, with their sins, with the ill-effaceable spot of ungodliness, they abode in captivity, subject to retribution, paying the penalty of their unholy deeds. But when God had pity on them, He bade them be freed from their defile-participle with ³⁸ והוא. ³⁹ Is. lxiv. 6. ⁴⁰ Ib. iv. 3, 4. ⁴¹ Pr. xxx. 12. Filth, filthiness, in Is. iv. 4 also, is ⁴² טִמְאָה, the abstract of the ⁴³ טָמֵא, אֵץ, in Zech., ⁴⁴ טָמֵא. ⁴⁵ Zeph. iii. 1, ⁴⁶ טָמֵא. See ib. ⁴⁷ Ps. cvi. 33. ⁴⁸ טָמֵא i. q. ⁴⁹ טָמֵא Cant. v. 3. ⁵⁰ Ps. cvi. 39. ⁵¹ טָמֵא Is. i. 16. ⁵² טָמֵא opp. ⁵³ טָמֵא. ⁵⁴ Heb. ix. 10. ⁵⁵ Ps. li. 4. ⁵⁶ טָמֵא [2 Eng.] ⁵⁷ טָמֵא Jer. iv. 14. ⁵⁸ טָמֵא. ⁵⁹ Jos. Ant. xiv. 9. 4. ⁶⁰ Whosoever is brought before the tribunal to be judged, is set, as lowly, before it, and is clothed with black raiment."

⁶¹ As in Latin, "sordidati." Liv. ii. 54, vi. 20. ⁶² 2 Sam. xii. 13. ⁶³ טָמֵא וְהָיָה ⁶⁴ טָמֵא. The idiom occurs Ib. xxiv. 10. add Job vii. 21. ⁶⁵ The inf. expresses the more, the contemporaneousness of the acts. See below vii. 5, xii. 10, and others in Ewald Lehrs. § 351. c. p. 853. ed. 3. ⁶⁶ טָמֵא recurs Is. iii. 22.

¹ Ezr. iii. iv. ² Hagg. i. 1-11. ³ Rom. xi. 1. ⁴ Ps. xvi. 8, cix. 31, cxxi. 5, cxlii. 4. ⁵ S. Jer. ⁶ S. John xiv. 9. ⁷ As in those, "the Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven," Gen. xix. 24, and others in which God speaks of Himself in the third person, the Lord. Gen. xviii. 14, 19. ⁸ Ps. ix. 5. ⁹ Ib. cxix. 21. ¹⁰ Ib. lxxx. 16. ¹¹ Ib. lxxvi. 6. ¹² Is. xvii. 13. ¹³ Ps. cvi. 9. ¹⁴ Ib. xviii. 15. add Nah. i. 4. ¹⁵ Mal. ii. 3. ¹⁶ Ib. iii. 11. ¹⁷ טָמֵא is used 11 times of God, only 3 times of man; Gen. xxxvii. 10, Ruth ii. 16, Jer. xxix. 27. ¹⁸ טָמֵא 8 times of God; 3 times in Prov. and Eccl. vii. 5, of rebuke of man, and Is. xxx. 17. ¹⁹ S. Mark i. 25, 26, ix. 25, S. Luke iv. 35, ix. 42. ²⁰ Rom. viii. 33, 34. ²¹ Heb. v. 2, 3. ²² Is. vi. 5. ²³ S. Cyr. ²⁴ The force of the

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.
Ex. 29. 6.
ch. 6. 11.

5 And I said, Let them set a fair ^h mitre upon his head. So they set a fair mitre upon his head, and clothed him with garments. And the angel of the LORD stood by.

6 And the angel of the LORD protested unto Joshua; saying,

7 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; If thou

ments, and in a manner re-clad with justifying grace. He indicates to them the end of their toils. For where remission of sin is, there follows of necessity freedom from the evils brought through sin.—He adds that a clean mitre should be put upon his head, “¹ that so we might understand that the glory of the priesthood ever, in a sort, concurs with the condition of the people. For the boast of the priesthood is the purity of those in their charge.—As then when the people was in sin, the raiment of the priest also was in a manner defiled, so if it were again well-approved, pure and bright is the fashion of the priesthood, and free its access to God. So the divine Paul having ministered to the Gentiles the Gospel of Christ, seeing them advancing in graces, writes, ² By your boast, brethren, which I have in Christ Jesus, and, ³ my joy and crown.”

5. And I said, let them set a fair mitre⁴ on his head. This seems to have been purposely omitted, in order to leave something, and that, the completion of all, to be done at the intercession of the prophet. The glory and complement of the High Priest's sacrificial attire was the mitre with the holy crown upon it and the plate of pure gold, on which was graven, *Holiness to the Lord*⁵; which was to be upon the High-priest's forehead, that he may bear the iniquity of the holy things which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts; which was always to be upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before the Lord. The renewed gift of this was reserved for the intercession of man co-working with God.

And the angel of the Lord standing by, seeing that all was done aright, and, now that the acquittal was complete, standing to give the charge.

6. And the angel of the Lord protested solemnly (etymologically, called God to witness) as in, ⁶ Did I not make thee swear by the Lord and protested unto thee, laying it as an obligation upon him⁷. The charge is given to Joshua, and in him to all successive high-priests, while Israel should continue to be God's people, as the condition of their acceptance.

7. If thou wilt walk in My ways and if thou wilt keep My charge. Both of these are expressions, dating from the Pentateuch, for holding on in the way of life, well-pleasing to God and keeping the charge given by God⁸. It was the injunction of the dying David to Solomon, ⁹ Keep the charge of the Lord thy God, to walk in His ways, to keep His statutes &c.

Then shalt thou also judge My house. Judgement, in the wilt walk in my ways, and if thou wilt ⁱ keep my || charge, then thou shalt also ^k judge my house, and shalt also keep my courts, and I will give thee [†] places to walk among || these that ¹ stand by.

8 Hear now, O Joshua the high priest, thou and thy fellows that sit before thee: for they are ^m [†] men wondered at: for, be-[†] Heb. men of wonder, or, sign, as Ezek. 12. 11. & 24. 24.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.
Lev. 8. 35.
1 Kin. 2. 3.
Ezek. 44. 16.
Or,
ordinance.
Deut. 17. 9.
Mal. 2. 7.
† Heb. walks.
1 ch. 4. 14.
6. 5.
Ps. 71. 7.
Isai. 8. 18.
& 20. 3.

place of God, was part of the High-priest's office¹⁰. Yet these judgements also were given in the house of God. The cause was directed to be brought to God, and He through His priests judged it. Both then may be comprehended in the word, the oversight of the people itself and the judgement of all causes brought to it. “¹¹ Thou shalt judge those who minister in the house of My sanctuary.”

And I will give thee place to walk among those who stand by¹², i. e., among the ministering spirits, who were ¹³ standing before the Angel of the Lord. This can be fully only after death, when the saints shall be received among the several choirs of angels. “¹¹ In the resurrection of the dead I will revive thee and give thee feet walking among these Seraphim.” Even in this life, since ¹⁴ our conversation is in heaven, and the life of priests should be an angel-life, it may mean, that he should have free access to God, his soul in heaven, while his body was on this earth.

8. Thou and thy companions which sit before thee; yea¹⁵ men of marvellous signs are they¹⁶. It seems probable that the words addressed to Joshua begin here; else the men of signs would be the companions of Joshua, to the exclusion of himself. His companions are probably ordinary priests, who sit as sharing his dignity as priest, but before him, as inferiors. So Ezekiel says, ¹⁷ I was sitting in my house, and the elders of Israel were sitting before me. They are ¹⁸ images of the things to come. Isaiah's two sons, with their prophetic names, Haste-spoil speed-prey, and a-remnant shall-return, were with his own name, salvation-of-the-Lord, ¹⁹ signs and portents of the future Israel. Isaiah, walking naked and barefoot, was ²⁰ a sign and portent against Egypt. God tells Ezekiel, that in the removal of his stuff, as stuff for the captivity, ²¹ I have set thee for a portent unto the house of Israel. I, he explains his act²², am your portent; like as I have done, so shall it be done unto you. When forbidden to mourn on the death of his wife; ²³ Ezekiel is unto you for a portent; according to all that he hath done, shall ye do; and when this cometh, ye shall know that I am the Lord God. Wherein then were Joshua and the other priests portents of what should be? One fact alone had stood out, the forgiveness of sins. Accusation and full forgiveness, out of God's free mercy, were the substance of the whole previous vision. It was the full re-instatement of the priesthood. The priesthood so restored was the portent of what was to come. To ²⁴ offer the offering of the people, and

Jer. xii. 7, I have left My house. Here the parallel word My courts, shews that the house is the literal temple. ¹¹ Jon.

¹² Against the rendering, “those who shall make thee to go,” i. e., guide thee, (הַלְכִים for הַלְכִים) there were valid objections; 1) that the Hif. is always הוֹלִיךְ, except הוֹלִיךְ Ex. ii. 9. The Partic. הוֹלִיךְ occurs 9 times, once in Zech. v. 10. 2) It would have been probably “out of these” or at least “from among these.” הַלְכִים is then probably from a sing. הַלְכָה like הוֹלִיךְ, הוֹלִיךְ, הוֹלִיךְ for הוֹלִיךְ Jon. iii. 3, 4, Ez. xlii. 4. ¹³ verse 4.

¹⁴ Phil. iii. 20. ¹⁵ הַי is inserted in the like way in Gen. xviii. 20. Ps. cxviii. 10–12, cxxviii. 2. ¹⁶ The subject addressed in the nominative is resumed by the pronoun of the 3rd person, as in Zeph. ii. 12. ¹⁷ Ezek. viii. 1. ¹⁸ Heb. x. 1.

¹⁹ Is. viii. 18. ²⁰ Ib. xx. 3. ²¹ Ezek. xii. 6. ²² Ib. 11. ²³ Ib. xxiv. 24. ²⁴ Lev. ix. 7.

¹ S. Cyr.

² 1 Cor. xv. 31.

³ Phil. iv. 1. ⁴ צִנִּיף is used of the turban of women, Is. iii. 23; or of nobles, Job xxix. 14: i. q. כְּנָפֵי of royalty, Is. lxii. 3. Here it is put for כְּנָפֵי, the Pentateuch name for the high-priest's mitre, as distinct from the כְּנָפֵי of ordinary priests.

⁵ Ex. xxviii. 36–38, xxix. 6. ⁶ 1 Kgs ii. 42. ⁷ הָעֵר with הָעֵר Gen. xliii. 3.

⁸ Deut. viii. 19, xxxii. 46, Ps. i. 7, &c. ⁹ הָעֵר first used of Abraham, Gen. xvi. 5, then Lev. xviii. 30, xxii. 9, Deut. xi. 1, Jos. xxii. 3. ¹⁰ 1 Kgs ii. 3.

¹¹ Deut. xvii. 9–13, xix. 17, Mal. ii. 7. הָעֵר is used of judging a cause (with הָעֵר, Jer. v. 28, xxx. 13; with הָעֵר, 1b. xxi. 12) or persons; with the personal pronoun, Gen. xxx. 6; or people, peoples, the ends of the earth, the poor and needy, 17 times: הָעֵר is used metaphorically of the people of God, only in Nu. xii. 7, he is faithful in all My house, or at most

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.
hold, I will bring forth ^a my servant the ^o BRANCH.

^a Isai. 42. 1.
& 49. 3, 5.
& 52. 13. &
53. 11. Ezek.
34. 23, 24.
9 For behold the stone that I have laid ^o Isai. 4. 2. & 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5. & 33. 15. ch. 6. 12. Luke 1. 78.

make an atonement for them; ¹ to make an atonement for the children of Israel for all their sins once a year, was the object of the existence of the priesthood. Typical only it could be, because they had but the blood of bulls and goats to offer, which could, in themselves, ² never take away sins. But in this their act they were portents of what was to come. He adds here, For, behold, I will bring My Servant the Branch.

The Branch had now become, or Zechariah made it, a proper name. Isaiah had prophesied, ³ In that day shall the Branch of the Lord be beautiful and glorious for the escaped of Israel; and, in reference to the low estate of him who should come, ⁴ There shall come forth a rod out of the stump of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots; and Jeremiah, ⁵ Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgement and justice in the earth, and this is the name whereby He shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness; and, ⁶ In those days and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David, and he shall execute judgement and righteousness in the land. Of him Zechariah afterwards spoke as, ⁷ a man whose name is the Branch. Here Zechariah names him simply, as a proper name, My servant [the] Branch, as Ezekiel prophesied of ⁸ My servant David. The title My servant, which is Isaiah's chiefest title of the Messiah, occurs in connection with the same image of His youth's lowly estate, and of His atoning Death. ⁹ He shall grow up before Him as a sucker, and as a root from a dry ground; ¹⁰ a scion shall grow out of his roots. ¹¹ He alone was above all marked by this name, who never in anything withdrew from the Will of God. ¹² God had before promised to Joshua, i. e. to the priesthood of the law, that they should judge His house and fulfil the types of the legal worship. Yet not long after, the things of the law were to be translated into the true worship, and the unloveliness of the types to be recast into the lovely spiritual polity. ¹³ A righteous king was to reign and princes to rule with judgement, as the Prophet spake. Another priest was to arise, after the order, ¹⁴ not of Aaron but of Melchisedec, ¹⁵ a minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle which God pitched and not man. For our Lord Jesus Christ entered the holy of holies, ¹⁶ not by the blood of bulls and goats, but by His own Blood, having obtained eternal redemption, and ¹⁷ having by One Oblation perfected for ever them that are sanctified. Lest then God should seem to have spoken untruly, in promising to the legal priesthood that it should ever have the oversight over His house, there was need to fore-announce the mystery of Christ, that the things of the law should cease and He Himself should judge His own house through the Scion from Himself, His Son.¹⁸

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.
before Joshua; ^p upon one stone shall be ^q seven eyes: behold, I will engrave the graving thereof, saith the Lord of hosts,

^a ch. 4. 10. Rev. 5. 6.

¹¹ Look ye to the Branch of the Lord; set Him as the example of life; in Him, as a most strong tower, place with most becoming faith all your hope of salvation and immortality. For He is not only a Branch, who shall fill you with the richness of Divine fruit, but a stone also, to break all the essays of the enemy.¹²

9. For behold the stone, that I have laid before Joshua. This must be an expansion of what he had said, or the ground of it, being introduced by, for. It must be something future, to be done by God Himself, since God says, I will grave the graving thereof; something connected with the remission of sins, which follows upon that graving. The stone, then, cannot be the stone of foundation of the material temple¹³. For this had long before been laid. The head-corner-stone, the completion of the building¹⁴, had nothing remarkable, why God should be said to grave it. The plumb-line¹⁵ was not a part even of the material temple. The stone is one stone. But to interpret it by other prophecy, one stone there is, of which God says, ²¹ Behold I lay in Zion for a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, a sure foundation, he that believeth shall not make haste; that stone, of which our Lord reminded the Jews, ²² the stone which the builders refused is become the head-stone of the corner; ²³ Jesus Christ Himself, the chief corner-stone, in whom all the building, fitly framed together, groweth into an holy temple in the Lord, in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit.

On this stone had Joshua, with all those typical priests, to look, in Whom Alone they and all have forgiveness, Whose Sacrifice their sacrifices pictured and pleaded. "It," says an old mystical Jewish book²⁴, "is the stone of foundation, on which the earth is founded, which God Himself laid, that the world might receive blessing from it."²⁵ The Shechinah is called the stone, through which the world subsisteth; of which it is said, A stone of seven eyes, and, the stone which the builders refused. This stone, God says, I have laid or set before Joshua, i. e. for him to consider; as He speaks to Solomon and his children, of *My commandments which I have set before you*²⁶. ²⁷ That the stone is the Lord Jesus Christ, the head corner-stone, elect, laid as a foundation; and that the seven eyes on the one stone are the sevenfold Spirit of God which rested upon Him, is or ought to be unknown to no one. For to Him ²⁸ God giveth not the Spirit by measure, and ²⁹ in Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. This stone was rejected by men, but chosen and honoured by God. ³¹ This stone then, on which the house of God and our whole salvation resteth, is placed by God before that high priest. That is, the most holy Name of Jesus, the virtue piety and largeness of Jesus is, by the Divine Spirit, seems to identify the Branch, the Messiah, and the Stone; "Lo I am bringing My Servant Messiah, and He shall be revealed. Lo, the stone which I have set before Joshua, upon one stone seven eyes, beholding it; lo, I revealed the vision thereof, saith the Lord of hosts, and will remove the guilt of that land in one day." The Zohar chadash (f. 76. 1.) joins the mention of the stone in Dan. ii. 35, Ps. cxviii. 22, Gen. xlix. 24. and this place, in Schoettg. l. c. p. 140. n. cv.

³¹ 1 Kgs ix. 6. The idiom is the same, נָתַן לְפָנָיו. See also Deut. iv. 8, xi. 32, Jer. ix. 12, xxvi. 4, xlv. 10; of two things, between which to choose, Deut. xi. 26, xxx. 15. In Ezek. xxiii. 24, נָתַן לְפָנָיו לְפָנָיו, "I have placed before them judgement," which they are to consider and to execute.

²⁷ Rup.

²⁸ S. John iii. 34.

²⁹ Col. ii. 9.

¹ Lev. xvi. 34.

² Heb. x. 4.

³ Is. iv. 2.

⁴ Ib. xi. 1.

⁵ Jer. xxxiii. 5, 6.

⁶ Ib. xxxiii. 15.

⁷ Zech. vi. 12.

⁸ עָבַד עֲבָדָה Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24, xxxvii. 24, as here עָבַד עֲבָדָה

⁹ Is. liii. 2.

¹⁰ Ib. xi. 1.

¹¹ Osor.

¹² S. Cyr.

¹³ Is. xxxii. 1.

¹⁴ Heb. vii. 11.

¹⁵ Ib. viii. 2.

¹⁶ Ib. ix. 12.

¹⁷ Ib. x. 14.

¹⁸ Rashi.

¹⁹ Kim. Nor, of course, were either foundation-stone or head-stone engraved. ²⁰ Also in Kim. ²¹ Is. xxviii. 16. ²² Ps. cxviii. 22.

S. Matt. xxi. 42. add Acts iv. 11. The passages of the Psalm and of Isaiah are united 1 S. Pet. ii. 4-7. ²³ Eph. ii. 20, 21. ²⁴ Zohar Gen. fol. 124. col. 492.

²⁵ Ib. Num. f. 100. col. 397. quoted by Schoettg. de Mess. p. 218. "Both passages," he subjoins, "are again adduced as parallel, Zohar Deut. f. 118. col. 472." Jonathan

Before CHRIST
cir. 519.
Jer. 31. 34.
& 50. 20.
Mic. 7. 18,
19, ch. 13. 1.
and 'I will remove the iniquity of that land
in one day.
10 ^s In that day, saith the LORD of
ch. 2. 11.

shewed to the priest, that he might understand the End of the law and holiness, to Whom all the actions of life and the offices of the priesthood were to be referred. In which stone was foreshewn to the divine man, not the invisible strength only, but also the manifold light of the Divine intelligence. For it follows;”

Upon this one stone are seven eyes, whether they are the eyes of God, resting in loving care upon it, or whether, as the wheels in Ezekiel's vision were ¹full of eyes round about, the eyes are pictured as on the stone itself, marking that it symbolised a being with manifold intelligence. Zechariah speaks of the eyes of ²the Lord which run to and fro on the earth, and S. John, of the ³Lamb, as it had been slain, having seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven spirits of God, sent forth into all the earth. Either symbol harmonises with the context, and is admissible in language⁴. The care of God for this stone is expressed before and afterwards, I have laid it, I will engrave the graving thereof; and so it corresponds to the ⁵*It shall grow up before Him as a tender plant*. But the contrast, that on one stone there are seven eyes, perhaps rather suggests that the eyes are on the stone itself, and He, the Living Stone, is pictured with an universality of sight, whereby, with a Divine knowledge, He surveys and provides for the well-being of His whole Church. It has some analogy too to the sevenfold Spirit which was to rest upon Him. ⁶For this stone to have seven eyes is to retain in operation the whole virtue of the Spirit of sevenfold grace. For according to the distribution of the Holy Spirit, one receives prophecy; another, knowledge; another, miracles; another, kinds of tongues; another, interpretation of words; but no one attaineth to have all the gifts of that same Spirit. But our Creator taking on Him our infirmities, because, through the power of His Divinity, He shewed that He had at once in Him all the virtues of the Holy Spirit, united beyond doubt the bright gleams of the sevenfold constellation.” “None among men had together all the operations of the Holy Spirit, save the Mediator of God and man Alone, Whose is that same Spirit, Who proceeds from the Father before all worlds.” ⁷The stone is one. For as we have in God One Spirit, one faith, one sacrament of that most pure laver, so we worship One Christ, the one only Deliverer of the human race, and Author of our righteousness and everlasting salvation; and strengthened by His guardianship, we hope for immortality and eternal glory. Who, though He be One, governs all things with

Before CHRIST
cir. 519.
1 Kin. 4. 25.
Isai. 36. 16.
Mic. 4. 4.
hosts, shall ye call every man his neighbour under the vine and under the fig tree.

ineffable wisdom. For His wisdom is aptly described by the seven eyes. For the number seven generally describes an universality of good.”

Behold I will engrave the graving⁸ thereof, as of a costly stone. What the graving is, is not explained; but manifestly it is every thing which concurs to its beauty. ⁹“This stone is of earth, and of the power and workmanship of God.” ¹⁰“It signifies Him Who had His birth in virgin-earth, but framed skilfully by the power of the Holy Spirit.” That Precious stone was further graven, through the Providence and Will of God, when ¹¹“He caused it to be wounded by the nails of the Cross and the soldier's lance, and in His Passion took away the iniquity of the earth in one day, of which it is written, ¹²*This is the day which the Lord hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it.*” Beautiful were the gifts and graces which Christ received, as Man; but beautiful beyond all beauty must be those glorious scars, with which He allowed His whole Body to be riven, that ¹³“throughout the whole frame His love might be engraven.” ¹⁴“What even in the Body of the Lord can be lovelier or more lightful than those five Wounds, which He willed to retain in His immortal Being, lest the blessed should be deprived of that splendour, surpassing far the light of sun and stars?”

And I will remove the iniquity of the land in one day. On one day in the year was the typical atonement; in one day absolutely, God Himself would make the iniquity of that land to depart. One day is always emphatic¹⁵, that things are crowded into it, which seemed too much for one day. Year by year came the day of atonement: its yearly repetition shewed that nothing lasting was effected. On one day that removal should be, which needed no renewal¹⁶. A Jewish writer confessed the mystery, while he said¹⁷, “One day; I know not what that day is.” Ask any Christian child, “On what day was iniquity removed, not from the land only, but from all lands?” he would say, “On the day when Jesus Died.”

10. Under the vine and under the figtree. Micah had already made the description of the peaceful days of Solomon¹⁸, a symbol¹⁹ of the universal fearless peace of the time of Christ. ²⁰Christ by His Passion shall not only take away iniquity, but also bring peace, delight, free communication of all things, so that all things among Christians should be common. For the law of Christ enjoineth charity, forgiveness of injuries, patience, love of enemies &c., all which bring temporal peace.”

¹ Ezek. i. 18, x. 12.
² iv. 10.
³ Rev. v. 6.
⁴ In Ps. xxxii. 8. it is אֵינָה עֵלַי עֵינִי I will counsel, My Eye upon thee; in Ps. xxxiii. 18, עֵינֵי יְהוָה אֵלַי; in Ps. xxxiv. 16. עֵינֵי יְהוָה אֵלַי צְדָקָה; but “directed towards, or resting upon,” are only shades of the same meaning. In Gen. xlv. 21. וְאֶשְׁכְּחֵנִי עָלָיו is וְאֶשְׁכְּחֵנִי עָלָיו; Jer. xxiv. 6. וְאֶשְׁכְּחֵנִי עָלָיו and xl. 4. for good, אֵשֶׁת אֵת עֵינִי עָלָיו.
⁵ Is. liii. 2.
⁶ S. Greg. on Job L. xxix. c. 31. n. 74. Opp. i. 951.
⁷ Osor.
⁸ Only occurs besides of the carved wood of the house of God, 1 Kgs vi. 29, Ps. lxxiv. 6, or of the carving of a precious stone, Ex. xxviii. 11, 21, 30, xxxix. 6, 14, 30. פָּתָח is used of engraving things on wood, 1 Kgs vii. 36, 2 Chr. iii. 7; on precious stones, Ex. xxxviii. 9. The whole idiom, “skilled to grave gravings,” to grave all graving, recurs 2 Chr. ii. 6, 13; thou shalt grave on it with the engravings of a signet, holiness to the Lord; Ex. xxviii. 36.

⁹ S. Iren. Hær. iii. 21. 7.
¹⁰ Lap. as from S. Iren.
¹¹ S. Jer.
¹² Ps. cxviii. 24.
¹³ “Cernis, ut in toto corpore sculptus amor.” in Lap.
¹⁴ Rib.
¹⁵ Gen. xxvii. 45, “why should I be deprived of you both in one day?” 1 Sam. ii. 34, “in one day they shall die both of them;” 1 Kgs xx. 29, “Israel slew of the Syrians 100,000 footmen in one day;” 2 Chr. xxviii. 6, “Pekah slew in Judah 120,000 in one day;” Is. ix. 14, “shall cut off branch and rush in one day;” x. 17, “devour his thorns and briars in one day;” Is. xlvii. 9, “two things shall come to thee in one day;” Ib. lxvi. 8, “shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day?”
¹⁶ It includes then the ἐφάραξ of Heb. vii. 27, ix. 12, x. 10, though the idiom is different.
¹⁷ Rashi.
¹⁸ 1 Kgs iv. 25.
¹⁹ Mi. iv. 4. See ah. p. 321.
²⁰ Lap.

Before CHRIST
cir. 519.

CHAPTER IV.

1 By the golden candlestick is foreshewed the good success of Zerubbabel's foundation. 11 By the two olive trees the two anointed ones.

^a ch. 2. 3.

^b Dan. 8. 18.

AND ^a the angel that talked with me came again and waked me, ^b as a man that is wakened out of his sleep,

2 And said unto me, What seest thou? And I said, I have looked, and behold ^c a candlestick all of gold, [†] with a bowl upon the top of it, ^d and his seven lamps thereon, and ^{||} seven pipes to the seven lamps, which are upon the top thereof:

3 ^e And two olive trees by it, one upon

^c Ex. 25. 31.

Rev. 1. 12.

[†] Heb. with her bowl.

^d Ex. 25. 37.

Rev. 4. 5.

^{||} Or, seven

several pipes to the lamps, &c.

^e ver. 11. 12.

Rev. 11. 4.

iv. 1. The angel came again. The angel (as before ¹) had gone forth to receive some fresh instruction from a higher angel or from God.

And awakened me, as a man is awakened out of sleep. Zechariah, overwhelmed by the greatness of the visions, must have sunk down in a sort of stupor, as after the vision of the ram and he-goat, as Gabriel was speaking with him, Daniel says, ² I was in a deep sleep on my face toward the ground, and he touched me and set me upright; and again at the voice of the angel, who, after his three weeks' fast ³, came to declare to him ⁴ the scripture of truth; and at the Transfiguration, ⁵ Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep, and when they were awake, they saw His glory. ⁶ Wondrous and stupendous mysteries were they which were shewn to the divine man. He saw the Branch of the Lord; he saw His invincible might; he saw His brightness of Divine intelligence and Providence; he saw the amplitude of beauty and dignity. Nailed then and struck still with amazement, while he revolved these things in his mind, sunk in a sort of sleep, he is borne out of himself and, mantled around with darkness, understands that the secret things of Divine wisdom cannot be perfectly comprehended by the mind of any. This then he attained that, his senses being overpowered, he should see nothing, save that wherein is the sum of wisdom, that this immensity of the Divine excellence cannot be searched out. By this sleep he was seized, when he was roused by the angel to see further mysteries. ⁷ Such is the condition of our mind, so far inferior to that in the holy angels, that their state may be called wakefulness, ours a sleep."

2. And I said ⁸, I have looked and behold a candlestick all of gold. The candlestick is the seven-branched candlestick of the tabernacle ⁹, but with variations purposely introduced to symbolise the fuller and more constant supply of the oil, itself the symbol of God's Holy Spirit, Who

"Enables with perpetual light

The dulness of our blinded sight."

¹ ii. 3.

² Dan. viii. 18.

³ Ib. x. 9.

⁴ Ib. 21.

⁵ S. Luke ix. 32.

⁶ Osor.

⁷ S. Cyr.

⁸ The Kri ⁹ must be right, "רָאָה", a manifest blunder, which the Kri corrects; countless Mss. correct in the text also, the Bibl. Brix., an old folio without date, and the Soncin. Prophets, 1486." De Rossi ad loc. All the Verss. agree with the Kri. The text would suppose that, in the silence of the prophet, the angel-interpreter related the vision which he also saw. But this is unlike all the other cases. Kim. supposes that the prophet speaks of himself in the third person. There is the same variation in 2 Sam. i. 9, Neh. v. 9, vii. 3.

⁹ Ex. xxv. 31.

the right side of the bowl, and the other upon the left side thereof.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

4 So I answered and spake to the angel that talked with me, saying, What are these, my lord?

5 Then the angel that talked with me answered and said unto me, Knowest thou not what these be? And I said, No, my lord.

6 Then he answered and spake unto me, saying, This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying, 'Not by ^{||} might, nor [†] by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts.

Hos. 1. 7.
^{||} Or, army.

The first variation is her bowl ¹⁰ on the top of the candlestick, containing the oil; then (as dependent on this) the pipes to derive the oil into each lamp, seven several ¹¹ pipes to the seven lamps, i. e., seven to each; and the two olive trees on either side of the bowl, whose extreme and fine branches poured through two golden pipes the golden oil into the bowl which supplied the lamps. The multiplied conduits imply the large and perfect supply of oil unceasingly supplied, the seven being symbolic of perfection or of the reconciling of God (symbolised by 3) unto the world (symbolised by 4, its four quarters); the spontaneous flow of the golden oil from the olive trees symbolises the free gift of God.

4. "Awakened from his state of sleep, even thus the prophet seemed slowly to understand what was shewn him. He asks then of the instructing angel. The angel, almost amazed, asks if he knows it not, and when he plainly declares his ignorance, makes clear the enigma of the vision."

6. This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel. "As if he were to say, the meaning of the vision and scope of what has been exhibited is, 'God's doings have almost cried aloud to Zerubbabel that all these visions shall come to an end in their time, not effected by human might nor in fleshly strength, but in power of the Holy Ghost and through Divine Will.' For the Only Begotten became Man as we: but He warred not after the flesh, to set up the Church as a candlestick to the world, nor did He, through sensible weapons and armed phalanxes, make those two people His own, or place the spiritual lights on the candlestick; but in the might of His own Spirit He appointed in the Church ¹² first Apostles, then prophets and evangelists, and all the rest of the saintly band, filling them with Divine gifts and enriching them abundantly by the influx of His Spirit."

"Not then in great power nor in fleshly might were the things of Christ, but in power of the Spirit was Satan spoiled, and the ranks of the adverse powers fell with him; and Israel and those who aforetime served the creature rather than the Creator, were called to the knowledge of

¹⁰ לֵבָי אֶת. אֶת. for לֵבָי, like other rare masculines, as אֶתָּה, Hos. xiii. 2; אֶתָּה, Ps. xlix. 15; אֶתָּה Job v. 13; אֶתָּה Pr. vii. 8, as אֶתָּה Zech. xiv. 10; אֶתָּה, Ps. lv. 16; אֶתָּה Ps. lxxvi. 3; אֶתָּה 1 Kgs. xiv. 4; אֶתָּה, Ps. lxxxix. 45.

¹¹ lit. seven and seven, i. e., seven to each, as in Gen. vii. 2, without the ו, חֲמִשָּׁה שֶׁקֶלִים לְכִלְכֵּל "five shekels apiece by the poll," Nu. iii. 47; "the fingers of his hands, and the fingers of his feet were שֵׁשׁ וְשֵׁשׁ, six and six, four and twenty in number," 2 Sam. xxi. 20; "his fingers (including as in 2 Sam. those of his feet) were six and six, twenty four." 1 Chron. xx. 6.

¹² 1 Cor. xii. 28.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

7 Who art thou, ^aO great mountain? before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain: and he shall bring forth ^bthe headstone

^a Jer. 51. 25.
^b Matt. 21. 21.
^c Ps. 118. 22.

God through faith. But that He saved all under heaven, not by human arm, but by His own power as God Emmanuel, Hosea too protested¹, I will have mercy upon the house of Judah and will save them by the Lord their God, and will not save them by bow nor by sword nor by battle nor by chariots nor by horses nor by horsemen. But exceeding fittingly was this said to Zerubbabel, who was of the tribe of Judah and at that time administered the royal seat at Jerusalem. For that he might not think that, since such glorious successes were fore-announced to him, wars would in their season have to be organised, he lifts him up from these unsound and human thoughts, and bids him be thus minded, that the force was divine, the might of Christ, Who should bring such things to pass, and not human."

Having given this key of the whole vision, without explaining its details, God enlarges what He had said to Zerubbabel, as He had in the preceding chapter to Joshua².

7. Who art thou, O great mountain³? Before Zerubbabel thou shalt be a plain. The words have the character of a sacred proverb; ⁴*Every one that exalteth himself shall be abased.* Isaiah prophesies the victories of the Gospel in the same imagery, ⁵*Every valley shall be exalted and every mountain and hill shall be made low; and the crooked shall be made straight and the rough places plain.* And in the New Testament S. Paul says, ⁶*The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds, casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ.* As it is the character of Anti-Christ, that he ⁷*opposeth and exalteth himself above every thing that is called God*, so of Satan himself it had been said in the former vision, that he stood at the right hand of Joshua ⁸*to resist him.* So then the mountain symbolises every resisting power; Satan and all his instruments, who, each in his turn, shall oppose himself and be brought low. In the first instance, it was Sanballat and his companions, who opposed the rebuilding of the temple, on account of the "exclusiveness" of Zerubbabel and Joshua⁹, because they would not make the temple the abode of a mixed worship of him whom they call your God and of their own idolatries. In all and each of his instruments, the persecuting Emperors or the heretics, it was the one adversary. ¹⁰*The words seem all but to rebuke the great mountain, i.e. Satan, who riseth up and leadeth against Christ the power of his own stubbornness, who was figuratively spoken of before⁸.*—For that as far as it was allowed and in him lay, he warred fiercely against the Saviour, no one would doubt, who considered how he approached Him when fasting in the wilderness, and seeing Him saving all below, willed to make Him his own worshipper, shewing Him ¹¹*all the kingdoms of the world*, saying that all should be His, if He would fall down and worship him. Then out of the very choir of the holy Apostles he

¹ Hos. i. 7.

² Zech. iii. 8—10.

³ וְהָרֵאשִׁית; the construction as in the text, xiv. 10; לְאִישׁ הָעֵשֶׂר 2 Sam. xii. 4; עַד בֶּחַד הַנְּהוּל 1 Sam. xix. 22; אִישׁ אֶחָד מֵהֶן 1 Sam. xvii. 12; קְבוּרַת הַשִּׁלְשִׁי Jer. xxxviii. 14; יָבֵד הָהָרִיב Ib. xl. 3; קָרַן הַהָרִיב Ib. xxxii. 14, also 1 Kgs vii. 8, 12. Ges. Lehrs. n. 168. p. 659.

⁴ S. Luke xiv. 11, xviii. 14.

⁵ Is. xl. 4. The same word נִשְׂבַּח there with נִהַר.

⁶ 2 Cor. x. 4, 5.

⁷ 2 Thess. ii. 4.

⁸ iii. 1.

⁹ See ab. Intro. to Haggai. p. 484.

¹⁰ S. Cyr.

¹¹ S. Matt. iv. 8, 9.

¹² נִשְׂבַּח is a form, perhaps framed by Zechariah, here in apposition to הָרֵאשִׁית.

¹³ Ezr. v.

¹⁴ Is. xxxviii. 16.

¹⁵ Ps. cxviii. 22. This is implied in the Midrash, quoted by De Lira. "They explain it of a certain stone of this building, which was frequently offered by the stone-masons for the building of the wall, but was always found too long or too short, and so was often rejected by thereofⁱ with shoutings, crying, Grace, grace unto it.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

8 Moreover the word of the Lord came

Ezra 3. 11,
13.

snatched the traitor disciple, persuading him to become the instrument of the Jewish perverseness. He asks him, Who art thou? disparaging him and making him of no account, great as the mountain was and hard to withstand, and in the way of every one who would bring about such things for Christ, of Whom, as we said, Zerubbabel was a type."

And he shall bring forth the headstone¹². The foundation of the temple had long been laid. Humanly it still hung in the balance whether they would be permitted to complete it¹³: Zechariah foretells absolutely that they would. Two images appear to be used in Holy Scripture, both of which meet in Christ: the one, in which the stone spoken of is the foundation-stone; the other, in which it is the head corner-stone binding the two walls together, which it connects. Both were corner stones; the one at the base, the other at the summit. In Isaiah the whole emphasis is on the foundation; ¹⁴*Behold Me Who have laid in Zion a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, well-founded.* In the Psalm, the building had been commenced; those who were building had disregarded and despised the stone, but it became the head of the corner, crowning and binding the work in one¹⁵. Both images together express, how Christ is the Beginning and the End, the First and the Last; the Foundation of the spiritual building, the Church, and its summit and completion; the unseen Foundation which was laid deep in Calvary, and the Summit to which it grows and which holds it firm together. Whence S. Peter unites the two prophecies, and blends with them that other of Isaiah, that Christ would ¹⁶*be a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence. To Whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men but chosen of God and precious, ye also are built up a spiritual house—Whence also it is contained in the Scripture, Behold, I lay in Zion a chief corner-stone, elect, precious:—unto you which believe He is precious, but unto them which be disobedient, the same stone which the builders refused is made the head of the corner, and a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence, to them which stumble at the word being disobedient.*

A Jew paraphrases this of the Messiah; ¹⁷*And He shall reveal His Messiah, whose name was spoken from the beginning, and he shall rule over all nations."*

With shoutings¹⁸, grace, grace unto it, i. e. all favour from God unto it, redoubled favours, grace upon grace. The completion of the building was but the commencement of the dispensation under it. It was the beginning not the end. They pray then for the continued and manifold grace of God, that He would carry on the work, which He had begun. Perseverance, by the grace of God, crowns the life of the Christian; our Lord's abiding presence in grace with His Church unto the end of the world, is the witness that He Who founded her upholds her in being.

8. And the word of the Lord. ¹⁹*This word of the Lord* them as unfit, but in the completion of the wall, in the coupling of the two walls, it is found most fit, which was then accounted a marvellous thing." in Ps. cxviii. (119) 22. ראשׁ "head," is a natural metaphor for the summit; the tops of mountains, Gen. viii. 5 &c.; of a hill over vallies, Is. xxviii. 1, 4; of a tower, Gen. xi. 4; of columns, 1 Kgs vii. 19; the rounded top of a throne, Ib. x. 19; of a bed, Gen. xlvii. 31 [Heb.]; ear of corn, Job xxiv. 24; the starry heavens above us, Job xxii. 12; of the head of a people, tribes, nations, a family, in many places. Although used of the chief among things, it cannot, any more than κεφαλῆ, be used of "the base," as Gesenius would have it. Thes. p. 1251. v. ראשׁו.

¹⁶ 1 S. Pet. ii. 4-7.

¹⁷ Jon.

¹⁸ נִשְׂבַּח always plur.; of the cries of a city, Is. xxii. 2; of the exactor, Job xxxix. 7; crash of thunder, Ib. xxxvi. 29. [all]

¹⁹ Keil.

Before
CHRIST of the whole earth.
cir. 519.

CHAPTER V.

1 By the flying roll is shewed the curse of thieves whole vision has turned on the use of oil as an instrument of light, not of anointing) but as themselves abundantly ministering the stream which is the source of light¹.

Which stand by the Lord of the whole earth, as His servants and ministers.

The candlestick is almost authoritatively interpreted for us, by the adoption of the symbol in the Revelation, where our Lord is exhibited² as walking in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks, and, it is said, ³ the seven candlesticks are the seven Churches; and our Lord says to the Apostles, on whom He founded the Church; ⁴ Ye are the light of the world: men light a candle, and put it on a candlestick, and it giveth light to them that are in the house.

⁵ "The golden candlestick is the Church, as being honoured in the world, most bright in virtues, raised on high exceedingly by the doctrines of the true knowledge of God. But there are seven lamps, having light, not of their own, but brought to them from without, and nourished by the supplies through the olive tree. These signify the holy Apostles, Evangelists, and those who, each in their season, were teachers of the Churches, receiving, like lamps, into their mind and heart the illumination from Christ, which is nourished by the supplies of the Spirit, casting forth light to those who are in the house." ⁶ "The pipes of the lamps, which pour in the oil, signify the unstinted prodigality of the loving-kindness of God to man."

The most difficult of explanation (as is plain from the variety of interpretations) is this last symbol of the spikes of the olive-tree, through whom flows the oil of the Holy Spirit to the candlesticks, and which yet represent created beings, ministers, and servants of God. Perhaps it represents that, in the Church, grace is ministered through men, as S. Paul says, ⁷ Unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ. Wherefore he saith, when He ascended up on high, He led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men. And He gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers, for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ—that we—may grow up into Him in all things which is the Head, even Christ, from Whom the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love. What S. Paul expresses by ⁸ all the body, having nourishment ministered and being knit together by joints and bands, from the Head, and so increasing with the increase of God, (as he elsewhere speaks of ⁹ the ministration of the Spirit; ¹⁰ he that ministereth to you the Spirit) that Zechariah may express by the oil being poured, through the living ¹¹ tubes, the bowl, the sevenfold pipes, into the lamps, which shone with the God-given light. So S. Paul speaks again, of ¹² having this treasure in earthen vessels.

¹ So בן צולה בן בלעל, בן חיל, Is. v. 1, and the other idioms of qualities.

² Rev. i. 13. ii. 1.

³ Ib. i. 20.

⁴ S. Matt. v. 14, 15. cf. Phil. ii. 15.

⁵ S. Cyr.

⁶ Theod.

⁷ Eph. iv. 7, 8, 11, 12, 14-16.

⁸ Col. ii. 19.

⁹ 2 Cor. iii. 8.

¹⁰ Gal. iii. 5.

¹¹ See ab. on ver. 12.

and swearers. 5 By a woman pressed in an ephah, the final damnation of Babylon.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

THEN I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a flying^a roll. ^a Ezek. 2. 9.

Joshua and Zerubbabel, as representatives of the priestly and royal offices, shadowed forth what was united in Christ, and so, in their several offices, they might be included in the symbol of the olive-tree: they could not exhaust it; for men who, having served God in their generation, were to pass away, could not be alone intended in a vision, which describes the abiding being of the Church.

¹³ Christ is both All-holy Priest and supreme Eternal King. In both ways He supplies to us the light which He brought. For from Him piety and righteousness flow unceasingly to the Church, that it never lack the heavenly light. The oil is expressed into tubes; thence passed through pipes into the vessel which contains the lamps; to designate the various suppliers of light, which, the nearer they are to the effluence of the oil, the more they resemble Him by Whom they are appointed to so Divine an office. The seven lamps are the manifold Churches, distinct in place but most closely bound together by the consent of one faith and by the bond of charity. For although the Church is one, yet it is distinct according to the manifold variety of nations. They are said to be seven, both on account of the seven gifts of the Spirit, mentioned by Isaiah, and because in the numbers 3 and 4, is contained an emblem of piety and righteousness. There are 7 pipes to each lamp, to signify that each has need of many instruments, that the light may be maintained longer. For as there are diversities of gifts, so must there needs be the functions of many ministers, to complete one work. But the lamps are set in a circle, that the oil of one may flow more readily into others, and it, in turn, may receive from others their superabundance, to set forth the communion of love and the indissoluble community of faith."

v. 1. Hitherto all had been bright, full of the largeness of the gifts of God; of God's favour to His people¹⁴; the removal of their enemies¹⁵; the restoration and expansion and security of God's people and Church under His protection¹⁶; the acceptance of the present typical priesthood and the promise of Him, through Whom there should be entire forgiveness¹⁷: the abiding illumining of the Church by the Spirit of God¹⁸. Yet there is a reverse side to all this, God's judgements on those who reject all His mercies. ¹⁹ Prophecies partly appertain to those in whose times the sacred writers prophesied, partly to the mysteries of Christ. And therefore it is the wont of the prophets, at one time to chastise vices and set forth punishments, at another to predict the mysteries of Christ and the Church."

And I turned and, or, Again²⁰ I lifted up my eyes, having again sunk down in meditation on what he had seen, and behold a roll flying; as, to Ezekiel was shewn a hand with a roll of a book therein, and he spread it before me. Ezekiel's roll also was ²¹ written within and without, and there was written therein lamentation and mourning and woe. It was a wide unfolded roll, as is involved in its flying; but its ¹² 2 Cor. iv. 7.

¹³ Vision 1. i. 7-17.

¹⁴ Vis. 3. c. ii.

¹⁷ Vis. 4. c. iii.

¹⁶ S. Aug. de Civ. Dei. xvii. 3. Rib. Jer. xviii. 4.

¹³ Osor.

¹⁵ Vision 2. Ib. 18-21.

¹⁸ Vis. 5. c. iv.

²⁰ Gen. xxvi. 18, 2 Kgs i. 11, 13.

²¹ Ez. ii. 9, 10.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

2 And he said unto me, What seest thou? And I answered, I see a flying roll; the length thereof is twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof ten cubits.

b Mal. 4. 6.
|| Or, every one of this people that stealeth holdeth himself guiltless,
as it doth.

3 Then said he unto me, This is the curse that goeth forth over the face of the whole earth: for || every one that stealeth shall be cut off as on this side according to it; and every one that swear-

¹flight signified the very swift coming of punishment; its flying from heaven that the sentence came from the judgement-seat above.²

2. And he (the interpreting angel) said unto me. It cannot be without meaning, that the dimensions of the roll should be those of the tabernacle², as the last vision was that of the candlestick, after the likeness of the candlestick therein. The explanations of this correspondence do not exclude each other. It may be that ³judgement shall begin at the house of God; that the punishment on sin is proportioned to the nearness of God and the knowledge of Him; that the presence of God, which was for life, might also be to death, as S. Paul says; ⁴God maketh manifest the savour of this knowledge by us in every place; for we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ in them that are saved and in them that perish; to the one we are the savour of death unto death, and to the other the savour of life unto life; and Simeon said, ⁵This child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel.

Over the face of the whole earth, primarily land, since the perjured persons, upon whom the curse was to fall⁶, were those who swore falsely by the name of God: and this was in Judah only. The reference to the two tables of the law also confines it primarily to those who were under the law. Yet, since the moral law abides under the Gospel, ultimately these visions related to the Christian Church, which was to be spread over the whole earth. The roll apparently was shewn, as written on both sides; the commandments of the first table, in which perjury is forbidden, on the one side; those relating to the love of our neighbour, in which stealing is forbidden, on the other⁷. ⁸He calleth curse that vengeance, which goeth through the whole world, and is brought upon the workers of iniquity. But hereby both prophets and people were taught, that the God of all is the judge of all men, and will exact meet punishment of all, bringing utter destruction not on those only who live ungodly towards Himself, but on those also who are unjust to their neighbours. For let no one think that this threat was only against thieves and false-swearers; for He gave sentence against all iniquity. For

¹ Rib.

² The length of the tabernacle is fixed by the 5 curtains which were to be on each side, the breadth of each curtain four cubits. Exod. xxvi. 1, 2. The whole, including the holy of holies, is determined by the twenty boards on each side, a cubit and a half, the breadth of each board; 1b. 16, 18. The breadth is fixed by the six boards, i. e. nine cubits, with the two boards for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides. 1b. 22, 23. Josephus gives the whole thirty cubits long, (the holy of holies being ten cubits square) ten broad (Ant. 3. 6. 3.). Kimchi strangely neglects this, and refers to the porch of Solomon's temple, in which the dimensions of the tabernacle were repeated (1 Kgs vi. 3.), but which was itself only an ornament to the temple. ³ 1 Pet. iv. 17.

⁴ 2 Cor. ii. 14-16.

⁵ S. Luke ii. 34.

⁶ ver. 4. ⁷ כָּל־עֲוֹנוֹתָם, in two corresponding sentences, can only be partitive, as in Ex. xvii. 12, xxv. 19, xxvi. 13, xxxv. 15, of the two tables of the law, written on both sides; xxxvii. 8, xxxviii. 15, Nu. xxi. 24; Jos. viii. 22, and ten other places. So also מִן־הָאָרֶץ Jos. viii. 33. מִן־הָאָרֶץ Ez. xlvii. 7, 12, as in other partitives קִפָּה, קָפָה, or קָפָה Ez. xl. 10, 12, 21, 26, xli. 2. מִן־הָאָרֶץ also, when used of place, always means "from here," i. e. a definite eth shall be cut off as on that side according to it.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

4 I will bring it forth, saith the Lord of hosts, and it shall enter into the house of the thief, and into the house of ^chim that sweareth falsely by my name: and it shall remain in the midst of his house, and ^dshall consume it with the timber thereof and the stones thereof.

Lev. 19. 12.
ch. 8. 17.
Mal. 3. 5.

See Lev.
14. 45.

since all the law and the prophets hang on this word, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbour as thyself, He comprised every sort of sin under false swearing and theft. The violation of oaths is the head of all ungodliness. One who so doeth is devoid of the love of God. But theft indicates injustice to one's neighbour; for no one who loves his neighbour will endure to be unjust to him. These heads then comprehend all the other laws.⁹

Shall be cut off, lit. *cleansed away*⁹, as something defiled and defiling, which has to be cleared away as offensive: as God says, ¹⁰*I will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away dung, till it be all gone*, and so often in Deuteronomy, *thou shalt put the evil away from the midst of thee*¹¹, or of Israel¹², and in Ezekiel, ¹³*I will disperse thee in the countries and will consume thy filthiness out of thee*. ¹⁴*Set it empty upon the coals thereof, that the brass of it may be hot and may burn, and the filthiness of it may be molten, that the scum of it may be consumed*.

4. I will bring it forth out of the treasurehouse, as it were; as he says, ¹⁵*He bringeth forth the wind out of His treasures*; and, ¹⁶*Is not this laid up in store with Me, sealed up among My treasures? To Me belongeth vengeance and recompense*.

And it shall remain, lit. "lodge for the night¹⁷," until it has accomplished that for which it was sent, its utter destruction. ¹⁸So we have seen and see at this day powerful families, which attained to splendour by rapine or ill-gotten goods, destroyed by the just judgement of God, that those who see it are amazed, how such wealth perceptibly yet insensibly disappeared. ¹⁹Why doth it overthrow the stones and the wood of the swearer's house? In order that the ruin may be a correction to all. For since the earth must hide the swearer, when dead, his house, overturned and become a heap, will by the very sight be an admonition to all who pass by and see it, not to venture on the like, lest they suffer the like, and it will be a lasting witness against the sin of the departed. Heathenism was impressed²⁰ with the doom of him who consulted the oracle, whether he should forswear himself for gain²¹. "Swear," was the place where people are, Gen. xxxvii. 17, xlii. 15, Exod. xi. 1 (Maurer's instances).

⁹ Theod.

¹⁰ So is καθαρίσω used Mark vii. 19, (See reff. notes 10-14.) For נָקָה is not simply "clear," but "cleanse out," as καθαίρω Soph. Tr. 1012, 1061, Plutarch Thes. n. 7, Mar. n. 6. "of monsters and robbers." (Gesenius in comparing Arab. أَطَهَّرَ, "emptied clean out" (Vita Tim. i. 576.), أَطَهَّرَ, "appropriated it exclusively to himself" (Lane), أَطَهَّرَ "took away the whole" (Freyt.), "cleared it all off" misses the moral meaning of the Heb. word. ¹¹ 1 Kgs xiv. 10, add xxi. 21. ¹² Deut. xiii. 5 (6 Heb.), xvii. 7, xix. 19, xxi. 21, xxii. 15, 24, xxiv. 7. ¹³ Ezek. xxii. 15. ¹⁴ Ib. xvii. 12, xxiii. 22. ¹⁵ Jer. x. 13, li. 16. ¹⁶ Deut. xxxii. 34, 35. ¹⁷ Jer. x. 13, li. 16. ¹⁸ Lap. ¹⁹ S. Chrys. on the statues 15. n. 13. p. 259. Oxf. Tr. ²⁰ "The story of Glaucus is alluded to by Plutarch (ii. p. 556 D) Pausanias (11. xviii. n. 2.) Juvenal (xiii. 199-203) Clemens (Strom. vi. p. 749) Dio Chrysostom (Or. lxiv. p. 640) and others." Rawl. Herod. iii. 477. ²¹ Herod. vi. 85.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

5 ¶ Then the angel that talked with me went forth, and said unto me, Lift up now thine eyes, and see what is this that goeth forth.

6 And I said, What is it? And he said, This is an ephah that goeth forth. He said moreover, This is their resemblance answer, "since death awaits too the man, who keeps the oath; yet Oath hath a son, nameless, handless, footless; but swift he pursueth, until he grasp together and destroy the whole race and house." "1 In the third generation, there was nought descended from him," who had consulted about this perjury, "nor hearthstone reputed to be his. It had been uprooted and effaced." A Heathen orator² relates, as well known, that "the perjurer escapes not the vengeance of the gods, and if not himself, yet the sons and whole race of the forsworn fall into great misfortunes." God left not Himself without witness.

"³ The prophet speaks of the curse inflicted on the thieves and false swearers of his own day; but à fortiori he includes that which came upon them for slaying Christ. For this was the greatest of all, which utterly overthrew and consumed Jerusalem, the temple and polity, so that that ancient and glorious Jerusalem exists no longer, as Christ threatened. ⁴ They shall lay thee even with the ground, and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another. This resteth upon them these" 1800 "years."

5. Then the angel went forth from the choirs of angels, among whom, in the interval, he had retired, as before⁵ he had gone forth to meet another angel.

6. This is the ephah that goeth forth. "⁶ We too are taught by this, that the Lord of all administers all things in weight and measure. So, foretelling to Abraham that his seed should be a sojourner and the cause thereof, He says, ⁷ for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full, i. e., they have not yet committed sins enough to merit entire destruction, wherefore I cannot yet endure to give them over to the slaughter, but will wait for the measure of their iniquity." The relation then of this vision to the seventh is, that the seventh tells of God's punishment on individual sinners; this, on the whole people, when the iniquity of the whole is full.

This is their resemblance, as we say, their look⁸, i. e. the look, appearance, of the inhabitants ⁹ in all the land. This then being the condition of the people of the land, at the time to which the vision relates, the symbolical carrying away of the full measure of sin cannot be its forgiveness, since there was no repentance, but the taking away of the sin with the sinner. "¹⁰ The Lord of all is good and loving to mankind; for He is patient towards sinners and endures transgressors, waiting for the repentance of each; but if one perseveres long in iniquity, and come to the term of the endurance allowed, it remains that he should be subjected to punishment, and there is no account of this long forbearance, through all the earth.

7 And, behold there was lifted up a || talent of lead: and this is a woman that sitteth in the midst of the ephah.

8 And he said, This is wickedness. And he cast it into the midst of the ephah; and he cast the weight of lead

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.
Or, weighty piece.

nor can he be exempt from judgement proportioned to what he has done. So then Christ says to the Jewish people, rushing with unbridled phrenzy to all strange excess, ¹¹ Fill ye up the measure of your fathers. The measure then, which was seen, pointed to the filling up of the measure of the transgression of the people against Himself." "¹² The angel bids him behold the sins of the people Israel, heaped together in a perfect measure, and the transgression of all fulfilled—that the sins, which escaped notice, one by one, might, when collected together, be laid open to the eyes of all, and Israel might go forth from its place, and it might be shewn to all what she was in her own land." "¹³ I think the Lord alluded to the words of the prophet, as though He would say, Fill up the measure of sins which your fathers began of old, as it is in Zechariah, i. e. ye will soon fill it; for ye so haste to do evil, that ye will soon fill it to the utmost."

7. And behold there was lifted up a talent of lead, the heaviest Hebrew weight, elsewhere of gold or silver; the golden talent weighing, 1,300,000 grains; the silver, 660,000; here, being lead, it is obviously an undefined mass, though circular¹⁴, corresponding to the Ephah. The Ephah too was the largest Hebrew measure, whose compass cannot now, with certainty, be ascertained¹⁵. Both probably were, in the vision, ideal. "¹⁶ Holy Scripture calleth the punishment of sin, lead, as being by nature heavy. This the divine David teacheth us, ¹⁶ mine iniquities are gone over my head: as an heavy burden, they are too heavy for me. The divine Zechariah seeth sin under the image of a woman; for most evils are engendered by luxury. But he seeth the punishment, like most heavy lead, lying upon the mouth of iniquity, according to a Psalm; ¹⁷ all iniquity shall stop her mouth." "¹⁸ Iniquity, as with a talent of lead, weighs down the conscience."

This is a woman, lit. one woman, all sin being concentrated and personified in one, as he goes on to speak of her as the, personified, wickedness¹⁹. The sitting may represent her abiding tranquil condition in her sins, according to the climax in the first Psalm, ²⁰ and hath not sat in the seat of the scornful; and, ²¹ thou sittest and speakest against thy brother; "²² not standing as by the way, but sitting, as if of set purpose, of wont and habit." "²³ Whoso hath peace in sins is not far from lying down in them, so that, oppressed by a spirit of slumber, he neither sees light, nor feels any blow, but is kept down by the leaden talent of his obduracy."

8. And cast her into the midst of the Ephah. As yet then the measure was not full. "¹³ She had the lower part for warmth²⁴, to him. Ew. Lehrb. n. 294. l. p. 754. ed. 8.

¹¹ S. Matt. xxiii. 32.

¹² S. Jer.

¹³ S. Cyr. Rib.

¹⁴ According to its etymology.

¹⁵ It is thought that Josephus (Ant. 15. 9. 2.) put the μέδυνος by mistake for the μετρητής, which is ½ of the μέδυνος; the μετρητής holding nine of our gallons, the μέδυνος twelve. The Ephah was probably an Egyptian measure, since the LXX substitute οἰφί &c. corresponding to the Egyptian word for "measure," and Ephah has no Semitic etymology.

¹⁶ Ps. xxxviii. 4.

¹⁷ S. Ambrose in Ps. 35. n. 9. Opp. i. 769.

¹⁸ Ib. cvii. 42.

¹⁹ S. Ambrose in Ps. 35. n. 9. Opp. i. 769. absolutely, only in Dan. ix. 7. Thine, O Lord, is הַזֶּקֶה, הַזֶּקֶה does not occur at all.

²⁰ Ps. i. 1.

²¹ Ib. l. 20.

²² Sanct.

¹ Herod. vi. 85, 86.

⁴ S. Luke xix. 44.

⁶ Theod.

² Lycurgus Or. in Leocr. p. 157 fin.

³ Lap.

⁵ ii. 3 (7 Heb.)

⁷ Gen. xv. 16.

⁸ עין our look, as in Lev. xiii. 55. and the leprosy hath not changed עין its look; Nu. xi. 7, of the manna, its look (עין) was like the look (עין) of bdellium; Ezek. x. 9. the appearance of the wheels was like the look (עין) of stone of Tarshish. Add Ez. i. 4, 7, 16, 27, and Dan. x. 6. like the look (עין) of polished brass.

⁹ The ע, relates to the persons, implied though not expressed in the עָלָם, as in Ps. lxxv. 10, thou preparest עָלָם their corn: xxxix. 7, he heapeth up and knoweth not, עָלָם, who gathereth them; Eccl. v. 17, (18 Eng.) to see good (עָלָם) in all his labour; Ib. vii. 1, better is the day of death than the day עָלָם of his birth; Hagg. i. 6, lit. to clothe, yet not

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

upon the mouth thereof.

9 Then lifted I up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came out two women, and the wind was in their wings; for they had wings like the wings of a stork: and they lifted up the ephah between the earth and the heaven.

10 Then said I to the angel that talked with me, Whither do these bear the ephah?

* Jer. 29. 5, 28.
† Gen. 10. 10.

11 And he said unto me, To ^e build it an house in ^f the land of Shinar: and it shall be established, and set there upon her own base.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The vision of the four chariots. 9 By the crowns within the Ephah, but the upper, especially the head, without. Though the Jews had slain the prophets and done many grievous things, the greatest sin of all remained to be done. But when they had crucified Christ and persecuted the Apostles and the Gospel, the measure was full; she was wholly within the Ephah, no part remained without, so that the measure was filled."

And he cast the weight of lead upon the mouth thereof, i. e. doubtless of the Ephah; as in Genesis¹, a great stone was on the mouth of the well, so that there should be no access to it.

9. There came out two women. It may be that there may be no symbol herein, but that he names women because it was a woman who was so carried; yet their wings were the wings of an unclean bird, strong, powerful, borne by a force not their own; with their will, since they flew; beyond their will, since the wind was in their wings; rapidly, inexorably, irresistibly, they flew and bore the Ephah between heaven and earth. No earthly power could reach or rescue it. God would not. It may be that evil spirits are symbolised, as being like to this personified human wickedness, such as snatch away the souls of the damned, who, by serving them, have become as they.

11. To build it an house in the land of Shinar. The name of Shinar, though strictly Babylonia, carries back to an older power than the world-empire of Babylon; which now too was destroyed. *In the land of Shinar*² was that first attempt to array a world-empire against God, ere mankind was yet dispersed. And so it is the apter symbol of the antithetic or Anti-Christian world, which by violence, art, falsehood, sophistry, wars against the truth. To this great world-empire it was to be removed; yet to live there, no longer cramped and confined as within an Ephah, but in pomp and splendour. A house or temple was to be built for it, for its honour and glory; as Dagon³ or Ashtaroth⁴, or Baal⁵ had their houses or temples, a great idol temple, in which the god of this world should be worshipped.

And it—"the house," shall be established firmly on its base, like the house of God, and it, (wickedness⁶) shall be of Joshua is shewed the temple and kingdom of Christ the Branch.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

AND I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold, there came four chariots out from between two mountains; and the mountains were mountains of brass.

2 In the first chariot were ^a red horses; ^a ch. 1. 8. and in the second chariot ^b black horses; ^b Rev. 6. 4. ^c Rev. 6. 5.

3 And in the third chariot ^c white horses; ^c Rev. 6. 2. and in the fourth chariot grisled and || bay || Or, strong. horses.

4 Then I answered ^d and said unto the ^d ch. 5. 10. angel that talked with me, What are these, my lord?

tranquilly rested on its base, as an idol in its temple, until the end come. In the end, the belief of those of old was, that the Jews would have great share in the antagonism to Christ and His empire. At the first, they were the great enemies of the faith, and sent forth, S. Justin says⁷, those everywhere who should circulate the calumnies against Christians, which were made a ground of early persecutions. In the end, it was believed, that Anti-Christ should be from them, that they would receive him as their Christ, the last fulfilment of our Lord's words, ⁸ I am come in My Father's name and ye receive Me not; another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive.

VI. 1. Behold, four chariots going forth "⁹ by the secret disposal of God into the theatre of the world," from between two mountains of brass. Both Jews¹⁰ and Christians have seen that the four chariots relate to the same four empires, as the visions in Daniel. "The two mountains." It may be that the imagery is from the two mountains on either side of the valley of Jehoshaphat, which Joel had spoken of as the place of God's judgement¹¹, and Zechariah afterwards¹². It may then picture that the judgements go forth from God. Any how the powers, symbolised by the four chariots, are pictured as closed in on either side by these mountains, strong as brass, unsurmountable, undecaying, "¹³ that they should not go forth to other lands to conquer, until the time should come, fixed by the counsels of God, when the gates should be opened for their going forth." The mountains of brass may signify the height of the Divine wisdom ordering this, and the sublimity of the power which putteth them in operation; as the Psalmist says, ¹⁴ Thy righteousnesses are like the mountains of God.

2. 3. The symbol is different from that in the first vision. There¹⁵, they were horses only, with their riders, to go to and fro to enquire; here they are war-chariots with their horses, to execute God's judgements, each in their turn. In the first vision also, there is not the characteristic fourfold division, which reminds of the four world-empires of Daniel¹⁶; after which, in both prophets, is the mention of the kingdom of Christ. Even if the grisled horses be the

¹ Gen. xxix. 2.

² Ib. xi. 2.

³ 1 Sam. v. 2-5.

⁴ Ib. xxxi. 10.

⁵ 2 Kgs x. 23.

⁶ The subjects are marked by the genders; בית being masc., מִשְׁכָּן fern.

⁷ S. Just. Dial. n. 17 (n. 91. Oxf. Tr.) and n. 108. p. 205. Eusebius quotes the first passage, H. E. iv. 13, and repeats the statement on Is. xviii.

⁸ S. John v. 43.

⁹ Alb. ¹⁰ Saadiah in Kim., Kim., Rashi, the Jews in the time of S. Jerome.

Jon. paraphrases vi. 5, "four kingdoms."

¹¹ Jo. iii. 2.

¹² Zech. xiv. 4.

¹³ Rib.

¹⁴ Ps. xxxvi. 6.

¹⁵ i. 8.

¹⁶ Dan. ii.

Before CHRIST
cir. 519.

5 And the angel answered and said unto me, "These are the four || spirits of the heavens, which go forth from ¹standing before the Lord of all the earth.

6 The black horses which are therein go forth into ²the north country; and the same as the speckled of the first vision, the black horses are wanting there, as well as the succession, in which they go forth. The only resemblance is, that there are horses of divers colours, two of which, red and white, are the same. The symbol of the fourth empire, grizzled, strong ¹, remarkably corresponds with the strength and mingled character of the fourth empire in Daniel.

5. These are the four spirits of the heavens. They cannot be literal winds: for spirits, not winds, stand before God, as His servants, as in Job, ²the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord. This they did, "for these four kingdoms did nothing without the will of God." Zechariah sums up in one, what former prophets had said separately of the Assyrian, the Babylonian, Egyptian, Persian. ⁴O Assyria, the rod of Mine anger—I will send him against an ungodly nation, and against the people of My wrath I will give him a charge. ⁵I will send and take all the families of the north, and Nebuchadrezzar, the king of Babylon, My servant, and will bring them against this land. ⁶The Lord shall hiss for the fly, that is in the uttermost part of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria, and they shall come, and shall rest, all of them, in the desolate valleys. ⁷I will call all the families of the kingdoms of the north, saith the Lord; and they shall come, and shall set every one his throne at the entering of the gates of Jerusalem. Whatever the human impulse or the human means, all stand before the Lord of the whole earth, ministering to His will Whose are all things, the Judge of all, Who withholdeth the chastisement till the iniquity is full, and then, through man's injustice, executes His own just judgement. "He says that they went forth from where they had stood before the Lord of the whole earth, to shew that their power had been obtained by the counsel of God, that they might serve His will. For no empire was ever set up on earth without the mind, counsel and power of God. He exalts the humble and obscure, He prostrates the lofty, who trust overmuch in themselves, arms one against the other, so that no fraud or pride shall be without punishment."

6. The black horses which are therein go forth. lit. That chariot wherein the black horses are, these go forth. "Most suitably is the first chariot, wherein the red horses were, passed over, and what the second, third, fourth did is described. For when the prophet related this, the Babylonian empire had passed, and the power of the Medes possessed all Asia." Red, as the colour of blood, represented Babylon as sanguinary; as it is said in the Revelation, ⁹There went out another horse, red, and power was given to him that sat

¹ The guess of Abulwalid and Kimchi that אָדָם might be i. q., אָדָם bright red, Is. lxiii. 1, is at variance with the whole use of the Hebrew root, which occurs 40 times in the verb, אָדָם; 7 times in the adj. אָדָם; and once each in אָדָם, אָדָם, אָדָם, besides the Proper Names אָדָם, Isaiah's father; אָדָם, of two persons, אָדָם, of four persons. The Arab. أدم, which Eichhorn and Henderson compare, is no name of a colour, but is used apparently of the "slight summer lightning." The ground with some was, that the word is united with names of colours; with Ewald, to replace the red horses, on which the prophet is silent. See "Daniel the prophet" p. 360. The single case too, in which א and נ are supposed to be interchanged in Heb., is that a Proper Name אָדָם Chr. ix. 41, is written אָדָם Ib. viii. 35, but the pronunciation of Proper Names varies in all languages. See "Daniel the prophet"

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

white go, forth after them; and the grizzled go forth toward the south country.

7 And the bay went forth, and sought to go that they might ^hwalk to and fro through the earth: and he said, Get you hence, walk to and fro through the earth. So they thereon, to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another, and there was given him a sharp sword. The black were to go forth to the North country, the ancient title of Babylon. For Babylon, though taken, was far from being broken. They had probably been betrayed through the weakness of their kings. Their resistance, in the first carefully prepared ¹⁰revolt against Darius, was more courageous than that against Cyrus: and more desperate ¹¹. Since probably more Jews remained in it, than returned to their own country, what was to befall it had a special interest for them. They had already been warned in the third vision ¹² to escape from it. The colour black doubtless symbolises the heavy lot, inflicted by the Medo-Persians; as in the Revelation it is said, ¹³the sun became black as sackcloth of hair; and to the beast in Daniel's vision which corresponded with it, ¹⁴it was said, Arise, devour much flesh; and in the Revelation ¹⁵, he that sat on the black horse was the angel charged with the infliction of famine. Of the Medes, Isaiah had said ¹⁶, I will stir up the Medes against them [Babylon], which shall not regard silver; and gold, they shall not delight in it. Their bows also shall dash the young men to pieces; and they shall have no pity on the fruit of the womb; their eye shall not spare children.

The white went forth after them: for the Greek empire occupied the same portion of the earth as the Persian. White is a symbol of joy, gladness ¹⁷, victory ¹⁸, perhaps also, from its relation to light, of acute intelligence. It may relate too to the benevolence of Alexander to the Jewish nation. "Alexander used such clemency to the conquered, that it seemed as though he might be called rather the founder than the destroyer of the nations whom he subdued."

And the grizzled, the Romans in their mingled character, so prominent in the fourth empire of Daniel ¹⁹, go forth to the south country, i. e. Egypt; as Daniel speaks of ²⁰the ships of Chittim and the intervention of the Romans first in regard to the expulsion of Antiochus Epiphanes from Egypt; in Egypt also, the last enduring kingdom of any successor of Alexander, that of the Ptolemies, expired. "30 years afterwards, the Son of God was to bring light to the earth. The prophet so interweaves the prediction, that from the series of the four kingdoms it is brought to the Birth of the Eternal King ²¹."

7. And the strong went forth and sought to go, that they might walk to and fro through the earth. The mention of their strength corresponds to the extent of the power and commission, for which they asked, to go to and fro, up and down, at their will, unhindered, through the whole earth.

p. 405. Fürst's instances (Handwört. p. 368) are conjectures of his own. Within Arabic, אָדָם, i. q., אָדָם; אָדָם, i. q., אָדָם; אָדָם, i. q., אָדָם; (Eichh. in Ges. Thes. p. 2.) are without authority; אָדָם is not owned by Lane; else, if it means "imprisoned," it would be a softer pronunciation of אָדָם in this one sense; אָדָם and אָדָם are perhaps from the same biliteral root.

² Job i. 6, ii. 1. The same idiom אָדָם.
⁴ Is. x. 5. ⁵ Jer. xxv. 9. ⁶ Is. vii. 18, 19. ⁷ Jer. i. 15. ⁸ Osor.
⁹ Rev. vi. 4. ¹⁰ Herod. iii. 150. ¹¹ See "Daniel the Prophet," pp. 129, 130, ed. 2. ¹² ii. 7. ¹³ Rev. vi. 12. ¹⁴ Dan. vii. 5. ¹⁵ Rev. vi. 5, 6. ¹⁶ Is. xlii. 17, 18. ¹⁷ Eccl. ix. 8. ¹⁸ Rev. vi. 2. ¹⁹ Dan. ii. 41-43. ²⁰ Ib. xi. 30.

²¹ Osor. See "Daniel the Prophet," pp. 142-150.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

walked to and fro through the earth.

¹ Judg. 8. 3.
Eccles. 10. 4.

8 Then cried he upon me, and spake unto me, saying, Behold, these that go toward the north country have quieted my ¹ spirit in the north country.

9 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

The Babylonian empire held Egypt only out of Asia; the Persian was conquered in its efforts against Europe, in Greece; Alexander's was like a meteor, gleaming but breaking into the four: the Roman combined East and West and within large limits tranquilly.

And he said go, walk to and fro in the earth. He commanded, and they, which were before withheld, went, and they walked to and fro¹ on the earth, ordering all things at their will, under the Providence of God, whereby He gave free access to the Gospel in all their wide empire. The Greek empire being extinguished, the Romans no longer went into any given country, but superintended and governed all human things in (it is the language of the New Testament) all the world. "² These same, the dappled and ashen grey horses were commanded to traverse the earth, and they did traverse it; for they mastered all under heaven, and ruled the whole earth, God consenting and arraying those who swayed the Roman might with this brilliant glory. For, as God, He knew beforehand the greatness of their future piety."

8. Then God, or the Angel of the Lord, who speaks of what belonged to God alone, called me (probably "loudly"³), so as to command his attention to this which most immediately concerned his people.

These have quieted My spirit in the North country, or rather, have made My anger to rest⁴ on, i. e. have carried it thither and deposited it there, made it to rest upon them, as its abode, as S. John saith of the unbelieving, ⁵ The wrath of God abideth on him. Babylon had been the final antagonist and subduer of the people of God. It had at the outset destroyed the temple of God, and carried off its vessels to adorn idol-temples. Its empire closed on that night when it triumphed over God⁶, using the vessels dedicated to Him, to the glorifying of their idols. In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain. This final execution of God's anger upon that their destroyer was the earnest of the rest to them; and in this the visions pause.

9. And the word of the Lord came to me. The visions being closed, Zechariah marks the change by adopting the usual formula, with which the prophets authenticated, that they spake not of themselves, but by the Spirit of God. The act enjoined is a symbolic act, pointing and summing up and interpreting the visions, as some of the visions had been already expanded by fresh revelations following immediately upon them.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

10 Take of them of the captivity, even of Heldai, of Tobijah, and of Jedaiah, which are come from Babylon, and come thou the same day, and go into the house of Josiah the son of Zephaniah;

11 Then take silver and gold, and make ⁸ crowns, and set them upon the head of

Ex. 28. 36.
& 29. 6.
Lev. 8. 9.
ch. 3. 6.

10. Take of the captivity, of that which they had brought with them⁷. The captivity was, in Jeremiah⁸, and Ezekiel⁹, the title of those who had been actually carried captive and were at that moment in captivity. Ezra continues it of those who had been in captivity, though now returned from exile. Yet not without a reference to the circumstances or causes of that captivity. It is the captivity¹⁰ which Sheshbazzar brings from Babylon, or Ezra subsequently¹¹; the children of the captivity, who set themselves to build the temple of God¹²; who dedicated it and kept the passover¹³. The title is used apparently as an aggravation of sin, like that which had been chastened by that captivity¹⁴. Here, the term seems to imply some blame, that they remained of their own accord in this state of severance from the altar, where alone special worship of God and sacrifice could be offered. They had been removed against their will; yet, as Christians often do, acquiesced in the loss, rather than forego their temporal advantages. Still they wished to take part in the work of restoring the public worship, and so sent these men, with their contribution of gold and silver, to their brethren, who had returned; as, in the first times of the Gospel, the Christians every where made collections for the poor saints, who dwelt in Jerusalem. And this their imperfect zeal was instantly accepted.

And go thyself, to make the act more impressive, on that same day, as matter of urgency, and thou shalt come to the house of Josiah son of Zephaniah, whither they have come from Babylon¹⁵. The exiles who had brought presents for the building of the temple, lodged, it seems, in the house of Josiah, whether they doubted or no that their presents would be accepted, since they chose Babylon, not Jerusalem for their abode. This acceptance of their gifts symbolised the incoming of those from far. It is remarkable that all five names express a relation to God. Tobiah, "¹⁶ The Lord is my good; Yedaiah, "God knoweth" or "careth for;" Josiah, "The Lord supporteth"¹⁷; Zephaniah, "The Lord hideth," and perhaps Cheldai, "The Lord's world"¹⁸. They had taken religious instead of worldly names. Probably Zechariah was first to accept the offerings from the three exiles, and then to take the actual gold from the house of Josiah whither they had brought it. The pilgrims from Babylon and their host are included in one common blessing.

11. And make crowns; or a crown¹⁹, as in Job,²⁰ I would bind it as a crown unto me, and our Lord is seen in the Revelation,

¹ The fem. חתולות may have been occasioned by the symbol כתר v. 1, or the explanation חתול v. 5; but since their going was consequent on the permission to go, which they asked and obtained, it must relate to the empire symbolised by the 4th chariot, not (as some) to all.

² S. Cyr. חתולות, with acc. p. is used elsewhere of calling together people. Jud. iv. 10, 13, 2 Sam. xx. 4, 5.

³ חתולות, with acc. p. is used elsewhere of calling together people. Jud. iv. 10, 13, 2 Sam. xx. 4, 5. ⁴ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ⁵ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ⁶ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ⁷ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ⁸ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ⁹ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ¹⁰ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ¹¹ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ¹² חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ¹³ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ¹⁴ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ¹⁵ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ¹⁶ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ¹⁷ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ¹⁸ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ¹⁹ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13. ²⁰ חתולות, with ב, as Ez. v. 13.

⁷ S. John iii. 36. ⁸ Dan. v. See in Daniel the Prophet pp. 450-453.

⁹ Jer. xxviii. 6, xxix. 1, 4, 20, 31. (למ) ¹⁰ Jer. xxiv. 5, xxviii. 4, xxix. 22, xl. 1.)

¹¹ Ezek. i. 2, iii. 11, 15, xi. 24, 25. ¹² Ezr. i. 11. ¹³ Ib. viii. 35.

¹² Ib. iv. 1. ¹³ the children of the captivity Ib. vi. 16. Ch. 19, 20.

¹⁴ חתולות Ib. ix. 4, x. 6, 16, חתולות Ib. x. 7, 16, חתולות Ib. 8.

¹⁵ As in 1 Kgs xii. 2, חתולות, whither he had fled; add Gen. xlv. 25, for the like accus. of place. Kim. renders, "who have come from Babylon" expressly including Josiah. Yet this too is an impossible construction.

¹⁶ חתולות. Tobias happens only to occur after the exile, in Ezr. ii. 60, Neh. vii. 62; 2) in Neh. ii. 10, vi. 1; 3) the Tobias here and 14; 4) Tobit and Tobias in his book.

¹⁷ Josiah only occurs besides, as the name of the well-known king.

¹⁸ חתולות. The name is preserved, though obelised, in the LXX. Ἐλδαί, Ἐλδαί; not from Aq. who has Ὀλδα. Jon. retains the name; the Syr. and S. Jer. Holdai, (the Syr. in v. 14. also.) The LXX only παρὰ τῶν ἀρχόντων.

¹⁹ "great crown," Jon.; "a crown," Syr.

²⁰ חתולות Job xxxi. 36. The plural form is used only in these two places, and as, or in, the

Before CHRIST
cir. 519. Joshua the son of Josedech the high priest; 12 And speak unto him, saying, Thus speaketh the Lord of hosts, saying, Behold

Before CHRIST
cir. 519. the man whose name is The ^m BRANCH; and he shall || grow up out of his place, and he shall build the temple of the Lord:

^m ch. 3. 8. || Or, branch up from under him.
ⁿ ch. 4. 9. Matt. 16. 18. Eph. 2. 20, 21, 22. Heb. 3. 3.

Sec Luke
1. 78.
John 1. 45.

¹ on His Head were many crowns. The singular is used of ² a royal crown, apparently of a festive crown³; and figuratively⁴; even of Almighty God Himself as a crown⁵; but no where of the mitre of the high-priest.

The characteristic of the act is, that the crown or crowns (it is not in the context said, which) were placed on the head of the one high priest, Joshua; and thou shalt place [it or them, it is not said which] upon the head of Joshua son of Josedech the high-priest, and shalt say unto him. If crowns were made of each material, there were two crowns. But this is not said, and the silver might have formed a circlet in the crown of gold, as, in modern times, the iron crown of Lombardy, was called iron, because it had "a plate of iron in its summit, being else of gold and most precious." In any case the symbolical act was completed by the placing of a royal crown upon the head of the high-priest. This, in itself, represented that He, Whom he and all other priests represented, would be also our King. It is all one then, whether the word designate one single crown, so entitled for its greatness, or one united royal crown, i. e., one crown uniting many crowns, symbolising the many kingdoms of the earth, over which our High Priest and King should rule. Either symbol, of separate crowns⁷, or an united crown⁸, has been used in the same meaning, to symbolise as many empires, as there were crowns.

On Zerubbabel no crown was placed. It would have been confusing; a seeming restoration of the kingdom, when it was not to be restored; an encouragement of the temporal hopes, which were the bane of Israel. God had foretold, that none of the race of Jehoiakim should prosper, sitting on the throne of David, or ruling any more in Israel. Nehemiah rejects the imputation of Sanballat⁹, Thou hast also appointed Proper Name of four towns; 1) גִּדְיָהָ a town of the Gadites, Nu. xxxii. 3, 34; 2) of Ephraim, Josh. xvi. 27, also גִּדְיָהָ "crown of Addar," Ib. xvi. 5, xviii. 13; 3) of Judah גִּדְיָהָ יֹאֵב ("crown of the house of Joab") 1 Chr. ii. 54; and 4) and of Gad, גִּדְיָהָ אֶתְרֵן, (mentioned with Ataroth) Nu. xxxii. 35. In all these it must needs be singular.

¹ Rev. xix. 12. In Rev. xii. 3, the 7 crowns are for the 7 heads of the dragon. קִרְיָם is used of the one girdle, Jer. ii. 32.

² Job xix. 9. [plur. Ib. xxxi. 36] Pr. iv. 9, xii. 4, xiv. 24, xvi. 31, xvii. 6. ³ Is. xxviii. 5. is contrasted with "the crown of pride" Ib. 1. 3. [all]

⁴ Ceremoniale Rom. L. 1. sect. 5. in Du Cange Glossar. v. Corona Ferrea.

⁵ Ptolemy Philadelphus "set two crowns upon his head, the crown of Asia and of Egypt (1 Macc. xi. 13); Artabanus, "in whom the kingdom of Parthia ended," used two diadems (Herodian Hist. vi. 2. p. 119 Bekk.); "the Emperor of Germany received three crowns: first, silver (at Aix) for Germany; one of iron at Monza in the Milanese or Milan (for Lombardy); that of gold in divers places," (Alberic. Index v. Corona in Du Cange v. Corona Imperialis) "the golden at Rome." Du Cange. Otto of Frisingen said that Frederic received 5 crowns; the first at Aix for the kingdom of the Franks; a second at Ratisbon for that of Germany; a third at Pavia for the kingdom of Lombardy; the fourth at Rome for the Roman empire from Adrian iv; the fifth of Monza for the kingdom of Italy." In our own memory, Napoleon I. having been crowned in France, was crowned with the iron crown at Monza.

⁶ "The headdress of the king, on state occasions, was the crown of the upper or of the lower country, or the pschent, the union of the two. Every king, after the sovereignty of the Thebaid and lower Egypt had become once more vested in the same person, put on this double crown at his coronation, and we find in the grand representation given of this ceremony at Medeenet Haboo that the principal feature of the proclamation, on his ascension to the throne, was the announcement that Remeses had put on the crown of the upper and lower country.—When crowned, the king invariably put on the two crowns at the same time, though on other occasions he was permitted to wear each separately, whether in the temple, the city, or the field of battle." Wilkinson's Ancient Egypt, iii. 351—353.

⁷ Neh. vi. 6—8. ⁸ Ezek. xxi. 31, 32 [26, 27, Eng.] ⁹ Phil. ii. 8, 9.

¹⁰ Ps. cx. 4. ¹¹ Ib. ii. 6. ¹² Phil. ii. 8, 9.

¹³ The consent of the ancient Jews in interpreting "the Branch" of the Messiah is very prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, There is a king in Judah. He answers, There are no such things done as thou sayest; and thou feignest them out of thine own heart. But Isaiah had foretold much of the king who should reign: Zechariah, by placing the royal crown on the head of Joshua, foreshewed that the kingdom was not to be of this world. The royal crown had been taken away in the time of Zedekiah, ¹⁰ Thus saith the Lord God, Remove the diadem and take away the crown; this shall not be this; exalt the low and abase the high; an overthrow, overthrow, overthrow will I make it; this too is not; until he come whose the right is, and I will give it.

