DEADLY SINS AND LIVING VIRTUES

By the Rev. T. H. WRIGHT, B.D.
Author of 'The Sermon on the Mount for To-day,' etc.

For many years minister at the Scots Church, Paris.

'That accomplished scholar . . . has written a beautiful book. He has made a careful study of Dante, and draws his illustrations also from Spenser, Shakespeare, Tennyson, and many other English and foreign writers. He is able to prove that every sin has a contrasting virtue which displaces, undermines, or defeats it.'

British Weekly.

'This wholly remarkable book . . . promises to become a classic. Its blinding but beneficent significance exalts it to the company of the elite.'—Dundee Courier.

CHRISTIAN WORSHIP IN THE PRIMITIVE CHURCH

By the Rev. A. B. MACDONALD,
M.A., B.D., Ph.D.

'A first-rate piece of scholarly work. . . . No one has hitherto attempted to understand and appraise these forms (of worship) in relation to the spiritual experience of the worshippers. . . . He has accomplished his task with remarkable success. He is completely master of the literature of the subject.'—Life and Work.

'One of the loveliest books, we think, ever issued by a minister or scholar of the Scottish Church.'

Quarterly Register, Presbyterian Alliance.

Reveries of the Passion of Christ

By the Rev. A. G. PAISLEY, M.A., Edinburgh.

The personalities with whom Christ came into contact at the time of His Passion have their place in the sacred story in virtue of a living relationship to Him. Even as the high and holy intent of Jesus Christ sanctifies these contacts, so they, in turn, make their contributions towards our enlightenment concerning His divine self-sacrifice.