But the Messiah, it was foretold, was to be both priest and king; ¹¹ a priest after the order of Melchizedec, and a king, set by the Lord ¹² upon His holy hill of Zion. The act of placing the crown on the head of Joshua the high-priest, pictured not only the union of the offices of priest and king in the person of Christ, but that He should be King, being first our High Priest. Joshua was already High Priest; being such, the kingly crown was added to him. It says in act, what S. Paul says, that ¹³ Christ Jesus, being found in fashion as a man, humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him.

12. The Prophet is taught to explain his own symbolic act. Behold the Man whose name is the Branch¹⁴. "Not for himself, but for Christ, Whose name Joshua bare, and Whose Priesthood and Principedom he represented," was the crown given him. The Prophet had already foretold the Messiah, under the name of the Branch. Here he adds,

And he shall grow up out of His place¹⁵, lowly and of no seeming account, as God foretold by Jeremiah, ¹⁶ I will cause remarkable. "R. Berachiah (about A. D. 200, Wolf. Bibl. Hebr. ii. 870) said, that 'God, blessed for ever, saith to Israel, Ye say before Me, we are become orphans and have no father; the Redeemer too, Whom I am about to make to stand from you, He shall have no father, as is said, Behold the Man Whose name is the Branch, and he shall shoot [lit. from below him] from his place; and so saith Isaiah, And he grew up like a sucker before him.'" (Bereshith Rabba on Gen. xxxvii. 22. in Martini Pug. Fid. f. 594 quoted also by a Jewish convert, Joshua Hallorck, known among us as Hieron. de S. Fide, c. Jud. i. 5. Bibl. Max. Patr. xxvi. 536. His quotation is independent of Martini, since he adds the quotation from Ps. ii. "and elsewhere, 'The Lord said unto me, Thou art my Son,'" Jon. paraphrases, "Behold a Man, Whose name is Messiah, Who shall be revealed, and shall be multiplied," (יִרְיָהּ), by which נֶחֱם is rendered Ps. lxxxv. 12.) "and he shall build the temple of the Lord, and he shall bear glory, and he shall sit and shall rule on his throne, and he shall be a great Priest on his throne, and counsel of peace there shall be between them both." Rashi says, "He hints at the Messiah, and so paraphrases Jonathan, Behold a Man Whose name is Messiah, &c." (in Mart. p. 376. The printed edd. substitute "And some interpret it of king Messiah.") R. Nachman observes on the force of the word man, "Man (in Nu. i. 4.) is not said here but of the Messiah the Son of David, as is said, 'Behold the Man, Whose name is the Branch,' Jonathan paraphrases The Man Messiah, and so it is said, 'a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief.'" (Mart. p. 664). The Echa Rabati, f. 59, 2. and Jerus. Bereshith f. 5, 1. quote R. Joshua B. Levi (end of 2nd cent., Wolf. B. H. ii. 842, coll. pp. 834, 841) as alleging this place in proof that "Branch is a name of the Messiah." Schöttgen [ad loc.]. Schöttgen quotes also the Pirke Elieser c. 38, "God will free Israel at the end of the 4th kingdom, saying, I have put forth a germ unto you, Behold my servant the Branch." Bammidbar R. sect. 18 f. 236, 1. Tanchuma f. 68, 3. "Behold the Man, whose name is the Branch. This is the Messiah, of Whom it is said (Jer. xxxiii. 5.) And I will raise up unto David a righteous Branch." Midrash Mishle xix. 21 f. 57, 1. quotes, "R. Iluna (3rd cent.) said, The name of Messiah is Branch, as in, 'Behold a man.'" Ib. After all this Kimchi says, "Some interpret it of king Messiah."

¹⁵ נֶחֱם as Ex. x. 23, "neither rose any from his place," נֶחֱם. ¹⁶ Jer. xxxiii. 15. This is the natural construction, 1) נֶחֱם being the common word for the shooting of plants, (Gen. ii. 5, xli. 6, 23, Is. xlv. 4, Ez. xvi. 6.) the name of "the branch," having preceded, is the idiomatic subject to נֶחֱם; 2) the impers. would have been plural, since the meaning would have been plural, they i. e. many, shall grow up, 3) it is unnatural to assume an impersonal, since a subject has been mentioned in the preceding clause to which it is united by 1; and 4) it is followed by a personal verb, with that same subject for its subject.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

13 Even he shall build the temple of the Lord; and he shall bear the glory, and

Isai. 22. 24.

the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and Jesus Himself said, ¹ Except a grain of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. Alone He grew up before God, as a tender plant², unknown of man, known to God. It is that still, Divine life at Nazareth, of which we see only that one bright flash in the temple, the deep saying, understood even by Joseph and Mary, and then, ³ He went down with them and came to Nazareth and was subject unto them.

And he shall build the temple of the Lord. The material temple was soon to be finished, and that by Zerubbabel, to whom this had been promised⁴, not by Joshua. It was then a new temple, to be built from the foundation, of which He Himself was to be the foundation⁵, as He said, ⁶ On this rock I will build My Church; and in Him all the building, fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple to the Lord. ⁸ He it is, Who built the house; for neither Solomon nor Zerubbabel nor Joshua son of Josedech could build a house worthy of the majesty of God. For ⁹ the most High, S. Stephen says, dwelleth not in temples made with hands, as saith the prophet; Heaven is My throne and earth is My footstool; what house will ye build Me, saith the Lord? For if they could have built a house for God, He would not have allowed His house to be burned and overthrown. What then is the house of God which Christ built? The Church, founded on faith in Him, dedicated by His Blood, stablished by the stayedness of Divine virtue, adorned with Divine and eternal riches, wherein the Lord ever dwelleth."

13. Even He, lit. *He Himself*¹⁰. The repetition shews that it is a great thing, which he affirms; and He, again emphatic, He, the same who shall build the temple of the Lord, He shall bear the glory. Great must be the glory, since it is affirmed of Him as of none besides, "He shall bear glory," "He should build the temple of the Lord," as none besides ever built it; He should bear glory, as none besides ever bare it, ¹¹ the glory as of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. This word glory is almost always used of the special glory of God¹², and then, although seldom, of the Majesty of those, on whom God confers majesty as His representatives, as Moses, or Joshua¹³, or *the glory of the kingdom given to Solomon*¹⁴. It is used also of Him, a likeness of Whom these vice-gerents of God bare, in a Psalm whose language belongs (as Jews too have seen,) to One more than man¹⁵, although also of glory given by God, either of grace or nature¹⁶. So in our Lord's great High Priest's prayer He says, ¹⁷ Father, glorify Thou Me with Thine own self with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was; and prays, that they also whom Thou hast given Me, be with Me, where I am; that they may behold My glory which Thou hast given Me. So S. Paul, applying the words of the eighth Psalm, says of our Lord, ¹⁸ We see Jesus, Who was made a little lower than the angels, crowned with glory and honour; and the angels and saints round the Throne shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne:

Before
CHRIST
cir. 519.

Ps. 110. 4. Heb. 3. 1.

say, ²⁰ Worthy is the Lamb which was slain to receive power and wisdom and strength and honour and glory and blessing, and those on earth answer, Blessing and honour and glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne and unto the Lamb for ever and ever. That glory Isaiah saw²¹; in His miracles He manifested forth His glory²², which resided in Him; in His Transfiguration, the three Apostles saw His glory²³, shining out from within Him; into this His glory²⁴, He told the disciples at Emmaus, the prophets said, that He was to enter, having first suffered what He suffered; in this His glory He is to sit, when He judges²⁵. And He shall sit and rule on His Throne. His rule shall be, not passing but abiding, not by human might, but in peaceful majesty, as God says, ²⁶ Yet have I set My king upon My holy hill of Zion, and again, Sit Thou on My Right Hand, until I make Thine enemies Thy footstool; and the angel said to Mary, The Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David, and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of His kingdom there shall be no end.

And He shall be a priest upon His Throne. He shall be at once king and priest, as it is said, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedec. When the Christ should reign, He should not cease to be our Priest. He, having all power given to Him in heaven and in earth, reigneth over His Church and His elect by His grace, and over the world by His power, yet ever liveth to make intercession for us. ²⁹ Not dwelling now on what is chiefest, that by Him were all things created, that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions or principalities or powers; all things were created by Him and for Him, and He is before all things, and by Him all things consist, how many crowns of glory belong to Him, One and the Same, God and Man, Christ Jesus! He then will bear glory and will sit upon His throne and shall be a priest on His throne. How just this is, it is easier to think than to express, that He should sit and rule all things, by Whom all things were made, and He should be a Priest for ever, by Whose Blood all things are reconciled. He shall rule then upon His throne, and He shall be a priest upon His throne, which cannot be said of any of the saints, because it is the right of none of them, to call the throne of his rule or of his priesthood his own, but of this Only Lord and Priest, Whose majesty and throne are one and the same with the Majesty of God, as He saith, ³¹ When the Son of Man shall come in His Majesty [Glory], then shall He sit upon the throne of His Majesty [Glory]. And what meaneth that re-duplication, and He shall rule on His Throne, but that One and the Same, of Whom all this is said, should be and is King and Priest. He Who is King shall rule on His Throne, because kingdom and priesthood shall meet in One Person, and One shall occupy the double throne of kingdom and priesthood." He Alone should be our King; He Alone our Saviour: He Alone the Object of our love, obedience and adoration.

glorified by God, Zech. x. 3; of kingly glory, Jer. xxii. 18, Dan. xi. 21; of the inward glory of man, as such, Dan. x. 8, Pr. v. 9, or even of the horse, as the creation of God, Job xxxix. 20 [all].

¹⁹ Heb. ii. 9. ²⁰ Rev. v. 12, 13. ²¹ S. John xii. 41. ²² Ib. ii. 11. ²³ S. Luke ix. 32. ²⁴ Ib. xxiv. 26; add 1 S. Pet. i. 11, 12. ²⁵ S. Matt. xix. 28, S. Luke ix. 26. ²⁶ Ps. ii. 6. ²⁷ Ib. cx. 1. ²⁸ S. Luke i. 32, 33. ²⁹ Rup. ³⁰ Col. i. 16, 17. ³¹ S. Matt. xxv. 31.

¹ S. John xii. 24. ² Is. liii. 2. ³ See S. Luke ii. 49-51. ⁴ iv. 10. ⁵ Is. xxviii. 16, 1 Cor. iii. 11, Eph. ii. 20, 21. ⁶ S. Matt. xvi. 18. ⁷ Eph. ii. 21. ⁸ Osor. ⁹ Acts vii. 48, 49. ¹⁰ עמף. ¹¹ S. John i. 14. ¹² עמף. ¹³ Ps. xvi. 27. ¹⁴ civ. 1, cxi. 3, Job xl. 10, of Christ, Ps. xlv. 4; ¹⁵ Ps. cxlv. 5; ¹⁶ alone, Job xxxvii. 22, Is. xxx. 30, 1 Chr. xxix. 11, Ps. viii. 2, cxlviii. 13, Hab. iii. 3. ¹⁷ Nu. xxvii. 20. ¹⁸ 1 Chr. xxix. 25. ¹⁹ Ps. xxi. 6. See in Schöttgen de Messia ad loc.

¹⁶ It is used of the inward glory given to regenerate Israel, Hos. xiv. 7. (6 Eng.); or as cir. 519. and the counsel of peace shall be between them both.

Before CHRIST

14 And the crowns shall be to Helem,

And the counsel of peace shall be between them both. The counsel of peace is not merely peace, as S. Jerome seems to interpret: "He is both king and priest, and shall sit both on the royal and sacerdotal throne, and there shall be peaceful counsel between both, so that neither should the royal eminence depress the dignity of the priesthood, nor the dignity of the priesthood, the royal eminency, but both should be consistent in the glory of the One Lord Jesus." For had this been all, the simple idiom, there shall be peace between them, would have been used here, as elsewhere¹. But counsel of peace, must, according to the like idioms², signify "a counsel devising or procuring peace" for some other than those who counsel thereon. We have the idiom itself, *counsellors of peace*³.

They twain might be said of things⁴: but things are naturally not said to counsel, so that the meaning should be, that the thrones of the priests and of the Branch should counsel. For the throne is in each case merely subordinate. It is not as we might say, "the See of Rome," or "of Constantinople," or "of Canterbury," meaning the successive Bishops. It is simply the material throne, on which He sits. Nor is any thing said of any throne of a priest, nor had a priest any throne. His office was to stand before the Lord⁵, his intercessorial office to offer gifts and sacrifices for sin. To offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins and then for the people's, was his special office and honour. There are then not two thrones. One sits on His Throne, as King and Priest. It seems only to remain, that the counsel of peace should be between Jesus and the Father; as S. Jerome says, "I read in the book of some, that this, there shall be a peaceful counsel between the two, is referred to the Father and the Son, because He came to do not His own will, but the Will of the Father, and the Father is in the Son, and the Son in the Father." In Christ all is perfect harmony. There is a counsel of peace between Him and the Father Whose temple He builds. The Will of the Father and the Son is one. Both had one Will of love towards us, the salvation of the world, bringing forth peace through our redemption. God the Father¹⁰ so loved the world, that He gave His Only-Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life; and God the Son¹¹ is our peace, Who hath made both one, that He might reconcile both unto God in one body by the Cross, and came and preached peace to them which were afar off and to them that were nigh. Others seem to me less naturally to interpret it of Christ in His two offices. "There shall be the counsel of peace between them, the ruler and the priest, not that Christ is cir. 519. and to Tobijah, and to Jedaiah, and to Hen the son of Zephaniah, for a memorial in the temple of the Lord.

Before CHRIST

divided, but that those two principedoms, which were hitherto divided, (the priest and the king being different persons) should be united in the One Christ. Between these two principedoms, being inseparably joined in one, shall be the counsel of peace, because through that union we have peace; and through Him¹³ it pleased the Father to reconcile all things unto Himself, and that all things should be brought to peace through the Blood of His cross, whether things in earth or things in heaven."

14. And the crowns shall be to Helem. There is no ground apparent to us, why the name Helem appears instead of *Holdai*¹⁴, or Hen for Josiah: yet the same person must have been called both Hen and Josiah, since the father's name is the same in both places. They cannot both be intended as explanations of the former names, since Helem stands insulated in Hebrew, its meaning conjectural¹⁵. Perhaps then they were the own names of the individuals, and the names compounded with the name of God, honourable names which they had taken.

For a memorial in the temple of the Lord. They brought a passing gift, but it should be for a lasting memorial in their behalf. It is a renewal of the well-known term of the law¹⁶. The two stones, engraven with the names of the children of Israel, upon the shoulders of the Ephod, were to the end, that Aaron should bear their names before the Lord upon his two shoulders for a memorial¹⁷; continually, it is added of the breastplate with its twelve precious stones¹⁸; the atonement money of the children of Israel was to be appointed for the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, that it may be a memorial for the children of Israel before the Lord, to make atonement for their souls¹⁹; to make an atonement for their souls before the Lord. They were to blow with the trumpets over their burnt-offerings, and over the sacrifice of their peace-offerings, that they may be to you for a memorial before your God²⁰. When Midian had been smitten before Israel, and not one of Israel had been slain, they brought all the gold which had accrued to them, and Moses and Eleazar took the gold, and brought it into the tabernacle, a memorial for the children of Israel before the Lord²¹. So the angel said to Cornelius, thy prayers and thy alms are come up for a memorial before God. "This is what we look for, that to all the saints and friends of God, whom these signify, those crowns which they made of their gold and silver for the Lord Jesus, shall be an everlasting memorial in that heavenly temple of the Lord." The tradition of the Jews, that this was literally observed²², can hardly be without foundation. "These their offerings shall be for grace to those who ¹ Jud. iv. 17, 1 Sam. vii. 14, 1 Kgs v. 16 (12 Eng.).

² The verbal noun retaining the active force of the verb, as הַיְיָנוּתָם Ez. xi. 2. as in the verb הַיְיָנוּתָם Hab. ii. 10; הָיָה נָחָם Is. xxxii. 7; הָיָה נִיבֹחַת Is. 8.

³ Pr. xii. 20. ⁴ לְשׁוֹנָם is used of things, throughout Nu. vii. of the offerings of the princes of the 12 tribes; also Ex. xxvi. 24, xxxvi. 29, De. xxiii. 19, Pr. xx. 10, xxvii. 3, Eccl. xi. 6: but not with any verb implying action.

⁵ See ah. p. 522, n. 41.

⁶ S. John v. 30, vi. 38.

⁷ Eph. ii. 14, 16, 17.

⁸ Heb. v. 1, ix. 9.

⁹ Ib. xiv. 10.

¹⁰ Rup.

¹¹ Ib. vii. 27.

¹² Ib. iii. 16.

¹³ Col. i. 19, 20.

¹⁴ All MSS. and the Versions (except the Syr. which repeats here the names of v. 10) have or imply the names Helem and Hen. Aq. and Jon. have the names Helem here; Symm. translated it as Holem, τῶν ἀρχόντων ἐνόντων. The LXX render the names common to both verses by the same words, τῶν ἀρχόντων αὐτῶν, τῶν ἐπεμενέων αὐτῶν but use different words for Holdai and Helem; for Holdai (v. 10) ἀρχόντων; for Helem, τοῖς ἐπομένους, as if יְחִיאֵל. (The Prop. Name יְחִיאֵל is, in Gen. xlvii. 14, the third son of Zuhulon, the patronymic יְחִיאֵל, Nu. xxvi. 26, and the adj. יְחִיאֵל Lam. iii. 26). The Jews in S. Jerome's time identified the three with Ananias Azarias and Misael, and Hen, "grace" with Daniel.

¹⁵ In Syr. the central meaning of חֵלֶם seems to be "crept," hence used of a "cancer" or a "mole." Neither חֵלֶם nor חֵלֶם signify "strong." חֵלֶם is rather used of "the world" as "fleeting." חֵלֶם Arab. is perhaps originally "lingered," hence was "slow in becoming grey," "lingered," abode in a place ever, "everlastingly," in heaven or hell. It is not used of strength. חֵלֶם is used of "good condition" of an animal, Job xxxix. 4; (as in Arab.); in Hif. is "restored one to health" (Is. xxxviii. 16), as Syr. in Ethp., In Syr. חֵלֶם is used of recovered health, S. Mark v. 34, S. John v. 11, Acts iv. 10; as opposed to sickness, S. Mark ii. 17; or sound healthy words, S. John vi. 3, 2 Tim. i. 11. In Arab. חֵלֶם conj. i. is "dreamt" ii. "was kind, forbearing," v. "became fat" (of animals). Other senses are derived from dreaming.

¹⁶ זָכַרְןָּ 17 Ex. xxviii. 12, 22, xxxix. 7.

¹⁸ Nu. x. 10.

¹⁹ Ib. xxviii. 20.

²⁰ Ib. xxxi. 50, 54.

²¹ Acts x. 4, 31.

²² "The crowns were hung in windows in the height of the temple," as we learn from the tract Middot. a.f. 36. Rashi ad loc.

²³ S. Cyr.

Before CHRIST
cir. 519.

Isai. 57. 19.
& 60. 10.
Eph. 2. 13, 19.
ch. 2. 9.
& 4. 9.

15 And ¹they that are far off shall come and build in the temple of the Lord, and ye shall know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto you. And this shall come to pass, if ye will diligently obey the voice of the Lord your God.

CHAPTER VII.

I The captives enquire of fasting. 4 Zechariah dedicated them and an occasion of doxology. For the piety of princes becomes to the rest a path to the love of God. But when Christ is crowned by us, then shall also the multitude of the Gentiles haste to the knowledge of Him."

15. And they who are far off shall come. They who came from Babylon with offerings to God, became types of the Gentiles, of whom the Apostle says, ¹Now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off have become nigh through the blood of Christ; and, ²He came and preached peace to you which were far off and to them that were nigh; and ³the promise is to you and to your children, and to all that are far off, as many as the Lord our God shall call.

And build in, or upon, the temple of the Lord⁴, not "build it" for it was to be built by the Branch, but build on, labour on, it. It was a building, which should continually be enlarged; of which S. Paul says, ⁵I, as a wise master-builder, according to the grace given unto me, laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon; let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. ⁶"What shall they build? Themselves, compacting themselves with the saints, and joining together in faith to oneness with those of Israel, Jesus Christ Himself being the head corner-stone and uniting together in harmony through Himself, what was of old divided. For He united ⁷the two peoples into one new man, making peace, and reconciling in His own Body all things unto the Father, which being accomplished, we shall own the truth of the holy prophets, and know clearly that it was God Who spake in them and declared to us beforehand the mystery of Christ."

And this shall be; not as though the coming of Christ depended upon their faithfulness, but their share in it. Ye shall know (he had said) that the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto you; but whether this knowledge should reach to individuals, depends upon their obedience and their willingness to know; it shall be, ⁸if ye will diligently obey the voice of the Lord your God. For none of the wicked, Daniel says⁹, shall understand; and Hosea, ¹⁰Who is wise, and he shall understand these things? prudent, and he shall know them? For the ways of the Lord are right, and the just shall walk in them and the transgressors shall stumble at them; and the wise man, ¹¹he that keepeth the law of the Lord getteth the understanding thereof. So our Lord said, ¹²If any man reproveth their fasting. 8 Sin the cause of their captivity.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

518.

AND it came to pass in the fourth year of king Darius, that the word of the Lord came unto Zechariah in the fourth day of the ninth month, even in Chisleu;

2 When they had sent unto the house of God Sherezzer and Regem-melech, and will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God or whether I speak of Myself; ¹³He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not because ye are not of God: ¹⁴Every one that is of the truth heareth My voice. ¹⁵Because he had said, And ye shall know that the Lord hath sent me unto you, he warns them, that the fruit of that coming will reach to those only, who should hear God and with ardent mind join themselves to His name. For as many as believed in Him were made sons of God; but the rest were cast into outer darkness. But they receive Christ, who hear His voice and do not refuse His rule. For He was made the cause of eternal salvation to all who obey Him."

VII. 1. In the fourth year of Darius. Two years after the series of visions, shewn to him, and two years before the completion of the temple. Chisleu being December, it was the end of B.C. 518.

2. When they had sent unto the house of God. Rather, And Bethel sent; i.e. the inhabitants of Bethel sent. The house of God is nowhere in Holy Scripture called Bethel. Bethel is always the name of the place¹⁰. The house of God is designated by historians, Psalmists, prophets, by the name, Beth-elohim, more commonly Beth-Ha-elohim, the God; or of the Lord, יהוה¹⁷. Zechariah and Haggai use these names. It is not likely that the name, Beth-el, should have first been given to the house of God, when it had been desecrated by the idolatries of Jeroboam. Bethel also is, in the Hebrew order of the words, naturally the subject¹⁸. Nor is there any reason why they should have sent to Bethel, since they sought an answer from God. For it would be forced to say that they sent to Bethel, in order that those at Bethel should send to Jerusalem; which is not said. It were unnatural also that the name of the sender should not have been mentioned, when the names of persons inferior, because sent, are recorded¹⁹. Bethel, in Nehemiah's time²⁰, was one of the chief places of Benjamin. Two hundred twenty and three of the men of Bethel and Ai²¹ had returned with Zerubbabel. The answer being to the people of the land, such were doubtless the enquirers, not those still in Babylon. The answer shews that the question was not religious, though put as matter of religion. It is remarkable that, whereas in the case of those who brought presents from Babylon, the names express some in all 5; and בית האלוהים in Eccl. iv. 17; in Chronicles, 33 times (intermingled with בית); Daniel i. 2; Ezra, 7 times; Nehemiah, 8 times; in all 50.

¹⁶ So Ibn Ezra, although regarding Bethel as the name of a man, who sent the others. Rashi and S. Jerome's Hebrew instructors made Sharezzer and Regemmelech the senders. Rashi says that they sent to their kinsmen in Bethel, that these should come to entreat the face of God at Jerusalem. S. Jerome's teachers said more naturally, that "Sharezzer and Regemmelech sent to the house of God;" only "Bethel" is not so used, and the theory that they were "Persian officers of Darius fearing God," is inconsistent with the question as to a Jewish political fast of long standing. The interposition of the place whither they were sent, between the verb and the subject, without any mark that it is not the subject, would be unnatural. The E. V. follows Kimchi, taking ישלח as impersonal. But here it is a formal message from some definite person or persons. In Gen. xlviii. 1, ויאמר ליעקב is altogether like our "one told Jacob." In Esth. ix. 30, the subject is probably Mordecai, mentioned v. 29.

¹⁹ Abarbanel notices this difficulty.

²⁰ Neh. xi. 31.

²¹ Ezr. ii. 28.

¹ Eph. ii. 13.

² Ib. 17.

³ Acts ii. 39.

⁴ Neh. iv. 4, 11 [10, 17 Eng.]

⁵ 1 Cor. iii. 10.

⁶ S. Cyr.

⁷ Eph. ii. 15, 16.

⁸ So Marck.

⁹ Dan. xii. 10.

¹⁰ Hosea xiv. 9. [10 Heb.] see ab. pp. 92, 93.

¹¹ Eccles. xxi. 11.

¹² S. John vii. 17.

¹³ Ib. viii. 47.

¹⁴ Ib. xviii. 37.

¹⁵ Osor.

¹⁶ The LXX, Jon., Syr. render in the accusative, to Bethel. The Vulg. alone has "ad domum Dei."

¹⁷ Although בית is used alike of the "tent" and the "house," it is used but little of the "house of God" before Solomon's temple; בית Ex. xxxiii. 19, xxxiv. 26, Deut. xxxiii. 18, Jos. vi. 24, Jud. xix. 18, 1 Sam. i. 7, 24, iii. 15, 2 Sam. xii. 20; בית האלוהים Jud. xviii. 31. Subsequently בית occurs in the books of Kings, 73 times; in the Chronicles, 92; in the Psalms, 7; in Isaiah, 6; in Jeremiah, 32; in Lam., 1; Ezek., 6; Hosea, 2; Joel, 3; Micah, 1; Haggai, 2; Zechariah, 5; Ezra, 7; in all 246; בית אלוהים occurs Gen. xxviii. 17, 22; in two of David's Psalms (Ps. lii. 10, lv. 15); once in the Chronicles, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 9;

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

† Heb. to intreat the face of the Lord;
1 Sam. 13. 12.
ch. 8. 21.
Deut. 17.
9, 10, 11.
& 33. 19.
Mal. 2. 7.
Jer. 52. 12.
ch. 8. 19.

their men, † to pray before the Lord, 3 And to ^a speak unto the priests which were in the house of the Lord of hosts, and to the prophets, saying, Should I weep in ^b the fifth month, separating myself, as I have done these so many years?
4 ¶ Then came the word of the Lord of hosts unto me, saying, relation to God, these names are singularly, the one of a parricide son of Sennacherib¹, and of one, chief among the King of Babylon's princes²; the other probably a secular name, "the king's friend³."

"⁴ I do not see why under the name of Bethel, the city so called is not understood. For since Jerusalem was not yet fortified, the Jews chose them sites in various places, where they should be less harassed. All hatred was concentrated on that city, which the neighbours wished not to be restored to its former greatness. Other cities they did not so molest. Bethel then, i. e. the assembly of the city, sent messengers to Jerusalem to offer sacrifices to God and consult the wise there."

2. To entreat the face of the Lord. They wished, it seems, (so to speak) to ingratiate themselves with God with an account of their past self-humiliation, on the day when the house of God was burned by Nebuchadnezzar. In regard to God, the word is always used of entreating Him by earnest prayer⁵.

3. Should I weep in the fifth month, separating myself? In the fifth month, from the seventh to the tenth day, Jerusalem was in flames, fired by Nebuchadnezzar. ⁶ He burnt the house of the Lord, and the king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem and every great man's house he burnt with fire.

"⁷ Now since it is said that the temple is builded and we see that no cause of sorrow remaineth, answer, we pray, are we to do this or to change our sorrow into joy?"

Separating myself. This seems to be added, to intensify the fast which they had kept. The Nazarite was bound to ⁸ separate himself from wine and strong drink, and so, they severed themselves to the Lord, and consecrated themselves to Him⁹. These had severed themselves from food, from things pleasant, from pleasure, from sin, it may be, for the day, but not abidingly: they had not given themselves to God.

As I have done these so many years, lit. how many¹⁰. As if, although they knew that they were seventy years, they could not count them.

5. Speak unto all the people of the land. They of Bethel had spoken as one man, as Edom said to Israel, ¹¹ Thou shalt

¹ Is. xxxvii. 38, 2 Kgs xix. 37.

² Nergal-Shar-ezer, "Nergal preserve the prince," Jer. xxxix. 3, 13. νεργιλισαδρ. The omission of the name of the idol left it less openly idolatrous, but retained the prayer originally idolatrous.

³ נָקִי occurs as a proper name, 1 Chr. ii. 47. The Kamoos and Fasee say that the Arab. naqi is "friend," [see Lane] and, though this meaning is wholly insulated from the rest of the root, their authority is, of course, decisive. ⁴ Osor.

⁵ The explanation of the idiom, stroked the face of, in regard to which critics have so descanted about anthropomorphisms, is altogether imaginary. The phrase occurs, in all, 13 times in regard to God; three of these are in Zechariah, here, and viii. 21, 22; and besides Ex. xxxiii. 11, 1 Sam. xiii. 12, 1 Kgs xiii. 6, (bis) 2 Kgs xiii. 4, Jer. xxvi. 19, Dan. ix. 13, Ps. cxix. 58, 2 Chr. xxxiii. 12, Mal. i. 9, and all the simplest prose. Of man it occurs only 3 times Ps. xlv. 13, Pr. xix. 6, Job xi. 19. In no dialect is there any trace of the meaning lavis or palpo. The Arab naqi is, any how, used of hard friction, as to bruising collyrium, rubbing off hair from skin [tanning], striking with sword, &c. naqi (ult. i) is, "sweet;" naqi is "adorned with jewels."

⁶ 2 Kgs xxv. 9, Jer. lii. 13. Jeremiah mentions the tenth day; the book of Kings, the seventh. ⁷ S. Jer.

5 Speak unto all the people of the land, and to the priests, saying, When ye ^c fasted and mourned in the fifth ^d and seventh ^e month ^e even those seventy years, did ye at ^e all fast ^f unto me, even to me?

6 And when ye did eat, and when ye did drink, || did not ye eat for yourselves, and || drink for yourselves?

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.
Isai. 58. 5.
Jer. 41. 1.
ch. 8. 19.
ch. 1. 12.
See Rom.
14. 6.

Or, be not ye they that &c.

not pass by me; and ¹² the men of Israel said to the Hivite; Perhaps thou dwellest in the midst of me, and how shall I make a league with thee? God gives the answer not to them only, but to all like-minded with them, all the people of the land, the whole population (in our language); as Jeremiah says, ¹³ ye and your fathers, your kings and your princes and all the people of the land, and, ¹⁴ the scribe who mustered the people of the land.

When ye fasted and that, mourning. It was no mere abstinence from food (severe as the Jewish fasts were, one unbroken abstinence from evening to evening) but with real mourning, the word being used only of mourning for the dead¹⁵, or, in a few instances¹⁶, for a very great public calamity; probably with beating on the breast.

In the seventh month. The murder of Gedaliah, whom the king of Babylon made governor of the land, completed the calamities of Jerusalem, in the voluntary, but prohibited exile to Egypt, for fear lest the murder should be avenged on them¹⁷.

Did ye at all fast unto Me, Me¹⁸? God emphatically rejects such fasting as their's had been, as something, unutterably alien from Him, to Me, Me¹⁹! Yet the fasting and mourning had been real, but irreligious, like remorse for ill-deeds, which has self only for its ground. He prepares the way for His answer by correcting the error of the question. "⁴ Ye fasted to yourselves, not to Me. For ye mourned your sorrows, not your misdeeds; and your public fast was undertaken, not for My glory, but out of feeling for your own grief. But nothing can be pleasing to God, which is not referred to His glory. But those things alone can be referred to His glory, which are done with righteousness and devotion."

6. And when ye eat and when ye drink, is it not ye who eat and ye who drink? Conversely now that, after your return, ye feast for joy, this is no religious act; ye have all the good of it, there is no thanksgiving to God. Contrary to the Apostle's saying, ²⁰ Whether ye eat or drink, or whatever ye do, do all to the glory of God. "²¹ He cateth and drinketh to himself, who receiveth the nourishments of the body, which are the common gifts of the Creator, without ⁸ Nu. vi. 3.

⁹ Ib. 5. See above on Am. ii. 11. p. 175.

¹⁰ נָקִי is used in exclamation, not interrogatively, here, Ps. lxxviii. 40, Job xxi. 17.

¹¹ Nu. xx. 18.

¹² Josh. ix. 7.

¹³ Jer. xlv. 21.

¹⁴ Ib. lii. 25.

¹⁵ Gen. xxiii. 2, 1. 10, 1 Sam. xxv. 1, xxviii. 3, 2 Sam. i. 12, iii. 31, xi. 26, 1 Kgs xiii. 29, 30, xiv. 13, 18, Eccl. xii. 5, Jer. xvi. 4, 5, 6, xxii. 18, [bis], xxx. 33, xxxiv. 5, Ezek. xxiv. 16, 23, Zech. xii. 10, 12.

¹⁶ Is. xxxiii. 12, Jo. i. 13, Mic. i. 8, Jer. iv. 8, xlix. 3. In Eccl. iii. 4, it is "mourning" as opposed to דָּרַךְ, "bounding" for joy [all]. The noun סִפְסַף is in like way used of "mourning" for the dead, Gen. l. 10, Jer. vi. 26, Nu. v. 16, Zech. xii. 10, 11, 12; for the destruction of a people or place, Jer. xlviii. 38, Ez. xxvii. 34, Mi. i. 8, 11; for imminent destruction, Am. v. 17, Esth. iv. 3; or great public calamity, Jo. ii. 12, Is. xvii. 12. In Ps. xxx. 12, it stands contrasted with a great outward expression of joy, dancing, כִּסְלָה [all].

¹⁷ Jer. xli-xliii. ¹⁸ צַמְצִי. The affix is almost a dative, as in Is. xlv. 21, lxx. 5, Job xxxi. 18; and Ch. Dan. v. 6. צַמְצִי, for which, צַמְצִי, occurs ver. 9.

¹⁹ The pronoun repeated after the affix, as in בִּי אֵי 1 Sam. xxv. 24; פָּרִיכֶם אָנֹכִי Nu. xiv. 32, and with אֵי, בְּרִכְתִּי נֹכַח אֵי Gen. xxvii. 38; 2 Sam. xvii. 5, 1 Kgs xxi. 19, Pr. xxxiii. 15, Jer. xxv. 14, xxvii. 7.

²⁰ 1 Cor. x. 31.

²¹ S. Greg. in Evang. Hom. 16, n. 6. Opp. i. 1495.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

7 || Should ye not hear the words which the LORD hath cried † by the former prophets, when Jerusalem was inhabited and in prosperity, and the cities thereof round about her, when men inhabited the south and the plain?

8 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah, saying,

9 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, † Execute true judgment, and shew mercy and compassions every man the needy. And any one fasts to himself, if he doth not give to the poor what for the time he withdraweth from himself, but keepeth it to be thereafter offered to his appetite. Hence it is said by Joel, sanctify a fast. For to 'sanctify a fast' is to shew an abstinence worthy of God through other good deeds. Let anger cease, quarrels be bushed. For in vain is the flesh worn, if the mind is not refrained from evil pleasures, since the Lord says by the Prophet, Behold, in the day of your fast ye find pleasure. Behold, ye fast for strife and debate &c."

7. Should ye not hear the words, or, Know ye not the words? The verb is presupposed in the emphatic question, as in, Shall I, the blood of these men? David omits the word "drink" for abhorrence.

By the former prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah³, when Jerusalem was dwelling abidingly⁴, at ease, as the whole world then was, except herself, and the south and the low-country, both belonging to Judah, were inhabited. The restoration then was still very incomplete, since he contrasts their then condition with the present, as inhabited or no. The mountain, the south, and the low country, known still by its name of Sephela to Greeks⁵, made up the territory of Judah⁶.

8. Instead of quoting the former prophets, Zechariah gives the substance of their exhortations, as renewed to himself.

9. Thus spake the Lord, i. e. through the former prophets, for he goes on to speak of their rejection in the past. Execute true judgement. He retains the words of Ezekiel⁷. The injunction itself runs throughout the prophets⁸. Shew mercy, i. e. tender love, to all; compassion, to the unhappy: Omit no act of love, God so loves the loving. "Like S. Paul to the Romans¹⁰, he names only the duties to the neighbour, but understands what relates to God. For the love of our neighbour presupposes the love of God, from which it springs." "After strictness of justice, let mercy to all follow, and specially to brethren, of the same blood and of one faith. Brother and neighbour we ought to account the whole human race, since we are all born of one parent, or those who are of the household of faith, according to the parable of the Gospel¹², which willeth us to understand by neighbour, not our kin, but all men."

10. And oppress not. He had commanded positive acts of love; he now forbids every sort of unlove. He that to his brother:

10 And ¹oppress not the widow, nor the fatherless, the stranger, nor the poor; ^kand let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your heart.

11 But they refused to hearken, and ^l† pulled away the shoulder, and ^{†m}stopped their ears, that they should not hear.

12 Yea they made their ⁿhearts as an adamant stone, ^olest they should hear the law, and the words which the LORD of hosts ⁿ Ezek. 11. 19. & 36. 26.

^o Neh. 9. 29, 30.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

¹ Ex. 22. 21, 22.
² Deut. 24. 17.
³ Isai. 1. 17.
⁴ Jer. 5. 28.
⁵ Ps. 36. 4.
⁶ Mic. 2. 1.
⁷ ch. 8. 17.

¹ Neh. 9. 29.
² Jer. 7. 24.
³ Hos. 4. 16.
⁴ Heb.

⁵ they gave a backsliding
shoulder.
⁶ Heb. made heavy.
⁷ Acts 7. 57.

oppresseth the poor, Solomon had said¹³, reproacheth his Maker. The widow, the orphan, the stranger, the afflicted, are, throughout the law, the special objects of God's care. This was the condition which God made by Jeremiah¹⁴; If ye thoroughly amend your ways and your doings, if ye thoroughly execute judgement between a man and his neighbour; if ye oppress not the stranger the fatherless and the widow, and shed not innocent blood in this place, neither walk after other gods to your hurt, then will I cause you to dwell in this place. It was on the breach of the covenant to set their brethren free in the year of release, that God said; ¹⁵ I proclaim a liberty for you to the sword, to the pestilence and to the famine, and I will make you to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth.

And let none of you imagine, i. e. devise¹⁶, as, by Micah, God retorted the evil upon them. They¹⁷ devised evil on their beds; therefore, behold, against this family do I devise an evil, from which ye shall not remove your necks.

11. But they gave a backsliding shoulder, like a restive animal, which would not endure the yoke, dull and stupid as the beasts: as Hosea says, ¹⁸ Israel slideth back like a backsliding heifer. Nehemiah confesses the same; ¹⁹ they gave a backsliding shoulder and hardened their neck and would not hear.

And made heavy their ears, fulfilling in themselves what God foretold to Isaiah would be the result of his preaching, *make their ears heavy*²⁰. The heart, which will not hearken, becomes duller by the outward hearing, as S. Paul says, ²¹ The earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing from God; but that which beareth thorns and briars is rejected.

12. Harder than adamant. The stone, whatever it be, was hard enough to cut ineffaceable characters²²: it was harder than flint²³. It would cut rocks; it could not be graven itself, or receive the characters of God.

This is the last sin, obduracy, persevering impenitence, which²⁴ resisted the Holy Ghost, and ²⁵ did despite to the Spirit of grace. Not through infirmity, but of set purpose, they hardened themselves, lest²⁶ they should convert and be healed. They feared to trust themselves to God's word, lest He should convert them by it.

Lest they should hear the law and the words which the Lord God sent by His Spirit by the hand of the former prophets.

³ Is. lviii. 3, 4. ² 2 Sam. xxiii. 17.
⁴ Is. lviii. 4, Jer. xiv. 12. Since Isaiah's is the chief passage and Jeremiah's scarcely more than allusive, Zechariah, just after the captivity, knew that the prophecy Is. lviii. was Isaiah's, not by a prophet after the captivity.

⁵ ⁴ שפלה as ab. i. 11, שפלה וספלה; the state of ease is conveyed by the הנה with the act. partic. ⁶ 1 Macc. xii. 38. "It is still called Sephela." Eus. Onom.

⁷ Josh. x. 40, Jud. i. 9, Jer. xvii. 26, xxxii. 44, xxxiii. 13.
⁸ שפלה occurs besides in Ezek. xviii. 8, only. In Deut. xvi. 18, occurs שפלה.

⁹ As Is. i. 17, 23, lviii. 6, 7, Jer. vii. 5, Ezek. xviii. 8, Hos. xii. 6 &c. ¹⁰ Rom. xiii. 9. ¹¹ S. Jer. ¹² S. Luke x. 30 sqq.
¹³ Prov. xxiv. 31. ¹⁴ Jer. vii. 5-7. ¹⁵ Ib. xxxiv. 17. ¹⁶ חשב
¹⁷ Mic. ii. 1, 3. ¹⁸ Hos. iv. 16. ¹⁹ Neh. ix. 29.
²⁰ The same words; ואתה הכביר Is. vi. 5, ואתה הכביר Zechariah. ²¹ Heb. vi. 7, 8.
²² Jer. xvii. 1. "The sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron, with the point of a diamond." E. V. ²³ Ezek. iii. 9, "As an adamant harder than flint."
²⁴ Acts vii. 51. ²⁵ Heb. x. 29. ²⁶ Is. vi. 10.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

† Heb. by the hand of.
2 Chr. 36. 16.
Dan. 9. 11.
Prov. 1.
21—23.
Isa. 1. 15.
Jer. 11. 11.
& 14. 12.
Mic. 3. 4.
Deut. 4. 27.
& 28. 64.
Ezek. 36. 19.
ch. 2. 6.
Deut. 28. 33.
Lev. 26. 22.

hath sent in his spirit † by the former prophets: † therefore came a great wrath from the LORD of hosts.

13 Therefore it is come to pass, that as he cried, and they would not hear; so † they cried, and I would not hear, saith the LORD of hosts:

14 But † I scattered them with a whirlwind among all the nations † whom they knew not. Thus † the land was desolate after them, that no man passed through nor returned: for they laid † the † pleasant land desolate.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.
† Dan. 8. 9.
† Heb. land of desire.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The restoration of Jerusalem. 9 They are encouraged to the building by God's favour to them. 16 Good works are required of them. 18 Joy and enlargement are promised.

A GAIN the word of the LORD of hosts came to me, saying,

The Holy Ghost was the chief agent; by His Spirit; the inspired prophets were His instruments; by the hand of. Nehemiah confesses the same to God: Thou didst protest to them by Thy Spirit by the hand of Thy prophets. Moses was one of the greatest prophets. The law then may be included, either as delivered by Moses, or as being continually enforced by all the prophets. Observe the gradations. 1) The words of God are not heard. 2) The restive shoulder is shewn; men turn away, when God, by the inner motions of His Spirit or by lesser chastisements, would bring them to the yoke of obedience. “They would not bear the burden of the law, whereas they willingly bore that most heavy weight of their sins.” 3) Obduracy. “Their adamant heart could be softened neither by promises nor threats.” Therefore nothing remained but the great wrath, which they had treasured to themselves against the day of wrath. And so Zechariah returns to that, wherewith his message and visions of future mercy began, the great wrath which fell upon their fathers³.

“I sought not,” He says, “for your tears; I enjoined not bitterness of sorrow; but what, had they been done, the calamity, for which those tears were meet, had never befallen you. What was it which I admonished you formerly by the former prophets to recall you from sin? What I bid you by Zechariah now. This I preach, admonish, testify, inculcate upon you.”

13. And it came to pass, i. e. this which God had said, As He cried and they heard not, so shall they cry and I will not hear, saith the Lord of hosts. God had often said this. “It shall be too late to cry for mercy, when it is the time of justice.” So Wisdom had said by Solomon; then, i. e. when distress and anguish cometh upon them, they shall call upon Me, but I will not answer; they shall seek Me early, and they shall not find Me. So by Isaiah, When ye spread forth your hands, I will hide Mine eyes from you; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear; your hands are full of bloods. So by Hosea⁶, by Micah⁷, by Jeremiah⁸. It was one message which was verified in every day of chastisement, “there will be a ‘too late;’” not a final “too late;” until the end of ends comes, but a “too late” for them, a “too late” to avert that particular judgement of God, whereby the sinner’s earthly trial and future were changed permanently⁹.

14. *But I scattered them, rather, And I will scatter them*¹⁰. The saying continues what God had said that He had said, and which had come to pass. Among all nations whom they knew not. So God had repeatedly said by Jeremiah, I will cast you out of this land into a land that ye know not, ye nor your fathers; where I will not shew you favour. This was the aggravation of the original woe in the law: The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand, a nation of fierce countenance. There was no mitigation of suffering, when the common bond between man and man, mutual speech, was wanting.

That no man passed through nor returned, lit. from passer through and from returner; as in the prophecy of Alexander’s march and return, because of him that passeth by and of him that returneth; and of Scir God saith, *I will cut off from him, passer-through and returner*¹⁵. As we say, there shall be no traffic more through her.

*And they made the pleasant land*¹⁶ desolate. They were the doers of what they by their sins caused, by bringing down the judgements of God. Heretofore the land which God had given them, had been in our language “the envy” of all who knew it; now they had made it into a desolation, one wide waste¹⁷.

“What is said in the beginning of the chapter against Jews who abstained indiscreetly, applies mystically to all, not inward, but rude Christians, who not being diligent enough but rather negligent about acts of piety and inward prayer and reformation of the powers of the soul, account highly of bodily exercises and outward observances, and use no slight scrupulosity as to things of less moment, and do not attend to the chief things, charity, humility, patience, meekness. On these it must be inculcated, that if they wish their fasts and other outward exercises to please God, they must judge true judgement, and be compassionate, kind, liberal to their neighbours, keep their mind ever steadfast in God, cast away wholly all hardness of heart, and be soft and open to receive within them the word of God. Otherwise their land will be desolate, i. e. deprived of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, and they scattered amid various vices.” “That which was formerly a pleasant land, and the hospice of the Trinity, is turned into a desert and dwelling-place of dragons.”

VIII. “After the Lord had, in the preceding chapter, manifoldly rebuked the Jewish people, He now comforts it with renewed promises, as a good physician, who after a bitter draught employs sweet and soothing remedies; as Zech. p. 505. n. d.

¹¹ Jer. xvi. 13; add xv. 14, xvii. 4.

¹² Deut. xxviii. 49, 59.

¹³ ix. 8. ¹⁴ Ezek. xxxv. 7. ¹⁵ The form implies that the same did, or did not, pass and return, whence he came. Ezek. xxxii. 27.

¹⁶ This idiom occurs Ps. cvi. 24, Jer. iii. 19. On חורבן see ab. on Hagg. ii. 7. p. 495.

¹⁷ This idiom חורבן לשון or שון לשון had been used by Jo. i. 7, Is. xiii. 9, Jer. ii. 15, iv. 7, xviii. 16, xix. 8, xxv. 9, 1. 3, li. 29. ¹⁸ Dion. ¹⁹ S. Jer.

¹ Neh. ix. 30.

² Osor.

³ i. 7. קָנָה; here גָּדַל קָנָה

⁴ Prov. i. 27, 28.

⁵ Is. i. 15.

⁶ Hos. v. 6. see ab. pp. 34. 35.

⁷ iii. 4. see ab. pp. 311, 312.

⁸ Jer. xi. 14, xiv. 12.

⁹ See Pusey’s Parochial Sermons, Vol. I. Sermon 12. “Irreversible chastisements.”

¹⁰ The form חָקַקְתָּם for חָקַקְתָּם is remarkable chiefly, if the punctuation comes, (as is assumed) from Zechariah’s time, for the care with which the vowel pronunciation has been preserved. It has no exact parallel. The conjugation recurs with the ב, Job xxvii. 21. See Intro. to

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.
a Nah. 1. 2.
ch. 1. 14.

2 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^aI was jealous for Zion with great jealousy, and I was jealous for her with great fury.

b ch. 1. 16.

3 Thus saith the LORD; ^bI am returned unto Zion, and ^cwill dwell in the midst of

c ch. 2. 10.

that most loving Samaritan poured in wine and oil." The chapter falls into two portions, each marked by the words, *The Word of the Lord of hosts came*¹, or came unto me, the first² declaring the reversal of the former judgements, and the complete, though conditional, restoration of God's favour; the 2nd³ containing the answer to the original question as to those fasts, in the declaration of the joy and the spread of the Gospel. The first portion has, again, a sevenfold, the second, a threefold subordinate division; marked by the beginning, Thus saith the Lord of hosts.

2. Thus saith the Lord of hosts. "4 At each word and sentence, in which good things, for their greatness, almost incredible are promised, the prophet premises, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, as if he would say, Think not that what I pledge you are my own, and refuse me not credence as man. What I unfold are the promises of God."

I was jealous, lit. *I have been and am jealous for*⁵. He repeats in words slightly varied, but in the same rhythm, the declaration of His tender love wherewith He opened the series of visions, thereby assuring beforehand that this was, like that, an answer of peace. The form of words shews, that this was a jealousy for, not with her; yet it was one and the same strong, yea infinite love, whereby God, as He says, ⁶*clave unto their fathers to love them and chose their seed after them out of all nations*. His jealousy of their sins was part of that love, whereby, ⁷*without disturbance of passion or of tranquillity, He inflicted rigorous punishment, as a man fearfully reproveth a wife who sins*. They are two different forms of love according to two needs. "8 The jealousy⁹ of God is good, to love men and hate the sins of men. Contrariwise the jealousy of the devil is evil, to hate men and love the sins of men." "10 Since God's anger had its origin in the vehemence of His love (for this sort of jealousy arises from the greatness of love), there was hope that the anger might readily be appeased towards her."

3. I am returned. "7 Without change in Myself, I am turned to that people from the effect of justice to the sweetness of mercy, and I will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem, in the temple and the people, indwelling the hearts of the good by charity and grace. Christ also, Very God and Very Man, visibly conversed and was seen in Zion." "10 When He says, 'I am turned,' He shews that she was turned too. He had said, Turn unto Me and I will turn unto you; otherwise she would not have been received into favour by Him. As the fruit of this conversion, He promises her His presence, the ornaments of truth, the hope of security, and adorns her with glorious titles."

God had symbolised to Ezekiel the departure of His special presence, in that the glory of the God of Israel which was over the temple, at the very place where they placed Jérusalem: and Jerusalem ^dshall be called a city of truth; and ^ethe mountain of the LORD of hosts ^fthe holy mountain.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.
d Is. 1. 21, 26.
e Is. 2. 2, 3.
f Jer. 31. 23.

4 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^gThere shall yet old men and old women dwell in ^g See 1 Sam. 2. 31. Is. 65. 20, 22. Lam. 2. 20, &c. & 5. 11,—14.

*the image of jealousy*¹¹, ¹²*went up from the Cherub, whereupon it was, to the threshold of the house*; then ¹³*stood over the Cherubim*; and then ¹⁴*went up from the midst of the city and stood upon the mountain, which is on the east side of the city*, so removing from them. He had prophesied its return in the vision of the symbolic temple, how ¹⁵*the glory of the Lord came into the house by the way of the gate looking towards the East, and the Spirit took me up and brought me into the inner court, and behold, the glory of the Lord filled the house*. This renewed dwelling in the midst of them, Zechariah too prophesies, in the same terms as in his third vision¹⁶, I will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem.

And Jerusalem shall be called the city of truth, being what she is called, since God would not call her untruly; so Isaiah says, ¹⁷*afterwards thou shalt be called the city of righteousness, the faithful city*, and ¹⁸*they shall call thee the city of the Lord, the Zion of the Holy One of Israel*. So Zephaniah had prophesied, ¹⁹*The remnant of Israel shall not do iniquity, nor speak lies*. Truth embraces everything opposite to untruth; faithfulness, as opposed to faithlessness; sincerity, as opposed to simulation; veracity, as opposed to falsehood; honesty, as opposed to untruth in act; truth of religion or faith, as opposed to untrue doctrine. "7 It shall be called the city of truth, i. e. of the True God or of truth of life, doctrine, and justice. It is chiefly verified by the Coming of Christ, Who often preached in Jerusalem, in Whom the city afterwards believed."

And the mountain of the Lord of hosts, Mount Zion, on which the temple shall be built, shall be called and be the mountain of holiness. This had been the favourite title of the Psalmists²⁰, and Isaiah²¹; and Obadiah had foretold, ²²*upon mount Zion there shall be holiness*; and Jeremiah, ²³*As yet they shall use this speech in the land of Judah and in the cities thereof, when I shall bring again their captivity; The Lord shall bless thee, O habitation of justice, and mountain of holiness*. It should be called and be; it should fulfil the destination of its titles; as, in the Apostles' Creed we profess our belief of "the holy Catholic Church," and holiness is one of its characteristics.

4. There shall yet dwell old men and old women. "7 Men and women shall not be slain now, as before in the time of the Babylonish destruction, but shall fulfil their natural course." It shall not be, as when ²⁴*He gave His people over unto the sword; the fire consumed their young men and their maidens were not given to marriage; the priests were slain by the sword and their widows made no lamentation*; apart from the horrible atrocities of heathen war, when the unborn children were destroyed in their mothers' womb²⁵, with their mothers. Yet²⁶, once more as in the days of old, and as conditionally promised in the law²⁷. As death is the punishment

¹ מ, ver. 1, which is added in 22 Kenn. MSS., 13 De R.; 7 at first, 3 corrected; 2 early edd.; Jon. Syr., is only an explanatory addition. It is noted to be "wanting in correct MSS." De R. ² 1—17. ³ 18—23. ⁴ S. Jer.

⁵ It is the inverted Hebrew parallelism 1, 2; 4, 3. I am jealous for Zion with a great jealousy, and with great wrath am I jealous for her, only substituting נורא נורא for נקמ, in it. ⁶ עקב De. x. 15. ⁷ Dion. ⁸ Rup. ⁹ Zelus. ¹⁰ Osor.

¹¹ Ezek. viii. 4, 5. ¹² Ib. ix. 3. ¹³ Ib. x. 4, 18. ¹⁴ Ib. xi. 23. ¹⁵ Ib. xliii. 4. ¹⁶ וישבו ברחוב י. 14. Heb. [10 Eng.] ¹⁷ Is. i. 26.

¹⁸ Ib. lx. 14. So Jer. iii. 17, At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord. ¹⁹ Zeph. iii. 13. ²⁰ David, Ps. ii. 6, iii. 4.

xv. 1, sons of Korah, xliii. 3, xlviii. 1, lxxxvii. 1, and anon., Ps. xcix. 9.

²¹ Is. xi. 9, lvi. 7, lvii. 13, lxxv. 11, 25, lxxvi. 20, also in Jo. ii. 1, iii. 17, Ob. 16, Zeph. iii. 11, Dan. ix. 16, 20.

²² Ob. 17. ²³ Jer. xxxi. 23. ²⁴ Ps. lxxviii. 63, 64.

²⁵ 2 Kgs xv. 16, Hos. xiii. 16, Am. i. 13. ²⁶ As in Zech. i. 17. ²⁷ De. iv. 10, v. 16, 33, vi. 2, xi. 9, xvii. 20, xxxii. 47, Ezek. xx. 17.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

† Heb. for multitude of days.

the streets of Jerusalem, and every man with his staff in his hand † for very age.

5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.

6 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; If it be of sin, so prolongation of life to the time which God has now made its natural term, seems the more a token of His goodness. This promise Isaiah had renewed¹, There shall no more be an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days. In those fierce wars neither young nor very old were spared. It implied then a long peace, that men should live to that utmost verge of human life.

4. The man, whose staff is in his hand for the multitude of days. The two opposite pictures, the old men, “²so aged that they support with a staff their failing and trembling limbs,” and the young in the glad buoyancy of recent life, fresh from their Creator’s hands, attest alike the goodness of the Creator, Who protecteth both, the children in their yet undeveloped strength, the very old whom He hath brought through “all the changes and chances of this mortal life,” in their yet sustained weakness. The tottering limbs of the very old, and the elastic perpetual motion of childhood are like far distant chords of the diapason of the Creator’s love. It must have been one of the most piteous sights in that first imminent destruction of Jerusalem³, how “⁴the children and the sucklings swooned in the streets of the city; how the young children fainted for hunger in the top of every street.” We have but to picture to ourselves any city in which one lives, the ground strewn with these little all-but corpses, alive only to suffer. We know not, how great the relief of the yet innocent, almost indomitable joyousness of children is, until we miss them. In the dreadful Irish famine of 1847 the absence of the children from the streets of Galway was told me by Religious as one of its dreariest features⁵. In the dreary back-streets and alleys of London, the irrepressible joyousness of children is one of the bright sun-beams of that great Babylon, amid the oppressiveness of the anxious, hard, luxurious, thoughtless, care-worn, eager, sensual, worldly, frivolous, vain, stolid, sottish, cunning, faces, which traverse it. God sanctions by His word here our joy in the joyousness of children, that He too taketh pleasure in it, He the Father of all. It is precisely their laughing⁶, the fulness of her streets of these merry creations of His hands, that He speaks of with complacency.

6. If it should be marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in those⁷ [not these] days, shall it be marvellous in Mine eyes also? saith the Lord of hosts. Man’s anticipations, by reason of his imperfections and the chequered character of earthly things, are always disappointing. God’s doings, by reason of His infinite greatness and goodness, are always beyond our anticipations, past all belief. It is their very greatness which staggers us. It is not then || marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in these days, ^hshould it also be marvellous in mine eyes? saith the LORD of hosts.

7 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Behold, ⁱI will save my people from the east coun-

¹ Is. 11, 11, 12. & 43. 5, 6. Ezek. 37. 21. Amos. 9. 14, 15.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

|| Or, hard,
or, difficult.
^h Gen. 18. 14.
Luke 1. 37.
& 18. 27.
Rom. 4. 21.

merely that the temporal promises seemed “too good to be true” (in our words) “⁸in the eyes of the people who had come from the captivity, seeing that the city almost desolate, the ruins of the city-walls, the charred houses shewed the doings of the Babylonians.” It is in the day of the fulfilment, not of the anticipation, that they would seem marvellous in their eyes, as the Psalmist says, ⁹*This is the Lord’s doing: and it is marvellous in our eyes*. The temporal blessings which God would give were not so incredible. They were but the ordinary gifts of His Providence: they involved no change in their outward relations. His people were still to remain under their Persian masters, until their time too should come. It was matter of gladness and of God’s Providence, that the walls of Jerusalem should be rebuilt: but not so marvellous, when it came to pass. The mysteries of the Gospel are a marvel even to the blessed Angels. That fulfilment being yet future, so the people, in whose eyes that fulfilment should be marvellous, were future also. And this was to be a remnant still. It does not say, this people which is a remnant, nor this remnant of the people, i. e., those who remained over out of the people who went into captivity, or this remnant, but “the remnant of this people,” i. e. those who should remain over of it, i. e., of the people who were returned. It is the remnant of the larger whole, *this people*¹⁰. It is still *the remnant according to the election of grace; that election which obtained what all Israel sought, but, seeking wrongly, were blinded*¹¹.

Shall it be marvellous in Mine eyes also? It is an indirect question in the way of exclamation¹². It be marvellous in Mine eyes also, rejecting the thought, as alien from the nature of God, to Whom ¹³*all things are possible*, yea, what with men is impossible. As God says to Jeremiah, ¹⁴*Behold, I am the Lord, the God of all flesh. Is there anything too hard for Me?* ¹⁵*For with God nothing shall be impossible.* ¹⁶*The things which are impossible with men are possible with God.* ¹⁷*For with God all things are possible.* “¹⁸For He is the Lord of all powers, fulfilling by His will what exceedingly surpasseth nature, and effecting at once what seemeth Him good. The mystery of the Incarnation passeth all marvel and discourse, and no less the benefits redounding to us. For how is it not next to incredible, that the Word, Begotten of God, should be united with the flesh and be in the form of a servant, and endure the Cross and the insults and outrages of the Jews? Or how should one not admire above measure the issue of the dispensation, whereby sin was destroyed, death abolished, corruption expelled, and man, once a recreant slave, became resplendent with the grace of an adopted son?”

7. I will save My people from the East country and from

Thou, this my son Esau! for, Art thou my very son Esau? 1 Sam. xxii. 7, Yea, to you all the son of Jesse shall give! for, shall he give? Job ii. 9, Thou still holding fast thine integrity! for, art thou? Jud. xiv. 16, I have not told my father and my mother, and to thee I shall tell! i. e., shall I tell thee? Jer. xxv. 29, For lo, on the city which is called by My Name, I begin to bring evil, and ye shall be utterly unpunished! as we should say “and ye be utterly unpunished.” Ew. Lehrs. n. 324. p. 802. ed. 8.

¹⁵ S. Luke i. 37. ¹⁶ 1h. xviii. 27. ¹⁷ S. Mark x. 27. ¹⁸ S. Cyr.

¹ Is. lxx. 20. ² Dion. ³ Jer. vi. 11, ix. 21. ⁴ Lam. ii. 11. 19. ⁵ See other pictures of that time in Pusey’s “Chastisements neglected forerunners of greater,” in “Occasional Sermons.”

⁶ שִׂמְחָה as in Gen. vi. 4, Ex. ii. 11, De. xvii. 9, בְּיָמֵינוּ are the times of the Gospel, Jo. iii. 2, iv. 1; bel. 25.

⁷ S. Jer. ⁸ Ps. cxviii. 23. The phrase occurs besides only 2 Sam. xiii. 2.

⁹ See ab. on Am. i. 8, p. 163, n. 36, and on Hagg. i. 12, p. 491. ¹⁰ Rom. xi. 5–7.

¹¹ As in 2 Sam. xvi. 17, This thy kindness! for, Is this thy kindness? Gen. xxvii. 24,

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

† Heb.
the country
of the going down of the sun: See
Ps. 50. 1.
& 113. 3.
Mal. 1. 11.
* Jer. 30. 22.
& 31. 1, 33.
ch. 13. 9.
† Jer. 4. 2.

try, and from † the west country;

8 And I will bring them, and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: ^kand they shall be my people, and I will be their God, ^lin truth and in righteousness.

9 ¶ Thus saith the Lord of hosts; ^mLet your hands be strong, ye that hear in these days these words by the mouth of ⁿthe

^m Hag. 2. 4. ver. 18.

ⁿ Ezra 5. 1, 2.

the West country, "i.e. the whole world; for Israel had been scattered in every part of the world." God had said to Israel, ²I will bring thy seed from the east and gather thee from the west; I will say to the north, Give up, and to the south, Keep not back. The two tribes had been carried to Babylon and had been dispersed, or had been allowed to migrate to the various provinces of the Babylonian or Persian empire. But these were in the East, though commonly called the North, because they invaded Israel from the North. Those who had migrated to Egypt were in the South. As yet none were in the West. The dispersion, as well as the gathering, was still future. When our Lord came, they had migrated Westward. Greece, Italy, Asia minor, were full of them; and from all they were gathered. All S. Paul's Epistles written to named Churches, were written to Churches formed from converts in the West. In all these countries God would gather His one people, His Church, not of ³the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles, grafted into them, as our Lord said, ⁴I say unto you, that many shall come from the East and from the West, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven; but the children of the kingdom (the unbelieving Jews, who were not the remnant) shall be cast out into outer darkness.

8. They shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem, not the literal Jerusalem; for this would not contain the Jews from all quarters of the world, whom, as they multiplied, the whole land could not contain; but the promised Jerusalem, the Jerusalem, which should be inhabited as towns without walls, to which the Lord should be a wall of fire round about.

And they shall be My people. He promises this as to those who were already His people: I will save My people—and will bring them, and they shall dwell—and they shall be My people. And this they were to be in a new way, by conversion of heart, as Jeremiah says, ⁵I will give them an heart to know Me, that I am the Lord, and they shall be My people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto Me with their whole heart, and, ⁶This shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the Lord, I will put My law in their inward parts, and will write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be My people.

⁷The circuit of one city will not contain so great a multitude. But one confession of faith, one conspiracy of sanctity, one communion of religion and righteousness, can easily enfold all-born of the holy fathers, united to them in faith and piety. And God is specially called the God of all these. For He specially consults for these, loads them with benefits, fences them in with most strong protection, illumines prophets, which were in ^othe day that the foundation of the house of the Lord of ^{Before} hosts was laid, that the temple might be ^{CHRIST} built. ^o Hag. 2. 18.

10 For before these days || there was no || Or, ^{the hire of} hire for man, nor any hire for beast; ^{man became} neither was there any peace to him that ^{nothing, &c.} went out or came in because of the affliction ² 2 Chr. 15. 5.

them with His light, crowns them, when confirmed in the Image of His beauty, with glory immortal and Divine."

In truth and in righteousness. This too is on account of their former relation to God. Isaiah had upbraided them for a worship of God, ⁸not in truth and righteousness. Jeremiah had said, ⁹Thou shalt swear, the Lord liveth, in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness. God should be their God in truth and righteousness; ¹⁰truth in fulfilling His promises; righteousness in rewarding every man according to his works."

9. Let your hands be strong. The fulfilment of God's former promises are the earnest of the future; His former providences, of those to come. Having then those great promises for the time to come, they were to be earnest in whatever meantime God gave them to do. He speaks to them, as hearing in these days, i.e. that fourth year of Darius in which they apparently were, these words from the mouth of the prophets, which were in the day when the foundation of the house of the Lord was laid, the temple, that it might be built. Haggai was now gone to his rest. His voice had been silent for two years. But his words lived on. The fulfilment of what the prophets had then spoken in God's Name, was a ground, why their hands should be strong, now and thereafter, for every work which God gave or should give them to do. ¹⁰Some things are said to Jerusalem, i.e. to the Jews, which belong to them only; some relate to what is common to them and the other members of the Church, i.e. those who are called from the Gentiles. Now he speaks to the Jews, but not so as to seem to forget what he had said before. He would say, Ye who hear the words, which in those days when the temple was founded, Haggai and Zechariah spake, be strong and proceed to the work which ye began of fulfilling the will of the Lord in the building of the temple, and in keeping from the sins, in which ye were before entangled. For as, before ye began to build the temple, ye were afflicted with many calamities, but after ye had begun, all things went well with you, as Haggai said ¹¹, so, if you cultivate piety and do not depart from God, ye shall enjoy great abundance of spiritual good." ¹²The memory of past calamity made the then tranquillity much sweeter, and stirred the mind to greater thanksgiving. He set forth then the grief of those times when he says;

10. There was no hire for man, lit. hire for man came not to pass ¹². It was longed for, waited for, and came not. So little was the produce, that neither labourer nor beast of burden were employed to gather it in.

Neither was there peace to him who went out or came in because of the affliction, better, of the adversary. In such an empire as the Persian, there was large scope for actual with כ or כסו Ex. xi. 6, Deut. iv. 32, Jo. ii. 2, Jud. xix. 30, Dan. xii. 1, or abs., Jud. xx. 3, 12, Jer. v. 30, xlviii. 19, Ezek. xxi. 12, xxxix. 8. There remain five insulated cases; "was made God's people," Deut. xxvii. 9; "a desire accomplished," Pr. xiii. 19; "bath not been done," (rejecting an imputation) Neh. vi. 8; "was departed," Dan. ii. 1; as if he had ceased to be, 1b. viii. 27.

¹ Dion. ² Is. xliii. 5, 6. ³ Rom. ix. 24. ⁴ S. Matt. viii. 11, 12.

⁵ Jer. xxiv. 7, add xxx. 22. ⁶ Ib. xxxi. 33. ⁷ Osor.

⁸ Is. xlviii. 1. ⁹ Jer. iv. 2. ¹⁰ Rib. ¹¹ Hagg. ii. 15—19.

¹² לא נהיה occurs only in 19 other places: "it came to pass," with נאח, "it was from," i.e. his doing, 1 Kings i. 27, xii. 24, 2 Chr. xi. 4; of a thing which had not its like,

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

tion: for I set all men every one against his neighbour.

11 But now I will not be unto the residue of this people as in the former days, saith the LORD of hosts.

12 For the seed shall be [†]prosperous; the vine shall give her fruit, and ^athe ground shall give her increase, and ^tthe

^a Hos. 2. 21, 22.
^t Joel 2. 22.
[†] Hag. 2. 19.
[†] Heb.
^{of peace.}
[†] Ps. 67. 6.
[†] See Hag. 1. 10.

hostility among the petty nations subject to it, so that they did not threaten revolt against itself, or interfere with the payment of tribute, as in the Turkish Empire now, or in the weak government of Greece. At the rebuilding of the walls, after this time, the Samaritans, Arabians, Ammonites, Ashdodites conspired to fight against Jerusalem, and to slay them¹. They are summed up here in the general title used here, *our adversaries*².

For I set; lit. and I set. Domestic confusions and strife were added to hostility from without. Nehemiah's reformation was, in part, to stop the grinding usury in time of dearth or to pay the king's taxes, through which men sold lands, vineyards, even their children³.

God (lit.) let them loose, each against his neighbour, in that He left them to their own ways and withheld them not.

11. And now. The words imply a contrast of God's dealings, rather than a contrast of time. I am not to the remnant of this people. He had said, I will be to them God; so now He does not say that He will not do to them, as in former days, but I am not to the remnant of this people as heretofore. He would be, as He was in Jesus, in a new relation to them.

12. For the seed shall be peace⁴. "Your seed shall be peace and a blessing, so that they will call it 'a seed of peace.'" The unusual construction is perhaps adopted, in order to suggest a further meaning. It is a reversal of the condition, just spoken of, when there was no peace to him that went, or to him that returned.

The vine shall give her fruit and the ground shall give her increase. The old promise in the law on obedience⁵, as the exact contrary was threatened on disobedience⁷. It had been revived in the midst of promise of spiritual blessing and of the coming of Christ, in Ezekiel⁸. "By the metaphor of sensible things he explains (as the prophets often do) the abundance of spiritual good in the time of the new law, as did Hosea¹⁰, Joel¹¹, Amos¹², and many others." And I will cause the remnant of the people to inherit. "As if he said, I promised these things not to you who live now, but to the future remnant of your people, i.e. those who shall believe in Christ and shall be saved, while the rest perish. These shall possess these spiritual goods, which I promise now, under the image of temporal." As our Lord said¹³, He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he shall be My son.

¹ Neh. iv. 7—11.

² Neh. iv. 5 Heb. (11 Eng.), נִסָּ, as calamity, is very rare, except in the idiom נִסָּ לְעָרִי, It is used twice in the construct, as a sort of adj., לֶחֶם נִסָּ, bread of affliction Is. xxx. 20; עֵץ נִסָּ, time of affliction, Job xxxviii. 23; and as united with the synonyme נִסָּה, Job xv. 24, נִסָּה וְנִסָּה, Ps. cxix. 143; absolutely, once only, Is. v. 30. The fem. נִסָּה occurs, in all, 72 times.

³ Neh. v. 1—12.

⁴ It cannot be, the seed shall be safe, (Jon.), for הַשְׁלֵם is never used except of peace; nor is even שָׁלוֹם used as a predicate, except of human beings, either directly or as implied, as in Job v. 24, thy tent, שָׁלוֹם אֶתְּךָ; Job xxi. 9, their houses are peace from fear, בְּיָמֵיהֶם שָׁלוֹם מִפֶּחַח. The sense incolumitas, integritas, is wrongly assumed in Röd. Ges. Thes. Dent. xxix. 18, 1 Kgs ii. 33, Ps. xxxvii. 11, 37, lxxii. 3, 7, Is. lii. 7, lvii. 19, 21, Jer. iv. 10, vi. 14, except as far as this may be involved in "peace." Nor can הַשְׁלֵם be a noun, abs. before נִסָּה, heavens shall give their dew; and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things.

13 And it shall come to pass, that as ye were ^aa curse among the heathen, O house of Judah, and house of Israel; so will I save you, and ^yye shall be a blessing: fear not, but ^ylet your hands be strong.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

^a Jer. 42. 18.
^y Gen. 12. 2.
Ruth 4. 11, 12.
Is. 19. 24, 25.
Zeph. 3. 20.
Hag. 2. 19.
^y ver. 9.

13. As ye were a curse among the nations, O house of Judah and house of Israel, so I will save you. The ten tribes bore the name of Israel, in contrast with the two tribes with the name of Judah, not only in the history but in the prophets; as Hosea says¹⁴, I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel, and on the house of Judah I will have mercy. Here he unites both; both, in the time of their captivity, were a curse, were held to be a thing accursed, as it is said, ¹⁵He that is hanged is the curse of God, i.e. a thing accursed by Him; and God foretold of Judah, that they should be ¹⁶a desolation and a curse, and by Jeremiah, ¹⁷I will deliver them to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for hurt, a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse in all places whither I shall drive them; and in deed, when it was so, ¹⁸therefore is your land a desolation and an astonishment and a curse without an inhabitant, as at this day. Now the sentence was to be reversed as to both. As ye were a curse, among the nations, naming each, so I will save you. There would have been no proportion between the curse and the blessing, unless both had been included under the blessing, as they were under the curse. But Israel had no share in the temporal blessing, not returning from captivity, as Zechariah knew they were not returned hitherto. Therefore the blessings promised must be spiritual. Even a Jewish commentator saw this. ¹⁹It is possible, that this may have been spoken of the second temple, on condition that they should keep the commandments of the Lord; or, it is still future, referring to the days of the Messiah: and this is proved by the following verse which says, O house of Judah and house of Israel. During the second temple the house of Israel did not return.

And ye shall be a blessing. This is a revival and an application of the original promise to Abraham, ²⁰thou shalt be a blessing; which was continued to Jacob, ²¹God give thee the blessing of Abraham, to thee and to thy seed with thee. And of the future king, of whom it is said, ²²Thou gavest him length of days for ever and ever, David says, Thou hast made him blessings for ever, and again, ²³They shall be blessed in Him. So Isaiah had said of the days of Christ, ²⁴In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, a blessing in the midst of the land; and symbolically of the cluster of grapes, ²⁵Destroy it not: for a blessing is in it; and Ezekiel, ²⁶I will make them and the places round about My hill a blessing. They were this; for of them, ²⁷according to the flesh, Christ came, Who is over all, God blessed for ever:

"a seed of peace, the vine shall yield her fruit;" for "seed" has no relation to the "vine."

⁵ Kim. ⁶ Lev. xxvi. 4. ⁷ Ib. 20. ⁸ Ezek. xxxiv. 27.

⁹ Rib. ¹⁰ Hos. ii. 21, 22. ¹¹ Jo. ii. 23—25, iii. 18.

¹² Am. ix. 13. ¹³ Rev. xxi. 7. ¹⁴ Hos. i. 6, 7.

¹⁵ De. xxi. 23. ¹⁶ 2 Kgs xxii. 19.

¹⁷ Jer. xxiv. 9, add Ib. xxv. 18, to make thee a desolation, an astonishment, a hissing and a curse; and of those who went in rebellion to Egypt, ye shall be an execration

[אֵלֶּיךָ] and an astonishment and a curse and a reproach (Ib. xlii. 18), and that ye might be a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth (Ib. xlii. 5.)

¹⁸ Ib. xlii. 22. ¹⁹ Kim. on ver. 12.

²⁰ Gen. xii. 2. ²¹ Ib. xxviii. 4. ²² Ps. xxi. 4, 6. ²³ Ib. lxxii. 17.

²⁴ Is. xix. 24. ²⁵ Ib. lxxv. 8. ²⁶ Ezek. xxxiv. 26. ²⁷ Rom. ix. 5.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

^a Jer. 31. 23.

^a 2 Chr. 36. 16.
ch. 1. 6.

^b ch. 7. 9.
ver. 19.

^c Ephes. 4. 25.

^d Heb. judge truth, and the judgment of peace.

^e Prov. 3. 29.
ch. 7. 10.

14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^aAs I thought to punish you, when your fathers provoked me to wrath, saith the LORD of hosts; ^aand I repented not:

15 So again have I thought in these days to do well unto Jerusalem and to the house of Judah: fear ye not.

16 ¶ These are the things that ye shall do; ^bSpeak ye every man the truth to his neighbour; ^cexecute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates:

17 ^eAnd let none of you imagine evil in

of them were the Apostles and Evangelists, of them every writer of God's word, of them those who carried the Gospel throughout the world. "1 Was this fulfilled, when the Jews were under the Persians? or when they paid tribute to the Greeks? or when they trembled, hour by hour, at the mention of the Roman name? Do not all count those who rule much happier than those oppressed by the rule of others? The prediction then was fulfilled, not then, but when Christ, the Sun of Righteousness, shone on the earth, and He chose from the Hebrews lights, through whom to dissipate darkness and illumine the minds of men who were in that darkness. The Jews, when restored from the captivity, seemed born to slavery." They were reputed to be of slaves the most despised. "But when they had through Christ been put in possession of that most sure liberty, they overthrew, through their empire, the power and tyranny of the evil spirits."

14. As I thought to punish you (lit. to do evil to you) and repented not. In like way God says in Jeremiah², I have purposed and will not repent.

15. So have I turned and purposed³ in these days to do well unto Jerusalem. "4 God, to be better understood, speaketh with the feelings and after the manner of men, although, in the passionless and unchangeable God, there is no provocation to anger, nor turning, implying change in Himself." So He says by Jeremiah, ⁵*I know the thoughts that I think towards you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace and not of evil*. And, with the same contrast as here, ⁶*As I have watched over them to pluck up and to break down and to throw down, and to destroy and to afflict, so will I watch over them, to build and to plant, saith the Lord*. His having done what He purposed before was an earnest the more, that He would do what He purposed now. His chastisements were the earnest of His mercies; for they too were an austere form of His love. "1 When the Lord stretches out His hand to strike those who are contumacious in guilt, none can hold His hand that He exact not the due punishment. Therefore He says, that He repented not; so, when He receives to grace those who repent of their sins, no one can any way delay the course of His benevolence. ⁷*For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance*."

your hearts against his neighbour; and ^alove no false oath: for all these are things that I hate, saith the LORD.

18 ¶ And the word of the LORD of hosts came unto me, saying,

19 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^eThe ^efast of the fourth month, ^fand the fast of the fifth, ^gand the fast of the seventh, ^hand the fast of the tenth, shall be to the house of Judah ⁱjoy and gladness, and cheerful ^jfeasts; ^ktherefore love the truth and peace.

And to the house of Judah. ⁸He speaks to the two tribes, not to, or of, the ten, because Christ was to come to the two tribes, and Zechariah was prophesying to them, and they were to be admonished to prepare themselves in good works, lest the coming of Christ should not profit them, on account of their depraved ways. But the ten tribes were far off in the cities of the Medes, nor was Christ to come to them; but they were to hear the Gospel through the Apostles, and so he prophesies of the conversion of all to the glory of Christ, yet he could not admonish all, but those only to whom he was sent.

16. These are the things that ye shall do. He exhorts them to the same duties, to which the former prophets had exhorted their fathers⁹, and, as before, first positively to truth and peace; then to avoid everything contrary to it. Judgement of peace must be judgement which issues in peace, as all righteous judgement righteously received, in which case each party acquiesces, must. "10 If ye judge righteousness, there will be peace between the litigants, according to that proverb, "11 He that hath his coat taken from him by the tribunal, let him sing and go his way" ["because," says a gloss¹², "they have judged the judgement of truth, and have taken away that which would have been stolen property, if he retained it," being in fact not his]. And they have quoted that, ¹³*And all this people shall go to their place in peace*." "14 All this people, even he that is condemned in judgement. It is also interpreted of arbitration. What sort of judgement is that, in which there is peace? It is that of arbitration."

17. For all these things do I hate. lit. emphatic, ¹⁵*For they are all these things which I hate*. This is the sum of what I hate; for they comprise in brief the breaches of the two tables, the love of God and of man.

19. The fast of the fourth month. On the ninth day of the fourth month¹⁶ of Zedekiah's eleventh year, Jerusalem, in the extremity of famine, opened to Nebuchadnezzar, and his princes sat in her gate; in the tenth month¹⁷ of his ninth year Nebuchadnezzar began the siege. Ezekiel was bidden ¹⁸*on its tenth day; write thee the name of the day, of this same day, as the beginning of God's uttermost judgements against the bloody city*¹⁹. The days of national sorrow were to be ¹ Osor. ² Jer. iv. 28. ³ On עָשָׂה see above on i. 6, p. 514, note 13.

⁴ Dion. ⁵ Jer. xxix. 11. ⁶ Ib. xxxi. 28. ⁷ Rom. xi. 20.

⁸ Rib.

⁹ vii. 9, 10.

¹⁰ Kim.

¹¹ Sanhedr. f. 7. a. quoted by Mc. Canl, p. 78. ¹² Rashi, quoted Ib.

¹³ Exod. xviii. 23. ¹⁴ Judah b. Korcha in Sanhr. f. 6 b. 1b.

¹⁵ אלה is a sort of noun abs., as IIagg. ii. 5.

¹⁶ Jer. xxxix. 2, 3; iii. 6, 7.

¹⁷ 2 Kgs. xxv. 1, Jer. xxxix. 1, lii. 4. ¹⁸ Ezek. xxiv. 1, 2.

¹⁹ Ib. 6—14. The Jews in S. Jerome's time added, that in the fourth month Moses brake the tables of the law; in the fifth month was the rebellion on the return of the spies, and the sentence of the forty years' wandering. This is true. For since Moses went up into the mount in the third month (Ex. xix. 1, 16, xxiv. 12, 16.), the end of the forty days (Ib. 18), after which he came down and brake the tables (Ex. xxxii. 15, 19) would fall in the fourth month. Ribera calculates the fourth month thus: setting off from Sinai, 20th day of 2nd month, Nu. x. 11; 3 days' journey. Ib. 33; halt of one month, Ib. xi. 20, 21; of 7 days, Ib. xii. 15; 40 days' search of spies, Ib. xiii. 25.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

20 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; It shall yet come to pass, that there shall come turned into exuberant joy, *joy and gladness and cheerful feasts*¹, for the sorrows, which they commemorated, were but the harbingers of joy, when the chastisements were ended; only He adds, love the truth and peace; for such love whereby they would be Israelites indeed, in whose spirits is no guile, were the conditions of their participating the blessings of the Gospel, of which he goes on to speak;

20. It shall yet be that. The promises are those which God had already made by Isaiah² and Micah³. Yet where was the shew of their fulfilment? The Jews themselves, a handful: the temple unfinished; its completion depending, in human sight, upon the will of their heathen masters, the rival worship at Samaria standing and inviting to coalition. Appearances and experience were against it. God says virtually, that it was, in human sight, contrary to all expectations. But "weakness is aye Heaven's might." Despite of all, of the fewness of those who were returned, their down-heartedness, broken condition, hopelessness, though all had hitherto failed, though, or rather because, all human energy and strength were gone, as God had said before, The Lord shall yet⁴ choose Jerusalem, so now, It shall yet⁵ be that.

Nations and many cities shall come. He describes vividly the eagerness and mutual impulse, with which not only many but mighty nations should throng to the Gospel, and every fresh conversion should win others also, till the great tide should sweep through the world.

21. The inhabitants of one city shall go to another. It is one unresting extension of the faith, the restlessness of faith and love. "They shall not be satisfied with their own salvation, careless about the salvation of others; they shall employ all labour and industry, with wondrous love, to provide for the salvation of others as if it were their own." It is a marvellous stirring of minds. Missionary efforts, so familiar with us as to be a household word, were unknown then. The time was not yet come. Before the faith in Christ came, the Jewish people were not to be the converters of mankind. They were to await for Him, the Redeemer of the world, through Whom and to Whom they were to be first converted, and then the world through those who were of them. This mutual conversion was absolutely unknown. The prophet⁷ predicts certainly that it would be, and in God's time it was. From you, S. Paul writes to a small colony in Greece⁸, *sounded out the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad.*⁹ Your faith, he writes to the heathen capital of the world, is spoken of throughout the whole world. Within eighty years after our Lord's Ascension, the Roman governor of Bithynia reported, on occasion of the then persecution, that it spread as a contagion. "The contagion of that superstition traversed not cities only but villages and scattered houses too." Before the persecution, the temples had been desolated, the solemn rites long intermitted, the sacrificed animals had very rarely found a purchaser. An impostor of the same date says, "Pontus is full of atheists and Christians."¹² "There is no one race of men," it was said before the middle of the second century¹³, "whether Barbarians people, and the inhabitants of many cities : Before CHRIST

cir. 518.
21 And the inhabitants of one city shall go or Greeks or by whatsoever name called, whether of those wandering houseless tribes who live in waggons or those pastoral people who dwell in tents, in which there are not prayers and Eucharists to the Father and Creator of all things, through the name of the crucified Jesus." "The word of our teacher," said another¹⁴, "abode not in Judæa alone, as philosophy in Greece; but was poured out throughout the whole world, persuading Greeks and barbarians in their several nations and villages and every city, whole houses and each hearer individually, and having brought over to the truth no few even of the very philosophers. And if any ordinary magistrate forbid the Greek philosophy, forthwith it vanishes; but our teaching, forthwith at its first announcement, kings and emperors and subordinate rulers and governors with all their mercenaries and countless multitudes forbid, and war against us and try to extirpate; but it the rather flourishes." The second century had not closed, before another said, "We are a people of yesterday, and yet we have filled every place belonging to you, cities, islands, castles, towns, assemblies, your very camp, your tribes, companies, palace, senate, forum! We leave you your temples only. We can count your armies; our numbers in a single province will be greater." "Men cry out that the state is beset; that the Christians are in their fields, in their forts, in their islands. They mourn, as for a loss, that every sex, age, condition, and now even rank is going over to this sect." "On whom besides have all nations believed, except on Christ Who hath already come?" Then having enumerated the nations mentioned in the Acts¹⁵, he adds, "And now the varieties of the Getulians, and the many tracts of the Moors, all the bounds of the Spains, and the divers nations of the Gauls, and places of the Britons, unreached by the Romans but subdued to Christ; of Sarmatians, Dacians, Germans, and Scythians, and of many remote nations, and many provinces and islands, unknown to us, and which we can scarce enumerate. In all which places the name of Christ, Who hath already come, reigneth, seeing that before Him the gates of all cities are opened and none are shut against Him, before Whom¹⁶ the bars of iron are broken in pieces and the gates of brass are opened. In all these places dwelleth a people called by the name of Christ. For who could reign over all, save Christ the Son of God, Who was foretold as about to reign over all nations for ever?" Then having contrasted the limited rule of Solomon, Darius, the Pharaohs, Nebuchadnezzar, Alexander, "the Romans who protect their own empire by the strength of their legions and are unable to extend the might of their kingdom beyond these nations [Germans, Britons, Moors, Getulians], he sums up, "but the kingdom and the Name of Christ is extended every where, is believed in every where, is worshipped by all the nations above enumerated. Every where He reigns, every where is adored, is given every where equally to all. With Him no king hath greater favour; no Barbarian inferior joy; no dignities or birth enhance the merit of any; to all He is equal; to all, King; to all Judge; to all, God and Lord." A little later, a heathen owns, while calumniating, "Those most foul rites of that impious coali-

¹ יום טוב as טוב, Esth. viii. 17. ix. 19, 22. Eccl. vii. 14.

² Mic. iv. 1. sqq.

³ i. 17, ii. 16 [12 Eng.]

⁴ עת is premised emphatically.

⁵ Osor.

⁶ See below on ix. 12.

⁷ 1 Thess. i. 8.

⁸ Rom. i. 8.

⁹ Plin. ad Traj. Ep. x. 97.

¹⁰ Alexander in Lucian. Alexander.

¹¹ S. Justin M. Dial. ii. 117, on Mal. i. 10. p. 216. Oxf. Tr.

¹² Trypho says, "I escaped from the late war." (A. D. 132—135) Dial. init. p. 70.

¹³ Clem. Alex. Strom. vi. fin.

¹⁴ Tert. Apol. n. 37, p. 78. Oxf. Tr.

¹⁵ Ib. n. 1. pp. 2, 3.

¹⁶ Tert. adv. Jud. c. 7 p. 113 Rig.

¹⁷ Acts ii. 9—11.

¹⁸ Is. xlv. 2.

¹⁹ Cæcil. in Minut. Fel. p. 80. Ouz.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 518.

to another, saying, ¹Let us go || † speedily † to pray before the LORD, and to seek the LORD of hosts: I will go also.

¹ Isai. 2. 3.
Mic. 4. 1, 2.
|| Or, continually.
† Heb. going.
† Heb. to intreat the face of the LORD,
ch. 7. 2.

22 Yea, ^mmany people and strong nations shall come to seek the LORD of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the LORD.

^m Isai. 60. 3, &c. & 66. 23.

tion are growing throughout the whole world, as bad things come up most luxuriantly, evil ways creeping on daily." The Christian answers, "¹That our number increases daily, this is no imputation of error, but a testimony to praise. For in a good mode of life, its own persevere, aliens accrue to it."

Let us go on and on, ²perseveringly, until we attain to entreat the face of the Lord. It is not a Theism or Mono-theism, but the God, Who had revealed Himself to Israel, Who, when our Lord came, was worshipped in Jerusalem, to which those invited say, I too would go with thee. Yet not so, but the words seem to speak of that which is a special gift of the Gospel, continued progress, "³*forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, to press toward the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.* Let us go on and on; whence it is a Christian proverb, "⁴not to go on is to go back." "⁵The whole life of a good Christian is a holy longing to make progress." "⁶The one perfection of man is, to have found that he is not perfect." "⁷If thou sayest, It sufficeth, thou art lost." "⁸To be unwilling to increase,
is to decrease."

23. Ten men of all languages of the nations. Ten ⁹is the symbol of a whole, all the numbers before it meeting in it and starting again from it. The day of Pentecost was to be the reversal of the confusion of Babel; all were to have one voice, as God had said, ¹⁰*It (the time) shall come to gather all nations and tongues, and they shall come and see My glory.*

They shall lay hold of the skirt of one man who is a Jew, ¹¹that is, of the Lord and Saviour, of Whom it is said, ¹²*A prince shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until He shall come, for Whom it is laid up, and for Him shall the Gentiles wait; for ¹³there shall be a rod of Jesse, and He who shall arise to rule over the Gentiles, to Him shall the Gentiles seek.* And when they shall lay hold of Him, they shall desire to tread in His steps, since God is with Him. Or else, whosoever shall believe out of all nations, shall lay hold of a man who is a Jew, the Apostles who are from the Jews, and shall say, Let us go with you; for we have known through the prophets and from the voice of all the Scriptures, that the Son of God, Christ, God and Lord, is with you. Where there is a most manifest prophecy, and the coming of Christ and His Apostles and the faith of all nations is preached, let us seek for nothing more."

¹⁴Christ turning our sorrow into joy and a feast and good days and gladness, and transferring lamentation into cheerfulness, the accession to the faith and union to God by sanctification in those called to salvation shall not henceforth

23 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; In ^{Before} those days it shall come to pass, that ten ^{CHRIST} men shall ^atake hold out of all languages ^{Isai. 3. 6.} of the nations, even shall take hold of the ^{& 4. 1.}
skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard ^othat God ¹Cor. 14. 25.
is with you.

be individually: but the cities shall exhort each other thereto, and all nations shall come in multitudes, the later ever calling out to those before them, I too will go. For it is written, ¹⁵*iron sharpeneth iron, so doth a man the countenance of another.* For the zeal of some is ever found to call forth others to fulfil what is good. But what is the aim proposed to the cities, that is, the Gentiles? To entreat and to seek the face of the Lord, i. c. Christ, Who is the exact image of God the Father, and, as is written, ¹⁶*the brightness of His glory, and the express image of His Person*, of Whom also the divine David saith, ¹⁷*Shew Thy countenance to Thy servant.*
For the Image and Countenance of God the Father hath shone upon us. Having Him propitious and kind, we lay aside the injury from sin, being justified through faith, ¹⁸*not by works of righteousness, which we have done, but according to His great mercy.*—But how they shall come, he explains.
By the ten men you are to understand the perfect number of those who come. For the number ten is the symbol of perfection. But that those of the Gentiles, who cleave to the holy Apostles, took in hand to go the same way with them, being justified by the faith in Christ, he sets evidently before us. For little children, if they would follow their fathers, lay hold of the hem of their dress, and, aided by the touch and hanging from their dress, walk steadily and safely.
In like way, they too who ¹⁹*worshipped the creature rather than the Creator*, choosing as their true fathers the bringers-in of the Gospel-doctrines, and joining themselves by likemindedness to them, follow them, being still of childlike minds, and go the same way, ever shewing themselves zealous followers of their life, and by continued progress advancing ²⁰*to a perfect man, to the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.* But why do they follow them? Being persuaded that God is with them, i. c. Emmanuel, God with us. But that this calling belongs not only to those of the blood of Israel but to all nations throughout the world, he indicated by saying, that those who laid hold of that hem should be of all languages. But when were the nations called to the knowledge of the truth, and when did they desire to seek the face of the Lord and to entreat it, and to go the same way, as it were, as the holy Apostles, except when the Only-Begotten came to us, Who is ²¹*the expectation of the nations: to Whom also the divine David singeth, ²²All the nations, whom Thou hast made, shall come and worship before Thee, O Lord?* For the multitude of the nations also is saved through Him."

The startling condescension of this passage is, that our Lord is spoken of as "a man, a Jew." Yet of His Human

¹ Minut. Fel. Ib. p. 312. Other like sayings are in Origen, (de Princ. iv. 1. c. Cels. i. 7, 67, ii. 13, iii. 24,) Lactantius, (v. 13) Arnobius (i. p. 33, ii. 50, Lugd.), who argues thence to the divinity of the Gospel, Jul. Firmicus, (c. 21 B. P. iv. 172.)

² לכה הלק.

³ Phil. iii. 13, 14.

⁴ "non progredi est regredi."

⁵ S. Aug. in 1 Ep. S. Joann. Hom. iv. n. 6. p. 1144. Oxf. Tr.

⁶ Id. Serm. 120, [170. Ben.] c. 8. p. 877. Oxf. Tr.

⁷ Id. Serm. 119, [169.] fin. ib. p. 871. Oxf. Tr.

⁸ Nolle proficere deficere est. S. Bern. Ep. 254 ad Guarin. n. 4.

⁹ As in Gen. xxxi. 7, he hath changed my wages these ten times; Lev. xxvi. 26, when I have broken your staff of bread, ten women shall bake your bread in one oven; Nu. xiv. 22, those men which have seen My glory, have tempted Me now these ten times, and have not hearkened to My voice.

¹⁰ Is. lxvi. 18.

¹¹ S. Jer.

¹² Gen. xlix. 8-10.

¹³ Is. xi. 10.

¹⁴ S. Cyr.

¹⁵ Pr. xxvii. 17.

¹⁶ Heb. i. 3.

¹⁷ Ps. cxix. 135.

¹⁸ Tit. iii. 5.

¹⁹ Rom. i. 25.

²⁰ Eph. iv. 13.

²¹ Gen. xlix. 10.

²² Ps. lxxxvi. 9.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

CHAPTER IX.

1 God defendeth his church. 9 Zion is exhorted to rejoice for the coming of Christ, and his peaceable

Nature it is not only the simple truth, but essential to the truth. Pilate said to Him in scorn, Am I a Jew? Thine own nation and the Chief Priests have delivered Thee unto me. But it was essential to the fulfilment of God's promises. The Christ was to be ²the Son of David. ³Hath not the Scripture said, That Christ cometh of the seed of David; and out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was? David, ⁴being a prophet and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh, He would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; ⁵Of this man's seed hath God, according to promise, raised unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus. Whence S. Paul begins his great doctrinal Epistle with this contrast, ⁶the Gospel of God concerning His Son Jesus Christ, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh, and declared to be the Son of God with power. He was that ⁷one Man among a thousand, whom Solomon says, I found; but a woman among all those have I not found; the one in the whole human race. It was fulfilled in the very letter when ⁸they brought to Him all that were diseased, and besought Him that they might only touch the hem of His garment: and as many as touched were made perfectly whole. ⁹The whole multitude sought to touch Him, for there went virtue out of Him and healed all.

Even the Jews saw the reference to the Messiah. ¹⁰All nations shall come, falling on their faces before the Messiah and the Israelites, saying, Grant, that we may be Thy servants and of Israel. For as relates to the doctrine and the knowledge of the law, the Gentiles shall be their servants, according to that, In those days ten men &c.

IX. 1. *The burden*¹¹ of the word of the Lord in [or upon]¹² the land of Hadrach. The foreground of this prophecy is the course of the victories of Alexander, which circled round the holy land without hurting it, and ended in the overthrow of the Persian empire. The surrender of Damascus followed first, immediately on his great victory at the Issus; then Sidon yielded itself and received its ruler from the conqueror. Tyre he utterly destroyed; Gaza, we know, perished; he passed harmless by Jerusalem. Samaria, on his return from Egypt, he chastised.

It is now certain that there was a city called Hadrach in the neighbourhood of Damascus and Hamath, although its exact site is not known. "It was first found upon the geo-kingdom: 12 God's promises of victory and defence. Before CHRIST cir. 487.

THE ^aburden of the word of the LORD ^aJer. 23. 33. in the land of Hadrach, and ^bDamas- ^bAmos 1. 3.

graphical tablets¹³ among the Assyrian inscriptions." ¹⁴In the catalogue of Syrian cities, tributary to Nineveh, (of which we have several copies in a more or less perfect state, and varying from each other, both in arrangement and extent) there are three names, which are uniformly grouped together and which we read Manatsuah, Magida [Megiddo] and Du'ar [Dor]. As these names are associated with those of Samaria, Damascus, Arpad, Hamath, Carehemish, Hadrach, Zobah, there can be no doubt of the position of the cities¹⁵. In the Assyrian Canon, Hadrach is the object of three Assyrian expeditions, ¹⁶9183 (B. C. 818), 9190 (811) and 9200 (801). The first of these follows upon one against Damascus, 9182 (817). In the wars of Tiglath-pileser ii. (the Tiglath-pileser of Holy Scripture,) it has been twice decyphered; 1) in the war B. C. 738, 737, after the mention of "the cities to Saua the mountain which is in Lebanon were divided, the land of Bahalzephon to Ammana" (Ammon), there follows Hadrach¹⁷; and subsequently there are mentioned as joined to the league, "19 districts of Hamath, and the cities which were round them, which are beside the sea of the setting sun." 2) In his "war in Palestine and Arabia," ¹⁸the city of Hadrach to the land of Saua, and six other cities are enumerated, as "the cities beside the upper sea," which, he says, "I possessed, and six of my generals as governors over them I appointed." No other authority nearly approaches these times. The nearest authority is of the second century after our Lord, A. D. 116. ¹⁹R. Jose, born of a Damascene mother, said, answering R. Yehudah ben Elai²⁰, "I call heaven and earth to witness upon me, that I am of Damascus, and that there is a place called Hadrach." S. Cyril of Alexandria says²¹, that "the land of Hadrach must be somewhere in the Eastern parts, and near to Emath (now Epiphania of Antioch) a little further than Damascus, the metropolis of the Phœnicians and Palestine." A writer of the 10th century²² says that there was "a very beautiful mosque there, called the Mesjed-el-Khadra, and that the town was named from it." The conjecture that Hadrach might be the name of a king²³, or an idol²⁴, will now probably be abandoned, nor can the idea, (which before seemed the most probable and which was very old), that it was a symbolic name, hold any longer. For the Prophets do use symbolic names²⁵; but then they are names which they themselves frame. Micah again selects several names of towns, now

¹ S. John xviii. 35.

² S. Matt. i. 1. xxii. 42.

³ S. John vii. 42.

⁴ Acts ii. 30.

⁵ Ib. xiii. 23.

⁶ Rom. i. 1-4.

⁷ Eccl. vii. 28.

⁸ S. Matt. xiv. 35, 36.

⁹ S. Luke vi. 19. add Ib. viii. 46. S. Mark v. 30.

¹⁰ Pesikta Rabbathi, in Yalkut Shim'oni ii. 56. 4. in Schöttgen ad loc.

¹¹ On the word "Burden" see above on Nah. i. 1. p. 373.

¹² As Is. ix. 8, "The Lord sent a word upon Jacob (יַעֲקֹב) and it lighted on Israel" (יִשְׂרָאֵל).

¹³ Published in the British Museum Series vol. ii. Pl. 53, Prof. Rawlinson.

¹⁴ Sir H. Rawlinson, Athenæum, No. 1869, Aug. 22, 1863, p. 246, where he "published his reading, some time after he identified it." "It has since been identified by others."

¹⁵ Sir H. Rawlinson adds in a note; "From the position on the lists, I should be inclined to identify it with Homs or Edessa which was certainly a very ancient capital, (being the Kedesh of the Egyptian records) and which would not otherwise be represented in the Assyrian inscriptions." Note 26. Ib.

¹⁶ T. 2. p. 323.

¹⁷ G. Smith's Assyrian discoveries p. 276.

¹⁸ Ib. p. 284.

¹⁹ In Siphre sect. Debarim (ed. Friedm. p. 65).

²⁰ In the time of Hadrian. Wolf Bibl. Hebr. i. 411.

²¹ Here.

²² David ben Abraham, MS. Opp. Add. f. 25, quoted by Neubauer, Geogr. du Talmud p. 298. The account of one Joseph Abassi that "it was once a large city, but now small; that the Arabs told much of its kings and princes; that it was said to have had giants and was about 10 miles from Damascus," no doubt relates to Edrei. See Hengstenberg Christol. ii. 92 sqq. A. v. Kremer, Beiträge zur Geographie des nördlichen Syriens (in d. Denkschriften d. Kais. Akad. d. Wissensch. [Wien] philos. hist. Classe,

A. 1852. 2 Abth. p. 21 sqq.) and Topographie v. Damascus (Ib. 1854. 2 Abth. p. 1 sqq.; 1855 2 Abth. p. 1 sqq.) and Wetzstein d. Markt v. Damascus (ZDMG. 1857. p. 476 sqq.) Reisebericht üb. Hauran u. d. Trachonen (1860), carry out the evidence that no trace of such a place can now be found. Köhler ad loc. T. ii. p. 7.

²³ The idiom, the land of, is used of a people, Canaan, Benjamin, Israel, Judah, Zebulun, Naphtali, Simin, Chittim, Egypt, Assyria, the Philistines; or of the actual king, speaking of his territory, (as Neh. ix. 22, they possessed the land of Sihon, and the land of the king of Heshbon and the land of Og, king of Bashan, (Sihon and Og and the king of Heshbon being, at the time spoken of, in actual possession of that land); but it is no where used of any past king or of an idol; much less would it be used in reference to an unknown king or idol. Scotland might, in oratory, be called "land of the Bruce," or England perhaps, "thou land of Mammon." But it would not be called, without emphasis, "land of Stephen" or "Edgar" or any obscure Saxon king.

²⁴ The people, not the land, is called "the people of Chemosh" (i. e. the people who worshipped it) Nu. xxi. 29, Jer. xlviii. 46. Nor is there any like name of an idol. "Derketo" (v. Alphen) would be דַּרְכֵּתָא. Hitzig gave up the combination, by which he made the name of an idol. (Kl. Proph. Ed. 3.)

²⁵ As "Ariel," Is. xxix. 1, 2, 7; "The burden of the desert of the sea," Ib. xxi. 1; "the sea," Jer. xlix. 23; "Sheshac," of Babylon, (whatever the explanation is, perhaps from sinking down, coll. שֶׁשֶׁק Gen. viii. 1) Jer. xxv. 26, li. 41; "the land Merathaim," ("double rebellion"), and "the inhabitants of Pekod" ("visitation") of Babylon (Jer. l. 21); not Dumah, which is probably a real proper name, Is. xxi. 11; nor דָּמָא (Jer. li. 1.)

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

cus shall be the rest thereof: when the eyes of man, as of all the tribes of Israel,

2 Chr. 20. 12. Ps. 145. 15.

almost unknown and probably unimportant, in order to impress upon his people some meaning connected with them¹, but then he does himself so connect it. He does not name it (so to say), leaving it to explain itself. The name Hadrach² would be a real name, used symbolically, without anything in the context to shew that it is a symbol.

The cities, upon which the burden or heavy prophecy fell, possessed no interest for Israel. Damascus was no longer a hostile power; Hamath had ever been peaceable, and was far away; Tyre and Sidon did not now carry on a trade in Jewish captives. But the Jews knew from Daniel, that the empire, to which they were in subjection, would be overthrown by Greece³. When that rapid attack should come, it would be a great consolation to them to know, how they themselves would fare. It was a turning point in their history and the history of the then known world. The prophet describes⁴ the circuit, which the conqueror would take around the land which God defended; how the thunder-cloud circled round Judæa, broke irresistibly upon cities more powerful than Jerusalem, but was turned aside from the holy city in going and returning, because God encamped around it.

"⁵The selection of the places and of the whole line of country corresponds very exactly to the march of Alexander after the battle of Issus, when Damascus, which Darius had chosen as the strong depository of his wealth, of Persian women of rank, confidential officers and envoys⁶," was betrayed, but so opened its gates to his general, Parmenio. Zidon, a city renowned for its antiquity and its founders, surrendered freely; Tyre, here specially marked out, was taken after a 7 months' siege; Gaza too resisted for 5 months, was taken, and, as it was said, "plucked up⁷."

And Damascus shall be the rest thereof. God's judgement fell first upon Damascus. But the word "resting-place" is commonly used of quiet peaceful resting, especially as given by God to Israel; of the ark, the token of the Presence of God, after its manifold removals, and of the glorious dwelling-place of the Christ among men⁸. The prophet seems then purposely to have chosen a word of large meaning, which should at once express (as he had before⁹), that the word of God should fall heavily on Damascus and yet be its resting-place. Hence, about the time of our Lord, the for נָשִׂים; for נָשִׂים could not be mentally substituted for it, since נָשִׂים would be an impossible combination. For inhabitants are of a land, city &c.; but נָשִׂים are the people themselves.

¹ See ab. on Micah i. 10, p. 300.

² The word, divided into two halves, would signify, "sharp-soft." נָשִׂים is used of sharpness (see on Hab. i. 8. comp. Ps. lvii. 5, Is. xlix. 2.); נָשִׂים of delicacy, Deut. xxxiii. 54-56; of weakness, Ib. xx. 8, 2 Chr. xiii. 7. And so it would signify, what was in one respect or at one time "sharp," and in or at another, "soft." A Jewish tradition, extant in times soon after our Lord, so explained it: "Severe to the Gentiles, and tender to Israel." (R. Judah ben Elai, a disciple of R. Akibah. Wolf. Bibl. Hebr. ii. 690) S. Jerome has the same from his Jewish teacher, "The burden of the word of the Lord is on the land of Hadrach; on which the Lord exercised both His austerity and clemency; austerity on those who would not believe, clemency on those who, with the Apostles, returned to Him." The name would have singularly suited Persia, whose empire Alexander was engaged in destroying, when this prophecy was fulfilled, and which was aimed at in them. It would describe them as they were, fierce and cruel, as conquerors, but infamous, even among the Heathen, for their incests. Sins of the flesh, destroying pure love, brutalising the soul, disorganising the frame, are parents of ferocity, from which voluptuousness seems at first sight most alien.

³ Dan. viii. 20, 21.

⁴ See below on ver. 8.

⁵ Pusey's "Daniel the Prophet," pp. 279, 280.

⁶ Grote's Greece xii. 173, 4.

⁷ κατεσσεύετο. Strabo xvi. 2. 30.

⁸ מנוחה is used of rest or a place of rest, given by God, Deut. xii. 9, Ps. xxxiii. 2, xcv. 11, Mi. ii. 10, Is. xxviii. 13, xxxii. 18; dwelling of God, Ps. cxxxii. 8, 14, Is. lxvi. 1; for the ark, 1 Chr. xxviii. 2; of the Messiah, Is. xi. 10. It is probably a proper name, Jud. xx. 43.

⁹ Zech. vi. 8.

¹⁰ R. Johanan in Midrash Shir Hashshirim on Cant. vii. 4 in Raym. Pug. Fid. f. 643.

shall be toward the Lord.

2 And ^d Hamath also shall border there-

^d Jer. 49. 23.

Before CHRIST
cir. 487.

Jews interpreted this of the coming of the Messiah, that "¹⁰ Jerusalem should reach to the gates of Damascus. Since Damascus shall be the place of His rest, but the place of His rest is only the house of the sanctuary, as it is said, This is My rest for ever; here will I dwell." Another added¹¹, "All the prophets and all prophesied but of the years of redemption and the days of the Messiah." Damascus, on the conversion of S. Paul, became the first resting-place of the word of God, the first-fruits of the Gentiles whom the Apostle of the Gentiles gathered from East to West throughout the world.

When [or For] the eyes of man, as [lit. and i. e. especially beyond others] of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the Lord. This also implies a conversion of Gentiles, as well as Jews. For man, as contrasted with Israel, must be the heathen world, mankind¹². "¹³The eyes of all must needs look in adoration to God, expecting all good from Him, because the Creator of all provided for the well-being of all, as the Apostle says, Is He the God of the Jews only? Is He not also of the Gentiles? Yea, of the Gentiles also. God's time of delivering His people is, when they pray to Him. So Jehoshaphat prayed, *O our God, wilt Thou not judge them? For we have no strength against this great company, which is come against us, and we know not what we shall do; but our eyes are on Thee*¹⁴; and the Psalmist says, The eyes of all wait towards Thee; and, ¹⁵as the eyes of servants are unto the hand of their masters, and as the eyes of a maiden are unto the hand of her mistress, so our eyes are unto the Lord our God, until He have mercy upon us. "For in those days," says a Jew, who represents the traditional interpretation¹⁶, "man shall look to his Creator, and his eyes shall look to the Blessed One, as it was said above, we will go with you, and they shall join themselves, they and their cities, to the cities of Israel." And another²⁰; "In those days the eyes of all mankind shall be to the Lord, not to idols or images; therefore the land of Hadrach and Damascus, and the other places near the land of Israel—shall be included among the cities of Judah, and shall be in the faith of Israel."

2. And Hamath also shall border thereby²¹. Near to it in place and character, it shall share its subdual. After the betrayal of Damascus, Parmenio was set over all Syria. "²²The Syrians, not as yet tamed by the losses of war, despised

This Midrash gives a second mystical interpretation of Hadrach. "Hadrach (הדרח) is the King Messiah, Who is to guide (להדריך) all who come into the world by repentance before God, Blessed for ever." Ib. "R. Johanan was a disciple of the elder Hillel and Shammai, according to the Pirké Aboth c. 2; prince of Israel for 40 years, 5 of them after the destruction of the temple. Rashi on cod. Rosh Hashshana, end." Wolf Bibl. Hebr. ii. 844.

¹¹ Mar (quoted by Rashi) i. e. Rabbi ben Nachman "Rector of the Academy of Pumbedita in 300." De Rossi Dict. St. v. Rabboth. Ibn Ezra has; "the rest of the prophecy shall be on Damascus; for this prophecy shall be fulfilled, connected with the second temple; For the eyes of man are to the Lord; for many from the men of Damascus shall return to worship the Lord and to turn to the obedience of Israel in Jerusalem." And so Kimchi, "Damascus shall be His resting-place, i. e. the Shechinah of His glory and prophecy."

¹² So Israel and man (אדם) are contrasted in Jer. xxxii. 20.

¹³ Rib.

¹⁴ Rom. iii. 20.

¹⁵ 2 Chron. xx. 12.

¹⁶ ר' עקיבא עיניו

¹⁷ שָׁקַדָה לְיִשְׂרָאֵל, Ps. cxlv. 15; without עַיִן Ps. civ. 27; and in the same sense, with ל, שָׁקַדָה לְיִשְׂרָאֵל, Ps. cxix. 166.

¹⁸ Ps. cxxxiii. 2. God's eye is said to be יָדָא, towards them that fear Him. Ps. cxxxiii. 18, or in Ezra's Chaldee, The eye of their God was upon the elders (עלֵי זִקְנֵי) of the Jews (Ezr. v. 5.), or, the eyes of the Lord thy God are upon it (the land) נָקָה, De. xi. 12; but there is no construction like לֵי עֵין אֵם "the Lord hath an eye on (obj.) man" (as xxx. Jon. Syr.) The passages, Whose eyes are opened (נִפְתָּחוּ) upon all the ways of the sons of men, to give &c. (Jer. xxxii. 19), "His eyes behold the nations" נִבְּחִים הַגּוֹיִם Ps. lxxvi. 7), are altogether different. "The eye of" must be construed as "his own eye."

¹⁹ Rashi.

²⁰ Kimchi.

²¹ It might be also, and Hamath too, which bordereth thereby, viz. shall be the place of its rest, as well as Damascus, but it seems not so forcible.

²² Q Curtius iv. i.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 437. by; ^e Tyrus, and ^f Zidon, though it be very ^g wise.

^e Isai. 23. 3 And Tyrus did build herself a strong ^f Ezek. 26, & ^g 27, & 28. Amos 1. 9. ^h 1 Kin. 17. 9. Ezek. 28. 21. Obad. 20. ⁱ Ezek. 28. 3, &c.

the new empire, but, swiftly subdued, they did obediently what they were commanded."

And Zidon. Zidon, although probably older than Tyre¹, is here spoken of parenthetically, as subordinate. Perhaps, owing to its situation, it was a wealthy², rather than a strong place. Its name is "Fishing-town;" in Joshua, it is called "the great³," perhaps the metropolis; while Tyre is named from its strength⁴. It infected Israel with its idolatry⁵, and is mentioned among the nations who oppressed them and from whom God delivered them on their prayers⁶, probably under Jabin. In the time of the Judges, it, not Tyre, was looked to for protection⁷. In the times of Ezekiel it had become subordinate, furnishing "rowers⁸" to Tyre; but Esarhaddon, about 80 years before, boasts that he had taken it, destroyed its inhabitants, and repeopled it with men from the East, building a new city which he called by his own name⁹. Tyre too had been taken by Nebuchadnezzar¹⁰. At the restoration from the captivity, Sidon had the first place¹¹, which it retained in the time of Xerxes¹². But Artaxerxes Ochus gained possession of it by treachery, when all Phœnicia revolted from Persia, and, besides those crucified, 40,000 of its inhabitants perished by their own hands¹³, twenty years before the invasion of Alexander, to whom it submitted willingly¹⁴.

The prophet having named Tyre and Zidon together, yet continues as to Tyre alone, as being alone of account in the days of which he is speaking, those of Alexander.

Although, rather, because she is very wise. Man's own wisdom is his foolishness and destruction, as the foolishness of God is his wisdom and salvation. God¹⁵ taketh the wise in their own craftiness. ¹⁶For after that, in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. Of the Hagarines it is said, they ¹⁷seek wisdom upon earth; none of these know the way of wisdom, or remember her paths. The wisdom of Tyre was the source of her pride, and so of her destruction also. ¹⁸Because thy heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, I am a god, I sit in the seat of God, in the midst of the seas; yet thou art a man and not God, though thou hast set thine heart as the heart of God; behold thou art wiser than Daniel, there is no secret that they can hide from thee. Therefore I will bring strangers upon thee—they shall bring thee down to the pit. So of Edom Obadiah says, ¹⁹The pride of thy heart hath deceived thee, thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock. Shall I not destroy the wise men out of Edom, and understanding out of the mount of Esau?

3. And Tyre did build herself a stronghold. She built it for herself, not for God, and trusted to it, not to God, and so its strength brought her the greater fall. The words in Hebrew express yet more. "Tyre" (Zor) lit. "the rock," built herself mazor, tower, a rock-like fort, as it were, a rock hold, and ^aheaped up silver as the dust, and fine gold as the mire of the streets.

4 Behold, ⁱthe Lord will cast her out, ^h Job 27. 16. ⁱ Ezek. 28. 4, 5. ^j Isai. 28. 1.

upon a rock for exceeding strength, binding her together. ²⁰The walls, 150 feet high and of breadth proportionate, compacted of large stones, embedded in gypsum," seemed to defy an enemy who could only approach her by sea. ²¹In order to make the wall twice as strong, they built a second wall ten cubits broad, leaving a space between of five cubits, which they filled with stones and earth." Yet high walls do not fence in only; they also hem in. Mazor is both "a stronghold" and "a siege." Wealth and strength, without God, do but invite and embitter the spoiler and the conqueror.

And she heaped up silver as the dust, and fine gold as the mire of the streets. Though he heap up silver as the dust, Job says²². *The King, Solomon, made silver in Jerusalem as stones*²³. Through her manifold commerce she gathered to herself wealth, as abundant as the mire and the dust, and as valueless. "Gold and silver," said a heathen, "are but red and white earth." Its strength was its destruction. Tyre determined to resist Alexander, ²⁴trusting in the strength of the island, and the stores which they had laid up," the strength within and without, of which the Prophet speaks.

4. Behold. Such were the preparations of Tyre. Over against them, as it were, the prophet sets before our eyes the counsels of God. ²⁵Since they had severed themselves from the providence of God, they were now to experience His power." *The Lord will cast her out*²⁶, lit. deprive her of her possessions, give her an heir of what she had amassed, viz: the enemy; and *he will smite her power or wealth*²⁷, of which Ezekiel says, ²⁸*With thy wisdom and with thine understanding thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures: by the greatness of thy wisdom and by thy traffic thou hast increased thy riches, and thine heart is lifted up because of thy riches*²⁹. All wherein she relied, and so too the stronghold itself, God would smite in the sea. The sea was her confidence and boast. She said ³⁰*I am a god; I sit in the seat of God, in the midst of the seas.*

The scene of her pride was to be that of her overthrow; the waves, which girt her round, should bury her ruins and wash over her site. Even in the sea the hand of God should find her, and smite her in it, and into it, and so that she should abide in it. ³¹They mocked at the king, as though he thought to prevail against Neptune [the sea]. ³²Ye despise this land-army, through confidence in the place, that ye dwell in an island," was the message of Alexander, "but soon will I shew you that ye dwell on a continent."

Every device had been put in force in its defence: the versatility by which the inhabitants of an island, some 2½ miles in circumference, held at bay the conqueror of the battle of Issus with unlimited resources, ³³engineers from Cyprus and all Phœnicia," and ³⁴a fleet of 180 ships from Cyprus," attests the wisdom in which the prophet says, she

¹ "The Tyrians are often called Sidonians; the Sidonians are never called Tyrians."
² Its manufactures of silver bowls and of female robes of great beauty, are mentioned by Homer (Il. vi. 289, xxiii. 743, 744; Od. iv. 614–618.); Homer does not name Tyre.
³ Jos. xi. 8, xix. 28. ⁴ Ib. xix. 29. ⁵ Jud. x. 6.
⁶ Ib. 12. ⁷ Ib. xviii. 7, 28. ⁸ Ezek. xxvii. 8.
⁹ Inscription of Esarhaddon (Annals of the past iii. 112). Such names, in the East, last only with the conquerors.
¹⁰ See ab. p. 164, and, more fully, "Daniel the Prophet," pp. 289, 290. ¹¹ Ezr. iii. 7. ¹² Herod. viii. 67, see also vii. 9. 6.
¹³ Diod. xvi. 41 sqq. Mela i. 12. ¹⁴ Curt. iv. 3. ¹⁵ Job v. 13.

¹⁶ 1 Cor. i. 21. ¹⁷ Baruch iii. 23. ¹⁸ Ezek. xxviii. 2, 8.
¹⁹ Ob. 3, 8. ²⁰ Arrian ii. 21. ²¹ Diod. Sic. xvii. 43.
²² Job xxvii. 16. ²³ 2 Chron. ix. 27. ²⁴ Diod. Sic. xvii. 40. ²⁵ Theod.
²⁶ יָדָיו, of God, is chiefly used of the driving out the Canaanitish nations before Israel, Ex. xxxiv. 24, Nu. xxxii. 21, Ps. xlv. 3, 1 Kgs xiv. 24, xxi. 26, 2 Kgs xvi. 3, xvii. 8, xxi. 2.
²⁷ יָנָן cannot be here the outer wall (on which see Nah. iii. 3, ab. p. 391, n. 6.) which was useless in island Tyre, whose walls rising from the sea needed no outer wall and admitted of no fosse or pomœrium. ²⁸ Ezek. xxviii. 4, 5. ²⁹ יָנָן ³⁰ Ezek. xxviii. 2.
³¹ Diod. Sic. xvii. 41. ³² Q. Curt. iv. 7. ³³ Arr. ii. 21. ³⁴ Q. Curt. iv. 13.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 437.

and he will smite ^k her power in the sea; and she shall be devoured with fire.

^k Ezek. 26. 17.
^l Jer. 47. 1, 5.
Zeph. 2. 4.

5 ^l Ashkelon shall see it, and fear; Gaza also shall see it, and be very sorrowful, would trust. "She had already a profusion of catapults and other machines useful in a siege, and easily prepared manifold others by the makers of war-engines and all sorts of artificers whom she had, and these invented new engines of all sorts; so that the whole circuit of the city was filled with engines." Divers who should loosen the mole; grappling hooks and nets to entangle near-assailants; melted metal or heated sand to penetrate between the joints of their armour; bags of sea-weed to deaden the blows of the battering machines; a fire-ship navigated so as to destroy the works of the enemy, while its sailors escaped; fiery arrows; wheels set in continual motion, to turn aside the missiles against them², bear witness to an unwearied inventiveness of defence. The temporary failures might have shaken any mind but Alexander's (who is even said to have hesitated³) but that he dared not, by abandoning the enterprise, lose the prestige of victory. Yet all ended in the massacre of 6, 7, or 8000 of her men, the crucifixion of 2000, the sale of the rest, whether 13,000 or 30,000, into slavery⁴. None escaped save those whom the Sidonians secreted in the vessels⁵, with which they had been compelled to serve against her.

And she herself⁶, when her strength is overthrown, shall be devoured with fire. "Alexander, having slain all, save those who fled to the temples, ordered the houses to be set on fire."

5. Ashkelon shall see and fear. The words express that to see and fear shall be as one⁷. The mightiest and wealthiest, Tyre, having fallen, the neighbour cities of Philistia who had hoped that her might should be their stay, shall stand in fear and shame. Tyre, being a merchant-city, the mother-city of the cities of the African coast and in Spain, its desolation caused the more terror⁸.

And the [a] king shall perish from Gaza, i.e. it shall have no more kings. It had been the policy of the world-empires to have tributary kings in the petty kingdoms which they conquered, thus providing for their continued tranquil submission to themselves⁹. The internal government remained as before: the people felt no difference, except as to the payment of the tribute. The policy is expressed by the title "king of kings," which they successively bore. Sennacherib speaks of the kings of Ascalon, Ekron and Gaza¹⁰. A contemporary of Alexander¹¹ mentions, that the king of Gaza was brought alive to Alexander on its capture. Alexander's

¹ Diod. Sic. xvii. 41.

² Diod. Sic. xvii. 42-46.

³ Q. Curt. i. c.

⁴ ⁶ ^{ממנה} ^{emph.}

⁵ Diod. xvii. 46. Q. Curt. iv. 19, Arr. ii. 24.

⁷ ^{מאשר} ^{מאשר}

⁸ Is. xxiii. 5-11.

⁹ Herodotus states it to have been the wont of the Persian monarchs to put the sons even of revolted kings on their fathers' thrones (iii. 15), and in the review of the Persian troops under Xerxes mentions different tributary kings, among whom the king of Sidon had first rank; then the king of Tyre; then the rest (viii. 67). Josephus speaks of "the kings of Syria" (Ant. xi. 8. 5.)

¹⁰ in Layard Nin. and Bah. p. 144.

¹¹ Hegesias in Dionys. Hal. de comp. verh. c. 18. T. V. p. 125, Reiske. There is much obscurity about the individual. Dion. Hal. has, "its king Baistis or Baistios;" Arrian (ii. 25) mentions Batis, an Eunuch and so a Persian officer, as "having supreme authority over Gaza;" ^{κράτωρ τ. Γαζαίων πόλεως}. Q. Curtius says, "Betis was over the city" (iv. 26). "Josephus (Ant. xi. 8. 3) says that "the name of the commandant of the garrison was Babēmēsēs."

¹² See "Daniel the Prophet," pp. 142-145.

¹³ 1 Macc. x. 86.

¹⁴ Ib. xi. 60, 61.

¹⁵ Ib. xii. 33.

¹⁶ "The name was given twice to Lieut. Conder and 3 times to Corporal Brophy by different witnesses," "so that there is no doubt (Lieut. Conder subjoins) that it is a well-known site." Lieut. Conder's Report N. xxxiv. p. 153.

¹⁷ Jnd. xiv. 19.

¹⁸ See ab. p. 453.

¹⁹ Lieut. Conder, Ib.

and Ekron; for her expectation shall be ashamed; and the king shall perish from Gaza, and Ashkelon shall not be inhabited.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 437.

6 And a bastard shall dwell in ^m Ashdod, ^m Amos 1. 8.

policy was essentially different from that of the world-monarchs before him. They desired only to hold an empire as wide as possible, leaving the native kings, if they could; and only, if these were intractable, placing their own lieutenants. Alexander's policy was to blend East and West into one¹². These petty sovereignties, so many insulated centres of mutual repulsion, were essentially at variance with this plan, and so this remnant of sovereignty of 1500 years was taken away by him, when, after a siege in which he himself was twice wounded, he took it. Alexander wholly depopulated it, and repeopled the city with strangers.

And Ashkelon shall not be inhabited. Ashkelon yielded at once to Jonathan, when he "camped against it¹³," after he had taken and "burned Ashdod and the cities round about it." In another expedition of Jonathan its inhabitants "¹⁴met him honourably," while "they of Gaza shut him out" at first. "¹⁵Simon—passed through the country unto Ascalon, and the holds there adjoining," without resistance, whereas "he turned aside to Joppe, and won it." He placed Jews in Gaza, but of Ascalon nothing is said. The ruins of a Christian city, built on its site, "khirbet-Ascalon," have been lately discovered in the hills near Tell Zakariyeh¹⁶, and so, a little South of Timnath, a Philistine city in the days of Samson, whence Samson went to it, to gain the 30 changes of raiment¹⁷. Commentators have assigned reasons, why Samson might have gone so far as the maritime Ascalon, whereas, in fact, he went to a city close by.

That city, in 536 A.D., had its Bishop¹⁸. "¹⁹The site shews the remains of an early Christian Church or convent:" as a great lintel of stone²⁰, resembling somewhat the Maltese Cross, lies on the ground." It was probably destroyed by the inundation of Mohammedan conquest. In 1163 A.D. it was a ruin. The distance of the ruins from the Ascalon Maiumas corresponds to that assigned by Benjamin of Tudela, being twice the distance of that city from Ashdod²¹; but since he was at Beth Jibrin²², he must have been not far from the spot where it has been lately discovered²³. The Ashkelon, which was Herod's birth-place and which he beautified, must have been the well-known city by the sea; since the distance from Jerusalem assigned by Josephus²⁴ is too great for the old Ashkelon, and he speaks of it as on the sea²⁵.

6. *And a bastard shall dwell at Ashdod*²⁶. The "mamzer" was one born unlawfully, whether out of marriage, or in forbidden marriage, or in adultery²⁷. Here it is, probably, like ²⁰ "Such lintels are to be found in all that class of ruins, which date from about the 5th to the 7th century." Ib.

²¹ He says that the new Ashkelon, that on the sea, is 2 parasangs from Ashdod, 4 from the old Ashkelon.

²² Travels, p. 22.

²³ Jeremiah, xlvii. 7, How can it (the sword of the Lord) be quiet, seeing that the Lord has given it a charge against Ashkelon, and against the sea-shore? has often been wrongly quoted in proof that Ashkelon was on the sea-shore. On the contrary, Jeremiah speaks of them, as distinct; "against Ashkelon and against the sea-shore." The ^{מִן הַיָּם} in the 3 other places, in which it occurs, is only a title for Philistia itself, as lying between the Shephelah and the sea. Thus in Deut. i. 7, Palestine is divided into the hill country, the 'Arabah, the Shephelah, the Negeb, and the ^{מִן הַיָּם}. In Joshua, ix. 1. the division is, "the hill country, the Shephelah, and the whole coast of the great sea, ^{כָּל הַיָּם הַהוּא}." Ezekiel (xxv. 16.) uses ^{מִן הַיָּם}, as equivalent to the Cherehim and Philistim, whom he had named in v. 5. Jeremiah names together the whole tract and a chief city of it, as the prophets so often speak of "Judah and Jerusalem."

²⁴ 520 stadia. B. J. iii. 2. 1.

²⁵ Ib. iv. 11. 5.

²⁶ On the omission of Gath see on Am. i. 6.

²⁷ ^{לֵךְ נִסְפָּה}, ^ל in Deut. xxiii. 3; "de scorto," Vulg. and so Saad.; "son of adultery," Syr. With this agrees the opinion of R. Joshua A. D. 73, "every one, for whom they are guilty of death in the house of judgement." R. Joshua b. Azai says, "I have found a roll of

Before CHRIST
cir. 487.
† Heb. bloods. and I will cut off the pride of the Philistines.
7 And I will take away his † blood out of his mouth, and his abominations from between his teeth: but he that remaineth, our "spurious brood¹;" whether it was so itself or in the eyes of the Ashdodites; whence he adds,

I will cut off the pride of the Philistines. Pride would survive the ruin of their country, the capture of their cities, the loss of independence. It would not survive the loss of their nationality; for they themselves would not be the same people, who were proud of their long-descent and their victories over Israel. The breaking down of nationalities, which was the policy of Alexander, was an instrument in God's hands in cutting off their pride.

7. And I will take away his bloods out of his mouth. The abominations being idol-sacrifices², the bloods will also be, the blood mingled with the wine of sacrifices, of which David says, ³ Their drink-offerings of blood will I not offer; and Ezekiel unites the offences, ⁴ Ye eat with the blood, and lift up your eyes toward your idols, and shed blood.

But he that remaineth, better, And he too shall remain over to our God. Of the Philistines too, as of Israel, a remnant shall be saved. After this visitation their idolatry should cease; God speaks of the Philistine nation as one man; He would wring his idol-sacrifices and idol-enjoyments from him; he should exist as a nation, but as God's.

And he shall be as a governor in Judah, lit. "a captain of a thousand," merged in Judah as in a larger whole, as each tribe was divided into its "thousands," yet intimately blended, in no inferior position, with the people of God, as each converted nation became an integral yet unseparated whole in the people of God.

And Ekron as a Jebusite. Ekron was apparently the least important of the few remaining Philistine cities⁵; yet he shall be, as those of the Canaanite nations who were not destroyed, nor fled, but in the very capital and centre of Israel's worship, ⁶ dwelt with the children of Benjamin and Judah, and were, as a type of the future conversion and absorption of the heathen, incorporated into Judah.

8. And I will encamp about my house (for⁷ my house's sake) because of the army⁸; because, it is added in explanation, of him that passeth by and of him that returneth; Alexander, who passed by with his army, on his way to Egypt, and returned, having founded Alexandria.

It was a most eventful march; one of the most eventful in the history of mankind. The destruction of the Persian empire, for which it prepared, was in itself of little moment; Alexander's own empire was very brief. As Daniel had genealogies in Jerusalem, and there was written in it, 'M., a mamzer from a man's wife;' to confirm the words of R. Joshua, in Yebamoth c. 4, § 13. R. Akiba's opinion was, that "it was any near of kin, with whom marriage was forbidden;" Simon the Temanite said, "any liable to excision at the hands of God." Ib. in Ges. Thes. p. 781 sub v. Of the etymologies, Kimchi's is perhaps the most probable, that it is from מ, the two D's being added, as in קמח, Joel i. 17.

¹ The Lxx. Jon. Syr. agree in the rendering, "strangers," Jon. and the Syr. using the same word; נכרי Pesh.; "and the children of Israel shall dwell in Ashdod, who were in it, as strangers" (נכריים). Jon. Ag. Symm. Theod. retain the Hebrew word, as do Onk. and Sam. in Deut.

² שקץ always retains its appellative sense. It is not merely "idols," but idols, in that they were "abominations." It is generally in constr., "the abomination of" such a nation, 1 Kgs xi. 5, 7 [bis], 2 Kgs xxiii. 13 [bis], "the abomination of his, their, eyes," Ezek. xx. 7, 8; or with the personal pronoun as here, Deut. xxix. 16, Is. lxvi. 3, Jer. [5 times] Ezek. [6 times]. In a few places it stands absolutely, in its original appellative sense, Nah. iii. 6; allusively to the idol abominations, Hos. ix. 10; with art. the [idol] abominations (2 Kgs xxiii. 24, 2 Chr. xv. 8); and the abomination of desolation. Dan. ix. 27, xi. 31, xii. 11. [all].

³ Ps. xvi. 4.

⁴ Ezek. xxxiii. 25.

⁵ Josh. xv. 63, Jud. i. 21.

⁶ לביי

even he, shall be for our God, and he shall be as a governor in Judah, and Ekron as a Jebusite.

8 And ^a I will encamp about mine house ^b Ps. 34. 7. ch. 2. 5.

foretold⁹, he came, cast down Persia to the ground, waxed very great, and when he was strong, the great horn was broken. But with the marvellous perception which characterised him, he saw and impressed upon his successors the dependability of the Jewish people. When he came into Judæa, he sent to the high priest for aid against Tyre and for the like tribute as he used to pay to Darius, promising that he would not repent of choosing the friendship of the Macedonians¹⁰. The high priest refused on the ground of the oath, by which his people were bound in fealty to the earthly king of kings, whom Alexander came to subdue. Alexander threatened to teach all, through its fate, to whom fealty was due. This, after the conquest of Gaza, he prepared to fulfil. He came, he saw, he was conquered. ¹¹ Jaddua and his people prayed to God. Taught by God in a dream not to fear, he went to meet the conqueror. The gates of the city were thrown open. There marched out, not an army such as encountered the Romans, but as he had been taught, a multitude in white garments, and the priests going before in their raiment of fine linen. The high priest, in his apparel of purple and gold, having on his head the mitre, and on it the golden plate¹², whereon was written the name of God, advanced alone, and the Conqueror, who was expected to give the city to be plundered, and the high priest to be insulted and slain, kissed the name of God, recognising in the priest one whom he had seen in the like dress in a dream, who had bidden him, when hesitating, cross to Asia; for that he would go before his army and deliver the Persian empire to him.

The result is related to have been, that Alexander promised to allow the Jews in Judæa to live according to their own laws, remitted the tribute of every seventh year, acceded beforehand to the terms to be proposed by those in Babylonia and Media, and that many Jews joined his army, under condition that they might live under their own laws.

Rationalism, while it remains such, cannot admit of Daniel's prophecies which the high priest shewed him, declaring that a Greek should destroy the Persian empire, which Alexander rightly interpreted of himself. But the facts remain; that the conqueror, who, above most, gave way to his anger, bestowed privileges almost incredible on a nation, which under the Medes and Persians had been "the most despised part of the enslaved;" made them equal in privileges to his own Macedonians¹⁴, who could hardly brook the absorption of the Persians, although in inferior condition, among ⁹ צָרָה, for צָרָה, according to the Masorites as in the verb also, Is. xxix. 7. So Symm. καλῶς στρατῆρας. The context also favours the reading; for unless the passers by and returners had been a powerful army, there had been no occasion for that defence of which God speaks. The correction צָרָה would come to the same, "a military post;" only, in actual use, this is a "fort," "fortress," 1 Sam. xiv. 12, i. q. צָרָה 1b. xiii. 23, xiv. 1, 4, 6, 11, 15, 2 Sam. xxiii. 14. צָרָה Is. xxix. 3, is a work on the offensive, not defensive. Ewald comes to the same sense, that God would protect her against any one coming against her.

¹⁰ Dan. viii. 7, 8. ¹¹ Jos. Ant. xi. 8. 3. ¹² Justin says, "then he, Alexander, goes to Syria, where many kings of the East with fillets met him. Of these, according to their deserts, he received some into alliance; others he deprived of their kingdom, putting other kings in their place." xi. 10.

¹³ Tacitus limits the description to the time, "when the East belonged to the Assyrians, Medes and Persians." Hist. v. 8.

¹⁴ "Alexander gave them (the Jews) a place to dwell in, and they obtained equal rank with the Macedonians. I know not what Apion would have said, had they been settled near the Necropolis and not near the palace, and were not their race now too called 'Macedonians.' If then he (Apion) has read the Epistles of Alexander the King, and has met with the rescripts of Ptolemy Lagi and the kings after him, and has lighted on the column which stands in Alexandria and contains the rights given by the great Cæsar to the Jews; if, I say,

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
because of the army, because of him that passeth by, and because of him that returneth: and no oppressor shall pass through them any more: for now I have I

^o Isai. 60. 18.
Ezek. 23. 24.
^p Ex. 3. 7.

seen with mine eyes.

9 ¶ Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion;
shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and ^r Jer. 23. 5. & 30. 9. Luke 19. 38. John 1. 49.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

^a Isai. 62. 11.
ch. 2. 10.
^b Matt. 21. 5.
John 12. 13.

themselves¹. The most despised of the enslaved became the most trusted of the trusted. They became a large portion of the second and third then known cities of the world. They became Alexandrians, Antiochenes, Ephesians², without ceasing to be Jews. The law commanded faithfulness to oaths, and they who despised their religion respected its fruits.

The immediate successors of Alexander, Ptolemy Lagi³ and Antiochus Nicator, followed his policy; Ptolemy especially on the ground of the fealty shewn to Darius; Nicator, as having observed their faithfulness as soldiers, who had served with him⁴; but they were so enrolled on this visit to Jerusalem. The Heathen kings multiplied, in their own purpose, faithful subjects to themselves; in God's design, they prepared in Asia and Egypt a seed-plot for the Gospel. The settlement of the Jews at Alexandria formed the language of the Gospel; that wonderful blending of the depth of the Hebrew with the clearness and precision of the Greek. Everywhere the seed of the preparatory dispensation was sown, to be fostered, grow and ripen with the harvest of the Gospel.

For now have I seen with Mine eyes. This is the counterpart of what the Psalmists and pious men so often pray, ⁶*Awake to help me and behold; 6 Look down from heaven, behold and visit this vine; 7 Look upon my trouble from them that hate me; 8 Look upon my affliction and my trouble; look upon my enemies, for they are many; 9 Look upon my adversity and deliver me; 10 O Lord, behold my affliction; 11 Behold, O Lord, for I am in distress; 12 Look and behold my reproach; 13 Open Thine eyes, O Lord, and see; 14 Look down from heaven, and behold from the habitation of Thy holiness and glory.* With God, compassion is so intrinsic an attribute, that He is pictured as looking away, when He does not put it forth. With God, to behold is to help.

9. From the protection, which God promised to His people and to His House, the Prophet passes on to Him Who was ever in his thoughts, and for Whose sake that people and temple were preserved. He had described the great conqueror of this world, sweeping along in his course of victory. In contrast with such as he, he now exhibits to his people the character and procession of their king. Rejoice greatly. Not with this world's joy. God never exhorts man to rejoice greatly in this world's fleeting joys. He allows us to be glad, as children, before Him; He permits such buoyancy of heart, if innocent; but He does not command it. Now He commands His people to burst out into a jubilee of rejoicing: they were to dance and shout for gladness of spirit; "despising the poor exultation of this world and exulting with that exceeding" yet chaste joy, which befits the true bliss to be brought by their King and Saviour. "¹⁵ This word, greatly, means that there should be no measure whatever in their exultation; for the exultation of the children of the bridegroom is far unlike to the exultation of the children of this world." "¹⁶ He biddeth the spiritual Zion rejoice, inasmuch as dejection was removed. For what cause of sorrow is there, when sin has been removed, death trampled under foot, and human nature called to the dignity of freedom, and crowned with the grace of adoption and illumined with the heavenly gift?"

Behold, thy king cometh unto thee. He does not say "a king," but "thy king;" thy king, thine own, the long-promised, the long-expected; He Who, when they had kings of their own, given them by God, had been promised as *the king*¹⁷; ¹⁸*the righteous Ruler among men*, of the seed of David; He Who, above all other kings, was their King and Saviour; Whose kingdom was to absorb in itself all kingdoms of the earth; the King of kings, and Lord of lords. Her king was to come to her. He was in a manner then "of her," and "not of her;" "of her," since He was to be her king, "not of her," since He was to "come to her." As Man, He was born of her: as God, the Word made flesh, He came to her. "¹⁹ To thee, to be manifest unto thee²⁰; to be thine by communion of nature²¹; as He is thine, by the earnest of the Eternal Spirit and the gift of the Father, to procure thy good. ²² Unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given." Of this, His entry into Jerusalem was an image. But how should He come? "He shall come to thee," says an old Jewish writing²³, "to atone thee; He shall come to thee, to upraise thee; He shall come to thee, to raise thee up to His temple, and to espouse thee with an everlasting espousal."

He is just and having salvation. Just or righteous, and the Fountain of justice or righteousness. For what He is, that He diffuseth. Righteousness which God Is, and righteousness which God, made Man, imparts, are often blended in Holy Scripture²⁴. This is also the source of the exceeding he knows these things, and, knowing them, has dared to write the contrary, he is unprincipled; if he knew nothing of them, he is ill-instructed." "Alexander collected some of our people there, not for want of such as should colonise the city which he founded with great earnestness. But carefully proving all as to good faith and probity, he gave this distinction to our people. For he honoured our nation, as Hecateus too says of us, that, for the probity and good faith which the Jews evinced towards him, he gave them in addition the territory of Samaria to hold, free from tribute. And Ptolemy Lagi too was like-minded with Alexander as to those who dwell in Alexandria." cont. ap. 4.4. This early equalising of the Jews with Alexandrians is recognised in the edict of Claudius; "Having learnt that the Jews in Alexandria were from the first called Alexandrians, having been settled there together with the Alexandrians straightway at the earliest period, and having received from the kings equal citizenship, as appeared plain both from their letters and from the ordinances," &c. [in Jos. Ant. xix. 5. 2.] in Pusey's "Daniel the Prophet," p. 146, n. 3. ¹ Arr. vii. 6.

² "His (Apion's) marvelling, how, being Jews, they were called Alexandrians, betrays the same ignorance. For all who are invited into a given colony, much as they differ in race, take their name from its founders. Those of us, who dwell at Antioch, are called Antiochenes. For Seleucus, the founder, gave them citizenship. And so too in Ephesus, and the rest of Asia, they bear the same name with the natives, the Successors (of Alexander) having given it to them." Jos. c. Ap. ii. 4. See Pusey's "Daniel the Prophet," p. 146, n. 2.

³ Ptolemy Lagi, "understanding that those from Jerusalem were most reliable as to their oaths and fealty, (from the answer which they gave to the embassy of Alexander after he had conquered Darius,) having located many of them in the garrisons and given them equal rights of citizenship with the Macedonians in Alexandria, took an oath of them that they would keep fealty to the descendants of him who gave them this charge. And no few of the other Jews came of their own accord into Egypt, invited by the goodness of the soil and the liberality of Ptolemy." Jos. Ant. xii. 1. 16. p. 145. n. 8.

⁴ "They (the Jews) obtained the honour from the kings of Asia also, having served in the army with them. For Seleucus Nicator, in the cities which he founded in Asia and in lower Syria, and in the metropolis itself, Antioch, conferred on them citizenship, and made them rank with the Macedonians and Greeks who were settled therein, so that this citizenship remains even now also." Ant. xii. 3. 1. 16. p. 146. n. 1.

⁵ Ps. lix. 4. ⁶ Ib. lxxx. 14. ⁷ Ib. ix. 13. ⁸ Ib. xxv. 18, 19. ⁹ Ib. cxix. 153. ¹⁰ Lam. i. 9. add 11, ii. 20. ¹¹ Ib. i. 20. ¹² Ib. v. 1. ¹³ Is. xxxvii. 17. Dan. ix. 18. ¹⁴ Is. lxiii. 15. ¹⁵ Rup. ¹⁶ S. Cyr. ¹⁷ e. g. Ps. ii. lxxii. Is. xxxii. 1. Jer. xxiii. 5. ¹⁸ 2 Sam. xxiii. 3. ¹⁹ Cocc. ²⁰ 1 Tim. iii. 16. ²¹ Heb. ii. 14. ²² Is. ix. 6.

²³ Zohar Levit. f. 3. col. 9 in Schöttg. on Hos. ii. 21.

²⁴ Is. xlv. 21. liii. 11, Jer. xxiii. 5, 6, xxxiii. 15, 16, Mal. iv. 2.

Before
CHRIST || having salvation; lowly, and riding upon
cir. 487. || Or, saving himself.

an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass. Before CHRIST
cir. 487.

joy. For the coming of their king in righteousness would be, to sinful man, a cause, not of joy but of fear. This was the source of the Angel's message of joy; ¹ I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people; for unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour.

He is just, ² "because in the Divine Nature, He is the Fountain of all holiness and justice." ³ "As Thou art righteous Thyself, Thou orderest all things righteously. For Thy power is the beginning of righteousness." According to the nature which He took, He was also most just; for He ever sought the glory of the Father, and ⁴ He did no sin, neither was guile found in His Mouth. In the way also of justice He satisfied for men, delivering Himself for their faults to the pain of the most bitter death, to satisfy the honour of the Divine Majesty, so that sin should not remain unpunished. Hence He saith of Himself; ⁵ He that seeketh His glory that sent Him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in Him. Of Whom also Stephen said to the Jews, ⁶ Your fathers slew them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One, of Whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers. Righteousness is an awful attribute of God. It is a glory and perfection of His Being, for the perfect to gaze on and adore. Mercy, issuing in our salvation, is the attribute which draws us sinners. And this lies in the promise that He should come to them, however the one word nosha' be rendered ⁷. The meaning of such a prophecy as this is secure, independent of single words. The whole context implies, that He should come as a ruler and deliverer, whether the word nosha' signify "endued with salvation," (whereas the old versions rendered it, "Saviour") or whether it be, "saved." For as He came, not for Himself but for us, so, in as far as He could be said to be saved, He was "saved," not for Himself but for us. Of our Lord, as Man, it is, in like way, said, ⁸ Thou shalt not leave His soul in Hell, or, Whom God raised up, having loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that He should be holden of it. As Man, He was raised from the dead; as God, He raised Himself from the dead, for our sakes, for whom He died. For us, He was born a Saviour; for us, He was endued with salvation; for us, He was saved from being held of death; in like way as, of His Human Nature, the Apostle says, ⁹ He was heard, in that He feared. To us, as sinners, it is happiest to hear of the Saviour; but the most literal meaning "saved" has its own proper comfort: for it implies the Sufferings, by which that salvation was procured, and so it contains a hint of the teaching by Isaiah, He was taken from oppression and from judgement; upon which that same wide reign follows, of which David, in his picture of the Passion ¹¹, and Isaiah ¹² prophesy. ¹³ This 'saved' does not imply, that He obtained salvation for His own otherwise than from Himself. Mine own arm, He saith in Isaiah, ¹⁴ brought salvation unto Me. But as Man, He obtained salvation from the indwelling Godhead. For when He destroyed the might of death, when, rising from the dead, He ascended into heaven, when He took on Him the everlasting kingdom of heaven and earth, He obtained salvation from the glory of the Father, i.e. from His own Divinity, to impart it to all His. The Hebrew word then in no way diminishes the amplitude of His dignity. For we confess, that the Human Nature of Christ had that everlasting glory added to It from His Divine Nature, so that He should not only be Himself adorned with those everlasting gifts, but should become the cause of everlasting salvation to all who obey Him."

Lowly. Outward lowliness of condition, is, through the grace of God, the best fosterer of the inward. The word lowly wonderfully expresses the union of both; lowness of outward state with lowliness of soul. The Hebrew word expresses the condition of one, who is bowed down, brought low through oppression, affliction, desolation, poverty, persecution, bereavement; but only if, at the same time, he had in him the fruit of all these, in lowliness of mind, submission to God, piety. Thus our Lord pronounces the blessedness of "the poor" and "the poor in spirit," i.e. poor in estate, who are poor in soul also. But in no case does it express lowliness of mind without lowness of condition. One lowly, who was not afflicted, would never be so called. The Prophet then declares that their king should come to them in a poor condition, *stricken, smitten, and afflicted*¹⁵, and with the special grace of that condition, meekness, gentleness and lowliness of soul; and our Lord bids us, ¹⁶ Learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly of heart. ¹⁷ He saith of Himself in the Gospel, ¹⁷ The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His Head. ¹⁸ For though He was rich, He for our sakes became poor, that we through His poverty might be rich.

Lowly and riding upon an ass. Kings of the earth ride in state. The days were long since by, when the sons of the judges rode on asses¹⁹. Even then the more distinguished rode on white (i.e. roan²⁰) asses. The mule, as a taller animal, was used by David²¹ and his sons²², while asses were used for his household²³, and by Ziba, Shimei, Mephibosheth, Ahitophel²⁴, and, later, by the old prophet of Bethel²⁵. David had reserved horses for 100 chariots²⁶, after the defeat of the Syrians, but he himself did not use them. Absalom employed *chariots and horses*²⁷ as part of his pomp, when preparing to displace his father; and Solomon multiplied them²⁸. He speaks of it as an indignity or reverse; ²⁹ I have seen servants upon horses, and princes walking, as servants, upon the earth. The burial of an ass became a proverb for a disgraced end³⁰. There is no instance in which a king rode on an ass, save He Whose kingdom was not of this world. The prophecy, then, was framed to prepare the Jews to expect a prophet-king, not a king of this world. Their eyes were fixed on this passage. In the Talmud, in their traditional interpretations, and in their mystical books, they dwelt on these words. The mention of the ass, elsewhere, seemed to them typical of this ass, on which their Messiah should ride. "If a man in a dream seeth an ass," says the Talmud³¹, "he shall see salvation."

¹ S. Luke ii. 10, 11.

² Dion.

³ Wisd. xii. 15, 16.

⁴ 1 S. Pet. ii. 22.

⁵ S. John vii. 18.

⁶ Acts vii. 52.

⁷ The Jewish Versions as well as the Christian render, actively, "Saviour," LXX, σώζων; Jon. פֶּרֶק, as well as the Christian, the Syr. and S. Jerome. The participle פֶּרֶק might, according to analogy, be a reflexive, but it only occurs elsewhere as a passive; with וּפֶרַק, Deut. xxxiii. 29, Is. xlv. 17; with וּפֶרַק, Ps. xxxiii. 16. Imperat. "look unto Me and be ye saved," וּפֶרַק Is. xlv. 22; being "saved by God" implied Nu. x. 9. Ps. xviii. 4. [2 Sam. xxii. 4.] lxxx. 4, 8, 20, cxix. 117, Pr. xxviii. 18, Is. xxx. 15, lxiv. 4, Jer. iv. 14, viii. 20, xvii. 14, xxiii. 6, xxx. 7, xxxiii. 16. [all]

⁸ Ps. xvi. 10.

⁹ Acts ii. 24.

¹⁰ Heb. v. 7.

¹¹ Ps. xxii. 27, 28.

¹² Is. liii. 10-12.

¹³ Osor.

¹⁴ Is. lxiii. 5.

¹⁵ S. Matt. viii. 20.

¹⁶ Is. liii. 4.

¹⁷ 2 Cor. viii. 9.

¹⁸ Jud. x. 4, xii. 14.

¹⁹ Ib. v. 10.

²⁰ 1 Kgs i. 33, 38, 44.

²¹ 2 Sam. xiii. 29, xviii. 9.

²² Ib. v. 10.

²³ Ib. xvi. 2.

²⁴ Ib. xvi. 1, xvii. 23, xix. 26, 1 Kgs ii. 40.

²⁵ 1 Kgs xiii. 13, 23, 27.

²⁶ 2 Sam. viii. 4.

²⁷ Ib. xv. 1.

²⁸ 1 Kgs iv. 26, x. 26, 2 Chr. i. 14, ix. 25.

²⁹ Eccl. x. 7.

³⁰ Jer. xxii. 19.

³¹ Berachoth f. 56. 2 (in Schöttgen ad loc.). There was a general consent among the Jews,

It is an instance of a prophecy which, humanly speaking, a false Messiah could have fulfilled, but which, from its nature, none would fulfil, save the True. For their minds were set on earthly glory and worldly greatness: it would have been inconsistent with the claims of one, whose kingdom was of this world. It belonged to the character of Him, Who was buffeted, mocked, scourged, spit upon, crucified, died for us, and rose again. It was Divine humiliation, which, in the purpose of God, was to be compensated by Divine power. In itself it would, if insulated, have been unmeaning. The

that this prophecy related to the Messiah. R. Joseph (probably "the pious," the disciple of Jochanan, the disciple of Hillel, Wolf, Bibl. Hebr. ii. 818, 814) used it as an argument against R. Hillel, who disbelieved in any Messiah. "R. Hillel, 'Israel has no Messiah, for they enjoyed him in the days of Hezekiah.' R. Joseph said, 'Lord, forgive R. Hillel!' When did Hezekiah live? In [the time of] the first temple. But Zechariah prophesied in [the time of] the second temple; 'Rejoice greatly, daughter of Zion, behold, thy king cometh unto thee, righteous and nosha.'" He said also, "O that he may come, and that I may be worthy to sit in the shadow of the dung of his ass." Sanhedrin, f. 99. 1. "R. Alexandri said, that R. Joshua ben Levi set against each other the Scriptures, 'Lo there came with the clouds of heaven one like unto the Son of Man,' and that, 'lowly and riding on an ass.' Deserve he [Israel], 'with the clouds of heaven;' deserve he not, 'lowly and riding on an ass.'" Ib. f. 98. "All these goods, which I will do to them through the merits of the Messiah, shall be extended in all those years." R. Jannai (about A.D. 130) said from Raf, "whoever looketh for salvation, God will give him rest in the garden of Eden, according to that, 'I will feed my flock and cause them to lie down' (Ezek. xxxiv. 15.) 'Just and nosha.' This is the Messiah, who justifieth his judgement against Israel because they mocked him, because he sat in prison, so he is called 'just.' But why nosha, but that he justifieth the judgement upon them. He says to them, 'ye are my sons; are ye not all to be saved only by the mercy of the Holy One, blessed be He?' 'Afflicted and riding on an ass.' This is the Messiah. But why is his name called nosha, 'afflicted?' Because he was afflicted all those years in prison, and the transgressors of Israel mocked him, because he rideth upon an ass on account of the wicked who have no desert." (a dislocated passage, Schöttg. says, of the Pesikta Rabbathi f. 61. 1. 2. in Schöttg. de Messia, loci gen. n. cxvii. p. 136. The Hebrew of the latter part is given by Wünsche d. Leiden des Messias p. 66.) And in a remarkable passage on Cant. i. 4, "Let us exult and rejoice in thee." "The Matrona is like a royal bride, whose husband the king, her sons and sons-in-law, were gone beyond sea. When they brought her word that her sons were returned, she said, 'What cause of joy have I? Let my daughters-in-law rejoice!' Another messenger came, that her sons-in-law were returned, she answered, 'What cause of joy have I? Let my daughters rejoice!' But when they told her that the king, her husband, was returned, she said, 'This is perfect joy, a joy above all joys!' So also in the time to come, the time of the Messiah, the prophets shall come to Jerusalem and say, (Is. lx. 4) 'thy sons shall come from far; she will answer, 'What cause of joy have I?' The prophets will add, 'Thy daughters shall be nurtured by thy side; she will answer in like way. But when they shall say to her, 'Behold, thy king cometh unto thee, just and a Saviour,' then she shall say, 'This is perfect joy; as in, 'Exult greatly, daughter of Zion,' and elsewhere, 'Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion.' Then she shall say, 'I will greatly rejoice in the Lord, my soul shall be joyful in my God (Is. lxi. 10.)' Shir hashshirim Rabba fol. 7. 3 (in Schöttg. loc. gen. n. v., Martini f. 512). They quote the prophecy also as to the union of the royal and priestly offices of the Messiah. The Bereshith Rabba had on Gen. xiv. 18, "And Melchizedec, king of Salem." This is the name of Shem, the son of Noah. What would that teach, 'he brought forth bread and wine?' R. Samuel Bar Nachman said, He delivered to him the ways of the priesthood, and he offered bread and wine to God, as it is said, 'He was priest of the most High God, king of Salem.'—Otherwise; Melchizedec; this is what Scripture saith, 'The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a Priest for ever after the order of Melchizedec.' And who is he? This is the king, righteous and nosha, the king Messiah, according to, 'Behold thy king cometh unto thee, righteous and nosha.' And what would that teach, 'He brought forth bread and wine?' It is as is said, 'Be there a handful of corn upon the earth.' (Ps. lxxii. 16.) This is what is written, 'And he was a priest of the most High God.'" (in Mart. f. 654 end.) Or they argue from nosha, as to the free mercy of God, "God says to Israel, If your merit is not of such account, I do it for my own sake; for day by day, when you are in trouble, I am with you, as in, 'I am with him in trouble,' (Ps. xci. 15); and so I deliver myself, 'And he saw that there was no one, and wondered' (Is. lix. 16); and elsewhere, 'Exult greatly, daughter of Zion—behold thy king cometh unto thee, just and nosha.' It is not written nosha ["and saving"] but nosha ["and saved"]; whereby it is hinted that, though your merits are not of such account, God will act for His own sake, according to, 'For my salvation is near to come.'" (Shemoth Rabba sect. 30. fol. 129. 1. Schöttg. loc. gen. n. ix.) Martini quotes a like saying from the Bereshith Rabba on Gen. xlix. 8. "R. Berachiah the priest, son of Rabbi, said, See what is written, 'Rejoice greatly &c.' It is not written, 'Just and nosha, a Saviour,' but 'Just and nosha saved,' and thus he says, (Is. lxii. 11.) 'Say ye to the daughter of Zion—it is not written, 'thy Saviour' (nosha) cometh,' but, 'Behold thy salvation (nosha) cometh.' As if one might so speak, 'Israel was redeemed, and it is as if God were redeemed,' and this is one of the hard Scriptures, that the salvation of Israel is the salvation of God." fol. 518. Martini quotes also from a comment on Isaiah lvii. 1. "The righteous perisheth." "This is Messiah, of Whom it is said, 'Just and saved.'" f. 331.

In other places, the riding upon the ass is dwelt upon. Midrash Coheleth on Eccl. i. 9. f. 73. 3. "R. Berachiah said from R. Isaac, As was the first redeemer, so also shall be the last redeemer. What did the first redeemer? (Ex. iv. 20.) 'And Moses took his wife and his sons and placed them on an ass;' the second, as is written, 'lowly and riding on an ass.'" (Martini f. 380, and 690, Schöttg. Hior. Hebr. on S. Matt. xxi. 5.) In the Midrash Shemuel

f. 66. I. the saying is ascribed to R. Levi (Schöttg. on this place). And the Pirke R. Eliezer c. 31, of Abraham's ass, "This is the ass, on which the son of David shall ride, according to, 'Rejoice greatly, daughter of Zion.'" (Ib.) The Zohar owns that the prophecy relates to the Messiah, but apologises for it. "It is not the custom that the king and his Matrona should ride on an ass, but rather on horses, as in (Hab. iii. 7.) 'For thou shalt ride on thy horses, and thy chariots are salvation.' For they do not esteem a matrona so slightly, that she should ride on an ass, as the king woteth not to ride on an ass, like one of the people. And therefore it is said of the Messiah, 'Poor and riding upon an ass.' And he is not there called king, until he ride upon his horses, which are the people of Israel." (on Levit. f. 38. col. 151. in Schöttg. de Mess. vi. 213. p. 543.) Or they say great things of the ass. "This ass is son of the she-ass, which was created within the six days in the twilight. This is the ass, which Abraham saddled, when he purposed to sacrifice Isaac. This is the ass, on which Moses was carried when he went to Egypt. This is the ass, on which the son of David shall ride hereafter." Yalkut Reubeni (f. 79. 3, 4 on Exod. iv. 20 in Schöttg. on S. Matt. xxi. 5.) They connect it with Balaam's ass. "This is the ass destined for the Messiah, as it is written, 'Poor and riding on an ass.'" (Zohar Num. f. 83. col. 332.) Or they speak of his reigning thereon. "This is the ass, on which the Messiah shall reign, as it is written, 'Poor and riding on an ass.'" Zohar Num. f. 83. col. 332 (on Deut. xxii. 10.) in Schöttg. de Messia vi. 2. 12. p. 543. The mention of an 'ass' in Holy Scripture suggests the thought of this prophecy, as relating to the Son of David. "And I have oxen and asses." Messiah son of David is hinted at here, of whom it is written, 'Meek and riding upon an ass.'" Tanchuma on Gen. xxxii. 6. f. 12. 2. (in Schöttg. on S. Matt. xxi. 5.) And the Bereshith Rabba on Gen. xlix. 14, had, "By the foot of the ox (Is. xxxii. 20.) is understood Messias son of Joseph, according to Deut. xxxiii. 17. 'His glory is of the firstling of a bullock.' But by the foot of the ass, Messiah son of David, as in Zach., 'Meek and riding on an ass.'" (in Mart. f. 330. See also Schöttg. loc. gen. n. liii. and lxxiv.) "When he shall come, of Whom it is written, 'nosha and riding upon an ass,' he will wash his garments in wine, i. e. cleanse them from their errors." Ib. f. 95. col. 4. And in the Bereshith ketanna on Gen. xlix. 11. "binding his foal unto the vine and his ass's colt unto the choice vine." "This is he of whom it is written, 'nosha and riding &c.' and he it is who planteth Israel as a choice vine (Jer. ii. 21); and how will he do it? As it is written, I will sprinkle clean water &c. Ezek. xxxvi. 21." Zohar Deut. f. 118. col. 471. in Schöttg. Horæ II. on Hab. ii. 3. p. 215. "After that depth (of the fulfilment of the vision, Hab. ii. 3.) was opened, whoever fell into it, never came up. The Messiah Ben David fell into it, with the Messiah Ben Joseph, of whom one is 'poor and riding upon an ass,' the other, 'the firstling of his bullock' (Deut. xxxiii. 17.), viz. the Messiah Ben Joseph. And this is alluded to in (Ex. xxi. 23.) 'If any one dig a pit and cover it not, and an ox or an ass fall therein.' And therefore the Messiah is called 'Bar naphli' 'son of the fallen.' The Bereshith Rabba quoted the prophecy also in proof of His meekness. "When the king Messias shall come to Jerusalem to save Israel, he shall bind his ass and ride upon it and come to Jerusalem, that he may conduct himself in lowliness, as it is said, 'lowly and riding upon an ass.' And his ass's foal unto the choice vine, when he shall come to gather the congregation of Israel, ["which is called a vine in that, Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt," added in Schöttg. loc. gen. n. lix.] as in Zech. x. 8. 'I will hiss to them and will gather them,' then he shall ride on the foal of his ass, as in Zech. ix. 9. 'Rejoice greatly &c.' And it is not of old said of the Messiah, 'And in the clouds of heaven cometh one like the Son of man?' (Dan. vii. 13.) If Israel deserveth, 'He cometh with the clouds of heaven,' and if he deserveth not, 'lowly and riding on an ass,' on Gen. xlix. 11 in Martini f. 656 (or latter part as in Sanhedrin above). In times not far from our Lord, the Messiah seems to be mentioned, as under a well-known name, "he who is borne upon an ass." The Zohar quotes a revelation to R. Eliezer and R. Abba, "Did I not say to you that the precept of the king lasts, until he shall come who is borne on an ass?" (Zohar Gen. in Schöttg. loc. gen. n. xxxi. 7 p. 79.) And nosha "afflicted" becomes an indication that the passage relates to the Messiah. Thus 'the steps of the needy,' nosha, (Is. xvi. 6.) is explained 'This is the Messiah, nosha and riding on an ass.' (Bereshith R. on Gen. xlix. 10. Mart. f. 656.) The Midrash Tehillim explains Ps. xc. 15, "'according to the days of the Messiah.' The word, nosha 'hast afflicted us' corresponds to the other, 'nosha afflicted and riding on an ass,' as if he would say 'according to the days of our afflicted.'" (in Schöttg. ad loc. p. 242.) and the Zohar Chadash on Eccl. ix. 14. sqq. "A little city is Zion; and a few men in it: these are the six days of the creation; and there came a great king against it, this is a certain one; and there was found in it a poor wise man." This is Messiah Ben David, as it is said, 'nosha and riding upon an ass' and 'the righteous perisheth' (Is. lvii. 1.) so long as the overflowing cometh not upon him, it is said, 'the river shall be wasted and dried up.' (Is. xix. 5.) 'The ass,' that is Samael, and the wise man, that is Messiah Ben David, and of him it is said, 'and he delivered the city by his wisdom.' And he shall be the deliverer of Messiah Ben Ephraim. And this is a redemption from above." (f. 63. 2. in Schöttg. loc. gen. n. 103. filled up from Wünsche Leiden d. Mess. p. 105.) Schöttgen ad loc. quotes also from the Zohar Deut. 117. col. 405.

The name nosha is understood as indicating the Messiah. "By the word nosha, 'ass' is indi-

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

* Hos. 1. 7.
& 2. 18.
Mic. 5. 10.
Hag. 2. 22.
† Eph. 2. 14,
17.
‡ Ps. 72. 8.

10 And I ^s will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem, and the battle bow shall be cut off: and he shall speak ^t peace unto the heathen: and his dominion shall be ^u from sea even to no more war in the world, because he shall speaking peace unto the nations, and by the word of his lips ¹ he shall dispose peace unto them."

And upon a colt, the foal of an ass. The word rendered colt, as with us, signifies the young, as yet unbroken animal. In the fulfilment, our Lord directed His disciples to find ² an ass tied, and a colt with her, whereon never man sat. The prophet foretold that He would ride on both animals; our Lord, by commanding both to be brought, shewed that the prophet had a special meaning in naming both. S. Matthew relates that both were employed. "They brought the ass and the colt, and put on them their clothes, and they set Him thereon." The untrained colt, an appendage to its mother, was a yet humbler animal. But as the whole action was a picture of our Lord's humility and of the unearthliness of His kingdom, so, doubtless, His riding upon the two animals was a part of that picture. There was no need of two animals to bear our Lord for that short distance. S. John notices especially, ³ These things understood not His disciples at the first. The ass, an unclean stupid debased ignoble drudge, was in itself a picture of unregenerate man, a slave to his passions and to devils, toiling under the load of ever-increasing sin. But, of man, the Jew had been under the yoke and was broken; the Gentiles were the wild unbroken colt. Both were to be brought under obedience to Christ.

10. And I will cut off the chariot. The horse is the symbol of worldly power, as the ass is of meekness. Some, says the Psalmist, ⁴ put their trust in chariots, and some in horses; but we will remember the name of the Lord our God. ⁵ A horse is but a vain thing to save a man. ⁶ He delighteth not in the strength of a horse. In scarcely any place in Holy Scripture is the horse spoken of in relation to man, except as the instrument of war. It represents human might, which is either to be consecrated to the Lord, or destroyed by Him⁷. As the ⁸ stone, cut out without hands, broke in pieces and absorbed into itself all the kingdoms of the world, so here He, Whose Kingdom should not be of this world, should supersede human might. His kingdom was to begin by doing away, among His followers, all, whereby human kingdoms are established. He first cuts off the chariot and the horse, not from His enemies, but from His own people; His people, not as a civil polity, but as the people of God. For the prophet speaks of them as Ephraim and Judah, but Ephraim had no longer a distinct existence.

And He shall speak peace unto the heathen, as the Apostle says, ⁹ He came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh. He shall speak it to them, as He Who hath power to give it to them, peace with God, peace in themselves, the reconciliation of God and man, and the remission of their sins.

¹⁰ At His birth the heavenly host announced peace to men; all His doctrine has peace for its end; when His death was at hand, He especially commended peace to His disciples,

¹ Is. xxvi. 12.
³ S. John xii. 16.
⁶ Ib. cxlvii. 10.

² S. Matt. xxi. 2., S. Mark xi. 2., S. Luke xix. 30.
⁴ Ps. xx. 7.
⁷ See Mi. v. 10.

⁵ Ib. xxxiii. 17.
⁸ Dan. ii. 34.

sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth.

11 As for thee also, || by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy ^x prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water.

^x Isai. 42. 7. & 51. 14. & 61. 1.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

|| Or, whose covenant is by blood, Ex. 24. 8. Heb. 10. 29. & 13. 20.

that peace which the world knoweth not, which is contained in tranquillity of mind, burning zeal for charity, Divine grace. This same peace He brought to all who gathered themselves to His empire and guidance, that, emerging from intestine wars and foul darkness, they might behold the light of liberty, and, in all wisdom keep the grace of God."

And His dominion shall be from sea to sea. The bounds of the promised land, in its utmost range, on the West, were the Mediterranean sea; on the East, the great river, the Euphrates. The prophet pictures its extension, so as to embrace the whole world, taking away, first the one bound, then the other. From sea to sea is from the Mediterranean to the extremest East, where the Ocean encircles the continent of Asia; from the river to the ends of the earth, is from the Euphrates to the extremest West, embracing the whole of Europe; and whatever may lie beyond, to the ends of the earth, where earth ceaseth to be¹¹. It is this same lowly and afflicted king, Whose entry into Jerusalem is on a despised animal, Who shall, by His mere will, make wars to cease, Who shall, by His mere word, give peace to the heathen.

11. As for thee also. The Prophet turns from the deliverance of the whole world to the former people, the sorrows which they should have in the way, and the protection which God would bestow upon them for the sake of Him, Who, according to the flesh, was to be born of them. Thou too; he had spoken of the glories of the Church, such as her king, when He should come, should extend it, embracing earth's remotest bounds: he turns to her, Israel after the flesh, and assures her of the continued protection of God, even in her lowest estate. The deliverance under the Maccabees was, as those under the judges had been, an image of the salvation of Christ and a preparation for it. They were martyrs for the One God and for the faith in the Resurrection, and, whether by doing or by suffering, preserved the sacred line, until Christ should come.

By the blood of thy covenant. ¹⁰ Not by the blood of those victims of old, but by the blood of thy covenant, wilt thou be united to the empire of Christ, and so obtain salvation. As the Lord Himself says, This is the blood of covenant, which is shed for you. ¹² The gifts and calling of God are without repentance. That symbolic blood, by which, fore-signifying the new Covenant, He made them His own people, ¹³ Behold the blood of the covenant, which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words, endured still, amid all their unfaithfulness and breaches of it. By virtue of it God would send forth her imprisoned ones out of the deep, dry pit, the dungeon wherein they could be kept securely, because life was not threatened¹⁴. Out of any depth of hopeless misery, in which they seemed to be shut up, God would deliver them; as David says, ¹⁵ He brought me up also out of a horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock and established my goings; and Jeremiah, ¹⁶ They have cut off my life in the dungeon, and cast a stone upon me. I called

⁹ Eph. ii. 17. ¹⁰ Osor.

¹¹ See "Daniel the Prophet." p. 483.

¹² Rom. xi. 29.

¹³ Exod. xxiv. 8.

¹⁴ As in Gen. xxxvii. 24.

¹⁵ Ps. xl. 2.

¹⁶ Lam. iii. 53, 55, 56.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

Isai. 49. 9.
Isai. 61. 7.

12 ¶ Turn you to the strong hold, ye prisoners of hope: even to day do I declare that I will render double unto thee;
13 When I have bent Judah for me, upon Thy Name, O Lord; out of the low dungeon Thou hast heard my voice. "The dry and barren depth of human misery, where are no streams of righteousness, but the mire of iniquity."

12. Turn ye to the stronghold², i. e. Almighty God; as the Psalmists so often say³, The Lord is the defence of my life; and Joel⁴, The Lord shall be a stronghold of the children of Israel; and Nahum⁵, The Lord is a stronghold in the day of trouble; And, David said, Thou hast been a shelter for me, a strong tower against the enemy; the Name of the Lord is a strong tower, the righteous runneth into it and is safe; and again, Be Thou to me a rock of strength, a house of defence to save me—Bring me forth out of the net that they have laid privily for me; for Thou art my stronghold. The stronghold, "cut off" from all approach from an enemy, stands in contrast with the deep dungeon of calamity. The return must be a willing return, one in their own power; return to the stronghold, which is Almighty God, must be by conversion of heart and will. Even a Jewish commentator⁹ paraphrases, "Turn ye to God; for He is a stronghold and tower of strength."

Ye prisoners of [the] hope¹⁰ not, accordingly, any hope, or generally, hope, but the special hope of Israel, the hope which sustained them in all those years of patient expectation, as S. Paul speaks of¹¹ the hope of Israel, for which, he says, I am bound with this chain.¹² I stand to be judged for the hope of the promise made by God unto our fathers, unto which promise our twelve tribes, serving God instantly day and night, hope to come; for which hope's sake, King Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. And in his Epistles, the hope laid up for you in heaven; the hope of the Gospel; and, looking for the blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ. He writes also of¹³ keeping the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end; of¹⁴ the full assurance of the hope unto the end; of¹⁵ fleeing to lay hold on the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast.¹⁶ He does not speak of hope as a grace or theological virtue, but, objectively, as the thing hoped for. So Zechariah calls to them as bound, held fast by the hope, bound, as it were, to it and by it, so as not to let it go, amid the persecution of the world, or weariness of expectation; as S. Paul also says, *before faith came, we were guarded, kept in ward, under the law, shut up unto the faith*²⁰ which was about to be revealed.

¹ S. Aug. de Civ. Dei. xviii. 35. 3.

² בְּצִרְתָּן is אֶרֶץ אֵלֶּיךָ.

⁴ Joel iv. 16. [iii. 16 Eng.]

⁷ Pr. xviii. 10.

¹⁰ מִן הַמָּוֶל.

The only place, where it has the art. It is used 12 times with different pronouns; 6 times with the gen., of him whose expectation is spoken of; it is used absolutely 13 times, viz. 5 times of a hope which will not fail, in the idiom אֲשֶׁר יִשְׁתַּחֲוֶה Ruth i. 12. Jer. xxxi. 17. אֲשֶׁר יִשְׁתַּחֲוֶה Job xi. 18. xiv. 7. Pr. xix. 18, modified by אֲשֶׁר Lam. iii. 29, with אֲשֶׁר, a solid expectation which a person has, Job v. 16. Pr. xxvi. 12. xxix. 20; given by God, Hos. ii. 17. Jer. xxix. 11; twice with the neg., the absence of all hope, Job vii. 6. Pr. xi. 7. [all.]

¹³ Col. i. 5.

¹⁷ Ib. vi. 11.

²⁰ ἐφρουρούμεθα, συγκεκλεισμένοι εἰς.

²¹ Is. lxi. 7. The same word, קִיָּה, קִיָּה, in different inflections is too common an idiom to leave any ambiguity, though the word קִיָּה occurs in the following clause only. The idiom occurs Ps. vii. 13, xxxvii. 14. Is. v. 24. xxi. 15. Jer. xli. 9. l. 14. 20. li. 3. Lam. ii. 4. iii. 12. 1 Chr. v. 18, viii. 40. 2 Chr. xiv. 7. קִיָּה is used twice in the same sense, when the arrow is made the filled the bow with Ephraim, and raised up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece, and made thee as the sword of a mighty man.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

Even to-day, amid all contrary appearances, do I declare, that I will render double unto thee; as He had said by Isaiah²¹, For your shame ye shall have double.

13. When, or For I have bent²² Judah for me, as a mighty bow which is only drawn at full human strength, the foot being placed to steady it. It becomes a strong instrument, but only at God's Will. God Himself bends it. It cannot bend itself. And filled the bow with Ephraim²³. The bow is filled, when the arrow is laid upon it. God would employ both in their different offices, as one. And raised up²⁴ thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece. Let men place this prophecy where they will, nothing in the history of the world was more contradictory to what was in human sight possible. "Greece was, until Alexander, a colonising, not a conquering, nation. The Hebrews had no human knowledge of the site or circumstances of Greece. There was not a little cloud, like a man's hand, when Zechariah thus absolutely foretold the conflict and its issue. Yet here we have a definite prophecy later than Daniel, fitting in with his temporal prophecy, expanding part of it, reaching on beyond the time of Antiochus, and fore-announcing the help of God in two definite ways of protection; 1) without war, against the army of Alexander²⁵; 2) in the war of the Maccabees; and these, two of the most critical periods in their history after the captivity²⁷. Yet, being expansions of part of the prophecy of Daniel, the period, to which they belong, becomes clearer in the event by aid of the more comprehensive prophecies. They were two points in Daniel's larger prediction of the 3rd empire."

And I will make thee as the sword of a mighty man. The strength is still not their own. In the whole history of Israel, they had only once met in battle an army of one of the world-Empires and defeated it, at a time, when Asa's whole population which could bear arms were 580,000²⁸, and he met Zerah the Ethiopian with his million of combatants, besides his 500 chariots, and defeated him. And this, in reliance on the²⁹ Lord his God, to Whom he cried, Lord, it is nothing to Thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power: help us, O Lord our God; for we rest on Thee, and in Thy Name we go against this multitude. Asa's words found an echo in Judas Maccabæus³⁰, when the "small company with him asked him, How shall we be able, being so few, to fight against so great a multitude and so strong?" "It is no hard matter," Judas answered, "for many to be shut up in the hands of a few, object, Ps. lviii. 8, lxiv. 4.

²² It is the common construction of מָלֵא with a double acc., "fill a thing with;" which, in different idioms, occurs 38 times besides. [Gen. xxi. 19. xxvi. 15. xlii. 25. Ex. xxviii. 3. xxxi. 3. xxxv. 31. 35. 1 Sam. xvi. 1. 1 Kgs xviii. 35. 2 Kgs xiii. 14. xxiv. 4. 2 Chr. xvi. 14. Job iii. 15. viii. 21. xv. 2. xxii. 18. xxiii. 4. Ps. xvii. 14. lxxxiii. 17. cvii. 9. cxcix. 7. Pr. i. 13. Is. xxxiii. 5. Jer. xiii. 13. xv. 17. xxxiii. 5. xli. 9. li. 1. 34. Ezek. iii. 3. ix. 7. x. 2. xi. 7. xxxii. 5. xxxv. 8. Nah. ii. 13. Zeph. i. 9. Hagg. ii. 7.] It is therefore entirely unidiomatic to render with Ges. &c., "pulled with full strength a bow, Ephraim." The Arab. أَمْلَأَ does not bear this out, being for أَمْلَأَ أَمْلَأَ. The Syr. ܐܡܠܐ ܐܡܠܐ. Ps. xi. 2. קִיָּה קִיָּה Is. xxi. 15, probably mean, "filled the bow" "the bow filled" viz. with the arrow.

²⁴ Since קִיָּה occurs of rousing a person, Cant. ii. 7. iii. 5. viii. 4, 5. Is. xiv. 9, or living thing, Job iii. 8, or His might, (of God) Ps. lxxx. 3, it would be unidiomatic to interpret it here, "lift up as a spear," on the ground of the idioms קִיָּה קִיָּה, 2 Sam. xxiii. 18. 1 Chr. xi. 11, 20, קִיָּה, Is. x. 26, since here no instrument is mentioned, but a person, and קִיָּה is not used of any one instrument, nor, by itself, signifies "wave."

²⁵ Pusey's "Daniel the Prophet" pp. 282, 283.

²⁸ 2 Chr. xiv. 8—10 sqq.

²⁹ Ib. 11.

³⁰ 1 Macc. iii. 16—19.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487. crown, *lifted up as an ensign upon his land.

* Isai. 11. 12.
* Ps. 31. 19.

17 For 'how great is his goodness, and which has failed its end, these shall be precious stones; a consecrated ¹diadem of king or priest, *raised aloft*², so that all can see. On His land. It was laid down, as the title-deed to its whole tenure, ³*the land is Mine*, and much more our Christian land, bought and purified by the blood of Christ.

17. For how great is His goodness. For it is unutterable! As the Psalmist said, 'O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth!' and Jacob, 'How awful is this place!' and the Psalmist, 'How awful are Thy doings!' The goodness and the beauty are the goodness and beauty of God, Whose great doings had been his theme throughout before. Of the goodness the sacred writers often speak⁴, since of this we have extremest need. And this He shewed to Moses, 'I will cause all My goodness to pass before thy face.' Of this we know somewhat personally in this life; for besides the surpassing amazingness of it in the work of our redemption, we are surrounded by it, immersed in it, as in a fathomless, shoreless ocean of infinite love, which finds entrance into our souls, whenever we bar it not out.

Goodness is that attribute of God, whereby He loveth to communicate to all, who can or will receive it, all good; yea, Himself, "Who is the fulness and universality of good, Creator of all good, not in one way, not in one kind of goodness only, but absolutely, without beginning, without limit, without measure, save that whereby without measurement He possesseth and embraceth all excellence, all perfection, all blessedness, all good." This Good His Goodness bestoweth on all and each, according to the capacity of each to receive it, nor is there any limit to His giving, save His creature's capacity of receiving, which also is a good gift from Him. "From Him all things sweet derive their sweetness; all things fair, their beauty; all things bright, their splendour; all things that live, their life; all things sentient, their sense; all that move, their vigour; all intelligences, their knowledge; all things perfect, their perfection; all things in any wise good, their goodness."

The beauty of God belongs rather to the beatific vision. Yet David speaks of the Beauty of Christ⁵, 'Thou art exceeding fairer than the children of men;' and Isaiah says, 'Thine eyes shall behold the King in His beauty.' But the Beauty of God "eye hath not seen nor ear heard nor can heart of man conceive." Here, on earth, created beauty can, at least when suddenly seen, hold the frame motionless, pierce the soul, glue the heart to it, entrance the affections. Light from heaven kindles into beauty our dullest material substances; the soul in grace diffuses beauty over the dullest human countenance; the soul, ere it has passed from the body, has been known to catch, through the half-opened portals, such brilliancy of light, that the eye even for some time after death has retained a brightness, beyond anything of earth¹¹. "The earth's form of beauty is a sort of voice of the dumb earth. Doth not, on considering the beauty of this universe, its very how great is his beauty! *corn shall make the young men || cheerful, and new wine the maids.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
Joel 3. 18.
Amos 9. 14.

|| Or, grow, or, speak.

form answer thee with one voice, 'Not I made myself, but God?' Poets have said,

"¹³ Old friends shall lovelier be,
As more of heaven in each we see,"

or,

"¹⁴ When he saw,
— God within him light his face."

and Holy Scripture tells us that when S. Stephen, full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, was about to speak of Jesus to the council which arraigned him, 'all that sat in the council, looking stedfastly at him, saw his face as it had been the face of an Angel.' It has been said, that if we could see a soul in grace, its beauty would so pierce us, that we should die. But the natural beauty of the soul transcends all corporeal beauty which so attracts us; the natural beauty of the last Angel surpasseth all natural beauty of soul. If we could ascend from the most beautiful form, which the soul could here imagine, to the least glorious body of the beatified, on and on through the countless thousands of glorious bodies, compared wherewith heaven would be dark and the sun lose its shining; and yet more from the most beautiful deified soul, as visible here, to the beauty of the disembodied soul, whose image would scarce be recognized, because "the bodily eyes gleamed with angelic radiance;" yea, let the God-enlightened soul go on and on, through all those choirs of the heavenly hierarchies, clad with the raiment of Divinity, from choir to choir, from hierarchy to hierarchy, admiring the order and beauty and harmony of the house of God; yea, let it, aided by divine grace and light, ascend even higher, and reach the bound and term of all created beauty, yet it must know that the Divine power and wisdom could create other creatures, far more perfect and beautiful than all which He hath hitherto created. Nay, let the highest of all the Seraphs sum in one all the beauty by nature and grace and glory of all creatures, yet could it not be satisfied with that beauty, but must, because it was not satisfied with it, conceive some higher beauty. Were God forthwith, at every moment to create that higher beauty at its wish, it could still conceive something beyond; for, not being God, its beauty could not satisfy its conception. So let him still, and in hundred thousand, hundred thousand, thousand years with swiftest flight of understanding multiply continually those degrees of beauty, so that each fresh degree should ever double that preceding, and the Divine power should, with like swiftness, concur in creating that beauty, as in the beginning He said, let there be light, and there was light; after all those millions of years, he would be again at the beginning, and there would be no comparison between it and the Divine Beauty of Jesus Christ, God and Man. For it is the bliss of the finite not to reach the Infinite¹⁷. That city of the blest which is lightened by the glory of God, and the Lamb is the light thereof, sees

¹ The etymology implies this, properly "consecration," then the diadem of one consecrated, as the תִּכְרִית Ex. xxix. 6, xxxix. 30, Lev. viii. 9, or the כִּנֹּר of the king.

² Comp. Ar. נָסַע "lifted on high," נָסַע "throne exalted."

³ Lev. xxv. 23.

⁴ Ps. viii. 1.

⁵ Gen. xxviii. 17.

⁶ טָב "the goodness" of the Lord, Ps. xxv. 7, xxvii. 13, xxxi. 20, cxlv. 7, Is. lxiii. 7, Jer. xxxi. 12, 14. Hos. iii. 5.

⁷ אֵינִי כֹל מִבְּרֵי עַל מִנִּי Ex. xxxix. 19.

⁸ Blaise Palma in "Paradise of the Christian soul," P. 1. c. vi. n. 4. pp. 90, 91.

⁹ Ps. xlv. 2.

¹⁰ Is. xxxiii. 17.

¹¹ This I saw once.

¹² S. Aug. in Ps. cxliv. n. 13.

¹³ Christian Year. Morning Hymn.

¹⁴ Tennyson, In memoriam. T. has "The God."

¹⁵ Acts vi. 5, 15.

¹⁶ S. Flavian, of Succensus a martyr, whom he saw after death. Passio SS. Montani, Lucii &c. cccxi. in Ruinart, Acta marty. sincera p. 241.

¹⁷ abridged from Joannes a Jesu Maria, ars amandi Deum c. 3. Opp. ii. 301—304.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

CHAPTER X.

1 God is to be sought unto, and not idols. 5 As he visited his flock for sin, so he will save and restore them.

* Jer. 14. 22.
* Deut. 11. 14.
* Job 29. 23.
* Joel 2. 23.

ASK ye ^a of the LORD ^b rain ^c in the time of the latter rain; so the LORD

It, enabled by God, as created eye can see It, and is held fast to God in one jubilant ecstasy of everlasting love.

"1 The Prophet, borne out of himself by consideration of the Divine goodness, stands amazed, while he contemplates the beauty and Deity of Christ: he bursts out with unwonted admiration! How great is His goodness, Who, to guard His flock, shall come down on earth to lay down His life for the salvation of His sheep! How great His beauty, Who is the brightness of the glory and the Image of the Father, and comprises in His Godhead the measure of all order and beauty! With what firm might does He strengthen, with what joy does He overwhelm the souls which gaze most frequently on His beauty, and gives largely and bountifully that corn, by whose strength the youths are made strong. He supplieth abundantly the wine, whereby the virgins, on fire with His love, are exhilarated and beautified. But both are necessary, that the strength of the strong should be upheld by the bread from heaven, and that sound and uncorrupt minds, melted with the sweetness of love, should be re-created with wine, i.e. the sweetness of the Holy Spirit, and be borne aloft with great joy, in the midst of extreme toils. For all who keep holiely the faith of Christ, may be called youths, for their unconquered strength, and virgins for their purity and integrity of soul. For all these that heavenly bread is prepared, that their strength be not weakened, and the wine is in poured, that they be not only refreshed, but may live in utmost sweetness."

X. 1. Ask ye of the Lord rain. Ask and ye shall receive, our Lord says. Zechariah had promised in God's name blessings temporal and spiritual: all was ready on God's part; only, he adds, ask them of the Lord, the Unchangeable, the Self-same, not of Teraphim or of diviner, as Israel had done aforetime². He had promised, ³ If ye shall hearken diligently unto My commandments, to love the Lord your God, I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, and I will send grass in thy field for thy cattle. God bids them ask Him to fulfil His promise. The latter rain⁴ alone is mentioned, as completing what God had begun by the former rain, filling the ears before the harvest. Both⁵ had been used as symbols of God's spiritual gifts, and so the words fit in with the close of the last chapter, both as to things temporal and eternal. "1 He exhorts all frequently to ask for the dew of the divine grace, that what had sprung up in the heart from the seed of the word of God, might attain to full ripeness."

The Lord maketh bright clouds, [rather] lightnings⁶, into rain, as Jeremiah says, ⁷ He causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth; He maketh lightnings into rain; and the

shall make || bright clouds, and give them showers of rain, to every one grass in the field.

2 For the ^d idols have spoken vanity, and the diviners have seen a lie, and have told false dreams; they ^e comfort in vain: there-

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
|| Or,
lightnings,
Jer. 10. 13.
* Jer. 10. 8.
Hab. 2. 18.
† Heb.
teraphims,
Judg. 17. 5.
* Job 13. 4.

Psalmist, ⁸ He maketh lightnings into rain, disappearing as it were into the rain which follows on them. And giveth them. While man is asking, God is answering. Showers of rain⁹, "rain in torrents," as we should say, or "in floods," or, inverted, "floods of rain." To every one grass, rather, the green herb, in the field, as the Psalmist says, ¹⁰ He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and green herb for the service of men. This He did with individual care, as each had need, or as should be best for each, as contrariwise He says in Amos, ¹¹ I caused it to rain upon one city, and caused it not to rain upon another city; one piece was rained upon, and the piece, whereon it rained not, withered. The Rabbins observed these exceptions to God's general law, whereby He ¹² sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust, though expressing it in their way hyperbolically; "¹³ In the time when Israel doeth the will of God, He doeth their will; so that if one man alone, and not the others, wants rain, He will give rain to that one man; and if a man wants one herb alone in his field or garden, and not another, He will give rain to that one herb; as one of the saints used to say, This plot of ground wants rain, and that plot of ground wants not rain¹⁴." Spiritually the rain is divine doctrine bedewing the mind and making it fruitful, as the rain doth the earth. So Moses saith, ¹⁵ My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass. "¹⁶ The law of Moses and the prophets were the former rain."

2. For the teraphim have spoken vanity, rather, spake vanity. He appeals to their former experience. Their fathers had sought of idols, not of God; therefore they went into captivity. The teraphim were used as instruments of divination. They are united with the ephod, as forbidden, over against the allowed, means of enquiry as to the future, in Hosea, ¹⁷ without an ephod and without teraphim; they were united in the mingled worship of Micah¹⁸; Josiah put them away together with ¹⁹ the workers with familiar spirits and the wizards, to which are added, the idols. It was probably, a superstition of Eastern origin. Rachel brought them with her from her father's house, and Nebuchadnezzar used them for divination²⁰. Samuel speaks of them, apparently, as things which Saul himself condemned. ²¹ Rebellion is as the sin of divination, and stubbornness as iniquity or idolatry, and teraphim. For it was probably in those his better days, that ²² Saul had put away those that had familiar spirits and wizards out of the land. Samuel then seems to tell him, that the sins to which he clave were as evil as those which he had, in an outward zeal, like Jehu, condemned. Any how, the teraphim stand united with the divination which was expressly condemned by the law²³. The use of the teraphim by Rachel²⁴ and Michal²⁵ flood are called גשמים Gen. vii. 12, viii. 2. Kim. compares the two synonyms גשמים (Dan. xii. 2) גשמים Ps. xl. 3. ¹⁰ Ps. civ. 14. See also Gen. i. 30, ii. 18. ¹¹ Am. iv. 7. See note p. 188. ¹² S. Matt. v. 49.

¹³ Taanith f. ix. 2 in Kim. Mc. Caul pp. 111, 112. ¹⁴ S. Cyril. ¹⁵ Deut. xxxii. 2.

¹⁶ Hos. iii. 4. Every fresh attempt to find an etymology for גשמים attests the unsatisfactoriness of those before it, without finding anything better.

¹⁷ Jud. xvii. 5, xviii. 14, 17, 18, 20. ¹⁸ Ezek. xxi. 21. ¹⁹ 1 Sam. xv. 23. ²⁰ 2 Kgs xxiii. 24. ²¹ Ib. xxviii. 3. ²² 1 Sam. xix. 13, 16.

²³ De. xviii. 13, 14. ²⁴ Gen. xxxi. 19, 34, 35.

¹ Osorius.

² Hos. ii. 5-12, Jer. xlv. 15-28.

³ Deut. xi. 13-15.

⁴ It is mentioned alone in Pr. xvi. 15.

⁵ See above on Hos. vi. 3, p. 39; Jo. ii. 23. pp. 125, 126.

⁶ גשמים, Its etymology is unknown, its meaning is determined by the idiom קלות חורם Job xxviii. 26, xxxviii. 25. The Arab. م only signifies "made incisions, notches, cut the heart," (of misgivings of conscience.)

⁷ Jer. x. 13, li. 16.

⁸ Ps. cxxxv. 7.

⁹ As the words are transposed in Job xxxvii. 6, גשמים שמים שמים, גשמים occurs, defined by גשמים 1 Kgs xviii. 45; by גשמים Ezek. xiii. 11, 13, xxxviii. 22; by גשמים Ps. lxxviii. 10, גשמים 1 Kgs xviii. 41. "The clouds are full of גשמים," Eccl. xi. 3. The waters of the

Before CHRIST
cir. 487.
|| Or, answered
that, &c.
Ezek. 34. 5. 3 Mine anger was kindled against the shepherds, and I † punished the goats :
Ezek. 34. 17. for the Lord of hosts ^h hath visited his flock † Heb. visited
upon.
Luke 1. 68. the house of Judah, and ⁱ hath made them
Cant. 1. 9. as his goodly horse in the battle.

(for whatever purpose) implies that it was some less offensive form of false worship, though they were probably the *strange gods*¹ which Jacob bade his household to put away, or, any how, among them, since Laban calls them, ² my gods.

Zechariah uses anew the words of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, ³ Hearken ye not to your prophets, nor to your diviners, nor to your dreamers, nor to your enchanters, nor to your sorcerers; and, let not your prophets and your diviners, that be in the midst of you, deceive you, neither hearken to your dreams, which ye cause to be dreamed; and Ezekiel, While they see vanity unto thee, while they divine a lie unto thee. The words not only joined on the Prophet's warning with the past, but reminded them of the sentence which followed on their neglect. The echo of the words of the former prophets came to them, floating, as it were, over the ruins of the former temple.

Therefore they went their way as a flock, which, having no shepherd, or only such as would mislead them, removed⁶, but into captivity. They were troubled⁷. The trouble lasted on, though the captivity ended at the appointed time. Nehemiah speaks of the exactions of former governors, ⁸ The former governors which were before me, laid heavy weights upon the people⁹, and took from them in bread and wine, after forty shekels of silver; also their servants used dominion over¹⁰ the people; and I did not so, because of the fear of God.

Because there was no shepherd. As Ezekiel said of those times, ¹¹ They were scattered, because there is no shepherd; and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered: My flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth; and none did search or seek after them.

3. Mine anger was kindled against the shepherds. As Ezekiel continued, ¹² Thus saith the Lord God; Behold I am against the shepherds, and I will require My flock at their hand.

I punished the he-goats. The evil powerful are called the he-goats of the earth¹³; and in Ezekiel God says, ¹⁴ I will judge between cattle and cattle, between rams and he-goats; and our Lord speaks of the reprobate as goats, the saved as sheep¹⁵. God visited upon¹⁶ these in His displeasure, because He visited His flock, the people of Judah, to see to their needs and to relieve them.

And hath made them as the goodly horse, as, before, He said, ¹⁷ I made thee as the sword of a mighty man. Judah's might was not in himself; but, in God's hands, he had might

Before CHRIST
cir. 487.
4 Out of him came forth ^k the corner, out of him ^l the nail, out of him the battle bow, out of him every oppressor together.

5 ¶ And they shall be as mighty men, which ^m tread down their enemies in the mire of the streets in the battle: and they shall fight, because the Lord is with them, and || the riders on horses shall be confounded.

Num. 24. 17.
1 Sam. 14. 38.
Isai. 19. 13.
Isai. 22. 23.
Ps. 18. 42.

Or, they shall make the riders on horses ashamed.

like and above the might of this world; he was fearless, resistless; as S. Paul says, ¹⁸ the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds.

4. Out of him¹⁹ came forth, or rather, From him is the corner, as Jeremiah²⁰, Their nobles shall be from themselves, and their governor shall go forth from the midst of them. Her strength, though given by God, was to be inherent in her, though from her too was to come He Who was to be the head-corner-stone, the sure Foundation and Crowner of the whole building.

From thee the nail, an emblem of fixedness in itself, (as Isaiah says, ²¹ I will fasten him a nail to a sure place) and of security given to others dependent on Him, as Isaiah says further, ²² And they shall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house, the offspring and the issue, from the vessels of cups to the vessels of flagons; all, of much or little account, the least and the greatest. "Christ is the corner-stone; Christ is the nail fixed in the wall, whereby all vessels are supported. The word of Christ is the bow, whence the arrows rend the king's enemies."

From it every exactor shall go forth together. God had promised²⁴ that no oppressor, or exactor²⁵, shall pass through them any more. He seems to repeat it here. From thee shall go forth every oppressor together; go forth, not to return: as Isaiah had said, ²⁶ Thy children shall make haste to return; thy destroyers and they that made thee waste shall go forth of thee. "From it, its corner-stone; from it, the sure nail; from it, the battle bow; from it,"—he no longer unites closely with it, that which should be from it, or of it, but—from it shall go forth every oppressor together; one and all, as we say; a confused pêle-mêle body, as Isaiah, ²⁷ all that are found of thee are bound together; together shall they all perish; or, in separate clauses²⁹, they are all of them put to shame; together they shall go into confusion.

5. And they [the house of Judah³⁰, of whom he had said, He hath made them as the goodly horse in the battle] shall be as mighty men, trampling on the mire of the streets. Micah had said, ³¹ she shall be a trampling, as the mire of the streets, and David, ³² I did stamp them as the mire of the street. Zechariah, by a yet bolder image, pictures those trampled upon, as what they had become, the mire of the streets, as worthless, as foul; as he had said, ³³ they shall trample on the sling-stones.

¹ Gen. xxxv. 2, 4.
³ Jer. xxvii. 9.
⁶ The etym. meaning of נָקַח, "plucked up" pegs of tent, in order to removal, must have been lost in the idiom. The captivity is spoken of as past, and the idolatry as before the captivity, which was its punishment.
⁷ נָקַח occurs in this sense Ps. cxvi. 10, cxix. 67, of man; with כ of wearisome labour Eccl. i. 13, iii. 10; of the lion, Is. xxxi. 4; of the song of the terrible, Ib. xxv. 5 [4 Eng.] all.
⁸ Neh. v. 15.
⁹ נָקַח with לָךְ, like "made our, your, yoke heavy,"
1 Kgs xii. 10, 14, 2 Chr. x. 10, 14, "thy yoke," Is. xlvii. 6. "my chain" Lam. iii. 7. or עָבַד Hab. ii. 6.
¹⁰ לָךְ עָבַד.
¹¹ Ib. 10.
¹² Is. xiv. 9.
¹³ Ezek. xxxiv. 17.
¹⁴ S. Matt. xxv. 32.
¹⁵ פָּקַד, as commonly, of chastisement; פָּקַד, like ἐπεσκεύασα, of visiting to shew favour.
¹⁶ ix. 13.
¹⁷ 2 Cor. x. 4.

¹⁸ The word נָקַח does not suit פָּקַד or יָרַח unless (which is not probable as to יָרַח) the metaphor was lost.
¹⁹ Jer. xxx. 21.
²⁰ Ib. 24.
²¹ Is. xiv. 2. נָקַח is no where used of a ruler or king, as in Æthiopic. The idea of "oppressors" remains in Is. iii. 12, (comp. נָקַח Ib. iii. 5) xiv. 2. add Is. lx. 17, where the contrast is of change of the inferior for the better; for brass I will bring gold &c. It is summed up and it ends in, I will make their exactors righteousness. [all alleged] ²² Is. xlix. 17. נָקַח יָרַח, as here נָקַח יָרַח.
²³ With the same idiom, כָּל יָרַח, כָּל יָרַח, Is. xxii. 3.
²⁴ Is. xxxi. 3. יָרַח כָּל יָרַח.
²⁵ Ib. xlv. 16. יָרַח כָּל יָרַח כָּל יָרַח.
²⁶ They are the main subject in v. 3. The words in v. 4. could not be the subject: for neither corner-stone, nor nail, nor bow, can be said to be like mighty men &c.
²⁷ Mic. vii. 10.
²⁸ 2 Sam. xxii. 43.
²⁹ ix. 15.

Before CHRIST
cir. 487.

6 And I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and ^a I will bring them again to place them; for I ^o have merey upon them: and they shall be as though I had not cast them off: for I ^{am} the Lord their God, and ^p will hear them. 7 And they of Ephraim shall be like a

^a Jer. 3. 18.
^b Ezek. 37. 21.
^c Hos. 1. 7.

^d ch. 13. 9.

And they shall fight, because the Lord is with them, not in their own strength, he still reminds them; they shall have power, because God empowers them; strength, because God instrengthens them¹; in presence of which, the goodly war-horse of God, human strength, the riders on horses, shall be ashamed.

6. I will bring them again to place them. Zechariah seems to have condensed into one word two² of Jeremiah, ³ I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely. ⁴ "The two ideas are here both implied, he will cause them to return to their land, and will cause them to dwell there in peace and security."

For I will have mercy upon them. ⁵ "For the goodness and lovingkindness of God, not any merits of our's, is the first and principal cause of our whole salvation and grace. Therefore the Psalmist says, ⁶ neither did their own arm save them; but Thy right hand and Thine arm, and the light of Thy countenance, because Thou hadst a favour unto them.

And they shall be, as though I had not cast them off. (etymologically, "loathed," "cast off as a thing abhorrent"⁷.) God is ever "the God of the present." He does not half-forgive. ⁸ Their sins and their iniquities I will remember no more. God casts off the sinner, as being what he is, a thing abhorrent, as penitence confesses of itself that it is ⁹ "a dead dog, a loathsome worm, a putrid corpse." God will not clothe with a rightconsness, which He does not impart. He restores to the penitent all his lost graces, as though he had never forfeited them, and cumulates them with the fresh grace whereby He converts him¹⁰. It is an entire re-creation. They shall be, as though I had not cast them off. ¹¹ I will settle you as in your old estates, and will do good, more than at your beginnings, and ye shall know that I am the Lord.

For I am the Lord their God, and will hear them, as He says by Malachi¹², I am the Lord; I change not. His unchangeableness belongs to His Being; I Am; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed; and by Hosca, ¹³ The Lord of hosts, The Lord is His memorial, therefore turn thou to thy God. Because God was their God, and as surely as He was their God, He would hear them. His Being was the pledge of His hearing. ¹⁴ I, the Lord, will hear them; I, the God of Israel, will not forsake them.

7. And Ephraim, they shall be like a mighty man. Prophecy, through the rest of the chapter, turns to Ephraim, which had not yet been restored. With regard to them, human victory retires out of sight, though doubtless, when their wide prison was broken at the destruction of the Persian empire, many were free to return to their native country, as others spread over the West in Asia Minor, Greece, Rome, and so some may have taken part in the victories of the mighty man, and their ^a heart shall rejoice as through wine: yea, their children shall see it, and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the Lord.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
^a Ps. 104. 15.
ch. 9. 15.

8 I will ^r hiss for them, and gather them; ^s Isai. 5. 26. for I have redeemed them: ^t and they shall ^u Isai. 49. 19. Ezek. 36. 37. increase as they have increased.

Maccabees. Yet not victory, but strength, gladness beyond natural gladness, as through wine, whereby the mind is exhilarated above itself; and that, lasting, transmitted to their children, large increase, holy life in God, are the outlines of the promise.

Their heart shall rejoice in the Lord, ^v "as the principal object, the first, highest, most worthy Giver of all good, to Whom is to be referred all gladness, which is conceived from created goods, that ¹⁵ whoso glorieth may glory in the Lord, in Whom Alone the rational creature ought to take delight."

8. I will hiss for them. Formerly God had so spoken of His summoning the enemies of His people to chastise them. ¹⁶ It shall be in that day, that the Lord shall hiss for the fly, that is in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria, and they shall come, and shall rest all of them in the desolate valleys, and in the holes of the rocks, and upon all thorns and upon all bushes. ¹⁷ He will hiss unto them from the ends of the earth, and behold they shall come with speed swiftly; none shall be weary or stumble among them. He would gather them, like the countless numbers of the insect creation, which, if united, would irresistibly desolate life. He would summon them, as the bee-owner, by his shrill call, summons and unites his own swarm. Now, contrariwise God would summon with the same His own people. The fulfilment of the chastisement was the earnest of the ease of the fulfilment of the mercy.

For I have redeemed them. Then they are His, being redeemed at so dear a price. ¹⁸ "For Christ, as far as in Him lay, redeemed all." God had done this in purpose, as S. John speaks of ¹⁹ the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

And they shall increase as they increased. ²⁰ "As they increased in Egypt, so shall they increase at that time." The marvels of God's favour in Egypt shall be repeated. The increase there had been promised beforehand. ²¹ Fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation. The fulfilment is recorded, ²² the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them. God appointed that this should be part of their confession at their yearly prosperity, the offering of the basket of first-fruits; ²³ A Syrian ready to perish was my father, and he went into Egypt and sojourned there with a few, and became there a nation, great, mighty, and populous. The Psalmist dwelt upon it. ²⁴ He increased His people greatly, and made them stronger than their enemies. It became then one of the resemblances between the first deliverance and the last. ²⁵ "For the Apostles and others converted from Judaism, had more spiritual children, all those whom they begat in Christ, than the synagogue ever had after the flesh."

¹ ἐν τῷ ἐνδυναμοῦντί με χρυσῶ. Phil. iv. 13.

² Kim. It is not a confusion of forms, but the blending

³ Jer. xxxii. 37. of two words into one. So also Ibn E.

⁴ Kim. It is not a confusion of forms, but the blending of two words into one. So also Ibn E.

⁵ Arab used of "rancid" oil. Observe האויעת Is. xix. 6.

⁶ Ps. xlv. 3.

⁷ Dion.

⁸ Heb. viii. 12.

⁹ Bp. Andrewes' devotions. Morn. Pr.

¹⁰ See ab. on Joel ii. 25 pp. 126, 127.

¹¹ Ezek. xxxvi. 11.

¹² Mal. iii. 6.

¹³ Hos. xii. 5, 6. [6, 7 Heb.]

¹⁴ Is. xli. 17.

¹⁵ 2 Cor. x. 17.

¹⁶ 1b. v. 26, 27. The word is only used in this same sense in these three places.

¹⁷ Rev. xiii. 8.

¹⁸ Kim.

¹⁹ Ex. i. 7.

²⁰ De. xxvi. 5.

²¹ Ps. cv. 24.

²² Gen. xlv. 3.

Before CHRIST
cir. 487.
Hos. 2. 23.
Deut. 30. 1.

9 And 'I will sow them among the people: and they shall "remember me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and turn again.

* Is. 11. 11, 16.
Hos. 11. 11.

10 * I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt, and gather them out of Assyria; and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon; and 'place shall not be found for them.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
Isai. 49. 20.

11 * And he shall pass through the sea * with affliction; and shall smite the waves in the sea, and all the deeps of the river

* Isai. 11. 15, 16.

9. And I will sow them among the nations. Such had been the prophecy of Hosea; ¹ I will sow her unto Me in the earth, as the prelude of spiritual mercies, and I will have mercy on her that had not obtained mercy, and I will say to not-my-people, Thou art My people, and they shall say, my God. Hosea's saying, I will sow her in the earth i.e. the whole earth, and that to Me, corresponds to, and explains Zechariah's brief saying, I will sow them among the nations. The sowing, which was future to Hosea, had begun; but the purpose of the sowing, the harvest, was wholly to come; when it should be seen, that they were indeed sown by God, that *great should be the day of Jezreel*². And Jeremiah said, ³ Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah, with the seed of man and with the seed of beast. The word is used of sowing to multiply, never of mere scattering⁴.

And they shall remember Me in far countries. So Ezekiel had said, ⁵ And they that escape of you shall remember Me among the nations, whither they shall be carried captive—and they shall loath themselves for the evils which they have committed in all their abominations, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

And shall live. As Ezekiel again says, ⁶ Ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I open your graves, and bring you up out of your graves, O My people, and shall put My Spirit in you, and ye shall live. With their children. A continuous gift, as Ezekiel, ⁷ they and their children, and their children's children for ever: and My servant David shall be their prince for ever.

And shall turn again to God, being converted, as Jeremiah had been bidden to exhort them; ⁸ Go and proclaim these words toward the North, the cities of the Medes whither they were carried captive, and say, Return, thou backsliding Israel, and I will not cause Mine anger to fall upon you; ⁹ Turn, O backsliding children—and I will take you, one of a city, and two of a family, and will bring you to Zion, and I will give you pastors according to Mine heart. ¹⁰ Return, ye backsliding children; I will heal your backslidings. And they answer, Behold, we come unto Thee; for Thou art the Lord our God. So Isaiah had said, ¹¹ A remnant shall return, the remnant of Jacob, unto the mighty God. ¹² They shall return by recollection of mind and adulation and simplification of the affections towards God, so as ultimately to intend that one thing, which alone is necessary."

10. I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt. Individuals had fled to Egypt¹³; but here probably Egypt and Assyria stand, as of old, for the two great conflicting empires, between which Israel lay, at whose hands she had suffered, and who represent the countries which lay beyond them. Hosea unites, ¹⁴ the West, Assyria, Egypt, the three then known divisions of the world, Europe, Asia, Africa¹⁵. Asshur, after Nineveh perished, stands clearly for the world-empire of the East at Babylon¹⁶, and then in Persia¹⁷. Balaam includes under Asshur, first Babylon, then the third world-empire¹⁸. Babylon, which was first subject to Nineveh, then subjected it, was at a later period known to Greek writers (who probably had their information from Persian sources) as part of Assyria¹⁹.

*And I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon, their old dwellings, East and West of Jordan. And place shall not be found for them*²⁰, as Isaiah says, ²¹ The children of thy bereaved estate shall yet say in thine ears, The place is too strait for me: give place, that I may dwell.

11. *And He, i.e. Almighty God, shall pass through the sea, affliction*²², as He says, ²³ When thou walkest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee. And shall smite the waves in the sea, as in Isaiah, ²⁴ The Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea. The image is from the deliverance of Egypt: yet it is said, that it should not be any exact repetition of the miracles of Egypt; it would be as the Red Sea²⁵, which would as effectually shut them in, and in presence of which they might again think themselves lost, through which God would again bring them. But it would not be the Red sea itself; for the sea through which they should be brought, would be affliction; as our own poet speaks of 'taking arms against a sea of troubles.'²⁶ The promise of succour to those who believe in Christ is under the likeness of the things given to those of old; for as Israel was conveyed across the Red sea, braving the waves in it; ²⁷ for the waters stood upright as an heap, God bringing this to pass marvellously; and as ²⁸ they passed the Jordan on foot, so he says, those who are called through Moses to the knowledge of Christ, and have been saved by the ministries of the holy Apostles, they shall pass the waves of this present life, like an angrily foaming sea, and, being removed from the tumult of this life, shall, undisturbed, worship the true God. And they shall pass through temptations, like sweeping rivers, saying with great

"Babylon supplies food during four, the other regions of Asia during eight months [to the great king] by which it appears that Assyria in respect of resources is $\frac{1}{4}$ of the whole of Asia." Ib. 192. "Little rain falls in Assyria. The whole of Babylonia is, like Egypt, intersected with canals. The largest is carried from the Euphrates into another stream called the Tigris, upon which the city Nineveh formerly stood." Ib. 193. so Strabo xiv. init., Arrian Exp. Al. vii. 2. 6, Ammian xxiii. 20.

²⁰ לא ימצא להם Jud. xxi. 14, is "they found not (enough) for themselves;" thence here, Nif. "there was not found for them." ²¹ Is. xlix. 20.

²² צרה is in appos. to ים. Against the rendering of the LXX ἐν θαλάσῃ στερῆ, 1) οὐκ, as the sea, no where occurs as fem.; in 2 Kgs xvi. 17. it is "the brazen sea" which is spoken of; 2) the narrowness of the sea, if physical, would facilitate the crossing, not aggravate it; 3) omitting the art., ים would be "in a sea of affliction," but would drop the reference to the sea, or "the red sea," "sea" becoming a mere metaphor.

²³ Is. xliii. 2.

²⁴ Ib. xi. 15.

²⁵ Ex. xiv. 10, 12.

²⁶ S. Cyr.

²⁷ Ex. xv. 8.

²⁸ Josh. iii. 17.

¹ Hos. ii. ult. See ab. pp. 22, 23. ² Ib. i. 11. See ab. p. 12. ³ Jer. xxxi. 27.

⁴ זר (Kal and Pi.), "dispersed," is contrariwise never to "sow." ⁵ Ezek. vi. 9.

⁶ Ib. xxxvii. 13, 14. ⁷ Ib. 25. ⁸ Jer. iii. 12. ⁹ Ib. 14, 15. ¹⁰ Ib. 22.

¹¹ Is. x. 21. comp. הִנֵּנִי, "her converts," Is. i. 27, and הִנֵּנִי in Solomon's prayer, 2 Chr. vi. 24.

¹² Dion. ¹³ See ab. on Hos. viii. 13, p. 54, ix. 3, p. 56.

¹⁴ Hos. xi. 10, 11, Is. xi. 15, 16; add Ib. xix. 23-25, xxvii. 13, lii. 4, Mic. vii. 12. See ab. p. 350.

¹⁵ See on Hos. xi. 11. p. 74. ¹⁶ 2 Kgs xxiii. 29. Lam. v. 6; and, unless it refers to earlier history, Jer. ii. 18; also Judith i. 5, ii. 1, v. 1 &c.

¹⁷ Ezra vi. 22. ¹⁸ Nu. xxiv. 22-24. coll. Dan. xi. 30.

¹⁹ Thus Herodotus, in the familiar passages, speaks of "Assyria, all but the Babylonian portion." i. 106. "Those Assyrians; to whom Nineveh belongs." Ib. 102. "Assyria possesses a vast number of cities, whereof the strongest at this time was Babylon, whither after the fall of Nineveh the seat of government was removed." Ib. 178. "many sovereigns have ruled over this city of Babylon, and lent their aid to the building of its walls and the adornment of its temples; of whom I shall make mention in my Assyrian history." Ib. 184.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
shall dry up: and ^a the pride of Assyria shall be brought down, and ^b the sceptre of Egypt shall depart away.

^a Isai. 14. 25.
^b Ezek. 30. 13.
12 And I will strengthen them in the LORD; and ^c they shall walk up and down in his name, saith the LORD.

joy, in like way, ¹ Unless the Lord had been for us, may Israel now say, the waters had drowned us, the stream had gone over our souls." He shall smite the waves in the sea. There, where the strength of the powers of this world is put forth against His people, there He will bring it down. All the deeps of the river, i. e. of the Nile², shall be dried up. The Nile as a mighty river is substituted for the Jordan, symbolising the greater putting forth of God's power in the times to come.

And the pride of Asshur shall be brought down. "3 When the good receive their reward, then their enemies shall have no power over them, but shall be punished by Me, because they injured My elect.—By the Assyrians and Egyptians he understands all their enemies."

12. I will strengthen them in the Lord, as our Lord said to S. Paul, My strength is made perfect in weakness, and S. Paul said in turn, When I am weak, then am I strong. And in His Name shall they walk up and down, have their whole conversation "4 in Him according to His will, and diligent in all things to speak and act in His grace and Divine hope." "5 Christians walk in the Name of Christ, and there is written on the new white stone given to them a new name⁶, and under the dignity of a name so great, they walk with God, as ⁷ Enoch walked and pleased God and was translated."

Saith the Lord. "4 Again the Lord God speaks of the Lord God, as of Another, hinting the plurality of Persons in the Godhead."

XI. "8 All the ways of the Lord are mercy and truth, saith the Psalmist⁹, and, ¹⁰ I will sing to Thee of mercy and judgement. So is this prophecy divided. Above¹¹, almost all were promises of mercy, which are now fulfilled in deed; and from this, ¹² Open, O Lebanon, thy doors, all are terrible edicts of truth and tokens of just judgement. How much sweetness and softness and pleasantness is therein, Rejoice greatly, daughter of Zion: shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; what bitterness and acerbity and calamity to those, to whom he says, Open, O Lebanon, thy doors, that the fire may devour thy cedars; howl, O fir tree; howl, O ye oaks of Basan. As then, before, we beheld His mercy in those who believed and believe; so now let us contemplate His just judgement on those who believed not." Gilcad and Lebanon¹³ had been named as the restored home of Ephraim; but there remained a dark side of the picture, which the prophet suddenly presents, with the names of those self-same lands, ¹⁴ Open thy doors, O Lebanon; howl, O ye oaks of Basan."

1. Open thy doors, O Lebanon. Lebanon, whose cedars had stood, its glory, for centuries, yet could offer no resistance to him who felled them and were carried off to adorn the palaces of its conquerors¹⁵, was in Isaiah¹⁶ and

¹ Ps. cxxiv. 1—5.

² נַחַל, always the Nile, except Dan. xii. 5, where it is part of his revival of words of the Pentateuch. So Gesenius also. It has been conjectured that a canal now connecting the Tigris and Euphrates, called Bahr-el-Nil, may have had that name in the time of Daniel and been the river in his vision (Stanley Jewish Church iii. 12). 1) The Bahr-el-Nil is only the modern Arabic name for the Nile. 2) Had the canal been so called in Daniel's time and had he meant it (which is unlikely) he would naturally have called it by its name, not have translated it into the old Egyptian and Hebrew name.

³ Rib.

⁴ Dion.

⁵ S. Jer.

⁶ Rev. ii. 17.

⁷ Gen. v. 24.

CHAPTER XI.

Before CHRIST
cir. 487.
1 The destruction of Jerusalem. The elect being cared for, the rest are rejected. 10 The staves of Beauty and Bands broken by the rejection of Christ. 15 The type and curse of a foolish shepherd.

OPEN ^a thy doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy cedars.

^a ch. 10. 10.

Jeremiah¹⁷ the emblem of the glory of the Jewish state; and in Ezekiel, of Jerusalem, as the prophet himself explains it¹⁸; glorious, beauteous, inaccessible, so long as it was defended by God; a ready prey, when abandoned by Him. The centre and source of her strength was the worship of God; and so Lebanon has of old been understood to be the temple, which was built with cedars of Lebanon, towering aloft upon a strong summit; the spiritual glory and the eminence of Jerusalem, as Lebanon was of the whole country, and "19 to strangers who came to it, it appeared from afar like a mountain full of snow; for, where it was not gilded, it was exceeding white, being built of marble." But at the time of destruction, it was ²⁰ a den of thieves, as Lebanon, amidst its beauty, was of wild beasts.

"8 I suppose Lebanon itself, i. e. the temple, felt the command of the prophet's words, since, as its destruction approached, its doors opened without the hand of man. Josephus relates how "21 at the passover, the Eastern gate of the inner temple, being of brass and very firm, and with difficulty shut at eventide by twenty men; moreover with bars strengthened with iron, and having very deep bolts, which went down into the threshold, itself of one stone, was seen at six o'clock at night to open of its own accord. The guards of the temple running told it to the officer, and he, going up, with difficulty closed it. This the uninstructed thought a very favourable sign, that God opened to them the gate of all goods. But those taught in the Divine words, understood that the safety of the temple was removed of itself, and that the gate opened." A saying of this sort is still extant. "22 Our fathers have handed down, forty years before the destruction of the house, the lot of the Lord did not come up on the right hand, and the tongue of splendour did not become white, nor did the light from the evening burn, and the doors of the temple opened of their own accord, until Rabban Johanan ben Zaccai rebuked them, and said, 'O temple, why dost thou affright thyself? I know of thee that thy end is to be destroyed, and of this Zechariah prophesied, Open thy doors, O Lebanon, and let the fire devour thy cedars.'" The "forty years" mentioned in this tradition carry back the event exactly to the Death of Christ, the temple having been burned A.D. 73²³. Josephus adds that they opened at the passover, the season of His Crucifixion. On the other hand, the shutting of the gates of the temple, when they had ²⁴ seized Paul and dragged him out of the temple, seems miraculous and significant, that, having thus violently refused the preaching of the Gospel, and cast Paul out, they themselves were also shut out, denoting that an entrance was afterwards to be refused them.

⁸ Rup.

⁹ Ps. xxv. 11.

¹⁰ Ib. ci. 1.

¹¹ "viii. 19—x. end."

¹² "all c. xi."

¹³ x. 10.

¹⁴ xi. 1, 2.

¹⁵ See ab. on Zeph. ii. 14. and note 3. p. 472.

¹⁷ Jer. xxii. 6, 7.

¹⁸ Ezek. xvii. 3, 12.

¹⁹ Joseph. de Bello J. 5. 5, 6.

²⁰ S. Matt. xxi. 13.

²¹ de Bell. J. 6. 5. 3 quoted by Rup.

²² Yoma f. 39 b. quoted by Mart. Pug. fid. f. 297. Eusebius (Dem. Evang. vii. 4) says, "He calls the temple Lebanon, as is his wont, since in other prophecies it has been shewn that the temple itself is called Lebanon. This the Jews themselves still confess."

²³ Euseb. Chron.

²⁴ Acts xxi. 30.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

Or,
gallants.
Isai. 32. 19.
Or, the defenced forest.

2 Howl, fir tree; for the cedar is fallen; because the || mighty are spoiled: howl, O ye oaks of Bashan; ^b for || the forest of the vintage is come down.

3 ¶ There is a voice of the howling of the shepherds; for their glory is spoiled:

And let a fire devour thy cedars. Jerusalem, or the temple, were, after those times, burned by the Romans only. The destruction of pride, opposed to Christ, was prophesied by Isaiah in connection with His Coming¹.

2. Howl, O cypress, for the cedar is fallen. Jerusalem or the temple having been likened to Lebanon and its cedars, the prophet carries on the image, speaking of the priests princes and people, under the title of firs cypresses and oaks, trees inferior, but magnificent. He shews that it is imagery, by ascribing to them the feelings of men. The more glorious and stately, the cedars, were destroyed. Woe then to the rest, the cypress; as our Lord says, ² If they do these things in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry? and S. Peter, ³ If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?

For the defenced⁴ forest is come down; that which was closed and inaccessible to the enemy. All which was high and lifted up was brought low, came down, even to the ground⁵.

3. A voice of the howling of the shepherds, for their glory is spoiled. It echoes on from Jeremiah before the captivity, ⁶ Howl, ye shepherds—A voice of the cry of the shepherds, and an howling of the principal of the flock; for the Lord hath spoiled their pasture. There is one chorus of desolation, the mighty and the lowly; the shepherds and the young lions; what is at other times opposed is joined in one wailing. The pride of Jordan are the stately oaks on its banks, which shroud it from sight, until you reach its edges, and which, after the captivity of the ten tribes, became the haunt of lions and their chief abode in Palestine, “on account of the burning heat, and the nearness of the desert, and the breadth of the vast solitude and jungles?”

4. Thus saith the Lord my God, Feed the flock of the slaughter. The fulfilment of the whole prophecy shews, that the person addressed is the prophet, not in, or for himself, but (as belongs to symbolic prophecy) as representing Another, our Lord. It is addressed, in the first instance, to Zechariah. For Zechariah is bidden, ⁸ take unto thee yet the instruments of a foolish shepherd, in words addressed to himself, personally; And the Lord said unto me. But he who was to represent the foolish shepherd, had represented the True Shepherd, since it is said to him, “Take unto thee yet.” But He, the Shepherd addressed, who does the acts commanded, speaks with the authority of God. He says, ⁹ I cut off three shepherds in one month; ¹⁰ I broke My covenant which I had made with all the peoples; ¹¹ the poor of the flock waited upon Me; ¹² I cut asunder Mine other staff, Bands, that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel. But in Zechariah’s time, no three shepherds were cut off, the covenant made by God was not broken on His part, there was no

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
a voice of the roaring of young lions; for the pride of Jordan is spoiled.

4 Thus saith the Lord my God; ^c Feed the flock of the slaughter;

5 Whose possessors slay them, and ^d hold themselves not guilty: and they that sell such visible distinction between those who waited on God, and those who, outwardly too, rejected Him.

*Feed the flock of the slaughter*¹³, those who were, even before the end, slain by their evil shepherds whom they followed, and who in the end would be given to the slaughter, as the Psalmist says, ¹⁴ we are counted as sheep for the slaughter, because they would not hear the voice of the True Shepherd, and were not His sheep. They were already, by God’s judgement, a prey to evil shepherds; and would be so yet more hereafter. As a whole then, they were sheep of the slaughter. It is a last charge given to feed them. As our Lord says, ¹⁵ Last of all, He sent unto them His Son, saying, They will reverence My Son. This failing, nothing remained but that the flock would be given up, as they themselves say, ¹⁶ He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out His vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render Him the fruits in their seasons, i. e. our Lord explains it, ¹⁷ The kingdom of heaven shall be taken from them, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. Yet a remnant should be saved, for whose sake the larger flock was still to be fed: and, as our Lord, as Man, wept over Jerusalem, whose sentence He pronounced, so He still feeds those who would not turn to Him that they might be saved, and who would in the end be a flock of slaughter, ¹⁸ Death their shepherd, since they chose death rather than Life.

5. Whose possessors [buyers¹⁹] slay them and hold themselves not guilty, rather, are not guilty, either in their own eyes, or in the sight of God, since He gave them up and would no more avenge them. They contract no guilt. Aforetime God said; ²⁰ *Israel was holiness to the Lord, the first-fruits of His increase; all that devour him shall be guilty*²¹; evil shall come upon them, saith the Lord. Now God reversed this, as He said by the same prophet, ²² *My people hath been lost sheep; their shepherds have caused them to go astray; they have turned them away on the mountains;—all that found them have devoured them; and their adversaries say, We are not guilty*²³; because they have sinned against the Lord, the habitation of justice, yea, the hope of their fathers, the Lord. The offence of injuring Israel was that they were God’s people: when He cast them forth, they who chastened them were His servants²⁴, His instruments, and offended only when through pride they knew not in Whose hands they themselves were²⁵, or through cruelty exceeded their office²⁶, and so they became guilty.

And they that sell them say, Blessed be the Lord, for I am rich. Even Sennacherib felt himself in part, or thought best to own himself, to be an instrument in God’s hand²⁷. But Titus when he ²⁸ entered Jerusalem, marvelled at the strength of the city and its towers, which ‘the tyrants’ in phrenzy

¹ Is. x. 34. xi. 1.

² S. Luke xxiii. 31.

³ 1 S. Pet. iv. 18.

⁴ As in E. M. The E. V. has followed the Kri, correcting יער הבצר for יער הברצ, probably in order to substitute the common nom. and gen. for the less usual construction of the subj. and adj. being defined by the art. of the adj. as in Zech. himself, iv. 7, xiv. 10.

⁵ As in Is. xxxii. 19, ii. 12, sqq.

⁶ Jer. xxv. 34, 36.

⁷ S. Jer. See Jerem. xlix. 19, l. 44, 2 Kgs xvii. 25. The lion lingered there even to the close of the XIIth cent. Phocas in Reland Palest. i. 274. S. Cyril says in the present, “there are very many lions there, roaring horribly and striking fear into the inhabitants.”

⁸ v. 15.

⁹ v. 8.

¹⁰ v. 10.

¹¹ v. 11.

¹² v. 14.

¹³ עֲשֵׂה לָהֶם אֶת הַחֵמָה, as יָמָה Jer. vii. 32, xix. 6. יָמָה Ib. xii. 3.

¹⁴ Ps. xlv. 22. כִּבְחָה.

¹⁵ S. Matt. xxi. 37.

¹⁶ Ib. 41.

¹⁷ Ib. 43.

¹⁸ Ps. xlix. 14.

¹⁹ Jer. ii. 3.

²⁰ Jer. ii. 3.

²¹ Jer. ii. 3.

²² Jer. i. 6, 7.

²³ Jer. i. 6, 7.

²⁴ Jer. i. 6, 7.

²⁵ Jer. i. 6, 7.

²⁶ Jer. i. 6, 7.

²⁷ Jer. i. 6, 7.

²⁸ Jer. i. 6, 7.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
*Dent. 29. 19.
Hos. 12. 8. them * say, Blessed be the LORD; for I am rich: and their own shepherds pity them not.

6 For I will no more pity the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD: but, lo, I will abandoned. When then he had beheld their solid strength and the greatness of each rock, and how accurately they were fitted in, and how great their length and breadth, he said 'By the help of God we have warred: and God it was Who brought down the Jews from those bulwarks: for what avail the hands of man or his engines against such towers?' Much of this sort he said to his friends." The Jews also were sold in this war, as they had not been in former captures; and that, not by chance, but because the Roman policy was different from all, known by "experience" in the time of Zechariah. Into Babylon they had been carried captive, as a whole, because it was the will of God, after the seventy years to restore them. In this war, it was His will to destroy or disperse them; and so those above 17 were sent to Egypt to the works; those below 17 were sold. "The whole number taken prisoners during the wars were 1100,000," besides those who perished elsewhere. "Read we the ancient histories and the traditions of the mourning Jews, that at the Tabernaculum Abrahæ (where now is a very thronged mart every year) after the last destruction, which they endured from Adrian, many thousands were sold, and what could not be sold were removed into Egypt, and destroyed by shipwreck or famine and slaughter by the people. No displeasure came upon the Romans for the utter destruction, as there had upon the Assyrians and Chaldeans."

And their own shepherds (in contrast to those who bought and sold them, who accordingly were not their own, temporal or spiritual) they to whom God had assigned them, who should have fed them with the word of God, ³ strengthened the diseased, healed the sick, bound up the broken, and sought the lost, pity them not. He says what they should have done, in blaming them for what they did not do. They owed them a tender compassionate love⁴; they laid aside all mercy, and became wolves, as S. Paul says; After my departure shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. They who owed them all love, shall have none. "No marvel then, he says, if enemies shall use the right of conquest, when their very shepherds and teachers spared them not, and, through their fault, the flock was given over to the wolves." All were corrupted, High Priest, priests, scribes, lawyers, Pharisees, Sadducees. No one⁶ had pity on them.

6. For I will no more pity. Therefore were they a flock of the slaughter, because God would have no pity on those who went after shepherds who had no pity upon them, but corrupted them; who ⁷ entered not in themselves, and those who were entering in, they hindered.

The inhabitants of the land, "that land, of which he had † deliver the men every one into his neighbour's hand, and into the hand of his king: and they shall smite the land, and out of their hand I will not deliver them.

7 And I will [†] feed the flock of slaughter, [†] ver. 4.

been speaking," Judæa. And lo. God, by this word, lo, always commands heed to His great doings with man; I, I, Myself⁸, visibly interposing, will deliver man, the whole race of inhabitants, every one into his neighbour's hand, by confusion and strife and hatred within, and into the hand of his king, him whom they chose and took as their own king, when they rejected Christ as their King, repudiating the title which Pilate gave Him, to move their pity. Whereas He, their Lord and God, was their King, they formally ⁹ denied Him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let Him go; they denied the Holy One and the Just, and said, ¹⁰ We have no king but Cæsar.

And they, the king without and the wild savages within, shall smite, bruise, crush in pieces, like a broken vessel¹¹, the land, and out of their hand I will not deliver them. Their captivity shall be without remedy or end. Holy Scripture often says, *there is no deliverer*¹², or none can deliver out of My hand, or, since God delighteth in doing good, I¹⁴, He¹⁵, will deliver, or delivered¹⁶ from the hands of the enemy, or their slavery, or their own fears, or afflictions, or the like. God no where else says absolutely as here, *I will not deliver*¹⁷. "Hear, O Jew," says S. Jerome, "who holdest out to thyself hopes most vain, and hearest not the Lord strongly asserting, I will not deliver them out of their hands, that thy captivity among the Romans shall have no end." In the threatened captivity before they were carried to Babylon, the prophet foretold the restoration: here only it is said of Judah, as Hosea had said of Israel, that there should be no deliverer out of the hand of the king whom they had chosen.

7. The prophetic narrative which follows, differs in its form, in some respects, from the symbolical actions of the prophets and from Zechariah's own visions. The symbolical actions of the prophets are actions of their own: this involves acts, which it would be impossible to represent, except as a sort of drama. Such are the very central points, the feeding of the flock, which yet are intelligent men who understand God's doings: the cutting off of the three shepherds; the asking for the price; the unworthy price offered; the casting it aside. It differs from Zechariah's own visions, in that they are for the most part exhibited to the eye, and Zechariah's own part is simply to enquire their meaning and to learn it, and to receive further revelation. In one case only, he himself interposes in the action of the vision¹⁸; but this too, as asking that it might be done, not, as himself doing it. Here, he is himself the actor, yet as representing Another, Who alone could cut off shepherds, abandon the people to mutual destruction, annulling the covenant which He had made. Maimonides, then, seems to say rightly; "¹⁹ This, I fed the flock of the slaughter, to the end of the narrative,

¹ Jos. ib. § 2. 3.

² S. Jer.

³ Ezek. xxxiv. 4. ⁴ שָׂדֵהם ⁵ Acts xx. 29, 30. ⁶ This is expressed by the Hebrew idiom, "their shepherds [plur.] one by one, pity [sing.] them not."

⁷ S. Luke xi. 52. ⁸ אנכי emphatic. ⁹ Acts iii. 13, 14. ¹⁰ S. John xix. 15.

¹¹ Of which נָחַשׁ is used, Is. xxx. 14; of the golden calf, De. ix. 21. So נָחַשׁ, of the brazen serpent, 2 Kgs xviii. 4; the idols, 2 Chr. xxxiv. 7.

¹² אֵין מַלְאָכִים Jud. xviii. 28, 2 Sam. xiv. 6, Job v. 4, Ps. vii. 3, 1. 22, lxxi. 11, Is. v. 29, xlii. 22, Hos. v. 14, Mic. v. 7, 8. ¹³ De. xxxii. 39, Job x. 7, Ps. l. 22, lxxi. 11.

Is. xliii. 13. Dan. viii. 4, 7.

¹⁴ Ex. vi. 6, 2 Kgs xx. 6, Jer. xv. 21, xxxix. 17, Ezek. xxxiv. 27.

¹⁵ 1 Sam. vii. 3, Ps. xviii. 15, lxxii. 12, 2 Kgs xvii. 39, Is. xix. 20, xxxi. 5, Job v. 19.

¹⁶ Ex. xviii. 10, Josh. xxiv. 10, Jud. vi. 9, 1 Sam. x. 18, xiv. 10, 2 Sam. xxii. 1, Ps. xxxiv. 5, 18, liv. 9, Ezr. viii. 31, Jer. xx. 13.

¹⁷ Once only on one of the brief repentances in the Judges, God answers their prayer, I will not save you; go and cry to the gods which ye have chosen; let them save you: but only to save them on their renewed repentance and prayer, Jud. x. 13-16.

¹⁸ iii. 15. ¹⁹ More Neboch. ii. 46, p. 123, 6. Buxt. Tr. p. 326. Abarbanel (ad loc.) regards the act as real, but symbolic. "God commanded him to do an act, in deed and awake, which was a declaration and a sign of what should be in God's guidance of Israel. See at length in Mc Caul's transl. of Kimchi on Zech. pp. 198-208.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

Or, verily
the poor.

|| even you, ⁸ O poor of the flock. And I took unto me two staves; the one I called Beauty, and the other I called || Bands; and ⁸ Zeph. 3. 12. Matt. 11. 5.

|| Or, Binders.

where he is said to have asked for his hire, to have received it, and to have cast it into the temple, to the treasurer, all this Zechariah saw in prophetic vision. For the command which he received, and the act which he is said to have done, took place in prophetic vision or dream." "This," he adds, "is beyond controversy, as all know, who are able to distinguish the possible from the impossible."

"¹ The actions, presented to the prophets are not always to be understood as actions but as predictions. As when God commands Isaiah, to make the heart of the people dull ² i.e. to denounce to the people their future blindness, through which they would, with obstinate mind, reject the mercies of Christ. Or when He says, that He appointed Jeremiah ³ to destroy and to build; to root out and to plant. Or when He commanded the same prophet to cause the nations to drink the cup, whereby they should be bereft of their senses ⁴, Jeremiah did nothing of all this, but asserted that it would be. So here?"

And I will feed the flock of the slaughter, rather And [our, so] I fed ⁵. The prophet declares, in the name of our Lord, that He did what the Father commanded Him. He fed the flock, committed to His care by the Father, who, through their own obstinacy, became the flock of slaughter. What could be done, He did for them; so that all might see that they perished by their own fault. The symbol of our Lord, as the Good Shepherd, had been made prominent by Isaiah Jeremiah and Ezekiel, ⁶ Behold the Lord will come, as a Mighty One—He shall feed His flock like a shepherd: He shall gather the lambs with His arm and carry them in His bosom: He shall gently lead those that are with young. And Jeremiah, having declared God's judgements on the then shepherds ⁷, ⁸ I will gather the remnant of My flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their fold; and they shall be fruitful and increase. And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them. Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a king shall reign and prosper—and this is the name whereby He shall be called, the Lord our Righteousness. And Ezekiel with the like context ⁹; ¹⁰ Therefore will I save My flock and they shall be no more a prey; and I will judge between cattle and cattle. And I will set One Shepherd over them, and He shall feed them: My servant David, He shall feed them; and He shall be their Shepherd; and, uniting both offices, ¹¹ David, My servant, shall be king over them, and they shall all have One Shepherd. It was apparent then beforehand, Who this Shepherd was to be, to Whom God gave the feeding of the flock.

"Even you, or for you, ye poor of the flock; or, therefore, being thus commanded, [fed I] the poor of the flock ¹². The whole flock was committed to Him to feed. He had to seek out all ¹³ the lost sheep of the house of Israel. "¹⁴ He fed, for the time, the Jews destined to death, until their time should

¹ Osor. ² Is. vi. 10. ³ Jer. i. 10. ⁴ Id. xxv. 15 sqq.
⁵ π retained in $\pi\eta\eta\eta$ as in verbs $\pi\eta$ in 1 Sam. i. 7, 2 Sam. xxiii. 15, 1 Kgs xiv. 9, 2 Kgs ii. 8, 14 [bis] Jer. xx. 2. ⁶ Is. xl. 10, 11. ⁷ Jer. xxiii. 2. ⁸ Ib. 3—6.
⁹ Ezek. xxxiv. 1—21. ¹⁰ Ib. 22, 23. ¹¹ Ib. xxxvii. 24.
¹² The masora parva says that "the $\pi\eta$ is a feminine," i.e. so punctuated for $\pi\eta$, as in the 3rd pers. $\pi\eta$ 2 Sam. xxiv. 3, Eccl. ix. 12; $\pi\eta$ Gen. xix. 29, xxx. 26. Yet $\pi\eta$ being, so often, some 60 times, illative, therefore, it would be arbitrary to take it otherwise here, since even $\pi\eta$ itself nowhere occurs as a pronoun. ¹³ S. Matt. x. 6, xv. 24.

I fed the flock.

8 Three shepherds also I cut off ^h in one month; and my soul [†] lothed them, and [†] Heb. was straitened for them.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

Hos. 5. 7.

come;" the fruit of His labour was in the ¹⁵ little flock, "the faithful Jews who believed in Him, out of the people of the flock aforesaid, or the synagogue, Who in the primitive Church despised all earthly things, leading a most pure life." So He says, ¹⁶ I will feed My flock and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord God: I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but I will destroy the fat and the strong, I will feed them with judgement.

The elect are the end of all God's dispensations. He fed all; yet the fruit of His feeding, His toils, His death, the travail of His soul, was in those only who are saved. So S. Paul says, ¹⁷ Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sakes, that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus, with eternal glory. He fed all; but the poor of the flock alone, those who were despised of men, because they would not follow the pride of the High Priests and Scribes and Pharisees, believed on Him, as they themselves say, ¹⁸ Have any of the rulers or the Pharisees believed on Him? and S. Paul says, ¹⁹ Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty; and base things of the world, and things despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are.

And I took unto Me two [shepherd's] staves, as David says, ²⁰ Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me. The one I called Beauty or Loveliness ²¹, as the Psalmist longs to behold the beauty or loveliness of God in His temple ²², and says; let ²³ the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us.

And the other I called Bands, lit. Binders ²⁴. The one staff represents the full favour and loving-kindness of God; when this was broken, there yet remained the other, by which they were held together as a people in covenant with God. And I fed the flock. This was the use of his staves; He tended them with both, ever putting in exercise towards them the loving beauty and grace of God, and binding them together and with Himself.

8. And I cut off three shepherds in one month. "²⁵ I have read in some one's commentary, that the shepherds, cut off in the indignation of the Lord, are to be understood of priests and false prophets and kings of the Jews, who, after the Passion of Christ, were all cut off in one time, of whom Jeremiah speaketh, ²⁶ The priests said not, Where is the Lord? and they that handle the law knew Me not; the pastors also transgressed against Me, and the prophets prophesied by Baal, and walked after things which do not profit," and again, ²⁷ As the thief is ashamed when he is found, so is the house of Israel ashamed; they, their kings, their princes, and their priests and their prophets; and ²⁸ they said, Come, let us devise devices against Jeremiah; for the law shall not perish from the priest, ¹⁴ Dion. ¹⁵ S. Luke xii. 32. ¹⁶ Ezek. xxxiv. 15, 16.

¹⁷ 2 Tim. ii. 10. ¹⁸ S. John vii. 48. ¹⁹ 1 Cor. i. 26-28.
²⁰ Ps. xxiii. 4. ²¹ κάλλος, δ ; εὐπρέπεια, Aq. Sym. (Theodot. also, see Field Hexapl. on v. 10.) "decus." S. Jer. ²² $\pi\eta$ Ps. xxvii. 4. ²³ Ps. xc. 17.
²⁴ From the common $\pi\eta$ "rope;" in Arab. verb, "bound fast as with rope," "made covenant;" noun, "band of marriage, friendship, covenant of God or man, personal security," Lane. $\sigma\chi\omicron\lambda\iota\sigma\mu\alpha$, δ Aq. Sym.; funiculos, S. Jer.
²⁵ S. Jer. ²⁶ Jer. ii. 8. ²⁷ Ib. 26. ²⁸ Ib. xviii. 18.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

their soul also abhorred me.

¹ Jer. 15. 2.
& 43. 11.
[†] Heb. of his fellow, or,
neighbour.

9 Then said I, I will not feed you: that that dieth, let it die; and that that is to be cut off, let it be cut off; and let the rest eat every one the flesh [†] of nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophet. ¹ He speaks of the kings of the Jews, and prophets and priests; for by the three orders they were shepherded. ² The true and good Shepherd having been already pointed out, it was right and necessary that the hirelings and false shepherds should be removed, the guides of the Jews in the law. The three shepherds were, I deem, those who exercised the legal priesthood, and those appointed judges of the people, and the interpreters of Scripture, i.e. the lawyers. For these too fed Israel. Those who had the glory of the priesthood were of the tribe of Levi only; and of them Malachi says, ³ The priest's lips shall keep knowledge, and they shall seek the law at his mouth. But those who received authority to judge were also selected, yet were appointed out of every tribe. In like way the lawyers, who were ever assessors to the judges, and adduced the words of the law in proof of every matter.—But we shall find that our Lord Jesus Christ Himself expressly pronounced woe on the Pharisees and scribes and lawyers. For He said, ⁴ Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees. And when one of the lawyers hereupon answered Him saying, ⁵ Master, so saying Thou reproachest us also, He said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lay men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers. These three Shepherds then, priests and judges and lawyers ⁶, who remained in their own orders and places, until the coming of Christ, were very justly taken away in one month. For since ⁷ they killed the Prince of life, thereby also are they mown down, and that in the month of the first fruits, in which Emmanuel endured to be slain for us. They remained indeed administering Israel, even after the Saviour's Cross, through the long-suffering and compassion of Almighty God calling them to repentance; but, in the sentence passed by God, they were taken away, at that time, when they delivered to the Cross the Saviour and Redeemer of all. They were taken away then in one month; Nisan. A. D. 33. The three offices, King, Divine Teacher, Priest, were to be united in Christ: they might have been held under Him: those who rejected them in Him, forfeited them themselves. These then He made to disappear, effaced them from the earth ⁸.

And My soul was straitened for them ⁹. It is used of the Divine grief at the misery of His people ¹⁰. And their soul abhorred Me, nauseated Me ¹¹. ¹² When it is said, Their soul also abhorreth Me, the meaning is, 'My soul did not loathe them first, but their soul first despised Me, therefore My Soul abhorred them.' The soul which drives away God's good

¹ Theodoret.

⁴ S. Luke xi. 44.

² S. Cyr.

³ Mal. ii. 7.

⁶ Ib. 45, 46.

⁶ No other explanation of the 'three shepherds' seems to me at all to recommend itself. The Jews made them Moses Aaron and Miriam (Ta'anith f. 9a.) and, from them, S. Jerome; J. Kim. and (as one solution) Ibn Ezra, suggested Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi; "After whom," the rabbis say, "prophecy departed from Israel" ("on account of the cutting off of prophecy at their death," opinion in Tanchum.) Abraham Lev. "the principality of the sons of David, and the monarchy of the Hasmonæans, and that of their servants." D. Kim., "the three sons of Josiah, Jehoahaz, Jehoakim and Zedekiah." Abarbanel, "the Maccabees, Judas Jonathan and Simon;" Rashi, "the house of Ahab and the house of Ahaziah, and his brethren and all the posterity of the kingdom of David (except Joash) slain by Ahab and Athaliah;" Tanchum, "Joshua the high-priest and the second priest and the anointed for war;" (Duxtorf refers for his office to Maimonides, Hilchos melachin umilchama c. 7, and Massecheth Sota c. 8. Lex. Chald. col. 1267). "And it is said, Joshua, Zerrubbabel and Nehemiah," Tanchum. Theodorus of Mops. interpreted it of 'the priests' generally, not of any three classes of persons. Three classes, Priests, Pharisees and Sadducees, were adopted by another.

Before CHRIST
cir. 487.

10 ¶ And I took my staff, even Beauty, and cut it asunder, that I might break my covenant which I had made with all the people.

Spirit, comes at last to loathe Him and the thought and mention of Him.

9. And I said, I will not feed you. God, at last, leaves the rebellious soul or people to itself, as He says by Moses, ¹³ Then My anger shall be kindled against them in that day, and I will forsake them, and will hide My Face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall find them: and our Lord tells the captious Jews; ¹⁴ I go My way, and ye shall seek Me and shall die in your sins.

That which dieth, let it die. Zechariah seems to condense, but to repeat the abandonment in Jeremiah; ¹⁵ Cast them out of My sight, and let them go forth. And it shall be, if they shall say unto thee, Whither shall we go forth? then thou shalt tell them, Thus saith the Lord, Such as are for death, to death; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the captivity, to the captivity. First, God gives over to death without violence, by famine or pestilence, those whose lot it should be; another portion to violent death by the sword; that which is cut off shall be cut off; and the rest, the flock of slaughter, would be turned into wolves; and, as in the awful and horrible siege of Jerusalem, those who had escaped these deaths, the left-over, shall eat every one of the flesh of his neighbour, every law of humanity and of nature broken. ¹⁶ So should they understand at last, how evil and bitter a thing it is for all who lived by My help to be despoiled of that help.

10. And I took my staff Beauty, and cut it asunder. Not, as aforetime, did He chasten His people, retaining His relation to them: for such chastening is an austere form of love. By breaking the staff of His tender love, He signified that this relation was at an end.

That I might dissolve My covenant which I had made with all the people, rather, with all the peoples, i.e. with all nations. Often as it is said of Israel, that they brake the covenant of God ¹⁷, it is spoken of God, only to deny that He would break it ¹⁸, or in prayer that He would not ¹⁹. Here it is not absolutely the covenant with His whole people, which He brake; it is rather, so to speak, a covenant with the nations in favour of Israel, allowing thus much and forbidding more, with regard to His people. So God had said of the times of Christ ²⁰; In that day I will make a covenant for them with the beasts of the field and with the fowls of the heaven, and with the creeping things of the ground; and, I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land; and in Job ²¹ thou shalt be in league with the stones of the some older; Pharisees Sadducees and Essenes by Lightfoot (Horæ Hebr. on S. John x.). On the abortive guesses of a German school, see ab. Intro. to Zechariah p. 509.

⁷ Acts iii. 15.

⁸ הָיָה lit. "hid," Job xx. 12, as נָסַח uniformly (15 times), thence ἀφανίσω. It is used of numbers; the 7 nations, Ex. xxxiii. 23; of Israel, in the intention of their enemies, from being a nation, נָסַח, Ps. lxxxiii. 5; of the house of Jeroboam from the face of the earth. 1 Kg. xiii. 34; of Sennacherib's army, 2 Chr. xxxii. 21.

⁹ As in F. M.

¹⁰ Jud. x. 16 also with נָסַח p. Gesenius' comparison of Arab. نَسَحَ is wrong. Its primary meaning is "cut off from," See Lane p. 419.

¹¹ Such is the traditional meaning of נָסַח. "Loathed My worship," Ch.; "loathed," Abulw. Tanch. coll. Syr. נָסַח. "one so nauseating as to vomit his food."

¹² De. xxxi. 17.

¹⁴ S. John viii. 21.

¹⁵ Jer. xv. 1, 2, and similarly xliii. 11.

¹⁶ Osor.

¹⁷ Lev. xxvi. 15, De. xxxi. 16, 20, Is. xxiv. 5, Jer. xi. 10, xxxi. 32, Ezek. xvi. 59, xlv. 7.

¹⁸ Lev. xxvi. 44, Jud. ii. 1. and, strongly, Jer. xxxiii. 20, 21.

¹⁹ Jer. xiv. 21.

²⁰ Hos. ii. 18, [20, Heb.] ²¹ Ezek. xxxiv. 25.

²² Job v. 23.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

Or, the poor
of the flock,
&c. certainly knew.
* Zeph. 3. 12.

11 And it was broken in that day: and so^k the poor of the flock that waited upon me knew that it was the word of the LORD.

12 And I said unto them, † If ye think field, and the beasts of the field shall be at peace with thee. This covenant He willed to annihilate. He would no more interpose, as He had before said, ¹ I will not deliver from their hand. Whoever would might do, what they would, as the Romans first, and well nigh all nations since, have inflicted on the Jews, what they willed; and Mohammedans too have required to them their contumely to Jesus.

11. And so the poor of the flock that waited upon Me² knew. The rest were blinded; those who listened to God's word, observed His Prophet, waited on Him and observed His words, knew from the fulfilment of the beginning, that the whole was God's word. Every darkening cloud around the devoted city was an earnest, that the storm, which should destroy it, was gathering upon it. So our Lord warned, ³ When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. Then let them which are in Judæa flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart. The little flock which waited upon the Good Shepherd, obeyed the warning, and, fleeing to Pella, escaped the horrible judgement which fell on those who remained. "They remembered that it had been predicted many centuries before, and that the Lord, by Whose Spirit the prophet spake, foretold that in that city⁵ one stone should not be left upon another."

12. And I said unto them, If ye think good, give Me My price. God asks of us a return, not having any proportion to His gifts of nature or of grace, but such as we can render. He took the Jews out of the whole human race, made them His own, a peculiar people, freed them from the bondage and the iron furnace of Egypt, gave them the land flowing with milk and honey, fed and guarded them by His Providence, taught them by His Prophets. He, the Lord and Creator of all, was willing to have them alone for His inheritance, and, in return, asked them to love Him with their whole heart, and to do what He commanded them. ⁶ He sent His servants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of the vineyard; and the husbandmen took His servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another. Last of all, He sent unto them His Son, to ask for those fruits, the return for all His bounteous care and His unwearied acts of power and love. "Give Me," He would say, "some fruits of piety, and tokens of faith."

⁴ What? Does He speak of a price? Did the Lord of all let out His toil? Did He bargain with those, for whom he expended it for a certain price? He did. He condescended to serve day and night for our salvation and dignity; and as one hired, in view of the reward which He set before Him, to give all His care to adorn and sustain our condition. So He complains by Isaiah, that He had undergone great toil to do away our sins. But what reward did He require? Faith and the will of a faithful heart, that thereby we might attain the gift of righteousness, and might in holy works pant good, give me my price; and if not, forbear. So they¹ weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver.

¹ v. 6. ² אֲשֶׁר הָיוּ עִמָּו occurs more commonly w. acc. of thg., commandments &c. but w. acc. pers., in good sense, אֲשֶׁר אֲרָיו "he that observeth his master," Pr. xxvii. 18; also of God, Hos. iv. 10; of idols, Ps. xxxi. 7; and of observing for evil, 1 Sam. xix. 11, Job x. 14. ³ S. Luke xxi. 20, 21. ⁴ Osor. ⁵ S. Matt. xxiv. 2. ⁶ S. Matt. xxi. 34-37. ⁷ Eus. Dem. Ev. x. 4. So Theod. ⁸ Ezek. iii. 27; add ii. 5, 7, iii. 11. ⁹ 1 Kgs xviii. 21. ¹⁰ Ex. xxi. 32. ¹¹ Maimonides More Neboch. c. 40. P. 3.

13 And the LORD said unto me, Cast it

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
† Heb. If it be good in your eyes.
Matt. 26. 15.
See Ex. 21. 32.

after everlasting glory. For He needeth not our goods; but He so bestoweth on us all things, as to esteem His labour amply paid, if He see us enjoy His gifts. But He so asketh for this as a reward, as to leave us free, either by faith and the love due, to embrace His benefits, or faithlessly to reject it. This is His meaning, when He saith,

And if not, forbear. God does not force our free-will, or constrain our service. He places life and death before us, and bids us choose life. By His grace alone we can choose Him; but we can refuse His grace and Himself. ⁸ Thou shalt say unto them, He says to Ezekiel, Thus saith the Lord God, He that heureth, let him hear, and he that forbeareth, let him forbear. This was said to them, as a people, the last offer of grace. It gathered into one all the past. As Elijah had said, ⁹ If the Lord be God, follow Him; but if Baal, then follow him; so He bids them, at last to choose openly, whose they would be, to whom they would give their service; and if they would refuse in heart, to refuse in act also. Forbear, cease, leave off, abandon; and that for ever.

So they weighed for My price thirty pieces of silver; the price of a slave, gored to death by an ox¹⁰. Whence one of themselves says, "¹¹ you will find that a freeman is valued, more or less, at 60 shekels, but a slave at thirty." He then, Whom the prophet represented, was to be valued at thirty pieces of silver. It was but an increase of the contumely, that this contemptuous price was given, not to Him, but for Him, the Price of His Blood. It was matter of bargain. ¹² Judas said, What will ye give me, and I will deliver Him unto you? The High Priest, knowingly or unknowingly, fixed on the price, named by Zechariah. As they took into their mouths willingly the blasphemy mentioned in the Psalm; ¹³ they shoot out the lip, they shake the head, saying, He trusted in the Lord, that He would deliver Him; let Him deliver Him, seeing that He delighted in Him; so perhaps they fixed on the thirty pieces of silver, because Zechariah had named them as a sum offered in contumely to him, who offered to be a shepherd and asked for his reward.

13. And the Lord said unto me, Cast it, as a thing vile and rejected, as torn flesh was to be cast to dogs¹⁴, or a corpse was cast unburied¹⁵, or the dead body of Absalom was cast into the pit¹⁶, or the dust of the idol-altars into the brook Kedron by Josiah¹⁷, or the idols to the moles and the bats¹⁸; or Judah and Israel from the face of God¹⁹ into a strange land²⁰; Coniah and his seed, a vessel in which is no pleasure²¹, into a land which they knew not; or the rebels against God, said, ²² let us cast away their cords from us; or wickedness was cast into the Ephah²³; once it is added²⁴, for louting.

Unto the potter. The words exactly correspond with the event, that the thirty pieces of silver were cast or flung away²⁵; that their ultimate destination was the potter, whose field was bought with them; but that they were not cast directly to him, (which were a contemptuous act, such as would ¹² S. Matt. xxvi. 15. ¹³ Ps. xxii. 7, 8. ¹⁴ Ex. xxii. 31. ¹⁵ Is. xiv. 19, xxxiv. 3, Jer. xxiv. 16, xii. 19, xxvi. 23, xxxvi. 30. ¹⁶ 2 Sam. xviii. 17. ¹⁷ 2 Kgs xxiii. 12. ¹⁸ Is. ii. 20, add Ezek. xx. 8. ¹⁹ 2 Kgs xiii. 23, xvii. 20, xxiv. 21, Jer. lii. 3. ²⁰ De. xxix. 27 [28 Eng.]. ²¹ Jer. xxii. 28. ²² Ps. ii. 3. ²³ Zech. v. 18. ²⁴ Ezek. xvi. 5. ²⁵ ρίψας τὰ ἀργύρια ἐν τῇ νάφῃ S. Matt. xxvii. 5.

thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORD.

^m Matt. 27. 9. 10.

A goodly price, that I was priced at of them, lit. the magnificence of the value³, at which I was valued of them! The strong irony is carried on by the, at which I was valued of them, as in the idiom, thou wert precious in my sight⁴. Precious the thought of God to David⁵; precious the redemption of the soul of man⁶; and precious was the Shepherd Who came to them; precious was the value, whereat He was valued by them⁷. And yet He, Who was so valued, was Almighty God. For so it stands: Thus saith the Lord God, Cast it unto the potter, the goodly price that I was priced at of them. The name, the potter, connects the prophecy with that former prophecy of Jeremiah⁸, denouncing the judgement of God for the shedding of innocent blood, whereby they had defiled the valley of the son of Hinnom, which was at the entry of the gate of the pottery⁹, and which, through the vengeance of God there, should be called the valley of slaughter¹⁰. The price of this innocent Blood, by the shedding of which the iniquities of their fathers were filled up, should rest on that same place, for whose sake God said, ¹¹ I will break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again. So then S. Matthew may have quoted this prophecy as Jeremiah's, to signify how the woes, denounced on the sins committed in this same place, should be brought upon it through this last crowning sin, and all the righteous blood which had been shed, should come upon that generation¹².

Other cases are simple omissions of the \aleph , not an interchange at all; as \aleph from \aleph (med. i. Arab. Æth.). Jer. xxv. 27, ברהר for ברהר Ez. xxxiv. 20. שר for שר. vi. 7 is a mere correction for שר and so, again, not Biblical Hebrew. לר (1 Sam. xxii. 12, 22 Ch.) is a mere corruption of לר, as, in all languages proper names are the most easily corrupted. (See Daniel the prophet p. 405 ed. 2). אש (2 Sam. xx. 5. Mic. vi. 19) and the common ש, each lose one letter of the original form, which has both. (See on Daniel the prophet p. 60 note. ed. 2) There is not then the slightest countenance for assuming that לר is not, what according to its form, it is, "the potter." ² Osor.

"Jewish writers who could satisfy themselves that the 'thirty pieces of silver' were anything but what they are, some thirty precepts given to the sons of Noah (mystical interpretation in the דברי הימים ap. Abarb. ad loc. p. 219. v.), or thirty dignities of royalty ("the wise of blessed memory," in Abarh. lh. p. 292. v.) or the thirty righteous in each generation, promised (as they say) by God to Abraham (Midrash Aggadah in Rashi), or the thirty in that generation (Kim.), or who went up with Nehemiah, or were priests in his time [Tanchum has "It is said, that perhaps it is an image of the thirty righteous or priests, who were the noblest of the followers of Zerubbabel or Nehemiah."] Ibn E., or thirty days of imperfect repentance (Kim.), or thirty years of the reigns of the kings of the pious Hasmonæans (Abrah. Toled. in Mc Caul on Zech. ad loc.), or who scrupled not to own that they could not explain them at all (Rashi);—Jewish writers, who could, in any of these ways, escape from thinking of those thirty pieces of silver, at which their forefathers priced the Blood of Jesus, doubt not that the Good Shepherd Who fed them, Whom they rejected, Who gave them up, Who speaks of Himself, "the goodly price that I was priced at of them" (however they may have distorted these words too) was Almighty God." Fusey's University Sermons pp. 151. 152.

⁴ 1 Sam. xxvi. 21, Ps. lxxii. 14, 2 Kgs i. 13, 14, Is. xliii. 4. ⁵ Ps. cxxxix. 17.

⁶ Ib. xlix. 9. ⁷ יֵרֵךְ מַעֲלִיחַ. See Ewald Lehrb. n. 219a. p. 573, ed. 8. ⁸ Jer. xix.

⁹ שֶׁנֶּחֱמָה Ih. 2. See Ges. Thes. sub v. p. 522. ¹⁰ Jer. xix. 6. ¹¹ Ib. 11.

¹² S. Augustine suggests that S. Matthew wished to lead the reader to connect the prophecy of Zechariah with Jerem. xxxü. 9. "All copies," he says, "have not 'Jeremiah' but only

'by the prophet;' but more Mss. have the name of Jeremiah; and those who have considered the Gospel carefully in the Greek copies, say that they have found it in the older Greek (copies); and there is no reason why the name should be added, so as to occasion a fault; but there was a reason why it should be removed from some copies, this being done by a bold un-skilfulness [imperitia] being distracted by the question, that this testimony was not found in Jeremiah." "S. Matthew," he says further, "would have corrected it in his life-time and least, when admonished by others who could read this, while he was yet in the flesh, unless he thought that one name of a prophet instead of another did, not without reason, occur to his memory, which was ruled by the Holy Spirit, but that the Lord appointed that i should be so written," 1) to shew that all the prophets, speaking by the Spirit, agreed together.

by a marvellous consent, which is much more than if all the things of the prophets were spoken by the mouth of one man, and so that, whatever the Holy Spirit said by them, should he received undoubtedly, and each belonged to all and all to each &c. 2) to combine i with the selling the field of Hananeel, of which the evidence was put in an earthen vessel de Cons. Evang. L. iii. n. 30, 31. T. iii. 2, p. 114—116.

None of the other cases of mixed quotation come up to this. S. Mark quotes two pro-

Before
CHRIST
cir. 437.

Or, Binders.

Ezek. 34. 2,
3, 4.

14 Then I cut asunder mine other staff, even || Bands, that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel.

15 ¶ And the Lord said unto me, "Take

14. And I cut asunder mine other staff, Bands, to dissolve the brotherhood between Judah and Israel. Hitherto prophecy had spoken of the healing of the great breach between Israel and Judah, in Christ. The Lord, Isaiah said, ¹ shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. The envy of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off: Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim; and Hosea, ² Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together and shall appoint themselves one Head; and Jeremiah, ³ In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel. And Ezekiel, in the midst of the captivity, in a symbolic action the counterpart of this, is bidden, ⁴ Take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions; then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim and all the house of Israel his companions, and join them one to another into one stick, and they shall become one in thy hand; and, when asked the meaning of this act, he was to say, Thus saith the Lord God, ⁵ I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and will make them one stick, and they shall be one in Mine hand. And dropping the symbol; ⁶ Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone—and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel: and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all—I will cleanse them, and they shall be My people and I will be their God, and David My servant shall be king over them, and they all shall have one Shepherd. Such should be the unity of those who would be gathered under the One Shepherd. And so it was. ⁷ The multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; and long afterwards it was a proverb among the Heathen ⁸, "See how these Christians love one another." Zechariah is here speaking of those who had rejected the Good Shepherd, the Israel and Judah after the flesh, who shut themselves out from the promises of God. This had its first fulfilment in the terrible dissolution of every band of brotherhood ⁹ and of our common nature, which made the siege of Jerusalem a proverb for horror, and precipitated its destruction. ¹⁰ Having thus separated the believing from the unbelieving, He bared the rest of His care. And what we now see bears witness to the prophecy. For the Jews, being deprived of prophets and priests and kings and temple and ark and altar and mercy-seat and candlestick and table and the rest, through which the legal worship was performed, have come to be deprived also of the guardianship from above; and, scattered, exiled, removed, phesies, of Malachi and of Isaiah as Isaiah's (S. Mark i. 2, 3). S. Matthew blends in one, words of Isaiah (lxii. 1) and Zechariah (ix. 9) as "the prophet" (S. Matt. xxi. 4, 5). Our Lord unites Is. lvi. 7, and Jer. vii. 11, with the words, "It is written."

Of earlier fathers Tertullian simply quotes the prophecy as Jeremiah's (adv. Marc. iv. 40). Origen says, "Jeremiah is not said to have prophesied this anywhere in his books, either what are read in the Churches, or reported (referuntur) among the Jews. I suspect that it is an error of writing, or that it is some secret writing of Jeremiah wherein it is written." (in S. Matt. p. 916.) Eusebius says, "Consider since this, is not in the Prophet Jeremiah, whether we must think that it was removed from it by some wickedness, or whether it was a clerical error of those who made the copies of the Gospels carelessly." Dem. Ev. x. p. 491.

¹ Is. xi. 12, 13.

² Hos. i. 11.

³ Jer. iii. 18.

unto thee yet the instruments of a foolish shepherd.

16 For, lo, I will raise up a shepherd in the land, which shall not visit those that be

Before
CHRIST
cir. 437.

serve against their will those who preach Christ: denying Him as Lord, they yield service to His servants. The prophet having foretold these things of Christ, our God and Saviour, and reproved the obstinacy of the Jews, naturally turns his prophecy straight to the God-opposed christ whom they expect, as they say. So said the Lord in the holy Gospels to them, ¹¹ I am come in My Father's name, and ye receive Me not; another will come in his own name, and him ye will receive. This the blessed Paul also prophesied of them, ¹² Because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved, God shall send them strong delusion that they should believe a lie, that all might be damned, who believe not the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness. The like does the blessed Zechariah prophesy, having received the power of the Holy Spirit.

15. Take to thee yet the instrument ¹³ of a foolish ¹⁴ shepherd.

¹⁵ Yet. He had enacted one tragedy, in which he clearly set forth the future guilt of Judas; now another is set forth, the accumulated scoffing through Anti-Christ. For as Paul said, because they receive not the Spirit of truth, the All-righteous Judge shall send them a spirit of delusion, that they should believe a lie ¹⁶. He calls him a foolish shepherd, for since the extremest folly consists in the extremest wickedness, he will be the most foolish, who reached the highest impiety, and this he will do by arrogating to himself divinity and claiming divine honours ¹⁷.

This is the only action, which the prophet had to enact or to relate. If it was a visible act, the instrument might be a staff which should bruise, an instrument which should bear a semblance to that of the good shepherd, but which should be pernicious. ¹⁸ Good shepherds, who understood their business, had slight staves, that, if there should be occasion to strike, the stricken sheep might not be bruised; but one who understandeth not, beats them with thicker clubs." Or it may mean also, whatever he would use for the hurtful treatment of the sheep, such as he proceeds to speak of. He is spoken of as, in fact, foolishly sinful ¹⁴: for sin is the only real folly, and all real folly has sin mingled in it. The short-lived wisdom of the foolish shepherd for his own ends should also be his destruction.

16. I will raise up. God supplies the strength or wisdom which men abuse to sin. He, in His Providence, disposeth the circumstances, of which the ambitious avail themselves. Anti-Christ, whom the Jews look for, will be as much an instrument of God for the perfecting the elect, as the Chaldees ¹⁹ or the Assyrians ²⁰ whom God raised up, for the chastisement of His former people, or the Medes against Babylon ²¹.

Which shall not visit them that be cut off. Zechariah uses the imagery, yet not the exact words of Jeremiah ²² and Ezekiel ²³. Neglect of every duty of a shepherd to his flock, ⁴ Ezek. xxxvii. 16, 17.

⁵ Ib. 19.

⁶ Ib. 21, 22, 23, 24.

⁷ Acts iv. 32.

⁸ Tert. Apol. n. 39, p. 82, and notes, Oxf. Tr. ⁹ אמת The word occurs only here, but is in Arab. Syr. Ch. Zab. ¹⁰ Theod. ¹¹ S. John v. 43.

¹² 2 Thess. ii. 10-12.

¹³ Ezekiel has the idiom, "his instrument of destruction," אמתו אמתו ix. 1; "his instrument of slaughter," אמתו אמתו Ib. 2; Isaiah, "for his work," אמתו אמתו liv. 16.

¹⁴ אמת being often a subst., אמת is a sinful fool, Job v. 2, 3, and throughout the Proverbs, though more marked in some places, Pr. vii. 22, xiv. 3, xv. 5, xx. 3, xxiv. 7, xxvii. 22; and in the plural, Ps. cvii. 17, Pr. i. 7. x. 21, xiv. 9.

¹⁵ Osor.

¹⁶ 2 Thess. ii. 10, 11.

¹⁷ Ib. 4.

¹⁸ S. Cyr.

¹⁹ אמתו אמתו Hab. i. 6.

²⁰ Am. vi. 14.

²¹ רעי אמתו Is. xlii. 17.

²² Jer. xxiii. 1, 2.

²³ Ezek. xxxiv. 3, 4.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

Or, hidden.
Or, bear.

Jer. 23. 1.
Ezek. 34. 2.
John 10. 12,
13.

|| cut off, neither shall seek the young one,
nor heal that that is broken, nor || feed that that standeth still: but he shall eat the flesh of the fat, and tear their claws in pieces.

17 ° Woe to the idol shepherd that leav-eth the flock! the sword shall be upon his arm, and upon his right eye: his arm shall be clean dried up, and his right eye shall

to the sick, the broken, the sound; direct injury of them, preying upon them, make up the picture.

Which shall not visit, or tend, that which is cut off: fulfilling God's judgement¹, that which is to be cut off, let it be cut off.

Neither shall seek the young one, better, the scattered², dispersed, as the Good Shepherd³ came to seek and to save that which was lost. Nor heal that which is broken; bound not, Ezekiel says⁴. "The broken legs of sheep are healed no otherwise than those of men; rolled in wool impregnated with oil and wine, and then bound up with splinters placed round about it."

Nor feed that which standeth still, better, the whole⁶, as the word always means, "in its good estate," like our prayer,
"that Thou wouldest strengthen those who do stand."

17. Woe to the idol shepherd, (a shepherd of nothingness, one who hath no quality of a shepherd⁷;) who leaveth the flock.
The condemnation of the evil shepherd is complete in the abandonment of the sheep; as our Lord says, "He that is an hireling and not the Shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming and leaveth the sheep and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them and scattereth the sheep. The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling and careth not for the sheep."

Or it may equally be, Shepherd, ° thou idol, including the original meaning of nothingness, such as Anti-Christ will be,
"while he calleth himself God, and willet to be worshipped." "This shepherd shall therefore arise in Israel, because the true Shepherd had said, I will not feed you. He is prophesied of by another name in Daniel the Prophet¹¹, and in the Gospel¹², and in the Epistle of Paul to the Thessa-lonians¹³, as the abomination of desolation, who shall sit in the temple of the Lord, and make himself as God. He cometh, not to heal but to destroy the flock of Israel. This shepherd the Jews shall receive, whom the Lord Jesus shall slay with the breath of His mouth, and destroy with the brightness of His Coming."

The sword shall be upon [against] his arm and right eye.
His boast shall be of intelligence, and might. The punishment and destruction shall be directed against the instrument of each, the eye and the arm. "The eye, whereby he shall boast to behold acutely the mysteries of God, and to see more than all prophets heretofore, so that he shall call himself son of God. But the word of the Lord shall be upon his arm and upon his right eye, so that his strength and all his boast of might shall be dried up, and the knowledge which be utterly darkened."

CHAPTER XII.

1 Jerusalem a cup of trembling to herself, 3 and a burdensome stone to her adversaries. 6 The victorious restoring of Judah. 9 The repentance of Jerusalem.

THE burden of the word of the LORD^a Isai. 42. 5.
for Israel, saith the LORD, ° which & 41. 24.
& 45. 12, 18.
& 48. 13.

he promised himself falsely, shall be obscured in everlasting darkness." "Above and against the power of Anti-Christ, shall be the virtue and vengeance and sentence of Christ, Who shall slay him with the breath of His mouth." The right arm, the symbol of might, and the right eye which was to direct its aim, should fail together, through the judgement of God against him. He, lately boastful and persecuting, shall become blind and powerless, bereft alike of wisdom and strength.

The "right" in Holy Scripture being so often a symbol of what is good, the left of what is evil, it may be also imagined, that "the left eye, i.e. the acumen and cunning to devise deadly frauds, will remain uninjured: while the right eye, i.e.
counsel to guard against evil, will be sunk in thick darkness.
And so, the more he employs his ability to evil, the more frantically will he bring to bear destruction upon himself."

XII. "From 'I will make Jerusalem' to 'Awake, O sword,' there is a threefold exposition. For some of the Jews say that these things have already been fulfilled in part from Zorobabel to Cn. Pompey who, first of the Romans, took Judæa and the temple, as Josephus relates. Others think that it is to be fulfilled at the end of the world, when Jerusalem shall be restored, which the miserable Jewish race promiseth itself with its anointed, of whom we read above as the foolish shepherd. But others, i.e. we who are called by the name of Christ, say that these things are daily fulfilled, and will be fulfilled in the Church to the end of the world."

1. The burden of the word of the Lord for, rather, upon¹⁶ Israel. If this prophecy is a continuation of the last, notwithstanding its fresh title, then Israel must be the Christian Church, formed of the true Israel which believed, and the Gentiles who were grafted into them. So S. Cyril; "Having spoken sufficiently of the Good Shepherd Christ, and of the foolish, most cruel shepherd who butchered the sheep, i.e.
Anti-Christ, he seasonably makes mention of the persecutions which would from time to time arise against Israel; not the Israel according to the flesh, but the spiritual, that Jerusalem which is indeed holy, the Church of the Living God. For as we say, that he is spiritually a Jew, who hath the¹⁸ circumcision in the heart, that through the Spirit, and not in the flesh through the letter; so also may Israel be conceived, not that of the blood of Israel, but rather that, which has a mind beholding God. But such are all who are called to sanctification through the faith in Christ, and who, in Him and by Him, know of God the Father. For this is the one true elected way of beholding God."

Arab. "was weary" (quoted C.B. Mich. Ges.) has only this force as intrans.; נָשָׂא c. acc. r., and אָנַח agree with Heb. Yet Jon. renders as Eng.

7 רָפְאִי אֵלַי, as רָפְאִי אֵלַי, "physicians of no value," Job xiii. 4.

8 S. John x. 12, 13.

9 רָפְאִי, as a form for רָפְאִי, occurs in Is. xxxviii. 12, יָרָא.

10 S. Jer.

11 Dan. ix.

12 S. Mark xiii.

13 2 Thess. ii.

14 Dion.

15 Osor.

16 See on Nah. i. 1, p. 373. The עַל of the title is repeated in the עַל-יְהוּדָה ver. 2.

17 1 Tim. iii. 15.

18 Rom. ii. 29.

¹ ab. v. 9. ² τὸ ἐσκορπισμένον, δ; dispersum, S. Jer. "who have wandered or gone astray," Syr. "He who hireth a flock is forbidden לָקַח. What is this! To lead it from place to place." Talm. Hieros. Tr. Sheviith c. 3, in Buxt. Lex. p. 1363. Arab.
سَمِعَ مِنْكُمْ أَيْنَ أَنْتَ "Whence camest thou to us?" c. ٢٠, "traversed country" (Kam.) نَجَدَ is not used of young of animals.

³ S. Luke xix. 10, S. Matt. xviii. 11.

⁴ Ezek. xxxiv. 4. ⁵ Colum. de re rust. viii. 5.

⁶ "Which was set firm, or set himself firm." Nif. as in Ps. xxxix. 6, "Every man in his firm estate (נָח) is all vanity." τὸ ἐδόξαζον, δ. "id quod stat," S. Jer. So Syr. The

Before
CHRIST
cir. 437.

stretcheth forth the heavens, and layeth the foundation of the earth, and ^bformeth the spirit of man within him.

^b Num. 16. 22. Eccles. 12. 7. Isai. 57. 16. Heb. 12. 9.

Since the Good Shepherd was rejected by all, except the poor of the flock, the little flock which believed in Him, and thereupon the band of brotherhood was dissolved between Israel and Judah, Israel in those times could not be Israel after the flesh, which then too was the deadly antagonist of the true Israel, and thus early also chose Anti-Christ, such as was Bar-Cochba, with whom so many hundreds of thousands perished. There was no war then against Jerusalem, since it had ceased to be ¹.

But Zechariah does not say that this prophecy, to which he has annexed a separate title, follows, in time, upon the last; rather, since he has so separated it by its title, he has marked it as a distinct prophecy from the preceding. It may be, that he began again from the time of the Maccabees and took God's deliverances of the people Israel then, as the foreground of the deliverances to the end ². Yet in the times of Antiochus, it was one people only which was against the Jews, and Zechariah himself speaks only of the Greeks ³; here he repeatedly emphasises that they were all nations ⁴. It may then rather be, that the future, the successive efforts of the world to crush the people of God, and its victory amid suffering, and its conversions of the world through the penitent looking to Jesus, are exhibited in one great perspective, according to the manner of prophecy, which mostly exhibits the prominent events, not their order or sequence. ⁵ The penitential act of contrite sinners, especially of Jews, looking at Him Whom they pierced, dates from the Day of Pentecost, and continues to the latter days, when it will be greatly intensified and will produce blessed results, and is here concentrated into one focus. The rising up of God's enemies against Christ's Church, which commenced at the same time, and has been continued in successive persecutions from Jews, Gentiles, and other unbelievers in every age, and which will reach its climax in the great Anti-Christian outbreak of the last times, and be confounded by the Coming of Christ to judgement, is here summed up in one panoramic picture, exhibited at once to the eye."

Which stretcheth forth the heavens. God's creative power is an ever-present working, as our Lord says, ⁶ My Father worketh hitherto and I work. His preservation of the things which He has created is a continual re-creation. All "forces" are supported by Him, Who Alone hath life in Himself. He doth not the less uphold all things by the word of His power, because, until the successive generations, with or without their will, with or against His Will for them, shall have completed His Sovereign Will, He upholds them uniformly in being by His Unchanging Will. Man is ever forgetting this, and because, ⁷ since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as from the beginning of the creation, they relegate the Creator and His creating as far as they can to some time, as far back as they can imagine, enough to fill their

2 Behold, I will make Jerusalem ^c a cup of || trembling unto all the people round about, || when they shall be in the siege

|| Or, and also against Judah shall he be which shall be in siege against Jerusalem.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 437.

^c Isai. 51. 17, 23, 23.
|| Or, slumber, or, poison.

imaginations, and forget Him Who made them, in Whose hands is their eternity, Who will be their Judge. So the prophets remind them and us of His continual working, which men forget in the sight of His works; ⁸ Thus saith the Lord; He that createth the heavens, and stretcheth them out; He that spreadeth forth the earth and its produce, Who giveth breath to the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein; and, ⁹ I am the Lord Who maketh all things, Who stretcheth out the heavens alone, Who spreadeth abroad the earth by Myself; speaking at once of that, past in its beginning yet present to us in its continuance, but to Him ever-present present; and of things actually present to us, ¹⁰ that frustrateth the tokens of the liars; and of things to those of that day still future, ¹¹ that confirmeth the word of His servant, and performeth the counsel of His messengers; the beginning of which was not to be till the taking of Babylon. And the Psalmist unites past and present in one, ¹² Domming light as a garment, stretching out the heavens as a curtain; Who layeth the beams of His chambers on the waters, Who maketh the clouds His chariot; Who walketh on the wings of the wind; Who maketh His angels spirits, His ministers a flame of fire; He founded the earth upon its base. And Amos, ¹³ He that formeth the mountains and createth the winds, and declareth unto man his thoughts;—adding whatever lieth nearest to each of us.

And formeth the spirit of man within him, both by the unceasing creation of souls, at every moment in some spot in our globe, or by the re-creation, for which David prays, ¹⁴ Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me. He Who formed the hearts of men can overrule them as He wills. ¹⁵ But the spirit of man is formed by God in him, not by being called to the beginnings of being, although it was made by Him, but, as it were, transformed from weakness to strength, from unmanliness to endurance, altogether being transelemented from things shameful to better things."

¹⁵ It is the wont of the holy Prophets, when about to declare beforehand things of no slight moment, to endeavour to shew beforehand the Almightyness of God, that their word may obtain credence, though they should declare what was beyond all hope, and (to speak of our conceptions) above all reason and credibility."

2. I will make Jerusalem a cup of trembling ¹⁶. For encouragement, He promises the victory, and at first mentions the attack incidentally. Jerusalem is as a cup or basin, which its enemies take into their hands; a stone, which they put forth their strength to lift; but they themselves reel with the draught of God's judgements which they would give to others, they are torn by the stone which they would lift to fling. The image of the cup is mostly of God's displeasure, which is given to His own people, and then, His judgement of chastisement being exceeded, given in turn to those who had been the instruments of giving it ¹⁷. Thus Isaiah speaks

¹ See at length, ab. on Mic. iii. 12, pp. 316—318.

² So Lap. "That Zechariah speaks literally of the times of the Maccabees which were shortly to follow, appears both from the sequence of the times, and the connection and congruency of these oracles with the deeds of the Maccabees, as also because v. 10. ends in the Passion of Christ. For this followed the times of the Maccabees. As then Isaiah, Jeremiah, Hosea, Daniel, Ezekiel &c. foretold what was shortly to befall the Jews from Salmanassar, Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, Darius, so Zechariah foretells what should presently befall them from Antiochus under the Maccabees." Synops. c. xii.

³ Zech. ix. 13.

⁴ חֲסִידָיו כָּל הַיָּמִים xii. 2, 3, 6, 9.

⁵ Bp. C. Wordsworth here, and the like in Keil on xiv. 20. p. 661.

⁶ S. John v. 17.

⁷ 2 S. Pet. iii. 4.

⁸ Is. xlii. 5.

⁹ Ib. xli. 21.

¹⁰ Ib. 25.

¹¹ Ib. 26.

¹² Ps. civ. 2—5.

¹³ Am. iv. 13. add v. 8.

¹⁴ S. Cyr.

¹⁵ Ps. li. 10.

¹⁶ חֶסֶד אֱלֹהִים in this sense. The form חֶסֶד occurs in the like idioms, חֶסֶד אֱלֹהִים, Is. li. 17, 22; חֶסֶד אֱלֹהִים Ps. lx. 5.

¹⁷ See on Obad. 16, pp. 241, 242.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

⁴ ver. 4, 6, 8, 9,
11. & ch. 13.
1. & 14. 4, 6,
8, 9, 13.
⁵ Matt. 21. 44.

both against Judah and against Jerusalem.
3 ¶^d And in that day will I make Jerusalem a burdensome stone for all people: all that burden themselves with it shall be cut in pieces, though all the people of the earth be gathered together against it.

of the cup of trembling. ¹Thou, Jerusalem, hast drunk the dregs of the cup of trembling, hast wrung them out. Therefore hear thou this, thou afflicted and drunken but not with wine. Thus saith thy Lord, the Lord, and thy God that pleadeth the cause of His people, Behold, I have taken out of thine hand the cup of trembling, the dregs of the cup of My fury; thou shalt no more drink it again: but I will put it into the hand of them that afflict thee. Jeremiah speaks of the cup of God's anger, as given by God first to Jerusalem, then to all whom Nebuchadnezzar should subdue, then to Babylon itself²; and as passing through to Edom also³; Ezekiel, of Aholibah⁴ (Jerusalem) drinking the cup of Samaria. In Jeremiah alone, Babylon is herself the cup. ⁵Babylon is a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the nations drunken; the nations have drunken of the wine; therefore the nations are mad. Now Jerusalem is to be, not an ordinary cup, but a large basin⁶ or vessel, from which all nations may drink what will make them reel.

And also upon Judah will it be in the siege against Jerusalem, i. e. the burden of the word⁷ of the Lord which was on Israel should be upon Judah, i. e. upon all, great and small.

3. I will make Jerusalem a burdensome stone to all nations. What is a stone to all nations? It is not a rock or anything in its own nature immoveable, but a stone, a thing rolled up and down, moved, lifted, displaced, piled on others, in every way at the service and command of men, to do with it what they willed. So they thought of that ⁸stone cut out without hands; that ⁹tried stone and sure foundation, laid in Zion; that stone which, God said in Zechariah¹⁰, I have laid; of which our Lord says, ¹¹the stone, which the builders rejected, is become the head of the corner; ¹²whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken, but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder. The Church, built on the stone, seems a thing easily annihilated; ten persecutions in succession strove to efface it; Diocletian erected a monument, commemorating that the Christian name was blotted out¹³. It survived; he perished. The image may have been suggested by the custom, so widely prevailing in Judæa, of trying the relative strength of young men, by lifting round stones selected for that end¹⁴. ¹⁵The meaning then is, I will place Jerusalem to all nations like a very heavy stone¹⁶ to be lifted up. They will lift it up, and according to their varied strength, will waste it; but it must needs be, that, while it is lifted, in the very strain of lifting

¹ Is. li. 17, 21—23.

² Jer. xxv. 15—26.

³ Lam. iv. 21. Jer. xlix. 12.

⁴ Ezek. xxxiii. 31—33.

⁵ Jer. li. 7.

⁶ כִּי is the basin, which received the blood of the Paschal lamb, Ex. xii. 22; כִּי, with beds and earthen vessels, were brought to David by Barzillai and the others, 2 Sam. xvii. 28. Else they are only mentioned as instruments of the temple-services. 1 Kgs vii. 50, 2 Kgs xii. 14, Jer. lii. 19.

⁷ כִּי is the only natural subject, as in ix. 1, the burden of the Lord is on the land of Hadrach, but it is subjoined, Damascus is the resting place thereof &c. The E. V. does not seem grammatical. The E. M. is too elliptical, as also that other, "it will be laid upon Jerusalem to be in the siege against Jerusalem." Had "the cup of trembling" been the subject, it had probably been לִיטֵחַ, as לִיטֵחַ. Nor can כִּי be the subject; for countries, as Judah, are not the objects of siege. ⁸ Dan. ii. 45. ⁹ Is. xxviii. 16.

¹⁰ Zech. iii. 9.

¹¹ S. Luke xx. 17.

¹² S. Matt. xxi. 44. S. Luke xx. 18.

¹³ Baronius speaks of two inscriptions as still existing at Clunia (Corunna dal Conde) in Spain. The one had, "amplificatio per Orientem et Occid. Impe. Rom. et nomine Christianor. deleto qui remp. evertabant;" the other, "superstitione Christi ubiq. deleta. Cultu Deorum propagato." A. 304. n. i.

¹⁴ "It is the custom in the cities of Palestine, and that old usage is kept up to this day

4 In that day, saith the Lord, 'I will smite every horse with astonishment, and his rider with madness: and I will open mine eyes upon the house of Judah, and will smite every horse of the people with blindness.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

¹ Ps. 76. 6.
Ezek. 38. 4.

the weight, that most heavy stone should leave some scission or rasure on the bodies of those who lift it. Of the Church it may be interpreted thus; that all persecutors, who fought against the house of the Lord, are inebriated with that cup, which Jeremiah gives to all nations, to drink and be inebriated and fall and vomit and be mad. Whosoever would uplift the stone shall lift it, and in the anger of the Lord, whereby He chastens sinners, will hold it in his hands; but he himself will not go unpunished, the sword of the Lord fighting against him."

All that burden themselves with it will be cut to pieces¹⁷, more exactly, scarified, lacerated; shall bear the scars. Though (rather, and) all the people [peoples, nations] of the earth shall be gathered together against it. The prophet marshals them all against Jerusalem, only to say how they should perish before it. So in Joel God says, ¹⁸I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down to the valley of Jehoshaphat, speaking of that last closing strife of Anti-Christ against God. Wars against Israel had either been petty, though Anti-theistic, wars of neighbouring petty nations, pitting their false gods against the True, or one, though world-empire wielded by a single will. The more God made Himself known, the fiercer the opposition. The Gospel claiming ¹⁹obedience to the faith among all nations, provoked universal rebellion. Herod and Pontius Pilate became friends through rejection of Christ; the Roman Cæsar and the Persian Sapor, Goths and Vandals, at war with one another, were one in persecuting Christ and the Church. Yet in vain;

4. In that day, saith the Lord, I will smite every horse with astonishment, stupefying. Zechariah revives the words concentrated by Moses, to express the stupefaction at their ills, which God would accumulate upon His people, if they perseveringly rebelled against Him. Each expresses the intensity of the visitation²⁰. The horse and his rider had, through Moses' song at the Red Sea, become the emblem of worldly power, overthrown. That song opens; ²¹I will sing unto the Lord; for He hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath He cast into the sea. The scared cavalry throws into confusion the ranks, of which it was the boast and strength.

And on the house of Judah I will open My eyes, in pity and love and guidance, as the Psalmist says, ²²I will counsel, throughout Judæa, that in villages towns and forts, round stones are placed, of very great weight, on which young men are wont to practise themselves, and according to their varying strength, lift them, some to the knees, others to the navel, others to the shoulders and head; others lift the weight above the head, with their two hands raised straight up, shewing the greatness of their strength. In the Acropolis at Athens, I saw a brass globe, of very great weight, which I, with my little weak body, could scarcely move. When I asked its object, I was told by the inhabitants, that the strength of wrestlers was proved by that mass, and that no one went to a match, until it was ascertained by the lifting of that weight, who ought to be set against whom." S. Jer.

¹⁵ S. Jer. ¹⁶ lit. "a stone of lading," which whoso lifteth would be laden or burdened. It is the only noun formed from כָּנָה; and the root itself existed only in Hebrew.

¹⁷ כָּנָה is a root, revived by Zechariah from the Pentateuch. It occurs only Lev. xix. 23, xxi. 5, of the forbidden incisions for the dead. Arab. كَنَسَ, Syr. כָּנָה, "scarified" Syr. כָּנָה "was branded."

¹⁸ Jo. iii. 2. See ab. pp. 132, 133, and pp. 137—139 on Jo. iii. 9. ¹⁹ Rom. i. 5.

²⁰ Deut. xxviii. 23, כָּנָה (the only noun derived from כָּנָה) (and with the same word, כָּנָה) occurs only there besides; כָּנָה, besides, only in 2 Kgs ix. 20. Only כָּנָה is omitted after כָּנָה, since it stands in connection with the horse in the parallelism.

²¹ Ex. xv. 1.

²² Ps. xxxii. 8.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

|| Or, There is strength to me and to the inhabitants, &c.
Joel 3. 16.

* Obad. 18.

5 And the governors of Judah shall say in their heart, || The inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my strength in the LORD of hosts their God.

6 ¶ In that day will I make the governors of Judah * like an hearth of fire among the wood, and like a torch of fire in a sheaf; and they shall devour all the people round about, on the right hand and on the left: and Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place, even in Jerusalem. Before CHRIST

cir. 487.

7 The LORD also shall save the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem do not magnify themselves against Judah.

8 In that day shall the LORD defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and ^h he that is ^h feeble among them at that day shall be as ^h Joel 3. 10.
|| Or, abject.
|| Heb. fallen.

with Mine eye upon thee, in contrast with the blindness with which God would smite the powers arrayed against them.

5. And the princes of Judah. He pictures the one-mindedness of the Church. No one shall assume anything to himself; each shall exalt the strength which the other was to him; but all, in the LORD. The princes of Judah shall say in their heart, not outwardly or politically, but in inward conviction, *strength to me*¹ (all speak as one) are the inhabitants of Jerusalem in the LORD of hosts their God. The highest in human estimation acknowledge that their strength is in those who are of no account in this world; as, in fact, the hearts of the poor are evermore the strength of the Church; but that, in the LORD of hosts; in Him, in Whose hands are the powers of heaven and earth, over against the petty turmoil on earth. God had chosen Jerusalem²; therefore she was invincible. "That most glorious prince of Judah, Paul, said, 'I can do all things in Christ Who instrengtheneth me.'"³

6. *I will make the governors of Judah like a hearth or cauldron*⁴ of fire, large, broad, deep, and full of fire, among the wood which is prepared for burning⁴, and like a torch of fire in a sheaf. The fire could not kindle the wood or the sheaf, of itself, unless applied to it. All is of the agency of God: I will make.

"⁵He foretells the increase of the Church, which by such persecutions shall not be diminished, but shall be marvelously increased. The preachers of the Church shall raise up all the peoples round about, shall destroy all unbelief, and shall kindle the hearts of hearers with the fire of the Divine word." On the right hand and on the left. "⁵He indicates the strength and success of the preachers, whom no one can resist or hinder," as our Lord says, "I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist."

And Jerusalem shall again, rather, yet, be inhabited. "Yet" is a sort of burden in Zechariah's prophecies⁷. "⁸They at once burned up by the flame all the defilement of vices, and kindled the minds of men with the torch of Divine love; at once consumed the enemy and cast a heavenly fire into the human heart: yet; in despite of all appearances, of all which is against her. She shall yet dwell in her own place in Jerusalem; for, however the waves of this world chafe and lash themselves into foam against her, they break themselves, ¹ אֲזָכָה אֶפְנִי; as is the form אֲזָכָה, Job xvii. 19, אֲזָכָה Ib. xxxvi. 19.

² Zech. i. 17, ii. 12. iii. 2.

³ כִּי, in 1 Sam. ii. 14, is 'a vessel, in which the food is cooked;' in 2 Chr. vi. 13 'a pulpit;' so that the vessel, to which it is likened, must have been large; as must have been the brazen laver of the tabernacle (Ex. Lev.) or temple (2 Kgs), of which the word is elsewhere used. Each laver of Solomon's temple contained forty baths, or about 300 gallons, and was four cubits (1 Kgs vii. 38) square apparently (coll. 27.).

⁴ עֵצִים (pl.) is used of wood cut up, 1) for burning, especially on an altar, or 2) for building, unless it is plain from the context, that they are living trees, as in Jos. x. 26, Jud. ix. 48, not her; as soon as they have reached their utmost height, they fall back; if they toss themselves and, for a moment, hide her light, they fall down at all sides, and the ray shines out, steady as before; for she is founded on a rock, against which ⁹ the gates of hell should not prevail.

7. The Lord also shall save the tents of Judah first. Still it is, the Lord shall save. We have, on the one side, the siege, the gathering of all the peoples of the earth against Jerusalem, the horse and his rider. On the other, no human strength; not, as before, in the prophecy of the Maccabees, the bow, the arrow, and the sword, though in the hand of God¹⁰. It is thrice, *I will make*¹¹; *I will smite*¹²; and now, The Lord shall save. By the tents, he probably indicates their defencelessness. God would save them first; that the glory¹³ of the house of David—be not great against or over Judah, may not overshadow it; but all may be as one; for all is the free gift of God, the mere grace of God, that ¹⁴ he that glorieth may glory in the Lord, and both ¹⁵ may own that, in both, the victory is the Lord's."

"¹⁶In Christ Jesus is neither Jew nor Greek; neither bond nor free¹⁷, neither rich nor poor; but all are one, viz. a new creation; yea in Christendom the poor are the highest, both because Christ ¹⁸ preached to the poor, and pronounced the ¹⁹ poor blessed, and He made the Apostles, being poor, nobles in His kingdom, through whom He converted kings and princes, as is written, ²⁰ye see your calling, brethren, that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called, but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty &c.; and, ²¹Hath not God called the poor in this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom, which God has promised to them that love Him? The rich and noble have greater hindrances to humility and Christian virtues, than the poor. For honours puff up, wealth and delights weaken the mind; wherefore they need greater grace of Christ to burst their bonds than the poor. Wherefore, for the greater grace shewn them, they are bound to give greater thanks unto Christ."

8. In that day the Lord shall defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and he that is feeble, rather, he that stumbleth among them, shall be as David. The result of the care and the defence of God is here wholly spiritual, "the strengthening of such as do stand, and the raising up of such as fall."

in Jotham's fable Ib. 9—15, or Ps. xcvi. 12, civ. 16, Cant. iv. 14, Is. vii. 2. &c.

⁵ Rib. ⁶ S. Luke xxi. 15. ⁷ See reff. note 2. ⁸ Osor. ⁹ S. Matt. xvi. 18. ¹⁰ Zech. ix. 13. ¹¹ ver. 2, 3, 6. ¹² ver. 4 bis. ¹³ מְהִימָה is nowhere "gloriation," as Ges., but simply "glory," "beauty," though, rarely, it is implied in the context that he who has it, is proud of it, as Is. iii. 18. x. 12, xiii. 9.

¹⁴ Jer. ix. 24, 1 Cor. i. 31, 2 Cor. x. 17. ¹⁵ S. Jer. ¹⁶ Lap. ¹⁷ Gal. iii. 28.

¹⁸ S. Luke iv. 18.

²⁰ 1 Cor. i. 26.

¹⁹ Ib. vi. 20. ²¹ S. James ii. 5.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

David; and the house of David shall be as God, as the angel of the Lord before them.

9 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will seek to¹ destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem.

¹ Hag. 2. 22.
ver. 3.

It is not simply one feeble, but one *stumbling*¹ and ready to fall, who becomes as David, the great instance of one who fell, yet was raised. Daniel says of a like trial-time,² And some of those of understanding shall stumble, to try them and to purge and to make them white, to the time of the end. "³Such care will God have of protecting the sons of the Church, when it shall be infested with persecutions, that he who shall have fallen through human infirmity, either deceived by heretics or overcome by fear of tortures, shall arise the more fervent and cautious, and with many tears shall make amends for his sins to God, as did David. He who stumbled shall be as David, because the sinner returneth to repentance. This is not said of all times, nor of all (for many have stumbled, who never rose) but chiefly of the first times of the Church and of men of great sanctity, such as were many then."

And the house of David shall be as God. They who stumbled became really like David; but he, though mighty and a great saint of God, though he once fell, was man. How then could the house of David be really like God? Only fully in Him, Who, ⁴*being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God*; Who said, ⁵*He who hath seen Me, hath seen My Father also*; ⁶*I and the Father are one.* And this the prophet brings out by adding, as the Angel of the Lord before them, i. e. that one Angel of the Lord, in whom His very Presence and His Name was; Who went before them, to guide them⁷. Else, having said, like God, it had been to lessen what he had just said, to add, like the Angel of the Lord. Our Lord prayed for those who are truly His, ⁸*As Thou, Father, art in Me and I in Thee, that they may be one in Us; that they may be one as We are one, I in them and Thou in Me, that they may be perfect in one*; and S. Paul saith, ⁹*Christ is formed in us*; ¹⁰*Christ dwelleth in our hearts by faith*; ¹¹*Christ liveth in me*; ¹²*Christ is in you*; ¹³*Christ is our life*; ¹⁴*Christ is all and in all*; ¹⁵*we grow into Him which is the Head, even Christ*; ¹⁶*we are in Christ*; and S. Peter, we are ¹⁷*partakers of the Divine nature*; and S. John, ¹⁸*As He is, so are we in this world.* Then in a ¹ 1 Sam. ii. 4, is the only case alleged by Ges., in which נָפַל is to signify "weak." Yet here too "stumble," as in the E. V., is the natural rendering. In the other 19 cases it is confessedly stumbling, though in some it is stumbling, so as to fall.

² Dan. xi. 35. ³ Rib.

⁴ Phil. ii. 6.

⁵ S. John xiv. 9.

⁶ Ib. x. 30.

⁷ See "Daniel the prophet" pp. 519-523.

⁸ S. John xvii. 21, 22, 23.

⁹ Gal. iv. 19.

¹⁰ Eph. iii. 17.

¹¹ Gal. ii. 20.

¹² Rom. viii. 10.

¹³ Col. iii. 4.

¹⁴ Ib. 11.

¹⁵ Eph. iv. 15.

¹⁶ Rom. xvi. 7, 2 Cor. v. 17, Gal. i. 22.

¹⁷ 2 Pet. i. 4.

¹⁸ 1 S. John iv. 17.

¹⁹ Gal. iv. 14.

²⁰ נָפַל with ל and inf. "Pharaoh sought to slay Moses," Ex. ii. 15; "Saul, my father, seeketh to slay thee," 1 Sam. xi. 2; "Saul sought to smite David," Ib. 20; Solomon, to kill Jeroboam, 1 Kgs. xi. 40; "Sought to lay hand on the king," Esth. vi. 2; Haman sought to destroy the Jews, Ib. iii. 6. The inf. without ל, occurs Jer. xxvi. 21.

²¹ 1 Sam. xiv. 4, xxiii. 10, Eccl. xii. 10.

²² "sought to turn away," De. xiii. 11. "seeketh to destroy a city," 2 Sam. xx. 19.

²³ 1 Kgs. xi. 22, Zech. vi. 7. ²⁴ In Ex. iv. 24 only, it is said, "God sought to slay Moses," i. e. shewed that He would, unless his son had been circumcised.

²⁵ Jo. ii. 23. See ab. pp. 127, 128.

²⁶ Is. xi. 2.

²⁷ תַּחֲנוּן is chosen in allusion to תָּחַן "grace." תַּחֲנוּן is, almost everywhere, the cry to God for His grace and favour. It occurs mostly in the Psalms united with קָל "the voice of my supplications," Ps. xxviii. 2, 6, xxxii. 23, xxxvi. 6, cxvi. 1, cxxx. 2, cxi. 7; also of the cry to God, without קָל, Ps. cxliii. 1, Dan. ix. 3, 17, 18, 33, Jer. iii. 21, xxxi. 9. It is used of man to man, only Prov. xviii. 23, and else, in irony, of what leviathan would not do to man, Job xi. 27, 6. [xli. 3. Eng.] ²⁸ Rom. v. 5.

²⁹ Heb. x. 29, τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς χάριτος ἐνυπλάσας.

³⁰ Osor.

³¹ There is no critical doubt about the reading, אֵין, to Me. It is the reading of all the

10 * And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications: and they shall¹ look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

¹ Jer. 31. 9.
& 50. 4.
Ezek. 39. 29.
Joel 2. 28.
John 19. 34.
37. Rev. 1. 7.

degree the glory of Christ passeth over to those who dwell in Him, and in whom He dwells by the Spirit, as S. Paul says; ¹⁰*Ye received me, as an angel of God, as Christ Jesus.*

9. In that day, I will seek to destroy. Woe indeed to those, whom Almighty God shall "seek to destroy!" Man may seek earnestly to do, what at last he cannot do. Still it is an earnest seeking. And whether it is used of human seeking which fails²⁰, or which succeeds²¹, inchoate²² or permitted²³, it is always used of seeking to do, what it is a person's set purpose to do if he can²⁰. Here it is spoken of Almighty God²⁴. "³He saith not, 'I will destroy' but I will seek to destroy, i. e. it shall ever be My care to destroy all the enemies of the Church, that they may in no way prevail against it: this I will do alway to the end of the world."

10. And I will pour, as He promised by Joel²⁵, I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh, largely, abundantly, upon the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, all, highest and lowest, from first to last, the Spirit of grace and supplication, i. e. the Holy Spirit which conveyeth grace, as²⁶ the Spirit of wisdom and understanding is the Spirit infusing wisdom and understanding, and the Spirit of counsel and might is that same Spirit, imparting the gift of counsel to see what is to be done and of might to do it, and the Spirit of the knowledge and of the fear of the Lord is that same Spirit, infusing loving acquaintance with God, with awe at His infinite Majesty. So the Spirit of grace and supplication, is that same Spirit, infusing grace and bringing into a state of favour with God, and a Spirit of supplication²⁷ is that Spirit, calling out of the inmost soul the cry for a yet larger measure of the grace already given. S. Paul speaks of²⁸ the love of God poured out in our hearts by the Holy Spirit which is given unto us; and of²⁹ insulting the Spirit of grace, rudely repulsing the Spirit, Who giveth grace. "³⁰When God Himself says, 'I will pour out,' He sets forth the greatness of His bountifulness whereby He bestoweth all things."

And they shall look, with trustful hope and longing, on Me³¹, old Verss., Jewish or Christian; LXX. Aq. Sym. Theod. Chald. Syr. Vulg. In the sixth cent., the Jews had begun to make a marginal correction into אֵין, but did not venture to change the text. "Where we, according to the faith of Holy Scripture, read, in the Person of God, 'and they shall look to Me Whom they pierced,' though, in the text itself of the book, they were deterred by God's Providence from making a change, yet without, in the margin, they have it noted, 'they shall look to him whom they pierced.' And so they hand down to their disciples, that they should transcribe, as it is contained in the text, and read, as they have noted, outside; so that they may hold, according to their phrenzy, that the Jews look to him, whom Gog and Magog pierced." Rabanus Maurus c. Jud. n. 12. In the 13th. cent. Martini says, that "all the old MSS. of the Jews have אֵין;" and that the "perfidy of some modern Jews, unable to deprave so evident a testimony to the divinity of the Messiah, say, that it is not אֵין but אֵל" f. 666. In f. 328, he again says, "some Jews falsify the text;" and (f. 329) that "now (jam) in many MSS. they have corrupted their text, but that they are refuted by the Targum, the Talmud, and by many ancient MSS., in which this text is not yet corrupted, and by the exposition of Rashi." R. Isaac, at the end of the 16th. cent. A.D. 1593, quoted the reading אֵין without doubt, though he was expressly controverting the Christian argument. "They say, that hereafter the sons of Israel shall mourn, because they pierced and slew the Messiah sent to them, Jesus who is compounded of Godhead and Manhood, and they say, that this is (the meaning of) 'they shall look to me whom they pierced.'" (Chizzuk Emunah in Wagensell Tela ign. Sat. pp. 303, 304.) He explains it of the wars of Gog and Magog. "If they shall see that they [their enemies] shall pierce through even one of them, they shall be amazed and shall look to me, eth asher dakaroo, i. e. on account of him, whom they pierced—So that the Nazarenes have no help from the words דָּקְרוּ אֶת אֲשֶׁר דָּקְרוּ 'הָיָה אֵל' (Ib. pp. 307, 308); and he subjoins, that if he who was wounded had been the same as he to whom they should look, it ought to have gone on in the first person, כִּי עָלֵי, כִּי עָלֵי, like הָיָה אֵלֵי Ib. 309. R. Lipmann (A.D. 1399) uses the same argument, "He should have said, and they shall mourn for me,

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
Jer. 6. 26.
Amos 8. 10.

for him, ^m as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn.

Almighty God, *Whom they have pierced*¹; the Head with the thorns, the Hands and Feet with the nails, the Side with the soldier's lance. The prophecy began to be fulfilled as soon as the deed was completed, and Jesus had yielded up His Spirit: when ² all the people that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts and returned. "³ When they had nailed the Divine Shrine to the Wood, they who had crucified Him, stood around, impiously mocking.—But when He had laid down His life for us, ⁴ the centurion and they that were with him, watching Jesus, seeing the earthquake and those things which were done, feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God." As it ever is with sin, compunction did not come till the sin was over: till then, it was overlaid; else the sin could not be done. At the first conversion, the three thousand were pricked⁵ in the heart, when told that He ⁶ Whom they had taken and with wicked hands had crucified and slain, is Lord and Christ. This awoke the first penitence of him who became S. Paul. Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? This has been the centre of Christian devotion ever since, the security against passion, the impulse to self-denial, the parent of zeal for souls, the incentive to love; this has struck the rock, that it gushed forth in tears of penitence: this is the strength and vigour of hatred of sin, to look to Him Whom our sins pierced, Who S. Paul says, loved me and gave Himself for me. "⁷ We all lifted Him up upon the Cross; we transfixed with the nails His Hands and Feet; we pierced His Side with the spear. For if man had not sinned, the Son of God would have endured no torment."

And they shall mourn for Him, as one mourneth for an only son, and shall be in bitterness for Him, as one that is in bitterness for a first-born. We feel most sensibly the sorrows of this life, passing as they are; and of these, the loss of an only son is a proverbial sorrow. ⁸ O daughter of My people, gird thee with sackcloth and wallow thyself in ashes, God says: make thee the mourning of an only son, most bitter lamentation. ⁹ I will make it as the mourning of an only son. The dead man carried out, the only son of his mother and she was a widow, is recorded as having touched the heart of Jesus. "¹⁰ And our Lord, to the letter, was the Only-Begotten of as he began, they shall look to me." p. 144 ed. Hacksp. Ibn Ezra agrees with this, for he explains it in the first person, "Then shall all nations look to me (אלי) to see what I shall do to those who have slain Messiah b. Joseph." Alsheikh's commentary requires the same, "And I will yet do a third thing. And this that they shall look אלי, is that they shall bang their eyes on Me in perfect repentance when they see &c." and R. Obadiah Siporno, (Bibl. Rabb.) "and they shall look to Me in their prayer." Rashi also gives the Targ. "and they shall seek of Me" כן קריב as the interpretation of אלי רביש אלי "they shall look to me." R. Tanchum of Jerusalem, "a learned son of a learned father," in the latter part of the 13th cent. (Grätz vii. 141, 145) knew in the East of no other reading. He explains it; "They shall flee to Me, when they see the slaying of those whom the enemy had slain of them" (Poc. 344). His contemporary, Parchon, in his lexicon Mechaberolh, cites the passage with אלי, and explains the word "piercing of a sword in the body." v. רקר. The Heb. Arab. version, so often quoted by Pococke (Hunt. 206) renders, "And they turned to me, whom they rent (בקע) the word, used by Abulwalid, only Abulwalid further explains this by בקע. Abulwalid does not notice the reading in either of his lexica, nor Menahem b. Sarug, nor David b. Abraham.

With regard to MSS., even in later times Peter Niger [Schwarz] (a learned Benedictine of the 17th cent.) wrote, "some false and lying Jews say that it is not written, 'And they shall look on me whom they have pierced,' but 'they shall seek to him whom they have pierced'—I answer, that on my conscience and on the Christian truth I say, I have seen many Jewish Bibles [Spanish, doubtless, since he studied Hebrew in Spain] and I never, in any Bible, found it written other than vehibbitu elai 'and they shall look to me,' and not vehibbitu elav, 'and they shall look to him,' as I will shew any one who desires to see." Stella Messiae Tract. ii. c. 2. A.D. 1477 in Wolf Bibl. Hebr. iv. p. 543. Norzi, a Jewish critic, says that אלי is not found in the Scriptures, only in Rashi and the Gemara. The codex Babyl. Petropol. (I am told, of the ixth. cent.) has אלי. In the collated MSS. there is the variation, common where there is a real or virtual kri, 33 Kenn.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
Acts 2. 37.
2 Kin. 23. 20.
2 Chr. 35. 24.

11 In that day shall there be a great mourning in Jerusalem, ^o as the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon.

His Father and His mother." He was ¹¹ the first-begotten of every creature, and ¹² we saw His glory, the glory as of the Only-Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. This mourning for Him Whom our sins pierced and nailed to the tree, is continued, week by week, by the pious, on the day of the week, when He suffered for us, or in the perpetual memorial of His Precious Death in the Holy Eucharist, and especially in Passion-Tide. God sends forth anew the Spirit of grace and supplication, and the faithful mourn, because of their share in His Death. The prophecy had a rich and copious fulfilment in that first conversion in the first Pentecost; a larger fulfilment awaits it in the end, when, after the destruction of Anti-Christ, ¹³ all Israel shall be converted and be saved. There is yet a more awful fulfilment; when ¹⁴ He cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see Him, and they which pierced Him, and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him. But meanwhile it is fulfilled in every solid conversion of Jew Heathen or careless Christian, as well as in the devotion of the pious. Zechariah has concentrated in few words the tenderest devotion of the Gospel, They shall look on Me Whom they pierced. "¹⁵ Zechariah teaches that among the various feelings which we can elicit from the meditation on the Passion of Christ, as admiration, love, gratitude, compunction, fear, penitence, imitation, patience, joy, hope, the feeling of compassion stands eminent, and that it is this, which we peculiarly owe to Christ suffering for us. For who would not in his inmost self grieve with Christ, innocent and holy, yea the Only-Begotten Son of God, when he sees Him nailed to the Cross and enduring so lovingly for him sufferings so manifold and so great? Who would not groan out commiseration, and melt into tears? Truly says S. Bonaventure in his 'goad of Divine love:' 'What can be more fruitful, what sweeter than, with the whole heart, to suffer with that most bitter suffering of our Lord Jesus Christ?'"

11. As the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon. This was the greatest sorrow, which had fallen on Judah. Josiah was the last hope of its declining kingdom. His sons probably shewed already their unlikeness to their father, whereby they precipitated their country's fall. In

MSS. and 6 de R. have אלי; 3 have אלי marked on the marg., one as a kri; 7 K. and 5 de R. had אלי corrected into אלי; 4 K., 5 de R. had אלי corrected into אלי: 11 K., 5 de R. had a kri in marg. אלי. "The most and best MSS have אלי." De R. . Ewald's ground for rejecting the reading אלי illustrates the Jewish. רקר is, from the context which speaks of mourning for the dead, and the language of the prophet (xiii. 3), clear; but for אלי, we must, with many MSS., read אלי. The first person were wholly unsuited here. It is at variance with the following עלי רכר, and introduces into the Old Testament the senselessness, that one is to weep over Jahve, (for Jahve [Almighty God] must be the subject,) as over one dead, (who should never come back again!). De Rossi suggests that the אלי came in accidentally, the scribe having in his mind Ps. xxxiv. 6, רכר אלי.

¹ There can equally be no question about the meaning of רקר (as even Ew. and Hitz. admit) or about the construction. רקר (which occurs 11 times, is everywhere "thrust through." In one place only, Lam. iv. 9. רקר רקר. "thrust through," occurs as a synonyme of חלל רקר "those wounded by hunger" and that, in contrast with חלל רקר "wounded by the sword." So also the noun, חלל רקר, "the piercings of the sword," Ps. xii. 18. In regard to the construction, חלל רקר occurs in 97 places in the Bible, and in every place in the meaning "he who," "that which," "this that." In one place only Deut. xxx. 13, 14, חלל having been previously used as a preposition, "and not with you only, (חלל) do I make this covenant," the חלל is again used as a preposition, carrying on the construction, "but with him who, חלל רקר. Frischmuth (de Messia confixo) mentions 14 ways, by which "because" might without ambiguity have been expressed (see Pusey's Univ. Sermons p. 142). There is then no excuse for the renderings חלל רקר, LXX. or אק. חלל רקר. Theod. has πρὸς με, εἰς με ἔξέκρυψαν.

² S. Luke xxiii. 48.

³ S. Matt. xxvii. 54.

⁴ 7 Osor.

⁵ Jer. vi. 26.

⁶ Col. i. 15.

⁷ Rom. xi. 26.

⁸ κατεβύβησαν Acts ii. 37.

⁹ Amos vii. 10.

¹⁰ Rev. i. 7.

¹¹ S. John i. 14.

¹² Alb.

¹³ Lap.

Before CHRIST
cir. 487.

† Matt. 23. 30.
Rev. 1. 7.
† Heb.
families,
families.
† 2 Sam. 5. 14.
Luke 3. 31.

|| Or, of Simcon,
as LXX.

12 ^p And the land shall mourn, † every family apart; the family of the house of David apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of ^a Nathan apart, and their wives apart;

13 The family of the house of Levi apart, and their wives apart; the family || of Shimei apart, and their wives apart;

14 All the families that remain, every family apart, and their wives apart.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 The fountain of purgation for Jerusalem, 2 from idolatry, and false prophecy. 7 The death of Christ, and the trial of a third part.

IN ^a that day there shall be ^b a fountain ^c opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and ^d for † uncleanness.

^a ch. 12. 3.
^b Heb. 9. 14.
^c 1 Pet. 1. 19.
^d Rev. i. 5.
† Heb.
separation for uncleanness.

Josiah's death the last gleam of the sunset of Judah faded into night. Of him it is recorded, that *his pious acts, according to what was written in the law of the Lord, were written in his country's history*¹; for him the prophet *Jeremiah wrote a dirge*²; all the minstrels of his country *spoke of him in their dirges*². The dirges were made an ordinance which survived the captivity; to this day³, it is said at the close of the Chronicles. Among the gathering sorrows of Israel, this lament over Josiah was written in the national collection of dirges². Hudadrinmon, as being compounded of the name of two Syrian idols, is, in its name, a witness how Syrian idolatry penetrated into the kingdom, when it was detached from the worship of God. It was ^a "a city near Jezreel, now called Maximinianopolis in the plain of Megiddon, in which the righteous king Josiah was wounded by Pharaoh Necho." This ^a "was 17 miles from Cæsarea, 10 from Esdraclon." Its name still survives in a small village, south of Megiddon⁵, and so, on the way back to Jerusalem.

12-14. This sorrow should be universal but also individual, the whole land, and that, family by family; the royal family in the direct line of its kings, and in a branch from Nathan, a son of David and whole brother of Solomon⁶, which was continued on in private life, yet was still to be an ancestral line of Jesus⁷: in like way the main priestly family from Levi, and a subordinate line from a grandson of Levi, the family of Shimei⁸; and all the remaining families, each with their separate sorrow, each according to Joel's call, ⁹ let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber and the bride out of her closet, each denying himself the tenderest solaces of life.

¹⁰ The ungrateful and ungodly, daily, as far as in them lies, crucify Christ, as S. Paul says, ¹¹ crucifying to themselves the Son of God afresh and putting Him to an open shame. And on these Christ, out of His boundless pity, poureth forth a spirit of grace and supplication, so that, touched with compunction, with grieving and tearful feeling, they look on Christ, suffering with His suffering, and bewailing their own iniquities."

¹² The likeness is in the sorrow, not in its degree. Josiah had restored religion, removed a dire superstition, bound up relaxed morals by healthful discipline, recalled to its former condition the sinking state. In their extremest needs light shone on them, when there came his unlooked-for death. Therewith the whole state seemed lost. So in the Death of Christ, they who loved Him, saw His Divine works, placed their whole hope of salvation in His goodness, suddenly saw the stay of their life extinct, themselves deprived of that most sweet intercourse, all hope for the future cut off. But the grief in the death of Christ was the more bitter, as He awoke a greater longing for Himself, and had brought a firmer hope of salvation."

XIII. 1. In that day there shall be a fountain opened. Zechariah often repeats, *in that day*¹³, resuming his subject again and again, as a time not proximate, but fixed and known of God, of which he declared somewhat. It is that day which ¹⁴ Abraham desired to see, and saw it, whether by direct revelation, or in the typical sacrifice of Isaac, and was glad: it was ¹⁵ that day which many prophets and kings and righteous men desired to see, and in patience waited for it: the one day of salvation of the Gospel. He had spoken of repentance, in contemplation of Christ crucified; he now speaks of forgiveness and cleansing, of sanctification and consequent obedience. The fountain shall be not simply opened, but shall remain open¹⁶. Isaiah had already prophesied of the refreshment of the Gospel. ¹⁷ When the poor and needy seek water and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, I, the Lord, will hear them, I, the God of Israel, will not forsake them. I will open rivers in high places and fountains in the midst of the valleys; here it is added, for sin and for uncleanness. There were divers¹⁸ symbolical washings under the law; the Levites were ¹⁹ sprinkled with the water of purifying, lit. *the water of taking away of sin: living waters*²⁰, put to the ashes of an heifer, were appointed as a ²¹ *water for (removing) defilements; a cleansing of sin*²². Now, there should be one ever-open fountain for all the house of David. ²³ Who that fountain is, the Lord Himself teacheth through Jeremiah, they have forsaken Me, the fountain of living waters; and in the Gospel He says, ²⁵ If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink; and ²⁶ The water which I shall give him, is a fountain of living water, gushing up to everlasting life. This was open to the house of David; for of that kindred He took human nature. It was opened also for the dwellers of Jerusalem, for the sprinkling of holy Baptism, through which we ¹ 2 Chr. xxxv. 26, 7.

² Ib. 25.

³ S. Jer.

⁴ Itin. Hieros. in Reland p. 891.

lies a small village called Rumûni." Van de Velde Travels i. 355.

⁷ S. Luke iii. 31.

⁸ Nu. iii. 21. Had the allusion been to the tribe of Simeon, as supplying, the teachers of Israel, as S. Jerome thought, it had been, ^a שִׁמְעוֹן, but ^b שִׁמְעוֹן as in Nu. xxv. 14, Jos. xxi. 4. 1 Chr. xxvii. 15.

⁹ Jo. ii. 16.

¹⁰ Dion.

¹¹ Heb. vi. 6.

¹² Osor.

¹³ xii. 3, 4, 6, 8, 9, 11, xiii. 1, 2, 4, xiv. 6, 8, 13, 20.

¹⁴ S. John viii. 56.

¹⁵ S. Matt. xiii. 17, S. Luke x. 24. ¹⁶ The force of ^a יהוה נפתח

¹⁷ Is. xli. 17, 18.

¹⁸ Heb. ix. 10.

¹⁹ Num. viii. 7.

²⁰ Ib. xix. 17.

²¹ Ib. xix. 9, 13, 20, 21 bis. xxxi. 23.

²² ^a שִׁמְעוֹן Ib. xix. 9.

²³ Theod.

²⁴ Jer. ii. 13. The word is the same, ^a בְּקִיר, and Ib. xvii. 13. ^b בְּקִיר is, etymologically, a place "dug;" but a "mere well" could not be "a fountain of living water." They dug to obtain any how a larger supply of water. Is. xxxvii. 25; Isaac's servants by digging obtained "a well of living" i.e. flowing "water" Gen. xxvi. 19. It is parallel with ^c מִקְוֵה Hos. xiii. 15., where cistern or reservoir would be unmeaning. Metaphorically, fountain of living waters Jer. xxii. 13. fountain of life Ps. xxxvi. 10. Pr. x. 11. xiii. 14. xiv. 27. xvi. 22. of wisdom Ib. xviii. 4. of tears Jer. viii. 23. of blood Lev. xii. 7. xx. 18. of Israel Ps. lxxviii. 17, are like one fountain which supplies a stream, rather than a reservoir, and ^d מִקְוֵה is of running water, Gen. i. c. Lev. xiv. 5, 6, 50-52. xv. 13. Num. xix. 17. Cant. ix. 15. Zech. xiv. 8. ^e מִקְוֵה Pr. xxv. 28, is rather "a fountain corrupted," spoiled from without, than stagnant water in a reservoir, where the spoiling is from itself. In Jer. li. 36. ^f בְּקִיר (sing.) stands collectively for the whole supply of water. Tanchum has ^g מִקְוֵה.
²⁵ S. John vii. 37. ²⁶ Ib. iv. 14.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

2 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of hosts, that I will cut off the names of the idols out of the land, and they shall no more be remembered: and also I will cause ^d the prophets and the unclean spirit to pass out of the land.

3 And it shall come to pass, that when any shall yet prophesy, then his father and his mother that begat him shall say unto him, Thou shalt not live; for thou speakest lies in the name of the Lord: and his father and his mother that begat him shall thrust him through when he prophesieth.

4 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the prophets shall be ashamed every

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

^e Deut. 13. 6, 8. & 18. 20.

^f Mic. 3. 6, 7.

have received remission of sins." "1 That, receiving Divine and holy Baptism, we are sprinkled with the Blood of Christ to the remission of sins, who can doubt?" "2 Of this fountain much was foretold by Ezekiel³, that a fountain should issue forth from the temple of the Lord, and go down into the desert, and every soul, to whom it shall come, shall live; and Joel, ⁴ A fountain shall come forth of the house of the Lord, and water the valley of Shittim. Of this fountain Peter said to the Jews, when pricked in the heart and seeking forgiveness, ⁵ Let every one of you be baptised in the Name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

2. I will cut off the names of the idols. This had been a fence against idolatry. To name evil is a temptation to evil. Wrong words are the parents of wrong acts. To speak of evil awakens curiosity or passion; curiosity is one of the strongest incentives to act. All public mention of terrible crimes (it has been observed) produces imitation of the specific form of crime. Hence it was commanded, ⁶ make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth. And Joshua names it in his dying charge to Israel, ⁷ Be ye therefore very strong to keep and to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses—neither make mention of the name of their gods, nor cause to swear by them. Hence they changed the names of cities⁸, which bare idol names. David speaks of it, as part of fealty to God. ⁹ I will not take their names upon my lips. Hosea prophesies of the times of the new covenant; ¹⁰ I will take away the names of Baalim out of her mouth, and they shall be no more remembered by their name. Isaiah, ¹¹ The idols he shall utterly abolish. Zechariah foretells their abolition with a turn of words, formed apparently on those of Hosea¹²; but slightly varied, because the worship of Baal, such a plague-spot in the time of Hosea, one, which continued until the year before the captivity¹³, was gone. He implies nothing as to his own times, whether idolatry still existed. He predicts its entire abolition in the whole compass of the enlarged Judah, i.e. of Christendom.

And also I will cause the prophets and the unclean spirit to pass out of the land. False prophecy sets itself to meet a craving of human nature to know something of its future. False prophets there were, even in the time of Nehemiah¹⁴, and those in some number, hired to prophesy against the word of God. Our Lord warns against them. ¹⁵ Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. ¹⁶ Many false prophets shall arise and shall deceive many. Many false prophets, S. John says, ¹⁷ are gone out into the world. False prophets attended the decline of Judaism. Such was the author of the Jewish Sibylline book, prophesying the destruction of the Romans¹⁸, and fixing the mind of his people on temporal aggrandisement¹⁹: false prophets were suborned by the Jewish "tyrants" and encouraged the Jews in the resistance which ruined the devoted city²⁰: false prophets have arisen in Christianity; but, like the Phrygian women who led Tertullian astray, they "went out," were cast out "from it, as not being of it." "1 After that the Only-Begotten Word of God appeared to us, the dull and childish toys of idolatry perished and were utterly destroyed, and with it were taken away the strange and impious devices of the false prophets, who were full of the evil, unclean spirit, and could be readily detected as labouring under a kindred disease to the idolaters. For both had one president of impiety, Satan." Not 50 years after the Crucifixion, a heathen²¹ wrote his work, "on the failure of oracles." The outpouring of the Holy ²² Spirit of grace and supplication, should sweep away ²³ the unclean spirit, (Zechariah alone anticipates the language of the New Testament²³) which became ²⁴ a lying spirit in the mouth of the prophets of those who sought to them.

3. His father and mother that begat him shall say unto him, Thou shalt not live. The prophet describes the zeal against false prophecy, with reference to the law against those who seduced to apostasy from God. ²⁵ The nearest relations were themselves to denounce any who had secretly tried to seduce them, and themselves, as the accusers, to cast the first stone at them. "1 Such shall in those times be the reverence to God-wards, so careful shall they be of perfect probity and laudable life, that parents themselves shall be stimulated against their children, if they should speak falsely any thing from their own heart, as though God spake by them—How true that word is, and how accredited the prophecy! This indicates clearly a great advance towards godliness, God transforming things for the better. What aforesaid was held in great esteem, is now hated and accursed and held intolerable."

4. The prophets shall be ashamed, every one of them. They who before their conversion, gave themselves to such deceits, shall be ashamed of their deeds; as, after the defeat of the seven sons of the chief priest Seeva, ²⁷ fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified, and many that believed came and confessed and shewed their deeds: many

¹ S. Cyr.

² Dion.

³ Ezek. xlviii. 1, 8, 9. ⁴ Jo. iii. 18. See ab. pp. 140, 141.

⁵ Acts ii. 37, 38.

⁶ Ex. xxiii. 13.

⁷ Jos. xxiii. 6, 7.

⁸ Nebo and Baalmeon, Num. xxxii. 33.

⁹ Ps. xvi. 4.

¹⁰ Hos. ii. 17.

¹¹ Is. ii. 18.

¹² Hos. ii. 19. Heb. "I will remove the names of Baalim out of his mouth; and they shall be no more remembered, ולא יזכרו עוד, by their names." Zech. I will cut off the names of the idols from the land, and they shall be no more remembered, ולא יזכרו עוד.

¹³ Jer. xxxii. 19. The prophecy was in the tenth year of Zedekiah, ver. 1. So far then from its implying a date before the captivity (Speaker's Comm. p. 735.), there could have been no ground for the change then.

¹⁴ See Introd. p. 503.

¹⁵ S. Matt. vii. 15.

¹⁶ Ib. xxiv. 11.

¹⁷ 1 S. John iv. 1.

¹⁸ See Pusey's "Daniel the Prophet" p. 162.

¹⁹ Ib. pp. 364-368.

²⁰ Jos. B. J. vi. 6. 2.

²¹ Plutarch A.D. 80.

²² Zech. xii. 10.

²³ πνεῦμα ἀκρόατον, in our Lord's words, S. Matt. xii. 43. S. Mark v. 8. S. Luke viii. 29, xi. 24. add Rev. xviii. 2, xvi. 13.

²⁴ 1 Kgs xxii. 21-23.

²⁵ ילדיו

²⁷ Acts xix. 13-20.

²⁶ De. xiii. 6-10.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

one of his vision, when he hath prophesied ;
neither shall they wear ⁸ † a rough garment † to deceive :

5 ^h But he shall say, I am no prophet, I am an husbandman ; for man taught me

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

of them also which used curious arts brought their books together and burned them before all, and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand picces of silver. So mightily, S. Luke subjoins, grew the word of God and prevailed.

Neither shall wear a rough garment to deceive, feigning themselves ascetics and mourners for their people, as the true prophets were in truth. The sackcloth, which the prophets wore¹, was a rough garment of hair², worn next to the skin³, whence Elijah was known to Ahaziah, when described as ⁴ a hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins. It was a wide garment, enveloping the whole frame⁵, and so, afflictive to the whole body. ⁶ "This was the habit of the prophets, that when they called the people to penitence, they were clothed with sackcloth."

5. And he shall say, repudiating his former claims, I am a husbandman⁷ : for a man hath taught⁸ me from my youth.
There was no room then for his having been a false prophet, since he had had from his youth one simple unlettered occupation, as Amos said truly of himself ; ⁹ I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son : but I was an herdsman and a gatherer of sycomore fruit. The prophet does not approve the lie, any more than our Lord did the injustice of the unjust steward. Our Lord contrasted the wisdom in their generation of a bad man for his ends, with the unwisdom of the children of light, who took no pains to secure their God. Zechariah pictures vividly, how men would anyhow rid themselves of all suspicion of false-propheysing.

6. And one shall say unto him, What are those wounds in thy hands ? The words are simple ; the meaning different¹⁰, according as they are united with what immediately precedes, or the main subject, Him Whom they pierced, for Whom they were to mourn, and, on their mourning, to be cleansed, and of Whom it is said in the next verse, Awake, O sword, against My Shepherd. S. Jerome and others¹¹ explain it of the punishment inflicted by parents. "These wounds and bruises I received, condemned by the judgement of my parents, and of those who did not hate but loved me. And so will truth prevail dissipating falsehood, that he too, who was punished for his own fault, will own that he suffered rightly."
But wounds of chastisement are not inflicted on the hands,

¹ Is. xx. 2.

² 1h. xxii. 12, Jer. iv. 8, vi. 26.

³ 1 Kgs xxi. 27, 2 Kgs vi. 30, Job xvi. 15.

⁴ 2 Kgs i. 8.

⁵ עֵלֶיךָ occurs Gen. xxv. 25, as describing the whole appearance of the new-born Esau ; alone, of Elijah's mantle, 1 Kgs xix. 13, 19, 2 Kgs ii. 8, 13, 14 ; of the robes of the king of Nineveh Jon. iii. 6. עֵלֶיךָ is the large Babylonian garment which incited Achan's covetousness. Jos. vii. 21-24. [all]

⁶ S. Jer.

⁷ The phrase עֵלֶיךָ is from Gen. iv. 2.

⁸ רָכַח, occurring in this place only, is uncertain. Against the modern rendering "sold"
(which would be the obvious causative of רָכַח), or "bought" (taking Hifl as Kal) it seems decisive, that this would be contrary to the Levitical law. For since, if bought or sold as a slave, he would have been set free in the 7th year, he would not have been sold or bought from his youth. רָכַח might equally be, "made me to possess," as "made another to possess me." In either case it governs a double accusative, of which one only is expressed. Kim.
"made me a shepherd and husbandman : Rashi, quoting Menahem, "set me to keep his flocks," Ibn Ezra, "made me to possess ground i.e. made me a husbandman." Tanchum "titled his land, which his father put him in possession of by inheritance." Hunt. 206.
translates רָכַח by אֶמְצָא "bought me."

⁹ Am. vii. 14.

¹⁰ A prevalent modern explanation has been of the self-inflicted wounds of the prophets of Baal. But 1) the idolatrous incisions have a technical name, יָחַד "cut himself ;" De.

to keep cattle from my youth.

6 And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands ? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

and the punishment of false prophecy was not such wounds¹², but death. Wounds in the hands were no punishment, which parents would inflict. They were the special punishment of the cross¹³, after sustaining which, One only lived. The most literal interpretation, then, of the wounds in the hands harmonises with the piercing before, and the smiting of the Good Shepherd which follows, of Whom David too prophesied, ¹⁴ They pierced My Hands and My Feet. ¹⁵ "What are those wounds of Thy hands ? How long, think you, and how and by whom will this be said to Him ? For ever and ever, unceasingly, and with unspeakable admiration it will be said, both by God the Father, ¹⁶ to Whom He was obedient unto death, the death of the Cross : it will be said also both by the holy ¹⁷ angels who desire to look into Him, and by men whom He has redeemed. O great miracle, wonderful spectacle, especially in the Lord of all, to bear wounds in the midst of His Hands ! And He shall say ; With these I was wounded in the house of those who loved Me. O great sacrilege, sacrilegious homicide, that such wounds were inflicted in the house of those who loved. He will not say, 'with these I was wounded by those who loved Me,' but 'in the house of those who loved Me.' For they who inflicted them, loved Him not.
But they were the house of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and David, and the rest like them, who loved Me, and expected Me, Who was promised to them. Yet so to speak is not to answer the question, what are these wounds ? For it is one thing to ask, what are these wounds, another to say, where they were inflicted. Having said, that they were inflicted in the house of those who loved Me, He says, what they are, the Cup which My Father hath given Me to drink.
For what He subjoins, is the Voice of the Father giving the Cup. Sword, awake &c. is as though he said, Ask ye, What are these wounds ? I say, 'the tokens of obedience, the signs of the Father's will and command. The Lord of hosts, God the Father hath not spared Me, His own Son, but hath given Me for you all. And He said, Awake, o sword, against My Shepherd, and against the Man cohering to Me, which is as much as, 'O Death, have thou power over My Son, My good Shepherd, the Man Who cohereth to Me, i.e. Who is joined in unity of Person with the Word Who is consubstantial with Me !' And then, as though the sword asked, how or how

xiv. 1, 1 Kgs xviii. 28, Jer. xvi. 16, xli. 5, xlvii. 5. נָחַם Jer. xlviii. 37. 2) רָכַח, רָכַח, רָכַח, are used of fresh unhealed wounds themselves, not of the scars. Pr. xx. 30, 1 Kgs xxii. 35, 2 Kgs viii. 29, ix. 15, Is. i. 6, xxx. 26, Mi. i. 9, Nah. iii. 19, Jer. vi. 7, x. 19, xv. 18, xxx.
12, 17. 3) Self-infliction was characteristic of the idolatrous cuttings. They were probably to appease the displeased god or goddess. The only support of it, that כָּאֵיִם is used of idolatrous, and so adulterous, objects of love, is neutralised by the fact that the metaphor of male and female is never dropped. Of 14 times in which it occurs, 11 times, in Hosca, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, it is united with the fem. pronoun, כָּאֵיִם, כָּאֵיִם, כָּאֵיִם ; 3 times in the first pers. of the city personified.

¹¹ So S. Cyr. also ; but S. Cyril was misled by the rendering of the LXX, συμποδοῦσιν, whereas Aq. Symm. Theod. have ἐκκενθήσανσιν.

¹² Hence Kim. explains it of the binding him hand and foot to keep him at home ; Rashi of scourging the back, which would be the very opposite of יָחַד, and would not be visible.
Ibn Ezra makes it refer to the מַחֲרָק ver. 3. Tanchum explains "when one asks as to the marks of beating which are on his body," and, paraphrasing רָכַח, explains "in front of thee." The Arab. version [Hunt. 206] has simply יָחַד.

¹³ S. Jerome makes the question answered in the words, "They are the wounds &c." inconsistently, "Why hangest thou on the Cross ? why are thy hands transfixed by nails ?
What hast thou done, to be subjected to this punishment and torture ?"

¹⁴ Ps. xxii. 16.

¹⁵ Rup.

¹⁶ Phil. ii. 8.

¹⁷ 1 S. Pet. i. 12.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

7 ¶ Awake, O sword, against ⁱ my shepherd, and against the man ^k that is my

¹ Isai. 40. 11. Ezek. 34. 23.

² John 10. 30. & 14. 10, 11. Phil. 2. 6.

far shall I arise against this Thy Shepherd, he subjoins, Smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered. Hence the Shepherd Himself, when about to be smitten, spake, All ye shall be offended because of Me this night. For it is written, I will smite the Shepherd and the sheep shall be scattered. So then to those who say, what are those wounds in the midst of Thy hands? is appositely subjoined the Voice of the Father, saying, Awake, O sword, against My Shepherd &c. in the meaning, 'They are monuments of the Father's love, the tokens of My Obedience, because He spared not His own Son, and I became obedient to Him for you all, even unto death, and that, the death of the Cross.'

7. Awake, O sword. So Jeremiah apostrophises the sword, O thou sword of the Lord, when wilt thou be quiet? The prophets express what will be, by a command that it should be; Make the heart of this people heavy. But by this command he signifies that human malice, acting freely, could do no more than His Hand and His counsel determined before to be done. The envy and hatred of Satan, the blind fury of the Chief priests, the contempt of Herod, the guilty cowardice of Pilate, freely accomplished that Death, which God had before decreed for the salvation of the world. The meaning then is, "the sword shall be aroused against My Shepherd, i.e. I will allow Him to be smitten by the Jews. But by the sword he designates death, persecution, wounding &c. as above, the sword upon his right arm, and, where the Passion of Christ is spoken of, Deliver my soul from the sword. So also, All the sinners of the people shall die by the sword," "which cannot be taken literally; for many sinners perish by shipwreck, poison, drowning, fire." Amos then "so spake, because many died by war, yet not all by the sword, but others by pestilence and famine, all which he includes under the sword. This smiting began, when the Lord was taken, and His sheep began to be scattered; but the prophecy which, before, was being gradually fulfilled, was fully fulfilled in His Death, and the Apostles were dispersed till the day of the Resurrection at eventide."

*Against the Man, My Fellow*¹⁰, i. e. One united by community of nature. A little before, God had spoken of Himself as priced at the thirty pieces of silver, yet as breaking the covenant which He had made with all nations for His people; as pierced through, yet as pouring the spirit of grace and supplication on those who pierced Him, that they should mourn their deed, and as, thereon, ever cleansing them from sin. As Man, God was sold, was pierced. "God, in flesh, not working with aught intervening as in the prophets, but having taken to Him a Manhood connatural¹² with Himself and made one, and through His flesh akin to us, drawing up to Him all humanity. What was the manner of the Godhead in flesh? As fire in iron, not transitively but by communication. For the fire does not dart into the iron, but remains there fellow, saith the Lord of hosts: 'smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered:

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

¹ Matt. 26. 31. Mark 14. 27.

and communicates to it of its own virtue, not impaired by the communication, yet filling wholly its recipient." The bold language of the Fathers only expressed the actuality of the Incarnation. Since the Manhood was taken into God, and in Him dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, and God and Man were one Christ, then was it all true language. His Body was "the Body of God;" His flesh "the flesh of the Word;" and it was lawful to speak of "the flesh of the Deity," of "the Passion of the Word," "the Passion of Christ, my God," "the Passion of God," "God dead and buried," "God suffered," "murderers of God," "the Godhead dwelt in the flesh bodily, which is all one with saying that, being God, He had a proper body, and using this as an instrument, He became Man for our sakes, and, because of this, things proper to the flesh are said to be His, since He was in it, as hunger, thirst, suffering, fatigue and the like, of which the flesh is capable, while the works proper to the Word Himself, as raising the dead and restoring the blind, He did through His own Body," is but a continuance of the language of Zechariah, since He Who was sold, was priced, was Almighty God. Jesus being God and Man, the sufferings of His Humanity were the sufferings of God, although, as God, He could not suffer. Now, conversely, God speaks of the Shepherd Who was slain, as My Fellow, united in Nature with Himself, although not the Manhood of Jesus which suffered, but the Godhead, united with It in one Person, was Consubstantial with Himself. The name might perhaps be most nearly represented by "connatural." "When then the title is employed of the relation of an individual to God, it is clear that that individual can be no mere man, but must be one, united with God by unity of Being. The Akin of the Lord is no other than He Who said in the Gospel 'I and My Father are One, and Who is designated as 'the Only-Begotten Son, Who is in the Bosom of the Father. The word, it seems, was especially chosen, as being used in the Pentateuch, only in the laws against injuring a fellow-man. The prophet thereby gives prominence to the seeming contradiction between the command of the Lord, 'Awake, O sword, against My Shepherd, and those of His own law, whereby no one is to injure his fellow. He thus points out the greatness of that end, for the sake of which the Lord regards not that relation, Whose image among men He commanded to be kept holy. He speaks after the manner of men. He calls attention to the greatness of that sacrifice, whereby He 'spared not His own Son, but freely gave Him up for us all. The word 'Man' forms a sort of contrast with My Fellow. He Whom the sword is to reach must unite the Human Nature with the Divine." Jews too have seen that the words, My Fellow, imply an equality with God; only since they own not Him, Who was God and Man, they must interpret it of a false claim on the part of man²⁷, overlooking that it is given Him by God.

¹ S. Matt. xxvi. 31.

⁴ Acts iv. 28.

⁷ Ps. xxii. 20.

² Jer. xlvii. 6.

⁶ Rib.

⁸ Am. ix. 10.

³ Is. vi. 10.

⁶ ch. xi. 17.

⁹ S. Jer.

¹⁰ The word עֲמִית, in form, abstract, is always personal. It stands alone in the dialects, having probably been framed by Moses, to express more than "neighbour," "our common nature," as we speak. It occurs 11 times in Leviticus (v. 21 bis, [vi. 2 Eng.] xviii. 20, xix. 11, 15, 17, xxiv. 19, xxv. 14 (bis) 15, 17,) always with the pronominal affix, "thy" or "his;" and always in enjoining things or forbidding things by virtue of our common humanity. Though feminine in form, it is always masc. in fact, as in, "the wife of" אִשְׁתִּי Lev. xviii. 20. and אִשְׁתִּי, Ib. xix. 17. The word, being revived out of the Pentateuch by Zechariah, received no modification in the Hebrew of the intermediate period.

¹¹ Hom. in Sanct. Christi gener. App. S. Basil. Opp. ii. 596 quoted in Newman on S. Ath.

ag. Arian. p. 444. note k. Oxf. Tr. ¹² συνφυῆ i.e. joined on to His Nature." Ib.

¹³ S. Ath. ag. Arians iii. 9. p. 444. Oxf. Tr.

¹⁵ S. Leo, Sermon. 65. fin.

¹⁶ Tert. de carn. Christi, 5.

¹⁷ S. Ignat. Rom. 6.

¹⁸ Tert. l. c. Ib.

¹⁹ Vigil. c. Eut. ii. p. 502.

²⁰ S. Melito in Anast. Hodeg. 12.

²¹ Tert. l. c. all quoted on S. Ath. l. c. note i.

²² S. Ath. ag. Ar. iii. n. 31 p. 443 O.T. See more ibid.

²³ Hengst. Christ. iii. 530 ed. 2.

²⁴ S. John x. 30.

²⁵ Ib. i. 18.

²⁶ Rom. viii. 32.

²⁷ Ibn Ezra interprets it in this sense, "He prophesieth again many wars, which shall be in all the earth, at the death of Messiah ben Joseph, and the meaning of My Shepherd, is every king of the nations, whom God made to rule over the earth; and he estimates of himself that he is as God; therefore (he saith) and against the man my fellow." Kimchi

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
and I will turn mine hand upon ^m the little ones.

^m Matt. 18.
10, 14.
Luke 12. 32.
8 And it shall come to pass that in all the land, saith the LORD, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; ⁿ but the third shall be left therein.

And I will turn My hand¹ upon the little ones, doing to them as He had done to the Shepherd. So our Lord forewarned them: ² If they have persecuted Me they will also persecute you: ³ If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me, before it hated you: ⁴ Ye shall be hated of all men for My name's sake: ⁵ they will deliver you up to the councils and scourge you in the synagogues; and ye shall be brought before governors and kings for My name's sake: ⁶ they shall deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all men for My name's sake; and to the Scribes and Pharisees, ⁷ I send unto you prophets and wise men and scribes, and some of them ye shall kill and crucify, and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues and persecute them from city to city, that upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth.

The little ones⁸, as Jeremiah speaks of ⁹ the least of the flock, and the Lord said, ¹⁰ fear not, little flock, little and weak in itself, but mighty in Him and in His grace. Three centuries of persecution, alike in the Roman empire and beyond it in Persia, fulfilled the prophet's words and deepened the foundation of the Church and cemented its fabric.

8. In all the land, two parts therein shall be cut off and die. "In all the land of Israel," says a Jewish interpreter¹¹;—the land, in which the Good Shepherd had been slain and the sheep scattered, that upon you, our Lord had said, may come all the righteous blood. As David punished Moab, ¹² with two lines measured he to put to death, and with one full line to keep alive; and Ezekiel prophesied, ¹³ A third part of thee shall die with the pestilence, and with famine shall they be consumed in the midst of thee: and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee; so now, the greater part should be destroyed, but a remnant should be saved. But the third part shall be left therein. Even so then at this present time also, S. Paul says¹⁴, there is a remnant according to the election of grace. "¹⁵ The third part only shall be saved from the common destruction; yet not so, that they should suppose that glory was to be obtained amid ease."

9. I will bring the third part through the fire. Such is always God's way. ¹⁶ Thou hast proved us, O God; Thou hast tried us, like as silver is tried. Thou broughtest us into the snare, Thou laidest trouble upon our loins: we went through fire and water, and Thou broughtest us out into a wealthy adopting the interpretation, adds "i.e. who thinks himself my fellow." R. Isaac (Chizzuk Emunah, Wagenseil Tela Ignea Satanæ p. 310) interprets the whole of the king of Ishmael, called also the king of Turkey, and ruling over Asia and Africa, under whose hand the majority of the people of Israel are in captivity. God calls him my shepherd, because He has given His people into his hand to feed them in their captivity. He calls him 'the man my fellow and companion,' because in the pride and greatness of his heart he accounteth himself like God, like that, Behold man is become like one of us (Gen. iii.)." Abarbanel gives, as the one of three interpretations which he prefers, a modification of R. Isaac's, explaining the words "my shepherd" of Mohammed, and directing his interpretation of "the man, my fellow" against our Lord. "The words, 'the man my fellow' are spoken of Jesus the Nazarene, for according to the sentiment of the children of Edom and their faith, he was the Son of God, and of the same substance, and therefore he is called according to their words, 'The man, my fellow.'" Rashi alone has "My shepherd, whom I set over the sheep of my captivity, and the man my fellow whom I associated with myself, to keep my sheep, even as I did;" but "I smite the shepherd," he explains "the wicked king of Moab," or "king of the border of wickedness" [i.e. Edom] or in one MS. "the wicked Roman king, who shepherdeth my flock." R. Tanchum has, "that they think in themselves on account of my setting them over the creation that they 9 And I will bring the third part ^o through the fire, and will ^p refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: ^p they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: ^r I will say, It is my people: and they shall say, The Lord is my God.

^r Ps. 144. 15. Jer. 30. 22. Ezek. 11. 20. Hos. 2. 23. ch. 8. 8.

place. ¹⁷ I have refined thee, but not with silver, I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction; and, ¹⁸ Through much tribulation we must enter into the kingdom of God.

"¹⁹ In adversity virtue is most tried, and it is shewn what advance a person has made; for *patience hath a perfect work*²⁰; and it is called the touchstone of all other virtues, as is written; ²¹ God tried His elect as gold in the furnace and received them as a burnt offering;" and, ²² All the faithful who have pleased the Lord have passed through many tribulations.' And the angel Raphael saith to Tobias, ²³ Because thou wert accepted of God, need was that temptation should prove thee.'" "Adversities are granted to the elect of God, and therefore to be rejoiced in with the whole heart." "²⁴ Fire, crosses, racks were prepared; swords executioners torturers were put in action; new forms of suffering were invented, and yet Christian virtue remained moveless, unconquered: the fiercer the onslaught, the more glorious was the triumph." "²⁵ The more suffered, the more believed in Christ." "²⁶ Whose virtue they admired, these they imitated, and shared the suffering, that they might be partakers of the glory. This was that fire, whereby God willed that His own should be tried and purified, that, with Christ Whom they gave themselves to imitate, they might enjoy everlasting glory."

I will bless him and will say, It is My people, "²⁷ not only by creation as the rest, but by devotion and worship, by predestination and infusion of grace, by singular Providence, by mutual love; and it shall say, The Lord is my God, Whom Alone above all things, I long for, love, worship."

This promise is oftentimes renewed through the prophets, oftentimes fulfilled in Christ, whenever the Church is recalled from listlessness by fiery trials, and through them her children are restored to deeper devotedness and closer union with God.

XIV. "The Jews," S. Jerome says, "say that these things are to be fulfilled under Gog; others that they were accomplished in part, in the times of the Macedonians, Egyptians, and other nations. We, leaving the truth of the time to the judgement of the Lord, would explain what is written." Eusebius²⁸ points out that it cannot be said to have been fulfilled under Antiochus Epiphanes; "If any think that these things are, then let him consider again and again, whether he can refer the rest of the prophecy also to the times of Antiochus; as, that ²⁹ the feet of the Lord stood on the mount are my administrators in the kingdom and government." The Heb. Ar. [Hunt. 206] "against the man, my companion" (על ארתי כחבד).

¹ Such is the force of על ארתי Am. i. 9, turning the hand against Ekron or against the other cities of Philistia; in Is. i. 25, upon Judah, and thoroughly cleansing her by affliction; Ezek. xxxviii. 12, of Gog against the restored Israel; Ps. lxxxi. 15 of God's turning upon its adversaries, His [hand which was now upon her [all]]. It were in itself improbable that here alone should be in a good sense, as Ges.

² S. John xv. 20. ³ Ib. 18.
⁴ S. Matt. x. 17, 18; add S. Luke xxi. 12.
⁷ Ib. xxiii. 34, 35.

⁹ Jer. xlix. 20 תָּעַרְתִּי כִּי־יָדִי
¹¹ Kim. ¹² 2 Sam. viii. 2.
¹⁴ Rom. xi. 5. ¹⁵ Osor.

¹⁷ Is. xlviii. 10. ¹⁸ Acts xiv. 22. ¹⁹ Dion.

²¹ Wisd. iii. 6. ²² Judith viii. 23. Vulg.

²⁴ S. Aug. in Ps. xc. Serm. i. n. 8. See more in Tert. Apol. c. ult. p. 105. note a. Oxi. Tr. ver. 4.
²⁵ Dem. Evang. vi. 18.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 The destroyers of Jerusalem destroyed. 4 The coming of Christ, and the graces of his kingdom. 12 The plague of Jerusalem's enemies. 16 The remnant shall turn to the Lord, 20 and their spoils shall be holy.

^a Isai. 13. 9.
Joel 2. 31.
Acts 2. 20.

BEHOLD, ^athe day of the Lord cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the of Olives, that ¹the Lord in that day, became king over the whole earth; and so, as to the rest of the prophecy." And although more was fulfilled in the last siege by the Romans, still those who would explain it solely of this, are obliged to mingle explanations partly literal, as that Jerusalem should be the earthly Jerusalem, which was destroyed, partly metaphorical, as to the mount of Olives, its division into two parts &c. It seems then probable that, like the kindred prophecy of Joel ², it relates chiefly to the time of the end, and that as our Lord unites the destruction of Jerusalem with His Coming in the Day of Judgement, so here are united that first destruction with the last rebellion of man, in the times of Anti-Christ. Since then much or most may be yet future, it seems safer, as S. Jerome suggests, to explain the Prophet's symbolic language, leaving the times of the fulfilment to Him, in Whose hands they are.

1. Behold the Day of the Lord cometh, lit. a day cometh, the Lord's, in which He Himself shall be Judge, and no longer leave man to fulfil his own will, and despise God's; in which His glory and holiness and the righteousness of all His ways shall be revealed.

And thy spoil shall be in the midst of thee. "³ How great will the strait be, that the spoils should be divided in the midst of her. It often happens that what, by a sudden assault, is plundered in the city, is divided in the field or in solitude, lest the enemy should come upon them. But now there will be such a heavy weight of ills, such will be the security of conquest, that the spoils shall be divided in the midst of the city."

2. I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle. This is a feature which belongs to the end. It had been dwelt upon by Joel ⁴; Ezekiel spoke of the ⁵many nations which should come under Gog. S. John foretells of an universal strife at the end, when ⁶The spirits of devils, working miracles, go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty; and ⁷Satan shall be loosed out of his prison and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle, the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints round about, and the beloved city. Since no creature can do aught but what God wills, and, in his phrenzy against God's people, is but His instrument, ⁸to try them and to purge and to make white to the time of the end; and the strength of body or intellect, which is abused against His law, He continuously in the order of nature supplies, God may midst of thee.

2 For ^bI will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and ^cthe houses rifled, and the ^cwomen ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city.

3 Then shall the Lord go forth, and be said to do what Satan does against Him. Satan, in his blind fury, crowns martyrs, fills the thrones of heaven, works, against his will, the All-wise Will of God.

And the houses rifled, and the women &c. The horrors of heathen war repeat themselves through men's ever-recurring passions. What was foretold as to Babylon is repeated in the same words as to the Church of God. Seemingly all things come alike to all: ⁹there is one event to the righteous and to the wicked; to the good and to the clean and to the unclean: to him that sacrificeth and to him that sacrificeth not: as is the good, so is the sinner. The outward event is the same, the hidden part is known to God Alone. And the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city, unlike the lot of the earthly Jerusalem, in the destruction both by Nebuchadnezzar (which was past) and the Romans ¹⁰. At the first, ¹¹Nebuzaradan, the captain of the guard, carried away the rest of the people left in the city, and the fugitives that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, so that Jeremiah mourned over it, ¹²Because of the mountain of Zion which is desolate, foxes walk [habitually] upon it. The Romans "¹³effaced the city." Now a remnant is not cut off, because ¹⁴for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened; for our Lord had said ¹⁵, that the gates of hell should not prevail against His Church.

3. The Lord shall go forth and shall fight, "¹⁶is to be taken like that in Habakkuk, ¹⁷Thou wentest forth for the salvation of Thy people, for salvation with Thine Anointed, and in Micah, ¹⁸For behold, the Lord cometh forth out of His place, and will come down and will tread upon the high places of the earth, and the mountains shall be molten under Him, and the valleys shall be cleft; and Isaiah also, ¹⁹The Lord shall go forth as a mighty man; He shall stir up jealousy like a man of war; He shall cry; He shall prevail over His enemies. "God is said to go forth, when by some wondrous deed He declares His Presence—His Deity is, as it were, laid up, so long as He holds Himself in, and does not by any token shew His power. But He goes forth, and bursts forth, when He exercises some judgement, and worketh some new work, which striketh terror." God then will go forth out of His place, when He is constrained to break through His quietness and gentleness and clemency, for the amendment of sinners. He Who elsewhere speaketh through the prophet, ²⁰I, the Lord, change not, and to Whom it is said, ²¹Thou art the same, and in the Epistle of James, ²²With Whom is no change, now goeth forth and fighteth as in the day of battle, when He overwhelmed Pharaoh in the Red sea; and fought for Israel." The Lord shall fight for you, became the watchword of Moses ²³

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
^b Joel 3. 2.

¹ ver. 9. ² Jo. ii. 30, iii. 18. See ab. pp. 129—144.
³ S. Jer. ⁴ iii. 2—9, 11. ⁵ Ezek. xxxviii. 6, 15, 22.
⁶ Rev. xvi. 14. ⁷ Ib. xx. 7, 8, 9.
⁸ Dan. xi. 35. xii. 10. ⁹ Eccl. ix. 2. ¹⁰ See ab. on Mic. iii. 12. pp. 316—318.

¹¹ 2 Kgs xxv. 11. ¹² Lam. v. 18.
¹³ See ab. p. 316. ¹⁴ S. Matt. xxiv. 32. ¹⁵ Ib. xvi. 18. ¹⁶ S. Jer.
¹⁷ Hab. iii. 13. ¹⁸ Mic. i. 3, 4. ¹⁹ Is. xlii. 13. ²⁰ Mal. iii. 6.
²¹ Ps. cii. 23. ²² S. James i. 17. ²³ Exod. xiv. 14. Deut. i. 30, xiii. 22, xx. 4.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 437.

fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle.

^d See Ezek.
11. 23.

4 ¶ And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof

• Joel 3. 12, 14. toward the east and toward the west, ^e and and the warrior Joshua in his old age¹, after his life's experience², and Nehemiah³. Be not afraid by reason of this great multitude, said Jahaziel, son of Zachariah⁴, when the Spirit of the Lord came upon him; for the battle is not your's, but God's.

As He fought in the day of battle. "All wars are so disposed by the power of God, that every victory is to be referred to His counsel and will. But this is not seen so clearly, when men, elate and confident, try to transfer to themselves all or the greater part of the glory of war. Then may the war be eminently said to be the Lord's, when no one drew sword, as it is written, ⁶ The Lord shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace. Of all God's wars, in which human insolence could claim no part of the glory, none was more wondrous than that, in which Pharaoh and his army were sunk in the deep. The Lord, said Moses⁷, is a man of war: the Lord is His Name. That day of battle was the image of one much greater. In that, Pharaoh's army was sunk in the deep; in this, the power of evil, in Hell: in that, what could in some measure be conquered by human strength, was subdued; in this, a tyranny unconquerable; in that, a short-lived liberty was set up; the liberty brought by Christ through subdual of the enemy, is eternal. As then the image yields to the truth, earthly goods to heavenly, things perishable to eternal, so the glory of that ancient victory sinks to nothing under the greatness of the latter."

4. And His feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, "over against Jerusalem to the East, wherein riseth the Sun of Righteousness." The Mount of Olives is the central eminence of a line of hills, of rather more than a mile in length, overhanging the city, from which it is separated only by the narrow bed of the valley of the brook Cedron. It rises 187 feet above Mount Zion, 295 feet above Mount Moriah, 443 feet above Gethsemane, and lies between the city and the wilderness toward the dead sea: around its Northern side, wound the road to Bethany and the Jordan⁸. There, probably, David worshipped⁹; his son, in his decay, profaned it¹⁰; Josiah desecrated his desecrations¹¹; there¹² upon the mountain, which is on the East side of the city, the glory of the Lord stood, when it had gone up from the midst of the city; it united the greatest glory of the Lord on earth, His Ascension, with its deepest sorrow, in Gethsemane. Since the Angel said, ¹³ This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven, the old traditional opinion is not improbable, that our Lord shall come again to judge the earth, where He left the earth, near the place of His Agony and Crucifixion

¹ Josh. xxiii. 10; comp. x. 14, 42, xxiii. 3.

² Ib. x. 14, 42, xxiii. 3.

³ Neh. iv. 20.

⁴ 2 Chr. xx. 15.

⁵ Osor.

⁶ Ex. xiv. 14.

⁷ Ib. xv. 3.

⁸ Van de Valde, Memoir 179.

⁹ 2 Sam. xv. 32.

¹⁰ 1 Kgs. xi. 7.

¹¹ 2 Kgs. xxiii. 13.

¹² Ezek. xi. 23.

¹³ Acts i. 11.

¹⁴ Dion.

¹⁵ The evidence would be late, except as seemingly confirmed by a like history in Suetonius vi. 12.

¹⁶ Zech. iv. 7.

¹⁷ Is. xl. 4.

¹⁸ According to the principle of words of motion, הָלַךְ, יָצָא, עָבַר, בָּא. See Ew. Lehrh. n. 232a, 1. pp. 706, 707, ed. 8.

there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south.

5 And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal: yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the earthquake

Before
CHRIST
cir. 437.

¶ Or, my mountains. Or, when he shall touch the valley of the mountains to the place he separated. cir. 787. ^f Amos 1. 1.

for us. So shall the Feet of God literally stand upon the Mount of Olives. Else it may be that "the Feet of the unincircumscribed and simple God are to be understood not materially, but that the loving and fixed assistance of His power is expressed by that name."

Which is true, or whether, according to an old opinion, the last act of Anti-Christ shall be an attempt to imitate the Ascension of Christ (as the first Anti-Christ Simon Magus was said to have met his death in some attempt to fly¹⁵) and be destroyed by His Coming there, the event must shew.

And the Mount of Olives shall cleave [be cleft] in [from] the midst thereof toward the East and toward the West, i. e. the cleft shall be East and West, so as to form a very great valley through it—from Jerusalem toward the Jordan Eastward; and this shall be, in that half of the mountain shall remove Northward, and half thereof Southward. If this be literal, it is to form an actual way of escape from Jerusalem; if figurative, it symbolises how that which would be the greatest hindrance to escape, the mountain which was higher than the city, blocking, as it were, the way, should itself afford the way of escape; as Zechariah speaks, ¹⁶ O great mountain, before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain; and Isaiah, ¹⁷ Every valley shall be exalted and every mountain and hill shall be brought low, and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain; i. e. every obstacle should be removed.

5. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains, rather, along¹⁸ the valley of My mountains¹⁹ viz. of those mountains, which God had just formed by dividing the mount of Olives. For the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal, i. e. Azel, the same word which enters into Beth-Azel of Micah, where the allusion probably is to its firm-rootedness. It is more probable that the name of a place should have been chosen with an allusive meaning, as in Micah, than that an unusual appellative should have been chosen to express a very common meaning. S. Cyril had heard of it as the name of a village at the extremity of the mountain²⁰. Else it might very probably have been destroyed in the destructive Roman wars. The Roman camp in the last siege must have been very near it²¹. The destruction of villages, after the frantic revolt under Bar-Chocab, was enormous²².

Yea, ye shall flee like as ye fled from before the earthquake. An earthquake in the time of Uzziah, whose memory survived the captivity to the time of Zechariah, nearly two centuries, must have been very terrible, but no historical account remains of it, Josephus having apparently described the past earthquake in the language which Zechariah uses of the ¹⁵ E. vers. has followed Kim.; yet there is no need to assume that ὄρε is an old plur. form. ¹⁶ ὄρε for ὄρε, in pause, as in the man's name both forms occur 1 Chr. viii. 38, ix. 44. The LXX had Ἀσὰλ in S. Jerome's time; Aq. Ἀσὰλ; Theod. Ἀσὰλ; Symm. alone translates it, πρὸς τὸ παρὰκείμενον. Jon. retains ὄρε. So Kim., I. E., Abarb. The Syr. and Sym. (whom S. Jerome follows,) paraphrases. So Menahem and Rashi, giving an impossible explanation, "height." S. Cyril says, "it is a village, it is said, at the extremity of the mountain."

²¹ Jos. B. J. v. 1. 8.

²² "985 very well known villages." Dio Cass. lix. 14. See ab. p. 317.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
quake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah:
and the LORD my God shall come, and all the saints with thee.
6 And it shall come to pass in that day,
|| that the light shall not be † clear, nor † dark:
places, and dark in other places of the world. † Heb. precious. † Heb. thickness.

future¹. Such an earthquake is the more remarkable a visitation in Jerusalem, because it was out of the line of earthquakes. These were to the North and East of Palestine: within it, they were almost unknown². Interpositions of God even in man's favour, are full of awe and terror. They are tokens of the presence of the All-Holy among the unholy. Fear was an accompaniment of special miracles in the Gospel, not only among the poor Gadarenes³, or the people⁴, but even the Apostles⁵; apart from the effect of the sight of Angels on us who are in the flesh⁶. It is then quite compatible, that the valley so formed should be the means of deliverance, and yet an occasion of terror to those delivered through it. The escape of the Christians in Jerusalem to Pella, during the break of the siege, after the withdrawal of Cestius Gallus, was a slight image of this deliverance.

And the Lord thy God shall come, and all the saints with Thee, O God. The prophet, having spoken of God as my God, turns suddenly to speak to Him, as present. "This is manifestly said of the second Coming of the Saviour, of which John too in his Apocalypse says, Behold He shall come with the clouds, and every eye shall see Him, and they also which pierced Him. And the Lord Himself in the Gospel declareth, that the Son of Man shall come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. He shall come with the clouds, i.e. with the Angels, who are ministering spirits and are sent for different offices, and with the Prophets and Apostles." "Whenever Scripture says that the saints and angels come with Christ, it is always speaking of His second Coming, as in that, When the Son of Man shall come in His glory and all His holy Angels with Him, and in the Epistle of Jude¹², Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of His saints, to execute judgement."

6. The light shall not be clear nor dark, or, more probably, according to the original reading¹³, In that day there will be no light; the bright ones¹⁴ will contract themselves, as it is said, The stars shall withdraw their shining.

This is evermore the description of the Day of Judgement, that, in the presence of God Who is Light, all earthly light shall grow pale. So Joel had said, The sun and moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining. And Isaiah, The moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed,

¹ See ab. Introd. to Amos p. 148.

² S. Mark v. 15, S. Luke viii. 25.

³ On the restoration of Zacharias' speech, S. Luke i. 65; of the son of the widow of Nain Ib. vii. 16.

⁴ At the walking on the sea, S. Matt. xiv. 26, S. John vi. 19; the rebuking of the wind, S. Mark vi. 48, S. Luke viii. 25; the Transfiguration, S. Matt. xvii. 6, S. Mark ix. 6; the draught of fishes, S. Luke v. 3-10.

⁵ To Zacharias, S. Luke i. 12; the B. Virgin, Ib. 29, 30; the shepherds, Ib. ii. 9; to the women after the Resurrection, S. Mark xvi. 8; the Apostles "supposing they had seen a spirit," S. Luke xxiv. 37.

⁶ S. Jer. on vv. 6, 7. ⁷ Rev. i. 7. ⁸ S. Matt. xxiv. 30. ⁹ Rih.

¹⁰ S. Matt. xxv. 31. ¹¹ S. Jude 14, 15. ¹² The E.V. follows Kim. "The light shall be neither 'preciousnesses' nor 'thickness'."

¹³ Kim. as Job xxxi. 26. "the moon, walking in beauty." "shall contract themselves," as it is said in Ex. xv. 8. "the depths (lit.) coagulated in the heart of the sea." According to the Kri, קָטַן, the meaning of קָטַן is mere conjecture. Kimchi (Lex.) Ibn Ezra Rashi suppose it to be used of "clear light," as contrasted with 'cloudy,' expressed by קָטַן, so that the meaning of the whole should be the same as that of v. 7.

7 But || it shall be ¹ one day ^k which shall be known to the LORD, not day, nor night: but it shall come to pass, that at ¹ evening time it shall be light.

8 And it shall be in that day, that living ^m waters shall go out from Jerusalem; half when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem and before His ancients gloriously; and, ¹⁸ Behold the day of the Lord cometh,—The stars of heaven and the constellations thereof shall not give their light: the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine. All know well our Lord's words¹⁹. S. John, like Zechariah, unites the failure of the heavenly light ²⁰ with a great earthquake, and the sun became as sackcloth of hair: and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell upon the earth.

^m Ezek. 47. 1. Joel 3. 18. Rev. 22. 1.

7. And it shall be one day: it shall be known unto the Lord: not day, and not night; and at the eventide it shall be light. One special day; one, unlike all besides; known unto God, and to Him Alone. For God Alone knows the day of the consummation of all things, as He saith, ²¹ Of that day and that hour knoweth no one, neither the angels in Heaven, nor the Son, (so as to reveal it) but the Father only. Neither wholly day, because overclouded with darkness; nor wholly night, for the streaks of light burst through the darkness chequered of both; but in eventide, when all seems ready to sink into the thickest night, there shall be light. Divine light always breaks in, when all seems darkness; but then the chequered condition of our mortality comes to an end, then comes the morning, which has no evening; the light which has no setting; "perpetual light, brightness infinite;" when ²² the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold; and ²³ the glory of God doth lighten the eternal city, and the Lamb is the light thereof; and ²⁴ in Thy light we shall see light. "Christ shall be to us eternal light, a long perpetual day."

8. And it shall be, that living waters. "This is what is said in the prophecy of Joel, ²⁷ A fountain shall come forth from the house of the Lord; and in that of Ezekiel, ²⁸ And behold there ran out waters." Zechariah leaves to the mind to supply what the former prophets had said of the fertilising life-giving character of those waters. He adds that they should pervade the whole land, West as well as East; to the former, rather the Eastern sea²⁹, into which they would by nature flow, and toward the hinder, i.e. the Western sea, the Mediterranean, which natural waters could not reach. This their flow, he adds, should be perpetual. "These streams shall not dry

Our version follows this. Abulwalid and Parchon explain it of heavy thick clouds, and make the words synonymous. Tanchum mentions both. The LXX. seem further to have read καὶ ψυχῶν; but it is not supported by any MS. or any other version: for the "but" in Symm. Chald. Syr. may only express the contrast of the sentences; "there shall not be light;—and—" as Asyndeton. The LXX. however, "There shall not be light and cold and ice," could only mean to deny the presence of any of them, not (as Ewald) "there shall be no alternation of light with cold and ice." Proph. ii. 62. Light too and cold are not alternatives. The Kri קָטַן, as always, occurs in some MSS., 8 Spanish of De Rossi, 2 at first, 15 old editions. The Jewish authorities (as far as I know) including Abulwalid Tanchum Parchon &c., take no notice of the Kethibh.

¹⁶ Joel iii. 15. ¹⁷ Is. xxiv. 23. ¹⁸ Ib. xiii. 9, 10. ¹⁹ S. Matt. xxiv. 29. ²⁰ Rev. vi. 12, 13. ²¹ S. Mark xiii. 32. ²² Is. xxx. 26. ²³ Rev. xxi. 23. ²⁴ Ps. xxxvi. 9. ²⁵ S. Cyr. ²⁶ Kim. ²⁷ Joel iii. 18. ²⁸ Ezek. xlvii. 2. ²⁹ Joel ii. 20, where the preternaturalness of the deliverance is pictured by the driving the locust, the symbol of the enemy, into two opposite seas. The Eastern sea, i.e. the dead sea, is spoken of there and Ezek. xlvii. 18; the hinder sea, i.e. the Mediterranean, Joel ii. 20, Deut. xi. 24, xxxiv. 2. ³⁰ See ab. on Joel pp. 140, 141.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

|| Or, eastern,
Joel. 2. 20.
Dan. 2. 41.
Rev. 11. 15.
Eph. 4. 5, 6.

|| Or, com-
passed.
Isai. 40. 4.
ch. 12. 6.
|| Or, shall abide.

of them toward the || former sea, and half of them toward the hinder sea: in summer and in winter shall it be.

9 And the LORD shall be ^aking over all the earth: in that day shall there be ^oone
LORD, and his name one.

10 All the land shall be || turned ^pas a plain from Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem: and it shall be lifted up, and ^a|| in-up and their waters shall not fail¹; therefore drought shall not lessen them, nor winter-cold bind them. ^c1 From Jerusalem as from a fountain shall stream forth living waters of wisdom and grace to all nations."

^c2 Again he tells us, under a figure, that exceeding great and large shall be that outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the saints, especially when they shall be removed to that holy eternal life in the world to come. For now through faith in Christ we are enriched, as with an earnest, with the first-fruits of the Holy Spirit. But after the Resurrection, sin being wholly taken away, the Holy Spirit will be in us, not as an earnest or in a measure; but richly bounteously and perfectly shall we enjoy the grace through Christ. He callesth, then, living water, the Spirit which, he says, will come forth from the Jerusalem which is from above.—But that the holy Scripture is wont to liken the Divine Spirit to water, the Giver thereof, the Son, accredits, saying³, he that believeth on Me, as the Scripture hath said, Out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This the Evangelist explains, ⁴*This spake He of the Spirit, which they who believe in Him should receive*. Since then the Spirit is life-giving, rightly does he liken it to that, which is life-giving to the frame."

9. And the Lord shall be king over all the earth. Such should be the influence of the living water, i. e. of the Spirit of God. God Who has ever reigned and will reign, ⁵a great King over all the earth, shall be owned by His creatures, as what He is.

There shall be one Lord, more exactly, The Lord shall be One, and His Name One. He had before prophesied, ⁶*I will cut off the names of the idols out of the land*. The Church being thus cleansed, no other lord or object of worship should be named but Himself. This is one of those prophecies, of continued expansion and developement, ever bursting out and enlarging, yet never, until the end, reaching its full fulfilment. ⁷"Since in this life we contemplate God in His effects, in which His whole perfection shineth not forth, now we know Him obscurely and imperfectly, His perfections being in divers diversely represented. In our home we shall see Him as He is, face to Face, through His Essence. Therefore then He will be represented by one name, as He shall be beheld by one gaze."

10. All the land shall be turned as a plain from Rimmon to Gebah. ⁸"All the land, which is round about Jerusalem, habited in her place, from Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner gate, ^rand from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's winepresses.

11 And men shall dwell in it, and there shall be ^ano more utter destruction; ^tbut ^aJerusalem
|| shall be safely inhabited.

12 ¶ And this shall be the plague wherewith the LORD will smite all the people that

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

Neh. 3. 1.
& 12. 39.
Jer. 31. 38.

Jer. 31. 40.
Jer. 23. 6.
|| Or, shall abide.

which is now mountains, as is said, ⁹*The mountains are round about Jerusalem*, shall be level as a plain, but Jerusalem itself shall be exalted¹⁰, and high above all the earth." The dignity of the Church, as ¹¹*a city set upon a hill, which cannot be hid*, is symbolised here by the sinking of all around and its own uprising; as in Micah and Isaiah, ¹²*The mountain of the Lord's house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills*. Gebah, lit. hill, now Jeva, was a frontier-garrison, held once by the Philistines¹³, and fortified by Asa¹⁴, in the northern boundary of Benjamin¹⁵, together with Michmash¹⁶ (now Mikhmas), commanding an important pass, by which Jerusalem was approached¹⁷.
Rimmon, south of Jerusalem is mentioned in Joshua among the southern towns of Judah¹⁸, given to Simeon¹⁹. Both survived the Captivity²⁰. They mark then the N. and S. of the kingdom of Judah, a long mountain chain, which is pictured as sinking down into a plain, that Jerusalem alone might be exalted.

From Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate.
Benjamin's gate²¹ must obviously be a gate to the North, and doubtless the same as *the gate of Ephraim*²², the way to Ephraim lying through Benjamin. This too has probably reference to the prophecy of Jeremiah, that ²³*the city shall be built to the Lord from the tower of Hanneel unto the gate of the corner*. ²⁴*Jehoash, king of Israel, brake down the wall of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim to the corner-gate, four hundred cubits*, after the war with Amaziah.
Zechariah seems to speak of Jerusalem, as it existed in his time. For the tower of Hanneel²⁵ still existed; the first gate was probably destroyed, since he speaks not of it, but of its place; the gate of Benjamin and the corner-gate probably still existed, since Nehemiah²⁶ mentions the building of the sheep-gate, the fish-gate, the old gate, or gate of the old city, the valley-gate, the dung-gate, the gate of the fountain; but not these.

11. And they shall dwell in it, in peace, going forth from it, neither into captivity, nor in flight²⁷; for God should exempt from curse the city which He had chosen, against which the gates of hell shall not prevail, and He says of the heavenly Jerusalem, ²⁸*there shall be no more curse*.

12. Again, upon the restoration of His people follows the destruction of His enemies. It shall, first and chiefly, be God's doing, not man's. This shall be the plague. The word is named among the northern towns of Benjamin, Jos. xviii. 24.

¹ Kim. קיץ make up the whole year. Gen. viii. 22, Ps. lxxiv. 17. חור is winter
Pr. xx. 4, Am. iii. 15, Jer. xxxvi. 22.

² S. Cyr.

³ S. John vii. 38.

⁴ Ib. 39.

⁵ Ps. xlvii. 3, 8.

⁶ Zech. xiii. 2.

⁷ Dion.

⁸ Kim.

⁹ Ps. cxxv. 2.

¹⁰ רמה, as רמה, Hos. x. 14. * is substituted in the name of the animal רמם, the appell., רמם, Pr. xxiv. 7; the precious substance, Ezek. xxvii. 16, Job xxviii. 18; the town, Deut. iv. 43, Jos. xx. 8, 1 Chr. vi. 65.

¹² Is. ii. 2. Mic. iv. 1.

¹³ 1 Sam. xiv. 5.

¹⁴ 1 Kgs xv. 22.

¹⁵ From Gebah to Beer-sheba, ² 2 Kgs xxiii. 8, as here, "from Gebah to Rimmon." It

¹⁶ 1 Sam. i. c.

¹⁷ Is. x. 28, 29.

¹⁸ Jos. xv. 32.

¹⁹ Ib. xix. 7, 1 Chron. iv. 32.

²⁰ Gebah, mentioned with Michmash, Neh. xi. 31, Rimmon, Ib. 29.

²¹ Mentioned besides, Jer. xx. 2, xxxvii. 12, 17. Jeremiah goes through it, "to go into the land of Benjamin." Jer. xxxvii. 12, 13.

²² Mentioned 2 Chr. xxv. 23, Neh. viii. 16, xii. 39.

²³ Jer. xxxi. 38.

²⁴ Neh. iii. 1.

²⁵ 2 Kgs xiv. 13. 2 Chr. xxv. 23.

²⁶ Neh. iii. 1, 3, 6, 13, 14, 15.

²⁷ v. 2, 5.

²⁸ Rev. xxii. 3.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

have fought against Jerusalem; Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth.

13 And it shall come to pass in that day, that ^aa great tumult from the LORD shall be among them; and they shall lay hold

^a 1 Sam. 14.
15, 20.

is used of direct infliction by pestilence, *wherewith the Lord shall smite*¹ all the people [peoples] that fought against Jerusalem. The awful description is of living corpses. "The enemies of Jerusalem shall waste, not with fever or disease, but by a plague from God, so that, being sound, standing, living, in well-being, they should waste and consume away," as Isaiah speaks of the ³*carcasses of the men, that have transgressed against Me; for their worm shall not die—and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh*.

Their flesh shall consume away, rather, wasting away the flesh of each one. It is the act of God, in His individual justice to each one of all those multitudes gathered against Him. One by one, their eyes, of which they said, ⁴*let our eye look on Zion*, i. e. with joy at its desolation, shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue, wherewith they blasphemed God⁵, shall consume away in their mouths. Appalling, horrible, picture! standing on their feet, yet their flesh mouldering away as in a grave-yard, their sightless balls decaying in their holes, the tongue putrefying in their mouth, a disgust to themselves and to others! Yet what, compared to the horrible inward decay of sin, whereby men ⁶*have a name that they live and are dead*? "Let us read Ecclesiastical histories, what Valerian, Decius, Diocletian, Maximian, what the savagest of all, Maximin, and lately Julian suffered, and then we shall prove by deeds, that the truth of prophecy was fulfilled in the letter also."

13. A great tumult, and panic fear, such as God said He would send upon the Canaanites before Israel⁸, or on Israel itself, if disobedient⁹; or which fell on the Philistines after Jonathan's capture of the garrison at Michmash, when every man's ¹⁰*sword was against his fellow*. There is no real unity, except in God; elsewhere, since each seeks his own, all must be impregnated with mutual suspicion, ready at any moment to be fanned into a flame; as when, at the blowing of Gideon's trumpets,¹¹ the Lord set every man's sword against his fellow; or when, at Jehoshaphat's prayer¹², the children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of Mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy; and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped to destroy another. And they shall lay hold, every one on the hand of his

¹ נָקַד occurs 20 times of God's striking; 2cc of a foot stumbling; once (like נָקַד) of an ox goring another, once of a man's accidental blow, both in Ex. : נָקַד, in like way, occurs 17 times of death inflicted by God (once only of an individual, Ezekiel's wife, Ez. xxiv. 16), and 3 times only, of slaughter in battle by men, 1 Sam. iv. 17, 2 Sam. xvii. 9, xviii. 7. The form חָפַץ, is חָפַץ. Nif. is used of a putrefying wound, Ps. xxxviii. 6, and כָּס subst. Is. iii. 24. Nif. is also used of man's wasting away through (3) his sins Lev. xxvii. 39 (his) Ez. xxiv. 33, xxxiii. 10 [not 'under the weight of' as Ges.] and of the dissolution of the host of heaven, Is. xxxiv. 4.

⁴ Mi. iv. 11. ⁵ comp. Ps. xii. 3. Is. xxxvi. 15, 18, xxxvii. 3, 4, 17, 23, 29. ⁶ Rev. iii. 1. ⁷ S. Jer. ⁸ De. vii. 23. ⁹ Ib. xxviii. 20. ¹⁰ 1 Sam. xiv. 20. The same word is used. ¹¹ Jud. vii. 22. ¹² 2 Chr. xx. 23. ¹³ נָקַד, with acc., is used adversely though figuratively. Anguish (Jer. vi. 24, l. 43) amazement (Ib. viii. 21) pangs (Mic. iv. 9) are said to seize on—; and David "I seized (נָקַד) by the beard the lion and the bear," 1 Sam. xvii. 35. It is used of a man grasping with violence (with כָּס) De. xxii. 25, 2 Sam. xiii. 11; forcibly detaining prisoners, Ex. ix. 2, Jer. 1. 33; the head of an opponent, "they seized each his fellow by the head, and his sword in his fellow's side," 2 Sam. ii. 16; "the ears of a dog," Pr. xxvi. 17. Here the context precludes ambiguity; the use of the acc. is poetic.

every one on the hand of his neighbour, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbour.

14 And || Judah also shall fight || at Jerusalem; and the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered together, gold, and silver, and apparel, in great abundance.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

^a Judg. 7. 22.
2 Chr. 20. 23.
Ezek. 33. 21.
Or, thou also,
O Judah,
shalt.
Or, against.
Ezek. 39. 10,
17, &c.

neighbour. Every one shall be every one's foe. Each shall, in this tumultuous throng, grasp the other's hand, mastering him powerfully¹³. *And his hand shall rise up*¹⁴ against the hand of his neighbour, as was prophesied of Ishmael, ¹⁵*his hand will be against every man; and every man's hand against him*.

14. And Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem. This seems more probable than the alternative rendering of the E.M., "against." For Judah is united with Jerusalem as one, in the same context¹⁶; and, if it had shared with the heathen, it must also have shared their lot. It is Judah itself, not "a remnant of Judah," as it is ¹⁷*every one that is left of all the nations*, which is thus united to Jerusalem: it is that same Judah, as a whole, of which it is said, it shall fight. Nor is anything spoken of "conversion," which is said of those left from the heathen nations, who had fought against her. Yet for Judah to have joined an exterminating Heathen war against Jerusalem, even though constrained, had, like the constrained sacrifices to Heathen gods, been apostasy. But there is not even a hint that, as Jonathan apologetically paraphrases¹⁸, they were "constrained." The war is to be Judah's free act: Judah also shall fight. Again, those gathered against Jerusalem, and their warfare against it, had been described at the outset, as ¹⁹*all nations*: here the subject is not the gathering or fighting, but the overthrow. Nor is there any decisive contrary idiom; for, although when used of people, it always means "fight against," yet, of place, it, as often, means "fight in"²⁰. Probably then the Prophet means, that not only should God fight for His people, but that Judah also should do its part, as S. Paul says, ²¹*We, then, as workers together with Him*; and, ²²*we are labourers together with God*; and, ²³*I laboured more abundantly than they all; yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me*; or, ²⁴*work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure*. God so doth all things in the Church, for the conversion of the heathen, and for single souls, as to wait for the coöperation of His creature. "God made thee without thee; He doth not justify thee without thee."

And the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered. Whatever the world had taken in their war against ¹⁴ נָקַד "rise" = "be raised up," as even of inanimate things, Am. iii. 5, Pr. xxvi. 9, Job v. 26; of a people carried away, Ib. xxxvi. 20. Gesenius' instances, Thes. p. 1023 n. 2. ¹⁵ Gen. xvi. 12. ¹⁶ v. 21. ¹⁷ v. 16. ¹⁸ "Yea, and those of the house of Judah the nations will bring, constrained, to carry war against Jerusalem." Jon. ¹⁹ v. 2, 3.

²⁰ On the one hand, נָקַד "fought against the city," Jud. ix. 45; נָקַד "against Rabbah" 2 Sam. xii. 27; נָקַד "against Keilah," 1 Sam. xxiii. 1: on the other, נָקַד "fought at Taanach," Jud. v. 19; נָקַד "at Rephidim," Ex. xvii. 8; נָקַד "in the valley of Megiddo," 2 Chr. xxxv. 22, and so probably in the immediate context, (Ib. 20) נָקַד, "at Carchemish," since it is hardly probable, that Carchemish should be mentioned as the object of such an expedition, and the decisive battle between Egypt and Chaldaea was "at," not "in Carchemish," נָקַד, where Nebuchadnezzar smote his army. Jer. xlv. 2. For such a large army as Pharaoh's would not have been shut up in a town, which was of importance only as a key to the passage of the Euphrates. Also in Isaiah xxx. 32, the Chethib נָקַד must be "in her," Zion, which the Kri has corrected into the more common idiom, נָקַד, "against them." The LXX. renders thus, παράσταται ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ. ²¹ 2 Cor. vi. 1. ²² 1 Cor. iii. 9. ²³ Ib. xv. 10.

²⁴ Phil. ii. 12. ²⁵ S. Aug. Serm. 169. n. 13. Opp. v. 815. (on N. T. p. 866 O. T.)

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
* ver. 12.

15 And ^aso shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass, and of all the beasts that shall be in these tents, as this plague.

16 ¶ And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which the Church shall be abundantly repaid. All the heathen had combined to plunder Jerusalem ¹; the wealth of all the heathen shall be gathered to requite them. ² As Isaiah says, The nations, converted to Christ, brought all their wealth to the Church, whence he congratulates the Church, saying, ³ Thou shalt also suck the milk of the Gentiles, and shalt suck the breasts of kings—For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver; under which he typically understands, ⁴ wisdom, philosophy, eloquence, learning, and all the other arts and sciences, liberal and mechanical, wherewith the heathen shall be adorned, who are converted to the faith. So shall the gifts of nature be perfected by the gifts of grace, and they shall defend the Church who erstwhile attacked it.”

15. And so shall be the plague of the horse &c. ⁴ So, when God sendeth the plague, all the irrational animals of Anti-Christ and his satellites shall perish, as the aforesaid men, who used them, perished. For, for the sins of men, God, to their greater confusion, sometimes slays their beasts, sometimes also for their loving correction. ⁵ The imagery is from the Mosaic law of the ban. If a whole city became guilty of idolatry, not the inhabitants only, but the beasts were to be destroyed ⁶, so that here, in miniature, should be repeated the relation of the irrational to the rational part of the creation, according to which, for the sins of men, the creature is, against its will, made subject to vanity. Analogous is it also, that on the offence of Achan ⁷, beside him and his children, his oxen, asses and sheep were [stoned and] burned with him.”

16. Every one that is left of the nations. God so gives the repentance, even through His visitations, that, in proportion to the largeness of the rebellion and the visitation upon it, shall be the largeness of the conversion. ⁸ Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled. And S. Paul, ⁹ Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles shall be come in; and so all Israel shall be saved. Hitherto prophets had spoken of a ¹⁰ remnant of Jacob, who should return to the mighty God, and should be saved; now, upon this universal rebellion of the heathen, He foretells the conversion of a remnant of the heathen also.

Shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts. There is a harmony between the rebellion and the repentance. The converted shall go to worship God there, where they had striven to exterminate His worshippers. The prophet could only speak of the Gospel under the image of the law. The Feast of Tabernacles has its counterpart, not, like the Pascha or the Pentecost, in any single feast, but in the whole life of the Gospel. It was a thanksgiving for past deliverance; it was a picture of their pilgrim-life from the passage of the Red sea, until the parting of the Jordan opened to them the entrance to their temporary rest in Canaan ¹¹. ¹² In that vast, wide, terrible wilderness, where came against Jerusalem shall even ^ago up from year to year to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, and to keep ^bthe feast of tabernacles.

17 ^cAnd it shall be, that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.
^a Is. 60. 6, 7, 9.
& 66. 23.
^b Lev. 23. 34, 43.
Neh. 8. 14.
Hos. 12. 9.
John 7. 2.
Is. 60. 12.

was no village, house, town, cave, it made itself tents, wherein to sojourn with wives and children, avoiding by day the burning sun, by night damp and cold and hurt from dew; and it was ¹³ a statute for ever in their generations; ye shall dwell in booths seven days; all, that are Israelites born, shall dwell in booths, that your generations may know, that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt.” ¹⁴ Much more truly do Christians keep the feast of tabernacles, not once in the year only, but continually, unceasingly. This is, what S. Peter admonisheth, ¹⁵ Dearly beloved, I beseech you, as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts. And S. Paul often teacheth that we, like Abraham, are strangers on earth, but ¹⁶ citizens of heaven with the saints, and of the household of God. Faith, he says, ¹⁷ is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. By faith Abraham sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise; for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.” ¹⁸ As long as we are in progress, in the course and militant, we dwell in tabernacles, striving with all our mind to pass from the tabernacles to the firm and lasting dwelling-place of the house of God. Whence also holy David said, ¹⁹ I am a stranger with Thee and a sojourner, as all my fathers were. So speaketh he, who is still in Egypt and yet placed in the world. But he who goeth forth out of Egypt, and entereth a desert from vices, holdeth his way and says in the Psalm, ²⁰ I will pass through to the place of the tabernacle of the Wonderful unto the house of God. Whence also he says elsewhere, ²¹ How amiable are Thy dwellings, Thou Lord of hosts; my soul longeth, yea even fainteth for the courts of the Lord; and a little after, ²² Blessed are they who dwell in thy house, they shall be alway praising Thee. ²³ The voice of rejoicing and salvation is in the tabernacles of the righteous. ²⁴ One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord and to enquire in His temple. Whoso dwelleth in such tabernacles, and hastes to go from the tabernacles to the court, and from the court to the house, and from the house to the temple of the Lord, ought to celebrate the feast of Tabernacles &c.” It symbolises how, ²⁵ in the New Testament, Christians, being delivered through Christ from the slavery to sin and satan, and sojourning in this vale of misery, by making progress in virtues go up to the home of the heavenly paradise, the door of glory being open by the merit of the Lord’s Passion, and so the faithful of Christ celebrate the feast of tabernacles; and, after the destruction of Anti-Christ, they will celebrate it the more devoutly, as there will then be among them a fuller fervour of faith.”

17. Whoso will not go up. ²⁶ To those who go not up, he threatens the same punishment as persecutors would

¹ ver. 2. ² Lap. ³ Is. lx. 16, 17. ⁴ Dion.
⁵ Hengst. ⁶ Deut. xiii. 15. ⁷ Josh. vii. 24, 25.
⁸ S. Luke xxi. 24. ⁹ Rom. xi. 25, 26. ¹⁰ Is. x. 21.
¹¹ See ab. at greater length on Hos. xii. 9. p. 70. ¹² S. Jer.

¹³ Lev. xxiii. 41—43. ¹⁴ 1 S. Pet. ii. 11. ¹⁵ Eph. ii. 19.
¹⁶ Heb. xi. 1, 9, 10. ¹⁷ Ps. xxxix. 12.
¹⁸ Ib. xli. 5. Vulg. ¹⁹ Ib. lxxiv. 1. ²⁰ Ib. 4.
²¹ Ib. cxviii. 15. ²² Ib. xxvii. 4. ²³ S. Cyr.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487. unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, even upon them shall be no rain.

† Heb. upon whom there is not.
d Deut. 11. 10. 18 And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, †^d that have no rain; there shall be the plague, wherewith the LORD endure. For enemies, and they who will not love, shall have the same lot. This is, I think, what Christ Himself said, ¹*Whoso is not with Me is against Me, and whoso gathereth not with Me scattereth.*"

Upon them there shall be no rain. Rain was the most essential of God's temporal gifts for the temporal well-being of His people. Moses marked out this, as his people were entering on the promised land, with recent memory of Egypt's independence of rain in Egypt itself, and that this gift depended on obedience. ²*The land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed and wateredst it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs: but a land of hills and valleys,—it drinketh water of the rain of heaven; a land which the Lord thy God careth for; the eyes of the Lord are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year. And it shall be, if ye shall hearken diligently unto My commandments—I will give you the rain of your land in its season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn and thy wine and thine oil. And I will send grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest eat and be full.* But the threat on disobedience corresponded therewith. ³*Take heed to yourselves, Moses continues, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside and serve other gods—and the Lord's wrath be kindled against you, and He shut up the heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit, and ye perish quickly from off the good land, which the Lord giveth you; and, ⁴Thy heaven, that is over thee, shall be brass, and the earth, that is under thee, shall be iron; the Lord shall make the rain of thy land powder and dust.* Amos speaks of the withdrawal of rain as one of God's chastisements⁵: the distress in the time of Ahab is pictured in the history of the woman of Sarepta⁶, and Ahab's directions to Obadiah⁷. But it is also the symbol of spiritual blessings; both are united by Hosea⁸ and Joel⁹, as Joel and Amos also speak of spiritual blessings exclusively under the figure of temporal abundance¹⁰. In Isaiah it is simply a symbol, ¹¹*Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness; let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together.*

18. And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, that have no rain; rather, and there shall not be¹². It may be that the prophet chose this elliptical form, as well knowing that the symbol did not hold as to Egypt, which, however it ultimately depended on the equatorial rains which overflowed the lakes which supply the Nile, did not need that fine arrangement of the rains of Autumn and Spring which were essential to the fruitfulness of Palestine. The omission leaves room for the somewhat prosaic supply of Jonathan, "The Nile shall not ascend to them." More probably the will smite the heathen that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. Before CHRIST

cir. 487.

19 This shall be the || punishment of || Or, sin. Egypt, and the punishment of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles.

words are left undefined with a purposed abruptness, there shall not be upon them, viz. whatever they need: the omission of the symbol in these two verses might the more suggest, that it is a symbol only. Egypt, the ancient oppressor of Israel, is united with Judah as one, in the same worship of God, as Isaiah had said, ¹³*In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria*; and since it is united in the duty, so also in the punishment for despising it.

¹⁴Let not Egypt be proud, that it is watered by the Nile, as if it needed no rain: i. e. let no one be secure in this life. For though we stand by faith, yet may we fall. For although bedewed by the efflux of Divine grace, and filled with its richness, yet if we give not thanks continually for such great gifts, God will count us as the rest, to whom such copious goodness never came. The safety of all then lies in this, that while we are in these tabernacles, we cherish the Divine benefits, and unceasingly praise the Lord, Who hath heaped such benefits upon us."

¹⁵Under the one nation of the Egyptians, he understands those who are greatly deceived, and choose idolatry most unreasonably, to whom it will be a grave inevitable judgement, the pledge of destruction, that they despise the acceptable grace of salvation through Christ. For they are murderers of their own souls, if, when they could lay hold of eternal life and the Divine gentleness, open to all who will choose it and put off the burden of sin, they die in their errors: the stain and pollution from transgression and error uncleansed, although the Divine light illumined all around and called those in darkness to receive sight. Of each of these I would say, ¹⁶*Better is an untimely birth than he; for he cometh in with vanity, and departeth in darkness, and his name shall be covered with darkness.* ¹⁷*Good had it been for them, if they had never been born*, is the Saviour's word. That this is not said of the Egyptians only, but shall come true of all nations, who shall altogether be punished, if they are reckless of the salvation through Christ and honour not His festival, he will establish in these words;

19. This shall be the sin of Egypt and the sin of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. For before the coming of the Saviour, good perhaps had been in part the excuse of the heathen, that they had been called by none. For no one had preached unto them. Wherefore the Saviour also, pointing out this in the Gospel parables, said, ¹⁸*the labourers, called at the eleventh hour, said, No man hath hired us.* But when Christ cast His light upon us, ¹⁹*bound the strong man*, removed from his perverseness those subject to him, justified by faith those who came to Him, laid down His life for the life of all, they will find no sufficient excuse who admit not so reverend a grace. It will be true of the heathen too, if Christ said of them, ²⁰*If I had not come and* upon them," viz. rain at any time; but it is unnatural that, in two consecutive verses, the words should be taken in such divergent senses. The omission of וְלֹא by the LXX., followed so far (as so often) by the Pesh., is supported only by 4 Kenn. MSS., against those in S. Jerome's time, and Symm. Theod. Jon., and is evidently a makeshift, followed by Ewald. ¹³ Is. xix. 24. ¹⁴ Osor. ¹⁵ S. Cyr.

¹⁶ Eccl. vi. 3, 4. ¹⁷ S. Matt. xxvi. 24. ¹⁸ Ib. xx. 7. ¹⁹ Ib. xii. 29. ²⁰ S. John xv. 22.

³ Ib. 16, 17.

¹ S. Luke xi. 23.

⁴ Ib. xxviii. 23, 24.

² De. xi. 10—15.

⁵ Am. iv. 7. See above p. 183.

⁷ Ib. xviii. 5.

⁶ 1 Kgs xvii. 9—16.

⁹ Jo. ii. 23. See ab. pp. 125, 126.

⁸ Hosea vi. 3. See ab. p. 39.

¹⁰ Jo. iii. 18. See ab. pp. 140, 141. Am. ix. 13. See ab. 224, 225.

¹¹ Is. xlv. 8. See also Ib. v. 6, both together Ib. xxx. 23.

¹² The E.V., following Kim., takes וְלֹא as a subordinate clause, "and there is not

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

Or, bridles.
Isai. 23. 18.

20 ¶ In that day shall there be upon the || bells of the horses, * HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD; and the pots in the Lord's house shall be like the bowls before the altar.

21 Yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in spoken unto them, they had not had sin: but now they have no cloke for their sin."

The prophet says sin, not punishment¹, for sin includes the punishment, which is its due, and which it entails: it does not express the punishment, apart from the sin. It was the sin which comprised and involved all other sin, the refusal to worship God as He had revealed Himself, and to turn to Him. It was to say, ²*We will not have Him to reign over us.*

20. In that day there shall be upon the bells³ of the horses, Holiness unto the Lord. He does not say only, that they should be consecrated to God, as Isaiah says of Tyre, ⁴*Her merchandise and her hire shall be holiness to the Lord*; he says that, the bells of the horses, things simply secular, should bear the same inscription as the plate on the high priest's forehead. Perhaps the comparison was suggested by the bells on the high priest's dress⁵; not the lamina only on his forehead, but bells (not as his, which were part of his sacred dress), bells, altogether secular, should be inscribed with the self-same title, whereby he himself was dedicated to God.

Holiness to the Lord. He does not bring down what is sacred to a level with common things, but he uplifts ordinary things, that they too should be sacred, as S. Paul says, ⁶*whether ye eat or drink or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God*.

And the pots of the Lord's house shall be like bowls before the altar. The pots are mentioned, together with other vessels of the Lord's house⁷, but not in regard to any sacred use. They were used, with other vessels, for dressing the victims⁸ for the partakers of the sacrifices. These were to be sacred, like those made for the most sacred use of all, the bowls for sprinkling⁹, whence that sacrificial blood was taken, which was to make the typical atonement.

21. And every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness to the Lord. Everything is to be advanced in holiness. All the common utensils everywhere in the people of God shall not only be holy, but holiness, and capable of the same use as the vessels of the temple.

And there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the Lord of hosts. The actual Canaanite had long since ¹ The E.V. follows Kim. in rendering "punishment." Ges. combines the two in his rendering of עָוֹן, n. 2 "culpam sustinuit," not in his "culpæ poenas dedit." The rendering "shall be guilty" unites sin and punishment in his instances, Ps. xxxiv. 22, 23, Is. xxiv. 6, Jer. ii. 3, Hos. x. 2, [E.V., in the same sense, "shall be found faulty"] xiv. 1 [xiii. 16 Eng.] Pr. xxx. 10, [“be found guilty,” E.V.] So also in עָוֹן Lam. iii. 39, עָוֹן Ib. iv. 6. When the Lord said, It shall be more tolerable in the day of judgement for Sodom and Gomorrah than for that city, He meant, that both guilt and punishment would be greater. In Is. v. 18, עָוֹן, and, Ib. xl. 2, עָוֹן is "sin." So also עָוֹן Is. v. 18, Ps. xxxi. 11.

² S. Luke xix. 14.
³ עָוֹן, אָר. Yet the rendering "bells" has the analogy of עָוֹן 1 Chr. xiii. xv. xvi. xxv. 2 Chr. v. xxix. Ezr. iii. 10, Neh. xii. 27. The other guesses, "bridles" (lxx. Syr.),

Judah shall be holiness unto the Lord of hosts: and all they that sacrifice shall come and take of them, and seethe therein: and in that day there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the Lord of hosts.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 487.

¹ Isai. 35. 8.
Joel 3. 17.
Rev. 21. 27.
& 22. 15.
² Eph. 2. 19, 20, 21, 22.

ceased to be; the Gibeonites, the last remnant of them, had been absorbed among the people of God. But all Israel were not of Israel. Isaiah had called its princes and people, ¹⁰*rulers of Sodom, people of Gomorrah*. Ezekiel had said, ¹¹*Thus saith the Lord God unto Jerusalem; Thy birth and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan; thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother a Hittite*. Hosea used at least the term of two-fold meaning, ¹²*Canaan, in whose hands are the balances of deceit*; and Zephaniah, ¹³*All the people of Canaan are destroyed*. After the time of the Canon, Daniel is introduced saying, ¹⁴*O thou seed of Canaan and not of Judah*. Ezekiel had spoken of ungodly priests, not only as uncircumcised in heart (according to the language of Deuteronomy¹⁵), but uncircumcised in flesh also, altogether alien from the people of God¹⁶. The prophet then speaks, as Isaiah, ¹⁷*It shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it*, and Joel, ¹⁸*then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no strangers pass through her any more*. This shall have its full fulfilment in the time of the end. ¹⁹*There shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination or a lie; and, without are dogs and sorcerers and whoremongers and murderers and idolaters, and whatsoever loveth and maketh a lie*.

²⁰Although born of the blood of Israel, those of old eagerly imitated the alien Canaanites. But after that the Only-Begotten Word of God came among us, and, having justified by faith, sealed with the Holy Spirit, those who came to His grace, our mind hath been steadfast, unshaken, fixed in piety. Nor will any one persuade those who are sanctified, to honour any other god save Him Who is, by nature and in truth, God, Whom we have known in Christ. For in Himself He hath shewn us the Father, saying, ²¹*He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father*. Wherefore in that day, i. e. at that time, he says, there shall be no Canaanite, i. e. alien and idolater, in the house of the Lord Almighty. ²²But may the Almighty God bring the saying true at this time also, that no Canaanite should be seen among us, but that all should live according to the Gospel-laws, and await that blessed hope and the appearance of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ, with Whom be glory to the Father with the Holy Ghost, now and ever and to endless ages. Amen.²³

"trappings of horses" [Jon.] or "warlike ornaments" (S. Jerome's Jewish teacher) have none; the עָוֹן of Aq. and περίπαιον ὄσκιον of Symm. (as from עָוֹן) give no meaning, ⁴ Is. xxiii. 18. ⁵ עָוֹן Ex. xxviii. 34, xxxix. 25, 26, used of it only, and there only.

⁷ Ez. xxxviii. 3, 1 Kgs vii. 45, 2 Kgs xxv. 14, 2 Chr. iv. 11, 16, Jer. lii. 13, 19. ⁸ 2 Chr. xxxv. 13. ⁹ עָוֹן 1 Cor. x. 31.
¹⁰ Is. i. 10. ¹¹ Ezek. xvi. 3. ¹² Hosea xii. 7. See ab. p. 78.
¹³ Zeph. i. 11. See ab. p. 451. ¹⁴ Hist. of Sus. ver. 56.
¹⁵ Deut. x. 16, xxx. 6. ¹⁶ Ezek. xliv. 7. ¹⁷ Is. xxxv. 8.
¹⁸ Joel iii. 17. See ab. p. 140. ¹⁹ Rev. xxi. 27, xxii. 15.
²⁰ S. Cyr. ²¹ S. John xiv. 9. ²² Theod.

INTRODUCTION

TO

THE PROPHET

MALACHI.

THE last prophet of the Old Testament, like the Forerunner of our Lord, whom he foreannounced under his own name, "the messenger of the Lord," willed to be but "the voice of one crying in the wilderness;" as his great successor, who took up his message, when asked, Who art thou? What sayest thou of thyself? said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord. He mentions neither his parentage, nor birthplace, nor date; nor did he add the name of his office^c, and has left it to be guessed, whether the name under which he is known, was the name which he bore among men; so wholly did he will to be hidden. No one before him is recorded to have borne his name. It may be that he framed it for himself, and willed to be known only as what it designated, "the messenger of the Lord." This was a favourite title with him, since, in this brief prophecy, he uses it, as describing the priest's office, and that of the forerunner^d; whereas, before him, except once by Haggai and once by Isaiah^e, it had been used only of the blessed Angels.

There is, however, no ground to think that it was not his name. Even the Seventy, who paraphrase it, "His messenger," prefix to the book the name Malachi; and the title, "my messenger," would not have described that he was "the messenger of God," since the name of God had not preceded. "If names are to be interpreted," S. Jerome says, "and history is to be framed from them, not a spiritual meaning to be derived, then Hosea who is called Saviour, and Joel whose name means, 'Lord God,' and the other prophets will not be men, but rather angels or the Lord and Saviour, according to the meaning of their name." No special stress was laid upon the name, even by the Origenists, who supposed Haggai Malachi and S. John Baptist to have been angels^f. Origen himself supposed S. John Baptist to have been an angel in human form^g, and Melchisedek^h, as well as Malachi. More widely, that "they became the words in the prophets."

At the time of our Lord, some accounted him to have been Ezra, perhaps for his zeal for the law. His date must, however, have been later, since there is no mention of the building of the temple, whose service was in its regular order. In the New Testament, like others of the twelve, he is cited without his name^k, or the substance of his prophecy, is spoken of or alluded to, without any reference to any human author^l; so entirely was his wish to remain hidden fulfilled.

Yet he probably bore a great part in the reformation, in which Nehemiah coöperated outwardly, and to effect which, after he had, on the expiring of his 12 years of office^m, returned to Persia, he obtained leave to visit his own land againⁿ, apparently for a short time. For he mentions his obtaining that leave, in connection with abuses at Jerusalem, which had taken place in his absence, and which he began reforming, forthwith on his arrival. But three chief abuses, the neglect of God's service, the defilement of the priesthood and of their covenant, and the cruelty to their own Jewish wives, divorcing them to make way for idolatresses, are subjects of Malachi's reproofs. Nehemiah found these practices apparently rampant. It is not then probable that they had been, before, the subjects of Malachi's denunciation, nor were his own energetic measures probably fruitless, so that there should be occasion for these denunciations afterwards. It remains, then, as the most probable, that Malachi, as the prophet, coöperated with Nehemiah, as the civil authority, as Haggai and Zechariah had with Zerubbabel. "So Isaiah coöperated with Hezekiah; Jeremiah with Josiah. Of a mere external reformation there is no instance" in Jewish history.

It does not appear, whether Nehemiah, on his return, was invested by the king of Persia with extraordinary authority for these reforms, or whether he was appointed as their governor. The brief account affords no scope for the mention of it. It is not then any objection to the contemporaneity of Malachi and Nehemiah, that, whereas Nehemiah, while governor, required not the bread of the governor, i. e. the allowance granted him by the Persian government, as an impost upon the people, Malachi upbraids the people that they would not offer to their governor the poor things which they offered to Almighty God, or that the governor would not accept it, in that it would be an insult rather than an act of respect. For 1) the question in Malachi is of a free-offering, not of an impost; 2) Nehemiah says that he did not require it, not that he would not accept it; 3) there is no evidence that he was now governor, nor 4) any reason why he should not accept in their improved condition, what he did not require, because the bondage was heavy upon this people. Pre-

* ^{אֶלְעָזָר}, the extremest abridgement of the fuller form, ^{בֶּזַלְעֵל}, as ^{אֶלְיָהוּ}, Bezaleel's father (and two others) for ^{אֶלְיָהוּ}, 'Uriah' or ^{אֶלְיָהוּ}, Urijah the prophet Jer. xxvi. 20. sq. The same person ^{אֶלְיָהוּ} 2 Kgs xviii. 2 is ^{אֶלְיָהוּ} in 2 Chr. xxix. 1; ^{אֶלְיָהוּ} (the name of 11 persons) is doubtless abridged from ^{אֶלְיָהוּ}.

^c Habakkuk and Haggai add the title of their office, "the prophet." Hab. i. 1. Hagg. i. 1. ^d Mal. ii. 7, iii. 1. ^e Hagg. i. 13, Is. xlii. 19. ^f Præf. ad Mal. T. i. p. 339 Vall.

^g Id. on Hagg. i. 13 p. 751 Vall.

^h Orig. Comm. in S. Joan. T. ii. n. 25. Opp. iv. 85 de la Rue.

ⁱ S. Jer. Ep. 73 ad Evang. n. 2.

^j In Matt. Tom. ii. n. 30. Opp. iii. 549.

^k "It is written." S. Matt. xi. 10. S. Luke vii. 27, or, with Isaiah, "in the prophets," S. Mark i. 2.

^l S. Luke i. 17, 76. S. Matt. xvii. 10, S. John i. 21.

^m Neh. v. 14.

ⁿ Ib. xiii. 6.

^o Hengst. Christ. iii. 583.

^p Neh. v. 18.

sents were, as they are still, a common act of courtesy in the East.

Like S. John Baptist, though afar off, he prepared the way of the Lord by the preaching of repentance. More than other prophets, he unveils priests and people to themselves, interprets their thoughts to them, and puts those thoughts in abrupt naked language, picturing them as demurring to every charge which he brought against them. They were not, doubtless, conscious hypocrites. For conscious hypocrisy is the sin of individuals, aping the graces which others possess and which they have not, yet wish to be held in estimation for having. Here, it is the mass which is corrupt. The true Israel are the exception; ^a those who feared the Lord, the jewels of Almighty God. It is the hypocrisy of self-deceit, contented with poor, limited, outward service, and pluming itself upon it. Malachi unfolds to them the meaning of their acts. His thesis is themselves, whom he unfolds to them. He interprets himself, putting into their mouths words, betokening a simple unconsciousness either of God's goodness or their own evil. ^b Yet ye say, Wherein hast Thou loved us? This was their inward thought, as it is the thought of all, ungrateful to God. But his characteristic is, that he puts these thoughts into abrupt, bold bad words, which might startle them for their hideousness, as if he would say, "This is what your acts mean." He exhibits the worm and the decay, which lay under the whited exterior. ^c Ye say, Wherein have we despised Thy Name? Perhaps, they were already learning, not to pronounce the proper Name of God, while they caused it to be despised. Or they pronounced it with reverent pause, while they shewed that they held cheap God and His service. ^d Ye say, The table of the Lord is contemptible. ^e Ye say, the table of the Lord is polluted; and the fruit thereof, his meat, is contemptible. Their acts said it. What a reading of thoughts! ^f Ye said also, Behold, what a weariness! It is the language of the heart in all indevotion. ^g Ye say, Wherefore? as if innocently unconscious of the ground of God's judgement. ^h Wherein have we robbed Thee? The language of those who count the earth as their own. ⁱ Ye say, Wherein have we wearied Him? When ye say, Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the Lord, and in them doth He delight, or, Where is the God of judgement? The heart's speech in all envy at the prosperity of the wicked!

Yet the object of all this unfolding them to themselves, is their repentance. We have already the self-righteousness of the Pharisees, and the Sadducees' denial of God's Providence. And we have already the voice of S. John Baptist, of the wrath to come. They professed to ^k delight in the coming of the messenger of the covenant; yet their deeds were such as would be burned up with the fire of His Coming, not, rewarded.

Pharisees and Sadducees are but two offshoots of the same ungodliness; Pharisees, while they hoped by outward acts to be in favour with God, they become, at least, secret Sadducees, when the hope fails. First, they justify themselves. God had said to them, ^l Ye are departed out of the way: I have made you base, as ye have not kept My ways. They say ^m, It is vain to serve God; and what profit, that we have kept His ordinance? (affirming that they had done, what God called them to repentance for not doing). God said ⁿ, Ye have covered the altar of the Lord with tears, the tears of your wronged wives; they insist on their own austerities, ^o we have walked mournfully before the Lord our God. Then comes the Sadducee portion. God had called them to obedience and said, ^p Prove Me now herewith: they say, ^q the workers of wickedness have proved God, and are saved. God promised, ^r All nations shall call you blessed; they answer, ^s and now we call the proud blessed. What have we spoken against Thee? is the last self-justifying question, which Malachi records of them; and this, while reproaching God for the uselessness of serving Him, and choosing the lot of those who rejected Him.

Thereon Malachi abandons this class to their own blindness. There was hope amid any sin, however it rebelled against God. This was a final denial of God's Providence and rejection of Himself. So Malachi closes with the same prophecy, with which S. John Baptist prepared our Lord's coming, His ^t fan is in His hand, and He will thoroughly purge His floor, and will gather the wheat into His garner, but the chaff He shall burn with fire unquenchable. The unspeakable tenderness of God towards those who fear His name, and the severity to those who finally rebel, are perhaps nowhere more vividly declared, than in these closing words of the Old Testament. Yet the love of God, as ever, predominates; and the last prophet closes with the word "Remember," and with one more effort to avert the curse which they were bringing upon themselves. Yet no prophet declares more expressly the rejection of the people, to whom he came to minister, the calling of the Gentiles, the universal worship, in all the earth, of Him Who was hitherto worshipped by the Jews only; and that, not at Jerusalem, but each offering, in his own place, the sacrifice which hitherto (as they had recently experienced, in their captivity at Babylon) could be offered up in Jerusalem only. To him alone it was reserved to prophesy of the unbloody Sacrifice, which should be offered unto God in every place throughout the world from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof. It has been said, "Malachi is like a late evening, which closes a long day, but he is at the same time the morning twilight which bears in its bosom a glorious day."

"When Prophecy was to be withdrawn from the ancient Church of God, its last light was mingled with the rising beams of the Sun of Righteousness. In one view it combined a retrospect of the Law with the clearest specific signs of the Gospel advent. ^v Remember ye the law of Moses My servant, which I commanded him in Horeb, for all Israel, with the statutes and the judgements. Behold I will send you Elijah the prophet, before the great and dreadful day of the Lord. Prophecy had been the oracle of Judaism and of Christianity, to uphold the authority of the one, and reveal the promise of the other. And now its latest admonitions were like those of a faithful departing minister, embracing and summing up his duties. Resigning its charge to the personal Precursor of Christ, it expired with the Gospel upon its lips."

A school, which regards the "prophets" chiefly as "poets," says that "the language is prosaic, and manifests the decaying spirit of prophecy." The office of the prophets was, to convey in forceful words, which God gave them, His message to His people. The poetic form was but an accident. God, Who knows the hearts of His creatures whom He has made, knows better than we, why He chose such an instrument. Zechariah, full of imagination, He chose some years before. But He

^a Mal. iii. 16. ^b i. 2. ^c i. 6. ^d Ib. 7. ^e Ib. and 12.
^f Ib. 13. ^g ii. 14. ^h iii. 8. ⁱ ii. 17. ^j iii. 1. iv. 1.

^k ii. 8, 9. ^l iii. 14. ^m ii. 13. ⁿ iii. 10. ^o יקראו אתכם
^p iii. 15. ^q יקראו אתכם
^r iii. 15. ^s יקראו אתכם
^t iii. 15. ^u יקראו אתכם
^v iii. 15. ^w יקראו אתכם

These last contrasts are Hengstenberg's Christ. iii. 597. ed. 2.

^a S. Luke iii. 17.

^b Nägelsbach in Herzog Real-Encycl.

^c Davison on prophecy pp. 456, 457. "Malachi, the last of the prophets, as in order, so in time; and even for that reason, by me chosen to fix my thoughts on, before others, because nearest, therefore, in conjunction with the Gospel; to which it leads us by the hand, and delivers us over; for that begins, where he ends." Pococke, Dedication. ^d iv. 4.

preserved in history the account of the words which Zechariah spoke, not the words wherewith he urged the rebuilding of the temple, in his own book. Had Malachi spoken in imaginative language, like that of Ezekiel, to whom God says, "thou art unto them like a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice and can play well on an instrument, and they hear thy words and they do them not," it may be that they would have acted then, as they did in the time of Ezekiel. It may be, that times like those of Malachi, apathetic, self-justifying, murmuring, self-complacent, needed a sterner, abrupter, more startling voice to awaken them. Wisdom was justified of her children. God wrought by him a reformation for the time being: He gave through him a warning to the generation, when our Lord should come, that He should come, as their Judge as well as their Saviour, and, how they should stand in the day of His Coming. He gave it as a book to His whole Church, whereby to distinguish seeming from real service. Parting words are always solemn, as closing the past, and opening out a future of expectation before us. The position of Malachi, as the last of the prophets, bids us the more solemnly prepare for that dread Day, our Lord's Second Coming, which he foretold, in one with the First, warning us that we deceive not ourselves, in unconsciousness of our own evil and remembrance of our seeming good, until He profess unto us, "I never knew you; depart from Me, ye that work iniquity."

^a Ezek. xxxiii. 32.

^b S. Matt. vii. 23.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

CHAPTER I.

1 Malachi complaineth of Israel's unkindness, 6 Of their irreligiousness, 12 and profaneness.

† Heb.
by the hand
of Malachi.
^a Deut. 7. 8.
& 10. 15.

THE burden of the word of the LORD to Israel † by Malachi.

2 ^a I have loved you, saith the LORD.

CHAP. I. 1. The burden of the word of the Lord to Israel. "The word of the Lord is heavy, because it is called a burden, yet it hath something of consolation, because it is not 'against,' but to Israel. For it is one thing when we write to this or that person; another, when we write 'against' this or that person; the one being the part of friendship, the other, the open admission of enmity."

By the hand of Malachi; through him, as the instrument of God, deposited with him; as S. Paul speaks of ² the dispensation of the Gospel, ³ the word of reconciliation, ⁴ the Gospel of the uncircumcision, being committed to him.

2. I have loved you, saith the Lord. What a volume of God's relations to us in two simple words, I have loved you ⁵. So would not God speak, unless He still loved. "I have loved and do love you," is the force of the words. When? and since when? In all eternity God loved; in all our past, God loved. Tokens of His love, past or present, in good or seeming ill, are but an effluence of that everlasting love. He, the Unchangeable, ever loved, as the Apostle of love says; ⁶ we love Him, because He first loved us. The deliverance from the bondage of Egypt, the making them His ⁷ peculiar people, the adoption, the covenant, the giving of the law, the service of God and His promises, all the several mercies involved in these, the feeding with manna, the deliverance from their enemies whenever they returned to Him, their recent restoration, the gift of the prophets, were so many single pulses of God's everlasting love, uniform in itself, manifold in its manifestations. But it is more than a declaration of His everlasting love. "I have loved you;" God would say; with ⁸ a special love, a more than ordinary love, with greater tokens of love, than to others. So God brings to the penitent soul the thought of its ingratitude: I have loved you: I, you.

¹ S. Jer.

² 1 Cor. ix. 17, Tit. i. 3.

³ 2 Cor. v. 19.

⁴ Gal. ii. 7. 1 Tim. i. 18.

⁵ אהבתי אֶתְכֶם.

⁶ 1 S. John iv. 19.

⁷ Rom. ix. 4.

⁸ פֶּחַד.

⁹ Ps. lxxviii. 11.

¹⁰ Ib. cvi. 13.

¹¹ Lap.

¹² Gen. xxv. 23.

¹³ Ib. xxix. 31.

¹⁴ נִחַם, in this fem. form, is but a variation from the form elsewhere, נִחַם, as we have נִחַם and נִחַם, Ewald. Lehrb. n. 147b. p. 453. ed. 8. Ges.'s rendering "dwellings" (after the

Yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the LORD: yet ^b I loved Jacob,

3 And I hated Esau, and ^c laid his mountains and his heritage waste for the dragons of the wilderness.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

^b Rom. 9. 13.

^c Jer. 49. 18.
Ezek. 35. 3.
4, 7, 9, 14, 15.
Obad. 10, &c.

And ye have said, Wherein hast Thou loved us? It is a characteristic of Malachi to exhibit in all its nakedness man's ingratitude. This is the one voice of all men's murmurings, ignoring all God's past and present mercies, in view of the one thing which He withholds; though they dare not put it into words: Wherein hast Thou loved us? ⁹ Within a while they forgot His works, and the wonders that He had shewed them: ¹⁰ they made haste, they forgot His works.

Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the Lord: and I loved Jacob, and Esau have I hated. "While they were yet in their mother's womb, before any good or evil deserts of either, God said to their mother, ¹² The elder shall serve the younger. The hatred was not a proper and formed hatred, (for God could not hate Esau before he sinned) but only a lesser love," which, in comparison to the great love for Jacob, seemed as if it were not love. "So he says, ¹³ The Lord saw that Leah was hated; where Jacob's neglect of Leah, and lesser love than for Rachel, is called 'hatred;' yet Jacob did not literally hate Leah, whom he loved and cared for as his wife." This greater love was shewn in preferring the Jews to the Edomites, giving to the Jews His law, Church, temple, prophets, and subjecting Edom to them; and especially in the recent deliverance. "He does not speak directly of predestination, but of prælection to temporal goods." God gave both nations alike over to the Chaldees for the punishment of their sins; but the Jews He brought back, Edom He left unrestored.

3. And I made his mountains a waste, and his heritage for the jackals ¹⁴ of the wilderness. Malachi attests the first stage of fulfilment of Joel's prophecy, ¹⁵ Edom shall be a desolate wilderness. In temporal things, Esau's blessing was identical with Jacob's; the fatness of the earth and of the dew of heaven

LXX. δώματα ἐρημούν, and Syr.) fails in many ways. The Arab دُور which he, after Pococke, compares, is a noun actionis, "a remaining, staying, dwelling, abiding [in a country, town, place], not "the dwelling" itself. 2) he supposes דִּיּוּר to be = דְּוּרָא (with dag. forte euphon.) as דְּוּרָא for דְּוּרָא, דְּוּרָא for דְּוּרָא, (see Röd. in Ges. Thes.) But this would be to derive it from דִּיּוּר, with the characteristics of דִּיּוּר and none of דִּיּוּר. 3) "dwellings of the wilderness," is the contradictory of what is meant, complete desolation. ¹⁵ Joel iii. 19. See ab. pp. 144, 145.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

4 Whereas Edom saith, We are impoverished, but we will return and build the desolate places; thus saith the LORD of hosts, They shall build, but I will throw down; and they shall call them, The border of wickedness, and, The people against from above; and the rich soil on the terraces of its mountain-sides, though yielding nothing now except a wild beautiful vegetation, and its deep glens, attest what they once must have been, when artificially watered and cultivated. The first desolation must have been through Nebuchadnezzar¹ in his expedition against Egypt, when he subdued Moab and Ammon; and Edom lay in his way, as Jeremiah had foretold².

4. Whereas Edom saith³, We are impoverished⁴, or, more probably, we were crushed. Either gives an adequate sense. Human self-confidence will admit anything, as to the past; nay, will even exaggerate past evil to itself; "Crush us how they may, we will arise and repair our losses." So Ephraim said of old, "in the pride and stoutness of heart, The bricks are fallen down, but we will build with hewn-stones: the sycamores are cut down, but we will change them into cedars." It is the one language of what calls itself, "indomitable;" in other words, "untameable," conquerors or every other gambler; "we will repair our losses." All is again staked and lost.

They shall call them the border of wickedness. Formerly it had its own proper name, the border of Edom, as other countries, all the border of Egypt, the border of Moab, the whole border of Israel, the border of Israel, the whole border of the Amorite. Henceforth it should be known no more by its own name; but as the border of wickedness, where wickedness formerly dwelt, and hence the judgement of God and desolation from Him came upon it, "an accursed land." Somewhat in like way Jeremiah says of Jerusalem, Many nations shall pass by this city, and they shall say, every man to his neighbour, Wherefore hath the Lord done this unto this great city? Then they shall answer, Because they have forsaken the covenant of the Lord their God, and worshipped other gods and served them. Only Israel would retain its name, as it has; Edom should be blotted out wholly and for ever.

5. And your eyes shall see. Malicious pleasure in looking on at the misery of Judæa and Jerusalem, had been a special sin of Edom; now God would shew Judah the fruit of its reversal, and His goodness towards themselves. "Ye have assurance of His love towards you and providence over you, when ye see that ye are returned to your own land, and can inhabit it, but they cannot do this: but they build and I throw down, and ye therefore praise and magnify My name for this, and ye shall say, The Lord shall be magnified on the border of Israel, i.e. His greatness shall be always manifest upon you;" high above and exalted over the border of Israel⁵, which shall retain its name, while Edom shall have ceased to be. Wickedness gives its name to Edom's border, as in Zechariah's vision it was removed and settled in Babylon⁶.

¹ Jos. Ant. x. 11. See ab. on Obad. 16. p. 242. ² Jer. xxv. 9, 21.

³ עֲדוֹם, Edom, for Idumæa, and so fem.

⁴ So Jon. and Syr. here. κατέστραπται, LXX: destructi sumus, Vulg. R. Tanchum gives both, here and on Jer. v. 17, and Sal. b. Mel. here out of Kim. on Jer. v. 17. Poc. On Jerem., Tanchum says the meaning "cut off" suits best the mention of the sword. Perhaps עָרַר may be = עָרַר, and עָרַר, "Tarshish," may be so called, as a boast, "she crushes." Syr., in Jerem. also has "impoverished;" Jon. "destroy;" S. Jer. "conteret." The ἀλοήσονται of the LXX. probably implies a misreading, עָרַר.

⁵ Is. ix. 9, 10.

⁶ Ex. x. 14, 19.

⁷ De. ii. 18.

⁸ 1 Sam. xi. 3, 7, xxvii. 1, 1 Chr. xxi. 12.

⁹ 2 Chr. xi. 13.

¹⁰ Jud. xi. 22.

whom the LORD hath indignation for ever.

5 And your eyes shall see, and ye shall say, ^dThe LORD will be magnified || † from the border of Israel.

6 ¶ A son ^ehonoureth his father, and a servant his master: if then I be a father,

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

^d Ps. 35. 27.
|| Or, upon.
† Heb.
from upon.
^e Ex. 20. 12.
^f Luke 6. 46.

6. A son honoureth his father, and a slave his lord. Having spoken of the love of God, he turns to the thanklessness of man. God appeals to the first feelings of the human heart, the relation of parent and child, or, failing this, to the natural self-interest of those dependent on their fellow-men. A son by the instinct of nature, by the unwritten law written in the heart, honoureth his father. If he fail to do so, he is counted to have broken the law of nature, to be an unnatural son. If he is, what by nature he ought to be, he does really honour him. He does not even speak of love, as to which they might deceive themselves. He speaks of honour, outward reverence only; which whoso sheweth not, would openly condemn himself as an unnatural son, a bad slave. "Of course," the Jews would say, "children honour parents, and slaves their masters, but what is that to us?" God turns to them their own mental admission,

If I am a Father. "¹⁵Although, before ye were born, I began to love you in Jacob as sons, yet choose by what title ye will name Me: I am either your Father or your Lord. If a Father, render me the honour due to a father, and offer the piety worthy of a parent. If a Lord, why despise ye Me? why fear ye not your Lord?" God was their Father by creation, as He is Father of all, as Creator of all. He had come to be their Father in a nearer way, by temporal redemption and adoption as His peculiar people, creating them to be a nation to His glory. This they were taught to confess in their psalmody, ¹⁶*He hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are His people and the sheep of His pasture.* This title God had given them in sight of the Egyptians, ¹⁷*Israel is My son, My firstborn: of this Hosea reminded them; ¹⁸When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called My son out of Egypt; and Jeremiah reassured them, ¹⁹I am a Father to Israel and Ephraim is My first-born: this, Isaiah had pleaded to God; ²⁰Doubtless Thou art our Father, though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledge us not. Thou, O Lord, art our Father, our Redeemer, Thy name is from everlasting. ²¹And now, O Lord, Thou art our Father; we the clay, and Thou our potter; and we all, the work of Thy hands.* God had impressed this His relation of Father, in Moses' prophetic warning; ²²*Do ye thus requite the Lord, O foolish people and unwise? Is not He thy Father that hath bought thee? hath He not made thee and established thee?*" ²³God is the Father of the faithful; 1) by creation; 2) by preservation and governance; 3) by alimony; 4) by fatherly care and providence; 5) by faith and grace, whereby He justifies and adopts us as sons and heirs of His kingdom."

If I am a Father. He does not throw doubt, that He is ¹¹ Jer. xxii. 8, 9. Comp. Dent. xxix. 23—28.

¹² Tanchum in Poc. here. Tanchum gives, as constructions of others, "the Lord, Who protecteth the border of Israel," or "ye from the border of Israel," or, "it had been fitting that ye should do this and abide in it: but ye have done the contrary," as he explains afterwards.

¹³ עֵל, as in Eccl. v. 7, נָחַל עֵל נָחַל "One high from above the high;" Ezek. i. 25, "a voice from the firmament (עֵל) from above their heads," Gen. i. 7, "the waters above the firmament."

¹⁴ Zech. v. 8, 11.

¹⁵ S. Jer.

¹⁶ Ps. c. 3.

¹⁷ Ex. iv. 22.

¹⁸ Hos. xi. 1. See ab. p. 70.

¹⁹ Jer. xxxi. 9.

²⁰ Is. lxiii. 16.

²¹ Ib. lxiv. 8.

²² Deut. xxxii. 6.

²³ Lap.

Before CHRIST
cir. 397.

where is mine honour? and if I be a master,
where is my fear? saith the LORD of hosts unto you, O priests, that despise my name.

our Father; but, by disobedience, we in deeds deny it. Our life denies what we in words profess. Where is My honour? "Why obey ye not My precepts, nor honour Me with acts of adoration; praying, praising, giving thanks, sacrificing, and reverently fulfilling every work of God? For ² cursed is he that doeth the work of the Lord deceitfully."

And if I am your Lord, "as I certainly am, and specially by singular providence." "He is our Lord by the same titles, that He is our Father, and by others, as that He has redeemed us, and purchased us to Himself by the Blood of His Son; that He is the Supreme Majesty, Whom all creation is bound to serve; that, setting before us the reward of eternal glory, He has hired us as servants and labourers into His vineyard." God Alone is Lord through universal sovereignty, underived authority, and original source of laws, precepts, rights; and all other lords are but as ministers and instruments, compared to Him, the Lord and original Doer of all. Hence He says, ⁴ I am the Lord; that is My Name, and My glory will I not give to another."

Where is My fear? which ought to be shewn Me. "If thou art a servant, render to the Lord the service of fear; if a son, shew to thy Father the feeling of piety. But thou renderest not thanks, neither lovest nor fearest God. Thou art then either a contumacious servant or a proud son." "Fear includes reverence, adoration, sacrifice, the whole worship of God." "Whoso feareth is not over-curious, but adores; is not inquisitive, but praises, and glorifies."

"Fear is twofold; servile, whereby punishment, not fault, is dreaded; filial, by which fault is feared. In like way service is twofold. A servant with a service of fear, purely servile, does not deserve to be called a son of God, nor is in a state of salvation, not having love. Whence Christ, distinguishing such a servant from a son of God by adoption, saith, ⁷ The servant abideth not in the house for ever, but the son abideth ever: and again, ⁸ The servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth. But a servant, whose service is of pure and filial love, is also a son, of whom the Saviour saith, ⁹ Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. But since a distinction is made here between the son and the servant, he seems to be speaking of servile fear, which, although it doth not good well and meritoriously, i.e. with a right intention and from love, yet withdraws from ill, and is the beginning of wisdom, because it disposeth to grace. Whence it is written, ¹⁰ The fear of the Lord driveth away sins, and again Scripture saith, ¹¹ By the fear of the Lord men depart from evil."

"God requireth to be feared as a Lord, honoured as a Father, loved as a Husband. Which is chiefest of these? Love. Without this, fear has torment, honour has no grace. Fear, when not enforced by love, is servile. Honour, which cometh

¹ Dion.

³ Lap.

⁵ Lap. as from S. Ambr.

⁶ S. Chrys. de Incompr. Dei. Hom. ii. T. i. p. 459. Ben.

⁷ S. John viii. 35.

⁸ Ib. xv. 15.

⁹ S. Matt. xxv. 21, 23.

¹⁰ Eccles. i. 21.

¹¹ Pr. xvi. 6.

¹² S. Bern. Serm. 83 in Cant. n. 4. Opp. i. 1560 Ben. Lap.

¹³ Lap.

¹⁴ Hos. iv. 9.

¹⁵ Gen. iv. 9.

¹⁶ S. Matt. vii. 22, 23.

¹⁷ Ib. xxv. 44, 46.

¹⁸ The collocation of כַּנִּשְׁתָּה is probably subordinate to the verb, expressed in the question, ye despise, offering; as the participle often is to the expressed finite verb. Nu. xxvi. 27. Jud. viii. 4. Ps. vii. 3. lxxviii. 4. Job xiv. 20, xxiv. 5, Ezr. x. 1, Jer. xliii. 2 (instances out of

And ye say, Wherein have we despised thy name?

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

7 || Ye offer ^b polluted bread upon mine

^c ch. 2, 14, 17.
& 3, 7, 8, 13.

|| Or, Bring unto, &c.

^d Deut. 15. 21.

not from love, is not honour, but adulation. Honour and glory belong to God Alone; but neither of them will God accept, unless seasoned with the honey of love."

Saith the Lord unto you, O priests, who despise My Name, lit. despisers of My Name, habitually beyond others. The contempt of God came specially from those bound most to honour him. Priests, as consecrated to God, belonged especially to God. "Malachi begins his prophecy and correction by the correction of the priests; because the reformation of the state and of the laity hangs upon the reformation of the clergy and the priest; for ¹⁴ as is the priest, such also is the people." He turns, with a suddenness which must have been startling to them, to them as the centre of the offending.

And ye say, Wherein have we despised Thy Name? Before, it was ignorance of God's love: now it is ignorance of self and of sin. They affect to themselves innocence and are unconscious of any sin. They said to themselves doubtless, (as many do now) "we cannot help it; we do the best we can, under the circumstances." Without some knowledge of God's love, there can be no sense of sin; without some sense of sin, no knowledge of His love. They take the defensive, they are simply surprised, like Cain, ¹⁵ Am I my brother's keeper? or many of the lost in the Day of judgement, ¹⁶ Many will say to Me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy Name? and in Thy Name have cast out devils? and in Thy Name done many wonderful works? and yet were all the while workers of iniquity, to whom He will say, I never knew you: and, ¹⁷ Lord, when saw we Thee an hungred, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto Thee? And yet they shall go away into everlasting punishment.

7. Offering polluted bread upon Mine altar. This, continuing on the words, *despisers of My Name*¹⁸, is the answer to their question, Wherein have we despised Thy Name? Bread might stand, in itself, either for the shew-bread, or for the "minchah," meal-offering, which was the necessary accompaniment of sacrifices and sometimes the whole. But here the polluted bread cannot be the shewbread, since this was not put upon the altar, but upon its own table; and although the altar is, as here, also called "a table"¹⁹ in regard to the sacrifice hereon consumed, "the table" of the shewbread is nowhere called "altar." The prophet then means by bread, either the meal-offering, as representing the sacrifice, or the offerings by fire altogether, as in Ezekiel, ²⁰ When ye offer My bread, the fat and the blood; and in Leviticus, ²¹ the offerings of the Lord, made by fire, the bread of their God, do they offer; and of the *peace-offering*²², the priest shall burn it upon the altar; the bread of the offering made by fire unto the Lord: and specifically, of animals with blemish, as these, it is forbidden, ²³ Neither from a stranger's hand shall ye offer the chase in Ewald Lehrb. § 341. b 3, p. 836. ed. 8.) This case is however more developed than the rest, as not being contemporaneous only, but an explanation of that expressed by the finite verb. הָנִיחַ is used with ל, of offerings to God, Am. v. 25, Mal. ii. 12; with עָל, here only.

¹⁹ In Ezek. xli. 22, the "altar" is called the table that is before the Lord, and in regard to the offering of the sacrifice, it is said, they shall come near to my table, Ezek. xli. 15, 16.

²⁰ Ezek. xli. 7.

²¹ Lev. xxi. 6: more briefly, the bread of thy God, ib. 8, of his God, ib. 17 and (parallel with to offer the offerings of the Lord made by fire,) 21; to eat the bread of his God (in contrast with offering it) ib. 22, and in Nu. xxxiii. 2, "thy offering, thy bread for thy sacrifices made by fire, shall ye observe to offer to Me." ²² Lev. iii. 11. ²³ Ib. xxii. 25.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

¹ Ezek. 41. 22.

ver. 12.

² Lev. 22. 22.

Deut. 15. 21.

ver. 14.

[†] Heb. to sacrifice.

altar; and ye say, Wherein have we polluted thee? In that ye say, ¹The table of the LORD is contemptible.

8 And ²if ye offer the blind [†]for sacrifice, is it not evil? and if ye offer the lame and sick, is it not evil? offer it now unto thy governor; will he be pleased with thee, or ³accept thy person? saith the LORD of hosts.

9 And now, I pray you, beseech [†]God [†]that he will be gracious unto us: ⁴this hath been [†]by your means: will he regard

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

¹ Job 42. 8.

[†] Heb. the face of God.

⁴ Hos. 13. 9.

[†] Heb. from your hand.

bread of your God of any of these, because their corruption is in them, blemishes in them: they shall not be accepted for you. It was, as it were, a feast of God with man, and what was withdrawn from the use of man by fire, was, as it were, consumed by God, to Whom it was offered.

It was polluted, in that it was contrary to the law of God which forbade to sacrifice any animal, lame or blind or with any ill blemish, as being inconsistent with the typical perfection of the sacrifice. Even the Gentiles were careful about the perfection of their sacrifices.

¹Blind is the sacrifice of the soul, which is not illumined by the light of Christ. Lame is his sacrifice of prayer, who comes with a double mind to entreat the Lord." ²He offereth one weak, whose heart is not established in the grace of God, nor by the anchor of hope fixed in Christ. These words are also uttered against those who, being rich, offer to the Creator the cheaper and least things, and give small alms."

And ye say, Wherewith have we polluted Thee³? It is a bold expression. Yet a word, to which we are but too ill-accustomed, which expresses what most have done, "dishonour God," comes to the same. Though less bold in expression, they are yet like in meaning. ⁴Will ye pollute Me any more among My people? or, ⁵that My Name should not be polluted before the heathen. ⁶My holy Name shall Israel no more defile; ⁷I will not let them pollute My Name any more. ⁸Much more in the new law, in which the Sacrifice is Christ Himself our God, whence the Apostle says expressly, ⁹Whoso eateth this bread and drinketh this Cup of the Lord unworthily, shall be guilty of the Body and Blood of the Lord. ¹⁰For when the Sacraments are violated, Himself, Whose Sacraments they are, is violated." God speaks of our acts with an unveiled plainness, which we should not dare to use. ²As we are said to sanctify God, when we minister to Him in holiness and righteousness, and so, as far as in us lies, shew that He is holy; so we are said to pollute Him, when we conduct ourselves irreverently and viciously before Him, especially in His worship, and thereby, as far as in us lies, shew that He is not holy and is to be dishonoured."

In that ye say, the table of the Lord is contemptible, lit. contemptible is it ¹⁰, and so any contemptible thing might be offered on it. They said this probably, not in words, but in deeds. Or, if in words, in plausible words. ¹¹God doth not require the ornamenting of the altar, but the devotion of the offerers." ¹²What good is it, if we offer the best? Be what we offer, what it may, it is all to be consumed by fire." ¹³The pretext at once of avarice and gluttony!" And so they kept the best for themselves. They were poor, on their return from the captivity. Any how, the sacrifices were offered. What could it matter to God? And so they dispensed with God's law.

¹²So at this day we see some priests and prelates, splendid in their tables and feasts, sordid in the altar and temple; on the table are costly napkins and wine; on the Altar torn lincn and wine-mace ¹³rather than wine." ¹We pollute the bread, that is, the Body of Christ, when we approach the Altar unworthily, and, being defiled, drink that pure Blood, and say, The table of the Lord is contemptible; not that any one dares to say this, but the deeds of sinners pour contempt on the Table of God."

8. And if ye offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil? Others, it is not evil, as we should say, "there is no harm in it." Both imply, alike, an utter unconsciousness on the part of the offerer, that it was evil: the one, in irony, that this was always their answer, "there is nothing amiss;" the other is an indignant question, "is there indeed nought amiss?" And this seems the most natural.

The sacrifice of the blind and lame was expressly forbidden in the law ¹⁴, and the sick in manifold varieties of animal disease. Whatever hath a blemish ye shall not offer, ¹⁵blind or with limb broken, or wounded or mangy or scabby or scurfy. Perfection was an essential principle of sacrifice; whether, as in the daily sacrifice, or the sin or trespass-offering, typical of the all-perfect Sacrifice, or in the whole-burnt-offering, of the entire self-oblation. But these knew better than God, what was fit for Him and them. His law was to be modified by circumstances. He would not be so particular, (as men now say so often.)

Is it then fit to offer to God what under the very same circumstances man would not offer to man? Against these idle, ungrateful, covetous thoughts God saith, Offer it now unto thy governor. He appeals to our own instinctive thought of propriety to our fellow-creature, which may so often be a test to us. No one would think of acting to a fellow-creature, as they do to Almighty God. Who would make diligent preparation to receive any great one of the earth, and turn his back upon him, when come? Yet what else is the behaviour of most Christians after Holy Communion? If thou wouldest not do this to a mortal man, who is but dust and ashes, how much less to God Almighty, the King of kings and Lord of lords! ²The words are a reproof to those most negligent persons, who go through their prayers to God without fear attention reverence or feeling; but if they have to speak to some great man, prelate or prince, approach him with great reverence, speak carefully and distinctly and are in awe of him. Do not thou prefer the creature to the Creator, man to God, the servant to the Lord, and that Lord, so exalted and so Infinite."

9. And now entreat, I pray you, God ¹⁶, that He will be gracious unto you. This is not a call to repentance, for he assumes that God would not accept them. It is rather irony; are they," Ib. xlii. 11; "all of us, sons of one man are we." Ewald n. 297. b. pp. 761, 762.

¹¹ Remig.

¹² Lap. referring to Card. Bellarmine de genuitu columbe.

¹³ "villum ("the refuse of kernels and skins"), potius quam vinum."

¹⁴ Deut. xv. 21.

¹⁵ Lev. xxii. 22.

¹⁶ ¹⁶ seems to be used purposely in contrast with man, as in Is. xxxi. 3, The Egyptians are men and not God.

¹ S. Jer.

² Dion.

³ The conj. ³ occurs only here: the pass. ³, here and 12, Ezr. ii. 62, Neh. vii. 64, in one idiom.

⁴ Ezek. xlii. 19.

⁵ Ib. xx. 9, 14, 22.

⁶ Ib. xliii. 7.

⁷ Ib. xxxix. 7.

⁸ Lap.

⁹ 1 Cor. xi. 27.

¹⁰ נבזה רוא; the noun being prefixed absolutely, as in Gen. xxxiv. 21, "these men, peaceful

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

your persons? saith the Lord of hosts.

^a 1 Cor. 9. 13.

10 Who is there even among you that would shut the doors for nought? ^a neither do ye kindle fire on mine altar for nought. I have no pleasure in you, saith the Lord

"go now, seek the favour of God, as ye would not that of your governor." From your hand, not from your fathers, not from aliens, hath this been: will He accept persons from you? The unusual construction seems to imply a difference of meaning; as if he would say, that it consisted not with the justice of God, that He should be an accepter of persons, (which He declares that He is not) which yet He would be, were He to accept them, while acting thus.

10. Who is there even among you? This stinginess in God's service was not confined to those offices which cost something, as the sacrifices. Not even services absolutely costless, which required only a little trouble, as that of closing the folding-doors of the temple or the outer court, or bringing the fire to consume the sacrifices, would they do without some special hire. All was mercenary and hireling service. Others have rendered it as a wish, who is there among you! i. e. would that there were one among you, who would close the doors altogether; so shall ye not kindle fire on Mine altar for nought, i. e. fruitlessly! But apart from the difficulty of the construction, it is not God's way to quench the smouldering flax. He Who bids, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost, accepts any imperfect service rather than none. He does not break off the last link, which binds man to Himself. Then, if or when God willed His service to surcease, He would do it Himself, as He did by the destruction of the temple before the Captivity, or finally by the Romans. It would have been an ungodly act, (such as was only done by Ahaz, perhaps the most ungodly king of Israel¹), and one which especially called down His wrath², to close the doors, and therewith to break off all sacrifice. Manasseh carried the worship of false gods into the temple itself; Ahaz, as far as in him lay, abolished the service of God. A prophet of God could not express a wish, that pious Israelites (for it is presupposed that they would do this out of zeal for God's honour) should bring the service of God to an end.

He sums up with an entire rejection of them, present and future. I have no pleasure in you; it is a term of repudiation³, sometimes of disgust⁴, neither will I accept an offering at your hands. He says not simply, ⁵ your burnt-offerings are not acceptable, nor your sacrifices sweet unto Me, but, I will not accept it. Such as they were, such they would be hereafter. God would not accept their sacrifices, but would replace them.

11. For. The form of words does not express whether this declaration relates to the present or the future. It is a vivid present, such as is often used to describe the future. But the things spoken of shew it to be future. The Jewish sacrifices had defects, partly incidental, partly inherent.

¹ 2 Chron. xxviii. 24.

Ecc. v. 3. [4 Eng.]

⁶ Jer. vi. 20.

² Ib. xxix. 8.

⁴ כל און חן Jer. xxii. 28, xlviii. 38, Hos. viii. 8.

⁶ Poc.

³ און חן 1 Sam. xviii. 25.

⁷ Jos. vii. 9.

⁸ So in Rashi; "Our rabbis say, that 'they [the heathen] called Him [the Lord] God of gods; he too who hath an idol, knoweth, that He [the Lord] is God, that He is above all those things, and that in every place the Gentiles also, of their own accord, offer unto my name. But our rabbis have expounded, that they [those spoken of] are the disciples of of hosts, ° neither will I accept an offering at your hand.

11 For ^p from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same my name shall be great ^a among the Gentiles; ^r and ^r John 4. 21, 23. 1 Tim. 2. 8.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

^o Isai. 1. 11.
^p Jer. 6. 20.
^a Amos 5. 21.
^r Ps. 113. 3.
^r Isai. 59. 19.
^r Isai. 60. 3, 5.

Incidental were those, with which the Prophet had upbraided them; inherent, (apart from their mere typical character) that they never could be the religion of the world, since they were locally fixed at Jerusalem. Malachi tells them of a new sacrifice, which should be offered throughout the then heathen world, grounded on His new revelation of Himself to them. For great shall be My Name among the heathen. The prophet anticipates an objection⁶, which the Jews might make to him. ⁷ What then will God do unto His great Name? Those by which He would replace them, would be more worthy of God in two ways, 1) in themselves, 2) in their universality. Then, whatsoever the heathen worshipped, even if some worshipped an unknown God, His Name was not known to them, nor great among them. Those who knew of Him, knew of Him, not as the Lord of heaven and earth, but as the God of the Jews only; their offerings were not pure, but manifoldly defiled. A Hebrew prophet could not be an apologist for heathen idolatry amidst its abominations, or set it on a level with the worship which God had, for the time, appointed; much less could he set it forth as *the true acceptable service of God*⁸. Malachi himself speaks of it, as an aggravation of cruelty in their divorcing of their wives, that they ⁹ married the daughter of a strange god. The worship of those Jews, who remained, out of secular interests, in foreign countries, could not be represented as the "pure offering"; for they made no offerings: then as now, these being forbidden out of Jerusalem; nor would the worship of such Jews, as were scattered in the large empire of Persia, be contrasted with that at Jerusalem, as the pure worship; else why should the Jews have returned? It would have been an abolition of the law before its time. Malachi prophesies then, as had Micah, Isaiah, Zephaniah¹⁰, of a new revelation of God, when, and in which, men should worship Him, every one from his place, even all the isles of the heathen.

Our Lord Himself explains and expands it in His words to the Samaritan woman; ¹¹ Woman, believe Me, the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father.—The hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship Him. God is a Spirit: and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth, and declared the rejection of the Jews, sealing their own sentence against themselves, ¹² I say unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof; and before, ¹³ Many shall come from the East and West, and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven, and the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness.

the wise, who in every place are occupied in the rules of the Divine worship; so also all the prayers of Israel, which they make in every place, these are like a pure oblation (Minchah), and so Jonathan interprets, 'at whatever time ye shall do My will, I receive your prayers, and My great name is sanctified by you, and your prayer is like a pure oblation before Me.' See Ibn Ezra, D. Kim., Tanchum, Abarb., in Poc.

⁹ Mal. ii. 11.

¹⁰ Zeph. ii. 11.

¹¹ S. John iv. 21, 23, 24.

¹² S. Matt. xxi. 41, 43.

¹³ Id. viii. 11, 12.

Before CHRIST in every place "incense shall be offered cir. 397. unto my name, and a pure offering: "for
" Rev. 8. 3. " Isai. 66. 19, 20.

Incense shall be offered unto My name, lit. I think, there shall be incense, oblation made unto My name [this is a mere question of construction¹], and a pure oblation.

This sacrifice, which should be offered, is designated by the special name of *meal-offering*². God would not accept it from the Jews; He would, from the Heathen. It was a special sacrifice, offered by itself as an unbloody sacrifice, or together with the bloody sacrifice. ³ It is most holy, as the sin-offering and as the trespass-offering. In the daily sacrifice it was offered morning and evening, with the lamb. As this was typical of the precious blood-shedding of the Lamb without spot upon the Cross, so was the meal-offering which accompanied it, of the Holy Eucharist.

The early Christians saw the force of the prediction, that sacrifice was contrasted with sacrifice, the bloody sacrifices which were ended by the "One full perfect and sufficient Sacrifice Oblation and Satisfaction" made by our Lord "on the Altar of the Cross for the sins of the whole world," and those sacrifices which He commanded to be made on our Altars, as a memorial of Him. So S. Justin, who was converted probably A.D. 133, within 30 years from the death of S. John, says, "God has therefore beforehand declared, that all who through this name offer those sacrifices, which Jesus, Who is the Christ, commanded to be offered, that is to say, in the Eucharist of the Bread and of the Cup, which are offered in every part of the world by us Christians, are well-pleasing to Him. But those sacrifices, which are offered by you and through those priests of yours, He wholly rejects, saying, And I will not accept your offerings at your hands. For from the rising of the sun even to the going down of the same, My Name is glorified among the Gentiles; but ye profane it."

He points out further the failure of the Jewish explanation as to their sacrifices, in that the Church was every where, not so the Jews. "You and your teachers deceive yourselves, when you interpret this passage of Scripture of those of your nation who were in the dispersion⁴, and say that it speaks of their prayers and sacrifices made in every place, as pure and well-pleasing, and know that you speak falsely, and endeavour in every way to impose upon yourselves; first, because your people are not found, even now, from the rising to the setting of the sun, but there are nations, in which none of your race have ever dwelt: whilst there is not one nation of men, whether Barbarians, or Greeks, or by whatsoever name distinguished, whether of those (nomads) who live in waggons, or of those who have no houses, or those pastoral people that dwell in tents, among whom prayers and thanksgivings are not offered to the Father and Creator of all things, through the name of the crucified Jesus. And you know that at the time when the prophet Malachi said this, the dispersion of you through the whole world, in which you now are, had not yet taken place; as is also shewn by Scripture."

S. Irenæus in the same century, "He took that which is part of the creation, viz. bread, and gave thanks, saying, This

my name shall be great among the heathen, Before CHRIST saith the Lord of hosts. cir. 397.

is My Body. And the Cup likewise, which is of the creation which appertains unto us, He professed to be His own Blood, and taught men the new oblation of the New Testament; which the Church receiving from the Apostles offers unto God in the world:—unto Him Who giveth us nourishment, the first-fruits of His own gifts, in the New Testament; of which in the twelve prophets Malachi gave beforehand this intimation [quoting Mal. i. 10, 11]; most evidently intimating hereby, that while the former people should cease to make offerings to God, in every place sacrifice should be offered unto Him, and that in pureness; His Name also is glorified among the Gentiles. Now what other name is there, which is glorified among the Gentiles, than that which belongs to our Lord, by Whom the Father is glorified, and man is glorified? And because man belongs to His Own Son, and is made by Him, He calls him His own. And as if some King were himself to paint an image of his own son, he justly calls it his own image, on both accounts, first that it is his son's, next, that he himself made it: so also the Name of Jesus Christ, which is glorified in the Church throughout the whole world, the Father professes to be His own, both because it is His Son's, and because He Himself wrote and gave it for the salvation of men. Because therefore the Name of the Son properly belongs to the Father, and in God Almighty through Jesus Christ the Church makes her offering, well saith He on both accounts, And in every place incense is offered unto My Name, and a pure sacrifice. And incense, John in the Apocalypse declares to be the prayers of the Saints. Therefore the offering of the Church, which the Lord hath taught to be offered in the whole world, is accounted with God as a pure sacrifice, and accepted of Him."

Tertullian contrasts the "7 sacerdotal law through Moses, in Leviticus, prescribing to the people of Israel, that sacrifices should in no other place be offered to God than in the land of promise, which the Lord God was about to give to the people Israel and to their brethren, in order that on Israel's introduction thither, there should be there celebrated sacrifices and holocausts, as well for sins as for souls, and no where else but in the holy land⁸," and this subsequent prediction of "the Spirit through the prophets, that in every place and in every land there should be offered sacrifices to God. As He says through the angel Malachi, one of the twelve prophets, (citing the place)."

S. Hippolytus, a disciple of S. Irenæus, A. D. 220. martyr, in a commentary on Daniel, says that "9 when Anti-Christ cometh, the sacrifice and libation will be taken away, which is now in every place offered by the Gentiles to God." The terms "Sacrifice offered in every place" are terms of Malachi.

So S. Cyprian, in his Testimonies against the Jews, sums up the teaching of the passage under this head, "10 That the old sacrifice was to be made void, and a new sacrifice instituted."

¹ Dial. c. Tryph. § 117 pp. 215, 216 Oxf. Tr. also § 28, 29 pp. 104, 105. Ib.

² The Jews then must have interpreted it of themselves in the present, and so of the times of Malachi after the return of others from Babylon.

³ iv. 17. 5. pp. 356, 357. Oxf. Tr. See also his Fragment xxxvi. p. 554, 555. Oxf. Tr.

⁴ c. Jud. i. 5. p. 214 Edinb. Tr. Add c. Marcion. iii. 22.

⁵ Lev. xvii. 1-6, Deut. xii. 5-14, 26, 27.

⁶ Interpret. in Dan. n. xxii. p. 110, published from the Chisian codex of cent. x. in Daniel sec. LXX. Romæ 1772. The passage is quoted loosely by S. Jerome in Dan. c. 9. Opp. v. 689. Vall.

⁷ Testim. ad Quirin. i. 16. pp. 23 and 31. Oxf. Tr.

¹ קָדַשׁ are, I think most probably, two independent impersonal passive participles, taken as future, "will be incensed, offered" [wird geträuchert, dargebracht] as Ewald (Lehrb. 293 a) and "there is begun," קָדַשׁ, "there is wasted," קָדַשׁ "there is spoken" (Ps. lxxxvii. 3), and this place. Tanchum praises Abulwalid for taking קָדַשׁ as a noun = קָדַשׁ (Lib. Rad. fol. 634). He adds, "The rest (עֲדָה) take them as adjectives with an unexpressed substantive." This, I think right: for, although קָדַשׁ might be 'what is incensed,' and so a subst., קָדַשׁ is used elsewhere of offering a sacrifice, not of offering incense, and so קָדַשׁ could not be the subject to it.

² Lev. ii. 7 (14 Eng.) sqq.

³ Ib. vi. 17. [10. Heb.]

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

12 ¶ But ye have profaned it, in that ye say, "The table of the LORD is polluted:

^a ver. 7.

In the "1 Apostolic Constitutions," the prophecy is quoted as "said by God of His œcumenical Church."

Eusebius says, "2 The truth bears witness to the prophetic word, whereby God, rejecting the Mosaic sacrifices, foretells that which shall be among us. For from the rising of the sun &c. We sacrifice then to the supreme God the sacrifice of praise; we sacrifice the Divine, reverend and holy oblation: we sacrifice, in a new way according to the New Testament, the pure sacrifice. The broken heart is also called a sacrifice to God—We sacrifice also the Memory of that great Sacrifice, performing it according to the mysteries which have been transmitted by Him."

S. Cyril of Jerusalem³ speaks of it only as prophesying the rejection of the Jews and the adoption of the Gentiles.

In the liturgy of S. Mark⁴, it is naturally quoted, only, as fulfilled "in the reasonable and unbloody sacrifice, which all nations offer to Thee, O Lord, from the rising of the sun to the setting thereof," not in reference to the cessation of Jewish sacrifices.

S. Chrysostom dwells on its peculiar force, coming from so late a prophet⁵. "Hear Malachi, who came after the other prophets. For I adduce, for the time, no testimony either of Isaiah or Jeremiah or any other before the Captivity, lest thou shouldest say that the terrible things which he foretold were exhausted in the Captivity. But I adduce a prophet, after the return from Babylon and the restoration of your city, prophesying clearly about you. For when they had returned, and recovered their city, and rebuilt the temple and performed the sacrifices, foretelling this present desolation then future, and the taking away of the sacrifice, Malachi thus speaks in the Person of God [ver. 10 fin.—12 beg.]. When, o Jew, happened all this? When was incense offered to God in every place? when a pure sacrifice? Thou couldest not name any other time, than this, after the Coming of Christ. If the prophet foretelleth not this time and our sacrifice, but the Jewish, the prophecy will be against the law. For if, when Moses commandeth that sacrifice should be offered in no other place than the Lord God should choose, and shutteth up those sacrifices in one place, the prophet says that incense should be offered in every place and a pure sacrifice, he opposeth and contradicteth Moses. But there is no strife nor contention. For Moses speaketh of one sacrifice, and Malachi of another. Where doth this appear? [From the place, not Judæa only; from the mode, that it should be pure; from the offerers, not Israel, but the nations,] from East to West, shewing that whatever of earth the sun surveys, the preaching will embrace.—He calls the former sacrifice impure, not in its own nature but in the mind of the offerers; if one compares the sacrifice itself, there is such a boundless distance, that this [that offered by Christians] might in comparison be called 'pure.'"

Even the cold, but clear, Theodoret has, "6 Foretelling to the Jews the cessation of the legal priesthood, he announces the pure and unbloody sacrifice of the Gentiles. And first and the fruit thereof, even his meat is contemptible.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

he says to the Jews, I have no pleasure in you, saith the Lord of hosts, and I will not accept a sacrifice at your hands. Then he foreshews the piety of the Gentiles, For from the rising of the sun &c. (Mal. i. 11.) You then I will wholly reject; for I detest altogether what you do. Wherefore also I reject the sacrifice offered by you; but instead of you, I have the whole world to worship Me. For the dwellers in the whole earth, which the rising and setting sun illumines, will every where both offer to Me incense, and will sacrifice to Me the pure sacrifice, which I love. For they shall know My name and My will, and shall offer to Me reverence due. So the Lord said to the Samaritan woman, Woman, believe Me, that the hour cometh and now is, when neither in this mountain, nor in Jerusalem shall ye worship the Father.—The blessed Paul, being instructed in this, says, "7 I will that men pray every where &c., and the Divine Malachi clearly taught us in this place the worship now used; for the circumscribed worship of the priests is brought to an end, and every place is accounted fit for the worship of God, and the sacrifice of irrational victims is ended, and He, our spotless Lamb, Who taketh away the sin of the world, is sacrificed."

Lastly, S. Augustine, "8 Malachi, prophesying of the Church which we see propagated through Christ, says most plainly to the Jews in the person of God, I have no pleasure in you, and will not receive an offering at your hands. For from the rising of the sun &c. Since we see this sacrifice through the priesthood of Christ after the order of Melchisedek, now offered to God in every place from the rising of the sun to its setting; but the sacrifice of the Jews, of which it is said, I have no pleasure in you, neither will I accept an offering from your hands, they cannot deny to have ceased; why do they yet expect another Christ, since what they read as prophesied and see fulfilled, could not be fulfilled, except through Him?"

12. And ye have profaned [⁹*are habitually profaning it*], in that ye say. It was the daily result of their daily lives and acts. "10 It is probable that the priests did not use such words, but that by their very deeds, they proclaimed this aloud: as in the, The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. For in that he is seen to be a despiser, though he say it not in words, yet, by their very deeds and by the crookedness of their lives, they all-but cry out, There is no God. For they who live as though God beheld not, and do all things recklessly and unholy, by their own deeds and works deny God. So they who are not earnest to preserve to the holy Altar the reverence becoming to it, by the very things which they do, say,

The table of the Lord is despised." Not the table of shew-bread, since it is so called in reference to the sacrifice offered thereon. Ezekiel had probably so called the altar, which he saw in his vision of the new temple¹¹. It is what was before called the altar; an altar, in regard to the sacrifices offered to God; a table, in regard to the food of the sacrifice therefrom received. Both names, "altar"¹² and "table"¹³ being received in the New Testament, both were received in the

¹ vii. 30 [on their age, especially of that of their substance, see Pusey, The Real Presence the doctrine of the early Church pp. 605-609.]

² Dem. Ev. i. 10. fin. He also quotes the passage in proof of the abolition of the Jewish sacrifices, although without allusion to the Eucharistic sacrifice, lb. i. c. p. 19; and in ii. 29. pp. 55, 56, of the rejection of the Jewish nation and their bodily worship according to the law of Moses, and the spiritual worship given to all nations through Christ."

³ Cat. xviii. 25.

⁴ Assem. Cod. Lit. vii. 10, 20.

⁵ Ad Jud. v. 12. Opp. i. 647, 648 Montf. See also his Expos. in Ps. 112. n. 2. Opp. v. 293, 299, and Quod Christus sit Deus Opp. i. 582, "Seest thou, how plainly he both cast out Judaism and exhibited Christianity effulgent and extended over the whole world?"

⁶ ad loc.

⁷ de Civ. Dei. xviii. 35. 3.

⁸ S. Cyr.

¹² S. Matt. v. 23, Heb. xiii. 10.

⁹ אתם חוללים אתו

¹¹ 1 Tim. ii. 8.

¹² Ezek. xlv. 16.

¹³ 1 Cor. x. 21.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

Or, whereas ye might have blown
it away.

* Lev. 22, 20,
&c.

13 Ye said also, Behold, what a weariness is it! || and ye have snuffed at it, saith the LORD of hosts: and ye brought that which was torn, and the lame, and the sick; thus ye brought an offering: * should I accept this of your hand? saith the LORD.

early Church. For each represented one side of the great Eucharistic action, as it is a Sacrifice and a Sacrament. But the title "altar" was the earliest¹.

It may be here a different profaneness of the priests. They connived at the sin of the people in sacrificing the maimed animals which they brought, and yet, since they had their food from the sacrifices, and such animals are likely to have been neglected and ill-conditioned, they may very probably have complained of the poverty of their lot, and despised the whole service. For the words used, its produce, the eating thereof is contemptible belong to their portion, not to what was consumed by fire. With this agrees their cry,

13. What a weariness! What an onerous service it is! The service of God is its own reward. If not, it becomes a greater toil, with less reward from this earth, than the things of this earth. Our only choice is between love and weariness.

And ye have snuffed [puffed] at it², i.e. at the altar; as a thing contemptible. Ye have brought that which was taken by violence³. In despising any positive law of God, they despised the lawgiver; and so, from contempt of the ceremonial law, they went on to break the moral law. It were indeed a mockery of God, to break a law whereby He bound man to man, and therefrom to seek to appease Himself. Yet in rough times, people, even in Christianity, have made their account with their souls, by giving to the poor a portion of what they had taken from the rich. "God," it was said to such an one, "rejects the gifts obtained by violence and robbery. He loves mercy, justice and humanity, and by the lovers of these only will He be worshipped." "He that sacrificeth of a thing wrongfully gotten, his offering is ridiculous, and the gifts of unjust men are not accepted. The Most High is not pleased with the offerings of the wicked, neither is He pacified for sin by the multitude of sacrifices. Whoso bringeth an offering of the goods of the poor doeth as one that killeth the son before the father's eyes."

14. Cursed is the deceiver. "The fraudulent, hypocritical, false or deceitful dealer, who makes a show of one thing, and doth or intends another, nor doth to his power what he would make a show of doing; as if he could deceive God in doing in His service otherwise than He required, and yet be accepted by Him." The whole habit of these men was not to break with God, but to keep well with Him on as easy terms as they could. They even went beyond what the law required in making vows, probably for some temporal end, and then substituted for that which had typical perfection, the less valuable animal, the ewe⁴, and that, diseased. It was probably, to prevent self-deceit, that the law commanded that the oblation for a vow should be a male without blemish, per-

14 But cursed be the deceiver, || which hath in his flock a male, and voweth, and sacrificeth unto the Lord a corrupt thing: for * I am a great King, saith the LORD of hosts, and my name is dreadful among the heathen.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

* ver. 8.
Or,
in whose flock is.
* Ps. 47. 2.
1 Tim. 6. 15.

fect; lest (which may be a temptation in impulsive vows) repenting of their vow, they should persuade themselves, that they had vowed less than they had. Ordinarily, then, it would not have been allowed to one, who had not the best to offer, to vow at all. But, in their alleged poverty, the prophet supposes that God would so far dispense with His own law, and accept the best which any one had, although it did not come up to that law. Hence the clause, which hath in his flock a male. "If thou hast not a male, that curse in no wise injureth thee. But saying this, he sheweth, that they have what is best, and offer what is bad."

They sinned, not against religion only, but against justice also. "For as a merchant, who offers his goods at a certain price, if he supply them afterwards adulterated and corrupted, is guilty of fraud and is unjust, so he who promised to God a sacrifice worthy of God, and, according to the law, perfect and sound, is fraudulent and sins against justice, if he afterwards gives one, defective, mutilated, vitiated, and is guilty of theft in a sacred thing, and so of sacrilege."

Clergy or "all who have vowed, should learn hence, that what they have vowed should be given to God, entire, manly, perfect, the best.—For, reverence for the supreme and Divine Majesty to Whom they consecrate themselves demandeth this, that they should offer Him the highest best and most perfect, making themselves a whole-burnt-offering to God."

"They who abandon all things of the world, and kindle their whole mind with the fire of Divine love, these become a sacrifice and a whole-burnt-offering to Almighty God." "Man himself, consecrated and devoted in the name of God, is a sacrifice." He then offers a corrupt thing who, like Ananias, keeps back part of the price, and is the more guilty, because, while it was his own, it was in his own power.

I am a great King. "As God is Alone Lord through His universal Providence and His intrinsic authority, so He Alone is King, and a King so great, that of His greatness or dignity and perfection there is no end."

My Name is dreadful among the heathen. Absence of any awe of God was a central defect of these Jews. They treated Him, as they would not a fellow-creature, for whom they had any respect or awe or fear. Some remaining instinct kept them from parting with Him; but they yielded a cold, wearisome heartless service. Malachi points to the root of the evil, the ignorance, how awful God is. This is the root of so much irreverence in people's theories, thoughts, conversations, systems, acts, of the present day also. They know neither God or themselves. The relation is summed up in those words to a saint⁵, "Knowest thou well, Who I am, and who thou art? I am He Who Is, and thou art she and could not be used in sacrifices, since it was dead already.

⁴ Ecclus. xxxiv. 18—20.

⁵ Poc. ⁶ אֶחָד fem. for אֶחָדָה, as אֶחָדָה for אֶחָדָה, 1 Kgs i. 15. and אֶחָדָה Lev. ii. 5, Ewald Lehrs. n. 188. p. 495 ed. 8. Keil would read אֶחָדָה (masc.) and make it a separate case, "the deceiver, whereas in his flock is a male; and he who voweth &c.:" but then nothing would be said, wherein the deceit consisted.

⁷ Levit. xxii. 19, 21.

⁸ S. Jer.

⁹ Lap.

¹⁰ S. Greg. in Ezek. L. i. Hom. xii. 30. Opp. i. 305 Ben. L.

¹¹ S. Aug. de Civ. Dei x. 6. L.

¹² Dion.

¹³ S. Catherine of Sienna.

¹ S. Ignat. ad Philad. n. 4. p. 32. Cotel.

² This too is one of the Tikkunē Sopherim, as if, had it not been profane, the prophet would have said, at Me. On the character of these hypothetical corrections, see on Hab. i. 12. p. 411. n. 11.

³ This is the one sense of נֶזֶק, which occurs in 34 separate passages (besides two met. Job xxiv. 19, Pr. iv. 16.) It is used specially of the robbery of the poor, whether by wrong judgement (Eccl. v. 7, [Heb.] Is. x. 2) or open violence. The meaning "torn" was gained, as if the animal had been carried off by beasts (θηρίων), the eating of which was forbidden, Ex: xxii. 30, Lev. vii. 24, xxii. 8. Ezek. iv. 14, xlv. 31. But this had its own name,

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

CHAPTER II.

1 He sharply reproveth the priests for neglecting their covenant, 11 and the people for idolatry, 14 for adultery, 17 and for infidelity.

AND now, O ye priests, this commandment is for you.

2 ^a If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to heart, to give glory unto my name, saith the LORD of hosts, I will even send a curse upon you, and I will curse your bless-who is not." So Job says in the presence of God, ¹ I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth Thee: wherefore I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes. To correct this, God, from the beginning, insists on the title which He gives Himself. ² Circumcise the foreskin of your hearts and be no more stiff-necked: for the Lord your God is God of gods and Lord of lords, the great God, the mighty and the terrible; and in warning, ³ If thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law that are written in this book, that thou mayest fear this glorious and fearful name, The Lord thy God, then the Lord thy God will make thy plagues wonderful &c.

II. 1. And now this is My commandment unto you, not a commandment, which He gave them, but a commandment in regard to them. As God said of old, upon obedience, ⁴ I will command My blessing unto you, so now He would command what should reach them, but a curse. ⁵ He returns from the people to the priests, as the fountain of the evil, whose carelessness about things sacred he had rebuked before. Let the priests of the new law hear this rebuke of God, and conceive it dictated to them by the Holy Spirit to hear, from whom God rightly requires greater holiness, and so will punish them more grievously, if careless or scandalous in their office. All Christians are, in some sense, ⁶ a royal, holy priesthood, over and above the special "Christian priesthood;" as the Jews, over and above the special priesthood of Aaron, were a ⁷ kingdom of priests. What follows then belongs, in their degree, to them and their duties.

2. If ye will not lay to heart, viz. the rebukes addressed to them, to give glory to God. For the glory of God is the end and aim of the priesthood. This should be the principle and rule of their whole life, ⁸ to the greater glory of God. I will send the curse upon you, viz. that which He had threatened in the law upon disobedience; and will curse your blessings, will turn your blessings into a curse. He does not say, I will send you curses instead of blessings, but, I will make the blessings themselves a curse. ⁹ The things which should have been to their wealth became to them an occasion of falling; to the proud, the things which lift them up; to the gluttonous, their abundance; to the avaricious, their wealth; which, if used to the glory of God, become blessings, do, when self not God is their end, by God's dispensation and Providence, become a curse to them. ¹⁰ The goods of nature, the goods of ings: yea, I have cursed them already, because ye do not lay it to heart.

3 Behold, I will || corrupt your seed, || Or, reprove. and † spread dung upon your faces, even † Heb. scatter. the dung of your solemn feasts; and || one || Or, it shall take you away to it. shall ^b take you away with it. ^b 1 Kin. 14. 10.

4 And ye shall know that I have sent this commandment unto you, that my covenant might be with Levi, saith the LORD of hosts.

fortune, the goods of the Church allowed to you, I will turn to your greater damnation, permitting you to abuse them to pride; and your damnation shall be the more penal, the more good things ye have received from Me. Whence Christ declares in the Gospel, ¹¹ Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required!

Yea, I have cursed them [lit. it], i.e. each one of the blessings, already. God's judgements as well as His mercies are individual with a minute care, shewing that it is His doing. The curse had already gone forth, and had begun to seize upon them from the time that they began to despise His Name. His judgements do not break in at once, but little by little, with warnings of their approach, that so we may turn to Him, and escape the wrath to come.

3. Lo, I will rebuke the seed ¹² for your sake, i.e. that it should not grow. He Who worketh by His sustaining will all the operations of nature, would at His will withhold them. Neither priests nor Levites cultivated the soil; yet, since the tithes were assigned to them, the diminution of the harvest affected them. The meal-offering too was a requisite part of the sacrifice ¹³.

And spread dung upon your faces, the dung ¹⁴ of your solemn feasts, or, of your sacrifices ¹⁵. It was by the law carried without the camp and burned with the animal itself. They had brought before the face of God maimed, unfitting sacrifices; they should have them cast back, with their refuse, upon them; ¹⁶ as a lord that rejecteth a gift, brought to him by his servant, casts it back in his face. ¹⁷ Of your sacrifices, not of Mine; for I am not worshipped in them: ye seek to please, not Me, but yourselves." So God said of Eli, ¹⁸ them that honour Me I will honour, and they that despise Me shall be lightly esteemed.

And one shall take you away with it, lit. to it. They should be swept away, as if they were an appendage to it, as God said, ¹⁹ I will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away dung, till all be gone. As are the offerings, so shall it be with the offerers.

4. And ye shall know that I have sent this commandment unto you: this, which He had just uttered. They who believe not God when threatening, know that He is in earnest and not to be trifled with, through His punishing. That My covenant might be with Levi ²⁰. God willed to punish those who at

¹ Job xlii. 5, 6.

² Deut. x. 16, 17, vii. 21. Nehemiah uses it in his prayers (i. 5, ix. 32) and Daniel (ix. 4.) It occurs also Neh. iv. 8 (14 Eng.) Ps. xlvii. 3, lxviii. 36, lxxix. 8, xcvi. 4, xcix. 3, cxi. 9, Zeph. ii. 11.

³ Deut. xxviii. 58, 59. ⁴ Lev. xxv. 21, וְהָיָה אֶת בְּרִיתִי לָכֶם. ⁵ Lap. ⁶ 1 S. Pet. ii. 9. ⁷ Ex. xix. 6. ⁸ "Ad majorem Dei gloriam," the motto of S. Ignatius Loyola. ⁹ Ps. lxxix. 23. ¹⁰ Dion. ¹¹ S. Luke xii. 48.

¹² Keil objects to this rendering of the text and adopts the punctuation קָרַע from lxx. Aq. Vulg. "the arm," i.e. render it useless and incapable of discharging its office. But when קָרַע is used of other than men themselves, it is a whole, as to which the metaphor is used, either being animate, as "the devourer," Mal. iii. 11, or pictured as animate, as "the sea," Ps. cvi. 9. Nah. i. 4. ¹³ See also Joel i. 13. ii. 14.

¹⁴ קָרַע is only used of the dung, as it lies in the animal killed for sacrifice, Ex. xxix. 4. Lev. iv. 11, viii. 7, xxi. 27, Nu. xix. 5, and here. ¹⁵ מִן is certainly the animal sacrificed at the feast, Ex. xxiii. 18, Ps. cxviii. 27, and so probably here. So Kim.

¹⁶ Abarb. Poc. ¹⁷ Rih. ¹⁸ 1 Sam. ii. 30. ¹⁹ 1 Kgs xiv. 10.

²⁰ Keil says that מִן means indeed to "exist," but not to "continue existence." But the continuance is involved in the existence in the future, for the being in the future involves the continued being. His own rendering, "that this should be My covenant with Levi," requires a more definite subject; and it should rather be, "that My covenant with Levi should come to this." In ver. 5, 6, he speaks of the past emphatically, "My covenant was with him," "the law of truth was in his mouth." So it shall be with you, if you become like him.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

5 ^c My covenant was with him of life and peace; and I gave them to him ^d for the fear wherewith he feared me, and was

^c Num. 25. 12.
Ezek. 31. 25.
& 37. 26.

^d Deut. 33. 8, 9.

that time rebelled against Him, that He might spare those who should come after them. He chastened the fathers, who shewed their contempt towards Him, that their sons, taking warning thereby, might not be cut off. He continues to say, what the covenant was, which He willed still to be, if they would repent.

5. My covenant was with him life and peace; lit. the life and the peace; that, which alone is true life and peace. The covenant was not with Levi himself, but with Aaron, his representative, with whom the covenant was made in the desert, as is indeed here expressed; and, in him, with all his race¹ after him, who succeeded him in his office; as, when it is said, that ² Aaron and his sons offered upon the altar of burnt offering, it must needs be understood, not of Aaron in person alone and his sons then living, but of any of his race that succeeded in his and their room. So our Lord promised to be with His Apostles, ³ always to the end of the world, i.e. with them and those whom they should appoint in their stead, and these others, until He should Himself come. God promised, if they would keep the law, that they should live in peace on the earth; yea, that they should have peace of mind and a life of grace. Life is an indefectible being, which man does not forfeit by sin, to which death is no interruption, changing only the place of the soul's life.

And I gave them to him, in, or as, fear, ⁴ Fear, not servile but filial and pure, as S. Paul bids Christians, ⁵ work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. God gave them an awful gift, to be held with fear and awe, for its very preciousness, as one would hold anxiously what is very precious, yet very fragile and easily marred.

And he feared Me, and was afraid before My Name. Malachi unites two words, the second expressive of strong fear, by which a man is, as it were, crushed or broken. They are often united in Hebrew, but as expressing terror, which men are bidden not to feel before men. Toward man it is ever said, ⁶ fear not, neither be ye dismayed; toward God Alone, it is a matter of praise. Man's highest fear is too little; for he knows not, Who God is. So Isaiah says, ⁷ Fear ye not their fear [the fear of this people], nor be afraid. Sanctify the Lord of hosts Himself, and let Him be your fear and let Him be your dread. ⁸ What can be more precious (than this fear)? For it is written, ⁹ He who feareth the Lord will be rewarded. ¹⁰ The fear of the Lord is honour and glory and gladness and a crown of rejoicing. He saith, the fear, wherewith he feareth Me and was afraid, i.e. he received the fear of God in his whole heart and soul. For these reduplications and emphases suggest to the hearer how rooted in virtue are those thus praised.¹¹

6. The law of truth was in his mouth. Apart from those cases, which were brought to the priests at the tabernacle¹², in which their voice was the voice of God through them, to teach the law was part of the office both of the priest and afraid before my name.

6 ^c The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips: he

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

^c Deut. 33. 10.

Levite. Of the priest God says; ¹² that ye may teach the children of Israel all the statutes, which the Lord hath spoken unto them by the hand of Moses: of the tribe of Levi generally Moses says, ¹³ They shall teach Jacob Thy judgements and Israel Thy law. After the schism of the ten tribes, a prophet says to Asa, that Israel had ¹⁴ for a long time been without the true God and without a teaching priest and without law. They are evil times, of which Ezekiel says, ¹⁵ the law shall perish from the priest; and God says of corrupt priests, ¹⁶ The priest said not, where is the Lord? and they that handle the law knew Me not. ¹⁷ They did violence to My law. On their return from the captivity Ezra was known to Artaxerxes as ¹⁸ a scribe of the law of the God of heaven, and he looked upon him apparently, as one who should keep the people in good order by teaching it. ¹⁹ Thou, Ezra, after the wisdom of thy God which is in thy hand, set magistrates and judges, which may judge all the people which are beyond the river, all such as know the laws of thy God, and teach ye them that know them not: and whosoever will not do the law of thy God or the law of the king, let judgement be executed speedily upon him. Ezra says of himself, that he ²⁰ had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord and to do it and to teach in Israel statutes and judgements.

²¹ God's law is the truth: the true doctrine of this law did he teach the people, and instruct them in the true meaning and intent thereof, that, according to the right rule, they might frame all their actions; nothing of it did he conceal from them, nor teach any thing contrary to it or false. This was in his mouth; nothing contrary to it was found in his lips.

And iniquity was not found in his lips. He expresses the perfectness of that teaching, first positively, then negatively. The true priest taught truth without any admixture of wrong. ²² Not he only is a betrayer of the truth, who, transgressing the truth, openly teaches a lie for the truth; but he too, who does not freely utter the truth, which he ought to utter freely, or who does not freely defend the truth which he ought to defend freely, is a betrayer of the truth. ²⁴ For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. "Nothing," says S. Ambrose²⁵ to the Emperor Theodosius, "is so perilous to the priest with God, so disgraceful with men, as not to utter freely what he thinks. For it is written, ²⁶ I spake of Thy testimonies before kings, and was not ashamed. And therefore a priest's silence ought to displease your Clemency; his freedom, to please you. For you are involved in the peril of my silence, art aided by the good of my free speech."

He walked with Me. To awe of God, truthfulness of teaching, he adds a devout continual intercourse with God. Like the patriarchs of old, Enoch and Noah, he ²⁷ walked with God. He not only lived in the Presence, but walked up and down with Him, through his whole life, as a Friend; "having respect in all things to Him and His glory."

¹ By the art. in לוי v. 8. See Num. xxv. 12, 13.

³ S. Matt. xxviii. 20.

⁴ Dion.

² 1 Chr. vi. 49.

⁵ Phil. ii. 12.

⁶ Deut. i. 21, xxxi. 8, Josh. i. 9, x. 25, 1 Chr. xxii. 13, xxviii. 20, 2 Chr. xx. 15, 17, xxxii. 7, Is. li. 7, Jer. xxiii. 4, xxx. 10, xlv. 27, Ez. ii. 6, iii. 9.

⁷ Is. viii. 12, 13.

⁸ S. Cyr.

⁹ Pr. xiii. 13.

¹⁰ Eccles. i. 11.

¹¹ Deut. xvii. 9, 10, 11, xix. 17; (add Deut. xxi. 5, Ezek. xlv. 23, 24,) hence the use of אלהים Ex. xxi. 6, xxii. 7, 8.

¹² Lev. x. 11.

¹³ Deut. xxxiii. 10.

¹⁴ 2 Chr. xv. 3.

¹⁵ Ezek. vii. 26.

¹⁶ Jer. ii. 8.

¹⁷ Ezek. xxii. 26, Zeph. iii. 4.

¹⁸ Ezr. vii. 12, 21.

¹⁹ Ib. 25, 26.

²⁰ Ib. 10.

²¹ Poc.

²² Ps. cxix. 142.

²³ Opus imp. in S. Matt. ap. S. Chrys. Hom. 25. T. vi. App. p. cix. Ben.

²⁴ Rom. x. 10.

²⁵ S. Ambr. Ep. xi. ad Theod. n. 2. 3. Ben. L.

²⁶ Ps. cxix. 46.

²⁷ Gen. v. 24, vi. 9.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397. walked with me in peace and equity, and did ^f turn many away from iniquity.

7 ^g For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law
10. & 24. 8. Ezra 7. 10. Jer. 18. 18. Hag. 2. 11, 12.

In peace and equity. The inward peace with God overflowing in peace to men. The brief words comprise the duties of both tables; as that, ¹ Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see God; ² Live in peace, and the God of love and peace shall be with you; ³ blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God. ⁴ God's covenant with him was of peace; so he observed it on his part. Even equity, or real considerate justice, would alienate those, whom it found wrong, so he joins with it peace, that even equity was not administered but with love. ⁵ To have peace with God, what is it but to will to be mended and to do what He willeth, and in nothing to offend Him?

And turned away many from iniquity. They, the true priests of the Old Testament then, were not satisfied with their own sanctification, but were zealous for the salvation of souls. What a history of zeal for the glory of God and the conversion of sinners in those, of whom the world knows nothing; of whose working, but for the three words ⁷ in the closing book of the Old Testament, we should have known nothing! The Prophets upbraided the sins of the many; the Psalms are the prayers given to and used by the pious; such incidental sayings as these, record some of the fruits. "Be of the disciples of Aaron," said Hillel⁸, "who loved peace and followed peace, and who loved men and brought them near to the law." Yet even under the Gospel S. Gregory complains, "The world is full of priests; yet in the harvest of God the labourers are few. For we undertake the priestly office, but do not fulfil its work. We receive the fruit of holy Church in daily stipend, but labour not for the everlasting Church in preaching." ¹⁰ There are many priests," says a writer in the IVth cent., "and few priests; many in name, few in deed. See then, how ye sit on your thrones; for the throne maketh not the priest, but the priest the throne; the place sanctifieth not the man, but the man the place. Whoso sitteth well on the throne, receiveth honour from the throne; whoso ill, doth injustice to the throne. Thou sittest in judgement. If thou livest well and teachest well, thou wilt be a judge of all; if thou teachest well and livest ill, thine own only. For by teaching well and living well thou instructest the people, how it ought to live; by teaching well and living ill, thou teachest God, how He should condemn thee." ¹¹ We who are called priests, above the ills which we have of our own, add also the deaths of others. For we slay as many as we, in tepidity and silence, see daily go to death.—He who is placed under thee dies without thee, when in that which causes his death, thou hast withstood him. For to that death, which thou hast not withstood, thou wilt be added."

7. For the priest's lips should keep knowledge. ¹² He assigns the reason for what he had just said, the law of truth was in his mouth; they had done what it was their duty to do; as in Ecclesiasticus it is said of Aaron; ¹³ God gave unto him His commandments, and authority in the statutes of at his mouth: ^h for he is the messenger of the LORD of hosts.

8 But ye are departed out of the way; ⁱ ye have caused many to || stumble at the

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397. ^h Gal. 4. 14. ⁱ 1 Sam. 2. 17. ^j Jer. 18. 15. ^k Or, fall in the law.

judgements, that he should teach Jacob the testimonies, and inform Israel in His laws. So S. Paul requires of Titus to ordain such Bishops, as shall be able to ¹⁴ exhort by sound doctrine and to convince gainsayers. Wherefore S. Ambrose ¹⁵ calls the Bible, which contains the law of God, "the book of priests," as specially belonging to them, to be specially studied by them. S. Jerome notes that he says keep, not "give forth," that they should speak seasonably, and give their fellow-servants meat in due season."

For he is the messenger [or angel] of the Lord of hosts. Malachi gives to the priest the title which belongs to the lowest order of the heavenly spirits, as having an office akin to theirs; as Haggai does to the prophet¹⁶, as an extraordinary messenger of God; and S. Paul tells the Galatians, ¹⁷ ye received me as an angel of God, as Christ Jesus; and Christ, by S. John, speaks to the Bishops of the seven Churches, good or bad, or of mixed good and bad, as *the angels*¹⁸ of those Churches.

¹⁹ Since in the heavenly hierarchy the order of Angels is the lowest, and in the Eucharistical hierarchy the order of the priesthood is the highest, ²⁰ most truly is the priest of God called angel, i. e. messenger, because he intervenes between God and man, and announces the things of God to the people; and therefore were the Urim and Thummim placed on the priest's breast-plate of judgement, that we might learn, that the priest ought to be learned, a herald of Divine truth. Much more in the New Testament. ²¹ Who, as it were in a day, can form one of earth, to be the defender of truth, to stand with angels, to give glory with Archangels, to transmit the sacrifices to the altar above, to be partaker of the priesthood²² of Christ, to reform the thing formed, and present the image, to re-create for the world above, to be a god²³ and make men partakers of the Divine Nature²⁴? ²⁵ The priesthood is enacted on earth, but is ranked with the heavenly ranks. Very rightly. For not man, not angel, not archangel, not any other created power, but the Paraclete Himself hath ordained this office, and persuaded them, while yet abiding in the flesh, to conceive the ministry of the Angels. Wherefore, he who is consecrated as priest, ought to be pure, as if he stood among the heavenly powers. ²⁶ The throne of the priesthood is placed in the heavens, and he is entrusted with ministering things of heaven. Who saith this? The King of heaven Himself. For He saith, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.—So the priest standeth in the middle between God and human nature, bringing down to us Divine benefits, and transmitting thither our supplications."

8. But ye²⁷ are departed out of the way ¹² of knowledge, truth, equity, fear of God, which I appointed to Aaron and the Levites. Ye have caused many to stumble at the law. He does not simply say, in the law, but at it. The law was what they stumbled at. They did not only misunderstand the law,

¹ Heb. xii. 14. Rom. xii. 18.

² 2 Cor. xiii. 11.

³ S. Matt. v. 9.

⁴ Poc.

⁵ ver. 5.

⁶ S. Cyr.

⁷ ורבים השב מען

⁸ Pirke Aboth c. i. § 13 Poc.

⁹ S. Greg. Hom. xvii. in Evang. n. 3 and 8. Opp. i. 1496, 1499. Ben. L.

¹⁰ Op. Imperf. in S. Matt. cxxiii. Hom. xliii. App. p. clxxxiii. Ben. L.

¹¹ S. Greg. Hom. in Ezek. L. i. Hom. xi. nn. 9. and 11. Opp. i. 1285. L.

¹² Lap.

¹³ Ecclus. xlv. 17.

¹⁴ Tit. i. 9.

¹⁵ de fide iii. c. 15. n. 128. Opp. i. 519. Ben.

¹⁶ Hagg. ii. 11.

¹⁷ Gal. iv. 14.

¹⁸ Rev. i. 20.

¹⁹ Dion.

²⁰ S. Jer.

²¹ S. Greg. Naz. Orat. ii. n. 73. p. 48 Ben.

²² συνεπισκοποι

²³ Θεὸν ἐσόμενον καὶ θεοποιήσονται

²⁴ 2 S. Pet. i. 4.

²⁵ S. Chrys. de Sacerdotio iii. 4. Opp. i. 382 Ben.

²⁶ Id. in Is. vi. l. Hom. v. l. Opp. vi. 132.

²⁷ ἐν, emphatic.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

law; ^kye have corrupted the covenant of Levi, saith the Lord of hosts.

^k Neh. 13. 29.
^l 1 Sam. 2. 30.
|| Or, lifted up the face against.
[†] Heb. accepted faces.

9 Therefore ^lhave I also made you contemptible and base before all the people, according as ye have not kept my ways, but || [†]have been partial in the law.

through the false teaching of the priests, as though it allowed things which in truth were sins (although this too); itself was their source of stumbling. As Jesus Himself was a rock of offence whercon they stumbled, because through His Divine holiness He was not what they expected Him to be, so contrariwise the law became an offence to them through the unholiness and inconsistency of the lives and ways of those who taught it; much as we now hear Christianity spoken against, because of the inconsistency of Christians. So S. Paul saith to the Jews, ¹ The name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you, as it is written; and, for the sins of Eli's sons², men abhorred the offering of the Lord.

And have corrupted the covenant of Levi; as it is said in Nehemiah, ³ They have defiled the priesthood, and the covenant of the priesthood and of Levi, that covenant which was life and peace⁴, and therefore forfeited them.

9. Therefore have I made you contemptible. They had said in their hearts, ⁵ The table of the Lord is contemptible. So God would requite them ⁶ "measure for measure." Yet not only so, but in their office as judges, against the repeated protestations in the law, ⁷ Thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honour the person of the mighty, in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbour; ⁸ ye shall not respect persons in judgement; ⁹ thou shalt not wrest judgement, he says,

Ye have accepted persons in the law. You have interpreted the law differently for rich and poor, or have put it in force against the poor, not against the rich. It would include actual bribery; but there are many more direct offences against equal justice. How differently is the like offence against the eighth commandment visited upon the poor who have real temptation to it, and the rich who have none, but the lust of the eyes!

"Crows he condones, vexes the simple dove."

That contempt which they cast upon God and His law, by wresting it out of respect to persons, that so they might gain favour and respect from them, so honouring them more than Him, and seeking to please them more than Him, will He cast back on them, making them contemptible even in the eyes of those, from whom they thought by that means to find respect.

10. Have we not all one Father¹⁰? Hath not one God created us? Malachi turns abruptly to another offence, in which also the priests set an evil example, the capricious dismissal of their Hebrew wives and taking other women in their stead. Here, as before, he lays down, at the outset, a general moral principle, which he applies. The one Father, (it appears from the parallel), is manifestly Almighty God, as the Jews said to our Lord, ¹¹ We have one Father, even God.

¹ Rom. ii. 24.

² Neh. xiii. 29.

⁷ Lev. xix. 15.

⁴ ii. 5.

⁸ Dent. i. 17.

² 1 Sam. ii. 17. Poc.

⁵ i. 7.

⁶ Kim.

⁹ Ib. xvi. 19.

¹⁰ Jews (Ibn E., Tanchum, Kim. Abarb. ap. Poc.) have understood the one father to be Jacob; S. Cyril, to be Abraham. The parallelism is, I think, decisive against both. Although Abraham is specially spoken of as their father, yet the appeal to that relation would not hold against the marriage, condemned here, since he was the father of the descendants of Ishmael as of Isaac, of the bitterest foes of Israel, the heathenish Edomites. Ammon

10 ^mHave we not all one father? ⁿhath not one God created us? why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, by profaning the covenant of our fathers?

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

^m 1 Cor. 8. 6.
ⁿ Eph. 4. 6.
ⁿ Job 31. 15.

11 ¶ Judah hath dealt treacherously, and an abomination is committed in Israel

He created them, not only as He did all mankind, but by the spiritual relationship with Himself, into which He brought them. So Isaiah speaks, ¹² Thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and He that formed thee, O Israel. Every one that is called by My Name; I have created him for My glory; I have formed him; yea I have made him. This people have I formed for Myself; they shall shew forth My praise. And from the first in Moses' song, ¹³ Is not He thy Father that created¹⁴ thee? Hath He not made thee and established thee? This creation of them by God, as His people, gave them a new existence, a new relation to each other; so that every offence against each other was a violation of their relation to God, Who had given them this unity, and was, in a nearer sense than of any other, the common Father of all. Why then, the prophet adds, do we deal treacherously, a man against his brother, to profane the covenant of our fathers? He does not yet say, wherein this treacherous dealing consisted; but awakens them to the thought, that sin against a brother is sin against God, Who made him a brother; as, and much more under the Gospel, in which we are all members of one mystical body; ¹⁵ when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ. He speaks of the sin, as affecting those who did not commit it. Why do we deal treacherously? So Isaiah, before his lips were cleansed by the mystical coal, said, ¹⁶ I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips, and the high-priest Joshua was shewn in the vision, clothed with defiled garments¹⁷; and the sin of Achan became the sin of the children of Israel¹⁸, and David's sinful pride in numbering the people was visited upon all¹⁹. He teaches beforehand, that, ²⁰ whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it, or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it. They profaned also the covenant of their fathers, by marrying those whom God forbade, and who would seduce, as heathen wives had Solomon, from His worship. S. Paul in sanctioning the remarriage of widows, adds, ²¹ only in the Lord, i.e. Christian husbands. ²² He who treated as null the difference between the Israelites and a heathen woman, shewed that the difference between the God of Israel and the God of the heathen had before become null to him, whence it follows;

11. Treacherously has Judah dealt; an abomination is committed in Israel. The prophet, by the order of the words, emphasises the treachery and the abomination. This have they done; the very contrary to what was required of them as the people of God. He calls the remnant of Judah by the sacred name of the whole people, of whom they were the surviving representatives. The word "abomination²³" is a word belonging to the Hebrew, and is used especially of things offensive to, or separating from, Almighty God; and Moab, inveterate persecutors of Israel, were his near kindred. Ammonitesses and Moabitesses were as much forbidden by Ezra (ix. 2) as women of the different nations of Canaan, Ashdod or Egypt.

¹¹ S. John viii. 41.

¹² Is. xliii. 1. 7. 21. add xlv. 2, 21, 24.

¹³ Deut. xxxii. 6.

¹⁴ אֱלֹהֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל ¹⁵ 1 Cor. viii. 12.

¹⁶ Is. vi. 5.

¹⁷ Zech. iii. 3, 4. See ab. pp. 523, 524.

¹⁸ Josh. vii. 1, 11.

¹⁹ 2 Sam. xxiv.

²⁰ 1 Cor. xii. 26.

²¹ Ib. vii. 39.

²² Hengst. Christ. iii. 595.

²³ תועבה

Before CHRIST
cir. 397.

|| Or, ought to love.
• Ezra 9. 1.
& 10. 2.
Neh. 13. 23.
|| Or, him that waketh, and him that answereth.
• Neh. 13. 28, 29.

and in Jerusalem; for Judah hath profaned the holiness of the LORD which he || loved, and hath married the daughter of a strange god.

12 The LORD will cut off the man that doeth this, || the master and the scholar, out of the tabernacles of Jacob, and him that offereth an offering unto the LORD of hosts.

13 And this have ye done again, coveridolatry, as the central dereliction of God, and involving offences against the laws of nature, but also all other sins, as adultery, which violate His most sacred laws and alienate from Him.

Hath profaned the holiness of the Lord which He loved, in themselves, who had been separated and set apart by God to Himself as a ¹holy nation. ²Israel was holiness to the Lord. ³The Lord is holy, perfect holiness; His name, holy; all things relating to Him, holy; His law, covenant and all His ordinances and institutions holy; Israel, His peculiar people, an holy people; the temple and all things therein consecrated to Him, holy; Jerusalem, the city of the great God, holy; yea, the whole land of His inheritance, holy; so that whosoever doth not observe those due respects which to any of these belong, may be said to have profaned the holiness which He loved."

Unlawful marriages and unlawful lusts were in themselves a special profanation of that holiness. The high priest was to ⁴take a virgin of his own people to wife, and not to profane his seed among the people. The priests who married strange wives, defiled the priesthood and the covenant of the priesthood⁵. The marriage with idolatresses brought, as one consequence, the profanation by their idolatries. The prohibition is an anticipation of the fuller revelation in the Gospel, that ⁶the body is the temple of the Holy Ghost, and so, that sins against the body are profanations of the temple of God. ⁷"As those who acknowledge, worship and serve the true God are called His ⁷sons and daughters, so they that worshipped any strange god are, by like reason, here called the daughters of that god. Hence the Jews say, ⁸"He that marrieth a heathen woman is, as if he made himself son-in-law to an idol."

Hath married the daughter of a strange god. And so he came into closest relation with idols and with devils.

12. The Lord will cut off the man that doeth this, the master and the scholar, lit. The Lord cut off from the man that doeth this, watcher⁹ and answerer. A proverbial saying apparently, in which the two corresponding classes comprise the whole¹⁰. Yet so, probably, that the one is the active agent; the other, the passive. The one as a watcher goes his rounds, to see that nothing stirreth against that which he is to guard; the other answereth, when roused. Together, they express the two opposite classes, active and passive sin; those who originate the sin, and those who adopt or retain it at the instigation of the inventor or active propagator of it. It will not exempt from punishment, that he was led into the sin.

From the tabernacles of Jacob. Perhaps "he chose the

¹ Ex. xix. 6.

⁴ Lev. xxi. 14, 15.

² Jer. ii. 3.

³ Poc.

⁶ 1 Cor. vi. 15—20.

⁵ Neh. xiii. 29.

⁸ Maim. in Issure biah, c. 12. § 1. Poc.

⁷ Deut. xxxii. 19, 2 Cor. vi. 18.

⁹ Not "the awakener," as if נִרְאָה were active; for נִרְאָה is always intransitive, except in the correction of the text, Job xli. 2. In Chald. נִרְאָה is "a watcher." Dan. iv. 10, 14.

ing the altar of the LORD with tears, with weeping, and with crying out, insomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more, or receiveth it with good will at your hand.

14 ¶ Yet ye say, Wherefore? Because the LORD hath been witness between thee and ¹the wife of thy youth, against whom ²thou hast dealt treacherously: ³'yet is she ⁴thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

word, to remind them of their unsettled condition," out of which God had brought them.

And him that offereth an offering unto the Lord of hosts; i.e. him, who, doing these things, offereth an offering to God, to bribe Him, as it were, to connivance at his sin. In the same meaning, Isaiah says, that God hateth ¹¹iniquity and the solemn meeting, and, ¹²I hate robbery with burnt-offering; or Solomon, ¹³The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord; ¹⁴he that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, his prayer shall be an abomination. And God by Amos says, ¹⁵I hate, I despise, your feast-days, and will not accept your solemn assemblies. In one sense the sacrifice was an aggravation, in that the worship of God made the offence either a sin against light, or implied that God might be bribed into connivance in the breaking of His laws. The ancient discipline of removing from Communion those guilty of grievous sin was founded on this principle.

13. And this ye have done again, adding the second sin of cruelty to their wives to the taking foreign women; they covered the altar of God with tears, in that they by ill-treatment occasioned their wives to weep there to God; and God regarded this, as though they had stained the altar with their tears.

Insomuch that He regardeth not the offering any more. God regarded the tears of the oppressed, not the sacrifices of the oppressors. He would not accept what was thus offered Him as a thing well-pleasing ¹⁶to Him, acceptable to win His good pleasure.

14. And ye say, Wherefore? They again act the innocent, or half-ignorant. What had they to do with their wives' womanly tears? He Who knows the hearts of all was Himself the witness between them and the wife of youth of each; her to whom, in the first freshness of life and their young hearts, each had plighted his troth, having been entrusted by her with her earthly all. ¹⁷*The Lord*, said even Laban, when parting from his daughters, watch between me and thee, when we are absent, the one from the other; if thou shalt afflict my daughters, or if thou shalt take wives beside my daughters, no man is with us; see, God is witness between me and thee.

And he dealt treacherously against her, violating his own faith and her trusting love, which she had given once for all, and could not now retract. And she is thy companion; she has been another self, the companion of thy life, sharing thy sorrows, joys, hopes, fears, interests; different in strength, yet in all, good and ill, sickness and health, thy associate and ¹⁰ Dietrich, Abhandll. zur Hebr. Gram. p. 201 sqq., has instances from the Arabic, but not so energetic as those in the O.T., except when they are the same.

¹² Ib. lxi. 8.

¹³ Prov. xv. 8.

¹⁴ Ib. xxviii. 9.

¹⁵ See above, p. 198 on Am. v. 21.

¹⁶ נָחַם

¹⁷ Gen. xxxi. 49, 50.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

15 And ¹did not he make one? Yet had he the || residue of the spirit. And wherefore one? That he might seed [†]a godly seed. Therefore take heed to your spirit, and let none deal || treacherously against the wife of his youth.

16 For ^athe LORD, the God of Israel, saith || that he hateth [†]putting away: for || Or, if he hate her, put her away. [†] Heb. to put away.

companion; the help meet for the husband and provided for him by God in Paradise; and above all, the wife of thy covenant, to whom thou didst pledge thyself before God. These are so many aggravations of their sin. She was the wife of their youth, of their covenant, their companion; and God was the witness and Sanctifier of their union. Marriage was instituted and consecrated by God in Paradise. Man was to leave father and mother (if so be), but to cleave to his wife indissolubly. For they were to be ¹*no more twain, but one flesh*. Hence, as a remnant of Paradise, even the heathen knew of marriage, as a religious act, guarded by religious sanctions. Among God's people, marriage was a ²*covenant of their God*. To that original institution of marriage he seems to refer in the following;

15. And did not He, God, of Whom he had spoken as the witness between man and his wife, make one, viz. Adam first, to mark the oneness of marriage and make it a law of nature, appointing "that out of man (created in His own image and similitude,) woman should take her beginning, and, knitting them together, did teach that it should never be lawful to put asunder those, whom He by matrimony had made one³." "4 Between those two, and consequently between all other married, to be born from them, He willed that there should be one indivisible union; for Adam could be married to no other save Eve, since no other had been created by God, nor could Eve turn to any other man than Adam, since there was no other in the world. 'Infringe not then this sanction of God, and unity of marriage, and degenerate not from your first parents, Adam and Eve.' "5 If divorce had been good, Jesus says, God would not have made one man and one woman, but, having made one Adam, would have made two women, had He meant that he should cast out the one, bring in the other; but now by the mode of creation, He brought in this law, that each should have, throughout, the wife which he had from the beginning. This law is older than that about divorce, as much as Adam is older than Moses."

Yet had he the residue of the spirit; 6 the breath of life, which He breathed into Adam, and man became a living soul. All the souls, which God would ever create, are His, and He could have called them into being at once. Yet in order to designate the unity of marriage, He willed to create but one.

¹ S. Matt. xix. 6. ² Prov. ii. 17. ³ Marriage Service. ⁴ Lap.

⁵ S. Chrys. de libello repud. n. 2. Opp. iii. 28. Ben. Rib.

⁶ Gen. ii. 7.

⁷ S. Matt. xix. 4-6.

⁸ Gen. i. 27.

⁹ The רוח, "your spirit," manifestly refers back to "the residue of the spirit," רוח which, he says, was God's.

¹⁰ The E. M. "If he hate her, put her away," (which follows Jon.) seems to enjoin what Malachi reproves these for, their cruelty to their wives, as also it gives an unbounded license of divorce.

¹¹ Deut. xxiv. 1, used of disgusting foulness in the chapter before, xxiii. 15.

¹² Things spoken of as objects of God's hatred, are, "a proud look, a lying tongue, hands that shed innocent blood, a heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, a false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren," Prov. vi. 16-19; "pride, arrogancy, the evil way, and the froward mouth," Ib. viii. 13; idolatry, De. xvi. 22, Jer. xlv. 4, "robbery with burnt-offering," Is. lxi. 8; heathen abominations, Deut. xii. 31; worship with sin, Am. v. 21, Is. i. 14.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

one covereth violence with his garment, saith the LORD of hosts: therefore take heed to your spirit, that ye deal not treacherously.

17 ¶ ^{*}Ye have wearied the LORD with your words. Yet ye say, Wherein have we wearied him? When ye say, Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the Isai. 43. 24.

Amos 2. 13.
ch. 3. 13, 14,
15.

So our Lord argues against divorce, ⁷*Have ye not read, that He which made them at the beginning, made them male and female?* They both together are called *one man*⁸, and therefore should be of one mind and spirit also, the unity of which they ought faithfully to preserve.

And wherefore one? Seeking a seed of God, i.e. worthy of God; for from religious marriage, religious offspring may most be hoped from God; and by violating that law, those before the flood brought in a spurious, unsanctified generation, so that God in His displeasure destroyed them all. *And take heed to your spirit*⁹, which ye too had from God, which was His, and which He willed in time to create. He closes, as he began, with an appeal to man's natural feeling, let none deal treacherously against the wife of his youth.

16. *He hateth putting away*¹⁰. He had allowed it for the hardness of their hearts, yet only in the one case of some extreme bodily foulness¹¹, discovered upon marriage, and which the woman, knowing the law, concealed at her own peril. Not subsequent illness or any consequences of it, however loathsome (as leprosy), were a ground of divorce, but only this concealed foulness, which the husband found upon marriage. The capricious tyrannical divorce, God saith, He hateth: a word¹² naturally used only as to sin, and so stamping such divorce as sin.

*One covereth violence with his garment*¹³, or, *and violence covereth his garment*¹⁴, or, it might be, in the same sense, *he covereth his garment with violence*¹⁵, so that it cannot be hid, nor washed away, nor removed, but envelopes him and his garment; and that, to his shame and punishment. It was, as it were, an outer garment of violence, as Asaph says, ¹⁶*violence covereth them as a garment*; or David, ¹⁷*he clothed himself with cursing as with a garment*. It was like a garment with fretting leprosy, unclean and making unclean, to be burned with fire¹⁸. Contrariwise, the redeemed saints had ¹⁹*washed their robes and made them white in the Blood of the Lamb*. Having declared God's hatred of this their doing, he sums up in the same words, but more briefly; and this being so, ye shall take heed to your spirit, and not deal treacherously.

17. Ye have wearied the LORD with your words. "20 By your blasphemous words, full of unbelief and mistrust, you have in a manner wearied God. He speaks of God, after the ¹³ No Jewish-Arabic writer notices the meaning, which Pococke suggested, and Gesenius, Fürst, Ewald follow; as if כִּסָּתָה signified "wife," because in the Koran כִּסָּתָה is used, not directly for 'husband' or 'wife,' but in its original sense, "covering," of each reciprocally, (וְהָיָה לְכַסּוֹתָם לְכַסּוֹתָם) "they (your wives) are a garment to you, and you are a garment to them." So Abimelech said to Sarah, "he [Abraham] is to thee a covering (כִּסָּתָה) of the eyes, unto all which are with thee," (Gen. xx. 16). But כִּסָּתָה does not signify, either husband or wife. In Arabic, كَتَمَ and كَتَمَ loose dresses, (See Lane Arab. Lex. p. 53, 621) are used metaph. of a wife; (كَتَمَ also of a person's self or family as well). But there is no trace of this in Heb.

¹⁴ According to the constr., Nu. xvi. 33, Lev. iv. 8, Job xxi. 26, where the thing covering is the nominative and כִּסָּתָה is put before the thing covered. So Vulg. and LXX. originally, as shewn by the Arabic transl., though now the LXX. has ἐκθροφύματα for ἐκθροφύματα. (De Dieu)

¹⁵ In Ez. xxiv. 7, Job xxxvi. 32, the thing covering is in the acc., with כִּסָּתָה of thing covered.

¹⁶ Ps. lxxiii. 6.

¹⁷ Ib. cix. 18.

¹⁸ Lev. xiii. 47-58.

¹⁹ Rev. vii. 14.

²⁰ Dion.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397. LORD, and he delighteth in them; or, Where is the God of judgment?

CHAPTER III.

1 Of the messenger, majesty and grace of Christ.
7 Of the rebellion, 8 sacrilege, 13 and infidelity manner of men, as a man afflicted by the ills of others. Whence also the Lord says in Isaiah, ¹ I am weary to bear them, and ² thou hast made Me to serve with thy sins; thou hast wearied Me with thine iniquities. In like way the Apostle says, ³ Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God."

With the same contumacy as before, and unconsciousness of sin, they ask, Wherein? It is the old temptation to the prosperity of the wicked. "Does God love the wicked? if not, why does He not punish them?" "The people, when returned from Babylon, seeing all the nations around, and the Babylonians themselves, serving idols but abounding in wealth, strong in body, possessing all which is accounted good in this world, and themselves, who had the knowledge of God, overwhelmed with want, hunger, servitude, is scandalised and says, 'There is no providence in human things; all things are borne along by blind chance, and not governed by the judgement of God; nay rather, things evil please Him, things good displease Him; or if God does discriminate all things, where is His equitable and just judgement?' Questions of this sort minds, which believe not in the world to come, daily raise to God, when they see the wicked in power, the saints in low estate; such as Lazarus, whom we read of in the Gospel, who, before the gate of the rich man in his purple, desires to support his hungry soul with the crumbs which are thrown away from the remnants of the table, while the rich man is of such savagery and cruelty, that he had no pity on his fellow-man, to whom the tongues of the dogs shewed pity; not understanding the time of judgement, nor that those are the true goods, which are for ever, say, He is pleased with the evil, and, Where is the God of judgement?"

Where is the God of the judgement? "i. e. of that judgement, the great, most certain, most exact, clear-sighted, omniscient, most just, most free, wherein He regards neither powerful nor rich nor gifts, nor ought but justice? For He is the God of the judgement, to Whom it belongs by nature to judge all men and things by an exact judgement: for His nature is equity itself, justice itself, providence itself, and that, most just, most wise.—To Him it belongs to be the Judge of all, and to exercise strict judgement upon all; and He will exercise it fully on that decisive and last day of the world, which shall be the horizon between this life and the next, parting off time from eternity, heaven from hell, the blessed from the damned for ever, through Christ, Whom He constituted Judge of all, quick and dead."

III. 1. God answers their complaints of the absence of His judgements, that they would come, but would include those also who clamoured for them. For no one who knew his own sinfulness would call for the judgement of God, as being himself, chief of sinners. S. Augustine pictures one saying to God, "Take away the ungodly man," and that God answers, "Which?"

¹ Is. i. 14.

² Eph. iv. 30.

³ S. Jer.

⁴ Ib. xliii. 24.

⁵ Lap.

⁶ פנה לפני had been used only by Isaiah, xl. 3, lvii. 14, lxii. 10, although פנה לפני abs., had been used Ps. lxxx. 10.

⁷ Is. xl. 3.

⁸ S. Luke i. 76.

⁹ Lap.

¹⁰ S. John vi. 57.

¹¹ Ib. vii. 16.

¹² Ib. iii. 11, v. 43, viii. 38, 40, 47, 55, xii. 49, xiv. 10, 24.

¹³ Ib. iv. 34, v. 19, 20, 26, 30, 36, vi. 38, viii. 23, ix. 4, x. 25, 32, 37, 38, xiv. 10, 11.

of the people. 16 The promise of blessing to them that fear God.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

BEHOLD, ^a I will send my messenger, ^b and he shall ^c prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall ^d

Matt. 11. 10.
Mark 1. 2.
Luke 1. 76.
& 7. 27.
Isai. 40. 3.

Behold, I send My messenger before My face, and he shall prepare My way before Me. They, then, were not prepared for His Coming, for Whom they clamoured. The messenger is the same whom Isaiah had foretold, whose words Malachi uses ⁶; ⁷ The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a high-way for our God. ⁸ Thou, child, was the prophecy on S. John Baptist's birth, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest; for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare His way, to give knowledge of salvation unto His people, for the remission of their sins. Repentance was to be the preparation for the kingdom of Christ, the Messiah, for Whom they looked so impatiently.

He Who speaks, is He Who should come, God the Son. For it was before Him Who came and dwelt among us, that the way was to be prepared. He speaks here in His Divine Nature, as the Lord Who should send, and Who should Himself come in our flesh. In the Gospel, when He was come in the flesh, He speaks not of His own Person but of the Father, since "indivisible are the operations of the Trinity, and what the One doth, the other Two do, since the Three are of one nature power and operation." Whence Christ, in order to give no excuse to the Jews to speak against Him before the time, refers it, as He does His life¹⁰, His doctrine¹¹, words¹² and works¹³ to the Father.

"Those works, which do not relate to that which belongs peculiarly to each Person, being common, are ascribed now to One Person, now to Another, in order to set forth the One Substance in the Trinity of Persons." Thus, S. John says¹⁵, Isaiah spoke of the unbelief of the Jews, when he saw the glory of God the Son and spake of Him, and S. Paul says¹⁶ that the Holy Ghost spake then by him.

And he shall prepare the way before Me. "The same is God's way here, and Christ's there, an evident proof that Christ is one God with the Father, and that, in Christ, God came and was manifest in the flesh." The prophets and all who turned men to righteousness, or who retained the knowledge of the truth or of righteousness or of God in the world, did, in their degree, prepare the way for Christ. But John was His immediate forerunner before His Face, the herald of His immediate approach; whence he is called "the end of the law, and the beginning of the Gospel," "the lamp before the Light, the voice before the Word, the mediator between the Old and the New Testament;" "the link of the law and of grace; a new morning star; a ray, before the true Sun should burst forth," the end of night, the beginning of day.

And the Lord, Whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to His temple. He, Whose Coming they sought for, was Almighty God, the God of Judgement²¹. He Who should come, was the Lord, again Almighty God, since, in usage too, none else is ¹⁴ Rib.

¹⁵ S. John xii. 41.

¹⁶ Acts xxviii. 25.

¹⁷ Poc.

¹⁸ S. Thom. 3 p. q. 38. art. 1. ad 2. See Tert. in Marc. iv. 33. pp. 317, 318. Edinb. Tr.

¹⁹ S. Greg. Naz. Orat. 21. n. 3 p. 387 Ben.

²⁰ S. Chrysol. Serm. 21. Bibl. Patr. vii. 917.

²¹ Rashi, "The God of judgement." Ibn Ezra says, "This is the glory; this is the messenger of the covenant; for the sense is doubled." Abarbanel, "Haadon is the Name which is glorified, who will then come to His temple, the house of His sanctuary, and His glorious name

Before CHRIST
cir. 397.
suddenly come to his temple, *even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, ^dhe shall come, saith the Lord of hosts.

2 But who may abide *the day of his coming? and ^fwho shall stand when he

Before CHRIST
cir. 397.
ch. 4. 1.
Rev. 6. 17.

called "the Lord," as none else can be. The temple also, to which He was to come, the temple of God, is His own. The messenger, or the Angel of the covenant, plainly, even from the parallelism, is the same as the Lord. It was one, for whom they looked; one, of whose absence they complained; ²*where is the God of judgement?* one, who should come to His temple³; one, whose coming they sought and prepared to have pleasure in⁴; one, of whom it is repeated, *lo, He cometh*⁵; one, in the day of whose coming, at whose appearing, it was asked, who shall stand? "⁶All Christian interpreters are agreed that this Lord is Christ, ⁷*Whom God hath made both Lord and Christ*, and ⁸*Who is Lord over all*; by Whom all things were made, are sustained and governed; Who is (as the root of the word⁹ imports) the basis and foundation, not of any private family, tribe or kingdom, but of all; ¹⁰*by Whom are all things and we by Him*: and Whose we are also by right of redemption; and so He is ¹¹*Lord of lords and King of kings*, deservedly called the Lord." As then the special presence of God was often indicated in connection with the Angel of the Lord, so, here, He Who was to come was entitled the Angel or messenger of the covenant, as God also calls Him the covenant itself, ¹²*I will give Thee for a covenant of the people, a light of the Gentiles*. He it was, ¹³*the Angel of His Presence*, Who saved His former people, in Whom His Name was, and Who, by the prerogative of God, would ¹⁴*not pardon their transgressions*. He should be ¹⁵*the Mediator of the new and better covenant which is promised*; ¹⁶*not according to the covenant, that I made with their fathers, in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt, which My covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith the Lord; but this shall be the covenant, that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord, I will put My law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and will be their God and they shall be My people*.

Whom ye seek, are seeking, Whom ye delight in, i.e. profess so to do; He will come, but will be very different from Him whom ye look for, an Avenger on your enemies. Judgement will come, but it will begin with yourselves.

Shall suddenly come, "⁶unawares, when men should not think of them; whence perhaps it is that the Jews reckon the Messiah among what shall come *unawares*¹⁷. As, it is here said of His first Coming, so it is said of His second Coming, (which may be comprehended under this here spoken of) that except they diligently watch for it, ¹⁸*it shall come upon them* and His Shechinah shall dwell there; and this is what they sought in their murmurings." In the "Mashmia' yeshu'ah," "he says, "Haadon may be explained of the king Messiah." Kimchi also gives it as his first explanation; "Haadon, he is the king Messiah, and he is the angel of the covenant;" but he gives an alternative explanation, "or he calls Elijah the messenger of the covenant." Saadiah Gaon admits the "Me," before whom the messenger is sent, to be the Messiah b. David. "The forerunner of the Messiah b. David will be like his ambassador, and as one who prepareth the people, and cleareth the way, as in what is said, Behold I send &c." Sopher Haemunoth Tr. 8 de redemptione, (quoted by Voisin on the P. F. f. 127.) The author of the older Nizzachon (whether seriously or to have something to say) said, "He is sent and is not God." Wagenseil p. 126. Tanchum says, "they are promised a time, in which transgressors will be requited with a swift retribution by the just king whom God will raise up to the rule, and he is the king Messiah."

The Jews are agreed also that the messenger is no ordinary person. Ibn Ezra supposes him to be the Messiah b. Joseph, holding accordingly that he, before whose face he should come, was the Messiah ben David: Kimchi, that it was an angel from heaven (as in Ex. xxiii. 20.) to guard them in the way. But to guard in the way is not to prepare the way before him; Rashi and the author of the Abkath rochel, "the angel of death who should clear away the wicked;" Abarbanel, that it was Malachi himself; but he who is promised through Malachi, was yet to come.

unawares, ¹⁹*suddenly*, ²⁰*in such an hour as they think not*. "²¹The Lord of glory always comes, like a thief in the night, to those who sleep in their sins."

Lo, He will come: he insists again and calls their minds to that Coming, certain, swift, new, wonderful, on which all eyes should be set, but His Coming would be a sifting-time.

2. And who may abide the day of His coming? And who shall stand when He appeareth? The implied answer is, "No one;" as in the Psalm, ²²*If Thou, Lord, wilt mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand?* Joel had asked the same, ²³*The day of the Lord is great and very terrible; and who can abide it?* "²⁴How can the weakness of man endure such might; his blindness, such light; his frailty, such power; his uncleanness, such holiness; the chaff, such a fire? For He is like a refiner's fire. Who would not fail through stupefaction, fear, horror, shrinking reverence, from such majesty?"

Malachi seems to blend, as Joel, the first and second coming of our Lord. The first Coming too was a time of sifting and severance, according as those, to whom He came, did or did not receive Him. The severance was not final, because there was yet space for repentance; but it was real, an earnest of the final judgement. ²⁵*For judgement*, our Lord says, I am come into this world, that they which see not may see, and they which see might be made blind; and again, ²⁶*Now is the judgement of this world*; and, ²⁷*He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed on the name of the Only-Begotten Son of God*; ²⁸*He that believeth not the Son, shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him*. As, on the other hand, He saith, ²⁹*whoso eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood hath eternal life*; and ³⁰*he that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life*; "hath," He saith; not, "shall have;" hath it, in present reality and earnest, though he may forfeit it: so the other class is condemned already, although the one may repent and be saved, the other may ³¹*turn from his righteousness and commit iniquity*; and if he persevere in it, shall die therein. It is then one ever-present judgement. Every soul of man is in a state of grace or out of it; in God's favour or under His wrath; and the judgement of the Great Day, in which the secrets of men's hearts shall be revealed, will be but an outward manifestation of that now hidden judgement. But the words, in their fullest sense, imply a passing of that judgement, in which men do or do not stand, as in those of our Lord, ³²*As a snare shall that day come on all those that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted*

¹ האדון Ex. xxiii. 17, xxxiv. 23, Is. i. 24, iii. 1, x. 16, 33, xxix. 4. [all, besides this place]

² ii. 17.

³ יבוא אל היכלו iii. 1.

⁴ הפצים, מבקשים. Ib.

⁵ ונה בא Ib. x. 36.

⁶ פוע.

⁷ Acts ii. 36.

⁹ פוע., (as Abulwalid, Menaheim, Parchon, Kimchi) derives מן from מן.

¹⁰ 1 Cor. viii. 6.

¹¹ Rev. xvii. 14, xix. 16.

¹² Is. xlii. 6.

¹³ Ib. lxiii. 9.

¹⁴ Ex. xxiii. 21.

¹⁵ Heb. xii. 24, viii. 6.

¹⁶ Jer. xxxi. 32, 33, Heb. viii. 9.

¹⁷ "Buxt. Lex. Ch. et Talm. v. יבוא" פוע.

¹⁸ S. Luke xxi. 35.

¹⁹ S. Mark xiii. 36.

²⁰ S. Matt. xxiv. 44.

²¹ Schmieder.

²² Ps. cxxx. 3.

²³ Jo. ii. 11, וזי יכלי, Jer. x. 10, "The nations shall not abide (קלי) His indignation. Vulg. has, cogitare, i. e. who shall comprehend? But בכלל, in this sense, is used of actual containing, the heaven of heavens cannot contain the Infinite God, (1 Kgs viii. 27, 2 Chr. ii. 5, [6 Eng.] vi. 18.) not of intellectually comprehending.

²⁴ S. John ix. 39.

²⁵ Ib. xii. 31.

²⁶ Ib. iii. 18.

²⁷ Ib. 36.

²⁸ Ib. vi. 54.

²⁹ Ezek. xxxiii. 18.

³⁰ S. Luke xxi. 35, 36.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

5 And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his

¹ Zech. 5. 4.
Jam. 5. 4, 12.
² Or, defraud.

offered unto Thee." "The oblation of the sacrament of the Eucharist, made by the Jews who should believe in Christ, which is known to have been first instituted by Christ in the city of Jerusalem, and afterwards to have been continued by His disciples², shall be pleasing unto the Lord, as the sacrifices of the Patriarchs, Melchisedec, Abraham, and the holy priests in the law, as Aaron; yea, the truth takes precedence of the figure and shadow; the sacrifice of the new law is more excellent and acceptable to God, than all the sacrifices of the law or before the law. With this agrees what the Lord saith to the synagogues, ³ I will turn My hand upon thee, and purely purge away thy dross, and take away all thy tin; and I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning: and the destruction of the transgressors and of the sinners shall be together, and they that forsake the Lord shall be consumed." So now it follows;

5. And I will come near to you to judgement. They had clamoured for the coming of the God of judgement; God assures them that He will come to judgement, which they had desired, but far other than they look for. The few would be purified; the great mass of them (so that He calls them you), the main body of those who had so clamoured, would find that He came as a Judge, not for them but against them.

And I will be a swift witness. "In judging I will bear witness, and witnessing, I, the Same, will bring forth judgement, saith the Lord; therefore the judgement shall be terrible, since the judge is an infallible witness, whom the conscience of no one will be able to contradict."

God would be a swift witness, as He had said before, He shall come suddenly. Our Lord calls Himself the Faithful and True witness, when He stands in the midst of the Church, as their Judge. God's judgements are always unexpected by those, on whom they fall. The sins are those specially condemned by the law; the use of magical arts as drawing men away from God, the rest as sins of special malignity. Magical arts were rife at the time of the Coming of our Lord⁵; and adultery, as shewn in the history of the woman taken in adultery, when her accusers were convicted in their own consciences⁶.

Oppress the hireling, lit. oppress the hire, ⁷ i.e. deal oppressively in it. Behold, says S. James⁸, the hire of the labourers who have reaped down your fields, which is by you kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. The mere delay in the payment of the wages of the labourer brought sin unto ¹ Dion.

² S. Matt. xxvi. [29] Acts ii. 42, 46.

³ Is. i. 25, 26, 28.

⁴ Rev. iii. 14, i. 5, "I, and not other witnesses, having seen with My own eyes." Theod. S. Jer.

⁵ See Introduction to Zechariah p. 508, and on Zech. xiii. 2. p. 582. Lightfoot, on S. Matt. xxiv. 24., quotes Maimonides, alleging that one "elected in the Sanhedrin ought to be learned in the arts of astrologers, diviners, soothsayers &c. that he might be able to judge those guilty thereof." Sanhedrin c. 2. He mentions the belief that many had perished thereby (Hieros. Sanhedr. f. 18, 3), 80 women hung in one day for it at Ascalon, (Ib. f. 23, 3, Babyl. Sanh. f. 44, 2;) for that "the Jewish women had greatly broken out into such practices." Gloss Ib.

⁶ S. John viii. 9, adulterous generation. S. Matt. xii. 39. Lightfoot on S. John viii. 3 quotes Sotah f. 47. 1. "From the time that homicides were multiplied, the beheading of the heifer ceased: from the time that adulterers were multiplied, the bitter waters ceased:" and Maimonides on Sotah, c. 3, "When the adulterers multiplied under the 2nd Temple, the Sanhedrin abolished the ordeal of the adulteresses by the bitter water; relying on its being written, 'I will not visit your daughters when they commit whoredom, nor your spouses

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the Lord of hosts.

^m Num. 23. 19.
Rom. 11. 29.
Jam. 1. 17.

6 For I am the Lord, ^m I change not;

him, against whom he cried to God⁹. It is no light sin, since it is united with the heaviest, and is spoken of as reaching the ears of God. The widow and the fatherless stand in a relation of special nearness to God.

And fear not Me. He closes with the central defect, which was the mainspring of all their sins, the absence of the fear of God. The commission of any of these sins, rife as they unhappily are, proves that those who did them had no fear of God. "Nothing hinders that this should be referred to the first Coming of Christ. For Christ, in preaching to the Jews, exercised upon them a judgement of just rebuke, especially of the priests, Scribes and Pharisees, as the Gospels shew."

6. I am the Lord, I change not, better, more concisely. *I, the Lord*¹⁰, change not. The proper name of God, He Who Is, involves His Unchangeableness. For change implies imperfection; it changes to that which is either more perfect or less perfect: to somewhat which that being, who changes, is not or has not. But God has everything in Himself perfectly. "Thou Alone, O Lord, Art what Thou Art, and Thou Art Who Art. For what is one thing in the whole and another in parts, and wherein is anything subject to change, is not altogether what Is. And what beginneth from not being, and can be conceived, as not being, and only subsisteth through another thing, returns to not-being; and what hath a 'has been,' which now is not, and a 'to be,' which as yet is not, that is not, properly and absolutely. But Thou Art what Thou Art. For whatever Thou Art in any time or way, that Thou Art wholly and always; and Thou Art, Who Art properly and simply, because Thou hast neither 'to have been' or 'to be about to be;' but only to be present; and canst not be conceived, ever not to have been." "There is only one simple Good, and therefore One Alone Unchangeable, which is God."

Our life is a "becoming" rather than a simple "being;" it is a continual losing of what we had, and gaining what we had not; for "in as far as any one is not what he was, and is what he was not, so far forth he dieth and ariseth;" dieth to what he was, ariseth to be something otherwise.

"Increase evidences a beginning; decrease, death and destruction. And therefore Malachi says, I am God, and I change not, ever retaining His own state of being; because what has no origin cannot be changed."

So the Psalmist says, ¹⁵ As a vesture, Thou shalt change them and they shall be changed, but Thou art the Same, and Thy years shall not fail; and Balaam, controlled by God, when they commit adultery." Lightfoot subjoins, "The Gemarists teach that Johanan b. Zacchai was the author of that advice, who was still alive, in the Sanhedrin, and perhaps among those who brought the adulteress before Christ. For some things make it probable, that the Scribes and Pharisees, mentioned here, were elders of the Synagogue." S. Justin reproaches them with having fresh wives, wherever they went throughout the world. Dial. fin. p. 243. Oxf. Tr.

⁷ עֲקָרִי לְבַר כִּבְרִי, as in Mi. ii. 2, עֲקָרִי נָבִי בִּיחִי, press a man and his house.

⁸ S. Jas. v. 4.

⁹ Deut. xxiv. 14, 15.

¹⁰ The Lord is in apposition to I, as, in the following clause, the sons of Jacob to ye. The two clauses correspond in form.

I, (אֲנִי) the Lord, change not;

Ye, (אַתֶּם) sons of Jacob, are not consumed.

¹¹ S. Anselm Prosl. c. 22. p. 34 Ben.

¹² S. Aug. de Civ. Dei xi. 10.

¹³ S. Aug. Conf. xi. 7. p. 291. Oxf. Tr.

¹⁴ Novatian de Trin. c. 4.

¹⁵ Ps. cii. 27.

Before
C H R I S T
cir. 397.
n therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.

1 Lam. 3. 22.
o Acts 7. 51.
p Zech. 1. 3.
q ch. 1. 6.
7 ¶ Even from the days of ° your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. ° Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. ° But ye said, Wherein

1 God is not a man, that He should lie, or the son of man, that He should repent; and, 2 with Whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.

Of this unchangeableness of God, His holy ones partake, as far as they fix themselves on God. "3 The soul of man hangs upon Him, by Whom it was made. And because it was made, to desire God Alone, but every thing which it desires below is less than He, rightly doth not that suffice it, which is not God. Hence is it, that the soul is scattered hither and thither, and is repelled from everything, toward which it is borne, through satiety of them. But holy men guard themselves by cautious observation, lest they should be relaxed from their intentness by change, and because they desire to be the same, wisely bind themselves to the thought, whereby they love God. For in the contemplation of the Creator, they will receive this, that they should ever enjoy one stability of mind. No changeableness then dissipates them, because their thought ever perseveres, free from unlikeness to itself. This therefore they now imitate, striving with effort, which hereafter they shall with joy receive as a gift. To which unchangeableness the prophet had bound himself by the power of love, when he said, 4 One thing I required of the Lord, which I will require, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord. To this unity Paul clave intently, when he said, 5 One thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind and stretching forth to those things which are before, I press forward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

And ye sons of Jacob are not consumed. Man would often have become weary of man's wickedness and waywardness. We are impatient at one another, readily despair of one another. God might justly have cast off them and us; but He changes not. He abides by the covenant which He made with their fathers; He consumed them not; but with His own unchangeable love awaited their repentance. Our hope is not in ourselves, but in God.

7. Even from the days of your fathers. Back to those days and from them °, ye are gone away from My ordinances. "7 I am not changed from good; ye are not changed from evil. I am unchangeable in holiness; ye are unchangeable in perversity."

Return unto Me. The beginning of our return is from the preventing grace of God. 8 Turn Thou me, and I shall be turned; for Thou art the Lord my God, is the voice of the soul to God, preparing for His grace; 9 turn us, O God of our salvation. For, not in its own strength, but by His grace can the soul turn to God. Turn thou to Me and I will return unto you, is the Voice of God, acknowledging our free-will, and promising His favour, if we accept His grace in return.

shall we return?

8 ¶ Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? ° In tithes and offerings.

9 Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation.

10 ° Bring ye all the tithes into ° the

Before
C H R I S T
cir. 397.

° Neh. 13. 10, 12.

° Prov. 3. 9, 10.
° 1 Chr. 26. 20.
° 2 Chr. 31. 11.
° Neh. 10. 38.
° & 13. 12.

And ye say, Wherein shall we return? Strange ignorance of the blinded soul, unconscious that God has aught against it! It is the Pharisaic spirit in the Gospel. It would own itself doubtless in general terms a sinner, but when called on, wholly to turn to God, as being wholly turned from Him, it asks, "In what? What would God have of me?" as if ready to do it.

8. Shall a man rob or cheat, defraud God? God answers question by question, but thereby drives it home to the sinner's soul, and appeals to his conscience. The conscience is steeled, and answers again, In what? God specifies two things only, obvious, patent, which, as being material things, they could not deny. In tithes and offerings. The offerings included several classes of dues to God, a) the first fruits¹⁰; b) the annual half-shekel¹¹; c) the offerings made for the tabernacle¹², and the second temple¹³ at its first erection; it is used of ordinary offerings¹⁴; d) of the tithes of their own tithes, which the Levites paid to the priests¹⁵; e) of the portions of the sacrifice which accrued to the priests¹⁶.

9. Ye have been cursed with the curse (not "with a curse"). The curse threatened had come upon them: but, as fore-supposed in Leviticus by the repeated burthen, If ye still walk contrary to Me, they had persevered in evil. God had already shewn His displeasure. But they, so far from being amended by it, were the more hardened in their sin. Perhaps as men do, they pleaded their punishment, as a reason why they should not amend. They defrauded God, under false pretences. They were impoverished by His curse, and so they could not afford to pay the tithes; as men say, "the times are bad; so we cannot help the poor" of Christ. And Me ye still are defrauding¹⁷; Me, ye; man, God. And that not one or other, but this whole people. It was a requital as to that, in which they had offended. "18 Because ye have not rendered tithes and first-fruits, therefore ye are cursed in famine and penury." "18 Because the people did not render tithes and first-fruits to the Levites, the Lord saith, that He Himself suffered fraud, Whose ministers, constrained by hunger and penury, deserted the temple. For, if He is visited by others in prison, and sick, is received and cared for, and, hungry and athirst, receives food and drink, why should He not receive tithes in His ministers, and, if they are not given, be Himself deprived of His portion?"

10. Bring the whole tithes, not a part only, keeping back more or less, and, as he had said, defrauding God, offering, like Ananias, a part, as if it had been the whole; into the treasury, where they were collected in the time of Hezekiah¹⁹, and again, at this time, by the direction of Nehemiah, so that there shall be food²⁰, not superfluity, in My house, "21 for those who minister in the house of My sanctuary." 22 The Levites

17 לקח. According to its probable etym. ("withdrew and so hid," Arab.), it might be defrauding rather than open robbery. But it has not this metaph. meaning in Arabic. Abulw. Tanchum, Hunt. 206., render it of open violence גזל. גזל occurs, besides, in Hebrew only in Pr. xxii. 23, The Lord will plead their cause and will spoil those who spoil them, i.e. He will requite them as they have done; in the same bold language, as in Ps. xviii. 17.

18 S. Jer.

20 פך, food, as Pr. xxxi. 15, Ps. cxi. 5.

21 Jon.

22 Neh. xiii. 10-23.

1 Nu. xxiii. 19.

3 S. Greg. Mor. xxvi. 44. n. 79. Ben.

4 Ps. xxvii. 4.

2 S. Jas. i. 17.

5 Phil. iii. 13, 14.

6 לביי

7 Rup.

8 Jer. xxxi. 18. Lam. v. 21.

9 Ps. lxxxv. 4.

10 תורה Num. xv. 19, 20.

11 Ex. xxx. 13-15.

12 Ib. xxv. 2, 3, xxxv. 5, 21, 24, xxxvi. 3, 6.

13 Ezr. viii. 25.

14 2 Chr. xxxi. 10, 12 (where תעשר and תתעשר are joined, as here, but in inverse order.)

15 Nu. xviii. 26, 28, 29.

16 Lev. vii. 14.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the ^u windows of heaven, and [†] pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

[†] Amos 4. 9.

11 And I will rebuke [†] the devourer for and singers had, before the reformation, fled every one to his field, because the portion of the Levites had not been given them. On Nehemiah's remonstrance, aided by Malachi, the tithe of corn and the wine and the new oil were brought into the treasuries.

Bring the whole tithes. "Thou knowest that all things which come to thee are God's, and dost not thou give of His own to the Creator of all? The Lord God needeth not: He asketh not a reward, but reverence: He asketh not any thing of thine, to restore to Him. He asketh of thee first-fruits and tithes. Niggard, what wouldest thou do, if He took nine parts to Himself, and left thee the tenth?—What if He said to thee; 'Man, thou art Mine, Who made thee; Mine is the land which thou tillest; Mine are the seeds, which thou sowest; Mine are the animals, which thou weariest: Mine are the showers, Mine the winds, Mine the sun's heat; and since Mine are all the elements, whereby thou livest, thou who givest only the labour of thine hands, deservest only the tithes.' But since Almighty God lovingly feeds us, He gives most ample reward to us who labour little: claiming to Himself the tithes only, He has condoned us all the rest."

And prove Me now herewith, in or by this thing. God pledges Himself to His creatures, in a way in which they themselves can verify. "If you will obey, I will supply all your needs; if not, I will continue your dearth." By whatever laws Gods orders the material creation, He gave them a test, of the completion of which they themselves could judge, of which they themselves must have judged. They had been afflicted with years of want. God promises them years of plenty, on a condition which He names. What would men think now, if any one had, in God's name, promised that such or such a disease, which injured our crops or our cattle, should come at once to an end, if any one of God's laws should be kept? We should have been held as fanatics, and rightly; for we had no commission of God. God authenticates those by whom He speaks; He promises, Who alone can perform.

"There be three keys which God hath reserved in His own hands, and hath not delivered to any to minister or substitute, the keys of life, of rain, and of the resurrection. In the ordering of the rain they look on His great power, no less than in giving life at first, or afterwards raising the dead to it; as S. Paul saith, ³ God left not Himself without witness, in that He did good and gave rain from heaven and fruitful seasons."

If I will not open the windows of heaven ⁴. In the time of the flood, they were, as it were, opened, to man's destruction: now, God would rain abundantly for you, for their

¹ App. Serm. S. Aug. 277. Opp. v. App. p. 461. "Not S. Augustine's; more like Cæsar than S. Aug." Ben.

² Poc. quoting Sanhedr. c. Chelek, and Taanith c. 1.

³ Acts xiv. 17. The exact expression occurs only in the history of the flood, Gen. vii. 11, viii. 2; in the scoffing courtier's speech, ironically, of God "making windows in heaven" (בַּשָּׁמַיִם), 2 Kgs vii 2. and, perhaps in reference to the flood, Isaiah says, "windows from on high are opened, and the foundations of the earth do shake." Is. xxiv. 18.

⁵ ἐκρέχυνται Rom. v. 5.

your sakes, and he shall not [†] destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the LORD of hosts.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.
[†] Heb. corrupt.

12 And all nations shall call you blessed:

for ye shall be ² a delightful land, saith [†] the LORD of hosts.

sakes. And pour you out, lit. empty out to you, give to them fully, holding back nothing. So in the Gospel it is said, that the love of God is shed abroad⁵, poured out and forth in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given to us.

That there be not room enough to receive it; lit. until there be no sufficiency⁶. The text does not express what should not suffice, whether it be on God's part or on man's. Yet it were too great irony, if understood of God. His superabundance, above all which we can ask or think, is a first principle in the conception of God, as the Infinite Source of all being. But to say of God, that He would pour out His blessing, until man could not contain it, is one bliss of eternity, that God's gifts will overflow the capacity of His creatures to receive them. The pot of oil poured forth the oil, until, on the prophet's saying, ⁷ Bring me yet a vessel, the widow's son said, There is not a vessel more. And the oil stayed. God's gifts are limited only by our capacity to receive them.

11. And I will rebuke the devourer, the locust, caterpillar, or any like scourge of God. It might be, that when the rain watered the fields, the locust or caterpillar &c. might destroy the corn, so that the labours of man should perish; wherefore he adds, I will rebuke the devourer. Neither shall your vine cast her fruit⁸ before the time, holding out a fair promise, but cut off by the frost-wind or the hail; the blossoms or the unripe fruit strewing the earth, as a token of God's displeasure.

12. All nations shall call you blessed. The promise goes beyond the temporal prosperity of their immediate obedience. Few could know or think much of the restored prolificness of Judæa; none could know of its antecedents. A people, as well as individuals, may starve, and none know of it. Had the whole population of Judah died out, their Persian masters would not have cared for it, but would have sent fresh colonists to replace them and pay the tribute to the great king. The only interest, which all nations could have in them, was as being the people of God, from whom He should come, the Desire of all nations, in Whom all the families of the earth would be blessed. Of this, God's outward favour was the earnest; they should have again the blessings which He had promised to His people.

And ye shall be called a delightful land, lit. a land of good pleasure. It was not so much the land as the people: ye shall be called. The land stands for the people upon it, in whom its characteristics lay. The river Jordan was not so bright as Abana and Pharpar: "the aspect of the shore" is the same, when the inhabitants are spiritually or morally dead; only the more beautiful, in contrast with the lifeless "spirit of man." So Isaiah says, ⁹ The nations shall see thy ⁶ In Ps. lxxii. 3 (quoted by Ges. Ros. &c.) "there shall be abundance of peace עוֹלָם לְשָׁלוֹם," lit. "until there be no moon," has a literal meaning, that the peace should last until the end of our creation, without saying anything of what lies beyond.

⁷ 2 Kgs iv. 6.

⁸ עֵלֶל, used elsewhere as to the animal world, is used of a land, 2 Kgs ii. 19, whence עֵלֶלָה 1b. 21. of "immaturity." Pliny speaks of "arborum abortus." H. N. xii. 2, G. Ges. ⁹ Is. lxii. 2-4.

Before
C H R I S T
cir. 397.
a ch. 2. 17.

13 ¶ ^a Your words have been stout against me, saith the LORD. Yet ye say, What have we spoken so much against thee?

b Job 21. 14,
15, & 22. 17.
Ps. 73. 13.
Zeph. 1. 12.

† Heb. his observation.

† Heb.
in black.

14 ^b Ye have said, It is vain to serve God: and what profit is it that we have kept † his ordinance, and that we have walked † mournfully before the LORD of righteousness, and all kings thy glory; and thou shalt be called by a name, which the mouth of the LORD shall name—Thou shalt no more be called Forsaken, nor shall thy land be called Desolate, but thou shalt be called My-delight-is-in-her, and thy land Married: for the LORD delighteth in thee and thy land shall be married. God and man should delight in her.

13. Your words have been stout against Me, probably oppressive to ¹ Me, as it is said, the fumine was strong upon the land. And ye have said, What have we spoken among ourselves² against Thee? Again, the entire unconsciousness of self-ignorance and self-conceit! They had criticised God, and knew it not. “³ Before, he had said, ⁴ Ye have wearied the LORD with your words, and ye said, Wherein have we wearied Him? When ye said, Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the LORD &c. Now he repeats this more fully. For the people who returned from Babylon seemed to have a knowledge of God, and to observe the law, and to understand their sin, and to offer sacrifices for sin; to pay tithes, to observe the sabbath, and the rest, commanded in the law of God, and seeing all the nations around them abounding in all things, and that they themselves were in penury hunger and misery, was scandalised and said, ‘What does it benefit me, that I worship the One True God, abominate idols, and, pricked with the consciousness of sin, walk mournfully before God?’ A topic, which is pursued more largely in the 73rd Psalm.” Only the Psalmist relates his temptations to God, and God’s deliverance of him from them; these adopted them and spake them against God. They claim, for their partial and meagre service, to have fulfilled God’s law, taking to themselves God’s words of Abraham, he kept My charge⁵.

14. Ye have said, It is vain to serve God: “⁶ as receiving no gain or reward for their service. This is the judgement of the world, whereby worldlings think pious, just, sincere, strict men, vain, i.e. especially when they see them impoverished, despised, oppressed, afflicted, because they know not the true goods of virtue and eternal glory, but measure all things by sight sense and taste.—Truly, if the righteous had not hope of another and better life, in vain would they afflict themselves and bear the afflictions of others. For, as the Apostle says, ⁷ If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. But now, hoping for another blessed and eternal life for the slight tribulations of this, we are the happiest of all men.”

And we have walked mournfully⁸. Again they take in ¹ חזק, with ק, on the land, Gen. xli. 56, 57; the city, 2 Kgs xxv. 3, Jer. lii. 6; with על, of persons, Gen. xlvii. 20; hand of God was strong upon the prophet, Ez. iii. 14; they were urgent, pressed upon. Ez. xii. 33.

² The force of Nif. as in iii. 16. Ps. cix. 23, Ezek. xxxiii. 30. The constr. with על as Pih. in Ps. cix. 20, Hos. vii. 13, Jer. xxix. 32.

³ S. Jer.

⁴ ii. 17.

⁵ חשך מלכות Gen. xxvi. 5; add Lev. xviii. 30, xxi. 9, Deut. xi. 1, Jos. xxii. 3. 2 Kgs ii. 3, 2 Chr. xiii. 11, xxiii. 6, Zech. iii. 7.

⁶ Lap.

⁷ 1 Cor. xv. 19.

⁸ הלכת קרנית. The form ק is one found only here; the phrase in the P’s. is הלכת קרנית.

hosts?

15 And now ^c we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness † are set up; yea, they that ^d tempt God are even delivered.

Before
C H R I S T
cir. 397.
c Ps. 73. 12.
ch. 2. 17.
† Heb. are built.
d Ps. 95. 9.

16 ¶ Then they ^e that feared the LORD ^f spake often one to another: and the LORD hearkened, and heard it, and ^g a book of

e Ps. 66. 16.
ch. 4. 2.
f Heb. 3. 13.
g Ps. 56. 8.
Isai. 65. 6.
Rev. 20. 12.

their mouths the words of Psalmists, that they took the garb of mourners, going about mourning before God for their country’s afflictions.

15. And now we call the proud happy [blessed]. This being so, they sum up the case against God. God had declared that all nations should call them blessed⁹, if they would obey. They answer, using His words; And now we, (they lay stress on the word, ¹⁰ we,) pronounce blessed, in fact, those whom God had pronounced cursed: ¹¹ Thou hast rebuked the proud, who are cursed. Their characteristic, among other bad men, is of insolence¹², arrogance, boiling over with self-conceit, and presumptuous towards God. The ground of Babylon’s sentence was, ¹³ she hath been proud towards the LORD, the Holy One of Israel; Jethro says of the Egyptians, as a ground of his belief in God, ¹⁴ for, in the thing that they dealt proudly, He was above them. It describes the character of the act of Israel, when God bade them not go up, neither fight, and they would not hear, and went up presumptuously into the battle¹⁵; the contumacious act of those, who, appealing to the judgement of God, afterwards refused it¹⁶; of Johanan’s associates, who accuse Jeremiah of speaking falsely in the name of God¹⁷; they are persons who rise up¹⁸, forge lies against¹⁹, dig pits for²⁰, deal perversely with²¹, hold in derision²², oppress²³, the pious. Whether or no, they mean specifically the heathen, those, whom these pronounced blessed, were those who were contemptuous towards God.

Yea, the workers of wickedness, those who habitually work it, whose employment it is, are built up; yea, they have tried God and have escaped. God had promised that, if ²⁴ they will diligently learn the ways of My people, they shall be built up in the midst of My people; these say, the workers of wickedness had been built up: God had bidden themselves, ²⁵ make trial of Me in this; these answer, the wicked had made trial of Him, and had been unpunished.

16. Then they that feared the LORD spake often among themselves. The proud-speaking of the ungodly called out the piety of the God-fearing. “²⁶ The more the ungodly spake against God, the more these spake among themselves for God.” Both went on till the great Day of severance. True, as those said, the distinction between righteous and wicked was not made yet, but it was stored up out of sight. They spake among themselves, strengthening each other against the ungodly sayings of the ungodly.

And the LORD hearkened and heard it. God, Whom these thought an idle looker-on, or regardless, all the while

Ps. xxxv. 14, xxxviii. 7, xlii. 10, xliii. 2.

⁹ verse 12.

¹⁰ אמת emph.

¹¹ Ps. cxix. 21.

¹² Pr. xxi. 24.

¹³ על דבר אלהי Jer. i. 29. It is used in regard to Babylon together with שרית (as in Ps. lxxxvi. 14.) Is. xlii. 11.

¹⁴ Ex. xviii. 11.

It is used of Egypt towards Israel. Neh. ix. 16.

¹⁵ Deut. i. 41, 43.

¹⁶ Ib. xvii. 12, 13.

¹⁷ Jer. xliii. 2.

¹⁸ Ps. lxxxvi. 14.

¹⁹ Ib. cxix. 69.

²⁰ Ib. 85.

²¹ Ib. 78.

²² Ib. 51.

²³ Ib. 122.

²⁴ Jer. xii. 16.

²⁵ ch. iii. 10.

²⁶ a Castro.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name.

17 And ^h they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my ⁱ jewels; and ^k I will spare them,

^k Ps. 103. 13.

(to speak after the manner of men) was bending the ear ¹ from heaven and heard. Not one pious loyal word for Him and His glory, escaped Him.

And a book of remembrance was written before Him. Kings had their chronicles written ², wherein men's good or ill deeds towards them were recorded. But the image is one of the oldest in Scripture, and in the self-same words, ³ the Lord said to Moses, Write this, a memorial in a book. God can only speak to us in our own language. One expression is not more human than another, since all are so. Since with God all things are present, and memory relates to the past, to speak of God as "remembering" is as imperfect an expression in regard to God, as to speak of "a book." "4 Forgetfulness hath no place with God, because He is in no way changed; nor remembrance, because He forgetteth not." Both expressions are used, only to picture vividly to our minds, that our deeds are present with God, for good or for evil; and in the Day of Judgement He will make them manifest to men and angels, as though read out of a book, and will requite them. So Daniel had said, ⁵ the judgement was set, and the books were opened. And S. John says, ⁶ The books were opened, and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. So Moses says to God, ⁷ If not, blot me out of Thy book which Thou hast written; and David, prophesying, prays, ⁸ Let them be blotted out of the book of the living, and not be written among the righteous; and our Lord bids His disciples, ⁹ Rejoice in this, that your names are written in heaven.

And that thought upon His name, rather, esteemed, prized, it, in contrast with those who ¹⁰ despised; as, of Christ, when He should come, it is said, ¹¹ He was despised, and we esteemed Him not. "12 The thinking on His Name imports, not a bare thinking of, but a due esteem and awful regard of, so as with all care to avoid all things which may tend to the dishonour of it, as always in His presence and with respect to Him and fear of Him." "13 Those are meant who always meditate on the ways of the Lord and the knowledge of His Godhead; for His name is Himself, and He is His Name;" "14 the wise in heart who know the mystery of the awful glorious Name."

17. And they shall be Mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up My jewels ¹⁵, or perhaps better, And they shall be to Me, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day which I make (or, in which I do this) a peculiar treasure ¹⁶. "17 In the day of judgement, those who fear Me and believe and maintain My providence shall be to Me a peculiar treasure, i. e. a people peculiarly belonging and precious to Me, blessed in the vision and fruition of Me. For as in the old as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

18 ¹ Then shall ye return, and discern ¹ Ps. 58. 11. between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.

law, Israel was a peculiar treasure ¹⁸, a special people ¹⁹ and inheritance of God, chosen out of all nations, so in the new law Christians, and those who are righteous through grace, are the special treasure of God, and in heaven shall be His special treasure in glory, possessed by God and possessing God." The peculiar treasure, is something, much prized, made great store of, and guarded. Such are Christians, bought at a great price, even by the precious Blood of Christ; but much more evidently such shall they be, Malachi says, in all eternity, which that Day of final retribution shall decide, "20 joying in the participation of their Creator, by Whose eternity they are fixed, by Whose truth they are assured, by Whose gift they are holy."

And I will spare them. It is a remarkable word, as used of those who should be to Him a peculiar treasure, teaching that, not of their own merits, they shall be such, but by His great mercy. It stands in contrast with the doom of the wicked, whom that day shall sentence to everlasting loss of God. Still, the saved also shall have needed the tender mercy ²¹ of God, whereby He pardoned their misdeeds and had compassion upon them. "22 If Thou, Lord, shalt lay up iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand?" Among those whom God will spare on that day, will be countless, whom the self-righteous despised as sinners. "23 I will spare them, although formerly sinners; I will spare them, repenting, and serving Me with the service of a pious confession, as a man spareth his own son which served him." For our Lord saith of the son, who refused to go work in his Father's vineyard, and afterwards repented and went, that he ²⁴ did the will of his Father.

18. Then shall ye return, or turn, not, "return" in the sense of returning to God, for in that day will be the time of judgement, not of repentance; nor yet, "then shall ye again see;" for this is what they denied; and, if they had ceased to deny it, they would have been converted, not in that day, but before, when God gave them grace to see it. They shall turn, so as to have other convictions than before; but, as Judas. The Day of judgement will make a great change in earthly judgement. Last shall be first, and first last; this world's sorrow shall end in joy, and worldly joy in sorrow; afflictions shall be seen to be God's love: ²⁵ Thou in very faithfulness hast afflicted me; and the unclouded prosperity of the ungodly to be God's abandonment of them. The picture of the surprise of the wicked in the Day of judgement, in the Wisdom of Solomon, is a comment on the Prophet. "26 Then shall the righteous man stand in great boldness before the face of such as have afflicted him, and made no account of his labours; when they see it, they shall be troubled with terrible fear, and

¹ יקשבו ² חכמות Esth. vi. 1. ³ כתב וזאת זקרון בספר Ex. xvii. 14.

⁴ S. Aug. in Ps. xxxvii. n. 5. ⁵ Dan. vii. 10. ⁶ Rev. xx. 12.

⁷ Ex. xxxii. 32. ⁸ Ps. lxxix. 28. ⁹ S. Luke x. 20. ¹⁰ Mal. i. 6.

¹¹ Is. liii. 3. ¹² Ps. c. ¹³ Kim. ib. ¹⁴ Ibn Ezr. ib.

¹⁵ The grounds for this rendering are 1) the recurrence of the words, יום אשר אני עולה, ver. 21. Heb. [iv. 3. Eng.], and the recurrence of לי סלה Ex. xix. 5; so that we have both phrases elsewhere. In Deut. vii. 6, there is the equivalent ליהוה לו לעם סלה, and the like, Deut. xiv. 2, Ps. cxxxv. 4.

¹⁶ Besides the places in which Israel is spoken of such, it occurs only of David's treasures, laid up for building the temple 1 Chr. xxix. 3. and of the public treasures of kings and provinces. Eccl. ii. 8. ¹⁷ Lap.

¹⁸ סלה Ex. cxxix. 5, Ps. cxxxv. 4. ¹⁹ סלה Deut. vii. 6.

²⁰ S. Aug. in Civ. Dei x. 7.

²¹ חסד has originally the meaning of tender compassion.

²² Ps. cxxx. 3. ²³ Rup. ²⁴ S. Matt. xxi. 21.

²⁵ Ps. cxix. 75. ²⁶ Wisd. v. 1-5.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

CHAPTER IV.

1 God's judgment on the wicked, 2 and his blessing on the good. He exhorteth to the study of the law, 5 and telleth of Elijah's coming and office.

* Joel 2. 31.
ch. 3. 2.
2 Pet. 3. 7.
b ch. 3. 18.

FOR, behold, ^athe day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all ^bthe proud, shall be amazed with the strangeness of his salvation, so far beyond all they looked for: and they, repenting and groaning for anguish of spirit, shall say within themselves, This was he whom we had sometimes in derision and a proverb of reproach: we fools counted his life madness and his end to be without honour: how is he numbered among the children of God, and his lot is among the saints!"

IV. 1. For, behold, the day cometh, which shall burn as an oven. He had declared the great severance of the God-fearing and the God-blaspheming, those who served and those who did not serve God; the righteous and the wicked; now he declares the way and time of the severance, the Day of Judgement. Daniel had described the fire of that day, ¹*The throne [of the Ancient of days] was a fiery flame; his wheels a burning fire: a fiery stream issued and came forth from Him: the judgement was set and the books were opened.* Fire is ever spoken of, as accompanying the judgement. ²*Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence, a fire shall devour before Him;* ³*Behold the Lord will come with fire: for by fire and by the sword will the Lord plead with all flesh: ⁴every man's work shall be made manifest, for the Day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire: and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is.* S. Peter tells us that fire will be of this burning world; ⁵*the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgement and perdition of ungodly men;—in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.*

The oven, or furnace, pictures the intensity of the heat, which is white from its intensity, and darts forth, fiercely, shooting up like a living creature, and destroying life, as the flame of the fire of Nebuchadnezzar's ⁶*burning fiery furnace slew those men that took up Shadrach Meshach and Abednego.* The whole world shall be one burning furnace.

And all the proud and all that do wickedly. All those, whom those murderers pronounced blessed⁷, yea and all who should thereafter be like them (he insists on the universality of the judgement), every doer of wickedness, up to that day and those who should then be, shall be stubble. ⁸*The proud and mighty, who in this life were strong as iron and brass, so that no one dared resist them, but they dared to fight with God, these, in the Day of Judgement, shall be most powerless, as stubble cannot resist the fire, in an everliving death."*

That shall leave them neither root nor branch "i.e. ⁹they shall have no hope of shooting up again to life; that life, I mean, which is worthy of love, and in glory with God, in holiness and bliss. For when the root has not been wholly cut away, nor the shoot torn up as from the depth, some hope is retained, that it may again shoot up. For, as it is yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be ^cstubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall ^dleave them neither root nor branch.

2 ¶ But unto you that ^efear my name shall the 'Sun of righteousness arise with

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.
^c Obad. 18.

^e ch. 3. 16.
^f Luke 1. 78.
Eph. 5. 14.
2 Pet. 1. 19.
Rev. 2. 28.

written, ¹⁰*There is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease.* But if it be wholly torn up from below and from its very roots, and its shoots be fiercely cut away, all hope, that it can again shoot up to life, will perish also. So, he saith, will all hope of the lovers of sin perish. For so the Divine Isaiah clearly announces, ¹¹*their worm shall not die and their fire shall not be quenched, and they shall be an abhorring to all flesh."*

2. But (And) unto you, who fear My Name, shall the Sun of Righteousness arise. It is said of God, ¹²*The Lord God is a sun and a shield, and, ¹³The Lord shall be to thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory; thy sun shall no more go down; for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light; and Zacharias, speaking of the office of S. John Baptist in the words of Malachi, thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare His way, speaks of ¹⁴the tender mercy of our God, whereby the Dayspring from on high hath visited us, to give light to them that sit in darkness.* ¹⁵He Who is often called Lord and God, and Angel and Captain of the Lord's host, and Christ and Priest and Word and Wisdom of God and Image, is now called the Sun of Righteousness. He, the Father promises, will arise, not to all, but to those only who fear His Name, giving them the light of the Sun of Righteousness, as the reward of their fear towards Him. This is God the Word Who saith, I am the Light of the world, Who was the Light of every one who cometh into the world." Primarily, Malachi speaks of our Lord's second Coming, when ¹⁶to them that look for Him shall He appear, a second time unto salvation. For as, in so many places¹⁷, the Old Testament exhibits the opposite lots of the righteous and the wicked, so here the prophet speaks of the Day of Judgement, in reference to the two opposite classes, of which he had before spoken, the proud and evil doers, and the fearers of God. The title, the Sun of Righteousness, belongs to both Comings; ¹⁸*"in the first, He diffused rays of righteousness, whereby He justified and daily justifies any sinners whatever, who will look to Him, i.e. believe in Him and obey Him, as the sun imparts light joy and life to all who turn towards it."* In the second, the righteousness which He gave, He will own and exhibit, cleared from all the misjudgement of the world, before men and Angels. Yet more, healing is, throughout Holy Scripture, used of the removal of sickness or curing of wounds, in the individual or state or Church, and, as to the individual, bodily or spiritual. So David thanks God, first for the forgiveness, ¹⁹*Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; then for healing of his soul, Who healeth all thy diseases; then for salvation, Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; then for the crown laid up for him, Who crowneth thee with loving-kindness and tender mercies; then, with the abiding sustenance and satisfying joy, Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things.* Healing

¹ Dan. vii. 9, 10.

² Ps. l. 3.

³ Is. lxvi. 15, 16.

⁶ Dan. iii. 22.

⁷ ch. iii. 15.

⁸ 2 S. Pet. iii. 7-10.

⁹ S. Cyr.

¹⁰ Job xiv. 7.

¹¹ Is. lxvi. ult.

¹² Ps. lxxxiv. 11.

¹³ Is. lx. 19, 20.

¹⁴ S. Luke i. 76, 78, 79.

¹⁵ Eus. Dem. Ev. iv. 29.

¹⁶ Heb. ix. 28.

¹⁷ As Ps. i. 6, ii. 12, iii. 7, 8, v. 10-12, vi. 8-10, vii. 16, 17, ix. 17-20, x. 16-18, xi. 6, 7, xvii. 13-15, xx. 8, xxvi. 9-12, xxxi. 23, xxxii. 10, 11, xxxiv. 21, 22, xxxv. 26-28, xxxvi. 10-12, xxxvii. 38-40, xl. 15-17, l. 22, 23, lii. 5-9, lv. 22, 23, lviii. 10, 11, lxiii. 10, 11, lxix. 9, 10, lxxiii. 27, 28, civ. 33-35, cxii. 9, 10, cxvi. 5, cxlix. 9.

¹⁸ Ps. ciii. 3-5.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall.

2 Sam. 22. 43.
Mic. 7. 10.
Zech. 10. 5.

3 And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts.

then primarily belongs to this life, in which we are still encompassed with infirmities, and even His elect and His Saints have still, whereof to be healed. The full then and complete healing of the soul, the integrity of all its powers will be in the life to come. There, will be ¹ understanding without error, memory without forgetfulness, thought without distraction, love without simulation, sensation without offence, satisfying without satiety, universal health without sickness." ² For through Adam's sin the soul was wounded in understanding, through obscurity and ignorance; in will, through the leaning to perishing goods; as concupiscent, through infirmity and manifold concupiscence. In heaven Christ will heal all these, giving to the understanding light and knowledge; to the will, constancy in good; to the desire, that it should desire nothing but what is right and good. Then too the healing of the soul will be the light of glory, the vision and fruition of God, and the glorious endowments consequent thereon, oversteaming all the powers of the soul and therefrom to the body." ³ God has made the soul of a nature so mighty, that from its most full beatitude, which at the end of time is promised to the saints, there shall overflow to the inferior nature, the body, not bliss, which belongs to the soul as intelligent and capable of fruition, but the fulness of health that is, the vigorousness of incorruption."

And ye shall go forth, as from a prison-house, from the miseries of this lifeless life, and grow up, or perhaps more probably, bound⁴, as the animal, which has been confined, exults in its regained freedom, itself full of life and exuberance of delight. So the Psalmist, ⁵ The saints shall exult in glory. And our Lord uses the like word⁶, as to the way, with which they should greet persecution to the utmost, for His Name's sake. Swiftmess of motion is one of the endowments of the spiritual body, after the resurrection; as the angels, to whom the righteous shall be like⁷, ⁸ ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning.

3. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet. It shall be a great reversal. He that exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted. Here the wicked often have the pre-eminence. This was the complaint of the murmurers among the Jews; in the morning of the Resurrection ⁹ the upright shall have dominion over them. The wicked, he had said, shall be as stubble, and that day ¹⁰ shall burn them up; here, then, they are as the ashes, the only remnant of the stubble, as the dust under the feet. ¹¹ The elect shall rejoice, that they have, in mercy, escaped such misery. Therefore they shall be kindled inconceivably with the Divine love, and shall from their inmost heart give thanks unto God." And being thus of one mind with God, and seeing all things as He seeth,

4 ¶ Remember ye the ^h law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with ^k the statutes and judgments.

5 ¶ Behold, I will send you ^l Elijah the prophet ^m before the coming of the great

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

^h Ex. 20. 3.
&c.
ⁱ Deut. 4. 10.
^k Ps. 147. 19.
^l Matt. 11. 14.
& 17. 11.
^m Mark 9. 11.
Luke 1. 17.

ⁿ Joel 2. 31.

they will rejoice in His judgements, because they are His. For they cannot have one slightest velleity, other than the all-perfect Will of God. So Isaiah closes his prophecy, ¹² And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcasses of the men, that have transgressed against Me; for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched, and they shall be an abhorring to all flesh. So ¹³ The righteous shall rejoice, when he seeth the vengeance; and another Psalmist, ¹⁴ The righteous shall see and rejoice; and all wickedness shall stop her mouth; and Job, ¹⁵ The righteous see and are glad, and the innocent laugh them to scorn.

4. Remember ye the law of Moses, My servant. ¹⁶ The law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ. They then who were most faithful to the law, would be most prepared for Christ. But for those of his own day, too, who were negligent both of the ceremonial and moral law, he says, ¹⁷ Since the judgement of God will be so fearful, remember now unceasingly and observe the law of God given by Moses.

Which I commanded ¹⁷ unto him for [lit. upon, incumbent upon] all Israel. Not Moses commanded them, but God by His servant Moses; therefore He ¹⁸ would in the day of judgement take strict account of each, whether they had or had not kept them. He would glorify those who obeyed, He would condemn those who disobeyed them." They had asked, Where is the God of judgement? What profit, that we have kept the ordinance? He tells them of the judgement to come, and bids them take heed, that they did indeed keep them; for there was a day of account to be held for all.

With the statutes and judgements, better, statutes and judgements, i. e. consisting in them; it seems added as an explanation of the word, law, individualising them. Duty is fulfilled, not in a general acknowledgement of law, or an arbitrary selection of some favourite commandments, which cost the human will less; as, in our Lord's time, they minutely observed the law of tithes, but ¹⁹ omitted weightier matters of the law, judgement, mercy, and faith. It is in obedience to the commandments, one by one, one and all. Moses exhorted to the keeping of the law, under these same words: ²⁰ Now therefore hearken, O Israel, unto the statutes and judgements which I teach you, to do them, that ye may live.—Ye shall not add unto the word that I command you, neither shall ye diminish it.—Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgements, even as the Lord my God commanded me.—What nation so great, that hath statutes and judgements, righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day? The Lord commanded me at that time, to teach you statutes and judgements, that ye might do them in the land, whither ye go to possess it.

5. Behold I will send [I send, as a future, proximate in the prophet's mind] you Elijah the prophet. The Archangel most Heb. Comm. or lexicographers.

⁶ Ps. cxlix. 5.

⁷ S. Luke xx. 36.

⁸ σκῆπτρα S. Luke vi. 23.

⁹ Ezek. i. 14.

² Lap.
³ S. Ang. Ep. 118 ad Diosc. n. 14 Opp. ii. 334. L.
⁴ So LXX. Vulg. Syr. (and on Jer. l. 11) Jon. (here "go" only); of modern Jews, Tanchum here and on Jer. l. 11. Pococke says more cautiously than moderns generally, "not far from this signification is the Arab. فُؤَاد, which signifies to 'vaunt' or 'boast' or 'go strutting' or 'proudly.'" For "arrogance," not "exuberance of joy," seems the meaning of the Arabic word. The E.V., "grow," "enlarge," follows the interpretation given by ⁵ Ps. cxlix. 14.

⁶ Ps. cxlix. 14.
⁷ Is. lxvi. 24.
⁸ Job xxii. 19.
⁹ S. Matt. xxiii. 23.
¹⁰ Ps. lxxviii. 10.
¹¹ Ps. lxxviii. 10.
¹² Ps. lxxviii. 10.
¹³ Ps. lxxviii. 10.
¹⁴ Ps. lxxviii. 10.
¹⁵ Ps. lxxviii. 10.
¹⁶ Ps. lxxviii. 10.
¹⁷ Ps. lxxviii. 10.
¹⁸ Ps. lxxviii. 10.
¹⁹ Ps. lxxviii. 10.
²⁰ Ps. lxxviii. 10.

¹⁷ my with double accus.

¹⁸ S. Matt. xxiii. 23.

¹⁹ Deut. iv. 1, 2, 5, 8, 14.

Gabriel interprets this for us, to include the sending of S. John Baptist. For he not only says¹ that he shall go before the Lord in the spirit and power of Elias, but describes his mission in the characteristic words of Malachi, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children: and those other words also, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, perhaps represent the sequel in Malachi, and the hearts of the children to the fathers; for their hearts could only be so turned by conversion to God, Whom the fathers, patriarchs and prophets, knew loved and served; and Whom they served in name only. S. John Baptist, in denying that he was Elias², denied only, that he was that great prophet himself. Our Lord, in saying, ³ This is Elias, which was for to come, ⁴ that Elias is come already and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed, met the error of the Scribes, that He could not be the Christ, because Elias was not yet come⁵. When He says, ⁶ Elias truly shall first come and restore all things, He implies a coming of Elias, other than that of S. John Baptist, since he was already martyred, and all things were not yet restored. This must also be the fullest fulfilment. For the great and terrible Day of the Lord is the Day of judgement, of which all earthly judgements, however desolating, (as the destruction of Jerusalem) are but shadows and earnest. Before our Lord's coming all things looked on to His first Coming, and, since that Coming, all looks on to the Second, which is the completion of the first and of all things in time.

Our Lord's words, Elias truly shall first come and restore all things, seem to me to leave no question, that, as S. John Baptist came, in the spirit and power of Elias, before His First Coming, so, before the Second Coming, Elias should come in person, as Jews and Christians have alike expected. This has been the Christian expectation from the first. S. Justin Martyr asked his opponent⁷, "Shall we not conceive that the Word of God has proclaimed Elias to be the forerunner of the great and terrible day of His second Coming?" "Certainly," was Trypho's reply. S. Justin continues, "Our Lord Himself taught us in His own teaching that this very thing shall be, when He said that Elias also shall come; and we know that this shall be fulfilled, when He is about to come from Heaven in glory." Tertullian says⁸, "Elias is to come again, not after a departure from life, but after a translation; not to be restored to the body, from which he was never taken; but to be restored to the world, from which he was translated; not by way of restoration to life, but for the completion of prophecy; one and the same in name and in person." "Enoch and Elias were translated, and their death is not recorded, as being deferred; but they are reserved as to die, that they may vanquish Antichrist by their blood." And, in proof that the end was not yet, "No one has yet received Elias; no one has yet fled from Antichrist." And the ancient author of the verses against Marcion; "Elias who has not yet tasted the debt of death, because he is again to come into the world." Origen says simply in one place¹², that the Saviour answered the question as to the objection of the Scribes, "not annulling what had been handed down concerning Elias, but affirming that there was another coming of Elias before Christ, unknown to the scribes, according to which, not knowing him, and, being in a manner, accomplices in his being cast into prison by Herod and slain by him, they had done to him what they listed." S. Hippolytus has; "¹³ As two Comings of our Lord and Saviour were indicated by the Scriptures, the first in the flesh, in dishonour, that He might be set at naught—the second in glory, when He shall come from Heaven with the heavenly host and the glory of the Father—so two forerunners were pointed out, the first, John, the son of Zacharias, and again—since He is manifested as Judge at the end of the world, His forerunners must first appear, as He says through Malachi, I will send to you Elias the Tishbite before the great and terrible day of the Lord shall come."

S. Hilary; "¹⁴ The Apostles enquire in anxiety about the times of Elias. To whom He answereth, that Elias will come and restore all things, that is, will recall to the knowledge of God, what he shall find of Israel; but he signifies that John came in the spirit and power of Elias, to whom they had shewn all severe and harsh dealings, that, foreannouncing the Coming of the Lord, he might be a forerunner of the Passion also by an example of wrong and harass." "¹⁵ We understand that those same prophets [Moses and Elias] will come before His Coming, who, the Apocalypse of John says, will be slain by Antichrist, although there are various opinions of very many, as to Enoch or Jeremiah, that one of them is to die, as Elias."

Hilary the Deacon, A.D. 355, has on the words, I suppose God hath set forth us the Apostles last; "¹⁶ He therefore applies these to his own person, because he was always in distress, suffering, beyond the rest, persecutions and distresses, as Enoch and Elias will suffer, who will be Apostles at the last time. For they have to be sent before Christ, to make ready the people of God, and fortify all the Churches to resist Antichrist, of whom the Apocalypse attests, that they will suffer persecutions and be slain." "¹⁷ When the faithless shall be secure of the kingdom of the devil, the saints, i.e. Enoch and Elias being slain, rejoicing in the victory, and sending gifts, one to another, as the Apocalypse says¹⁸, sudden destruction shall come upon them. For Christ at His Coming, shall destroy them all." S. Gregory of Nyssa quotes the prophecy under the heading, that "¹⁹ before the second Coming of our Lord, Elias should come."

S. Ambrose; "²⁰ Because the Lord was to come down from heaven, and to ascend to heaven, He raised Elias to heaven, to bring him back to the earth at the time He should please." "²¹ The beast, Antichrist, ascends from the abyss to fight against Elias and Enoch and John, who are restored to the earth for the testimony to the Lord Jesus, as we read in the Apocalypse of John.

S. Jerome gives here the mystical meaning; "God will send, in Elias, (which is interpreted 'My God' and who is of the town Thisbe, which signifies 'conversion' or 'penitence') the whole choir of the Prophets, to convert the heart of the fathers to the sons, viz. Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and all the patriarchs, that their posterity may believe in the Lord the Saviour, in whom themselves believed: for Abraham saw the day of the Lord and was glad." Here, he speaks of the "coming of Elias before their anointed," as a supposition of

¹ S. Luke i. 17.

² S. John i. 21.

³ S. Matt. xi. 14.

⁴ Ib. xvii. 12.

⁵ The error of the Jews consisted, not in their rooted belief, as founded on these words, that Elijah should come before the great and terrible Day of the Lord, but in their denial that He should have any forerunner of His Coming in His great humility. They erred, not in what they believed, but in what they disbelieved.

⁶ S. Matt. xvii. 11.

⁷ Dial. c. 49. p. 131. Oxf. Tr.

⁸ De anima c. 35. p. 539. Rig.

⁹ Id. ib. c. 50. p. 549.

¹⁰ de res. carnis c. 22. p. 385. Rig.

¹¹ Carm. incert. Auct. adv. Marcion. L. iii. p. 802. col. 1. Rig.

¹² in S. Matt. xvii. 10. Opp. iii. 567. ¹³ de Antichristo c. 44—46 pp. 21, 22.

¹⁴ in Matt. c. xvii. n. 4. Opp. p. 694, 695.

¹⁵ Id. Ib. c. xx. n. 10. p. 710. Ben. ¹⁶ App. S. Ambros. ii. 125. in 1 Cor. iv. 9.

¹⁷ Ib. p. 232. in 1 Thess. v. 1.

¹⁸ Rev. xi. 10.

¹⁹ adv. Jud. Opp. ii. p. 266.

²⁰ de penit. i. 8.

²¹ in Psalm 45, n. 10. Opp. i. 930. "Only one MS has, 'and John.'" Ben. note.

Jews and Judaizing heretics. But in commenting on our Lord's words in S. Matthew, he adheres twice to the literal meaning. "¹ Some think that John is therefore called Elias, because, as, according to Malachi, at the second Coming of the Saviour², Elias will precede and announce the Judge to come, so did John at His first Coming, and each is a messenger, of the first or second Coming of the Lord:" and again concisely, "² He who is to come in the second Coming of the Saviour in the actual body, now comes through John in spirit and power;" and he speaks of Enoch and Elias as "³ the two witnesses in the Revelation, since, according to the Apocalypse of John, Enoch and Elias are spoken of, as having to die."

S. Chrysostome, "⁴ When He saith that Elias cometh and shall restore all things, He means Elias himself, and the conversion of the Jews, which shall then be; but when He saith, which was to come, He calls John, Elias, according to the manner of his ministry."

In S. Augustine's time it was the universal belief. "⁵ When he [Malachi] had admonished them to remember the law of Moses, because he foresaw, that they would for a long time not receive it spiritually, as it ought, he added forthwith; And I will send you Elias the Tishbite &c. That when, through this Elias, the great and wonderful prophet, at the last time before the judgement, the law shall have been expounded to them, the Jews shall believe in the true Christ, i.e. in our Christ, is everywhere in the mouths and hearts of the faithful. For not without reason is it hoped, that he shall come before the Coming of the Saviour, as Judge, because not without reason is it believed that he still lives. For he was carried in a chariot of fire from things below; which Scripture most evidently attests. When he shall come then, by expounding the law spiritually, which the Jews now understand carnally, he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children."

S. Cyril of Alexandria, his antagonist Theodoret, and Theodore of Mopsuestia, who was loose from all tradition, had the same clear belief. S. Cyril; "It is demonstrative of the gentleness and long-suffering of God, that Elias also the Tishbite shall shine upon us, to foreannounce when the Judge shall come to those in the whole world. For the Son shall come down, as Judge, in the glory of the Father, attended by the angels, and shall sit on the throne of His glory, judging the world in righteousness, and shall reward every man according to his works. But since we are in many sins, well is it for us, that the Divine Prophet goes before Him, bringing all those on earth to one mind; that all, being brought to the unity through the faith, and ceasing from evil intents, may fulfil that which is good, and so be saved when the Judge cometh down. The blessed Baptist John came before Him in the spirit and power of Elias. But, as he preached saying, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make His paths straight, so also the divine Elias proclaims His then being near and all-but-present, that He may judge the world in righteousness." Theodoret; "⁶ Malachi teaches us how, when Antichrist shall presume on these things, the great Elias shall appear, preaching to the Jews the Coming of Christ: and he shall convert many, for this is the meaning of, he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, i.e. the Jews (for these he calls fathers, as being older in knowledge) to those who believed from the Gentiles. They who shall believe through the preaching of the great Elias, and shall join themselves to the Gentiles who seized the salvation sent to them, shall become one Church.—He hints, how when these things are done by Antichrist, S. Michael the Archangel will set all in motion, that Elias should come and foreannounce the Coming of the Lord, that the then Jews may obtain salvation." And on this place, "Knowing well, that they would neither obey the law, nor receive Him when He came, but would deliver Him to be crucified, He promises them, in His unspeakable love for man, that He will again send Elias as a herald of salvation, Lo, I will send you Elias the Tishbite. And signifying the time, He added, Before the great and terrible Day of the Lord shall come: He named the Day of His Second Coming. But He teaches us, what the great Elias shall do, when he comes, Who shall bring back the heart of the father to the son &c. And pointing out the end, for which Elias should first come, Lest I come and smite the earth utterly. For lest, finding you all in unbelief, I send you all to that endless punishment, Elias will first come, and will persuade you, O Jews, to unite you indissolubly with those, who from the Gentiles believe in Me, and to be united to My one Church."

Theodore of Mopsuestia paraphrases: "In addition to all which I have said, I give you this last commandment, to remember My law, which I gave to all Israel through Moses, plainly declaring what they ought to do in each thing, and as the first token of obedience, to receive the Lord Christ when He cometh, appearing for the salvation of all men: Who will end the law, but shew His own perfection. It had been well, had you immediately believed Him when He came, and known Him, as He Whom Moses and all the prophets signified, Who should put an end to the law, and reveal the common salvation of all men, so that it should be manifest to all, that this is the sum and chief good of the whole dispensation of the law, to bring all men to the Lord Christ, Who, for those great goods, should be manifested in His own time. But since, when He manifested Himself, ye manifested your own ungainliness, the blessed Elias shall be sent to you before the second Coming of Christ, when He will come from Heaven, to unite those who, for religion, are separated from each other, and, through the knowledge of religion, to bring the fathers to one-mindedness with the children, and in a word, to bring all men to one and the same harmony, when those, then found in ungodliness, shall receive from him the knowledge of the truth in the communion with the godly thence ensuing."

The African author of the work on the promises and predictions of God (between A.D. 450-455.)

"⁷ Against Antichrist shall be sent two witnesses, the prophets Enoch and Elijah, against whom shall arise three false prophets of Antichrist."

Isidore of Seville A. D. 595.;

"⁸ Elias, borne in a chariot of fire, ascended to heaven, to come according to the prophet Malachi at the end of the world, and to precede Christ, to announce His last Coming, with great deeds and wondrous signs, so that, on earth too, Antichrist will war against him, be against him, or him who is to come with him, and will slay them; their bodies also will lie unburied in the streets. Then, raised by the Lord, they will smite the kingdom of Antichrist with a great blow. After this, the Lord will come, and will slay Antichrist with the word of His mouth, and those who worshipped him." "⁹ This will be in the last times, when, on the preaching of Elias, Judah will be converted to Christ."

¹ On S. Matt. xi. 14, 15.

² On S. Matt. xvii. 11, 12.

³ Ep 59 [al. 148] ad Marcell. Opp. i. 326. Vall.

⁴ In S. Matt. Hom. 57. Opp. vii. 577.

⁵ de Civ. Dei, xx. 29. Opp. vii. 613.

⁶ On Daniel, c. xii. init.

⁷ Dimid. Temp. c. 13. App. to S. Prosper. Enoch and Elias are spoken of, as the two witnesses, by Ammonius in the Comm. varior. on Daniel. Mai Scriptt. Vett. Nov. Coll. T. 1. P. iii. p. 52.

⁸ de ort. et ob. Patr. c. 35. Opp. v. 167, 168.

⁹ c. Jud. ii. 5. 9. Opp. vi. 79.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

and dreadful day of the LORD:

6 And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of

To add one more, for his great gifts, S. Gregory the Great.
“¹ It is promised, that when Elias shall come, he shall bring back the hearts of the sons to their fathers, that the doctrine of the old, which is now taken from the hearts of the Jews, may, in the mercy of God, return, when the sons shall begin to understand of the Lord God, what the fathers taught.”
“² Although Elias is related to have been carried to heaven, he deferred, he did not escape, death. For it is said of him by the mouth of the Truth Himself, Elias shall come and restore all things. He shall come to restore all things; for to this end is he restored to this world, that he may both fulfil the office of preaching, and pay the debt of the flesh.”
“³ The holy Church, although it now loses many through the shock of temptation, yet, at the end of the world, it receives its own double, when, having received the Gentiles to the full, all Judæa too, which shall then be, agrees to hasten to its faith. For hence it is written, Until the fulness of the Gentiles shall come, and so all Israel shall be saved. Hence in the Gospel the Truth says, Elias shall come and shall restore all things. For now the Church has lost the Israelites, whom it could not convert by preaching; but then, at the preaching of Elias, while it collects all which it shall find, it receives in a manner more fully what it has lost.”
“⁴ John is spoken of as to come in the spirit and power of Elias, because, as Elias shall precede the second Coming of the Lord, so John preceded His first. For as Elias will come, as precursor of the Judge, so John was made the precursor of the Redeemer. John then was Elias in spirit; he was not Elias in person. What then the Lord owned as to spirit, that John denies as to the person.”

Whether Elias is one of the *two witnesses*⁵, spoken of in the Apocalypse, is obviously a distinct question. Of commentators on the Apocalypse, Arethas⁶ remarks that as to Elias, there is clear testimony from Holy Scripture, this of Malachi; but that, with regard to Enoch, we have only the fact of his being freed from death by translation, and the tradition of the Church. S. John Damascene fixed the belief, in the Eastern Church⁷. In the West, Bede e. g. who speaks of the belief that the two witnesses were Elijah and Enoch, as what was said by “⁸ some doctors,” takes our Lord’s declaration; that Elias shall return, in its simple meaning⁹. Yet it was no the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.

Before
CHRIST
cir. 397.

^a Zech. 14. 12.
^o Zech. 5. 3.

matter of faith¹⁰. When the belief as to a personal Antichrist was changed by Luther and Calvin, the belief of a personal forerunner of Christ gave way also.

6. And he shall turn the hearts of the fathers unto the children. Now they were unlike, and severed by that unlikeness from each other. Yet not on earth; for on earth parents and children were alike alienated from God, and united between themselves in wickedness or worldliness. The common love of the world or of worldly pursuits, or gain or self-exaltation, or making a fortune or securing it, is, so far, a common bond of interest to those of one family, through a common selfishness, though that selfishness is the parent of general discord, of fraud, violence, and other misdeeds. Nay, conversion of children or parents becomes rather a source of discord, embittering the unconverted. Whence our Lord says, “¹¹ Think not, that I am come to send peace on the earth. I came not to send peace on earth, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law: and a man’s foes shall be they of his own household; a prophecy fulfilled continually in the early persecutions, even to the extent of those other words of our Lord, “¹² the brother shall deliver up the brother to death, and the father the child; and the children shall rise up against their parents, and cause them to be put to death. It is fulfilled also in the intense hatred of the Jews at this day, to any who are converted to Christ; a hatred which seems to have no parallel in the world. Nor do the words seem to mean that fathers and children should be united in one common conversion to God, as one says, “¹³ All shall be one heart to return to the Lord, both fathers and children;” for he speaks primarily of their mutual conversion to one another, not to God.

The form of the expression seems to imply that the effect of the preaching of Elias shall be, to bring back the children, the Jews then in being, to the faith and love which their fathers, the Patriarchs, had; that “¹⁴ as these believed, hoped for, longed exceedingly for, and loved Christ to come, so their sons should believe, hope in, long exceedingly for and love Christ, Who was come, yea is present; and so the heart of fathers, which before was turned from their unbelieving

¹ Moral. xi. 15. n. 24. Ben.

² Ib. xx. 34. n. 66. Ben.

³ Ib. xxxv. 14. n. 21. See also on Ezek. L. i. Hom. 12. n. 8, 9, where he speaks of the coming of Enoch also.

⁴ in Evang. Hom. vii. n. 1.

⁵ See above p. 25.

⁶ Comm. on Apocalypse printed with Œcumenius p. 942. ed. 1530.

⁷ De fide iv. 26.

⁸ on Rev. c. xi.

⁹ on S. Matt. xvii. 11. S. Mark ix.

¹⁰ Rupertus says here, “Of the coming of Elias I dare not define any thing, because some doctors, with whom almost all agree, believe that he will come in the letter, and will restore all things, and will pay the debt of death; but others not, with whom the illustrious S. Jerome seems to agree.”

¹¹ S. Matt. x. 34-36.

¹² Ib. 21.

¹³ Ibn Ezra. The Jews, although mostly agreed, that Elijah will come, are disagreed as to the end of his coming. By some he is spoken of as a Redeemer. Tanchuma, (f. 31. 1.) “God said to Israel, In this world I sent an angel to cast out the nations before you, but in the future [or, in the world to come, Yalkut Shim’oni f. 98-29] myself will lead you and will send you Elijah the prophet.” Pesikta rabbathi (in Yalkut Shim’oni ii. f. 32. 4) “Both redeemed Israel: Moses in Egypt, and Elias in that which is to come.” (Id. ib. f. 53. 2.) “I send you a redeemer.” Midrash Shocher tof Ib. f. 884, “Israel said, ‘It is written of the first redemption, He sent Moses His servant, Aaron whom He had chosen; send me two like them.’ God answered; ‘I will send you Elijah the prophet: this is one, the other is he, of whom Isaiah spoke (xlii. 1.) Behold, my servant whom I have chosen.’” Shemoth Rabba [Sect. 3. col. 108. 2. ad loc.] “In the second redemption, ye shall be healed and redeemed by the word I, i.e. I will send.” Or, as a comforter, “I will send you Elias, he shall come and comfort you.” Debarim rabba sect. 3. fin. Or to pronounce some things clean, others unclean. Shir hashirim rabba f. 27. 3. [all the above in Schöttgen ad loc.] Others, in different ways, to settle, to which tribe each belongs. Kimchi on Ezek. xlvii, and this with different explanations as to strictness. (See Edaioth fin. Mishnah T. iv. p. 362. Surenhus.) “Rabbi Simeon says, ‘To remove controversies,’ And the wise and doctors say, To make peace in the world, as is said, “Behold I send.” R. Abraham B. David explains the peace to be “from the nations,” and adds, “to announce to them the coming of the redeemer, and this in one day before the coming of the Messiah;” and to “turn the hearts &c.” he explains “the hearts of the fathers and children (on whom softness had fallen from fear, and they fled, some here, some there, from their distresses) on that day they shall return to their might and to one another and shall comfort each other.” Abarbanel says, that Elijah shall be the instrument of the resurrection, and that, through those who rise, the race of man shall be directed in the recognition of God and the true faith.” Ibn Ezra, “that he shall come at the collection of the captives, as Moses at the redemption of Egypt, not for the resurrection.” [These are collected by Frischmuth de Elijæ adventu. Thes. Theol. Phil. V. T. T. i. p. 1070. sqq.] R. Tanchum, from Maimonides, says, “This is without doubt a promise of the appearance of a prophet in Israel, a little before the coming of the Messiah; and some of the wise think that it is Elias the Tishbite himself, and this is found in most of the Midrashoth, and some think that it is a prophet like him in rank, occupying his place in the knowledge of God and the manifesting His Name and that so he is called Elijah. And so explained the great Gaon, Rab Mosheh ben Maimon, at the end of his great book on jurisprudence, called ‘Mishneh Torah.’ And, perhaps he [the person sent] may be Messiah ben Joseph, as he says again—And the exactness of the matter in these promises will only be known, when they appear: and no one has therein any accredited account, but each of them says what he says, according to what appears to him, and what preponderates in his mind of the explanation of the truth.” “The turning of the heart of the father to the children,” he explains to be, “the restoration of religion, until all should be of one heart in the obedience to God.”

¹⁴ Lap.

children, he should turn to them, now believing, and cause the Patriarchs to own and love the Jews believing in Christ, as indeed their children; for ¹*your father Abraham rejoiced to see My day; he saw it and was glad*, Christ saith."

Lest I come and smite the earth with a curse, i.e. with an utter destruction, from which there should be no redemption. In the end, God will so smite the earth, and all, not converted to Him. The prayer and zeal of Elijah will gain a reprieve, in which God will spare the world for the gathering of His own elect, the full conversion of the Jews, which shall fulfil the Apostle's words, ²*So shall all Israel be saved*.

After the glad tidings, Malachi, and the Old Testament in him, ends with words of awe, telling us of the consequence of the final hardening of the heart; the eternal severance, when the unending end of the everlasting Gospel itself shall be accomplished, and its last grain shall be gathered into the garner of the Lord. The Jews, who would be wiser than the prophet, repeat the previous verse³, because Malachi closes so awfully. The Maker of the heart of man knew better the hearts which He had made, and taught their authors to end the books of Isaiah and Ecclesiastes with words of awe, from which man's heart so struggles to escape. To turn to God here, or everlasting destruction from His presence there, is the only choice open to thee. "Think of this, when lust goads thee, or ambition solicits thee, or anger convulses thee, or the flesh blandishes thee, or the world allures thee, or the devil displays his deceitful pomp and enticement. In thy hand and thy choice are life and death, heaven and hell, salvation and damnation, bliss or misery everlasting. Choose which thou willest. Think, 'A moment which delighteth, eternity which tortureth;' on the other hand, 'a moment which tortureth, eternity which delighteth.'"

¹ S. John viii. 56.

² Rom. xi. 26.

³ The Masora at the end of Malachi notices, that in the reading of ppm, i.e. Isaiah, the Twelve [as one book, ending with Malachi], the Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, the last verse but one is repeated. The three do end heavily; but Ecclesiastes only ends with the declaration of a day of judgement, which, it must be supposed, they did not like to dwell upon.

⁴ Lap.

"I SEE THAT ALL THINGS COME TO AN END:
THY COMMANDMENT IS EXCEEDING BROAD." Ps. cxix. 96.

"AS THE HART PANTETH AFTER THE WATER BROOKS, SO PANTETH MY SOUL AFTER THEE, O GOD." Ps. xlii. 1.

LONDON:
GILBERT AND RIVINGTON, PRINTERS, ST. JOHN'S SQUARE.